Hutch Reynolds latches onto some salvageable debris 10 days following the tornado that struck Monahans April 19. In the background, city crews continue with clean-up operation.

Monahans' folks working hard, stoically to recoup

By ED TODD

MONAHANS — Monahans folks are taking a stoic approach to the clean-up and repair ordeal that followed the havoc that the tornado brought a cross-section of this town at noon on April 19.

"It came at a good time," insurance agent Hutch Reynolds said 10 days after the funnel made a northeasterly swath through this city of about 8,350 people.

In its wake, this whirlwind of a tornado left an estimated $3.7 million in damaged and destroyed houses, buildings and automobiles.

No one died in the path of the tornado. No one was seriously injured.

"Nearly everybody was out to lunch" when the hovering tornado finally descended onto the city, said Reynolds.

"They had advanced warning. Some watched it about a half hour before it hit."

More than 10 days have passed since the tornado hit town.

And Reynolds was tossing salvageable debris — lumber — from the shopping center pavement and into the bed of a pickup truck.

His office building at the Monahans Center was damaged beyond repair; so were most of the other businesses that made up the center.

City crews were picking up the debris along the shopping center strip.

Across the street is the Ward Memorial Hospital. Fate of the $2.5 million building is yet undetermined. It may be renovated or it may be partially razed and rebuilt. This 49-bed hospital was struck by the tornado at 12:36 p.m. that day. The hospital may have sustained $1.75 million in damages. Its patients were transferred to hospitals elsewhere. Emergency facilities, however, are still in use.

All told, the tornado damaged 188 houses, 22 businesses, and destroyed six houses, 13 businesses, seven mobile homes and many more vehicles.

A convalescent home, though still standing, sustained $200,000 in damages. It may be razed.

Minutes after the tornado had ceased to be, friends, neighbors and even strangers were helping one another clean up the havoc wrought by the storm.

Many businesses destroyed or heavily damaged by the tornado were relocated and doing business again within two days.

"I think that it speaks well of the American spirit," said Monahans

Mayor R. J. "Dick" Hoyer.

In the week following the tornado, Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe declared Monahans a "disaster area," noted the mayor.

Such a labeling will enable businesses and home owners to get low-interest federal loans to rebuild and to repair homes, offices and buildings, the mayor said.

There will be no doing out of government funds, Hoyer said. Only loans.

Hoyer said he was impressed with the attitude of the people most hurt by the tornado.

"Their first reaction was 'Thank God nobody was killed,'" Hoyer said.

"Then they'd say, 'Boy, I sure got my house clobbered.'"

That no one was killed when the

Wild well tamed; slick discounted

By JOHN VINOCUR

STAVANGER, Norway (AP) — Paul "Red" Adair and his Texan troubleshooters capped the out-of-control Ekofisk offshore oil well Saturday. Experts said the geyser of oil was choked off before it severely damaged the environment of the North Sea.

In a mood of mounting tension and frustration — and after four futile tries to seal the well — Adair's team slid steel discs called "blind rams" through the powerful stream of oil, clamped a four-ton "stopper" apparatus over the wellhead, and then pumped mud into the well to offset the upward pressure, estimated at 3,300 pounds per square inch.

A single spark during the risky procedure could have touched off a fire of immense proportions in the giant midsea oil field.

The fountain of oil, spouting for eight days from the Bravo drilling platform, had dumped an estimated 8.8 million gallons of crude oil into the middle of the North Sea.

The slick trailing away from the Bravo platform stretched over 170 square miles of the sea, but officials said less than 25 per cent of that area was completely covered with oil.

A visiting U.S. Coast Guard advisory mission recommended Saturday that no American equipment be sent for the clean-up operation because wave action and evaporation would virtually eliminate all signs of a slick within three days.

"I don't consider it poses significant ecological problems," said Lt. Cmdr. Frank Boersma, one of the chief advisers.

An official of the Norwegian government environmental agency said dead birds had been sighted in the area but that the slick's effect "will be surprisingly small."

The spillage exceeded the 7.6 million gallons that flowed into the North Atlantic off Massachusetts from the grounded supertanker Argo Merchant last December. The worst tanker spill on record was 29 million gallons from the Torrey Canyon, wrecked off southeastern England in 1967.

"I think we would have been in real trouble if we hadn't succeeded today," Charles Lane, a Phillips official, told a reporter.

If the Adair team had failed to seal off the well, the alternative would have been to dig another well to divert pressure from the runaway Bravo 14 well. This would have taken more than a month to accomplish.

Norwegian Prime Minister Odvar Nordli sent a telegram here after Saturday's success saying he was "happy and relieved."

But the consequences of the blowout on the infant North Sea oil industry, the cost to Phillips, and the cause of the accident remained unknown.

The Norwegian government, which shut down the entire Ekofisk field Thursday because of what it called a safety risk, has begun an investigation of the cause, including the possibility of criminal negligence. Circumstances surrounding the blowout suggest human error as a factor in the rupture of the wellhead.

Phillips spokesman said the company had received permission from the government to resume production in the Ekofisk field late Saturday.

Auto tax disliked in Texas

Most Texans disapprove of President Jimmy Carter's plan to tax cars that do not get good gas mileage, in part because they do not feel safe in small, compact cars on highways.

