

'Killer 84' Bogged by Red Tape

Four years to widen an existing dangerous highway that's less than 10 miles long!

That's the estimated time schedule for Killer 84 which has claimed 33 lives in seven years. It could be quicker — maybe as much as 30 or 60 days less.

Thursday's issue of The Journal sketched the tedious, clumsy steps which must be taken before a road can be built in Texas — even widened. The laws dealing with road-building need changing, and much of the engineers' red tape needs to be cut away to permit construction to get under way much faster. The present system belongs to the horse and buggy days. It is definitely obsolete, time-consuming and clumsy.

For example: The state highway department requires that a "state approved" (licensed) real estate appraiser be used to figure out values of each tract. Yet the highway department cannot completely trust his judgement — or his figures. For instance, one of the time-consuming steps which the appraiser must take IN SOME CASES is to take a picture of, say, a farm home along the right-of-way and then find a comparable farm home somewhere else for a comparison picture. There is no such thing as a comparable piece of property; there never is. Each tract is different. Thus this picture-taking business is silly and merely serves to slow a road project which should have been started long ago. Incidentally, the county has been seeking an appraiser since about March 1.

Another obsolete provision of the road-making system: Every cost estimate must be sent to Austin for the Texas Highway Department's approval, despite the fact that a "state approved" appraiser makes the estimates. If he hobbles and fails to explain, for instance, why one farm television antenna to be bought has two crossbars while another has only one, the Austin boys will kick the entire project back to Muleshoe for explanation of why the two-bar antenna is more expensive than the one-bar kind.

And while they are waiting for these mountain shaking figures, two more persons are killed on Killer 84!

Still another heel-dragger in this obsolete road-building procedure is this matter of 50-50 participation. If the appraiser says Joe Bloo's 1/2-acre tract to be covered by the highway is worth $200 and Joe himself holds out for $250, complications are presented. The county pays half and the state pays half ONLY if the figure is the appraiser's estimate. There are two solutions: The county can go ahead and pay $100 plus the additional $50 which Joe is asking, or the whole business can be taken to court. If the court decides in Joe's favor, the state will kick in its half of the additional cost.

And while all this is taking place, two more persons get killed on Killer 84!

Two years ago last Wednesday, Bailey county folk voted bonds to provide for the county's half of the land-acquiring part of the program. The bonds sold; Bailey county is ready. Now we are paying interest on that money while the appraiser is required to take a picture of Joe Smith's cowbarn and then finds a comparable cow-barn for a pricing guide.

We would like to ask which is better: To see to it that the state doesn't overpay a few dollars for a piece of property along the right-of-way or to let several more people die while the State dickers over a few dollars like two old bidders at an auction sale trying to buy an antique pot-bellied stove?

If actual construction is not under way on Killer 84 by the end of this year (at the very latest) then what we have just been saying will have been proved — that the system of road-building in Texas is obsolete and needs to be modernized — immediately!

Ray's 'Ritin'

By RAY MARTIN

The Whooping crane, the most publicized bird in the United States today, is on the loose again. Fish and Wildlife Service says 28 of the big birds will go north this month. In fact, some already have started, and they will wind up — if they make the 2,500-mile jaunt successfully — at Wood Buffalo Park near Great Slave Lake in Canada by the time the self greens get green again up there.

Some of the cranes haven't done too well this year at their winter Wildlife Refuge on the Gulf coast. F&WS says 10 are missing. Maybe those 10 never were there this winter. Or maybe they just went calling. Or maybe they got tired of the same winter camping ground and struck out for new ones. Maybe they got bored with the same old bridge partners that they have had each winter at Aransas resort, and this season they decided to go to some other winter resort. Who knows?

Maybe Mr. Whooper Crane said to Mrs. Whooper Crane, "Let's get out of this joint and go somewhere else for the winter. We've been coming here ever since I can remember, and I'm tired of this old dump, so let's go somewhere else — say Florida. I'm tired of hearing old man Robert Crane talk about the rheumatism in his joints, and I don't like the way Joe Crane's widow (rest Joe's soul) goes to sleep every time you try to talk to her. I'm bird stiff with hearing Clarence Crane arguing politics all the time. So, let's blow this joint and go over and see what's happening in Florida this winter instead."

