CATTLE.

Half Supply Made Up of Rangers, Natives Steady to Strong.

While the run of cattle at the five leading markets for today were not above a Tuesday average, the holiday of yesterday not having resulted in the accumulation of big supplies as is sometimes anticipated, the number at the local yards was larger than this market has been getting for some time and the total for today at this point is more than were here for Monday and Tuesday of last week.

The total at the five markets for today was only 32,000 and of course shows a big falling off compared with the two days of last week, but it is comparing two days supplies of last week with one of this week. The local supply for today is 3000 and is larger than the total for Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Of the supply here today nearly half were southern yarded in quarantine division and on the native side there was a fair representation of Kansas wintered rangers, the first of the well-known Ferguson for the season being here and showing that these cattle are coming in good beef condition this year. There was a very fair showing of fed native steers and among them were some quite good offerings. Outside markets were telegraphed out as opening higher but these first guesses were nothing more than a conclusion that the markets ought to be higher on account of the small supply. These first reports are always sent out before there is a hoof sold in the markets and are very apt to be misleading. On the start this morning the trade in natives showed a rather slow tone but as the forenoon progressed the buyers began to take hold and they bought the attractive and useful grades of cattle at steady to strong prices with the best here selling at $7.65 and the bulk of the fat fed steers went to the scales at a range of $6.75 to $7.50 with common and medium grades ranging down from $6.50 to as low as $5.50 for very common killers.

COWS, BULLS AND MIXED.

There was a slow opening to the trade in the stock in the native division as there were some Texas cows over in quarantine and these are a factor in the she trade at present.

NEW PACIFIC COAST LINE.

Denver & Rio Grande Road Has New Line to Coast.

The 1910 edition of the Denver & Rio Grande folder, "Natural Resources of Colorado, Utah and New Mexico," is especially valuable because the large map, which takes in the territory from the Rocky mountains west to the Pacific coast, is not only brought right up to date but shows also the route and stations of the new Western Pacific Railway, the Pacific coast extension of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad from Salt Lake City to San Francisco.

This new line was opened for freight traffic some time ago, and it is anticipated that passenger business will be inaugurated early in August. It is said that the route through the Sierras and down the Feather river rivals in scenic attractions the world-famous Denver & Rio Grande. Another interesting feature in connection with this new Pacific coast line is the fact that there is no grade of more than fifty-two feet to the mile, which makes it possible to conduct transportation across the mountains at a lower cost over that line than over any other now operating on the American continent. The map is being distributed by the passenger department of the Denver & Rio Grande railroad.

A NEW CHAMPION

Son of a Slave Now Wears Belt As World's Heavyweight Gladiator.

Jeff Couldn't Come Back

Boilermaker Dragged to His Corner, Bleeding, Heart-sick, Broken Idol.

Out in Fifteenth Round

None of Old-Time Vim Displayed by Former Champion—Was Tame Fight From the Start and Johnson Escaped With Hardly a Mark of Battle On Him—Was Black Man's Fight After the Sixth Round.

Renowned, July 5.—John Arthur Johnson, a Texas negro, the son of an American slave, is the first and undisputed heavyweight champion of the world.

James J. Jeffries, of California, winner of twenty-two championship fights, the man who never was brought to his knees before by a blow, has passed into history as a broken idol. He met utter defeat at the hands of the black champion.

While Jeffries was not actually counted out, he was saved from the disgrace of "coming back" by a referee who with Johnson not to hit the fallen man again, and the towel was brought into the ring from his corner. At the end of the fifteenth round, Referee Tex Rickard raised the black man's arm and the great crowd filed out, hush and silent.

Jeffries was dragged to his corner, bleeding from nose and mouth and a dozen cuts on the face. He had a black, closed eye and swollen features and he held his head in his hands, dazed and incoherent.

Johnson walked out of the ring without a mark on his body, except a slight cut on his lip, which was the opening of a wound received in training.

Ring experts believe it was not even a championship fight. Jeffries had a chance in the second round, but after the sixth it was plain that he was weakened and outclassed in every point and after the eleventh round it was hopeless.

Couldn't Come Back

It was the greatest demonstration the ring has ever seen of the fallacy of a fighter to "come back" after years of retirement. The youth and science of the black man made Jeffries look like a green man. The great Jeffries was like a log. The revived Johnson was like a black panther, beautiful in his alertness and defensive tactics.

