and selling side.

The week has brought out more good fat steers than have been seen on this market for months, including a good many choice pulp-fed beeves from Colorado. General quality was the best of the senson and new top prices for the year were scored. Two loads of choice weighty Colorado pulp-fed steers sold Thursday at $8.40, the hishest price ever paid on this market for that class of cattle. Bulk of the pulp-fed decigation sold at $8.00 \( \Pi \). $8.00 \( \Pi \). $8.35, with a few loads of plain quality, or light weights, selling at $7.80 \( \Pi \). $8.55 \( \Pi \). $8.55 \( \Pi \). $8.60 \( \Pi \). $8.79 \( \Pi \). $8.55 \( \Pi \). $8.60 \( \Pi \). $8.55 \( \Pi \). $8.60 \( \Pi \). $8.79 \( \Pi \). $8.55 \( \Pi \). $8.60 \( \Pi \). $8.50 \( \Pi \).

Receipts of cattle for the week at this point aggregate 8,300 head, an increase over last week of 2,500, but the total falls 1,400 under the run for the corresponding week a year ago.

At the five markets aggregate receipts of 129,600 cattle stand 37,500 larger than last week and 12,000 heavier than a year ago.

It has been a mildly uneven trade

It has been a mildly uneven trade in butchers' stock this week, the market following closely the trend of fat steer values. The gap between selling prices of plain and strictly good cows and heifers has shown a tendency toward widening but withal there has been no decided shifting of values during the week. Good to prime cows, heifers and mixed yearlings are closing strong, and in some cases 10c higher, as compared with a week ago. Medium grades show relatively little change in position.

On plain killing cows, however, buyers discriminated to some extent with swift & Company: the result that prices for cows selling under $5.25 are weak to 15c lower in extreme course weak to 15c lower in extreme cases. Canners have held about the same old level during the week. Good fat cows and helfers are closing at the high point of the season. Prime cows have been taken at $7.00.072 to $6.00.000. closing at the high point of the season. Prime cows have been taken at $7.00 @ 7.25 and mixed yearlings up to $7.75. One prime heifer brought $8.00 but few lots were good enough to sell at $7.50 or better, $6.75@ 7.25 taking most of the good kinds.

Good to choice bulls sold freely all week at firm prices. Medium and common grades, however, are barely steady and in some cases 10@15c lower than a week ago.

Calf prices have been bumped hard, closing prices being at a decline of 50@75c compared with a week ago.

STOCKERS AND FEEDERS.

Buyers of stock and finishing cattle day's meager cattle receipts at their disposal; in fact, supplies were too small to make a market criteron. Selling of the few odds and ends re-flected the stronger undertone of recent sessions.

With warmer weather over the greater part of the corn belt sections, Stock Cattle Slow, Steady.

A nominally steady trade in beef steers today, not enough being on sale to really test values. One lot of fairly good medium weight beeves found outlet at $8.00 and aside from this bunch offerings were mostly in small packages and of plain and medium quality.

Increased receipts of cattle at all bunch offerings were mostly in Small packages and of plain and medium quality.

Increased receipts of cattle at all of the principal distributing centers this week did not seriously impair the good tone of the trade in beef steers. Slower action was noticeable Tuesday and Wednesday and in these two sees sions there were spots where slight weakness was apparent. This was offset, however, by strength Monday and Thursday and the market closes, the week in good healthy condition, with prices steady to 10c higher than a week ago. A reaction in prices toward a lower level followed yesterday's higher market in live pork. Receipts were fairly liberal for this day of the week, total western supply being double that of a week ago. Estimates called for 5,000 hogs locally and around 4,500 head put in appearance. A week ago the run was only 2,047, while a year ago 3,710 head were received. Total five market supply was 51,000 as compared with 23,500 a week ago and 39,600 a year ago. How Little Dolly Made Her Cake

VELYN was going to learn to bake a cake. Dinah had promised to teach her. Jack was very kind and called the cake was baked Evelyn would give him a nice big piece. "Dolly Dimple's mother promised to teach her to make a cake," said daddy.

