Eight times the value of the corn crop of the United States for 1910 would pay for the duplication of every mile of railroad in the United States and also pay for the terminals, rolling stock and all other holdings that are a part of the business of railroading.

There are increasing demands for corn or maize, and some of them were hardly dreamed of outside the laboratories thirty years ago.

RABBITS THE CAUSE

Means of Adding to Acreage of British Empire.

Becomes Terrible Pest and Building of Fence As Protection Against It Results in Opening Up of New Land.

London.—How the rabbit was the means of adding half a million square miles to the British Empire is told by A. W. Canning, a famous West Australian explorer, who is now in London. The processes were in this sequence:

The rabbit imported from England into that vast territory whose interior seemed absolutely sterile, bred so prolifically that it became a pest that threatened to overwhelm the settlers in the cultivated strip of country along the coast.

So it became necessary to exterminate the rabbit in the cultivated area and to build a rabbit-proof fence to protect the settled areas from the ravages of the swarm of rabbits in the desert interior.

Mr. Canning, an Australian surveyor, explorer and prospector, was engaged by the West Australian government on the survey for the construction of 1,175 miles of this rabbit-proof fence from Starvation Harbor on the south coast of Mount Blaine in the northern territory. This fence ran along the edge of the great Sandy Desert at the back of all cultivation.

But in the course of his survey Mr. Canning, from his own scientific observations and his inquiries among the black aborigines, formed a theory that there was water to be found in the supposed waterless area of sandhills "outback" of the rabbit fence and through the heart of the supposed lifeless desert.

He started out on an exploring expedition across the barren country stretching from Willuna, nearly 800 miles northeastward from Perth, to Sturt's creek, the furthest outpost of civilization. That meant a stretch of desert to be traversed 1,000 miles in length. During 1906 and 1907 Mr. Canning strove with this preliminary survey.

In April, 1908, Mr. Canning set out from Willuna with an expedition of twenty-six men, sixty-two camels and 400 goats to open out the new trade route. It took him two years to complete the work. Now, at fourteen miles average distance there is a chain of wells across the stretch of country that had been thought waterless.

Not only does the chain of wells make a practicable north and south route for cattle and general trade, but each individual well is a depot and a starting point from which prospectors and explorers can set out to discover and develop the wealth of the country east and west. Half a million square miles are thus rendered available for the enterprise of the white man.

No white man had trod the country which Mr. Canning has now opened up, and earlier parties of explorers who had come nearest to it lost members from thirst and reported it hopeless. It is full of auriferous indications, he declares.

His most stirring adventure on the second trip—on the first he went once ten days without water and three weeks without a wash—was when, surrounded by a party of savages, armed with spears, which they were hesitating whether or not to use against him, he fired his shotgun at three parrots and brought the three down at the one shot. That brought the natives to a proper condition of respect.

HIGH VALUE OF BEE KEEPING

More Profitable Than Poultry Keeping—Thirty Thousand Keepers in State of New York.

Utica, N. Y.—That bee keeping is more profitable than poultry keeping was the conclusion announced at the bee keepers' institute held here. The institute was one of a number held by the state department of agriculture in various localities. An idea of the magnitude of the industry may be gained from the statement that the honey crop in the United States each year is worth $20,000,000. There are said to be 30,000 bee keepers in this state, and New York stands second among the states in the production of honey. A dozen when eggs sell at 50 cents. Even the hen is said to stand below the busy bee as a payer of dividends.

A great advantage that bee keeping possesses is that the bees require very little care and no feeding, while hens demand expensive feeding. One 20 years. The virtue of the bee stings as a remedy for rheumatism was mentioned by one speaker in a jocular manner. It is said, however, that this is no joke, that the bee poison relieves rheumatism and that some bee keepers catch their bees, remove the stings and sell the poison to druggists for medicinal purposes.

Egg Wags Its Tail. York, Pa.—An egg with a tail that wags is a freak in possession of Mrs. Minnie Bechert, wife of John H. Bechert, tenant on the farm of A. B. Farquhar, near York.

The egg was laid by a Plymouth Rock hen. It is of usual size and normal except for the tail, about two inches long, and an outer soft shell covering the whole.

