

WEAK TONE TO STEERS

Only a handful of stock suitable for stock raiser purposes were put up for trade here today. Regular buyers were practically out of the market and salesmen in order to turn their holdings were compelled to take prices 10 to 15c under yesterday's sharply lower level.

UNEVEN DECLINE FOR WEEK

Cows and heifers show fresh break of 10 to 15c—Sharp cut on grassy stock for week—Stockers are still on slump.

There was above an average Friday run of cattle on sale here today, receipts totaling around 400 head and including a larger proportion of steers than this market usually gets on this day of the week.

On fair to good kinds, selling at $4.00 to $4.25, closing prices at the time were 15 to 20c lower than a week ago, while on the common to medium short-fed and grassy classes final rates were 25 to 40c lower in extreme cases.

Quality of the beef steers offered here this week has been of pretty good average. The market was not so good Wednesday on some choice heavy Angus bullocks, with a number of sales of weighty steers around $4.40 to $4.50 during the course of the week.

Local receipts of cattle for the week total around 1,100 head as compared with 5,493 last week and 4,445 a year ago.

Butcher cattle trade this week is closing extremely mean and in a condition bordering on demoralization as far as medium and low-grade cattle are concerned. A fairly steady market was had Monday but prices have been on the down hill route since, trade being particularly mean tone.

START CAMEL CULTURE

AN ASSOCIATION FORMED TO EXPORT BEASTS FROM THE FAR EAST. Expected to be Useful Where Roads Can Not Penetrate— Idea Is An Ancient Origin.

Pueblo, Colo., June 20.—J. H. Trimble, one of the leading stockmen of Texas, is at the head of an association which proposes to transport camels from the Oriental deserts to those of New Mexico, Arizona and California and the semi-arid wastes of Texas.

The areas mentioned, although they offer great possibilities to the seeker for just this sort of travel, and, added to its ability to travel over these sandy wastes without tiring, the animal's other characteristics, its swiftness, burden-bearing power and the fact that it can go long distances without food or water, makes it as available for these American desert regions as for those of the Orient.

With the idea that the camels would be useful in Indian territory because they could carry dispatches more swiftly than horses, and that in other ways they could be made useful in the deserts, the government imported forty camels, with their Mexican drivers and their families, in 1856.

But just when the camels were about to demonstrate their ability to travel in Indian territory, the breaking out of the civil war and the election of Davis to the presidency of the Confederacy interfered with the project, and drew all thoughts away from the acclimation of a project to more serious matters.

From time to time the camels escaped or were set at liberty, and the plains because they had proved valuable to their owners, and these nomadic and ownerless camels, roaming about in the deserts of Texas, Mexico and California, appeared from time to time to the cowboys and homesteaders, striking terror to the hearts of these somewhat superstitious folk by their strange and ungainly appearance as they approached over the sands.

Sometimes a settler who happened to meet one of the rare beasts while grazing in Indian territory, or on the plains, would ride into the station in which human beings were gathered and make the hair of his hearers stand on end while he described the weird looking animals which he had seen up across a rise of ground and looked on toward the horizon before he could get near it.

Not only has the camel flourished in the tropical deserts with which he is generally connected in the imagination of the average man, but he has also been for centuries a native of Siberian steppes, Akhania plateau and Indian upland. In cold climates the camels are entirely useless, because their hair grows long and thick to meet the need for a warm covering. The camel has also been successfully transported to Australia, where it is therefore believed that so far as climate is concerned there need be no difficulty in the adjustment of the camel to American conditions.

Saline County, Nebraska, was represented at the St. Joseph market Thursday with a car of prime heavy porkers, the product of their "county farm," managed by Milton Blakely, who ships regularly each year to this point. These hogs were raised and fed at the farm and were top notchers in their class. The offerings averaged 175 pounds and brought $3.40, or $31.93 per head.

Daddy's Bedtime Story

How the Game Cock Won His Name.

JACK had asked daddy to tell them another story about the brave soldiers who had fought for independence.

"Yes," said Evelyn; "that will be a fine way to get ready for the Fourth of July."

"Well," agreed daddy, "there are so many stories about these good soldiers that it is hard for me to know which one you would like best to hear."

