Senate Finance Committee Approves Lowering Of Tax Exemptions

Would Broaden Base By Setting Up $1500 Minimum For Married Persons And $750 For Single Individuals

Officials Estimate New Exceptions Would Bring Six Million More Under Income Tax Structure And 300 Million Dollars Into U. S. Revenues

WASHINGTON—The Senate finance committee voted Monday to broaden the income tax base by lowering exemptions from $2,000 to $1,500 for married persons and from $800 to $750 for single individuals.

The lower exemptions would bring an additional 6,000,000 persons under the income tax structure and would add between $300,000,000 and $350,000,000 to federal revenues.

Rebuffing in their bid for White House support, Senate old-age pension advocates were reported ready Monday to buck the administration leadership in an effort to write a modified version of the Townsend plan in the $3,236,700,000 tax bill.

Japan Cites Three Points In Refuting Churchill's Speech

TOKYO (AP)—The Domei News Agency, in an apparently inspired story quoting a "well-qualified commentator," declared Monday British Prime Minister Churchill's broadcast Sunday was based on a 3-point misinterpretation of the fact.

"First, it must be borne in mind that the China incident broke out two years before the European war," the agency said. "Therefore, Churchill's allegation that Japan followed the example of Hitler and Mussolini is preposterous and totally devoid of a sense of time."

Houston Oil Man And Capitalist Dies In Hospital

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A heart attack caused the death of James Marion West, 70-year-old Houston capitalist and oil man and president of the Dallas Journal and Austin Tribune publishing companies, in Menorah Hospital Sunday.

Abroad the plane were members of the family, including two sons, Wesley M. West of Houston, who was with his father when he became ill, and J. Marion West, also of Houston. The latter was in Colorado Springs, Colo., when notified of his father's death but left immediately for Kansas City.

The oil man and publisher, who had been in ill health for two months, entered the hospital here last Thursday after catching cold while on a business trip.

West rose to wealth from a modest beginning. He was born at Waynesboro, Miss., in 1871, on a farm. His parents brought him to Texas in 1880 and he obtained his schooling in that state.

In December, 1939, he became a publisher, purchasing the Dallas Dispatch-Journal and changing the name to the Journal. He bought the Austin Tribune later.

He was president of the West-Gage Cattle Company and headed the West Production Company, an oil firm operating in the Gulf Coast fields.

GOD WILL MEET US FAR MORE THAN HALF WAY: Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of Hosts.—Malachi 3:7.

Education--More Vital Than Ever

Many a boy is probably hesitating at this moment about going back to school or college. "What's the use," some may be asking. "About the time I get started, I'll be called up for military service; I might never finish, and have just wasted my time. What difference does it make, anyway?"

If it is natural enough for young men to be thinking in such terms in days like these. There is one sound bit of advice: "Get all the education you can while you can." If the course is interrupted, the school and college training, as far as it has gone, will help the selectee through his military service, and may definitely lead to "promotion and pay" within that service.

Generally speaking (there are always exceptions) the educated man adapts himself to changed conditions more easily, understands more fully the necessity for training; hence he finds his "hitch" easier to do. In today's modern, complex, highly organized army, there is a use for any kind of training he may get. Again, there are exceptions and one can always find instances where the army has made Phi Beta Kappas specialize in digging ditches. But generally speaking, any kind of educational training is directly useful in the army, aside from its general value.

The world after the emergency has passed, furthermore, is going to be an even more highly competitive world than before. Jobs may be scarce, and the better prepared a man is, the more chance he will have to land one.

Further, at any time the government may begin taking a leaf from the book of its World War experiences. Then the time between the colleges and the military services was very close. Training was instituted in the colleges and schools themselves, and students received advance preparation which helped them advance in military careers if such followed. Further, certain credits were allowed for actual military service, facilitating return to school after the war with minimum loss of time and credit. Some such system may well be adopted again.

Any boy hesitating about returning to school this fall would do well to think of those things. In high school or college, for six months or four years, the young man who studies, prepares himself for better and more effective service, adds to the stock of training and education of the nation, he, too, is serving his country until the time when more exacting service is required.