Maybe that's what happened to some of the 10 missing whoopers. After all, the same old routine can get pretty dull — south Texas where it's nice and warm in the winter, and Canada where it's nice and cool in the summer. That could get awfully boring, although I'd like a chance to try it just once, especially if I had my own built-in aircraft as the W. cranes do.

The pocket book being what it is (or isn't rather) and the nose being to the grindstone as it is, I'm lucky to get to south Lubbock for a day or two in the winter and to north Amarillo for a change in the summer.

And maybe the cranes that went to Florida this winter will rejoin the regulars up in Canada this summer, and just think what they'll have to talk about this summer, after a winter in Florida.

Not being a whooping crane, of course, I can't speak for them. In fact, I don't even know the thinking of a sandhills crane, and the only specimens of those I ever saw were a couple of very dead ones that somebody had shot and had brought to the newspaper to have his picture posed with.

Anyway, speaking of cranes, before we leave that subject, the F&WS asks you not to shoot any of those 28 or so that will trek north this month. I won't have any trouble obeying that order. I never was one to get much kick out of shooting birds, much less cranes. Besides, I don't own a gun.

Speaking of speaking for cranes, as I said, I can't. Now if it was a horse, it would be different. I remember old Jack. He was the firey (?) steed I had when a

Local Units Due to Take Action On P-TA Ballot for Federal Aid

Bailey County units of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers (P-TA) will discuss voting on a highly controversial national legislation program which has been sponsored by the national organization.

The DeShazo units are to act on the matter — either by voting or refusing to vote — at their meeting tomorrow afternoon, and Richardson Hills P-TAers will schedule the ballot discussion at their next meeting later this month.

In essence, the ballot favors further extension of federal aid to education in a 27-point ballot which many opponents feel is slanted toward such aid.

In fact, Mrs. W. J. Danforth, Texas state president, says the ballot is not "slanted toward federal aid; rather it is plainly FOR Federal Aid so that you can just as forthrightly say YES or NO as your membership decides."

The issue has been such a hot one in Texas that several units have withdrawn from state and national affiliation. Such action

Johnson Named Lions' President

The new officers were named at last Wednesday's session of the club.

Flatt Case Postponed; New Indictment Sought

Jack Young, district attorney said Friday that a case against E. A. Flatt, set for District court trial next Monday, has been postponed, pending further action by a district court grand jury.

He said charges had not been dropped and should the grand jury fail to return a new indictment, "I will proceed to go to trial on the present indictment."

He said he had asked that the Monday trial be passed "since there might be some question about the original indictment's wording."

Flatt, a former automobile dealer here, had been indicted by a March grand jury with making "a false certificate as to the acknowledgment of an instrument of writing relating to commerce." The acknowledgment was made, the State charged, by Flatt as a notary public.

The case originally had been set for trial 10 days ago, but Flatt's attorney had asked that certain records of the First National Bank be subpoenaed. Young objected, and moved that the subpoena be quashed. District Judge Pat Boone, Jr., postponed a decision, pending further study of Young's motion. He had been due to rule on that motion Saturday morning.

Young told The Journal he was "not certain" that the wording in the original indictment was "defective," but he preferred to ask the grand jury for a new indictment and then take the case to trial on the basis of a new — and presumably reworded — indictment.

A jury panel called for the original trial date was excused by Judge Boone, and members were told they would be re-notified of the trial date. It is understood that the jury will be used for a civil case now slated for trial Monday.

113,229-Bale Cotton in '62 Sets All-Time Record

Bailey County produced an all-time record cotton crop in 1962, figures revealed by the U. S. Bureau of Census indicate.

The county's farmers turned out 113,229 bales in 1962, which was 10,538 more bales than in 1961, or a 10.2 percent increase.

The final figure was higher than many forecasters had predicted for Bailey County, although J. K. Adams, county agent, had estimated the crop late in the fall at 113,000 bales, only 229 bales short of the final figure.

The year was an erratic one for cotton farmers. Spring rains that washed out much of the early-planted seed, had dimmed the prospects. Then a summer drought further dulled prospects. An early freeze, also, was a bad factor. Nevertheless, the final figure was some 11,000 bales more than was produced in 1961.

Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., has analyzed the 1962 crop which showed 4,785,659 bales of cotton were produced in Texas, more than twice the amount produced by the next leading state, and more than one million bales above the next two leading states combined.

The 23 High Plains counties in PCG's territory alone produced more cotton than any state in the nation, except of course, Texas itself.