"One of the finest was General Thomas Sumter. He was born in Virginia and soon showed that he wished to be a soldier. Like George Washington and many other of the Revolutionary officers, he got his first taste of war in fighting the French and Indians."

"When the Americans and English began fighting he was ready and anxious to take a hand in the war. Most of his fighting was done in South Carolina. He made the proud and cruel Tarleton, who commanded the British troops in that part of the country, much trouble. Sumter had his own way of fighting. He knew every inch of the wild country. His soldiers, like himself, were countrymen who could stand many hardships. When they could find no other food they could live off roots and wild plants, as the Indians did. They were so strong and active that when the fighting went against them they could be off to the swamps or the mountains before the English soldiers knew what they meant to do. Once safely there, the British, who did not know the roads so well, were afraid to follow them."

"A story is told of General Sumter which may interest you. He was always on the lookout for good men to enlist in his regiments. One day when he was out on this errand he heard of three brothers who were very fond of cock-fighting. They owned a blue hen whose chicks grew up to be great fighters. These men and their rough companions thought it was fine sport to set one of these chickens to fight the other. The star fighter was a rooster named Puck, which had never been thrashed in a single fight. He was known all over the country, and the three brothers were very proud of him."

"One day Sumter called at the brothers' place while a cockfight was going on. He showed his contempt for such an amusement and when the brothers spoke of it said:

"Such an employment is childlike and cruel. Come with me and I will give you worthier game. I will teach you how to fight with men."

"The brothers and their companions were so much struck by his noble manner and brave words that they cried out:

"Puck forever! He is one of the blue hen's chickens!"

"This name stuck to General Sumter, and afterward he was known among his enemies as well as his own men under the title of 'the Game Cock.'"

In this country will not be grown as an independent business, but rather as an incident and on the farm where general farming is carried on. If a lot of brood mares had to be kept for no other purpose than breeding purposes in order to grow horses and the colts matured before returns could be received, there would be very few horses grown except of the most expensive kinds. On the farm, however, it is necessary to keep horses for various farm uses, and if these were gradually made to consist of good mares fit for producing colts of the kinds the market wants and will pay for, horse growing to the extent of two, three or four colts a year could be made a very profitable incidental branch of general farm work. It is only in this way that the horse business can interest farmers at all, and even when this view of the matter is taken the first essential element is that the mares are really good, sound and suitable for the production of colts of a kind that the market demand calls for; the second and third elements—good sires and good care and management in growing and developing the colts—are second and third in point of time only, for they are just as important as that first named.

SERVING CHERRIES.

These, the First of the Summer's Fruits, Are Greeted With Enthusiasm.

Cherries are the first of the fruits of the summer—the first, that is, of the fruits of the summer trees. Plums, pears and peaches are still served only in the form of preserves, but cherries are ripe. Hence, they are generally greeted with an enthusiasm not bestowed on any of the later fruits.

Cherries served fresh and cold on their own stems for breakfast are so delicious that no other way of serving them at that meal could be better. But pitted and sprinkled with sugar and a bit of lemon juice, they serve as an appetizer and at the same time lose none of their delicate flavor. Another way of preparing them for breakfast is to pit them and mix them with sugar—the proportion of half a cupful to a pint of cherries—and cook them until they are just tender. Then pour them over buttered toast.

Cherry soup has been made, but it could hardly be more than the result of an effort to serve cherries in a new and unexpected way. However, at every course save the soup course cherries can be legitimately served. Cherry cocktails are made in this way: Stone ripe cherries, chop them fine, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice to each cupful of cherries, sweeten them and serve them, either in cocktail glasses or else in lemon stem cups, made by removing part of one side of a sufficient number of lemons, cutting a bit of the rind from the other side, removing all the pulp and juice and washing and chilling the shells.

Cherries served with French toast can be used as an entree. To make them cut rings half an inch thick from bread and soak them in beaten egg yolk, milk, a little sugar and a pinch of salt. Roll the bread rings in crumbled bread and macerons and brown them in butter. Stew ripe cherries with sugar enough to sweeten them, drain and pile in the middle of a dish. Surround them with the fried bread rings and serve them with the juice of the cherries thickened with a little cornstarch and flavored with orange juice.

