A BIBLE THOUGHT FOR THE DAY DON'T SHOP AROUND FOR MAGICAL QUACK SPIRITUAL REMEDIES. One Hundred Fateful Days

When Napoleon landed at Cannes, after escape from his island exile on Elba, one hundred days stretched before him during which the whole future fate of Europe trembled in the balance.

From March 20 to June 29 of the year 1815, from Charlevoix to Waterloo and its aftermath, one hundred days passed. In the autumn, a lonely figure paced the deck of His Majesty's Ship Bellerophon, outward bound for bleak St. Helena.

Such a summer may lie before Europe this year. John D. Biggers, production chief of the Office of Production Management, was very much in earnest when he told the House Military Affairs Committee that for the United States, too, the next hundred days are vitally important.

Eventually, we shall have plenty of shells, plenty of tanks, plenty of planes. But it is now, during the next hundred days, that they are needed. It is now that the certain assurance that they will be produced on schedule is needed no less urgently.

During these coming hundred days, the United States, by the united will of its people, democratically determined, wants exactly what Biggers called for: "Work, sacrifice, unselfishness, genuine national unity." "I believe," he said, "that if everyone really understood the importance of national defense, selfishness would disappear, and selfishness is the basis of most of our problems."

American workmen and American employers are intelligent, free men. Surely it must be plain to both that their future is bound up completely with the proposition that the American republic can, must, and will carry out the task it has set itself—the task of turning out as fast as is humanly possible the tools of war for the defense of those who are now bravely grappling with aggression, tools of war for the ultimate defense of the republic.

That common sense view will, we are sure, at length govern employers who may have "hoarded" defense materials beyond need, who may have resisted social trends, who may have undertaken tardily their defense assignments. It will govern labor leaders and workmen who may have placed organizational rivalries, political "lines" or fear of some vague future disadvantage ahead of present production.

The coming hundred days will tell whether the United States can still do the job. We have the uttermost faith that she can, and will.

Our Opportunity To Learn

The British Trade Union Congress is extending an invitation to American labor leaders to visit London and study at first hand the working arrangements between British labor and the government in the crisis.

We hope they will go, and we wish that with them would go a delegation of American manufacturers, to study similar problems as they affect employers. Britain, fighting a back-to-the-wall fight, has managed to carry it on thus far without infringing on fundamental freedoms.

It should not be necessary to learn every lesson from bitter experience, though too often that seems the most effective way. We have military observers in all European war zones, striving to learn vital lessons in the least costly way. Ought we not to take as much trouble to learn all we can in every other field?

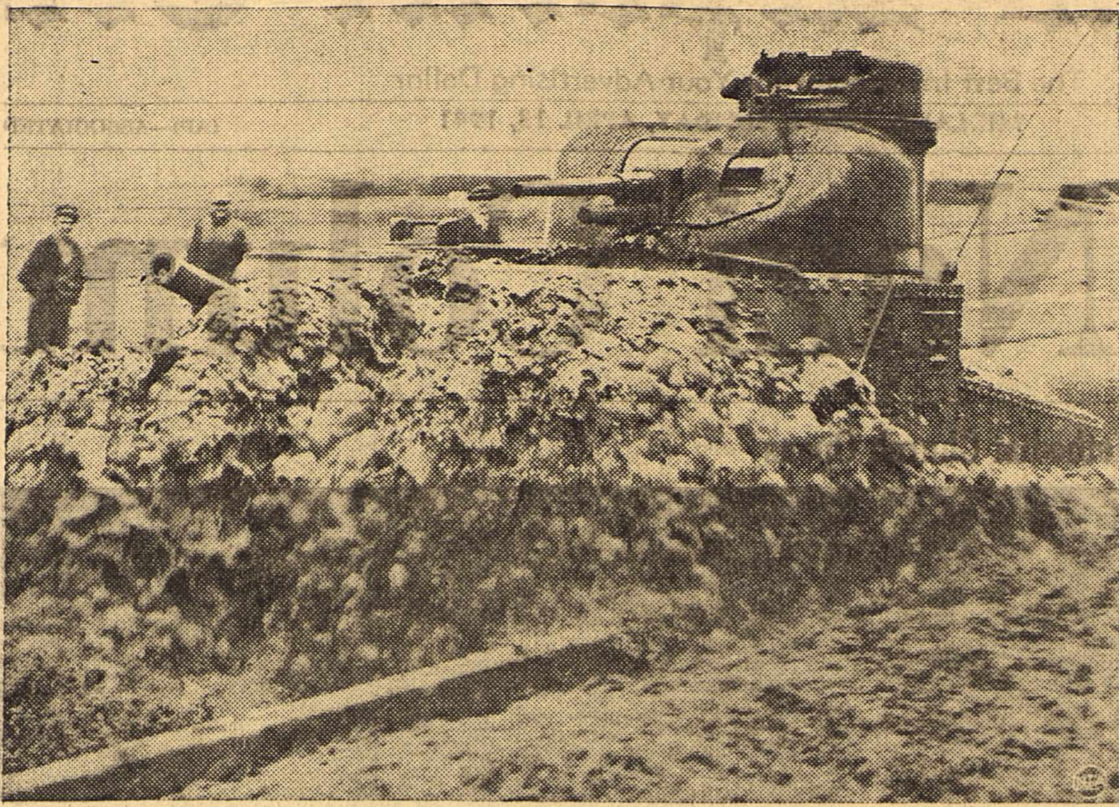

Footnote To A Footnote

We have several times noted the manner in which Germany has been looting the conquered countries in the most genteel manner—by buying up their assets at their own prices in "funny money" which they have given an arbitrary relationship to the money of the conquered people.