Looking through this outer shell, which is extremely thin, the tail may be seen to wag slightly.

RARE OLD PAPERS EXHIBITED

Ayer Collection of Books and Maps Worth $400,000 Are Presented to Newberry Library.

Chicago.—The romance of medieval times and the "dim beginnings" of North American history have been transplanted to the west wing of the Newberry library, where over 5,000 maps and manuscripts made by the first explorers of the new world were placed on exhibition. They are all from the Ayer collection, which was given to the library by Edward E. Ayer. Many of the parchments are over 400 years old!

Mr. Ayer spent nearly thirty years in getting the collection together. A conservative estimate places the value at over $400,000. One of the most interesting divisions of the exhibit is the Claudius Ptolemy collection, which Mr. Ayer purchased from Henry Stevens of London. This contains sixty-one volumes, which are said to be among the first books ever printed in the Greek and Latin languages. There are also six Greek manuscripts dating back as far as 1250.

One of the most prized maps in the collection is a chart of western Europe which was made by Joan Martines in 1583. It is believed to have been secured from one of the Spanish vessels in the Armada by the victorious Admiral Howard, who gave it to Lord Burley in 1585.

There is also a large reproduction of a map which is said to be the most valuable in existence. This chart is the first in which the word "America" is used, and is one of the first attempts to show the topography of North America. The original was drawn by Martin Waldseemuller in 1507, and is now in the possession of Prince Francis of Waldburg-Wolfegg. The value of the chart, together with another one made by Waldseemuller, is placed by Prince Francis at $300,000.

Among the others of the rare documents are maps and manuscripts believed to have been made by Henry Hudson, Sir Francis Drake, Amerigo Vesputius, Hernando Cortes, John Smith, Father Hennepin and a volume containing the printed copy of a letter written by Columbus describing his discovery of America. The volume was printed in Rome by Stephen Planck in 1493, just after Columbus returned to Spain.

PEER AT GIRL FROM AEROS

Paris Aviators Cause Young Lady to Faint in Her Home—Mystery is Explained to Her.

Paris.—Miss Redding, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of Mrs. Joe Redding of San Francisco has just had an experience in Paris which she is not likely to forget for the rest of her life.

At midnight she saw four human eyes peering with French curiosity into her bedroom window. The Redding flat is in the fashionable Rue de la Falgauderie, not far from the residence of Jean de Reszke. For musical reasons it is on the top floor, and the house stands on the corner of a street overlooking the Bois de Boulogne. The house is one of the landmarks which the Aero club of France has designated as a point round which aviators making the circuit of Paris must fly.

On the evening of her startling experience Miss Redding had been at a society affair at the Ritz with her mother. Before retiring she stood looking out of her window. Suddenly she saw four human eyes. They seemed to take in the whole situation, and then vanished in the darkness. Miss Redding shrieked, fell and fainted. A maid, the mother, the domestics, and sundry physicians and nurses turned the white and gold bedroom into an improvised hospital, and the horror-stricken girl was "brought back." All she knew was that four staring, curious eyes had looked in her window at midnight.

The other day at the reception of the Aero club she received an explanation of the mystery. She was introduced to two airmen, who said:

"Oh, but we have seen you before." Then they confessed that while on a night tour of Paris when passing an airship mark they were unable to resist the temptation of looking in on the young beauty in her ball gown.

FISH A REVOLVING SWIMMER

Boston Professor Says This Marine Freak Whirls About Like Wheel—Looks Like Propeller.

Boston.—While Boston is boasting of its doughnut fish, discovered by Prof. Morton Kilgallen, there are other cities which have candidates along their respective lines. Milwaukee stakes its claim on the pretzel fish, Pittsburg on the smoke fish, Philadelphia on the snail (no offense), while New York has not discovered the fizz fish.

Professor Kilgallen made his discovery in the Charles river above the salt water line. His doughnut fish did this, he says: "It was swimming vertically and seemed to obtain its motive power by revolving rapidly, like a wheel. It looked like a little propeller blade moving along of its own volition."