Cherry fritters can be served with neat as a separate course or a dessert. To make them prepare a batter of a cupful of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder mixed with a tablespoonful of melted butter, a well-beaten egg and enough water to make a thin batter. Stew ripe, pitted cherries until they are just tender—but do not cook them to pieces—and sweeten them. Drain them and add them to the batter. Drop it in spoonfuls into deep fat and fry brown. The juice drained from the cherries can be substituted for water to moisten the fritter batter.

"The Neal Cure is more than I expected. You do not claim enough for what it will do for men, like me, who cannot get away from the craving for whisky. I know that it has cured me perfectly and in so short time, without hypodermic injections, booze and myself have parted company forever. No man who has the habit should hesitate a minute about taking the cure."

A brother of the above, who is a prominent banker in his home town who accompanied him to the Neal Institute at Elceleser Springs, says:

"I endorse all the above and can say without fear of contradiction that the Neal Cure is the most marvellous for doing good of any like treatment I ever have come in contact with. TRAIN SCRAMBLES EGGS.

Engine Wrecks Vehicle Near Hamburg, Ia.—Driver Injured.

Hamburg, Ia., June 20.—Eggs scrambled with butter was on the bill of fare near here when a buggy belonging to Ernest Steinkamp, a farmer, was hit by a passenger train. Eggs scattered over the right-of-way for several rods.

Steinkamp's horses became frightened at an automobile and Steinkamp left his wife sitting in the rig while he attempted to quiet them. Just then the train started to pass, frightening the animals further. They started to run, Steinkamp hanging on to the bridge. He yelled to Mrs. Steinkamp to jump, but he and the horses darted directly in front of the train and across the track. The buggy was demolished, but Steinkamp and the horses escaped injury.

NO 2c FARES TILL OCTOBER

Railway Counsel Says Lower Rates Will Be Delayed.

Kansas City, Mo., June 19.—Two cent railway fares in Missouri may not become effective until October, next, said Frank Hagerman, counsel for the roads.

"Thirty days must elapse between the time the opinion is given and time of issuing the mandate to the lower court," Mr. Hagerman said. "It is not possible to get the lower rate earlier than thirty days from yesterday. Then there is the possibility of a motion for a rehearing in behalf of the railways. Such a motion would automatically suspend the case and put the matter over to the next term of court which begins in October."

Millionaire's Body Rests in Center of Block Ten Feet Square.

Des Moines, Ia., June 19.—A coffin containing the body of Oliver H. Perkins, millionaire, who died recently, has been placed in the heart of a block of cement ten feet deep by ten feet square in Woodlawn cemetery.

An excavation ten feet deep by ten feet square was made. Cement was poured into the grave to a depth of three feet, upon which was placed a steel casket. Perkins' body was in a wooden coffin, which was placed inside the steel casket. After the casket had been set in place cement was poured over them until the grave was filled.

JONES' RARA AVIS

Only Chicken in World That Walked Backward Proved to Be Gold Mine.

BY AUGUSTUS GOODRICH SHERWIN.

"Why, Colonel Travers sends five hundreds miles for a plate of strawberries costing a dollar a piece, if he takes the notion," was the way Gregory Jones usually descanted upon the immense wealth of the proprietor of Hillside hall.

Gregory was given to a good deal of exaggeration, but there was a certain basis in his profuse statements. The Travers people lived in grand style. They were pleasant, liberal, and spent a good deal of money with the village storekeepers.

In Hillside hall Gregory was very much interested. He was given many an odd task well paid for by the colonel. The matron of that lordly establishment was Mrs. Susan Morton.

On the day that the hall people moved, Gregory brushed up his best suit and started for the hall with a determined, though anxious face. He expected to find Susan there, and he did—seated on the top step of the porch.

"You've been crying, Susan," observed Gregory, sitting down beside her. "Yes, I'll admit it," confessed Susan, making room for him.

"What are you going to do now?" softly inquired Gregory, edging nearer to her. "Why, my sister, the milliner, wants me to rest up with her, till I find a new place."