Staples and Staff Inc. marketing and research firm reached that conclusion as the result of a statewide survey conducted during the week of April 18 to 23. That was the week in which President Carter revealed his energy policy.

Carter to go to London for meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will meet in London with leaders of England, France and West Germany in "a very private meeting" after the economic summit next weekend to talk about political matters related to Berlin, the White House said Saturday.

The meeting May 9 is seen as an opportunity to talk about a variety of issues beyond those directly related to the divided city inside the East German borders. Carter is then scheduled to fly to Geneva to talk with President Hafez Assad of Syria.

The President disclosed the meeting in London to the directors of the Radio Television News Directors Association at a question-and-answer session he had with them at the White House on Friday. A transcript of the meeting was released by the White House Saturday.

The President also said that while in London he would hold bilateral meetings with most European leaders.

The President flies to London on Thursday. The seven-nation economic summit conference will be held next Saturday and Sunday. He returns to Washington Tuesday, May 10, after a meeting of the 15 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Carter told the broadcast officials that in addition to economic questions, topics likely to be discussed during his European visit would include human rights, nuclear proliferation, relations with the less developed countries, possible approaches to a strategic arms limitation agreement and the stalemated Geneva talks aimed at bringing about a reduction in European troops.

"I think we will form personal friendships and interrelationships that will stand us in good stead in a time of trouble, of crisis," he said.

The Berlin situation is seen as an opportunity for a minisummit in which the United States and the leaders of the three major European powers can get together in a group smaller than the 15-member NATO gathering.

But the topic at the center will be Berlin, although there are no burning questions relating to it.

During the Friday meeting, the President said:

—Water shortages may become "a chronic problem";

—He did not have any alternative to his proposal for a tax on gasoline to encourage energy conservation;

—His administration will put into effect by the end of fiscal 1977 (Sept. 30) plans to reduce the number of reports required by the government;

—When he and Congress disagree "it is better for me to maintain my position even though it might create some disharmony within the Congress, if I think I am right."

The President said polls showed that fewer than 50 per cent of the American people believed there was a serious energy problem "before I went public with our analysis and our proposals."

He said that now as many as 70 to 80 per cent of the American people agree that the country faces a serious crisis if it does not take action. He did not offer any other details about the polls.

'Christmas in April' propelling spirit of giving into the spring

By JIM STEINBERG

"When I bought this place I knew it needed a lot of work. I just didn't have time to do it before I lost my health," Mrs. Edna Deckard said Saturday afternoon.

As Mrs. Deckard spoke while sitting on a living room chair, hammers and saws clamored in the background. It was "Christmas in April."

For the fifth year in a row, church organizations, civic clubs, service clubs and individuals united Saturday for a volunteer housing rehabilitation program sponsored by the Human Relations Council of Midland.

Scores of Midlanders banded together to install new roofs, plug holes in walls and make other improvements in houses for the elderly and handicapped who are unable to do the work or afford to hire others to do it for them.

For Mrs. Deckard, "Christmas in April" meant a new roof, glass windows where boards had been and, best of all, an evaporative cooler unit to make summer a lot more pleasant.

Living alone at 938 N. Weatherford St., Mrs. Deckard said she has been unable to work or do simple repairs since losing her health six years ago.

"But things are beginning to look up for me," Mrs. Deckard said.

Outside, Jack Swallow of the First Presbyterian Church group and Steve Partlow from a Young Life group were among a group of about seven working in the humid afternoon sun.

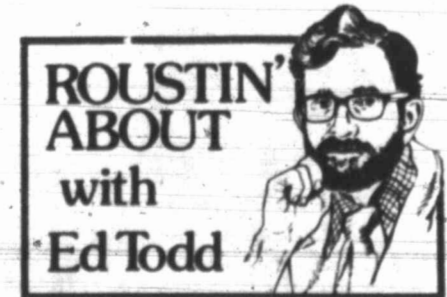

In a four-room house at 911 N. Lamesa Rd., a group from the Midland Kiwanis Club was at work installing a hot water heater in the home of Mrs. Josephina Losoya. There, four children, aged 8 to 17, and their mother have lived without hot water for three years.

"When we bought the house nine years ago, we kept having trouble with the heater. Then it caused a fire and we had to turn it off. Since then we had to boil water on a stove," Mrs. Losoya said. Her 15-year-old son, Freddy, interpreted his mother's Spanish.

Besides a water heater, the Losoya family would get roof repairs, new doors and inside wall repair. Hank Krusekopf, one of the volunteers, said.

Down the road a bit, a brigade of volunteers from Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church was hard at work, fixing the roof and siding of Luis Ramos' home, 1008 N. Lamesa Rd.

As the 95-year-old Ramos eyed the workers, who ranged in age from 7 to about 40, one could see the tremencivilized spot on the crust of the earth could be.

Anyway, that's what a Monahans partisan, Pearson Cooper, says — in so many words.

"We have nothing to sell but our friendliness," says Cooper, who publishes the twice-weekly Monahans News.

That counts for a lot... considering.

"We have no big trees, no rivers, no lakes or a lot of grass... What this flat West Texas town of 8,350 or so souls does have beside a generous touch of the oil and gas industry is the oil American community spirit.

