CATTLE

Steer Prices Lowered 15@30c During Week But Close is Firmer.

It was the usual week-end trade as far as beef cattle were concerned. Receipts were too light to afford any criterion of market conditions and quotable prices remain stationary with Thursday and Friday.

The week's trade in beef cattle has been far from satisfactory from the viewpoint of selling interests.

Local receipts for the week foot up approximately 3,000, as compared with 7,533 the preceding week and 9,212 the corresponding week a year ago.

Fat steers were under strong bearish pressure the first three days of the week. Market hit low level Wednesday when heavy steers sold 25@30c lower than the close of the week and light and handy weights 15@20c off.

Cows, Bulls and Mixed. During the opening sessions of this week the market for cows and heifers showed signs of weakness in sympathy with the trade in fat steers.

Nothing in the way of fresh supplies arrived at the stock house this morning and trade was at a standstill.

For the week supplies at the five markets combined have shown a slight enlargement over the previous week, a total of 187,500 sheep and lambs having registered to date, as compared with 180,000 for the like period the previous week and 125,900 for the same time a year ago. At this point aggregate marketings for the week to date give a total of 18,400, which compared with last week, shows a decrease of approximately 3,100, but is almost three times as many as were received for the corresponding time a year ago.

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Continued scarcity of outside buyers has been the predominant feature of the trade this week and trade as a whole has been a dull soft affair with prices closing around 10 to 15 cents lower as compared with last week's close on all but the strictly good grades of light and medium stock steers which have sold on a steady basis throughout the week.

On the opening day of the week with a supply of 6,500 on sale outside markets reported bad breaks in the price schedule with the result that the local market hit the toboggan for declines of 10 to 15 cents all around.

On succeeding days of the week the price list has been forced steadily downward and the market is closing up with values the lowest of the season.

Supplies have been largely on the lamb order as usual, but of the shipments being from Colorado and Nebraska with several strings from Kansas.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

The Legend of the Hazel Tree

HERES a story which daddy told Jack and Evelyn one evening when the youngsters asked him for a fairy story. Daddy said it was an English story. It began:

"Once upon a time there were a king named Julian and a queen named Helena who had a little son, whom they decided to call Hazel. The king sent out invitations to all the good fairies to attend the christening, because they thought that each of them would give to the baby a different gift. One fairy, who was called Spite, was not invited, because they thought that she might harm him.

"On the great day Spite came also. After all the good fairies had bestowed their gifts Spite stepped up to Hazel and prophesied that a misfortune would come upon him when he was eighteen years of age.

"All went well until Hazel's eighteenth birthday, when he went out for a walk in a forest. After he had been walking for some time he saw a beautiful blue flower. He stooped down to pick it, but it turned into a little evil looking old woman. Hazel tried to run away, but he stumbled. When he arose the old woman, who was the fairy Spite, yawned her wand over him. He felt his feet sink deeper and deeper into the earth, he became very tall, and branches with leaves began to grow out of his head, arms and shoulders. He became the hazel tree.

"As the prince did not return his parents set out with several servants to search the forest. But they never found their son. One day a woodcutter tried to chop down the tree, but a swarm of wasps settled on him and nearly stung him to death.

"Several years had passed, and Julian's kingdom had been invaded by his enemies, and he, with Queen Helena and their daughter Mary, had been taken prisoners. One day in every year the fairies lose their power, and it was on this particular day that Julian's enemies decided to burn Helena and Mary together because they refused to give up their religion.

"As Spite could have no power over the hazel tree this day it was the very tree that the cruel soldiers cut down and chopped into pieces, which they placed, with some straw, where the two women were to be burned.

"After they had bound them together and placed the fagots and straw round them they set fire to it, but as soon as this was done there was an explosion, and Prince Hazel rose out of the midst. Then all the fagots turned into soldiers. They unbound Helena and Mary, who were unharmed. Like the enemies they fell out of the head, and all lived happily ever after."

SURE, THERE'S A DIFFERENCE.