"Susan," said Gregory, with longing eyes, "you know my feelings towards you?" "I do, Gregory," acknowledged Susan, frankly, "and feel honored by them. It is useless to talk about that."

though, just now. All I have is the little plot of farm land my mother left me. You will have to wait till you get some steady position."

"And then, Susan?" pressed Gregory, anxiously. "Why, the day you can make a start to stock up the farm I will be glad and willing to go into life partnership with you."

"It's a good, sensible woman you are," declared Gregory, warmly. "I'm going to deserve you, and then I'm going to have you."

"I hope so," returned Susan, with an encouraging smile. "I'm waiting for the agent of the seminary people to give him the keys. Oh, Gregory, would you do a favor for me?"

"The colonel sold off all his barn stuff, the chickens among them. There's a poor wretched hen the purchasers wouldn't take. She said it was crazy and would annoy the other layers. They've left the homeless thing behind. Won't you take care of it?"

"Pretty nigh that, Silas," replied Gregory. "See here, I want a little accommodation of you."

CHEAT THE CHINCH BUGS

How? Grow Cowpeas, Is Kansas Experts' Advice.

Leavenworth, Kan., June 20.—"Plant cowpeas and cheat the bugs," said P. H. Ross, county farm adviser, the other day. "The danger of chinch bug injury to forage crops at the time of wheat harvest makes the farmer wish for a crop that is immune to this pest."

"It will make the quickest heavy growth of green manure of any leguminous crop and is as valuable as any for that purpose. It will make splendid hay when properly cured—a hay that will make 'old Spot' fill the milk pail."

"It has some peculiarities, however, that must be humored. It can not endure a cold soil at planting time, and does best when planted about the last of June. It has a rather coarse stem, and does not cure readily when cut for hay, but if cut when fairly matured, will stand considerable bad weather without injury."

"I declare," said Susan to her sister, "I can't understand all this extravagance and mystery. I'd rather have Gregory back with nothing than have him away, maybe in all sorts of bother and hard work. Poor fellow! I drove him away, and—Susan dissolved in tears."

"Dear Sweetheart Susan," it read, "I've ordered that farm outfit and I'm coming home. Get ready to begin that life partnership this fall—beautiful sunsets, harvests and all!"

"Susan gave a scream of delight as she opened the door one morning and found Gregory on the doorstep. He was dressed in a neatly-fitting suit; he wore a well-trimmed mustache. Confidence and opulence were suggested by his bearing. Love, too—his loyal eyes told that as he boldly kissed Susan."

"Gregory," was her first word as they were seated on the sofa, "what does it all mean? Did some one leave you a fortune?" "Better than that," replied Gregory buoyantly—"a chance to earn every dollar I've got. It was the chicken, Susan."

"What chicken?" asked Susan, gettfully. "The one you asked me to care for, Susan, that was a wonderful fowl. No more crazy that you or I—only queer."

"How queer, Gregory?" "Well, it walked backwards. Think of a hen that walked backwards—the only one in the world, a—a—" and Gregory founded and consulted a circus bill. "A rara avis, that's it. I went straight to the city where a circus was showing. A side show was interested. Not that a chicken that walked backwards was so strong an attraction of itself, but with the tattooed boy and the trick porcupine it made a big draw. Showman gave me twenty-five dollars a week. The chicken just caught the farmers. A rival showman offered me the same and a percentage on admissions. Last week another showman offered me $1,000 cash for the curiosity, so I'm here with the money to stock up that farm. What do you say, Susan?"

"That you are a husband worth waiting for," replied Susan tenderly. (Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

Amusements in Utopia. After supper they bestow one hour in winter; in summer in their gardens; when they dine and sup. There they exercise themselves in music or else in honest and wholesome communication. Dice play and such other foolish and pernicious games they know not. But they use games not much unlike the chess. The one is the battle of numbers, wherein one number stealthily away another. The other is wherein vices fight with virtues as it were in battle array, or a set field. In the which game is very properly shared both the strife and the discord that vices have among themselves, and again their unity and concord against virtue; and also what vices are repugnant to what virtues; with what power and strength they assail them openly; by what wiles and subtlety they assault them secretly; with what help the virtues resist and overcome the puissance of the vices; by what craft they frustrate their purposes, and, finally, by what sleight or means the one getteth the victory. — Sir Thomas More.

