Every-Day Virtues. Great virtues are rare; they are seldom needed; and, when the occasion comes, we are prepared for it by everything which has preceded, excited by the greatness of the sacrifice, and sustained either by the brilliancy of the action in the eyes of others, or by self-complacency in our ability to do such wonderful things.

Crushing Romance. "It seems to me," said Battersby, "that we are knocking nearly all the romance and imagination out of life when we commercialize marriage."

Commercial Mausoleum. A company has been formed in Cincinnati to erect and rent a mausoleum. This is to be a large building, where bodies may be taken by survivors who own no burial plot and who have no desire to buy one.

Fifty Men and One Elephant. Interesting tests were recently made to determine the respective pulling power of horses, men and elephants. Two horses, weighing 1,600 pounds each, together pulled 3,700 pounds, or 550 pounds more than their combined weight.

New York's Truancy Problem. Truancy is on the increase in New York city, and the board of education complains of the indifference of parents. About 120 parents are taken before the city magistrate each month for violating the law.

Newly Discovered Pleasure. The honeymoon had gone the way of all honeymoons, and their first quarrel was on. "Of course," he sneered, "you'll pack up and go home to your mother now."

Getting Down to Realities. "If two forces traveling at right angles meet," said the professor of physics, "what happens?" "Something terrible," replied the young man, "if one of them is a motor car and the other's a freight train."

New Bug Blood Poisoner. Pottsville, Pa.—Frank Ebach may lose his right hand as the result of being stung by a new bug of greenish color, much resembling a mosquito, which is now as much of a pest in Schuylkill county as the seventeen-year locusts.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — Tommy Tucker And His Wishes

"WE all ought to feel happy when we are not lame or sick or blind," said daddy in beginning the bedtime story, "but some people are never satisfied. Now, there was a boy I once heard tell about. His name was Tommy Tucker, and he cried all the time because his hair was red. One day a good fairy took pity on him and changed it to black, but still he wasn't happy. He thought his nose was too long, and when the fairy changed that he cried because he imagined that his feet were too large. Finally he bothered the fairy so much that she said: 'Tommy Tucker, you foolish boy, I will grant you one more wish, but that's all. My goodness, you keep me waving my wand all the time, and you don't look half as nice as you did at first. Come, hurry up and make your last wish.'"

SHIP LINE FOR THE RICH

American Millionaires Seek Privacy During Ocean Trips Between This Country and Europe.

It would seem that American millionaires are becoming extraordinarily reserved and exclusive and they are beginning to object to traveling on the ordinary boats which voyage between America and Europe.

"We have a variety of objections to this mode of traveling," said Harry Payne Whitney, who with a big party of friends arrived in England the other day from New York. "The first is that even when you engage private suites at the cost of $750 apiece, as I did for myself and my guests, the accommodation is not all that it might be and one has not the sense of privacy one desires."

The upshot is that a number of millionaires which includes the Pierpont Morgans, the Vanderbilts, the Ogdon Millers, etc., are putting their heads together with the idea of building a few palatial floating mansions for their own exclusive use in which sumptuous suites of rooms decorated in the most approved manner will be at their disposal. The wealthy American now crosses so often to and from New York that there is an idea that a dilly equipped service of this kind, in which the prices would be four or five times more than the usual fees, would pay handsomely.

Some of the rich Americans like to cross with their own retinue of servants and even now in numerous instances take their own chef, who does his master and mistress's cooking on board.

LITERATURE AND THE BIBLE

Scriptures a Constant Source of Inspiration to Famous Writers of the World.

Direct, but not always accurate, quotations from Scripture and allusions to Biblical characters and events are very numerous in English literature. They are found in all sorts of books. Prof. Albert T. Cook has recently counted 63 in a volume of descriptive sketches of Italy, 12 in a book on wild animals, and 18 in a novel by Thomas Hardy. A special study of the Biblical references in Tennyson has been made, and more than 500 of them have found.

