STEERS CLOSE STEADY

NO MATERIAL CHANGE IN FAT CATTLE PRICES COMPARED WITH WEEK AGO.

FEW STEERS OFFERED TODAY

Cows and Heifers 15@25c Lower—Good Yearlings Steady—Bulls, Calves and Stock Cattle Are Unchanged.

Cattle receipts were light today, and there was no change to note in prices for the few steers here.

Trade in fat cattle during the week has been featured by a slow tone and while the feeling was weak there has been no quotable change in values as compared with the previous week's close.

Buyers ordinarily were not hard to interest in the tidy weight steers and in anything worth while in yearlings. This class of stock, however, was scarce and fell much below the requirements of the trade.

Compared with the previous week the weight heaves and yearlings are steady to strong. Strong weight heaves have been hard to move as well as the ordinary run of medium and half-fair styles and the plain heavy steers. Buyers were disposed to neglect this class of offerings and sellers had difficulty in maintaining last week's rates. However, the majority of traders quote the general market steady with a week ago. There was not much life to the competition, except for the few desirable light weight heaves that were available. Medium to heavy steers predominated. Several shipments of Colorado cattle were included in the week's run, sales ranging from $5.20@5.60. Yearlings sold largely from $4.50@5.25, several loads of steers averaging 1,288 pounds sold at $3.70, the week's top. Bulk of sales ranged from $3.15@3.50. With railroad traffic in the east being rapidly restored to normal conditions and with continued light receipts, traders are looking for a stronger market next week.

Dressed Beef and Shipping Steers.

The supply of cows and heifers was light and the day's arrivals were cleaned up at steady prices. The market for butcher classes was under pressure this week and closing quotations on the general run of cows show a decline in prices over a week ago. The market opened weak Monday, broke sharply on Tuesday, was steady Wednesday and declined 10@15c Thursday. Supplies have not been burdensome and quality was fair to good average. A few odds and ends of cows sold at $2.25@2.50 but no many sales were made above $3.00, bulk ranging from $1.50@1.80. Medium to good grades were the hardest hit. Canners and cutters do not show any change with a week ago. Demand continued active for mixed yearlings and prices for a fairly active one maintained. Sales of the better grades ranged from $3.00@3.20, bulk of week's arrivals landing under $3.00. Trade in bulk receipts was not so active and prices as a general thing show no change with a week ago. Some traders note a weaker feeling on the light grades. The supply of calves has been moderate and prices are fairly steady with the close of last week.

HOGS STEADY TO WEAK

NO MATERIAL CHANGE NOTED ON LIGHTS AND GOOD BUTCHERS.

HEAVIES A SHADE LOWER

Bulk of Offerings in Range of $8.80@8.95—Quality Fair to Good—No Pigs Are on Sale.

Early estimate called for 3,900 hogs compared with 2,700 last week. Combined receipts at the five big markets were 28,000, a decrease of 5,000 with a week ago. Locally, the market had a slow tone during the early part of the forenoon. Outside advices early were not favorable to the selling end and packers bid lower. A few early sales of light and mixed hogs were quoted steady and when the market was established it was mostly at yesterday's prices for everything but heavy hogs and packing grades on which the feeling was weak to shade lower. There was a fair degree of activity to the trade in light hogs and mixed grades but the outlet for strong weight hogs was slow. Quality was fair to good. No pigs of consequence were on sale.

"There!" said the young wife proudly, as she deposited the hot plate carefully on the table. "That's the first pie that I ever made without any help; all alone myself."

"So it is!" exclaimed her husband enthusiastically, looking it over critically meanwhile. "And as long as it is the very first you dear, don't you think that, instead of cutting it, it would be nice to keep it for a souvenir? How would it do to have it framed?"

AN ADVANCE OF 10@15c SCORED ON GENERAL RUN OF LAMBS.

SHARP RISE FOR THE WEEK

All Grades Closing 25@35c Higher—Compared With the Same Time a Week Ago.

Receipts in the sheep division were moderate and the market was active and higher. Lambs were quoted 10@15c above yesterday's prices. No sheep offered. Best lambs sold at $5.75.