Surely it makes a difference whose ox is gored. Woolgrowers in Texas are howling lustily against any change in the present tariff law concerning wool. Over the fence the cotton-growers are yelling with the full force of their lungs for the removal of the duty on bagging. And there you are with as neat an example as you may wish of the fact that the tariff is a local issue anyway.

NOT WRITING CIGARET RUES.

Toddle along your path in the direction of the hall of silent statuary. If you are afraid of the answer, don't ask me the fool question. I ain't the wisest owl that ever perched on a dry limb and watched the moonlight parade wander on its way. But I ain't going around with my digits crossed, and if you have any idea that the answer would make you blush, don't propound the question. I don't know enough to renege when I'm holding trump. Maybe that's why I'm a turtle, but it's the straight chalk-line, and it's taking long chances for any cute little scold-skinned bunch of feminine fancies to ask me a question just to see whether I have got the answer on top.

"I ain't writing the rules and regulations for pink teas and things of that kind. If I were there are a lot of fads and fobbles of feminine fancy that would go into the discard. I would put the kibosh on them and nail it down with malleable spikes so it could not be pried off. It may be all right for you girls of all kinds of ages and looks to get together at these pink affairs, put your pink toes on top of the table, or on the keyboard of the piano, fire up a Turkish Torch de Stinkino and blow rings of blue smoke up into the chandelier while you whitewash the White boys with gossip, but you ain't getting me to vote 'yes' on the proposition. You want me to open up my knowledge tank and inform you whether it is right for girls, old and young, single or double, to smoke cigars. Say, is it right to violate nature? Is there anything natural about smoking a cigar? I can smoke anything that was ever put into a pipe, but the line is drawn at the cigar. Go and ask your man where this cigar fell among the female population started. If she don't know, tell her to ask pa, and if he won't tell her is either a bone-head or a liar. Toddle along, girls."

THERE'S BUT ONE ANSWER.

An article received recently at this office for publication takes the stand that current efforts to keep the boys on the farms are not warranted, and quotes authority for the statement that our farming population is still relatively too high, says the Missouri Ruralist. The basis for the authority's reasoning is that one man on the amount of land which would be at his disposal could feed a certain larger number of men in non-productive occupations than he is now required to feed. In such a case, if justice is to be rendered the man on the land, he will have an income increased in proportion to the increased number of persons he feeds. As there is in this country already, more land under cultivation than can be properly handled with the help available, a reduction of the number engaged in agricultural work to the basis the authority gave as the correct one, would mean a much more than proportionate reduction in the number of acres grown to annual crops.

There is but one way out from all this, viz., through the pasture. Of course it is true that the young man, who is a son of a farmer, getting his schooling in an agricultural college, has made a much simpler problem of the subject than it really is, yet there is certain truth in his chain of reason-

BRITISH PEER'S BAD HAT

Exciting Experience of a Penurious Nobleman Preparing for Coronation Ceremony.

At the time of the queen's coronation the peers all sent their hats to Starr & Mowlem's, the court jewellers, that the measurements of their heads might be taken for the coronets which they were to wear at the coronation.

"Lord Bunsborough's" hat was sent too, but it was in such a lamentable condition of negligence, grime and batter that a shopman, finding it on the floor, where it had rolled off a counter, thought it must be a head-dress that had been thrown there for fun by a shopboy of facetious turn and had it kicked into the dusthole.

By and by "Lord Bunsborough's" valet returned for his master's hat, which was hunted for in vain, till his description of it led to its being identified with the hat in the dusthole. The valet was rather glad, for he hoped the misadventure would induce my lord to purchase a new head-dress; but he little knew the close-fisted peer, who, on hearing what had happened, said: "Have the hat picked out of the dusthole and take it to be cleaned—but at the jeweler's expense, mind." — Grenville-Murray: "Side Lights on English Society."

HOW TO HAVE A GOOD TIME

There Was Once a Man Who Thought Getting Drunk Was Great Joy.

How men differ as to their ideas of having a good time! There was a man once who thought that getting drunk was having a good time; another, that playing cards until 2 o'clock in the morning was the thing; another that lying around a club smoking cigars and drinking liquor was a fine experience; another that getting about the country all day Sunday was a great joy, or that loafing about hotel lobbies for hours watching people come and go—and so on ad infinitum.