The references to the Bible in the poetry of Robert Browning have been very carefully examined by Mrs. Minnie Gresham Machen in an admirable little book. In his longest poem, "The Ring and the Book," there are said to be more than 500 Biblical references.

With what pathos does Sir Walter Scott, in "The Heart of Midlothian," make old David Deans bow his head when he sees his daughter Effie on trial for her life, and mutter to himself, "Ichabod! my glory is departed!" How magnificently does Ruskin enrich his "Sesame and Lilies" with that passage from Isaiah in which the fallen kings of Hades start from their thrones to greet the newly fallen with the cry, "Art thou also become weak as we? Art thou become like unto us?"—Century Magazine.

Corresponding.

For some girls there seems to be a special fascination about an aimless and silly correspondence with every man they have ever met, even those in the same city as themselves. This correspondence is always useless, and is likely to degenerate into a false and pernicious sentimentalism.

There is no reason why a man and a girl who are on approvingly friendly terms should not occasionally write to each other of their doings and those of their common friends, when

At the Parting of the Ways

By Francis A. Corey (Copyright, 1910, by Associated Literary Press.)

Lying back in her big easy chair with the red firelight playing over her jewels and laces, Mrs. Taylor Peyton was a picture of luxurious ease. Young, beautiful, fabulously rich, the prizes of life had been showered lavishly upon her. Lois Barton could not understand why her proud face wore that look of weary discontent.

This six weeks' visit with her city cousin had given to Lois, herself, her one taste of real luxury. It was all very wonderful. She felt, sometimes, like a person transported to a land of enchantment. She had enjoyed every moment. But her visit was drawing to a close. Soon, she must return to the drudgery of the school room.

A flush sprang to her cheeks, kindled by a sudden thought. She, too, could live in a beautiful house with servants at her beck and call—buy her gowns at the big shops patronized by her cousin Virginia! Fate had thrown a golden apple in her way. She need not go back to the old treadmill round, the ungenial tasks, unless she chose to.

But—Ward Winthrop! Well, what of him? It was two years since he had left Surry without bidding her goodbye. In all probability she would never see him again. The surest cure for her aching heart was to set up the image of another in the shrine so long kept sacred to him.

Meanwhile Virginia Peyton, on the other side of the dancing fire, was looking her over approvingly. "My dear," she said, "that simple white gown is in excellent taste. A country girl shouldn't make herself too smart at city functions. I wanted you to look your best tonight. Gordon Vance will be at the reception. He is very fastidious. With men of his temperament, trifles turn the scale. I shall let him know that you return home the last of the week. I think he will come to the point before the evening is over."

"Oh, I hope not!" Lois exclaimed with a sudden revulsion of feeling. "Addressed the Jury. A man who had never been in court before in his life was recently called as a witness in a court in southern Indiana. On being sworn he took a position with his back to the jury and began telling his story to the judge, who courteously said: 'Address your remarks to the jury, sir.'"

The witness paused for a moment, but not comprehending what was said to him, remained in the same position. The judge was then more explicit and said: "Speak to the jury, sir—the men behind you on the benches." The witness turned around, bowed awkwardly, and said: "Good morning, gentlemen."—National Monthly.

Honor Your Business. It is surprising how many men there are who do not desire their sons or anyone else to adopt their calling. But it is wise thus practically to speak of your business? It is a good sign when a man is proud of his work or calling. Men are frequently heard finding fault with their particular business, deeming themselves unfortunate because fastened to it by the necessity of gaining a livelihood. They thus destroy all their efforts in the work and keep shifting from one thing to another until they are finally failures in life.

A man should put his heart into everything he does. There is no profession that has not its peculiar cares and vexations. No man can escape annoyance by changing his business. There is not any mechanical business altogether agreeable. Commerce is affected, like all other pursuits, with trials and unwelcome duties.