White some unevenness has featured the week's trade in sheep and lambs the undertone has been one of strength and prices show some improvement over the mean close of the previous week. The general market for both sheep and lambs is closing 25@35c higher. Receipts here for the week were 17,692 compared with 13,600 last week. The five markets had a combined total of 139,000 as against 159,500 for the previous week. The big end of the local arrivals consisted of lambs of fair to choice quality. No sheep were offered until closing days and they were snapped up at higher prices. Until Wednesday the market ruled steady on best grades, but on succeeding days an advance of 25@35c was scored. There was a good demand all week for useful lambs but packers were inclined to shade prices on medium grades. Arrivals were mostly from Colorado points, no native stock being available. Choice lambs sold up to $5.60 and there were a good many sales at that price. Bulk of offerings sold at $4.25@5.50. Sheep were scarce. A string of choice western ewes landed at $4.75. A small band of short wethers brought $5.60.

LOVER WORTH WHILE

Lovely Lass—Derelict and the Precious Treasure Left in the Ship's Cabin.

By FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDERSON.

Melvin Warrington was a lover worth while. Strange things happen in this world at times that recall the age of chivalry. Romance is not entirely dead, and amid a quiet, everyday existence this superior young man suddenly found himself enmeshed in a labyrinth of daring and adventure well worthy of the knights of old.

It all came about in the most natural fashion. He loved Myra Evans—he, poor and ambitious. So did Rolfe Daniels—rich, selfish and an idler. Her father had borrowed all the money he could to fit out an expedition to Australia to import a new breed of sheep. The Lovely Lass was purchased, sailed away with her young brother in charge, was wrecked in a terrible storm at sea, and Lisle Evans came home crippled, a pauper and his health broken.

The worst of it was that when all hands were forced to abandon the Lovely Lass 350 miles west of the South American coast, in the rush and peril of the occasion Lisle had left in a certain box in a certain part of its cabin over $20,000 in money to buy the ship with, and papers representing as much more. An abandoned derelict, the captain and crew gave her up for lost. The blow crushed the proud spirit of old Colonel Evans. He had mortgaged his home to fit out the venture. In some way Rolfe Daniels had secured the notes. He pressed payment. Rolfe stared the Evans family in the face. It was then that Daniels proposed to cancel the obligation if Myra would become his wife.

A despairing father, a helpless brother, poverty ahead, not for a moment did the poor girl forget her lover, Melvin Warrington, but drooping daily, for the sake of her father she consented to make a great sacrifice. She spoke a last heart-broken farewell to Melvin. She was to marry the man of money in six months.

One day Lisle Evans called upon Melvin. There were tears in his eyes as he spoke of Myra. He deprecated the selfishness of his father. He sought some way out of the sacrifice that was destined to bring gloom and despair into his life and that of poor, loyal Myra.

"Listen, Melvin," he said, "this marriage must never take place. I can do nothing in my condition, but you—if I show you a possible chance, to save Myra, what would you say?"

"You know without asking," responded Melvin, with deep emotion. "I would give my life for her, for any member of her family."

"Then listen, my friend," I am satisfied that the Lovely Lass is still afloat," declared Lisle. "I feel certain that somewhere on the bosom of the broad Pacific she is knocking about, with that treasure, which means the salvation of our family, aboard. Lloyd's Register has printed her 'founder,' but this marine obit was later changed to 'Abandoned at Sea.' January 12 a tramp schooner sighted her 600 miles west of Chili, and attempted to take her in tow. During February she was passed by six different ships. In March the French liner, Dubois, nearly ran into her during a night storm. She has become such a menace to navigation that the American Lloyds have posted notices for her destruction wherever found, else some fine night some big liner will smash into her, carrying down every soul on board."

"And since March?" inquired Melvin.

"Not a word regarding her until last month, when she was sighted 400 miles west of the Bolivian coast near the Djalmi Islands, at which no ships stop on account of the unfitness of the sea for navigation."

For two days Melvin Warrington reflected over this interview. He studied maps, he consulted old sailors, then he made up his mind to devote all his money and time to scouring leagues of trackless ocean, to traverse thousands of weary miles to seek for the missing Lovely Lass and win back a fortune from the deep—and Myra Evans.