California ran second in production with 1,934,844 bales, followed by Mississippi and Arizona, with 1,685,754 and 1,456,657 bales respectively.

The 23 High Plains counties served by PCG ginned 2,328,293 bales, or almost half the Texas total; nearly 400,000 bales more than all of California, and over 15 percent of national ginnings. U.S. Total production of 14,859,968 bales was slightly above the 1961 total of 14,324,508 bales. Texas pro-

NEW PILOT HERE

Jim Hayes has been employed by Muleshoe Flying Service as a commercial pilot.

Hayes' interest in airplanes began at the age of 9 years when he began going to the airport near his hometown of Clarksville, Miss. He soon took a job there washing and taking care of the planes until he was old enough to start his flight training.

He learned much during the years between nine and 16 by flying with and watching pilots and by the things they taught him both on the ground and in the air.

His family moved to Roswell where he completed his training and earned his commercial rating at 19 years of age. He recently completed training for an instructor rating and is an experienced agricultural pilot.

Hayes served three years with the Navy as a flight engineer. After his discharge in 1960 he was employed by the P. D. Q. Helicopter Airways Service assigned to the Forrest Service in Arizona and New Mexico. During this time his principle job was transporting fire fighters to and from camps, taking in food and other supplies to the camps. The 'copters they flew had an 80 gallon water capacity which they dumped on hot spots during fires.

These crafts were also equipped with wiring strapping equipment and were used in strapping wires across Grand Canyon.

The P.D.Q. Helicopters and crewmen were used in the filming of the picture "Lonely Are The Brave" starring Kirk Douglas. Hayes was in the craft used in this movie.

The Hayes family, Jim, Shirley, Penny and Terry are making their home at the airport. They are members of the Baptist Church.

Making a business flight to Brady was Doctor Ray Santos accompanied by Morgan Locker.

After completing business transactions there the pair had lunch then flew back to Muleshoe.

They reported a pleasant flight with the exception of some dust between Lubbock and Brownfield.

Flying has gotten to be almost as much of an interest to women as to men. Years gone by saw only men brave enough to take to the air and acquire ratings in this mode of travel around Muleshoe. Only last year there was only one known Bailey County woman with a rating, a commercial rating at that. This distinction went to Mrs. Morgan Locker. Now with the enrollment of Joan Gastin, Marlene St. Clair, Ernestine Little, Marianna Bryant and Evelyn Riley in ground school and taking lessons and two more advanced students, Betty Williams and Beth Watson, looks like seven more will be holding a license in the private division, along with some 35 or 40 men who have capably passed this mark during the past few years here.

LARGE ENROLLMENT

At present, some 15 students are enrolled in the Private Ground School Course being taught at the airport. This exceed all past and present enrollment figures here and tops those taught in Lubbock and surrounding cities, past and present. Joan and Edward Gastin, Sudan, are the latest students to enroll.

EXAMINER AMAZED

A new FFA examiner, F. C. Rhodes, Oklahoma City station was in Muleshoe giving final examination to students who have recently completed an instructional course for Instrument ratings at the airport.

Rhodes, noting the number of students taking the course, expressed his amazement at the interest in aviation shown here compared to the much, much larger cities on his examining itinerary. Well, once again Muleshoe will go down in note-worthy memo's.

Examiner Rhodes has served in this capacity in Northern California and North Dakota before assuming Texas assignments.

ELLIOTT FAMILY

H. C. Elliott was among the first of the local pilots to take a check ride with the new Muleshoe Flying Services' pilot, Jim Hayes.

Elliott and Hayes flew the Cherokee around the country on Sunday while Hayes was visiting here on Sunday prior to accepting the position with the firm.

Elliott and his family flew to Lubbock that night, Sunday, for dinner.

ENGINES REBUILT

An Apache, owned by Bill Jim St. Clair, underwent a thorough inspection at West Tex Aircraft recently.

Engines in the twin craft were plated to meet new standard specifications, a requirement of a periodical check.

Bill Jim and his brother, Irvin, had just returned from a Houston flight which tallied out the hours required prior to this check.

TO DETROIT

Ray Daniel flew to Detroit on business Friday March 22. He was accompanied by two pilots from Brownfield, Arnold Patton and Doyle Coors. Patton and Coors each flew an agricultural craft, Piper Pawnees back to Lubbock for West Tex Aviation.

