ALFALFA ON DRY LAND.

J. E. Payne, who is a graduate of the Kansas Agricultural College, and who for the past fourteen years has been in charge of the dry farming experiment station of eastern Colorado, advises that he has found numerous cases in which alfalfa is doing well on the uplands of eastern Colorado and western Kansas.

The men who have succeeded best with unirrigated alfalfa have prepared their land well and then seeded it when an abundant supply of moisture was present.

POULTRY ON DAIRY FARMS.

Every dry land farmer should keep from 100 to 400 laying hens. The hens should be cared for by the farmer and not by his over-worked wife.

The most money is in eggs from a special egg producing breed and strain. Egg laying strains of general purpose breeds come next in order for profits.

ters as a memento of the bravery of the turkey. The faithful turkey lost his beautiful feathers, but he gave back fire to the world; so in his honor and as a memorial of his faithfulness the Indian uses the turkey wing to make his fire burn.

THE FARMER'S CHURCH.

Wallaces' Farmer: We hope that our readers who are not religious or religiously inclined will not skip this article, for we assure them that we do not intend to discuss the matter of religion at all, but simply to point out to them the social and educational advantages of the church in the country.

There is no one thing which the farmer now needs more than the development of the social life of the country. He complains of the lack of society, of the isolation of country life. His wife and children, and even he himself, are nearly always glad to see his own kind, though not his own flesh and blood.

Now the country church, quite apart from its religious teachings, meets this want. It enables farmers to get together on the sabbath. It does the man who is confined to his farm good to go two or three miles on the Sabbath to the church, even if he sees and hears nothing more than the horses gossiping or co-operating in switching the clock off each other in the pasture, by sitting each other's shoulders, or the caw of the crows in the nearest tree, or the bee bird darting from the telephone pole, grabbing his insect, and hastening with the precious morsel, or the butcher flies flying from one part of the hedge to another, darting at a snake that may be crawling in the grass, and impaling it on the thorns of the wild plum tree or osage hedge.

One beauty of the country church is that you don't need to dress as you have to in the city. Whatever dress you wear is acceptable, provided it is clean, and the absence of fine clothes is not noticed. The people meet on a kind of social equality. They gossip with one another about the door before church begins, and, if there are two sermons, at the intermission. They listen to church music, not as rendered by a fashionably dressed choir, but by the people of the neighborhood, and what it lacks in melody and harmony is more than likely made up in heartiness and evident sincerity. It is a good thing for the boys and girls to meet together at the country church and talk with each other. No harm is going to come from this, but much good.

The farmer who lives near a country church has a place to send his children to Sabbath school. The teaching may not be very scientific, but it will be sincere; they will come under the influence of a good man or a good woman, and that personal influence is in itself valuable.

You do not need to be a member of the church to see a great deal of good out of it. One of the main things is the development of social life, a better understanding of your neighbor. You see him at the country church at his home. He is not trying to drive a bargain with you, or to deceive you in any way. He is simply letting you see his best side, and it is a good thing to see that best side. It gives you more confidence to appeal to him for help in time of sickness or trouble in haying or harvest. You get to know him better.

We have been already had a partiality for the country church, partly but not altogether because we were accustomed to attend one in our boyhood. The vision of that old church stands out before us today. It was made of brick, and stood in a forest of oaks, of which every farmer in the neighborhood had his favorite tree. The farmer usually had a hook driven into the tree to which he hung his hat, and he would like to bend down a small limb and tie our spirited horses to the end of that, knowing that the limb would swing, so that they could not break the hitching strap. We never forgot the big hornet's nest under the eaves.