When A Mine Dies

A coal mine is a hole in the ground, impersonal, soulless.

Yet if a coal mine die? Men can mourn its passing as sincerely, almost as deeply, as the passing of a friend.

In Mollenauer, Pa., the other day, No. 3 mine closed. Its coal was worked out, its life ended. The men of that mine, many of whom had worked in its passages for 40 years, from the day it opened until it closed, paraded to its mouth in a "last rites" ceremony. Their picture, in the Journal of the United Mine Workers, shows clearly the regretful, sorrowful, almost mournful faces of the miners. Their whole lives, most of them, had centered around that bleak shaft. Hard work, danger, the mine meant those things, but it also meant the means of a living for 40 years, and so it was a friend.

Men may be sad, understandably sad, at the death even of a mine, the closing of a hole in the ground.

Senators Study Current Problem Of Cattle Thefts

WASHINGTON (AP).—Evidence that cattle stealing still is a multi-million dollar industry faces senators as they seek to decide a sharp dispute over a legislative remedy for rustling.

The controversy centered around a house-approved bill which would authorize collection of fees for brand inspections at posted stock yards.

Chairman Thomas (D-Okla.) of an agriculture subcommittee, said a decision probably would be delayed until the congressional recess ends September 15.

The bill (HR5204) would direct the secretary of agriculture to designate an association of cattlemen in each state to conduct brand inspections at market centers now under federal supervision and charge a fee, probably five cents a head.

Spokesmen for the larger association of cattlemen have urged approval, while smaller organizations, which also inspect brands, protested that the measure would drive them out of existence because all fees would go to the single large organization.

Joe C. Montague, representing the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers' Association, testified to "more thefts of cattle at this time than there has ever been in the history of the livestock industry."

Leading opposition was W. P. McFadden, Jr., president of the Coastal Cattle Association of Beaumont, Texas, who testified that designation of a single large agency in each state would "create a monopoly" and destroy all smaller organizations.

Similar opposition was filed for the Oklahoma City Livestock Exchange, and the California Cattle-men's Association.

Rep. Kleberg, (D-Tex.), author of the bill and owner of one of the largest ranches in the country, denied that it would destroy smaller associations, testifying that they were needed for inspection on the ranges and at smaller markets.

Raising And Feeding Beef Is Big Business And Midland Farm Agent Discusses Best Developed Methods

By I. O. Sturkie
Agricultural Agent
of Midland County

Raising beef is big business. And Midland County is in that business. How, when, and what to feed is a problem as old as the industry. Midland County feed for the Midland County cattle is one of the newest approaches.

Beef raising, perhaps Texas' oldest industry, still is in a transitional stage, notwithstanding the existence of more or less established types and methods of culture. But the trend in quality is upward. The advent of 4-H Club demonstrations has contributed materially to this. The advice and cooperation of the Extension Service and other agricultural agencies not only has led club boys to select and finish high quality calves in their demonstrations for show purposes and premium sales, but has trained them in the art of feeding and judging quality animals. Moreover, the example of the boys in successful beef culture has had a marked effect in influencing parents to improve the breeding of home herds.

Demand by local markets for more beef from lighter and younger animals of good quality which have attained desirable finish, doubtless can be attributed in part to this influence. Certainly, the competition of club boys' calves at stock shows and fairs has set standards of quality and feeding. As a rule, animals of this type, whether especially prepared for showing or marketing through the home feed lot, bring a premium over prices paid for heavy grass cattle.

Section Adapted To Producing
The west long has been noted for producing cattle and is quite naturally adapted to such an enterprise, but with our present agricultural policy we have another phase of the transition: One from the former system of general range feeding to feeding in stock lots and on the home lot, and this is the trend of many farmers—to fatten a group of calves as a supplement to a growing crop. The AAA program of soil-building and acreage allotment is probably responsible.

With growing competition from the southern states in producing beef cattle, as a result of pasture improvement and crop diversification, the cattlemen of the west may encounter more competition in the future for marketing feeder cattle. Likewise, the farmer may in the future use beef cattle through which to market his feed and at the same time supply an outlet for more feeder cattle.