Jeffries fought by instinct. It seemed, showing his gameness and his great fighting heart in every round, but he was only the shell of his old self. The old powers to take a terrible beating and bore in until he landed the knockout blow were gone. After the third round, Johnson treated his opponent almost as a joke. He smiled and blocked playfully, warding off the bear-like rushes of Jeffries with a marvel science, now ducking a blow under his arm, again plucking it out of the air as a man stops a baseball.

The Jeffries crouch was in evidence at times, but during most of the fight Johnson fought standing straight and working with some of his old aggressiveness.

The fifteenth round started with a clinch after Jeffries had failed to land on the body. Johnson then tore loose and before the spectators were prepared for the finish he had sent Jeffries down with lightning like left and right blows to the jaw. Jeffries reeled and fell half way through the ropes on the west side of the ring. Those near him saw that he had lost sense of his surroundings and that the faces at the ringside were a blur to him. His time had come. He was feeling what he had caused others to feel in the days of his youth and power.

Johnson came over to the spot and stood poised over his adversary, his body ready for a left hook, as Jeffries regained his feet. Jim Corbett, who twice had gone down before Jeffries' blows and who had stood in Jeffries' corner all during this fight telling Johnson what a fool he was and how he was in for the greatest beating of his life, now ran forward with outstretched arms crying:

"Oh, go back! Don't hit him!"

Jeffries painfully raised himself to his feet. His jaws had dropped, his eyes were nearly shut, and his face was covered with blood. With trembling legs and yielding arms, he tried to put up a defense, but he could not stop a terrific smash in the jaw followed by two left hooks. He went down again. Jeffries' physician and other friends jumped into the ring.

"Stop it," they cried. "Don't put the old fellow out."

Sam Berger, Jeffries' manager, ran along the ring calling to Bob Armstrong: "Bring that towel—you know what I mean, don't let him get hit."

The soothing liquids were applied to the fallen champion's bruised face, but his heart was something that could not be reached. As soon as he re-

CATTLE WERE GOOD.

Hill Top, Kansas, Farmer Always Brings in Good Stock.

E. H. Bock, who ships to this market quite regularly from Hill Top, Kansas, was here today with a car of good fat steers which sold well. That Mr. Bock believes in feeding his cattle well before marketing is evident by the finish he had on those here this morning. Mr. Bock discredits the story of the scarcity in harvest lands in this part of the country, although there may be something like that farther west. Harvesting is about over in this section, farmers putting their wheat and hay away now. Wheat was nothing out of the ordinary, ranging on an average of 15 to 20 bushels to the acre.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

"DADDY," asked Jack one evening when he and Evelyn were seated on daddy's lap waiting for their bedtime story, "can any one visit the stars?"
"I have heard of only one person doing so," was daddy's answer, "and she was a little girl just about Evelyn's size. It happened this way.
"It was on a bright, sunshiny summer's afternoon and quite warm. The little girl, whose name was Edith, had been playing on the lawn, and she was quite warm and just a wee bit tired when she came back to the house to rest. She sat down in the window seat and looked up into the sky.
" 'It must be a fine thing to go up there,' said Edith to herself. 'I'd like to visit a star.'
" 'She had been sitting only a little while when she saw a tiny red light in the sky, right overhead. As she watched it it became bigger and bigger and came toward her. At last it rested on the window sill, and Edith saw that it was a great big balloon. There was a basket hanging from it, and as it reached the window sill out stepped two pretty fairies.
" 'We heard you say you would like to visit the stars,' said one of the fairies, 'and as you are a good little girl we have come to take you up to the sky with us. We are messengers of the fairy king, who lives in the sky.'
"Then they asked Edith to step into the basket. She did so, and in a moment she and the fairies were sailing up to the sky. They had a perfectly lovely time up there, sailing from one star to another.
" 'After while Edith became hungry and asked the fairies whether they could get her something to eat. So the fairies turned the balloon toward the moon, which they said was made of green cheese. Edith had heard this before, but she did not really think it was true.'
" 'Is it true, daddy?' asked Evelyn.
" 'No, child,' said daddy. 'It is only a story. But, anyway, when Edith and the fairies reached the moon the man in the moon gave them each a nice cheese sandwich. Then they sailed away to a big pale yellow star near the moon, where the fairies said they could find some lemonade to drink. After that they visited Mars, which is a great, big red star, and plucked cherries from the cherry trees there. Edith was having a splendid time, sailing through the sky, visiting all the star people, and the fairies were just about to take her to the star in which the fairy king lived when something happened.
" 'What was that, daddy?' asked Jack and Evelyn together.
" 'Why, Edith's mamma called her, and she woke up. It was only a dream,' said daddy.