Long live it and the good people of Monahans!

"In times of crisis," says Cooper,

Economy up; so are food prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government economists say the economy is perking up, but consumer food prices are increasing faster than expected while the prices farmers get for raw products rose for the fifth consecutive month. Food prices may average 4 to 6 per cent higher this year than last, the Agriculture Department said Friday.

It put the blame mostly on higher coffee prices and a winter freeze that damaged citrus crops. The department's Crop Reporting Board also said prices farmers receive for raw products rose 1.5 per cent from March 15 to April 15, the fifth consecutive monthly increase. Meanwhile, the March index of economic indicators was up 1.4 per cent, the highest gain in 20 months, according to Commerce Department figures. Credit for the strong showing went mostly to an increase in new orders for consumer products and materials. The index, which consists of 12 separate economic statistics, is designed to forecast future trends in the nation's economy.

Panama forces 'near the top'

By HAL MOORE

BALBOA, Canal Zone (AP) — The U.S. troops defending the Canal Zone "are very close to being the top of the U.S. military" and are prepared to face any threat to the waterway, says their commanding general. Lt. Gen. Dennis P. McAuliffe said his 10,000-member force of Army, Navy and Air Force troops are better prepared for an emergency than at any time since the 1964 anti-American riots, which left 23 persons dead.

The force, known as the U.S. Southern Command, has become a major issue in negotiations between the United States and Panama on a new treaty governing the status of the 500-square-mile Canal Zone. Talks on the new treaty resume in Washington on May 10.

A Panamanian spokesman has said the United States has agreed to withdraw all its troops from the zone by the year 2000, but U.S. officials have declined to confirm that report. The 1903 treaty gave the United States control of the zone "in perpetuity."

Bhutto: Vance asks talk

By BARRY SHLACHTER

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (AP) — Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who has accused the United States of financing antigovernment agitation here, claimed Saturday that Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance has offered to open a "secret dialogue" with him.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman declined immediate comment on Bhutto's statement. The U.S. government has denied any role in Pakistan's internal troubles.

Bhutto made the statement after security forces sealed off Rawalpindi and prevented supporters of the opposition Pakistan National Alliance (PNA) from staging a planned march on his official residence.

Inside the city, police and progovernment youths clashed with antigovernment demonstrators, who threw bricks and rocks at police, tried to barricade a main road, attacked a bank and set fire to a police station and post office.

Sources said eighteen persons, including six policemen, were injured. In eight weeks of often violent antigovernment demonstrations, more than 200 persons have been killed.

The PNA, which has organized the protests, claims Bhutto's Pakistan Peoples' party retained its parliamentary majority through massive rigging of the March 7 national elections. The PNA has demanded that Bhutto resign and new elections be held.

Witnesses said Bhutto, standing in an open jeep before some 2,000 supporters, waved what he said was a letter from Vance offering to open talks.

The prime minister told the crowd he wanted the "affirmation of the masses" before replying to Vance.

The crowd cheered in approval.

Last Thursday, Bhutto told parliament his government was the victim of an "international conspiracy" financed by the United States. U.S. officials and PNA leaders denied the claim.

After Saturday's speech, Bhutto met with the Pir of Pagara, a religious leader and acting PNA president who was detained by police at a nearby hotel. After meeting with the Pir, Bhutto said he was still hopeful of reaching a settlement with the PNA.

Opposition sources said Bhutto has offered to call new elections if the PNA halts demonstrations and drops its demand that he step down. He also offered to organize an interim government that would include PNA members, they said.

Outside Rawalpindi, units of the police, army, federal security force, and frontier constabulary manned checkpoints to prevent the PNA from staging the planned "long march" on Bhutto's residence.

Opposition sources said hundreds of buses and trucks were turned back, and vehicles registered in other cities were not allowed to enter Rawalpindi.

Indian president ends 24-hour nerves battle

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — President B. D. Jatti Saturday ended a 24-hour battle of nerves with the new Indian government and agreed to dissolve nine state assemblies still controlled by former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party.

Jatti, himself a member of the Congress party, approved nine proclamations dissolving the assemblies and clearing the way for new state elections in early June.

Prime Minister Morarji Desai's cabinet had ordered the president to sign the proclamations Friday night, but Jatti unexpectedly delayed carrying out the cabinet's orders, which the constitution requires him to do.

Jatti's hesitation led to a tense day of bargaining with the new Janata party government, which ousted the Congress party in the March parliamentary elections. The government will now take over the administration of the nine states until the elections.

The states, in north and central India, voted heavily for the Janata party in the national elections, but the state legislatures remained under Congress party control. Desai's government claims the Congress party administrations have been repudiated by the people in the nine states and that their continuance in power poses a serious threat to law and order. The Congress in turn has accused the central government of attempting to topple duly elected state governments through unconstitutional means.

Oil smear near Key Largo said to be breaking up

By MARTIN MERZER

MIAMI (AP) — A 60-mile-long smear of oil which floated dangerously close to the popular tourist beaches of the Florida Keys and the continent's only living coral reef began breaking up Saturday, still safely at sea, Coast Guard officials said.