Handel in England. Handel is not a mere composer in England; he is an institution. What is more, he is a sacred institution. When his 'Messiah' is performed the audience stands up, as if in church, while the 'Hallelujah Chorus' is being sung. It is the nearest sensation to the elevation of the Host known to English Protestants. Every three years there is a Handel festival, at which his oratorios are performed by 4,000 executives, collected from all the churches in England. The effect is horrible; and everybody declares it sublime. Many of the songs in these oratorios were taken by Handel from his operas and set to pious words; for example, 'Rend sereno il ciglio madre; non piange pipi' has become 'Lord, Remember David; teach him to know thy ways.' If any one in England were to take the song from the oratorio and set it back again to secular words he would probably be prosecuted for blasphemy. — George Bernard Shaw in Atlantic.

MR. RIDDLE IS BACK AT WORK

Ill Health Had Nearly Driven a St. Joseph Contractor Out of Business.

He Thanks the United Doctors for His Release From Pain and Discomfort.

When spring work opened in the contracting and building business, St. Joseph had one prominent member of that trade who dreaded to see the working season come on. He had a big season's work mapped out but was without the strength and health to put it through. For three years his health had been gradually declining from stomach and kidney trouble, and this spring there developed daily attacks of severe headaches, which with his bodily weakness made it nearly impossible to figure out his work or carry a job through to completion. No one can do his best work when in constant distressing pain, and so Mr. Riddle was forced to give up his work. Being a reader of the daily newspapers he had seen accounts of many cures made by the United Doctors, the famous specialists in chronic diseases who have their St. Joseph offices located at 720 Felix street, second floor. Some of these cures he had noticed were people he knew about, people whom he knew would not testify to untruths. "I am going to a doctor whose life work is the study and cure of chronic diseases and nothing else," said Mr. Riddle, "and I trust such a doctor should know more about a case like mine than the every day physician who tries to treat everything." The result of Mr. Riddle's visit to the United Doctors' best told in his own letter:

"I had not been well for three years and was suffering from kidney and stomach trouble, with almost constant attacks of severe headaches. This interfered with my work so much that I about made up my mind I would have to quit work as a contractor and build altogether as it was hard to force my mind and body to my work. Fortunately, however, I consulted the United Doctors in time, and now after six weeks of treatment, I am highly satisfied with the results. My headaches have almost entirely disappeared, my stomach works all right, kidneys seem better, and I am working hard every day, with almost constant attacks of severe headaches. I refer to all these cases, eye, ear and ear work, etc., to the proper specialists in those lines, and I think to make sick folks of free advice, discontinue every sort of medicine, and free to carry on their marvelous work in the cure of diseases of the stomach, kidneys, liver, blood and nerves, rheumatism, catarrhs, indigestion, constipation, catarrh, nervousness, decline in strength, weak back, pain in side, distress and bloating of bowels, ulcers of stomach and intestine, and bladder trouble, weak heart, epileptic fits, asthma, dizziness, a sense of weakness and desire of men. No charge is made by the United Doctors for examination and advice, and the cost of treatment is always kept within the reach of every one.—Adv.

A FARMER for PRESIDENT. HERE is a striking little booklet written by a man who believes that somewhere in this broad land there is a farmer who is destined to become president of the United States.

Do you agree with him, and could you guess who that farmer is? This booklet is frankly written to emphasize the leadership of the agricultural interests of America over all branches of industry. Incidentally, it is an advertisement for the Cross Country car—the result of forty years of manufacturing experience on the part of the Jeffery Company.

The success of the Jeffery Company is founded upon the same things that have brought success to the American farmer. This company is independent—likewise the farmer.

The car is an assembly of our own tried and proved products. We have sown carefully and have grown naturally, counting upon the future harvest rather than upon temporary gain. The Jeffery Company was the first concern to advertise new cars in farm journals.