This is why, two months later, the devoted lover found himself the inmate of a hotel at Valparaiso. His little store of money was all but exhausted when he had chartered a small yacht. From close investigation Melvin had decided that the Lovely Lass, if afloat, was grounded in some of the numerous inlets of the Djalmi Islands.

The day before the yacht sailed, a brisk, business appearing young man sought out Melvin.

"I learn you are going on a cruise to the Djalmi Islands," he observed. "I will pay you $500 to take me there and return."

Of course Melvin accepted the offer. He found his passenger, who called himself Hudson, decidedly reserved as to the motive of his strange voyage, however. He constantly carried a small satchel, and Melvin often wondered what it might contain.

When the yacht reached the Djalmi Islands, Melvin ordered that it land him on the barren eastern coast of the largest of the group. This was done to evade the natives, who lived at the more fertile southern end. The Lovely Lass had been sighted about the center of the group of islands, to the west. To his surprise, when he left the yacht, Hudson accompanied him.

Neither disclosed his purpose in the curious jaunt. That day shortly after noon, while lining an impassable ravine, they came to a rude bamboo bridge. They had just traversed it, when a shower of darts rained about them, and half a hundred savages appeared in the distance.

"We are safe, so long as they cannot cross," observed Hudson. "I'll fix that."

He opened the satchel he carried so constantly, selected an oblong package, opened one end and gave it a fling. In an instant the bridge was shattered to atoms.

"Dynamite," explained Hudson, and Melvin marveled more than ever at the eccentric comrade who went about loaded with the deadly explosive.

They camped that night near the west shore. At daybreak Melvin was on the move. He went along the shore, came to an inlet, and there, dismantled and lying on her beam ends, was the Lovely Lass.

How his heart beat as he swam to the wreck and descended a water-logged cabin, to find the hiding place, and within it—the precious tin box!

Melvin came back to the deck with a cheer, the box thrust in his bosom. He glanced to glance ashore. There stood Hudson. He had just fired at the wreck one of his sticks of dynamite.

Just in time Melvin dove. A frightful crash sounded out. Even in the coming he could feel the concussion. Water up, he dove again, for the air was filled with hurtling splinters. He came ashore finally, to confront the astonished Hudson.

Then there were mutual explanations. Hudson was a special representative of the Lloyds of London, commissioned at any cost to destroy the derelict.

"One minute more inside that ship," shuddered Melvin, "and she would never have known my fate!"

"She," questioned Hudson, with his usual quaint, challenging smile. "Yes, the sweetest, dearest, loveliest woman in the world!" replied Melvin, with fervor.

He knew that she was all his own three months later, when he landed to Colonel Evans the little tin box rescued from the Lovely Lass—derelict. (Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

Friday afternoon was "debate day" in a Virginia rural school. On that afternoon classes after two o'clock were let go, and the assembled school listened to shyly spoken pieces of poetry and addresses to gladiators. Then came the climax, the debate when world issues were settled for once and all. The speeches were after the pattern of this one, which one teacher recalls:

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen: I rise to defend the affirmative of the question whether it is better to have wealth or education. Mr. Chairman, if you was to get a kiss- letter from a lady and couldn't read it, wouldn't you just feel like going away and dying? I close now to give place to an abler speaker."

GREAT MYSTERY OF OCEAN

Was a Strange-Looking Vessel Conveying a Submarine for the Allies?

From Algiers comes the story of a mysterious ship, which entered the port a few days ago, the London Telegraph states. It was a fine two-funneled vessel with engines so powerful as to be out of character with its appearance, which was that of a private yacht. It entered the port under the pretext of coaling, but did not take in coal. To the port authorities the captain stated that he was carrying a cargo of salvage to Constantinople. Requested by the customs authorities to open the cases in the hold, he refused, and the vessel left the harbor hurriedly without a pilot.

The following night an English steamer passed the same ship at some distance from Algiers. All its lights were out and it was in the company of a smaller vessel. Next morning a coaster, returning to Algiers, came upon a large number of floating benzine tins.