That church was not like the country church of today. It had four doors. There was one on each side, opening into a passage in front of the pulpit, leaving two "amen corners." Then there were two doors at the ends, each opening into an aisle. It was never a question with us as to whether we should go to church or not. We knew we had to go, in those days we rode, and proud was the boy who had a good riding horse, even if it was a colt just being broken to the saddle. We did our gossiping, of course, and like to have a little early so as to have an opportunity for this. Sometimes we gossiped with our own sex, but always keeping an eye open for the opposite sex. It was pleasant, sometimes to walk in the graveyard and figure out the inscriptions on the old tombstones, generally upright slabs of white marble, but sometimes a broad slab some six or seven feet long and four feet wide that covered the graves of some of the ancient patriachs. It was a good thing to ride to church, pleasant to ride back, and the intermission was enjoyed. Sometimes the sermon made a deep impression on us; sometimes it did not; but it was good to go. It gave variety and we had a fine appetite after we got home.

Now we know of anything of equal value, that the farmer can purchase for the price to let social advantages of the country church. It gives him a place to go on the sabbath. It gets him out of his particular rut. It enables him quietly to take notice of what farmers have good crops and what do not. He is enabled to see the neighbors who are pleased people in the neighborhood. His children have the benefit of the Sabbath school. In short, it makes him a better man. I do not know speaking of any particular church or denomination; but we know of no church that will not be glad to welcome anyone who lives in the neighborhood. We hope our readers who have not been accustomed to attending church, because their own denomination had no church in the neighborhood, or because they do not belong to any denomination, will try going to church on Sabbath, taking wife and children with them. Whether they ever become members or not, they will be better men for doing this—and in so doing they will help pave the way for the regeneration of life in the open country, something very greatly needed in most communities at the present time.

FARMING ON BOOM.

Crop Cultivation Takes Place of Cattle Raising as Argentina Industry.

Chicago, May 15.—Agriculture has greatly progressed during the last twenty years in Argentina, according to Francois Craeste, in telling of agriculture and cattle breeding in that country. In 1895 fully 95 per cent of the total exports were cattle, and 39 per cent farm products. These figures, changed to 49 per cent and 47 per cent, respectively, in 1905, while today farm products make up 62 per cent of the export and only 32 per cent is cattle.

WOMAN IS WINNER.

Awarding Committee Likes State Song of St. Louis Lady.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 16.—A woman, Mrs. Lizzie Chambers Hull of St. Louis, was yesterday awarded the $500 prize by Governor Hadley for a Missouri state song. This song was recommended by the committee but the committee did not find suitable music for it, and the other $500 for music will be offered in a few days for music for words of this song Here is the winning song:

Missouri.
Missouri fair, we bring to thee
Hearts full of love and loyalty;
Thou central star, thou brightest gem
Of all the brilliant diadem—Missouri.
Chorus:—
Then lift your voice and join the through
That swells her praise in joyful song,
Till earth and sky reverberate—
Our own, our dear, our grand old state
—Missouri.
She came, a compromise, for peace;
Her prayer is still that strife may cease;
She mourned her blue, wept o'er her
gray,
When, side by side, in death they lay
—Missouri.

Chorus:—
Nor North, nor South, nor East, nor
West—
But part of each—of each the best.
Come, homeless one, come to her call,
Her arms are stretched to shelter all
—Missouri.
In connection with the award Governor Hadley said:
"I fully agree with all that the committee has to say as to the words for the state song. It seems to me that they express with satisfactory completeness and effectiveness, as well as poetic feeling, those sentiments which should properly be expressed in a state song. I hope that we may be able to secure music which will make this song mean to the people of Missouri what 'Maryland,' 'Illinois' and 'My Old Kentucky Home' means to the people of those states.
"I am glad that the one to whom this prize has been awarded is a Missourian."

Gratitude and treachery are merely the two extremities of the same progression. You have seen all of it that is worth staying for when the band and the gaudy officials have gone by.

Even popularity can be overdone. In Rome, along at first, you are full of regrets that Michelangelo died, but by and by you only regret that you didn't see him do it.

Stop! Paying Hold Up Prices

Don't continue to pay over a big part of your hard-earned money to the lumber combine. Stop paying them two or three profits on every piece of lumber and other building material you buy.

Keep in your pocket the biggest part of their profits. Do like hundreds of other contractors, farmers and builders are now doing.