On the trip to Detroit, the trio left here at 7:45 a.m. and landed at Columbia, Mo. at 11:30 a.m. for lunch and refueling the 250 Comanche. They arrived at their destination at 4:10 p.m. and Daniel reports not a cloud in sight nor a bump in the sky between Texas and Michigan — a perfect day for flying.

While there, Daniel transacted business with Attorney Marvin Larviver who is affiliated with trust departments of eastern bank, suppliers of mortgage loans for cotton and grain.

Daniel left Detroit at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, flying back to Columbia where he spent the night. He left Columbia at 8 a.m. the following day and arrived here at 12:30 p.m.

Out of 16 hours and 44 minutes flying time, Daniel reports that he had a total of 45 minutes of moderately rough air — that was the last 45 of the entire trip from Canyon to Muleshoe.

The blue streak seen flying around is none other than Ray Daniel flying his 1958, blue and white Comanche 180 recently purchased through the local Piper Dealer, Morgan Locker.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel and sons, Bobby and Jimmy flew to Breckenridge for the weekend.

Daniel used a new type aviator — an instrument for measuring time and distance and hit all check points within a time limit of one to three minutes.

IT'S FOR THE BIRDS

By MELVIN R. EVANS
Refuge Manager, Muleshoe National Wildlife Refuge

The Bald Eagle is one of some 200 species of wildlife which are considered to be in danger of becoming extinct. To many people this means nothing, but to those of us who are proud of our country, our heritage, and our natural resources it is alarming.

This eagle has been dramatized in song and legend since June 20, 1782 when Congress declared it our national emblem.

It is doubtful if very many of you would know an immature Bald Eagle even if it flew right in front of you. This is because its head and tail are brown instead of white, as it is most frequently pictured.

Most people think of the Bald Eagle as being a large bird with a white head and tail, but this coloration doesn't result until the bird is from three to five years old.

This bird has a wing span which ranges from 6½ to 7¾ feet, and its length is about 30 inches.

The food habits of this majestic bird are unknown to those who haven't studied them; hence, it is blamed for many things in which it took no part. They are generally found near rivers, lakes, and reservoirs where the remains of waterfowl and fish compose its primary diet.

The National Audubon Society, a national bird watching group, have become highly disturbed about the future of this bird, and rightly so.

National surveys conducted to determine the number of these birds in the continental United States have been organized and are conducted annually.

During the 1961 survey, 3,642 of these birds were seen, and during the 1962 count, 3,807 birds were seen.

Of 118 Bald Eagles found dead, 91 were killed at the hands of careless gunmen who nothing better to do than kill a big bird which sat upon a telephone post.

During the 1962 session of Congress, the Bald Eagle Act (1940) was amended to provide protection for the Golden Eagle also.

The enactment of this act will provide protection for both species. The Golden Eagle is also an endangered species.

FAIR DOME

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Gov. Henry Bellmon and other Oklahoma officials studied an idea that could result in the Capitol Building getting a long talked-about dome.

Under the plan, Oklahoma's exhibit building for the New York World's Fair would be dome shaped. Later it could be dismantled, returned and placed atop the Capitol.

The giraffe has seven vertebrae in its neck. So does the whale. So does man.

IT'S DANGEROUS Vote NO on P-TA Ballot

Muleshoe P-TA units have been asked by the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers to vote on policies contained in the official local unit ballot on the legislation program of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. Copies of the ballot have been sent each P-TA member of DeShazo & Richland Hills elementary schools.

DeShazo P-TA will vote tomorrow (Monday) afternoon; Richland Hills P-TA members will act on the ballot April 22.

We believe all P-TA members should vote the ballot, or express themselves as a unit and as individuals, in order to record their opinion with the Texas P-TA Congress on these actual issues now before the Congress of the United States.

The ballots, which contain some 28 questions, can be, we believe, dangerous! In the first place, the proposed national P-TA policies are plainly in favor of ANY further extension aid to education, which is in itself, is dangerous, moving the schools further away from local control and into the hands of the federal government. The word ANY, in the first question in the box provided by the Texas P-TA Congress at the bottom of the ballot, further clouds the issue by giving aid a blanket approval, without restrictions. That too is dangerous.