It is even said that property of United States firms in occupied France is being bought similarly, though this is hard to believe. American firms which built factories in Germany found long ago that they had practically been seized, by the device of not allowing any of the profits to be sent back to the country which had built and run the plant.

U. S. auto toll for first two months of 1941 was 5370—reminding us that the only way to make safety last is to always use safety first.

Bombs Increase Truancy In Birmingham Schools

BIRMINGHAM, Eng.—(UP)—Almost 40 per cent of the school children of Birmingham are playing truant, and many boys of 13 to 14 are earning as much as $8 a week in factories.

Legislature Goes Into Final Stage

AUSTIN, April 12.—(AP)—The legislature wheels Monday into the final lap of the 120-day general session, its machinery primed for important floor work.

The lawmakers have reached the stage where committee work fades into the background and extended floor sessions are ordered on measures sponsors hope to turn out before adjournment.

There were prospects the Senate might soon begin work on the $25-500,000 omnibus tax bill sent it by the House. The measure is in a state affairs sub-committee which is striving to report Tuesday.

The Senate's action on this bill ranks as the number on topic because it can key the success or failure of the session.

Senators Make Plans To Link St. Lawrence Project With Others

WASHINGTON, April 12—(AP)—Influential Senators were reported uniting today behind an effort to link the St. Lawrence seaway project with the Florida Ship Canal, Tombigbee, Arkansas Valley Authority and Columbia River Developments in a billion dollar omnibus waterways bill.

Behind-the-scenes attempts to line up the supporters of each of these projects in a solid bloc were described as only partly successful thus far. Some opposition was said to have developed from those who feared that the consolidation of such an ambitious program of hydroelectric power, navigation and flood control proposals in one measure would provoke "pork barrel" charges.

Senator Norris (Ind-Neb), one of those interested, said he was particularly anxious to see the proposed development of the Columbia River, the establishment of the Arkansas Valley Authority and the St. Lawrence project placed in one bill.

Until a few years ago tournament bridge players believed that few women play tournament bridge well. Today, however, we find women on championship combinations almost as often as the men and there are several women players who are considered to be on a par with the men. And, so of late I have been watching the playing of women with special interest.

Here is a hand that was well played by Mrs. Wilton McCarthy, who was our hostess at Annapolis the evening we played rubber bridge.

As Mrs. McCarthy remarked, "I don't know quite how we got to four spades, but here we are."

Dummy won the club lead with the ace. The three of spades was led and North's ten was won by the jack. East continued clubs. On third round Mrs. McCarthy discarded a heart instead of trumping. West led the queen of hearts, and South won with the ace.

The ace and king of diamonds were cashed and a third diamond ruffed. Mrs. McCarthy carefully ruffed with dummy's queen. Then the four of spades was led, the finesse picked up all the trumps, and declarer spread the cards winning the rest.

C. Of C. Directors Meeting Postponed

Postponement of a monthly meeting of directors of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, scheduled Monday night, was announced by James N. Allison, president.

The fact several of the directors will be in Lubbock attending an annual convention of the Permian Basin Association that night is the reason for postponement. The session will be held later in the week, Allison said.

Texas Club Women Push Malnutrition Campaign

PLAINVIEW, Tex.—(AP)—Ready to mobilize kitchens behind national defense in an all-out "bread and butter" battle against malnutrition, are 32,000 Texas club women.