But clean-up crews were kept nearby in case remnants of the brown stain began washing onshore, and Coast Guard vessels and airplanes launched a search for the tanker responsible for the polluting mess. "All major concentrations are gone," Coast Guard spokesman Dave Tait said Saturday. "Right now, it's just a light sheen on the water." He said the spill was being broken up by waves, currents and the wind. Some fragments of the spill were moving closer to shore, he said, but it appeared that none of it had damaged beaches or the underwater reefs of delicate, living coral.

The river of oil was discovered Friday. It extended from off Key Largo in the northern Keys to near Marathon, about 50 miles northeast of Key West.

The oil, ranging in concentration from thick globules to a light sheen, was first found seven miles from the nearest shore, but only two miles from some off-shore coral reefs.

The reefs, formed by billions of tiny animals, are protected by federal and state law against collectors who have stripped many of the jewel-like formations from the area.

Tait said the light sheen of oil apparently floated over some of the reefs without damaging them.

Nixon could be facing crisis

NANCY COLLINS and HAYNES JOHNSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Richard M. Nixon faces another crisis this week, one of his own making and one from which he profits personally. He returns to public view Wednesday night in the first of a series of televised interviews with David Frost and answers carefully plotted questions about his Watergate role.

Frost's clear strategy, as shown in internal memoranda and preliminary scripts of the Watergate show obtained by The Washington Post, was deliberately to confront Nixon with new and damaging information. The program is designed to lead Nixon on and trap him into admissions of guilt or at least concessions of error. Nixon is reported to be receiving $650,000 for his interviews.

"We looked upon the Watergate taping as the trial Nixon never had," said Robert Zelnick, editor in chief of the Frost production team. "We tried to look at ourselves as senior litigation partners in a law firm. But we knew we could ask questions and draw legal conclusions at times that a prosecutor can't draw in court. We knew we could use certain internal legal analyses and blast him with it. We were in close touch, you know, with many of the people who had prosecuted the Watergate trials."

How well Frost's plan works will not be known until Wednesday. But the way the program was put together belies earlier published reports about it being a "soft" encounter.

There is also nothing soft about the merchandising of the Nixon program. It's hard-sell all the way. As Nixon prepares to enter our living rooms via TV for the first time after nearly three years of exile, his appearance already is generating headlines, news leaks and cover stories.

Out in California, Time Magazine has the inside track, but Newsweek Magazine is standing close by. One of Time's reporters, John Stacks, has had access to the inner workings of the show. He reportedly is being given advance Nixon material. Newsweek, show sources say, also will get a share of the tidbits. And Mike Wallace of CBS's 60 Minutes also has been given an inside look, it is said.

As an exercise in media hype, Nixon's emergence from the shadows of San Clemente is a classic in the genre of promotion.

Police count on report, probe to clear officer

BALCH SPRINGS, Tex. (AP) — Police are counting on a medical examiner's report and a grand jury investigation to clear a fellow officer who shot and killed a Balch Spring resident after the man pointed an unloaded rifle at him.

Police Chief Don Young said Tommy Winn became the first officer in the Dallas suburb's history to draw his pistol and kill someone in the line of duty.

Winn shot Frank Sanford, 50, late Thursday night after chasing a Mexican-American youth into Sanford's backyard while answering a complaint.

Police reports said Sanford appeared at his back door armed with a rifle, cursing and threatening to kill the officers. However, Sanford's neighbor, John Ansley said he heard his friend cry "Don't shoot" seconds before gunfire erupted.

"I'm almost sure he said it," said Ansley. "He said 'Don't shoot' then 'No.' Then, the shooting started. I've lived next door to Frank for nine years, and what they (police) are saying about him just isn't true. That man never did curse."

SOUTHSIDE LIONS CLUB members display brooms, mops and light bulbs which they will offer to the public in the club's annual door-to-door sale throughout the city, beginning Monday. Proceeds

Demonstrators protest power plant

SEABROOK, N.H. (AP) — Carrying backpacks and sleeping bags, about 2,500 men and women defied no trespassing signs Saturday and staged a sit-in at the site of a proposed nuclear power plant on New Hampshire's seacoast.

as they filed into the 700-acre site, the demonstrators camped on a dusty parking lot adjacent to a fenced-in 40-acre enclave where more than 300 police officers and a small contingent of National Guardsmen kept watch.

Earlier in the day, Gov. Meldrim Thomson told reporters that for the time being no protesters would be arrested unless they tried to penetrate the fenced-in perimeter where two warehouses and construction machinery are located.

Leaders of the Clamshell Alliance, which organized the demonstration, said there would be no attempt to breach the six-foot fence.

Cuban group in Florida

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A Cuban delegation to an international citrus symposium arrived here Saturday, a day earlier than previously announced, avoiding a confrontation with anti-Castro demonstrators.

A State Department spokesman said it is believed to be the first trip to Florida by Cuban officials since Fidel Castro took over 18 years ago. The spokesman added the visas were granted as part of the Carter Administration's policy to relax travel restrictions between the countries.

The Bay of Pigs Veterans Association in Miami announced earlier that it planned to demonstrate Sunday when the Cuban group had been scheduled to arrive.

A spokesman for the Cuban group said that it was made up of "technical experts and scientists" and that the delegation could not comment on the possibilities of trade between the United States and Cuba.

The Cubans are among 700 citrus experts from 40 nations expected at the week-long symposium.