Tastes differ as to what a good time is, but there is no question that an experience of low and driving talk and deed, that leaves the mind empty, the soul stale and the body weak, is not, in the long run, having a good time. A low brow may think he is having a good time when he is blinding his hope and shortening his days. His heart hurrahs, but it lessens its beats.

"The joy that all men crave lies within the invisible circle of the heart," said Hamilton W. Mabie, and he who scours through the jungle of outside indulgences to find it, may find itful and sputtering gleams of it for the moment, but it soon changes into a phantom and a regret.

WILL BOOST THE IOWA HEN

Fanciers in Western Part of State Form Association.

Council Bluffs, Ia., April 13.—The Midwest Poultry Association is the name of a new organization formed in this city last week. A number of the prominent hen fanciers from various points in western Iowa gathered in the auditorium and completed a movement for the boosting and encouraging of the Iowa hen, which has been mentioned in this city for several years.

Men nationally prominent in poultrydom were chosen as officers as follows: W. S. Keelin, president; G. W. Mammitt, vice-president; A. W. Covatt, secretary; and Dr. Scott Covatt, treasurer.

Five directors for different terms: C. A. Tiswood, five years; J. B. Keeline, four years; Theodore A. Barker, two years; I. N. Minnick, three years; and G. W. Jackson, one year.

The above officers include men whose stock has won prizes in poultry fairs all over the country. Their ultimate intention is to hold a poultry exhibition in this city some time next winter. Immediate steps will be taken to present the matter to the commercial club and other boosters that the association may assume its intended importance and celebrate the organization with a large show to be held later on. At the meeting of the board of directors was instructed to draw up a set of by-laws and a constitution; also to prepare papers of incorporation and file them with the secretary of state at Des Moines.

NEGRO'S BODY MAY BE CLEW

Companion of Murdered Deputy Game Warden Also slain.

Tulsa, Ok., April 13.—The finding of the dead body of Kross Honner, a negro boy, may lead to a clew that will reveal the mystery surrounding the death of Charles Estes, a deputy game warden, who was mysteriously murdered at the foot of Turkey Mountain, near this city over a month ago. Bonner's body was found by Indians in an isolated spot five miles south of Bixby. The body was suspended by one foot from the fork of a tree. He disappeared in the company of a strange white man the day Estes was murdered and it is believed the man who killed Estes was his white companion who afterwards killed the negro to prevent capture. The murder of Estes is the most baffling crime mystery the local authorities have ever dealt with.

OLD NEW ZEALAND WAYS.

Rev. Francis Rawel, a Methodist minister in Auckland, New Zealand, talked before a meeting of the Cook County (Ill.) Teachers' association on "From Cannibalism to Culture."

"I think this is a magnificent custom," he said, as he caused to be thrown on the canvas a picture of a New Zealand woman thus tattooed: "These marks are put on the chin in order that the young men may know that a woman is married. When I go to Washington I am going to suggest this to President Taft as a convenient manner of conveying information of women's married state."

Another innovation that the speaker suggested was the former New Zealand method of greeting, namely, the rubbing of noses together. Mr. Rawel's wife, Mrs. Hine Taimoa Rawel, and their daughter, Piwa (Eva) Rawel, gave an exhibition of this manner of greeting.

THE DIVORCE INDUSTRY.

The man and his wife had met a fellow traveler on a train and got to talking, as travelers do, and the man, after they had become better acquainted.

"Not really," exclaimed the stranger. "And you are still married? How does that happen?"

"Oh, that's easy! You see, we don't have them for home consumption, but entirely for foreign trade.—Judge

BURIED IN SNOW

Marvelous Escape of Woman When Seven Men Lost Their Lives.

MEN HEARD DOG'S BARK

Mrs. H. H. Mason Only Survivor of Tragedy on Copper Mountain.

Oakland, Cal., April 13.—After having lain for sixty hours beside the dead body of her husband, buried under the timbers of her home, which was destroyed by a snowslide and covered in turn by a feet of snow, Mrs. H. H. Mason of Bodie Cal., is living, and is now at Escholt under the care of Dr. Susan Fenton of Oakland.