Sixty per cent of our output today is sold to farm residents. This booklet will be interesting to every farmer. The edition is not large, but we will send a copy free to every farm owner if he will fill out the coupon below, giving his full name and address, and the number of acres he owns.

We ask for this information because we know this booklet will be most interesting to successful farmers.

Send for this booklet. The Thomas B. Jeffery Company, Kenosha, Wisconsin. Main Office and Works, Kenosha, Wisconsin. Branches: Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, New York, Philadelphia, San Francisco.

farmer an opportunity to destroy weeds and keep a soil much on the ground to conserve moisture. This method will also require much less seed per acre, 20 pounds per acre being sufficient.

"The new era is a desirable variety to plant, as it matures early, has an erect growth, so that it is easy to harvest, and the seed being small, a bushel of it will seed more ground than the larger varieties."

"If you have any old seeds on hand be sure to test the same before planting, as the germination is apt to be low. In buying, be sure to get the variety you want, and be sure that there is not a large percentage of cracked seed, weed seed, dirt and trash."

SKILLED. "I fear you do not really love me," said the young doctor, early, has an erect growth, so that it is easy to harvest, and the seed being small, a bushel of it will seed more ground than the larger varieties. "Why do you say that?" demanded the girl. "Your pulse does not seem to accelerate any when I hold your hand."

SAVED BY MADERO

Three Americans Serving Terms for Murder to Be Pardoned.

Taking Slayers From Vile Prison of San Juan de Ulua Was One of Assassinated President's Last Acts.

Chihuahua, Mexico.—After twelve years in Mexican prisons, liberty is finally in sight for three Americans—Dr. Charles S. Harle, Leslie E. Hurlbert and William Mitchell. They were convicted of murdering two other Americans, one being Harry Mitchell, a half-brother of William Mitchell and brother-in-law of Hurlbert; the other was William Devars, a drunken outcast, whom they had met in El Paso, Tex.

The murdered men were first insured for $35,000. Harle, Hurlbert and Mitchell were in the life insurance business. The policies were made payable to Hurlbert and Mitchell, known respectively as Richardson and Mason. Doctor Harle was the medical examiner of the company in which the men were insured.

It was through an investigation by the insurance company preliminary to paying over the $35,000 that the fraud was discovered. The three conspirators were convicted here and sentenced to death. For several months they were kept in solitary confinement in the state penitentiary here. The date of their execution was fixed for December 6, 1907. They had served six years in prison up to that time, awaiting final action upon their case. The firing squad had entered the court yard of the prison and the execution was about to take place when an order came from President Diaz commuting the sentences to twenty years in the San Juan de Ulua prison.

When informed of this act of clemency Mitchell and Hurlbert begged that the death penalty be immediately imposed. They had heard of the horrors of San Juan de Ulua. It had been said that ten years there was equivalent to the death penalty. Life there was a lingering torture.

Doctor Harle comes of a prominent Texas family. His aged mother lives in Abilene, that state.

Soon after commutation of their sentence the men were moved from Chihuahua to the grim old prison of San Juan de Ulua, on a little island in the harbor of Vera Cruz, and for six years they were immured from the world. During the early part of their sentence they were confined in solitary cells beneath the surface of the sea, but through the intercession of influential friends they were accorded more humane treatment during later years.

It was due to the late President Madero that these men were saved from further suffering. Having been asked to pardon them or transfer them to a more sanitary institution, he caused an investigation to be made. It was found that the long imprisonment had greatly impaired the health of all three. Madero thereupon ordered their removal to the penitentiary at Chihuahua. It was one of the last official orders issued by Madero, and it had just been carried out when he was assassinated.

It was through the intercession of W. H. Atwell of Dallas, former United States district attorney, that Provisional President Huerta has agreed to pardon Doctor Harle as soon as certain records of the case can be looked into, inasmuch as all three men were convicted on the same charges, the pardon of Hurlbert and Mitchell is expected to be issued along with that of Doctor Harle.

While they were in the San Juan de Ulua prison they met and became friendly with Col. Felix Diaz, who himself was confined there for several months after his capture by Madero's military forces at Vera Cruz. It is said that Felix Diaz recommended their pardon.