But the ballots are so clouded with double-talk that no individual or group can interpret the question to be voted properly. We feel either a "yes" or "no" vote could be interpreted as being a vote in favor of federal aid to education and in favor of various other controversial issues.

Pat R. Bobo, a long-time Muleshoe attorney sums it up this way: "The ballots fails to present any proposition that can be answered by a yes or no required by the ballot. Therefore, a person could not indicate any choice by the use of yes or no, and the use of either would only reveal that the voter was willing to have his vote prejudiced or predetermined."

Neal B. Dillman, superintendent of schools, said "This type of complicated, vague, and slanted statements on National and State Legislation is nothing new. I am thankful that our Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers does see fit to pass this information to the local level for study and judgement.

"I believe the members of our local units will vote intelligently on the issue at hand, and more important, express their views individually or collectively to their Representatives and Senators, both State and National."

Glen Williams, county judge and ex-officio county school superintendent, says "... the ballot should be worded so as to permit them (the people) ... to indicate a clearly defined proposition. It appears to me that the wording of this ballot makes it impossible to do that ..."

The Rev. J. Frank Peery, pastor of the First Methodist Church, says "... having read very carefully the ballot, I believe the questions are so worded that regardless of way you vote, you unwittingly vote approval ... However, the entire ballot should be analyzed on the basis that all within it is not rotten ..."

(These men have elaborated further on this subject in statements to be delivered at each meeting of the local P-TA units.)

In view of the considered opinion of these gentlemen as well as our own opinion of the ambiguous questions, we believe all proposals relating to federal aid to education should be marked with a negative vote.

We also believe that the local units should confirm the Texas P-TA Board of Managers' stand in opposition to further extension of federal aid to education, which has been the Texas P-TA Congress' stand since 1952, and which is in opposition to the National Congress of Parents and Teachers' Legislative Program.

We are opposed to ANY further extension of federal control to any branch of our educational program!

Education can best be handled and controlled on a local and state level, not by the federal government.

Yarbrough In Washington

Dear Fellow Texan:

The Special Commission headed by General Lucius D. Clay, appointed by the President to study our foreign aid needs, has now made its report. At first, the Clay Commission Report was widely understood to be a call for cuts in foreign aid. Later, doubts were raised as to whether cuts were being recommended, although some changes were suggested in the report.

Fellow Texan, I confess I wish the first reports calling for cuts in foreign aid had been fully correct. It has been my belief for a long time that there is waste and inefficiency in our foreign aid spending and that the American taxpayer is left holding the bag.

Now that we are making a real effort to cut taxes, it is even more urgent for us to review big foreign aid spending programs and find where cuts can be made, to experts, ask what seems to me to be a sensible, reasonable question:

"How does it make sense to pour $5 Billion a year overseas in foreign aid when that amount includes more than $1 Billion of our own gold reserves going overseas, and thereby impairing our own economic position?"

Well, fellow Texan, I don't think it makes much sense to extend foreign aid at such a fast rate that it pulls our own economy down with it.

If we are to save a drowning country we must extend aid as we would extend a plank to a drowning man, so we won't be dragged under — so we won't lose more than $1 Billion of our gold reserves each year through foreign aid.

The Clay Commission Report makes some good points. Among them are:

1. Too many countries with wealth of their own get aid from the United States.
2. An unfair amount of the foreign aid burden is falling on the United States.
3. Both the amount and the quality of the U. S. personnel working on foreign aid programs should be examined closely to see where improvements can be made.

In replying to this Clay Commission Report, President Kennedy said:

"You may be sure that the committee's recommendations including greater selectivity, stricter self-help standards, greater participation by the developed countries in aid efforts, and continued improvements in Administration will be carefully applied, in our continuing review of this program."

The Congress, too, will take a close look at the Clay Commission

Everett Cody Finishes Training

GRAFENWOHR, GERMANY (AHTNC) — Army Pvt. Everett F. Cody, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Cody, Earth, completed 20 days of training with other members of the 4th Division's 67th Armor at Grafenwohr, Germany, March 28.

Cody participated in day and night armor tactics against "aggressor" defensive positions.

A tank driver in Company A of the armor's 2d Medium Tank Battalion in Furth, Germany, Cody entered the Army in February 1961 and arrived overseas in August 1961.

The 21-year-old soldier attended Springlake High School.