"The most painstaking search" of which "falls to disclose the presence of a charge" on which trial for violation of the law could be based. He intimated further, with actual if not with intended sarcasm, that "the general averment that the defendants are engaged in a combination in restraint of inter-state trade is of course a mere conclusion, and therefore insufficient."

Right there this perspicacious judge struck the keynote of the whole crusade against the meat industry. "Mere conclusion," without intelligent investigation or sensible understanding of facts and conditions, from the beginning has been the basis of legal attacks on the trade. Political demagogues and the sensational press have brought the public to believe the meat trade capable of any commercial crime. It is perhaps not surprising, therefore, that prosecutors should fall into the error of considering their cases won before they are heard in court, and that their preview of the law and the facts should be always so badly out of focus.

Here is a typical instance. All the legal ability of the federal department of justice, backed by an expensive grand jury investigation which dragged on for months, could not draw up an indictment which even a favorable judge would sustain. But one of two inferences is possible: Either there is no ground for indictment in this case, or else the government employs mighty poor lawyers. We hardly think the government will agree to the latter hypothesis.

Meanwhile, a new grand jury has been summoned and the same ground will be gone over again. There is an election coming on and the "beef trust" must be prosecuted at all hazards—even that of the reputation of government lawyers. The latter certainly has suffered severely in every case in which the packers have been attacked.

PROSPECT IN FLAXSEED.

Dry Weather Means a Short Crop and the Flax Belt Is Arid.

While it is true there has been an increase in acreage of flaxseed, it is more than likely this will be offset by what appears to be a serious condition unless there should be early and heavy rains generally throughout the flax growing section, says the Paint, Oil and Drug Review. There have been some showers, but it has been a long while since there were sufficient rains to be of any great benefit.

Very little new crop flax is being offered for sale. It is reported that the Northwestern papers prefer only to publish reports favorable to crop conditions and remain silent on the other side of the subject, but the northwestern farmer knows there has not been the heavy increase in acreage that was expected and that conditions are not as favorable as had been hoped and for this reason he is holding back making sales of new crop seed.

It is thought that the dry weather may cause a little more flax to be offered during July and August than was expected, because this flax was not put into the ground. There is practically no seed in the public stores in the Northwest and the local mills there are running at a reduced capacity with no accumulation of oil in the tanks in the largest mills. One or two of the small mills are reported to have a larger proportion than usual at this season of the year. There is no doubt that the continued dry weather and the demand for seed is what has caused the market to remain firm, and even advance sharply this week.

The demand for oil on old contracts in the Northwest is very urgent and it is keeping the mills busy up to their shipping facilities. The declines week before last were exhausted by forced marketing of a considerable quantity of flax which was entirely unexpected. This was taken up by strong interests which immediately caused a reaction in conjunction with above reports.

A prominent Northwestern cruiser had sent the following letter to the trade:

We are still in need of hard rain to cover the entire Northwest although some sections have had heavy showers, and are in good condition. Eastern North Dakota and southern and eastern Minnesota seem to be suffering most and it is very difficult to report on the condition of the growing flax crop because of the extremes in weather in nearby counties. One of the largest and best known farms in North Dakota has partially plowed up and receded its flax, feeling that the plant was so weakened by frost and drought that it could not produce good results. No doubt the farmers are not able to secure the seed for a second planting, and whether the action of the Dalrymples as above indicated a general poor condition will never be known, but no one would question the judgment of these people as to what was the best action in their own case.

"We think the generally accepted estimate on increased acreage at the moment would be 5 per cent for Minnesota, 3 per cent for South Dakota, and 2 per cent for North Dakota; Montana with a small acreage probably having an enormous increase. As we remember in round numbers, the three states had last year: North Dakota a million and a half acres, Minnesota and South Dakota each from five to six hundred thousand acres. If these estimates are reliable, the increased acreage alone with a favorable yield, should give us as much flax as was imported from Canada and Argentina the past year. As seeding is now practically over, the volume of this year's crop will be decided entirely by weather conditions. These have not been favorable to date and the results can be seen in the prices for the new crop compared with what has been expected by many."

IN WOMAN'S REALM

UNUSUAL RECIPES.