Why not feed Midland County feed to some of Midland County cattle?

There are over 22,000 head of cattle produced in Midland County and something over 23,000 acres in the county devoted annually to feed crops. With a good feed crop practically made, the question naturally arises among the farmers and farmer-ranchmen: "Is it better to sell the feed or feed it to livestock?"

In trying to answer this question, a number of things must be taken into consideration. One of the first things in any feeding operation is the price of feed and price of beef cattle. If the beef cattle are to be fed. Most experienced feeders will say that a person will never, make money feeding cattle if cattle and feed are both cheap. At the present we have the contrary. Of course no one can tell just when the price of beef cattle will break, but with our international situation as it is and our strong domestic consumption of beef prevailing, most economists are not expecting a break in price soon.

Estimating Profits In Feeding
Possibly the next item to consider in making a decision relative to feeding would be in estimating profits in feeding operations. Naturally a person will not be able to figure to a penny just what profit he can expect to make feeding, but a reliable estimate can be made. To do this a person must determine the cost of cattle at the beginning and also estimate what selling price he may expect to get on a pound basis.

For example: Suppose that a farmer has 10,000 bushels of hegari. Assuming one half of the weight of the bundles is grain, he would like to know first how many 600 lb yearlings he would need to buy to consume this amount of feed. A definite item in the consumption of this feed would, of course, be the number of days expected to feed these steers. Most experiment stations say it will take about 180 days to finish an animal of this weight. Assuming that 10,000 bundles of hegari will weigh 100,000 pounds or an average of 10 pounds per bundle, the next thing to know would be the number of pounds of roughage and grain necessary to make 100 pounds of gain. The result of most closely tabulated feeding experiments indicate that it takes about 400 pounds of concentrates (grain and protein supplement) and 400 pounds of roughage to make 100 pounds of gain on beef cattle, or 4 pounds concentrates and 4 pounds of roughage to one pound of gain. In this case, assuming that the average price of concentrates was 1¢ per pound and roughage 1/2¢ per pound, it would cost for four pounds of concentrates 4 cents and 4 pounds of roughage 2 cents, or a total of 6 cents for the cost of 1 pound of gain not counting labor, taxes, interest, equipment, etc.

Now, assuming that these animals will gain 2 1/2 pounds per day, one steer would consume 20 pounds of concentrates and roughage per day. For 180 day period the animal would consume 3600 pounds of feed. This 3600 pounds divided into the 100,000 pounds of hegari would feed about 28 steers. If these steers weighed 600 pounds to begin with and gained 2 1/2 pounds per day for the 180 day period, one could expect them to weigh 1050 pounds each. Suppose the steers cost 11¢ per hundred and they sold for 12¢ per hundred. In this operation, could one expect a profit? In this

Mr. Wright's Cow Takes Place Along With Mrs. O'Leary's

AUSTIN (Special).—Now there are two famous cows—Mrs. O'Leary's and Mr. Wright's.

Everybody knows about Mrs. O'Leary's cow, and the lawyers and police officers of Texas are learning about Mr. Wright's. It was four years ago Wright began selling his cow, along with a song and dance, and he's been selling it ever since.

Wright—his initials are C. R., but his friends call him Charley—always sells this cow to one C. A. Fox for $42. Mr. Fox pays by check, typing everything but his signature, and usually notes on its face that the check is "For 1 cow." Checks Always Bounce

Usually, upon selling the cow again, Wright calls upon a lawyer in a medium-sized city, retains the lawyer to handle a suit against a railroad whose train allegedly has run into his truck, and gets the lawyer to endorse Fox's check so he can cash it. On two occasions Wright sought the professional services of a dentist. A Cleburne dentist gave him a $30 set of false teeth and $12 change for Fox's check. A Seguin dentist endorsed one of the checks after agreeing to work on Wright's teeth.

Fox's checks always come back marked "no account," and Wright is nowhere to be found. Wright's first known offense was in Mineral Wells in September of 1937. Subsequently he has cashed worthless checks in Cleburne, Laredo, Waco, Marlin, Cameron, Conroe, Kerrville and Seguin.