SHARKEY TAKES THE COUNT

With His Foot, Yellow Dave, Weight 120, Put Big Tom to Sleep After Boast.

New York.—"Bigga Tommy Shark, with da ship on da chest, onea strong man wids fist lika da bunch of bananas," as the familiar story described him, was sent over the knockout route in the rear of his saloon on East Fourteenth street by a little wiry chap weighing 120 pounds, 105 pounds less than his victim.

Tom's vanquisher was a member of an all night party seated around a table. The former pugilistic hero got angry when someone said he was a "has been" and declared he could still lick any man from the Battery to the Bronx.

"Yellow" Dave, the little man mentioned, took up the challenge. The combatants stood up, faced one another and then Davis planted his foot in the pit of Tom's prominent stomach. He did not sink the ship, as the old story had it, but he put Tom to sleep for some fifteen minutes.

Paying Unique Election Bet. Butler, Pa.—Leading a donkey, twenty-two years old, and wearing a khaki uniform, B. H. Anderson left Portland, Me., to settle an election bet on Theodore Roosevelt, by walking from that city to Portland, Ore. "I am willing to make the same bet, that if Roosevelt is a candidate in 1916, he will be elected," said Anderson as he began his long tramp.

CHORUS "GIRL" JOLTS CO-EDS

Student Braves Ire of "Fema," but Wins Admiration of Brothers at Play.

Evanston, Ill.—When Harry Ackerburg announced that he intended to take a real, sure-enough chorus girl to the Northwestern Junior play at the Ravinia theater his "frat" brothers gazed upon him with awe and reverence.

When he made good his promise and appeared in a conspicuous box with "it" clinging to his arm they gasped. They had communicated the boast to their respective companion, orthodox society girls. They, too, gasped.

"A peach," murmured the brothers. "The huzzy!" hissed the damsels. Many of the bolder men ventured to the box and were introduced to "Evelyn." They went back to their seats singing her praises.

"Never saw such a complexion," declared one.

"Such eyes! Ooh—la, la!" exclaimed another.

"Beasts"—this from the co-eds. "Evelyn" was the object of all eyes throughout the evening. Half were approving, the other half were scornful. She seemed to enjoy it. She smiled sweetly at some of the handsomer men.

"The nerve," ejaculated the handsomer men's companions.

Silence was intense on the electric train coming back to Evanston. The co-eds were thinking up biting things to say to their escorts. The men were thinking up schemes to get acquainted with Evelyn's friends.

"Look!"

The exclamation in a stage whisper turned every eye again to the corner where "Evelyn" and Ackerburg sat. Evelyn sat calmly smoking a cigarette.

That night when Ackerburg returned to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house his brothers were holding a council of war. The co-eds had made their biting remarks. The "frat" was disgraced.

For three days Ackerburg retained a mysterious silence, enduring the scornful snubs of the co-eds and the maledictions of his fraternity brothers.

On the fourth day he brought "Evelyn" to the fraternity house. There a transformation took place, and before the students stood John R. Davis, one of their own brothers and a student at the university.

The co-eds are appeased. The brethren are jubilant. Ackerburg "put one over."

ADMITS GOOD OF DUNGEON

Warden of San Quentin Penitentiary Credits James B. McNamara With Above Statement.

Sacramento, Cal.—"This has been the best thing that ever happened to me. If it had happened sooner—I should have been a whole lot better off."

These were the words credited to James B. McNamara recently by Warden John F. Hoyle of San Quentin penitentiary, telling a legislative committee investigating charges of cruelty

James B. McNamara.

In the prison of the confessed dynamiter's release from a thirty-one-day punishment term in the dungeon. "He was sent to the dungeon," said Hoyle, "because he positively refused to agree to quit his minor infractions of rules. When he promised to be good he was released."

LIFE INSURANCE BY WIRELESS

Banker Applies For and Receives $5,000 Policy on Steamship While at Sea.

London.—The first instance of life insurance being contracted at sea by wireless was reported from an ocean liner. Among the passengers was Arthur P. Williams, a New York banker, who met a London insurance broker on board. They talked insurance, with the result that the broker wireless his company, proposing Williams as a $5,000 life risk. He also wireless the report of the ship's doctor approving Williams. The company flashed its acceptance.