Cauliflower and Beans.—One cauliflower, one pint of butter beans, one pint of white sauce, grated cheese, salt, pepper, and a dash of paprika; soften to a creamy consistency by adding a little milk; cut twelve slices of bread, spread six of them with a thick layer of the cream-peanut butter, cover with the remaining bread as if for sandwiches; beat one egg, and add two tablespoonsful milk and a little salt; dip the bread in the egg, roll in bread crumbs and brown in deep fat, using a frying basket, or, if you haven't the basket, a pancake griddle can be used, though deep fat is always more satisfactory. These chops make an excellent substitute for a quarter of the cost, as the peanut butter can be bought freshly ground, at the tea and coffee stores for ten cents a glass. Serve on a hot platter, garnish with chopped parsley and you will find them delicious.

Little Helps. Kitchen Entrance.—The kitchen entrance to a house should be as attractive as the front entrance. A back porch with mops, brooms, buckets, and scrubbing outfit scattered about is unbecomingly. A large box painted in a desired color could be used as a closet for them. Paint boxes, filled with flowers, placed along the porch edge will add beauty; vines over a door where there is no porch will prove bright and cheerful.

CLEANLY HELPS. Rubber Hunt.—The ladies all know how tiresome it is to wear rubbers around in the stores while shopping on a rainy day. To overcome this pin to safety pins to the underside of petticoat in the back convenient to the bottom to fasten them to while in the stores and they will avoid a great deal of weariness.

INEXPENSIVE DISINFECTANT.—An inexpensive disinfectant for a sick room can be made as follows: Put some ground coffee in a saucer and in the middle place a small piece of camphor gum. Light the gum with a match. As the gum allows the coffee to burn with it the smell is most refreshing and healthful.

OLD CHAIRS.—While visiting in the country last summer I saw several old cane seated chairs that had been made available for porch and outdoor use at little expense. The chairs had been mended and painted with white enamel, and in place of the cane, a fine quality of Japanese matting had been carefully put on seats and seats with brass tacks. Some chairs were painted light green and green tinted matting was used with good effect.

PINEAPPLE AND RHUBARB JELLY.—The pineapple season is here and every good housewife is always figuring how she can get the best results, and to accomplish this with pineapples, and to make the work as easy as possible, peel your pineapple, if so desired, rather thick. Instead of throwing the peeling away, put them in a kettle to boil with two quarts of water to one dozen of pineapple peel. Be careful that you do not burn them. Boil them about twenty minutes, then throw in a colander, and press with a potato masher until juice is all out. And also take the cores of the pineapple and run them through a meat grinder, and the juice you get from them put in the other ingredients. To one quart of juice add one pound of rhubarb, which has been sliced the same as for pies (but do not skin them), do not mix the rhubarb with the juice until you have boiled it five minutes. Add equal parts of sugar and boil until it thickens. You will find this delicious jelly.

SHOWS BENEFITS OF YAWNING

Has Great Value in Diseases of the Throat—Strengthens Respiratory Muscles.

Dr. Emil Buzni of Vienna, in speaking of diseases of the throat and remedies, said that yawning had its great value. Yawning has recently been recommended independently as a valuable exercise for the respiratory organs.

"According to Dr. Naegeli, of the University of Luetlich," said Dr. Buzni, "yawning brings all the respiratory muscles of the chest and throat into action and is, therefore, the best and most natural means of strengthening them. He advises everybody to yawn as deeply as possible, with arms out stretched, in order to change completely the air in the lungs and stimulate respiration."

"Each treatment consists of from six to eight yawns, each followed by the operation of swallowing. It should be added, however, that it is quite possible for deep breathing to be overdone, particularly by persons with weak hearts and it is at least open to question whether the obstacles to free respiration, which the yawning cure is alleged to remove, are not useful in preventing the entrance of germs and other foreign bodies."

REAL NECESSITY OF THE AGE

Misguided People Who Would Abolish Poverty Herein Shown the Error of Their Ways.

Forgive those who would abolish poverty, for they know not what they do. To abolish poverty would hurt business immeasurably. There are a great many people who get their livelihood by dispensing charity. If poverty were abolished, they would have to join the army of the unemployed.

INSTINCT OF THE REALIST

Writer Wanted Game Played to the Limit, Without Departure From Proprieties.

A story about Robert Louis Stevenson not generally known is told by Mrs. Stevenson's grandson, Austin Strong. When Mr. Strong was a little chap Mr. Stevenson liked to sit propped up in bed to watch him at play in the next room. And often it happened that the bigger boy of the two would make suggestions for the make-believe games and insist that they be carried on, too.