Texas area forecast

North Texas: Mostly cloudy and mild with showers and thundershowers Sunday. Rain ending over west portions Sunday and over east portions Monday. Decreasing cloudiness in the west Sunday night and central and east portions Monday. Continued mild. Lows Sunday night 58 to 61. Afternoon highs 70 to 80.

South Texas: Thundershowers mainly in the past portion early Sunday. Partly cloudy west to mostly cloudy elsewhere Sunday, becoming partly cloudy Monday. No important temperature changes. Lows Sunday night 58 to 61. Highs Sunday 77 to 81 and Monday 82 to 90.

Variable mostly southeast winds 10 to 15 knots through Sunday night. Gusty during the afternoon. Scattered thundershowers, a few locally severe, through Sunday morning. Small craft should exercise extreme caution. Seas four to six feet. Winds and seas higher in thundershowers.

Precipitation chance to return on Monday

Friday's turbulent weather gave way to clear spring weather Saturday but rain and thundershowers may return to the Permian Basin Monday.

The weatherman said skies should be clear to partly cloudy today and tonight, but there should be considerable cloudiness with a chance of showers and thundershowers Monday.

The area is ahead of its annual rainfall for the year, with 3.01 inches, 42 inch above the area's average rainfall at the end of April. This year's "April showers" brought .37 inch more rain than usual for the month, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

The high today and Monday should be in the low 80s and the low tonight in the upper 50s. Winds are expected to be light and variable.

Saturday's high was 85 degrees and the low was 51 degrees.

Clear skies and warm temperatures were reported Saturday night in Lamesa, Big Spring, Andrews, Crane, Stanton and Rankin. All but Lamesa and Rankin had rain Friday night, and Andrews, Big Spring and Crane had some hail Friday night.

Rain was back in the Texas forecast for all but the western tip of the state Saturday as severe weather moved into the state, the Associated Press said.

Showers and thundershowers were evident from the lower Gulf Coast late Saturday morning north through San Antonio, Waco and east beyond Dallas.

Weather forecasters issued a tornado warning for Cameron County after a tornado was spotted north of Brownsville. There were no reports of the tornado touching down.

Marine warnings were also in effect through most of the morning for boating enthusiasts in Southeast Texas and especially in the Corpus Christi area.

In addition to the heavy rains, the National Weather Service reported wind gusts moving inland near the resort community approaching 20 miles per hour.

The heaviest rainfall recorded in the 24-hour period ending Saturday was between Waco and Stephenville where amounts of 2 to 4 inches fell. Tiny Morgan, Tex., just west of Lake Whitney recorded 3.40 inches.

tornado made its swath through town may have been more than luck, Hoyer indicated.

"The tornado was kind enough to come the same way the other one (the simulated tornado) did" about a year ago. "It came within a block," he said.

Last May, the Texas National Guard here conducted a simulated emergency during a "hoax" tornado. Emergency agencies were in on the "dry run."

"The simulation was good," Hoyer said.

"Because of that training, the city police and employees, the county employees, sheriff (deputies) and volunteer firemen, the Texas State National Guard... and all the people (in on the training)... did all of those things that they were supposed to do."

That, possibly, was the life-saver.

The April 19 storm was the first severe storm to leave a part of the city in wreckage, Hoyer said.

"In 1957, we had a high wind," he said. "It sure scared us, but did little, if any, damage. (It was) nothing like this."

What a way to be put on the map

"they come out to help whomever needs it."

And Cooper had evidence to back up his claim. A tornado tore through a cross-section of this town mid-way into the noon hour on April 19.

Houses, buildings, automobiles and all sort of belongings were left either damaged or virtually destroyed in the wake of the storm. There were no deaths or serious injuries as a result of the funnel's swath through town.

But there was a lot of helping-out about town.

"It was just a situation where the neighbors, friends and probably some 'enemies' all just pitched in to help anyone and everyone they could," Cooper said.

"There was no line drawn as far the rich or poor, the black or white."

"It really just was an open face of Monahans," he said.

Outside of its friendliness, Monahans does have enticing aspects. And Cooper has them listed right on the front page of his newspaper.

"THIS IS MONAHANS," says the spiel, called the ear.

"No Riots, No Floods, No Strikes, No Hurricanes, No Air Pollution, No Racial Problems."

"A GOOD PLACE FOR INDUSTRY."

Last April 19, Monahans also was "a good place" for tornadoes. Fact is, with that storm came nationwide news coverage for the town.

"It's not the kind of publicity you want," says Cooper, "but..."

But, at least millions of folks heard about this friendly town.

"If this sort of town, Cooper vows: "If you (stay long enough to) wear out a pair of shoes here, you'll never leave."

Texans disapprove of Carter's proposed tax on 'gas-guzzlers'

questioned disapprove of the car tax plan, with 36 per cent approving and 13 per cent undecided. But, Texans between 18 and 35 support the special tax by a 52 to 39 per cent margin. In contrast, residents over 55 disapprove of the tax by a 60 to 22 margin.

Residents of Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth are more inclined to support the tax than those of smaller cities and rural areas.