"Dolly was very anxious to learn to cook, and one morning her mother told her if she would go to the store and buy the eggs, sugar, butter, flour, raisins and some milk for the cake they would begin right away.

"So Dolly put on her little hat and coat and started round to Mr. Simpkins' store. She told Mr. Simpkins she was in a terrible hurry because she was going to bake a nice cake all by herself.

'Mr. Simpkins, who always gave Dolly an apple or a ginger snap or something nice to eat when she came to his shop, laughed and said he hoped she would save a piece of that cake for him. "Remembering how many nice cakes Mr. Simpkins had given her, Dolly felt that it would not be polite to say no. So Mr. Simpkins was promised a piece "And on the way home she met Aunt Patty and Uncle Ned and old Mr.

Brown with his dog and Miss Nelhe, who taught the infants' class at Sunday school. To each of these she promised a piece of her cake. Really it looked as if that cake would need to be quite a size if every one was to be served.

"'I'm in an awful big burry, 'cause my mamma's going to let me bake a nice big cake all by myself,' was what Dolly told every one she met. "And she did hurry along just as fast as her fat little legs would carry her.

Just as she turned the corner to her home Doggie Fido ran out to meet her. He tripped Dolly up, and the sugar and the eggs and the flour and the milk and the cake was made with a great smash right there on the sidewalk. "She didn't wait to pick anything up, for there wasn't anything to pick, but ran home crying, with Fido, tail between his legs, following at her heels and looking, oh, so ashamed! "Oh, mamma, the cake's all made-right out there on the sidewalk!" Dolly wailed. 'And now we can't bake it.' "'Poor dear,' said mamma as she helped Dolly off with her sticky coat and dress, 'you do seem to have had a time of it!'

"Then she put Dolly into the bathtub, and after that there were clean clothes for the little girl. When Dolly had her lunch there was a nice round pound cake by her

Suddenly she sat holt unright. She was staring at her own picture there in the columns of a daily paper. Jane drew a sharp breath and the hot color flamed into her cheeks.

Her picture was accompanying an article entitled "The Lover's Nook," by Peggy Poynter, and her own picture was supposed to be that of the person who gave free advice to lovers.

The longer Jane looked at the sunposed portrait of the author of "The Lover's Nook" the greater became her wrath.

She would go down to the Tatler office and demand an explanation. She would not have her picture appearing in the columns of the daily papers. Jane had visions of herself in a large case of libel or suit for damiges or something. Jane's ideas were rather vague on the subject of lawsuits, but she felt very much like starting something of that order.

When she was ready to start down town for the Tatler office the telephone rang.

Jane stamped an angry little foot as she hung up the receiver. Jack Robinson had called up to congratulate her upon her advent into the literary world. "That, Peggy Poynter, is a tricky nom de plume," he had said. Jane smiled in spite of herself and before she left the house two telegrams and three more telephone calls were added to her list of congratula-

When the elevator took her up to the editorial rooms of the Tatler, Jane felt that her every heart beat could be counted by the elevator boy. The courage with which she had been brimming over before leaving the house had had vanished and she had resolved to let Peggy Poynter appear in every edition of the paper without be preserved at all costs."

her saying nay.

But alas, the elevator had stopped and Jane found that she was standing see Peggy Poynter.

A very small boy in a very large uniform looked up at her and grinned. Jane felt her color rising under that fleeting glimpse of recognition in the office boy's eyes. He turned on his heel and Jane braced herself to face zied over the result of an experiment the woman who was ashamed to use of his own in potato raising. He canher own photograph. "This way."

Jane caught her breath and followed the office boy into a glass parti- date potato with a pink spot on it, and tioned room.