The professor thinks the doughnut fish originally was a salt water flounder. Under the increased pressure of the fresh water it was a matter of only a few weeks before the skin on the flounder's back was rubbing against the skin on his stomach. In a few more weeks the constant rubbing together of these two layers of skin had worn a hole through, hence the doughnut shape.

GOATS MAKE MONEY

How to Select Right Kind of Breed of Animals.

Angoras Not Good as Milk Producers and Animals From Pyrenees Are Considered Best—Millanaise is Leader.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Mrs. M. Z. Watrous writes as follows concerning the goat industry:

The following facts relative to the keeping of goats for profit were obtained directly from owners; persons not merely supporting pets, but gaining either an abundance of rich milk and cream for their own use or else an entire living from the sale of these greatly desired commodities.

Of course, there are different kinds of goats, at various prices, and the first thing a beginner should determine is exactly or approximately how much he is willing to pay for an animal and how much he expects to make on his investment.

In this country milk is the foremost—in most cases the exclusive—consideration in the keeping of goats, and this will be the only profit estimated in this article. Therefore, the intending purchaser who wants to make money should not waste it on a large number of inferior animals, each of which gives only two or three quarts of milk a day, yet consumes, as a herd, more than one-third of one-fourth what the same number of first-class milchers would. Buy, if possible, from some one who imports goats. There are three such persons in California; one in Pasadena, another in Santa Monica, and a third in San Jose. Remember one thing: no matter what may be said in praise of Angoras, they are not the goats for milk.

As importation is a tedious process—because the goats are held in quarantine for six months at New York—those who furnish the money for that purpose order only the best breeds, and they are the persons whose advice should be heeded. It will be economical to pay for instruction by letter from such an interview be out of the question, as there is nothing like starting aright in a business.

The Millanaise from the Pyrenees are the best goats of all. They can be bought in Switzerland for five to ten dollars apiece, but by the time New York is done with them we have to pay $145 for each one; but none furnish less than a gallon of milk a day, while some give six quarts or even two gallons. Then, too, this beauty presents its owner with four kids at a time instead of only one or two, as an ordinary goat does. Another thing, the common variety, and even most of the Angoras, have an unpleasant odor; the very milk of the Mexican animal smells rather strong; but the high-breds of foreign extraction are never offensive. They are cleanly in every respect.

Prices run down from the high mark mentioned as low as $10 or less per goat; but a new-born kid of the high class kind will bring $10; $40 for the quartet of one birth, as against one or two dollars apiece for the twins of Angora babies.

The Togganburg is a good goat, too; it supplies from six to eight quarts of milk a day. So is the Schwartzal a desirable breed, but still the Millanaise is considered the leader.

One man who keeps 20 Swiss, 75 of the better Mexican and a few (five or ten) of the ordinary goats, averages 60 gallons of milk daily, which he readily sells for medicinal purposes at one dollar a gallon to an un-falling market.

The idea that these beasts eat any trash they may happen to find is not only false, but foolish. It is hardly likely that the rich fluid so prized as a life-sustainer is, after all, but a roundabout product from tin cans or a new production from old papers or even a refinement of briars and thistles. As with chickens, so with goats. If we expect them to feed us wholesomely we must first feed them decently. Their proper food is, of course, nature's fresh grasses, but these are not always available, other things must be substituted.

Here is what one woman feeds her two goats that have each given two quarts of milk a day for a year—when nine months' regular milking is thought good: Alfalfa during the morning, a pint of rolled barley at noon for each, a bran mash in the evening and a little oat hay to pick at during the night. Also salt occasionally.

Though they do not eat rubbish, goats are not at all fond of scenery, and a pile of stones, bits of rock, or broken pieces of flag-paving delight them, as they are naturally destructive, and can work off some of their activity on these hard things. It is said that the creatures live longer if allowed the free range of stony places.

As goat's milk sells for 25 cents a quart, and as no goat gives less than two quarts daily, it is not difficult to calculate how much may be counted as profit from the cost of their feed is deducted.

QUEER BLUNDERS IN COURTS

French Judge Divorces Petitioner's Lawyer—Similar Error Made by Magistrate in England.