Today, 38 per cent of Texas car owners have large cars, with 41 per cent owning medium-size cars and 21 per cent small and compact cars, according to survey results. Among residents under 35, 30 per cent drive small cars, compared to only 18 per cent of those 35 and older. Forty per cent of those in the latter group drive large cars, compared to only 29 per cent of those under 35.

Only 33 per cent of those questioned feel safe driving small compact cars on state highways or city freeways. Among Texans now driving large cars, the percentage is even smaller, 14 per cent. Age also appeared to be a factor in this area, with 45 per cent of those under 35 feeling safe driving small cars on highways and freeways, compared to 26 per cent of those 35 and older.

If the price of gasoline rises to 75 cents per gallon, only 39 per cent would want to drive a smaller car, but if the price rose to $1 per gallon, that percentage would rise to 51 per cent, the survey showed.

Texas drivers who currently own medium-size cars are much more likely to drive smaller cars in the future than those who now own big cars.

Texans are almost evenly split among those who approve and disapprove of President Carter's handling of the nation's energy policy, with about one-third undecided on the issue, the survey indicated.

Thirty-seven per cent approve and 31 per cent disapprove. Greatest support for the President comes from the under 35 age group, with 48 per cent approval.

Only one Texan in five believes the United States is making progress in energy conservation, with twice as many believing the nation is losing ground.

Texans 50 and over are more inclined than any other group to believe the country is losing ground in energy conservation.

Those surveyed believe in large numbers that coal and nuclear and solar power are good sources of energy for the future.

Sixty per cent believe nuclear power would be a good source of energy in the future, but only 49 per cent would approve of using a nuclear reactor to produce power in their county.

College graduates were more likely to see nuclear power as a good source of energy and men were somewhat more likely than women to do so.

Those with the greatest reservations about construction of nuclear reactors in Texas were residents of the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, members of minority groups and people under 35 years of age.

Even more Texans, 76 per cent, saw coal as a good source of energy for the future. Those 55 and older have more confidence in coal for the future, with 86 per cent of that group believing it is a good source of energy.

There would seem, then, to be less opposition from Texans to utility companies converting to coal generation than to nuclear power.

Solar power is seen as a good source of energy for the future by 78 per cent of those surveyed.

On the topic of energy conservation, Texans are closely divided on whether or not utility companies should get into the business of insulating homes to conserve energy. The survey showed thirty-eight per cent think they should and 44 per cent think they should not, with 18 per cent undecided.

Only 54 per cent of those questioned realize they are paying considerably more for natural gas than their counterparts in other parts of the country.

Even among the college-educated, only 63 per cent realize they pay more for natural gas than people in most states.

Generally, Staples and Staff believes most people understand very little about the nation's energy situation. The survey results back that point of view, the researchers said.

Senate panel plans probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Intelligence Committee, concerned about the spread of atomic weapons, will investigate reports that 220 tons of uranium vanished from an ocean freighter nine years ago and ended up in a nuclear reactor in Israel.

According to published reports, the uranium probably is being used to fuel an Israeli nuclear power plant in the Negev Desert that produces enough plutonium each year to build a bomb of the size dropped on Nagasaki.

"The committee is interested in asking concerned agencies what they know about these reports," said a committee source. He said the panel wants to hear from the Central Intelligence Agency and the Energy Research and Development Administration, which monitors international movement of nuclear materials.

U.S. officials have refused to discuss the reports, which have been denied by the Israeli government.

The Los Angeles Times and The New York Times published stories Friday about the 1968 uranium incident. ABC News carried a similar report.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Quickly assisted

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do you think a person who has had no real medical training can actually help a heart attack victim? I've heard about the new resuscitation techniques, but I would like to know if they work out in practice when used by someone who is not a doctor or a nurse or a paramedic. If they are effective, what do you think is the best way to go about learning them? I am especially concerned about this right now because one of the men in our office had a heart attack on the street last Friday evening on his way home from work, and he died on his way to the hospital in the ambulance—not more than a quarter of an hour later.—Sid W.

Dear Sid: I think the latest methods of cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR for short) are extremely valuable and that the more people get trained in them, the better. There is a very good Norwegian study that was done showing how important immediate aid to a heart attack victim is. The survey covered 600 people whose hearts had suddenly stopped beating (cardiac arrest). When resuscitation techniques were applied by bystanders within one minute, the survival rate was 61 percent. But when aid awaited the arrival of an ambulance with medical personnel (the average time was eight minutes), only eight percent of the victims survived.

In other words, immediate amateur aid was seven or eight times more effective than professional assistance when the latter was delayed by as little as eight minutes. Instant action to get the heart pumping again is essential because the brain can't do without the blood's oxygen for more than a very few minutes.

Of course, the amateur must have some training. He should know CPR, which combines mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration with rhythmic external pressure on the heart. By far the best way to learn CPR is at classes given by experts. Your local chapter of the Red Cross or the American Heart Association or your neighborhood Fire Department can tell you where and when these are held.

Missing suspect held in Florida

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Vernon Eugene McManus, who failed to appear for his capital murder trial at Houston Monday, was arrested here Saturday, an FBI spokesman said.

Details of the arrest were not immediately available. Sources said the FBI agents were assisted by some Texas officers, including some Harris County deputies.