Schoolgirls as Mountain Guides. One of the novel occupations that the summer tourist business has developed is that of a guide to the high points of the continental divide on the Moffat road, and this unusual avocation has been selected by Miss Grace Nelson, a Denver high school girl, who is spending the summer at Corona, at the crest of the continental divide.

Mrs. Nelson has explored the region around the station on the top of the divide and is daily engaged in taking parties of tourists to see the emerald lakes that lie hidden among the shadows of the giant crags and across the white fields of snow which lie unmelting beneath the glare of the July sun. She has been able to add to her bank account during her vacation, besides paying all her expenses at the crest of the divide by this novel means of money-getting.

Englishwomen and the Law. Tight-fitting dresses received some criticism from Judge Bacon at Bloomsbury. A lady sued a dressmaker, alleging that a hobble skirt supplied to her was not a proper fit because it was not sufficiently tight. Judge Bacon directed the dress to be fitted on, and, thus arrayed, the lady stood up on the bench in order that his honor might examine the skirt very closely. "I notice a little fullness in the skirt. Is that what you complain of? I notice that some dresses are made so tight now—in fact, indecently tight." Judgment was given for lady plaintiff for the cost of the material.—New York Sun.

Judge Bacon directed the dress to be fitted on, and, thus arrayed, the lady stood up on the bench in order that his honor might examine the skirt very closely. "I notice a little fullness in the skirt. Is that what you complain of? I notice that some dresses are made so tight now—in fact, indecently tight." Judgment was given for lady plaintiff for the cost of the material.—New York Sun.

Gordon Vance paused beside them, his handsome face deeply flushed. "I was watching for you, Miss Barton," he said. "Lola's eyes drooped under his ardent gaze. She was at the parting of the ways. The momentous question must soon be answered, and the thought terrified her. There was a cowardly impulse to run away—escape from it all.

But marriage with this man meant the elimination of many bitter-sweet memories from her sore heart. Gordon Vance was cultivated, agreeable—she might love him in time. The prospect of becoming his wife would have dazzled most girls in her position. It would be madness to throw away this matrimonial prize.

"Let us find a quiet spot where we can talk," he pleaded presently. "I have something particular to say to you." Lois gave a frightened gasp. Glancing around, as if for protection, she saw her cousin suddenly change color, stare right ahead with tense expression, then wheel about and come swiftly toward her.

"I'm faint—ill! These rooms are stifling," Virginia panted. "Please take me home, Mr. Vance. Lois, get your wraps and come quickly." But Lois' suspicions had been aroused by this sudden indisposition. Glancing curiously toward the upper end of the long room she saw a tall, distinguished-looking man talking animatedly with her hostess. It was Ward Winthrop!

One long-drawn, startled breath, and the girl's sweet lips came together in a straight line. A dozen throbbing emotions all at once re-solved themselves into a fixed determination, Virginia put out a detaching hand, but she shook it off. "I mean to know the truth," she said in a resolute voice.

"Have you no pride—no shame?" Virginia cried angrily. "After that man's shabby treatment!" Ward Winthrop flushed, then paled, when he saw her coming. His eyes had been drawn to her face as by a magnet. Something in her expression quickly changed his cold nod of recognition into a cordial hand-clasp.

"You, Lois? What a surprise! I'm delighted to see you again." He looked at her wistfully, with curious intensity. Mrs. Vanddyke, conscious of something unusual in the situation, discreetly turned away. The two were left standing by themselves. Lois could hear the pounding of her own heart above the throb of the music, the tinkle of gay voices; but the man's eager face swam mistily before her eyes.

"Lois, dear, what is it?" he bent to whisper. "Do you feel that you made a mistake in not answering my letter two years ago?" "Your letter?" she repeated. "I received no letter from you."

"I wrote the morning I left Surry, giving the address to which an answer was to be sent. I was called away unexpectedly. I hadn't time to come and bid you goodbye. I asked you in that letter if you would marry me when I won out. I watched the mails for many days, but no answer ever came. Of course, I concluded you had taken that way to let me know my hopes were futile."