She swept through the door with her head held high and panic seized her. She was standing before per-haps 20 men all of whom looked up

"I am 'Peggy,'" he said and Jane caught at her under lip to still the laughter that threatened her. He was all of six feet tall and he seemed to Jane quite the best looking man she had seen. She made an effort to control her voice and cast a quick glance around the room. She knew instinct ively that every man in the room knew her to be the original of the photograph and that she had in some way played up to her part in a huge joke. That the joke was on the big man standing dejectedly beside ber was also apparent.

Jane Harding did the only thing possible under the circumstances. She smiled a radiant smile that gave her the instant homage of every man in the editorial office.

"But-I am very angry," she said as if they had been talking long about the unwarranted use of her photograph. "I cannot make my friends believe that I am not Peggy Poyn-Jane sat in angry silence wondering ner," and because Jane found her position more or less trying and because the man at her side was so silent, she fled precipitately from the Jimmy Warren turned and looked at Jane, but she had found something of great Interest straight ahead.

Umbrella

By Lawrence Alfred Clay

Col. Charles Graham, retired and & widower, and also the father of Miss Maude Graham, was walking the floor in one of his tantrums. The colonel was a man of tantrums. He had them every hour of the day if there was the least excuse for it, and he had been known to get up four times during the night to yell at passersby, who were talking, whistling or singing.

The colonel had small tantrums and large tantrums. A small tantrum was discharging the cook after dinner and hiring her over again before breakfast. A large tantrum consisted of striding up and down, waving his arms, kicking at chairs, and exclaiming at his daughter:

"By the blood of Bunker Hill, but won't stand it-I won't stand it! Do you hear what I say!" "Yes, father."

"After 14 battles and 22 skirmishes I will not put up with such things. I will appeal to the sword! I will appeal to the law! Why, dem it, girl, I'll-I'll-!"

And he'd go off to take something from a bottle and smoke a cigar and forget all about it. This tantrum was the champion tantrum of weeks. after drawing a long breath and pounding on the wall with his fist he roared:

"It was your fault-all your fault!" "I don't see how," was the mild pro-

"No, you don't see how. You never see how! You. will never see how till I am dead. Wasn't there a special sale of umbrellas advertised?" "Yes, father."

"And didn't I go to town to buy "You did."

"And wasn't it a regular five-dollar umbrella at $3.25?" "It was."

"And I had had it but a week when I had to go uptown again. You said I had better take the umbrella along age, and he was also a man who had as it looked like rain. Don't dispute tantrums. me!

"Yes, I said so." "And I was fool enough to do it; and where is that demnition umbrella now-where-where?"

"And you left it on the train."

lost? And now-now I am without a silk umbrella! After 14 battles and 22 skirmishes and an unblemished record of 40 years I have no umbrella! Think of it! Think of it!"

"But, father, if you hadn't left it on the train," softly answered Miss

"But I never left it on the train. Some thief among the passengers took it, and I'll run him to earth if it takes ten years! I may have said I thought I left it on the train, but now I know I didn't. I know it was stolen. You advised me to carry it, and it was stolen! A courtmartial would convict you in five min-

The colonel advertised for the lost or stolen umbrella. He advertised that he would give a reward of $10 to learn the identity of the thief. When he had discovered it he was going to do things with that parison. He never expected the advertisement to be answered, but he patted himself on the back after its insertion. He had shown the public that he was no worm to be walked on.

When the colonel had purchased the umbrella he had had his in-itials "C. G. G." engraved on the handle. He had given them in his ad. Three days later, as he stood at his gate wondering who he could pick a row with, along came a middleaged man with an umbrella in his law on you!"

The colonel flew into the house and told Maude that she had brought about the insult to him, and then discharged the cook without a character, and sat down to remember that there were 12 umbrellas of the same make and style in that lot. That made 11 others just like his. Of course, all the buyers couldn't have initials the same as his, but after an hour he was almost ready to admit to himself that he had been a little hasty-just a bit. For that reason he went out and told the cook that she might stay on a day or two longer. That was as far as he would

That evening, after dinner, as he had got snugged down in his easy chair for a smoke and a think the doorbell rang in an imperious way, and after a moment a young man was admitted. He carried a rolled umbrella in his hand. The moment sued. Miss Maude caught sight of it she fled from the room.