McManus, 33, of Baytown, was to appear in court at Houston Monday to face trial on charges in connection with the slaying last July of Paul Cantrell, 56, and his wife, Mary Cantrell, 48, of Baytown. McManus was free on $50,000 bond at the time he failed to appear.

Harris County officers said they found his bloodstained automobile on a lonely road in northeast Harris County last Sunday.

At the time the automobile was found, Sheriff Jack Heard said he did not rule out foul play, but "taking a powder is always a possibility."

Air show scheduled at Webb

BIG SPRING — An aerial demonstration by the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds will be one of the activities at an open house at Webb Air Force Base May 22.

Gates of the base will open to the public at noon and visitors may view several aircraft parked on the flight line and view exhibits in a large hangar nearby.

A ceremony at 1 p.m. at the flagpole near the wing headquarters building will mark the 25th anniversary of the base's being named for 1st Lt. James L. Webb Jr. Webb was a Big Spring native who died in service. His son and sister will participate in the ceremony.

Beginning at 1:30 p.m., the Big Spring High School band, will perform an open-air concert at the flight line.

The Thunderbirds demonstration will begin at 3 p.m. The open house officially closes at 4 p.m., but visitors may observe the departure of several of the visiting aircraft.

All open house activities are open to the public free of charge.

On Saturday, the base will host several hundred civil aircraft owners and pilots for a "fly-in" supporting the Air Force's Mid-Air Collision Avoidance Program. It is designed to enhance flying safety by providing civil pilots with an understanding of Webb's mission and operations.

Aircraft will arrive between 8:30 and 10:30 a.m. Saturday. The program will include a tour of the base, a no-host luncheon, and presentations on flying safety and crash survival. Activities will conclude at approximately 3 p.m.

Invitations have been mailed to all known pilots and aircraft owners within the counties surrounding Webb. More information is available from project officer Maj. Ed Griffin at the base. The "fly-in" is co-sponsored by the 78th Flying Training Wing and the Federal Aviation Administration.

Armed Forces Day will be observed officially May 21.

Showcase, handcraft fair set for senior citizens

Midland senior citizens will have a chance to learn all of the services available to older residents during the second annual senior services showcase from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 13 at Dellwood Plaza.

The showcase is held in conjunction with the Senior Citizens' Handcraft Fair and is sponsored by the First Christian Church senior services.

Held during the Senior Citizens' Month each year, the showcase attempts to acquaint Midlanders with the many organizations which provide a broad spectrum of services for older residents of the community. Thirteen agencies participated in last year's showcase.

The project was developed after a 1976 survey which showed that very few senior citizens were aware of the services available to them.

About 20 different agencies this year have prepared informative exhibits for the showcase. Fisher at 682-7577 for information.

Board should stress 'giving direction'

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

The school board needs to put more emphasis on giving policy direction to the administration and less on day-to-day operations, newly elected board president Johnny Warren said.

Warren was elected president unanimously at Tuesday's board meeting. He will serve for the next year.

He said public access to the board is needed, but parents with problems concerning the school district should follow a "chain of command," beginning with the teacher and principal involved.

"The teacher and the principal should be the foundation of the school system," Warren said. If the problem cannot be resolved at the school level, the next level should be the administration. The board should function only as "a court of last resort," he said.

Warren said he thinks some method should be found to keep the board from getting bogged down in specific complaints. "We hear the same things over and over," he said. Setting a time limit for persons speaking to the board would allow people to be heard but would force them to organize their thoughts before making a presentation.

"We may be a little too nice to the public," he said, at the expense of board efficiency. "The only time we ever see people is when they have a complaint."

Warren said board members need to be careful not to promise anybody that something will be done. With each of seven board members having only one vote, "we can't promise anybody anything," he said.

Although, "everyone in the community has some complaint about some phase of the school system," Midland has an outstanding school system when compared to other school districts, Warren said. "When our kids go away to college, they do very well."

Warren said the school district's approach to the business end of running the school system is professional.

Board members must rely on administrators to carry out board policy because "we're not professional educators," he said.

During the past year, Warren said, preoccupation with deriving a desegregation plan and the voting rights dispute with the U.S. Justice Department "took away from some of the things we could have accomplished."

He sees the coming year as one of implementing existing programs, rather than developing new ones. The board will be giving consideration to priorities of goals for the district, also, he said.

One goal which will receive high priority in the coming year is Midland High School expansion and the building of some facilities for Lee High School, Warren said.

Johnny Warren

He said all seven board members are committed to expanding Midland High's facilities. "We have to make Midland High a more attractive place." He said it is an excellent school but has a problem with facilities.

The community is not committed yet to expansion "because they're not aware of the problem," Warren said, so the first step will be public education about the problem.

He hopes the bond issue required for expansion will be less than $2 million, with part of the cost of the project to be met by proceeds from the sale of North Elementary School.

"I would like to see it (the bond election) next spring while we have a board that is united. That may be too early in order to get planning behind us, though," he said.

Warren views his business experience as his greatest asset to the board. All of the board members, he said, have talents to offer the community. "We really represent the community," he said, with a "tremendous cross-section" on the board.

Dallas book dealers report bolder buying of sex manuals

DALLAS (AP) — The "How To" sex manuals have left their dusty hiding place under the counter and now appear on the shelves of even the most conservative bookstores, say several Dallas book dealers.