Foreign aid did good work in Western Europe. I think that in Italy, West Germany and France at the end of World War II, foreign aid blocked the growth of Communism and led to the formation of a third strong force in the Free World. We all want to see a world at peace, with progress for mankind. But in working for it we want efficiency, not waste. The Clay Commission Report is a step in the right direction.

Of its double-talk language, long-time Muleshoe attorney Pat R. Bobo says: "The ballot fails to present any proposition that can be answered by a yes or no required by the ballot. . . a person could not indicate any choice by the use of yes or no, and the use of either would only reveal that the voter was willing to have his vote prejudiced or predetermined."

Despite the difficulty of interpreting the questions on the ballot, the local units are expected to vote on the questions at their next meetings, and a resolution condemning further extension of federal aid also may be presented at the meetings. DeShazo school has sent out photo-reproductions of the ballot to parents with the suggestion that each member of P-TA study the ballot "as thoroughly as possible," asking that the parents bring the ballot to the April 4 meeting of P-TA.

The ballot, with its 27 separate questions, is divided into six general topics: Basic requirements, education child welfare, library services, peace and national security and postal rates.

In addition to the national ballot, the Texas organization has added another question: "We are in favor of any further extension of Federal Aid to education," and "we are opposed to any further extension of federal aid to education."

The word "any" in the first part of that ballot is objected to by opponents of the measure.

In explaining the reason for the ballot in the first place, Mrs. Danforth says: "A few persons are challenging the right of the P-TA to be concerned in . . . legislation. We could, in turn, challenge them by asking 'Who has more reason to be concerned about legislation affecting children and youth than the parents who rear them and the teachers who teach them?' Only as all parents, in or out of P-TA, express their rejection or approval of proposed actions, either locally, in Austin or in Washington, can the will of the people be known in determining the course of public education in this state and our nation."

County Judge Glen Williams says "when people are called on to express themselves by ballot, the ballot should be worded so as to permit them, by their vote, to indicate a clearly defined proposition. It appears to me that the wording of this ballot makes it impossible to do that."

"Many believe, as I do, that the educational needs of our people can best be met on the local level, by local financing, management and control, and that local government is most responsive to the wishes of the people. But this ballot does not allow one to so ex-

Awtreys Return From NUF Tour

Mr and Mrs. W. H. Awtry, Sr., former Muleshoe residents, now of Hereford, returned Monday, March 25, from a 13-day trip, sponsored by the Farmers' Union, that included the Farmers' Union Convention in New York.

In a group of thirty - six, the Awtreys made the trip by chartered bus and their route included St. Louis, Mo., Chicago, Ill., and a night's stopover in Canada at Niagara Falls and three days in New York for the convention.

Sight - seeing busses were arranged by the convention and a complete tour was made of New York City, including the U.N. Building and the Statue of Liberty, plus other interesting places. One night was spent in Washington, D. C., where the group went through the White House, Capitol building and Smithsonian Institute.

Returning, the group went thru Virginia and Tennessee, spending the night in Nashville, Tenn., with some of the group attending the Grand Ole Opry.

The Awtreys report that all were in agreement that this was a trip which everyone enjoyed the sights and people they met.

On the bus, the group entertained themselves by singing, playing 42, cards, and dominoes. Church services were held on the bus the two Sundays they were enroute.

small boy. I could read old Jack's mine easily, and he had one of his own, too. I could tell when we were galloping around the backwoods near Byars, for instance, that he was thinking of the green grass along the creek, and trying to figure out in his horse's mind, how he could induce me to let him get some of the same.

He had ways of getting his own way, too. For example, he would turn his head the direction I pulled the reins, but he walked another direction, smack up to the green grass, instead. I think Jack must have reasoned that he would let me think I was having my own way, while actually he was getting what he wanted all along — kind of the same tactic a smart wife pulls with her husband.

As I said, Jack was smart. He had lots of sense — horse sense — which is more than I can say for some people I know. We knew each other and could figure out what the other was thinking. I believe he read my mind the same as I read his. Which, I suppose, might be interpreted as saying that I had no more sense than a horse.

Which probably is true. I never did claim to be very smart, and, so far as I know, Jack never did either. We were just a couple of pals together. Feel sorry for the modern kid who has never known the love and devotion of a horse. How can you love a hot-rod and how can it return your affection? I'll take the days of old Jack, our thinking horse.

STRIKE PROVED DEFINITELY Newspaper Is Still FIRST

EAST LANSING, Mich. —"The newspaper is essential to a free society."