"Well sir?" demanded the colonel, without looking at the card the other handed him.

"I am traveling for the house of Perkins & Smith," was the reply. "Well?"

"A few days ago I bought an umbrella at a special sale." "Ah! My umbrella-the one stolen from me a few days ago! My initials right here, sir!"

"And they are mine, also! Look at the card in your hand and you will see that I am Claude Gillette. I have read your ad., sir, and am here to demand an apology. I am being twitted by all my friends with being an umbrella thief. I can prove that I bought this at A. & G.'s sir."

The colonel wouldn't apologize The best he would do was to discharge the cook again and try to make himself believe that both men were liars. Next day a third man appeared. He had a rolled umbrella in his hand. He was about the colonel's

"Sixty-five years of a record in office and out that cannot be impeached!" he shouted, "and yet the day has come when I am charged with stealing an umbrella! There it is, sir! Look at it! Look at my in-"And if you hadn't advised me to itials! Look at this ticket to see take it would I have taken it? And that it came from A. & G.'s! Then the latter, fearing that a fifth man might arrive, went off to his club to play

The fifth man came with a rolled umbrella and the initials "C. G." on the handle. He was a young man and he had his interview with Miss Maude just after an exating episode.

"I saw Col. Graham's advertise ment," he said, "and I have called to restore his property. I must have taken it quite by mistake." "But you didn't," she replied

"You couldn't, you see, for here is his. I just found it in his room. He didn't have it with him at all that day."

Then they both smiled. Then they both laughed. Then the colonel appeared and said it was funny, and the cook must be discharged,

If frequent calls at the colonel's residence by Mr. Claude Gorham means anything, they mean that Miss Maude favored him as a caller.

Disliked Being Questioned. Bishop Thirlwall, an English pre late, had the greatest possible aver sion to answering questions. One day a tailor said to him, when he had been summoned to take the bishop's measurements: "What are your lordship's orders?" "I want a suit of clothes." "Here is a very nice cloth, my lord." "Ah!" "And this is likewise a very good one." "Yes." "Fere is another, of excellent quality." "Very." "Which material will your lordship decide upon?" "I want a suit of clothes!" And that was all the answer the tailor could get. When the new gardener accosted him as he was walking, book in hand, in the garden, to ask: "How will your lordship have this border laid out?" there was no answer. "How will your lorship be pleased to have this border laid out?" was the next attempt. Still there was no reply; but when the grandfather last summer setting out question was repeated for the third fruit trees, and was telling his father time, the answer came: "You are the gardener, I believe, and I am the

MATERNITY IS A PRIVILEGE

Little Lecture on Marriage and Divorce That May Interest Some Modern Parents.

"Some folks wonder at the miracles in the Good Book, but God did the biggest and most unexplainable thing when he gave woman the privilege of being a mother. Music as a Municipal Asset.

The deep wave of enthusiasm for music is in the country; the crest of the wave is in the cities. Every metropolis-we have more than one-i a mammoth conservatory. Six cities support symphony orchestras of the first rank. They are Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Kansas City, St. Paul, and Minneapolis. A symphony orchestra, be it known, is the ne plus ultra of a music-center. To support such a luxury is impossible save with the help of many well-to-do John Stones. It is also impossible without a solid foundation of music-loversenough to fill the hall nearly every time. The city that has one has something that its commercial association can use with large effect in advertising literature. For it has come to be recognized in the west that musical achievement is a municipal asset. The "boosters" of a city now call attention to its banks, its newspapers, its wharves, its factories-and its symphony orchestra.-Metropolitan Magazine.