Chief Joe S. Fletcher of the state police identification bureau believes many swindles perpetrated by Wright have never been reported. Wright is described as 55 years old, 150 to 160 pounds, and about 5 feet 10 or 11 inches tall.

Miss Elizabeth Pratt Becomes The Bride Of C. S. Sitton In Single Ring Ceremony Read At Odessa

Couple Will Live In Monahans After Trip To California

Moving the date of their marriage forward a week, Miss Elizabeth Pratt of Midland and C. S. Sitton of Monahans were married quietly in Odessa, Saturday afternoon. The single ring ceremony was read in the home of the Rev. John Kee, pastor of the First Baptist Church.

Only the bride's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Wathen of Fort Worth, and her niece and nephew, Miss Betty Sue Wathen and Billie Wathen, accompanied the couple.

The bride's wedding dress was of grouse blue crepe in long torso effect with full skirt. A quilted design was employed at the neckline and at the bottoms of the three-quarter length sleeves. Shoes and bag of brown honey suede and a small off-the-face hat of brown honey felt with short veil completed the costume. Her corsage was of orchids.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Sitton left for California, to be away three or four weeks. Upon their return they will make their home in Monahans.

Mrs. Sitton was reared in San Angelo where she graduated from high school and attended business college. For the past five years she had been employed in the offices of Wright and McMillen here.

Mr. Sitton is the Magnolia sales agent at Monahans.

Three Are Hostesses For Bridal Shower

Three were hostesses when Miss Pratt was honored with a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Ralph Hickman, west of the Country Club, Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Entertaining were Miss Lillie Mae Stovall, Mrs. Riley Parr, and Mrs. Ralph Hickman.

Party rooms were decorated with pink roses and vases.

Guests were greeted by the hostesses and honored. After registering in the bride's book, they were escorted to the back yard where large vases and baskets of golden glow and zinnias were placed at vantage points.

Mrs. Parr gave an original reading. The garden motif was carried out when gifts were presented to the honoree in a flower cart. Packages bore stickers of Magnolia products in reference to the occupation of Mr. Sitton as Magnolia sales agent.

A pink-and-green ice course was served.

The invitation list included: The honoree, Miss Nell Shaw, Miss Mary Page, Meses. Fred Wright, J. W. McMillen, W. M. Osborn, Lena Osborn, Bob Norris, Miss Edna Mae Elkin, Meses. A. L. Golladay, Chas. West, I. E. Daniel, Misses Jo Beth Fudge, Aline Maxwell, Leota Seegars, Jane Marie Johnson, Velma Johnson, Meses. Mozelle Webb, Fred Hallman, C. A. McCamey, Louise Winner, Meses. We, the Women

By Ruth Millett

She was almost 30 and about to be married to a man she had worked ten years to get.

So she was naturally concerned over holding on to her prize. With that in mind she sat down and wrote 14 "Rules for my guidance as a wife."

Though she wrote them 30 years ago, the girl who plans to be married this September might get some ideas from the young woman who became "Sir Richard Burton's Wife"—which also happens to be the title of the new biography in which the bride-to-be can find all 14 rules.

Just to show how up-to-date the 80-year-old rules are, here are a few of the fourteen:

"Make his home snug. If it be ever so small and poor, there can always be a certain chic about it. Men are always ashamed of a poverty-stricken home. Attend much to his creature comforts; allow smoking or anything else; for if you do not, somebody else will. Make it cheerful and attractive, and draw relations and intimates about him, and the style of society that suits him, marking who are real friends to him and who are not.

"Improve and educate yourself in every way, that you may enter into his pursuits and keep pace with the times, that he may not weary of you.

"Be prepared at any moment to follow him at an hour's notice.

"Do not try to hide your affection for him, but let him see and feel it in every action.

"Never confide your domestic affairs to your female friends.

"Hide his faults from everyone, and back him up through every difficulty and trouble.

"Keep everything going, and let nothing ever be at a standstill; nothing would weary him like stagnation."