It is suggested that the mysterious ship was acting as an escort to a submarine ordered by one of the lately belligerent powers, and that it had entered the port of Algiers to supply itself for the submarine, which had remained outside the port. This theory fits in with the report of the English steamer and the story of the floating tins told by the captain of the Algerian coaster. It is remarked that the mysterious submarine must have been crossing the line between Marseilles and Bona at the time when the French mail steamer Marie Augustin sank after a collision, the circumstances of which are still inexplicable.

MAN WAS EASILY CONTENTED

Friend's Commiseration Over Unpleasant Situation of His Home Was Lost.

Dr. John Van Doren Young, secretary of the County Medical Society of New York, was talking at a dinner, about the unhealthiness of brooms and dusters, and especially, of household pets.

"They who keep dogs and cats in apartments," he said, "claiming that the charms of these animals overbalance their unhygienic qualities, remind me of a man whose residence had a gas plant to the north, a tannery to the east, and a soap factory to the west."

"A friend commiserated with this man on his home's unpleasant situation, but he answered with a contented chuckle:

"Why, it's fine to live here. I don't need to go to the expense of a weathercock to tell which way the wind is blowing."

Women in Finland's Parliament.

There are fourteen women in the Finnish Diet, as there the parliament is known, and one of their number, Dr. Thekla Hutlin, on a recent visit to London, expressed surprise that in enlightened England women had not yet been accorded the parliamentary franchise. She added some interesting facts about Finnish women M. P.'s. All members are paid a salary, but they lose it if absent without special leave, and are also fined 15 shillings a day. "I may say," she went on, "that the women attend the sittings more regularly than the men. The women members have endeavored to bring about improvements in women's position, especially in its legal and economic aspect. Bills introduced by women have been concerned with the rising of the age of consent, securing equality of the wife with the husband in the control of the children, motherhood insurance, the right of women to enter the legal profession, and so forth."

English-Hingwa Bible.

The latest example of Chinese preference for western types of educational and other literature, especially those in which the English language is used, is found in a "Romanized" edition of the entire Bible in the Hingwa dialect, used in the Fuhkien province. It has just been issued by the American Bible society, and is being sold at one-fifth the cost of publishing.

The work is not Romanized doctrinally or ecclesiastically, but by the use of the Roman (better known as the English) alphabet, instead of the difficult Chinese characters. The translation was made by four Chinese scholars, under the direction of Rev. William N. Brewster, and is having a ready sale, but not so large as the demand for the Scriptures in Hunan province, where not more than one in thirty of the business men fail to procure a copy when offered by the society's agents.

Had Not Progressed Far.

A reporter was sent around to make some inquiries concerning a new play that David Belasco was engaged in writing.

"Yes," said Mr. Belasco, "I am writing a play. What do you want to know about it?"

LAST PAIR OF GREAT AUK

Killed Off Coast of Iceland and Fowl Became Extinct.

The auk, or gannet fowl, as it was also called, became extinct about sixty-eight years ago. It still, however, continues to be a subject of much interest to lovers of nature in general as well as to zoologists in particular.

While the auk bore a strong resemblance to the penguin, it was found to be closely allied to the puffin and to the albatross. It inhabited the north of Scotland, Iceland, Greenland and Newfoundland, in which latter country its skeletons have been discovered buried in heaps of guano and in sand on the sea coast.

The auk was about the size of a domestic goose. Its wings were rudimentary and therefore useless for flight. Light the penguin it used its wings as flippers in the water in searching there for its food.

In the year 1844, says the Forest and Stream, the last pair of auks were killed on an island off the coast of Iceland. At an auction in London in 1895 one auk's skin sold for $1,800 and one egg for $200, thus showing the remarkable public interest taken in the history of this extinct bird.

EASIER LIFE FOR SEAMAN

More Variety Planned for Uncle Sam's Sailors.

Washington, D. C. April 4.—The naval authorities have recognized the fact that to insure contentment among enlisted men it will be necessary to change the routine of hard drills and so under the program planned by Secretary Daniels, there will be more variety and attraction about the life of the sailors on the Atlantic fleet hereafter. One of the important changes is the provision for Mediterranean cruises, alternating with the regular drill cruises in the West Indies.