The Languages of Paradise.

Every language has its admirers; in "Lucile" the author, Owen Meredith, maintained that when he heard French spoken as he approved he "found himself quietly falling in love." Edward Hutton is another instance of this lingual fascination. In stating his preference in his enchanting "Cities of Spain," he recalls an interesting medieval legend. He says: "And as I listened to the splendid syllables of the Castilian tongue that rang eloquently through the twilight I remembered the saying of that old Spanish doctor of whom James Howell tells us in his 'Instructions for Forranne Travell,' to wit, that Spanish, Italian and French, these three daughters of the Latin language, were spoken in Paradise; that God Almighty created the world in Spanish, the tempter persuaded Eve in Italian and Adam begged pardon in French."

Worth Remembering.

Many a man, like the ancient Persian, Ali Hafed, who wishing to be rich and place his children on thrones through the influence of wealth, has searched in vain north, south, east and west, when there were acres of diamonds on the old farm, found there by the observant man, who dug in his own garden. Your fortune is in the shop where you work, in the store where you wait, in the house where you sit, or on the farm where you cultivate the soil.

Artist and His Work.

The great artists, like the great heroes, have always done whatever came to hand. Michelangelo grumbled and said he was a sculptor when Julius II. set him to paint, but he painted the roof of the Sistine chapel. Shakespeare chafed at the popularity of the fool in the drama of his time, and then produced the fool in "Lear." If either of them had waited for perfect conditions and an inspiration untrammelled by circumstance he would have done nothing. They produced masterpieces because they made the best of things as they were. And this is the business of the artist in life.

TO LIVE A LITTLE LONGER

Ever the Elusive Hope of Humanity, From Which It Seems It Can Not Be Separated.

The fountain of youth is the dream of the young. At thirty the springtime of life is all but gone. Lines come upon the face, scored by cares man has not yet the wisdom to throw off; the girl becomes matter of consideration, the feet begin to lag, the stairs grow long. Then comes the regret for the quick years. It cannot have been a mere dream which came to Ponce de Leon in Porto Rico and lured him to Florida in search of the magical island of Bimini and the fountain whose waters gave youth forever to the hardy voyager.

No longer do we seek immortality in remote geography. No longer do we look to the philosopher to give us length of years. We have had revealed to us the uselessness and the futility of the colon, all too late to risk its excision. We have been informed that we do not really grow old; we yield to arterio-sclerosis. Still we have the hope that aging humanity was always had. The years of a man are the years of his colon and his sort.

Now comes from Paris our latest hope for the years declining. Modestly, Dr. Doyen, the discoverer, announces no absolute elixir vitae. He thinks only that he is nearer finding it than any one before him. The tale comes to us in the newer jargon, un-known and magnificent. It is mycolaine which is to prolong our years to a considerable extent. It is to dissolve germs which in their activity might wreck us; it is to give new strength to the phagocytes which are the devourers of our inner life. In a barbarous phrase it is to decouple, to multiply by ten, the power of our resisting agents.

As we look back we can spare without regret the fountain of youth. Always to be called might not be an un-mixed blessing. But to keep forever the years of man, to hold the stores of memory, to live steadily and to live whole, to find at last the elixir of life—such as this has charm for us in these adult centuries as it had in the childhood of man.

CATCH CROPS IN CORN.

Where corn has been kept in good condition until it is laid by, that is, where the weeds have been kept in check, it is entirely practicable to use certain catch crops at least part of the year.

CONGRESS HAS ADJOURNED

But Lobby Seared on Bill Regulating Telegraph Companies.

Washington, D. C., July 2.—The bill requiring the telegraph companies to carry free the filing time of all messages given to them for inter-state transmission has again been lost. The lobbyists of the monopoly who were very active about the capitol for several weeks in connection with this measure, to be enactment of which the companies are unilaterally opposed had it checked to death in committee. Colonel Clowry, president of the Western Union, testifying last winter before a committee of the New York state legislature said such a law would mean the gratuitous transmission of 15,000,000 words a year by his company. In view of the fact that the company has been paying dividends of but three per cent, for some years he said compulsory legislation along these lines would prove ruinous to the Western Union. Strenuous efforts were made in the closing days of congress to force the bill out of committee in the hope that if submitted to the consideration of the house, it would be able to command the support necessary to pass it. The specious arguments employed by the companies in opposing the measure provoked much mirth among the national legislators. Learned counsel for the monopoly contended that few men in the country desire their wires to know the filing time of message and traveling salesmen are averse to their employers having such information.