SOUND ADVICE FOR 1941 BRIDE

In all fourteen of the rules there isn't one that wouldn't be sound advice today to any bride.

Take that on "Keep everything going..." for example. That is where a good many modern wives fall down. Instead of seeing that a husband always has some absorbing interest outside of work, or is concentrating on some particular advancement, many a wife lets her man slip into a life that is nothing more than a treadmill of going to work, coming home, having dinner, going to a movie and then to bed. And then wonders why he is bored with life—including marriage.

But not "Sir Richard Burton's Wife"—and not the September bride who takes a tip from the late Lady Burton and "lets nothing be at a standstill."

Midland Man To Marry Fort Worth Girl September 6

Bride-Elect Is Visitor Here During Week-end

One of the highlights of Fort Worth society for the weekend was announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Jerry Goodrich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Goodrich of Westover Hills, Fort Worth, to John Francis Malloy, of Midland, formerly of Tulsa, Oklahoma.

The wedding will take place at the River Crest Country Club, Sept. 6, with a reception following.

Miss Goodrich attended the Hockaday School in Dallas, Miss Hourigan's Residence School in New York and the New York School of the Theater. She made her debut at the 1939 Assembly Ball and was honored that winter by the Steeplechase. She is a member of the Fort Worth Junior League.

Mr. Malloy is the son of Mrs. Patrick Malloy of Tulsa, and the late Patrick Malloy, who was assistant United States Attorney General. The prospective bridegroom attended Cascia Hall in Tulsa, was graduated at Andover and at Princeton University, where he was a member of the Tiger Inn Club.

Miss Goodrich's cousin, Mrs. A. J. Viehover of Tulsa, will be matron of honor in the wedding, and other bridal attendants will be Mrs. Charles Schmidt of Tulsa, Meses. Anne Ryan, Martha Teas, Betty Beggs Bevan, Christine Stone, Ann Newton, Suzanne Clery and Mrs. Richard Daniel Conway of Brady.

Lieut. Patrick Malloy Jr. of Washington, D. C. will be his brother's best man.

The only pre-nuptial party will be the rehearsal dinner which will be given by the bride attendants.

The couple will live in Midland where the bridegroom-elect is with the land department of Stanolind Oil and Gas Company.

Miss Goodrich spent the weekend here as guest of Mrs. J. W. McMillen.

Expects Students To Have New Standards Of Values This Year

COLUMBUS, O. (AP)—Howard L. Bevis, president of Ohio State University believes college students this year will be the most serious-minded group to arrive on campuses in a long time.

Dr. Bevis predicts that the general level of accomplishment will be higher, although enrollments will be smaller.

"Students who do enroll will be individuals who have made their decisions deliberately in the face of temptation from temporary jobs in industry," the educator said. "Eliminated will be many of those who have gone to college simply because it was the thing to do, or because they had nothing else to do."

The students who go to college this fall will have new standards of values for their work. Mathematics, history, geography, languages, political science, to mention only a few courses, will take on a new significance.

New Values Apparent

"Students are seeing all about them evidence that courses formerly taken reluctantly as required subjects are now regarded as vital to national defense."

Dr. Bevis said that there is hardly a course in the college catalogue which doesn't contribute something to an understanding, and perhaps a solution, of the world's ills. He also believes college students have become factors in long-time national defense.

"The nation needs individuals in its armed services and defense industries, but it also needs intelligent leadership and trained professional people in years to come," he declared. "This in all probability will be a long-time emergency and we must prepare for that eventually."

"Although we have a shortage of trained men and women in many lines—engineers, physicians, surgeons, dentists, veterinarians, nurses, agriculturalists, biologists, geologists, geographers, meteorologists, and others."

More Stress On Training

"The government is appealing to colleges to produce more persons trained along those lines. It is encouraging young people to take up these studies by authorizing their deferment from Selective Service."

Dr. Bevis regards the present crisis as a challenging one to advisers of youth as well as to students themselves. He says it is imperative that every young person survey his capabilities with the help of advisers.