A sudden brightness went over Lois' face like a flood of spring sunshine. "Your letter never reached me, Ward," she said softly. "I think I understand why—"

"What would you have answered if it had?" he interrupted eagerly. "That is what matters. I can ask you to marry me with a clear conscience. For I have made good! Fame and fortune are mine. I love you more than ever. Have I any chance of winning what is of greater consequence to me than anything else in the whole world?"

Lois glanced back to where Gordon Vance and Virginia were standing and a shiver went over her. The next moment she was smiling happily into her lover's face. "Oh, Ward, you did not come too soon," she said in a sobbing whisper. "I was at the parting of the ways. I might have taken the one that led forever away from you!"

Discouraging Race Suicide. England grants a rebate in taxation to fathers of families; France is considering a bill for paying cash bonuses to government employes with children and the German employes with children and the German borough of Schoenberg, which comprises a large part of south and southwest Berlin, pays premiums to municipal employes who have more than two children. The increased cost of living has produced a marked tendency toward the two-child standard in German towns. Schoenberg will henceforth pay $2.50 a month to every employe, married or widower, who has three children; $3 a month for four children, $3.75 for five, $4.25 for six, and $5 for families of more than six.

Just Had to Say It. Pyrrhus had just won his costly victory over the Romans. "Well," he ejaculated, "I suppose I've got to say it; posterity will expect it of me. But it's such a moldy old chestnut! Here goes: Another such victory and—"

But we shall be more considerate than Pyrrhus was—we shall stop the quotation right here. "I shall never speak to her again." "What's the matter now?" "She received four pickle dishes for wedding presents and mine was the only one she exchanged."—Detroit Free Press.

An Affront. "I shall never speak to her again." "What's the matter now?" "She received four pickle dishes for wedding presents and mine was the only one she exchanged."—Detroit Free Press.

NAME SHOULD KILL DISEASE

"Bioreontograph" is Machine That is Expected to Take Moving Pictures of Our "Innards."

"Bioreontograph!" No, it is neither a pi-line nor a disease, nor the name of a count from Muscovy. It is a machine. But, oh, such a machine! Its inventor, two Munich doctors, claim that it will take moving pictures of our "innards," that it will photograph our heart beats, and out break fast bacon in process of digestion. We hope it won't. In fact, regardless of the disadvantage of their demise from a standpoint of scientific progress, we hope those two prying physicians will choke to death on the name of their invention. It was bad enough in all consequence, for superpsychological novel writers to make moving pictures of our minds and untangle with alarming patience the myriad convolutions of our cerebrum and cerebellum, but when they propose to riddle our whole anatomy to get subjects for cinematograph films, we feel called upon to protest.

Think of the consequence if such an invention becomes common as the camera. Then, when you sing to some fair maiden "My Heart Beats All for You," or "There's a Little Wheel a Turnin' in My Heart," she may level her bioreontograph in your direction and prove your perfidious falsehood with one snap of the button. Alas, to think that there was once a day when love was blind as justice!

AEROPLANES AND THE BIRDS

Gulls Attended Glen Curtiss on His Flight Over Lake Erie and Were Not Frightened.

Some curiosity has been expressed regarding the effect of aeroplanes, or, at least, the impression, on the birds of the air, large and small, and one writer asks: "Will the flying machines be mistaken for gigantic hawks, swooping and soaring for prey among the lesser habitants of the sky? Will the birds become bewildered and dash into the aeroplanes? A few days ago it was noticed that when Glenn Curtiss sailed from Toledo to Cedar Point, over Lake Erie, he was attended by a flock of gulls. The birds did not seem the least frightened. They appeared rather to be intensely curious about the vehicle and accompanied it for a long distance. The gull is not exactly a show-me bird. It will swallow anything; and it is not at all discriminating. No doubt the verb "gull" comes from such a source, and this flock that accompanied Aviator Curtiss were quite gullible enough to believe that they had discovered a new species in the ornithological world. Where genuine terror among the feathered tribe will be spread is in the poultry yard; since a mere kite overhead startles hoarse cries from the patriarch of the henery, and inspires a wild scuttling to shelter by his entire saragino, an aeroplane might easily result in his simply falling in a dead faint with fright.