This line of argument recalls to mind the pithy comment made before the Massachusetts legislature a year ago by Patrick B. Delany, inventor of the Teletop Automatic Telegraph system, who said when a similar law was under consideration for that commonwealth, that the only persons who opposed the filing time were "sporty husbands and tricky drummers." The advocates of the filing time at Washington insist that in as much as the government owned the telegraph system carries it in New England and in the middle west the Western Union and Postal should not object to it. The fight which has been going on for several years will have to be renewed next year.

HOG RAISING PAYS

MONEY IN IT FOR STAYER

Farmer Who Does Not Keep Hogs Is Out of the Times.

There is only one way to raise hogs and to make money at the business, and that is by staying in it year in and year out. The man who raises just about the same number every year and who never gets discouraged no matter how high in price feeds may be or how low pork may be, is the individual who usually stands well financially in his community. This subject is brought up at this time by an Illinois subscriber, who has been in the hog business for period of twenty-six years without having had any loss from cholera during that time. He says:

"No investment connected with the farm pays a higher dividend than hogs. Usually the small farmer feels that he cannot afford to raise hogs when really he cannot afford not to raise them.

"A great deal depends on the management. One can grow into this business with very little capital if he is on the alert to make good use of his opportunities. First, and most important of all, is good foundation stock. Two or three well-selected, pure-bred sows is all he needs. Then breed these to a pure-bred boar. If the sows are given judicious care and attention the result will be remarkably pleasing.

"What items I offer here are garnered from experience, hence they are practical. My success in hog raising has been very gratifying. In working with hogs for more than twenty-six years I have never lost one from cholera and very few from any cause. In the first place, to follow this business successfully, we find an opportunity to verify the adage, "An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure." Keep off disease rather than try to cure it. If this is done there is very little danger of loss. I begin to ward off disease when the pigs are little. Never allow the sows to become lousy; keep them full and healthy and the pigs will be strong and vigorous, not so susceptible to disease.

"In addition to their regular feed of corn, peas or whatever they get at the barn, I give my hogs swill twice each day. I keep a barrel in the back yard (a coal oil barrel is best) into which I throw a handful of copperas twice a month, also put a gallon of salt and three or four buckets of wheat bran in to start it; into this throw all the vegetable waste, fruit peelings, milk and slop from the kitchen. Very soon the barrel is full of rich food, all clean and healthy, although made up of almost every conceivable thing a hog could eat.

"At morning and evening I give them from six to eight buckets of this mixture, according to the number of hogs in the drove, always stirring well before giving. By night the barrel will be full again and always ready. I clean out the barrel each time before being filled, and never allow the mixture to stand long before being fed. Cleanliness at all times and in all things is a feature that cannot be too strongly emphasized.

"Now and then I gather the old bones and discarded scraps of meat from the smokehouse and fill a large wash kettle with pork stalks and bones. Keep the kettle full and boil. When thoroughly soft and done, dip all into the barrel, throw in more bran and feed as usual. This I know to be a preventive of cholera, and even should there be symptoms already manifest, it will relieve it.

"Never allow hogs to run at large where they will be subjected to danger, but keep them in pasture, and no matter how fine the pasture may be don't fall to call them up each evening for their swill; they will always relish it. Use a good deal of pine tar about the troughs, smear it in the bottom and let them eat and drink it off; they soon grow to like it. Have a can for the purpose, in which keep a mixture of tar, sulphur, lard and coal oil. While they are drinking at the trough, smear them on the hips, back and around the ears with this mixture; it will keep vermin away. Burn all the heads occasionally and place new straw in, and each time sprinkle a good coat of lime under the straw. All these precautions take time and make work, but it takes less time and is less expensive than to try to treat sick hogs.

"If the animals are fed and cared for as above indicated they will bring a very large per cent of profit on the investment of time and money. In times like these the farmer without hogs is a back number."

After all, the little things are the important things in raising hogs. The man who will not pay attention to the smallest details is the one who is going to be caught off his guard and the first thing he knows, he has a contagious disease on his hands and after that the end of the chapter is soon reached for that year. The advice given by this subscriber is sound in every way, and we commend it to our readers.—National Stockman and Farmer.