"We in the United States shrink from the term 'planned economy' as smacking too much of dictatorship," Dr. Bevis pointed out. "Yet it is obvious that the more we can do to guide young men and women into lines which will produce their best effort, the more we will be doing to insure their happiness and contribute to our national welfare."

TO HAVE WEINER ROAST

Members of the Business and Professional Women's Club will have a weiner roast at Cloverdale Park, Monday evening, at 6:30 o'clock.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

- Which is the gracious way of paying a woman a compliment, "Your new permanent certainly is nice" or "Your hair looks lovely?"
- Is it good manners for the person who is acting as host to kick about prices in a restaurant or argue with a cab driver over the fare?
- Should one who is lurching or dining with others read mail at the table?
- Is it in the best of taste to fill the living room of the house with photographs of the family?
- Is it considered good taste to use artistic photographs instead of paintings or etchings in decorating a room?

What would you do if—

Your young man is going away to another city and you would like for him to take your photograph—

- Give it to him?
- Wait for him to ask for it?
- Ask for his picture, thinking that he will then ask for yours?

Answers

- "Your hair looks lovely."
- No. Very bad manners.
- No. An important message may be read in the presence of others if one asks "Do you mind?"
- It is better to put them in rooms used just by the family.
- Certainly.

Best "What Would You Do?" solution—(b).

WANTED:
substitute for Advertising is there any cheaper way to make sales than by advertising?

If so, the people who pay for advertising today would like to know what it is.

After all, they are experts at bringing down costs. And that's what brings down prices.

The best proof that advertising is the cheapest way to find customers is—so many people use it successfully.

McKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By William E. McKenney
America's Card Authority.

Our foursome stopped at Phoenix, Ariz., on our transcontinental bridge tour. I was pleasantly surprised at the large number of fine bridge players there. We visited with Vinton Hammels, who has come to Asbury Park, N. J., several times to participate in the summer session of the national tournament.

In our conversation with him, the theory of weak no trumps again came up. Hammels was immediately interested in the idea. He loves to bid. I recall a psychic bid that won

MUSTANG BOYS' CLUB COLUMN

Just a little problem in arithmetic: Divide the number of teeth in a dog's mouth by the number of keys to Bald Pat's. Multiply result by the number of toes on a horse. Divide by the number of tentacles on a devil fish and multiply by the number of buttons on a sailor's pants. Add the number of teeth in the upper jaw of a cow and then "holter" out the answer. Show ticket to first boy bringing the correct answer. Only one guess.

In accordance with the yearly custom, the Mustang Boys Club will be closed until October. This will permit the boys to concentrate on getting ready for school. Also the directors will be preparing fresh new programs and activities. The Mustang Mustangs, too, will come back refreshed to a whole of an interesting fall set-up. There may be a few surprises. Boys who are air-minded no doubt will be interested in aerial or aviation football. Inventories are being taken. New balls of all kinds are being ordered. New and unusual games are being built. We hope this fall and winter will present something a little different in the fun and progress.

In the meantime, watch this column for an occasional chat.

Mrs. Autry Selects Career On Ranch Home

CLEVELAND, O. (UP) — Mrs. Gene Autry, wife of the singing cowboy, has a career—being Mrs. Gene Autry.

The wife of a celebrity, the tiny brown-haired Mrs. Autry asserts, should be no different than anyone else's wife. Her duty, she feels, is to keep house and to be a companion for her husband.

Mr. and Mrs. Autry were in Cleveland for a week, where Gene was appearing as the star performer at a rodeo. They are both excited about their proposed "Melody Ranch," which they are planning to build on 1,000 acres near Hollywood.

"The house is going to be Gene's home entirely," she said. "Our house in Hollywood reflects my personality in decoration, but at the ranch it's going to be all boots and saddles."

Mrs. Autry's hobby is designing her clothes.

Group Works Against Farmer Extravagance

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Texas farmers won't repeat their extravagant spending of the World War if farm production credit associations are headed.

With farm prices again nearing parity, after many lean years, association officials sought to refresh memories of the post-war business collapse of 1921.