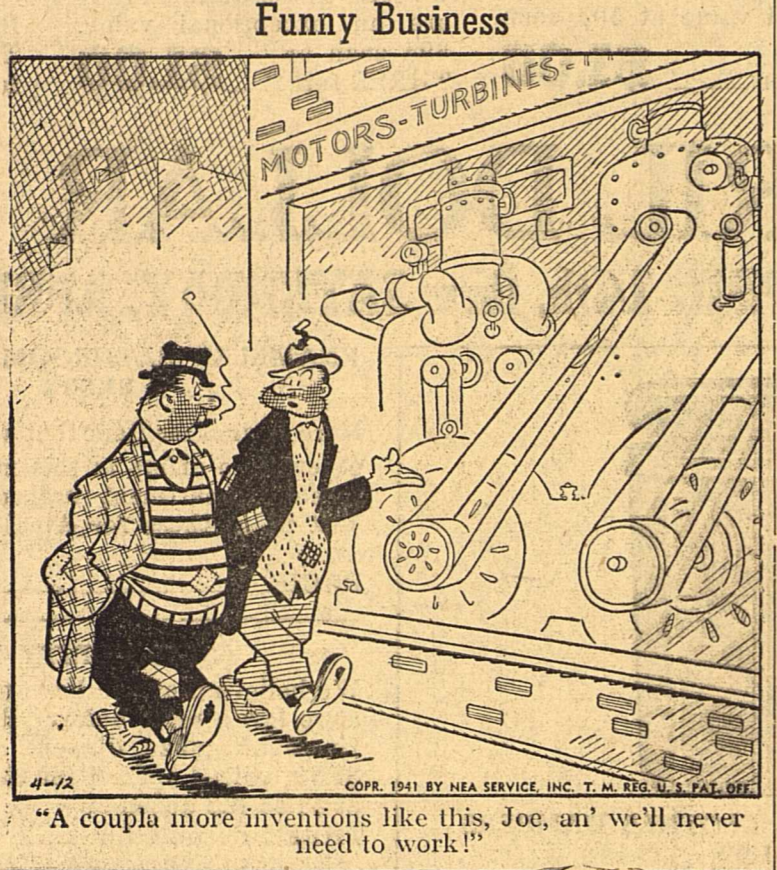

During this month, the 1,056 organizations in the Texas Federation of Women's Clubs will push a broad educational program on diet. Mrs. J. W. Walker of Plainview, president of the Texas Federation with a corps of assistants, has laid the groundwork for the campaign. She will appear before the eight district conventions during the month to sound the state wide slogan, "Education for Democracy's Defense." Emphasis will be on education in diet, Mrs. Walker said.

Turkey Builds Industrial Nation In Spite Of War

ISTANBUL, April 12—(UP)—From time to time grimy, rough appearing strangers are seen in the hotels of Ankara and Istanbul. They are engineers from Turkey's new British-built steel works at Karabuk, north of Ankara not far from the Black Sea coast, and evidence that Turkey is not letting the war stop plans to build an industrial nation.

Some of the grimy strangers are Englishmen, but increasing numbers are Turks, many of them trained at schools for mechanics and construction workers at Ankara. Turkey is trying to develop a class of skilled workers, instead of being dependent, as hitherto, on peasant labor which returns to the villages during planting and harvest seasons.

Britain Conscripts Slackers In Slacks As Women Extend All Aid

Hundreds of British women are serving as nurses. But there is a crying need for more—and it is expected that the new conscription of women will fill those gaps.

By Rosette Hargrove
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON.—The net is closing in on the Slacker in Slacks. Labor Minister Ernest Bevin at the beginning of the year called for 100,000 women to come forward for war work. The response was negligible. Apparently many eligible women never dreamed that the appeal was meant for them.

Result: today in England conscription of women is under way. The registration of women of 20 and 21, irrespective of class, is the most revolutionary step in the war annals of England. No wrangling or string-pulling will avert this measure. Of course there will be a few women who, whatever happens, will always manage to slip through the net, but the great majority won't be able to.

THE TYPE IS EASY TO SPOT

There were too many women in this country whose lives scarcely have been touched by the war. You could recognize them immediately. You meet them in the lounges of luxury hotels in London, in safe evacuation centers, in expensive food shops, seeking unrationed luxuries, and in the saloons of Mayfair, worrying about their spring wardrobes.

Some were the daughters of rich parents who hadn't even troubled to keep house since the outbreak of war had made house-keeping a daily problem or the question of servants an increasingly difficult one.

Some did make a gesture towards the war effort to the extent of serving at a canteen once or twice a week.

There will be no wriggling out of any thing, or rushing to join some voluntary organization. The only distinction which is going to be made from now on is between the woman who has very definite domestic ties and the woman who hasn't or the one engaged on non-essential work.

The women of leisure will be put mainly, according to present plans, into the Ambulance Transport Service, the Land Army and other services where they are most needed. Unless, of course, they volunteer to do munition work or some other employment of vital necessity.

Once placed, however, they cannot quit without incurring a penalty, just as the fact of non-registration or refusing to work will also entail punishment, the nature of which has not yet been decided upon. A Women's Advisory Committee of eight has been formed to assist the Minister of Labor in the placing of women in war work.

So far as housewives are concerned, if they feel they should stay at home, the advice to them is—stay put. The British Government fully realizes that the housewives of Britain are already doing work of national importance.

We Are In The Army And We Like It

By Buster Howard

FORT BLISS.—We had our first disappointed review yesterday and it proved cavalrymen can march as well as handle a horse. The occasion was the promotion of new soldiers in the Fifth Cavalry to regular duty, the men have finished their six weeks training.

We had an afternoon off as we had to get all our equipment in tip-top shape. After we had cleaned and polished everything we had to parade during a dust storm.

The newly trained men were presented to the commanding officer in a perfectly executed ceremony and it was interesting to new fellows like me as we will be going through the same thing in two or three weeks.

Baseball and various sports are enjoyed by the soldiers after supper which is served at 4:30 o'clock. Many of the men go to El Paso in the evenings to the Army Y. M. C. A. for boxing, wrestling, swimming and other athletics.

My scout work came in handy again this week. During a mapping problem no one was able to tell directions on a cloudy day without a compass. Using a plain pocket watch I was able to show them the way. This is easy for all Boy Scouts.