"The recent newspaper strikes have proven that, with the exception of word of mouth, the newspaper is still the most intimate, personal and effective form of communication," said the director of the American Press Institute of Columbia University.

"The loss of a newspaper to a community leaves a vacuum that cannot be filled by any other means of communication," J. Montgomery Curtis told a Classified Advertising Conference at Michigan State University.

In discussing the role of the newspaper in our society, Curtis said that television also contributes to the public's right to know.

"You can't beat television for propaganda," he said. "For mass entertainment, it does not have an equal today.

"But television is immediate, and not long lasting. When it comes to news in depth and just isn't in the same league with the newspaper — the recent strikes have proved this point."

Evidences of the impact of the loss of newspapers to Cleveland and New York were reported by Curtis in the form of temperature readings related to the economic climate of the two cities.

Sales Are Down

"Department store sales are down, as are food store sales, stock market activity," he said. "Attendance is off at many cultural and entertainment events, and the opening of some of the new shows were held up. People can't use the newspaper classified to find rental housing, and employers and potential employees can't get together."

He said the public wants to know what's going on locally, in the state, across the nation and around the world. The public misses the total and complete service which the newspaper offers to keep them informed of these events, he noted.

What Public Misses

Curtis commented specifically on many things the public misses in a newspaperless community, including:

- (1) Pending legislation in the city, state and nation. The public is generally uneasy and somewhat skeptical of legislation pushed through when the newspaper is absent.
- (2) Obituaries. The death of famous people are reported in other media, but what about those that are not nationally known or world famous, but are nevertheless important and of interest to the community?
- (3) Coverage in depth. What is behind the headlines? Who is doing what, and why? Television does a beautiful job on the special documentary, but generally is weeks late in reporting. The public wants news in depth as it happens.

photos come on the screen and are gone. The public misses the stationary picture.

(5) Editorials. Newspapers do what television does not do regularly — give vent to the opinions of citizens through editorials and letters to the editors. Diversity of opinion is the very heart of the democratic process.

(6) Stability and recall. You must be physically present for a television program at a specific time, and you can't watch more than one program at a specific time, and you can't watch more than one program at a time. You can take your time reading a newspaper, and refer to it if you wish.

(7) Features. The newspaper is read by people with a diversity of interests, people who religiously work the cross-words, read

By EVELYN M. SCOTT
SUDAN — Members of the Senior class of Sudan High school were entertained with a Western supper Thursday evening by members of the Womens Society of Christian Service of the First Methodist church when the event was held in the Fellowship hall of the church.

Burning kerosene lamps, place cards of covered wagons and cowboy jacket programs highlighted table decorations.

The supper was served from a chuck wagon. Other decorations included a Western scene featuring bales of hay, saddles, and a campfire.

The invocation was given by Rev. Frank Weir with Mrs. E. C. Minyard extending the Welcome. Durwood White gave the response.

Former Muleshoe Man is Honored

PLAINVIEW — Cecil Morris Osborne Jr., son of former Muleshoe residents now residing in Snyder, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Osborne Sr., has received two recent honors, conferred on him by the student body at Wayland Baptist College, Plainview. Osborne has been selected for 1962-63 "Spinning Wheels" and has been elected by his classmates for the office of vice-president of the Student Government Assn. for 1963-64.

Osborne, a senior speech major and religion and English minor, with nine other Wayland juniors and seniors, were selected as campus leaders by vote of the student body. From the list of eligible persons, students vote for 10 choices, after which a faculty and student group makes final selections from those nominees receiving highest number of votes.

As vice-president of the SGA, Osborne will preside over the Senate and execute the office of the SGA president in his absence or following his removal from office.

We've got GAS air conditioning at our house!

Boy, it's the MOST! It does more than just COOL, too. It circulates, ventilates, dehumidifies and cleans the air. Oh, and it HEATS in winter... I almost forgot! Mom says it's a lot easier to keep house, now, because there ain't... I mean "isn't"... as much dust around. And you should hear Dad go on about how his hay fever's let up since we bought the Arkia-Servel. An' you know what? It runs so much cheaper than our old job that the folks increased my allowance from the savings! All I know is that when I get a house, I'm gonna have an Arkia-Servel Sun Valley, too. Say, ain't I mean "isn't," that a funny name for an air conditioner!