Thousands of farmers who had over-expanded their holdings in the hope of large and easy profits lost everything they had, the associations reminded. The error, it was said, should not be repeated.

Instead of spending their new revenues for fur coats, automobiles or more land, rural Texans should "use this opportunity to improve him a top score at Asbury Park a couple of years ago.

After West overcalled South's opening bid with one spade, Hammels, sitting North, saw that his length in diamonds depreciated the defensive value of the suit against spades. If South could not win two or three defensive tricks in spades, outside of diamonds, then East-West could make four spades. To discourage this adverse game bid, Hammels bid one no trump.

After East passed, South saw that North might actually have a spade stopper, plus good diamond support, but the opponents might have four or five solid hearts. So he conservatively bid two diamonds to pass, and East saw no reason to reopen the bidding.

Thus North and South stole a game from the opponents for a loss of only 50 points.

Calf Roping Is Event Of Skill

Calf roping contests at the Midland Rodeo are on the catch-can basis.

A calf darts out of a chute, feet flying and tail high. In pursuit tumbles a horse and rider. Out dismounts, runs over, throws it down, ties its feet and then puts up his hands in an "all through" signal.

Calf roping is a contest of skill and one of the most popular on the program. Two loops are permitted. Should a rider miss with both he must retire. Roping a calf without releasing loop from the hand is not permitted. The rope must be on the calf when the roper gets his hand on the animal.

The contestant must adjust the rope and reins in a manner that will prevent the horse from dragging the calf.

Participants may carry two lariats ropes and two tie ropes but they cannot receive any outside assistance.

The calf jerks around. The roper flicks a lariat rope and down swish assistance.

SERIAL STORY

WANT-AD ROMANCE

BY TOM HORNER

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: The pretty, green-eyed girl knew the young man was no park bench loafer, sensed he was a job-seeker like herself since both were studying the want ad columns as they sat on the same seat in the park. It seemed quite natural that she should listen to his story of how he, Ted Andrews, super-salesman, had lost his job with Ace-High Card Table Co. who his need for a job led him to seek tables one above the other and then climb on top of the stack ended in a crash that injured a few bystanders. It seemed even more natural to tell her how she had worked for a doctor in dowstate Sumner for five years, living with her aunt and uncle after her mother died and giving them everything she earned for room and board. "I'm looking for my Dad," she said, explaining her mother had left him because he was an impractical inventor. "Tim Donovan is his name." "He was planning to build a factory here," then Ted Andrews thrust the paper under her nose. A want ad sought Katie Donovan.

CHAPTER II

WANTED—INFORMATION concerning the whereabouts of Katie Donovan, 23, daughter of Tim and Emily Donovan. Ten dollars will be paid to person providing address. Notify MacLeod, Goldberg and Flynn, attorneys-at-law. Box 1114, city.

KAY DONOVAN read it again and again.

"Why . . . why, they're looking for me!"

"Your mother's name was Emily?" Ted demanded.

"Yes. But what?"

"Don't ask questions!" Ted was business-like. "Listen, I need that 10 bucks, and how I need 10 bucks! Here, you write the name of your hotel—here, in a hotel, aren't you?—here. Then go to your room and stay there. I'll report to the MacLeod, etc., outfit where you can be found. I get the cash. The lawyers get you. Maybe you're an heiress."

KAY had on her newest and best dress when the telephone rang to announce that MacLeod and company were in the lobby.

"Send them right up."

There was a knock on her door within two minutes. She opened it to admit the trio of attorneys.

"Miss Donovan? I'm MacLeod," the Scotch burr rolled out.

"I'm Goldberg."

"I'm Flynn."

She liked them immediately. "I'm Katie Donovan," she echoed.

"I knew your dad, well, Miss Donovan. He was a fine man, and a smart man. We were friends for years."

"We handled all your late father's legal affairs," Goldberg put in.

"My . . . my late— Is Dad dead?"

"He is that, girl," Flynn's arm was around her shaking shoulders. "Two weeks ago it happened. It was his heart."

He waited until her sobbing almost ceased. "Tim wanted you to have everything he had. . . ."

