Lot of folk are having fun and running up their telephone bills - these days doing DDD. In case you don't know, that's "direct distance dialing" (or maybe it's distance direct dialing). Anyway, if you want to call Aunt Minnie in St. Louis to ask her how her arthritis is getting along, you do the job of dialing Aunt Minnie's phone directly. Both General and Bell are going hog-wild on

It's that DDD business that is causing all the big telephone numbers, and believe me, it's quite a problem, and by the time Aunt Minnie finally limps her arthritic self to the phone in her living room in St. Louis you've darn near worn out your dialing finger. Seems you start with the national debt and go on from there,

At the rate they are going with this do-it-yourself idea, eventually you'll just order your phone by mail and they'll send it to you by parcel post with directions for installing the thing. Then you'll test it by dialing the test-board operator in Fresno, Calif. You'll dial something like 485-3456-723-