Two Men Burned a Stable.

Chambersburg, Pa.—Alfred McCarthy and Mark Lambert have been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary for setting fire to a stable. An ax handle, to which waste was fastened, was found near the fire and it was brought out that McCarthy had taken the ax from the firehouse.

Advancement in Argentina.

Argentina is about to put through a number of large engineering schemes. The municipality of Bahia Blanca is asking for estimates for a drainage scheme to cost $1,500,000. A new water supply and sewerage scheme is to be undertaken in the capital, which will cost over $20,000,000. An important electric light and power plant will probably be the outcome of the arrangements now being concluded between the governments of Argentina and Brazil for utilizing the Igazu waterfalls, which afford sufficient water power to supply the two states and also the republic of Uruguay with light and fire "probably for a hundred years to come."

Initial Bluff.

"I didn't know you had so many initials," said one man to another who had been lucky enough to secure an interview with the capitalists. "I nearly dropped over when you told the boy that J. K. H. Allen wished to see the boss. What do they all stand for?"

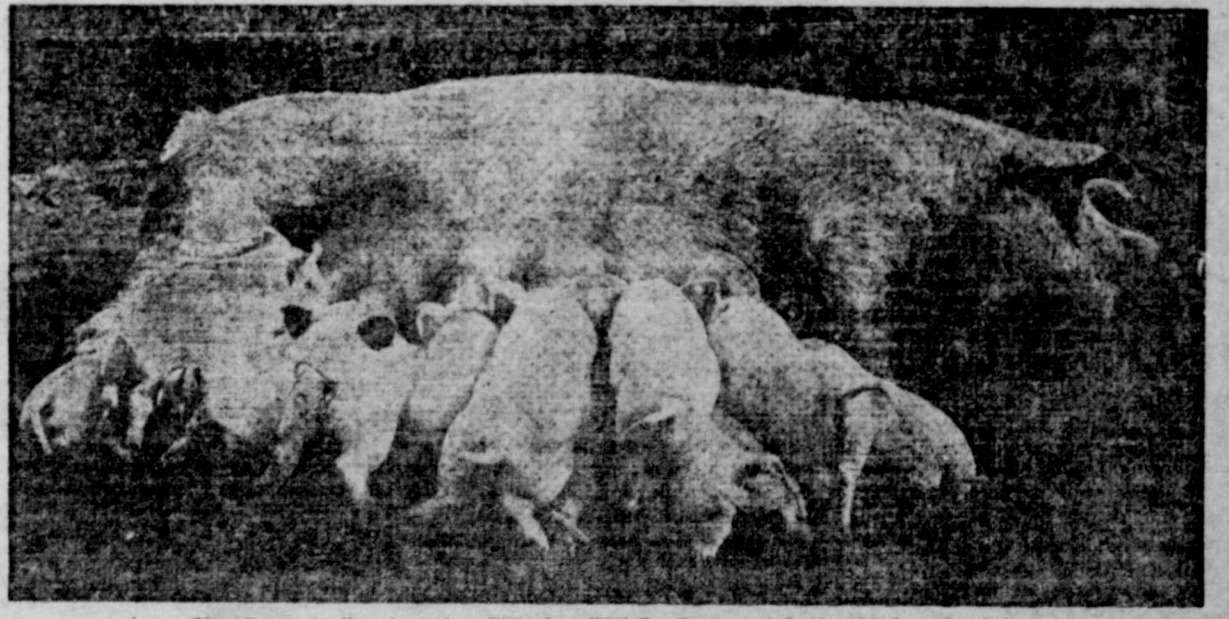

"Nothing," said the man of many initials. "J. for John is the only one I have any right to. The rest are added just for effect. It was on their strength that I got in to see you. A string of letters will secure you an interview almost anywhere; not printed on a card—never send in your card if you are unknown and not properly introduced—but spoken and with emphasis—J. K. H.—just like that, so the boy will think you are somebody and will take care to repeat those blessed initials with the same force. Not one man in a million will turn you down if you can get yourself announced that way."