"Everything—" Her surprise showed through tear-wet eyes. "But Dad had nothing. . . . He was an inventor . . . a failure."

"Not entirely, lass," MacLeod interrupted. "He had one successful invention, a measuring gadget that the automobile manufacturers found handy. They bought the patent."

"Then Dad died rich?"

"Not exactly." It was Goldberg's turn. "In spite of our advice to the contrary, your father insisted on investing the profits from this invention in a factory to produce his latest product. And it did not sell."

Kay sat down, waited for the three lawyers to pull chairs close to her.

"Now tell me quickly, do I have to go to work or do I have money?"

"You have a million cans of Wondrosoap, an idle factory, two tons of raw materials, and $428.85 cash, less legal fees," Goldberg enumerated.

Illustrated by John Sunley

"I'm not going to sell," said Kay. "Either the factory or the Wondrosoap."

"Not going to sell?" said Flynn. "You can't do it, child." But he had run into the set Donovan jaw before. He knew when it was time to stop arguing.

THEY told her everything then, the three of them, talking in turn for more than an hour. Everything she had wanted to know about her father, his work, his success and his failure; how they had tried to find her in Sumner and how Uncle Ralph had told them that he was glad to be rid of her, before he discovered that Tim Donovan had left a small estate. Unable to find her registered in any of the larger hotels, they tried advertising and a young man named Andrews had finally led them to her.

They drove her down to the factory. It was, as Tim Donovan had dreamed it would be, a small brick building a short distance from the city. There was an acre or so of land surrounding it.

They took her through the factory with its huge copper and steel mixing vats, a canner and a conveyor belt leading into the warehouse. There were long stacks of boxes there, each containing 144 small, circular cans of Wondrosoap.

"What is this Wondrosoap?" Kay asked.

"Your father called it an all-purpose cleaner," MacLeod explained. "The label says it will clean clothes, machinery, wallpaper, floors, and cut road sump from automobiles. You can wash windows with it, and in a pinch, grease an axle with it. . . ."

"But your father priced it too high," Goldberg added. "He wanted to sell it at 50 cents a can and there wasn't enough of the cleaner at that price to get many customers. . . ."

"But he liked to make it, he and Old Hans Stadt, his chemist. They kept turning it out, constantly experimenting and improving it," Flynn supplied. "The two of them lived here and ran the factory by themselves. That is, until Hans went out to west Texas to visit his grandsons. Tim worked on alone until he died."

"He came to the office that day all excited. I've got it now," he said. "If what I plan works, little Kay will have all the money she can spend." But we never found out what his plan was. I came down here the following morning and found him."

"I would suggest you try to sell this property," MacLeod began.

"That's really the smart thing to do, Miss Kay," Flynn advised. "I think that is what your father would want you to do. Take what you can get in cash. It should amount to $5000. You can live on that for a while."

"I think you all are grand, loyal friends of Dad's and of mine," Kay told them. "But I'm not going to sell either the factory, or the Wondrosoap."

"You're not going to sell— They got together on that. 'But you—a girl. . . . ' The property will depreciate in value!" "You can't give Wondrosoap away, much less sell it. 'How are you going to live on $400?' 'Four hundred and twenty-eight dollars and 85 cents.'"

Kay waited until they stopped firing questions at her, then told them her plans.

"I'm going to live right here at the factory, just as Dad did. On $428.85 I can manage for some time. I'm not used to having much money. I'll be safe here and if I get lonesome I can take in a roommate, some working girl with a car."

"And—I'm going to sell Wondrosoap!"

Flynn had run into the set Donovan jaw before. He knew when it was time to stop arguing.

FIRST, I'll need a roommate who will keep the books and be secretary and general helper," Kay decided. "Advertise for her, tell her to come out here for a personal interview. If they won't come out, they don't want the job. I want a girl like myself, jobless, friendless—but I have three good friends now," she added, smiling.

"You can interview any girl I pick, check over her family to be sure she's all right."

"Then, I want a salesman with ideas—the best salesman in town. Find Ted Andrews."