Hints for Anglers.

The new motto of the dry-fly purists, "Watch the walt," reminds a writer in the London Globe of other angling mottoes of past times. Walton himself provided an admirable motto for the brotherhood of anglers in his parting words, "Study to be quiet." There are few mottoes at once so brief and so apt as the famous motto over Cotton's Fishing House, at the head of Beresford Dale, "Piscatoribus Sacrum," and again in the wood cut on the title page of "The Secrets of Angling," "Hold hook and line then all is mine," and "Well fayre the pleasure that brings such treasure." Search would no doubt bring to light many more angling mottoes, some, perhaps equally felicitous. I do not know the origin of the motto on the book-plate of the Fly-Fishers' Club library, "Piscator non solum piscatur," but it is a happy thought and happily expressed.

Stinging.

Mrs. Phillip Van Volkenberg, in a recent interview, said at Newport: "Yes, it is true that the witty French press before my marriage called me 'as rich as Croesus, as beautiful as Venus, and as innocent as Dreyfus.'"

She smiled.

"But I paid no attention," she said. "The remark wasn't ill-meant. It hadn't the sting of a remark made the other day here."

"Is it true," said one lady to another at the Casino, "that at your dance last night you were the only sober person present?"

"No; of course not," was the indignant reply.

"Who was, then?" said the first lady blandly.

THE LAND OF MILK AND BUTTER

Anybody Can Get the Offered Tract for Nothing Who is Able to Show Me in the U. S. Land Like This for the Money I Want to Sell for.

322 acres best bottom, sandy land there is anywhere on our globe. Located on the main railroad line, one mile from a prosperous little town; 16 acres in cultivation, a common house and barn, rest in fine timber, mostly hickory, oak, gum, elm and some few other kinds. Timber worth at least $10 per acre clear. Very easy to clear, as there is no underbrush. The land is absolutely dry year around and no overflood. There is a small creek through the land; flooding had paid this year in cotton from $45 to $120 per acre. The land is mine and take next 20 days. If not sold till Dec. 1st, $50 per acre. Full investigation most welcome. Make any terms if two-fifths paid down. Pay to everybody all expenses if not found as represented.

F. GRAM. NAYLOR, MO.

Don't Overlook This Proposition

It Won't Remain Long at These Figures—275 Acres

On St. Francis Street, 12 miles east of Piedmont, Wayne Co., Mo. 2 1/2 miles east of a good inland town, post office, 2 good stores, 2 blacksmith and wagon shops that can manufacture and repair anything needed by the farmer. 100 acres in cultivation, over 300 acres under good plank and wire fences, 50 acres of best bottom land, all in corn, and this season with the highest yield in several years, but a small portion overflooded. There is 50 acres in pasture, good 10-room, 2-story frame house, painted; 2 large barns, 50x50 and 60x50 with hay racks and crib and other necessary out buildings. One other good 20x20 box house; 4 clusters, plenty of running water in every field for stock, 50 acres virgin timber, will cut about two thousand feet to the acre. This is one of the best combination farms in the country and very healthy. The owner has had a doctor on the place in 15 years. It is so well set up—old age. This is a bargain, and I court a personal inspection. Price, $8,000. Let me send you something that will not only make you a living, but will increase your bank account each year. Write for my list and further information. E. L. Sisk, 200 Piedmont, Mo.

Eight miles from county seat, 1,999 acres; hog wire fence; 500 in cultivation, 275 bottom; 500 open timber and pasture; several springs and branch; 6 room frame house; 2 large barns; family orchard, $25 per acre; terms, A. W. Ollis & Co., Springfield, Mo.