The snowslide came down Copper Mountain and buried all the people in camp, eight in number. Six men, besides Mason, were killed. The snowslide destroyed their concrete cottage, the power plant and all the buildings of the Pacific Power Company.

In spite of the horrors of her experience and the freezing, weakness and severe nerve strain, Mrs. Mason is uninjured, except for a serious condition of one knee, wedged against the body of her husband and held there by one of the falling timbers. She is still too weak to see any visitors, but Dr. Fenton is most hopeful of bringing the patient through.

Escape Was Marvelous.

The story of her escape is marvelous. When the Masons' concrete cottage was smashed by the snowslide the head of the bed was bent over Mrs. Mason and her husband. A slab of the concrete caught on the chair and a trunk, and was held there by a margin of an inch and a half. Mrs. Mason was probably unconscious for some time. The first thing that she remembers is that her dog was barking her face. She made his bark as usual, on the floor, and the supposition is that the faithful animal dug his way through the snow and tried to rouse his unconscious mistress.

The woman was discovered by Gen. Denham, Ernest Vaisordy, Herman Dechambeau and a number of others, who were digging a trench in the neighborhood. Mrs. Mason screamed as she heard them walk above her, and the dog barked. The men answered her, and in some way she managed to communicate with them and make them understand what had happened. For several hours they worked removing the snow before they came to Mrs. Mason, and discovered the dead body of her husband. Later they unearthed the bodies of the six other men.

A Futile Scheme.

"I always have to quarrel with my husband in order to get him to buy a new suit of clothes. He never thinks he can afford it."

"I should think he would learn after a while that it is useless to try in that way to get you to quit spending so much for dress."

ABOUT THE BIG TELESCOPES

Difference Between Big Glass at One End and Little One at the Other.

People sometimes wonder why a telescope has two glasses, one at the big end and one at the little end, and they want to know the difference. The glass at the big end is to gather light. It is simply a big eye. If it is a hundred times bigger than the eye in your head it will gather a hundred times more light. It gathers the rays of light coming from a star and bends them all into a common meeting point, called a focus, which is a picture of the star. You can look at this picture of the star with your naked eye if you like. But you can see it better and examine it more closely if you look at it with a small magnifying glass. And this is the glass at the small end of the telescope. It magnifies the picture made by the big glass at the other end of the instrument. All telescopes are built on this principle. Sir William Herschell was the first to arrange matters a little differently. He took away the glass from the big end and admitted the rays coming straight into the tube in parallel lines. Then at the bottom of the big tube he placed a bright concave mirror, made of burnished metal. When the entering rays fell upon this mirror they were again bent to a point called a focus, which was the picture of the star. To look at this picture he had to place the little magnifying glass at the side of the tube, because the mirror had stopped up its lower end.

The Why of Lawyer's Busy Monday.

"A lawyer gets more callers on Monday than on any other day of the week," remarked an attorney. "If he lives in the country his front door bell will begin to ring before he is out of bed, and if he has a city office there is likely to be a line of clients waiting."

"The reason is that on Sunday families get together and talk over their intimate affairs, and one of these is sometimes a suit they are thinking of beginning, and so one of their number is appointed to see the lawyers, and he comes down Monday morning. Of course this is more noticeable in the country than in town, but I have found that human nature works the same way in metropolitan or rural circles."

The woman was discovered by Gen. Denham, Ernest Vaisordy, Herman Dechambeau and a number of others, who were digging a trench in the neighborhood. Mrs. Mason screamed as she heard them walk above her, and the dog barked. The men answered her, and in some way she managed to communicate with them and make them understand what had happened. For several hours they worked removing the snow before they came to Mrs. Mason, and discovered the dead body of her husband. Later they unearthed the bodies of the six other men.

THOUGHT HUSBAND SPOKE.

"I ALWAYS HAVE TO QUARREL WITH MY HUSBAND IN ORDER TO GET HIM TO BUY A NEW SUIT OF CLOTHES. HE NEVER THINKS HE CAN AFFORD IT."