IS FULL OF COMPLEXITIES

ple Life is That it is Not

The real drawback to "the simple life" is that it is not simple. If you are living it, you positively can do nothing else. There is not time. For the simple life demands virtually that there shall be no specialization. The hausfrau who is living the simple life must, after all, sweep, scour, wash and mend. She must also cook; from that even Battle Creek cannot save and a gimlet eye came into Cyrus time he asked for it. Hence his pleasapples; but in her secret heart she knows that either Plato or the apples suffered. And from what point of view is it simpler to have a maid of all work than to indulge one's self in liveried lackeys? Not, obviously, for the mistress; and it is surely simpler to be an adequate second footman than to be an adequate bonne a tout faire. We should really simplify life by having more servants rather than fewer; more luxury instead of less. The smoothest machinery is the most complicated; and which of us wants to sink the Mauretania and go back to Robert Fulton's steamboat? One would think that the decision would be made naturally for one by one's income. But it is the triumph of the new paradox that this is not so. Thousands of people seem to be inmore themselves, they bestow leisure on others; that by wearing shabby clothes they somehow make it possiand elegance are not evil things .- K. | tional Magazine. F. Gerould in Atlantic Monthly.

GENUINE TRIBUTE TO WOMAN

Robert G. Ingersoll's Eloquent Appreciation of the Qualities of the Gentler Sex.

It takes 100 men to make an encampment, but one woman can make all dramatists, had "most scrupulousa home. I not only admire woman as the most beautiful object ever created. but I reverence her as the redeeming glory of humanity, the sanctuary of all virtues, the pledge of all perfect qualiwas no harm in that. But listen to ties of heart and head. It is not just the second artist. He said, with a nor right to lay the sins of men at the cruel, unfeeling laugh; I painted a feet of women. It is because women of Aristotle that caused the abbe to lump of pig iron once to look like a are so much better than men that write such a tragedy." roast of beef, and my dog ate three their faults are considered greater. A man's desire is the foundation of his love, but a woman's desire is born of her love. The one thing in this world that is constant, the one peak that a railroad's night trains. It says "You rises above all clouds, the one win- go to sleep in Philadelphia and wake dow in which the light forever burns, up in New York." the one star that darkness cannot cruel injuries. It is perennial of life and grows in every climate. Neither coldness nor neglect, harshness nor cruelty can extinguish it. A woman's love is the perfume of the heart. This is the real love that subdues the earth; the love that has wrought all miracles of art; that gives us music all the way from the cradle song to the grand closing symphony that bears the soul away on wings of fire. A love that is greater than power, sweeter than life and stronger than death.-Robert G. Ingersoll.

Legislative Optimist.

A novel description of an optimist was given recently by a congressman who had suffered an onslaught of popular protest in "appeals" from his district. He insisted that an optimist was a man who could make "nice, sweet, pink lemonade out of the yellow, sour things called 'lemons' that have been handed him."

"That," he said, with a grimace, "is what I call an optimist." May it not also be true, as one of his companions suggested, that some of the sweetest things in life owe much of their attractiveness to the subacid, aromatic influence of this same sour "lemon" which is so frequently "handed" political leaders?

The joke was repeated in the presence of an attache of a foreign delegation, who thought it so good that he wanted to pass it on, but he failed to catch the full significance of the phrase "handed a lemon," so he fected with the idea that by doing changed the expression to "making nice, sweet, pink lemonade out of yellow addled eggs thrown at him, you know," and when there was a smile ble for others to dress better-though he retorted hastily: "Oh-perhaps they thus admit tacitly that leisure I've got the yellow eggs broke?"-Na-

Got Even With Critic.

The Abbie d'Aubignac, who wrote admirably on dramatic composition. and had instanced many living examples of failure in that direction, was so imprudent, after thirty years' silence, as to write a tragedy himself. In the preface he boasted that he, of ly observed the rules of Aristotle, whose inspiration he had followed!" To this it was replied by one who had suffered from his criticism: "I do not quarrel with the Abbe d'Aubignac for having followed the precepts of Aristotle, but I cannot pardon the precepts