Some years ago, it is said, a legal blunder of a most extraordinary character was committed in one of the divorce courts in Paris.

A somewhat similar error was committed in the English Court of Chancery. There had been a litigation over some property, which was held by one man and claimed by another of the same name.

THINGS THAT A MAN FORGETS

He Seldom Keeps the Saw Sharpened or Remembers Where the Glass Cutter Is.

Once in a while you find a prudent and practical man who keeps about him all manner of tools and things that come in handy when needed.

He finds it necessary to saw some plank, and remembers that he intended to have his saw sharpened and set.

That's a natural human failing. Careless, maybe, but just as natural as to leave a street car and forget, caring nothing about its future operations or its future destination.

The Nervous Hostess.

The hostess with a highly strung temperament is to be pitied, and so are her guests, even though her words be honey sweet.

Work and the Lady.

What is a lady? asks the London Week-end. The lady of the Victorian age was a soft, ornamental, purry creature like a cat.

French Family Life.

It is a threadbare criticism by Englishmen that the French have no word for "home." They have "foyer," which answers nearly enough.

METHODS OF SUGAR MAKING

Up in the Hills the Lore is Handed Down From One Generation to Another.

In these hills the lore of the woods and the best methods of sugar making, handed from one generation to another, are carried from the famous groves to the smaller ones.

Yet when some of our sugar pleasers a local critic he said, "Will the folks make lighter color sugar'n yours, but 'tain't so good."

But flavor depends upon the soil and the trees themselves. Our big, old trees on high land start early because of their southeastern exposure.

JUST LIKE A FRENCH FARCE

Experience of Woman Who Told Husband Her Plans for Day and Changed Her Mind.

"I have come to think it is not a good plan to tell your family what you expect to do during the day," observed the young matron.

FLOWER SALADS ARE LOVELY

French Chef Declares Those Who Don't Try Roses Know Not What They Are Missing.

London—Why do not English people eat chrysanthemum petals, rose leaves, snowdrop roots, nasturtium flowers and acorns?

Gave Father the Silence.

"I can sympathize with officers up at West Point who get in bad with the cadets and are punished with silence," said a New York man to a crosby.

Attribute of Success.

An American must not die; he must direct his energies toward success; success means making one's way in life; nine times out of ten, for ninety-nine men out of a hundred, that means the business world.

Making Headway.

A reporter was sent around to make some inquiries concerning a new play that David Belasco was engaged in writing.

FARM PAYS IN PHILIPPINES

American Who Started on Small Scale in Islands is Rapidly Growing Wealthy.

Manila—Three years ago an American landed in Manila with a capital of $75 and a theory. The American was J. H. Christen, the capital was cash and the theory was that any able-bodied man with the right stuff in him could make more than a bare living out of God's green earth.

Mr. Christen first took up a homestead of forty acres, the limit allowed by law, on the Polillo river, in Rizal Province. He built a house with his own hands and planted out crops of garden truck.

During the first year he worked on an average sixteen hours each day and lived on the products of his land only. When he began his enterprise he weighed 219 pounds.

Now, at the end of three years, Mr. Christen has 700 chickens, a number of ducks, guinea fowls, turkeys, hogs, rabbits and goats, and more than 5,000 producing plants.

PARROT A DIPLOMATIC BIRD

Feathered Pet of Belgian Crown Prince With American Minister in Three Capitals.

Brussels.—There is in the Laeken palace a Brazilian parrot which enjoys the rare distinction of having been a diplomatic bird in the American legation at Rio Janeiro, Lisbon and Brussels before finally becoming the royal pet of Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium.

FLORIDA SALADS ARE LOVELY

London—Why do not English people eat chrysanthemum petals, rose leaves, snowdrop roots, nasturtium flowers and acorns?

How many English people have heard of the acorns which grow on the small oak of southern Europe and Asia?

"It grows, for instance, in Greece, where it is called 'enzima.' The acorn of it is very good to eat if boiled or roasted, and a delicious 'coffee' can be made of them.

Our Doctors.

"The late Count Tolstoi loathed physicians," said, at a dinner in Washington, a Russian diplomat.