"I should think he would learn after a while that it is useless to try in that way to get you to quit spending so much for dress."

MEETS UNUSUAL COMBINATION

Late Archie Williams Hands Joint to President Cleveland's Attorney General.

Jim Orr, representative from Atchinson, and the late Archie Williams, one of the noted Western lawyers and for many years a Union Pacific attorney, were in Washington one time, and Williams decided to call on Attorney General Olney. The latter was a great stickler for dress and appearance. Williams didn't give a hang about clothes, and preferred a flannel shirt to the hard-bodded variety. He was also a devotee of corduroy pants. Williams walked into Olney's office and introduced himself. Olney looked him over, taking particular inventory of Williams' clothes. He utterly failed to offer the famous Kansas seat. "So your name is Williams, and you are an attorney for the Union Pacific?" asked Olney. "Yes, sir," said Williams, and he stated his mission concerning some Union Pacific land grant and the law and ruling about it. Olney again looked Williams over, noting his clothes particularly, and still failed to proffer a chair or show the usual little courtesies of that kind. "Mr. Williams," said Olney, "I am familiar with the ruling you quote, and you are wrong." "Well," said Williams, "I have met men who were gentlemen and not lawyers; and I have met men who were lawyers and not gentlemen, but I never before met the unusual combination of a man who is neither a lawyer nor a gentleman." While Olney gasped, Williams motioned to Orr, and cheerfully said: "Come on, Jim," and out they went.

FLOWERS PREVENT SUICIDE

Missionary Says Roses and Carnations Have Saved Downcast From Self-Destruction. Flowers are the most persuasive influence in preventing suicide, in the opinion of Mrs. E. M. Whittemore of New York, founder of the Door of Hope, through which more than 5,000 women and girls have passed. She is manager of the women's branch of the anti-suicide department of the Salvation Army in New York. Suicide is not an evidence of insanity, but the result of a detailed plan formed when the victim's condition in life becomes unbearable, according to Mrs. Whittemore. "Pink roses and white carnations are the most effective flowers in shattering that plan by reaching the remaining spark of love in the heart of the downcast person," she said. "These blossoms bring back memories of childhood and remind love of life. They silently perform a mission the human voice cannot accomplish." Mrs. Whittemore is a granddaughter of the late Dr. Valentine Mott, one of the foremost surgeons of New York. She was reared in affluence, was a leader in social circles, and her home has been the scene of many receptions and entertainments. For thirty years, since she was cured of a long illness, she has devoted her life and wealth to aiding helpless and downcast women and girls. Discarding her costly gowns, she donned the uniform of the charity worker and sought the unfortunate.

Artists' Blunders.

"I never saw an artist yet who could correctly paint a horseshoe," remarked a friend of mine pausing before a Broadway picture store. "They invariably paint it with an equal number of nails on each side, sometimes three, sometimes four and even five nails. As a matter of fact, there are four on one side and three on the other, the extra nail being on the inside of the foot, where the greatest strain comes." Which reminds me of the lines of a distinguished American poet in which he sweetly depicts the drowsy cattle on a summer's day lazily lapping the cooling waters of the crystal stream. The same peculiarity is also poetically attributed to the horse and other animals, the model of the poet having probably been the house cat.—From an Old Scrap Book.

Words They Missed at Spelling Bee.

Dr. Herbert Cunningham, who was reputed to be one of the best in the bunch at the spelling bee, balked at the first word given out and was sent to his seat when he failed to spell the third word put to him. Press Atwood could not spell Chicago, and John King put an "i" where the "e" should have been in bullet. John Lawrence put the "t" before the "e" in nickel; Arthur Burnett put a "u" for "w" in frown, and Harper Boyd spelled pew "pue." Mrs. W. H. Jefferson, who was the best speller for the town side, missed the word cuckoo, while Prentice Thomas, Mrs. Robert Crenshaw and others missed words equally simple.—Cadiz Record.

Down Comes a Dog Statue.