The enlisted men as well as the officers will be given 30 days' leave during the year; much of the summer work will take place in the neighborhood of the attractive coast of Southern New England and the men will know almost a year in advance the itinerary of their ships.

"CALLS" CHANGE.

Soldiers Get Up Early When New List Went Into Effect.

Junction City, Kan., April 4.—The soldiers at Fort Riley are getting up at 5:40 these mornings. The new list of service calls went into effect today, and it makes a number of changes in the daily routine at the post, aside from the earlier hour of arising.

The new calls are: Reville, 5:40 a. m.; mess call, 6:15; fatigue, 7:00; dinner, 1:15; fatigue, 1 p. m.; recall from fatigue, 2:00; mess call, 5:45 p. m.; assembly, 6:30 p. m.; tattoo, 10:00 p. m.; call to quarters, 10:45; taps, 11:00 p. m.

OF COURSE SHE FLEW.

"What is an angel, mother?" asked a six-year-old.

"Why, dear, it is a beautiful lady with wings, who flies. But why do you ask?"

"Because I heard father call my governess an angel," replied the little boy.

"Oh," said the mother, "Well, dear, you watch her and you will see her fly tomorrow."

WAS SAVED FROM UNTIMELY DEATH

Rosendale, Mo., Young Man Found Doctors Who Cure.

Gives Credit to United Doctors for Saving His Life.

"I would have been a dead man if I had not found the United Doctors when I did," said Mr. E. E. Graff of Rosendale, Mo., in the reception room of the United Doctors yesterday, "and I thank my neighbor who was also cured by the United Doctors for telling me about them in time." Asked to tell more about his case and just how his life was saved after years of suffering and so many doctors had failed on his case, Mr. Graff agreed to give a letter to the world, so that all might profit by his experience. Mr. Graff's statement follows:

Rosendale, Mo., April 1, 1913.
 I have certainly been wonderfully benefited by the United Doctors' treatment which I have taken from their St. Joseph office. I came to them in December in a terrible condition with ulcerated bowels. I could not have lived but a short time longer if I had not obtained relief when I did, for I had been suffering for two years and many good doctors had failed to help me. I am now well on the road to health, and feel that with only a short treatment longer I will be completely cured, something no one who knows about my condition had any hopes of. I am thankful to you for your wonderful treatment, and if any one has any doubts about you in any way, just refer them to me. I found the United Doctors through the recommendation of a friend who had been cured, so I am glad to help others in the same way. E. E. GRAFT.

This is only one of hundreds who are finding relief and cure at the United Doctors, whose St. Joseph offices are located at 720 Fifth street, second floor, after all other means had failed them. The United Doctors examine all cases free. They will not promise a cure unless a careful examination and their scientific means of diagnosis prove conclusively that the case is a curable one, or that great benefit may be expected. They refer surgical cases to others who surgery is absolutely necessary, but are able to save many operations. They make hundreds of cures in diseases of the stomach, kidneys, liver, blood, skin and diseases of men. Their offices are always busy with patients, but a careful examination is given each caller, with an honest description of the condition.—ADV

Any Woman Can Operate This Car

Rambler Motor Cars

You start the new Cross Country with just a single operation. Press a button—that's all. The electrical starting and lighting system is so dependable and so simple that a woman who does not care to know about its construction can expect the same success with it as could an electrical expert.

Your consciousness of it is limited to the confidence that you may rely upon it. You grasp the steering wheel with a sense of mastery. It steers so easily, without a single vibrating jar to the hand.

You settle down into the ten-inch upholstery. Lean back against the deep cushions. You are dominated by a feeling of spacious ease and gratifying comfort.

This is a car to delight a woman's eye. To her rare good taste will appeal its perfect proportions, the sweeping grace of the body lines and the symmetry of the guards.

We will be pleased to demonstrate to any woman how easily she can drive the Cross Country. Have you seen the new Cross Country at $1875?

Merely press button under the foot to start the motor. Simple, Silent and Smooth