FARM BARGAIN.

116 acres, 4 miles out, good 4-room house, large barn, other outbuildings, good soil, well watered and fenced. About 2 acres slightly rough with timber and blue grass, nearly all of farm in grass. Worth $75, but going at $47.50 per acre. You will find us reliable. Dallas and Phillips, Pleasant Hill, Mo.

VERNON COUNTY, MO.

Where rainfall is plentiful and corn, timothy, clover and all staples grow to perfection. Lands are steadily advancing in price, but can now be bought for $15 to $18 per acre on good terms. Write for our new list, mailed free. DE WITT HOOVER & COMPANY, Bell Phone 158, Nevada, Missouri.

JASPER COUNTY, MISSOURI.

204 acres bottom land, adjoining city of ten thousand. Two sets of improvements. Fine dairy, produce and poultry farm. Two hundred bu. potatoes to acre average. An ideal stock farm. Terms can be arranged. Write Regan Land Co., (owner) Carthage, Mo.

210 ACRES.

Stock and grain farm, all under fence, 140 acres corn this year will average 50 bushels per acre; 75 acres blue grass, small orchard, good 4-room house, good barn, pair extra heavy scales housed in, three wells, abundance of water; corn cribs and other outbuildings. Two sets of improvements. Fine dairy, produce and poultry farm. This is an extra good farm for stock feeders. Will be sold at a bargain if taken soon. Address E. E. Middleton, Amity, Mo.

Correct Styles Reflected in Advertising

By SETH BROWN

There are a great many women who take considerable pains to read different fashion publications on correct dress and at the same time overlook the fact that, as a rule, the local newspaper advertising can be relied upon as expressing the best statements in regard to styles.

Dealers have to view this matter quite differently from the ordinary writer in a magazine. They have to know what the people want and what they will buy and therefore their knowledge in regard to styles is practical and up-to-date.

The average article on styles is prepared at least six months before the styles are supposed to go into effect, and therefore it is only natural that these styles frequently miscarry.

In other words, it is frequently found that the public refuses to buy what Dame Fashion decided is correct, and therefore the true index of fashion is always to obtain through the dealers.

Up-to-date dealers reflect such information in their advertising.

It is really the only up-to-the-minute and correct standard, because it tells you just what the best dressed women are now buying.

Not what somebody thinks about it.

POSTS HER VISITING RULES

Mrs. Appleton Has Set of Good-Natured Mints on Her Guest-Room Door.

Mrs. Lysander John Appleton has done so much visiting herself that she realizes how many things arise to cause discomfort to a guest, and has had printed and framed a set of rules which hangs on her guest-room door, similar to those that hang in hotel bedrooms.

1. Don't bow the head at meals as if expecting grace. We don't ask it unless the preacher is present, and a guest's expectation of a religious observance that isn't coming is embarrassing to the family. 2. Make yourself at home, but don't expect us to treat you like one of the family. We want to retain our friendship. 3. If a guest knows any wonderful experiences of women who have made money by keeping a cow, the hostess will appreciate it if they are told in the presence of Mr. Appleton. 4. Pay no heed to slighting remarks about company made by Chauncey Devere. He takes after his father. 5. Don't leave your toothbrush when you depart. The washstand drawer is filled with toothbrushes left by guests, and every one has been used and is therefore useless to the Appleton family. 6. When the preacher calls, don't stay in the parlor. Your hostess finds herself reinforced for the trials of life if she can have a short season of prayer with her pastor alone. 7. All visits due the hostess and her daughters promptly collected. 8. The printed slips attached showing the High Cost of Keeping up a Dining Room Table are for free distribution. Help Yourself.—Achtson Globe.

WHY PEOPLE SEE PHANTOMS

Hallucinations of Famous Characters Due to Abnormal Sensibility of the Nervous System.