The borough council of Battersea, England, has decreed that the famous "brown dog" statue be destroyed. The "brown dog" statue was erected several years ago in Battersea park to commemorate the sufferings of a little dog used for months in vivisection experiments in a London hospital. It was the cause of scores of demonstrations on the part of medical students, and finally was removed by order of the borough council. The donor of the statue, however, recently brought suit to compel the council to restore it.

Official Announcement to Our Gas Consumers

The price of gas for domestic consumption, on and after the May readings of the meters, will be 45c gross, or 40c net if bills are paid on or before the tenth day of the month succeeding the month in which the gas was used.

Our original contract made August 30, 1905, with the Kansas Natural Gas Company stipulated that the above price should become effective in December, 1910; but at our request it was deferred until they now demand that we charge all domestic consumers the price of gas as mentioned in said contract.

We believe the value of Natural Gas as a domestic fuel, its convenience and cleanliness in the homes of our people and considering its peculiar qualities is worth more to the consumer than coal or wood or other fuels.

Respectfully,

CITY OF ST. LOUIS IN 1819

Streets were Unpaved, Sidewalks a Rarity and Only Light in Streets
Was Moon and Stars.

I confess I felt a little discouraged when I landed in St. Louis; it was not anything like as cleanly, or as well built as any of the towns of the west or south that I had previously visited.

The shore was nothing but ledges of limestone rocks, with here and there jagged projections of the same, standing like buttresses to keep off invaders; and at long intervals were to be seen a few stone warehouses, built in a very rough, though substantial manner. There was really but one street running parallel with the river that approximated to being closely built—the present Main street, which extended from about Vine street southwardly to somewhere near the termination of what is now Chouteau avenue; with short, narrow cross streets from the river, as Walnut, Elm, Myrtle, Almond, Poplar, etc.

There were a few dwelling houses scattered along on Second street; the streets were unpaved, except at great intervals; sidewalks were a rarity; and at night the only lights for the streets were what the moon and stars afforded. This was St. Louis in 1819.
Missouri was yet a territory.—Ludlow, Democratic Life.

The Pup and the Root.
Money is the root of all evil and Wall street is the pup that hangs to it.

MOBILE IS 200 YEARS OLD

Was First Capital of French Louisiana, and is Most Interesting City.

On February 26 many prelates of the Roman Catholic church, with Cardinal Gibbons presiding at the cathedral in Mobile, celebrated the two hundredth anniversary of the founding of that city by the French, under Bienville.
There was a pontifical high mass and other exercises, and the civil authorities were represented in some of them.
The reason why the Catholic church took the lead in the celebration is that church and state in France went hand in hand in planting new colonies in those days as well as in governing them, and also in governing old colonies.

Mobile is one of the most interesting of the country's cities. Founded several years before New Orleans, it was the first capital of French Louisiana and held this honor for a decade and a half. Among its natives and Canadian subjects France was well served on the American continent in the days of the grand monarch. La Salle, Iberville, Bienville and other empire builders were active and successful in planting the flag of the Bourbons over a large tract of the new world, including a great and rich part of the present United States.—Lestie's Magazine.

Tried Bardell vs. Pickwick.
To the western circuit belonged in 1824 Wilde, Coleridge, Cresswell, Crowder and Gaslee, the last named, raised to the bench in that year, being the model taken by Dickens for his Justice Stareleigh, who tried the cause celebre of Bardell vs. Pickwick.
Bompas was another, the son of the original of Sergeant Buzfuz in the same famous case.

There appeared not long ago in a daily paper, says the author of "Pie Powder," a statement that his Honor Judge Bompas had recently presented a lock of the sergeant's hair to the Dickens Fellowship. The original warmingpan which Mrs. Bardell was implored not to forget has long stood on the landing of a west country hotel frequented by the bar mess. It should be purchased to make the gift complete.—London Graphic.

The Galaxy of Double Stars.
Coburg, Lane county, a village of 800 people, boasts two pairs of twins born within the last six weeks, and six pairs of various ages in attendance upon its public schools. Upon the basis of these facts Colonel Roosevelt is to be invited to visit Coburg while in the state and say a few encouraging and congratulatory words to the parents of the village.