A morbid condition of the organs of sense or of delirium, is sufficient to invest our mental conceptions with phantom shape. Our thoughts vary, according to the violence of our emotions, from faint mental pictures to vivid and almost corporeal apparitions. The strength of these sensational influences is naturally proportionate to the susceptibility of the nervous organism.

A consideration of these facts in conjunction with the acknowledged neuropathic tendencies of genius seems to illumine many of the mysterious anecdotes with which the names of great men and women are associated. The hallucinations of Mahomet and of Joan of Arc, the appearance of his dying wife to Doctor Donne in Paris and Luther's discomfiture of the devil by summary contact with a missile ink bottle, to mention but a few instances, practically resolve into cases of abnormal sensibility of the nervous system. Who would learn with surprise that Lucretius, Hawthorne or Emily Bronte saw ghosts? It should rather be an occasion for wonder that genius is ever free from the visitations of specters.

Too Honest for a Lawyer.

A noted Philadelphia attorney tells one on himself. He left his native town in Tennessee years ago, and came to this city to practise law. He has been uniformly successful. His brother, upon the other hand, remained behind at the family homestead.

Returning to his native town some time ago, the attorney met an old farker in the road.

"Hello, uncle," he said, but the old man did not recognize the boy he used to know in the prosperous looking citizen who addressed him.

"Well," asked the lawyer, "how are the Blank family?"

"Oh, they're all right," said the old farker. "Jim Blank has gone to Philadelphia, and done made a lot of money. He's a lawyer, sah."

"Is that so," answered the attorney. "And his brother Tom, how is he, has he made a fortune, too?"

"Lawdy, no," answered the old farker, shaking his head, "he ain't no lawyer. Marse Tom wouldn't take a dishonest penny from nobody."

Kitchen Microscopes Barred.

The average of kitchen furniture that the average housekeeper cannot be persuaded to buy or to use if given to her as a present is a microscope, said a visiting teacher of cookery. "Wives excuse their negligence by saying that they do not care to borrow trouble. In vain do I urge that a kitchen microscope is essential to good health. With a microscope kept in a convenient place on a shelf above the sink where it can be picked up at any time to study meat, fruit and vegetables a higher grade of provisions can be secured. Housekeepers admit the truth of that, but still shun the microscope. Sterilize as they may they have made up their minds to eat a certain amount of microbes anyhow, and they prefer taking them sight unseen."

Law on the Links.

In the course of a case which came before Mr. Justice Scruton in the vacation court counsel reminded the judge that he granted leave to serve short notice of motion by telegram.

His Lordship—Yes; the application was made to me just after I had made a very excellent shot from a tee, and I granted it before I took my putt.—London Telegraph.

His Reckless Views.

"Wrong ideas of life, has he?" "Yes. He thinks a five-dollar bill was made to be changed."—Harper's Bazar.

Chinese Traits.
The Chinese are orderly, law abiding and well behaved; they have a strong sense of right and justice—are fair minded; they are reliable in commercial dealings—pay their debts and keep their agreements, whether verbal or written; they are dutiful to parents, fond of children and mindful of etiquette and punctilious about returning courtesies or favors; they are respectful to elders and superiors; they honor and respect character and intellectual ability, and do not recognize an aristocracy of wealth. This list might be largely extended, but it is enough to show what I have undertaken to show—that China has not by any means to seek abroad all the requisites for national greatness, and popular welfare; some of the most important are here already.—Address to Students at St. John's College, Shanhai.

Odd Suits, Coats and Dresses Reduced

As a result of the heavy selling of the last three months, with particular reference to the splendid business in our apparel section during the Teachers' Convention last week, we find many odd lots and broken lines in Ladies' Coats, Suits and dresses. These now bear a very liberal reduction in price. It will pay you to look them over, as you may find just the size, style and shade garment you are looking for—and at quite a saving in price. The savings range from $1.50 to $15.00.