"All the major book stores now have entire sections devoted to sex education," said Steve Matthews, buyer at Taylor's Books. "Not too many years ago, they had only one or two books."

"And the public's attitude towards the sexually oriented printed word has become much more bold. People used to be shy about buying the book, but not anymore."

But with the comparatively new acceptance comes another problem — which book to choose.

The all-time best sellers to date are "The Joys of Sex," and "Everything You Always Wanted to Know About Sex But Were Afraid to Ask." But the current popular choice, according to Matthews and book store manager Vern Hagar, are "The Hite Report" and "Love and Sex in Plain Language."

Hagar indicated the old taboos related to buying sex manuals often provided book store clerks with more than a few chuckles.

"They used to always buy a bigger book to hide it," he said. "And they wouldn't buy it at all if a woman was at the desk. A lot of people used to say they were buying it for a gift when they were really buying it for themselves."

"Now, some people buy them as wedding gifts, as a kind of joke on the bride and groom," said Hagar. "The boxed set of 'The Joy of Sex' and 'More Joy of Sex' is a very popular item for this."

Nathan Gilly, a clerk at Reader's World, said his sex manual customers range from housewives to businessmen plus a liberal sprinkling of young unmarried couples.

Of course, there are a lot of browsers.

"I don't think they're taking notes (while leafing through the manuals)," said Gilly. "But they'll see something and then buy the book or just hurry out and try to remember what they read."

Most other private and public buildings and their contents can be insured at comparable reasonable rates.

This is possible under the National Flood Insurance Program, a joint undertaking of the federal government and the insurance industry.

Floods can happen at any time, causing untold amounts of damage. Causes range from Spring runoff to Summer storms to Autumn hurricanes.

So be prepared. Check with your local property/casualty insurance agent. Find out if your area is eligible for the federal flood insurance program.

If so, apply for your flood insurance now. Because there's a mandatory 15-day waiting period before it goes into effect.

Registration packets with randomly assigned registration times will be mailed May 16 to all students currently registered or accepted for summer school.

Panel asks more data

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government agency wants to hear from the public before going ahead with plans to ban the sale of spackling compounds and artificial fireplace logs containing asbestos.

Prospective students planning to enroll for the first session should apply for admission and furnish the registrar with an official transcript from each college or university previously attended. Proof of immunization against diphtheria and tetanus within the past 10 years.

A divided Consumer Product Safety Commission voted 3-2 in favor of the waiting period on Friday, one day after concluding the products should be banned since asbestos has been shown to be a potential cancer-causing agent if inhaled.

Vickie Gomer, acting director of admissions at UTPB said prospective students should make application now, since it normally takes at least two weeks to get transcripts from other universities.

The commission's majority decided the situation was not severe enough to impose an immediate ban under the "imminent hazard" section of the law. It voted instead to receive public comment for 30 days before taking further action. The commission must act within 60 days after its proposed rule is published in the Federal Register.

Hospitals oppose plan

AUSTIN — The Texas Hospital Association has announced strong opposition to a proposal by President Jimmy Carter to limit increases in hospital costs to 9 per cent per year.

The final order of the commission will determine whether there will be recalls or refunds.

Patching compound sold to consumers is either premixed or in dry form for mixing with water. It is applied to sheet rock either to fill a hole or mask a seam and is sanded smooth. Asbestos fibers may be released into the air during mixing or sanding, the commission said.

The association said the plan would in itself increase costs because of increased paper work. Hospital costs of patients have risen because of increased costs in operation, said O. Ray Hurst, president of the Texas Hospital Association, and limited price increases could cause a drastic reduction in services hospitals offer.

Hearings scheduled

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Major Texas utilities are scheduled Monday to submit to the Public Utility Commission their plan to reconnect the Texas power grid.

On several occasions, commissioners have held hearings to consider the status of negotiations aimed at allowing the Lower Colorado River Authority, Austin and San Antonio to reconnect with Houston Lighting and Power Co. and the Texas Utilities subsidiaries.

The LCRA and the two cities have been connected with Central Power and Light Co. and West Texas Utilities since the Texas Interconnected System was disrupted last May.

The disconnection came after WTU began serving Oklahoma customers.

Eased controls to bring lower summer air fares

By HOWARD BENEDICT

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost-conscious vacationer who shops around can fly cheaper than ever this summer as airlines offer new fares to win the traveler's dollar.

If some proposals are approved, passengers soon may be able to fly cross-country for less than $100 and across the Atlantic for as low as $135.

More airlines are challenging a long-standing way of life in an industry strictly regulated by 40-year-old rules. The mood in Washington is toward deregulation — and by the end of the year Congress is expected to allow the airlines to compete by setting their own fares, within limits. That should produce even lower ticket prices over many routes.

In this atmosphere, the Civil Aeronautics Board, which dictates most air fares, has relaxed its rigid rules in some recent cases and approved fare cuts ranging up to 50 per cent.

As an example, starting Sunday, travelers on American, Trans World and United Airlines can fly round trip from New York to Los Angeles or San Francisco for fares ranging from $227 to $268, depending on the day of the week. The normal round-trip fare is $412.

Passengers must purchase tickets at least 30 days in advance and must stay at their destination between seven and 45 days.

The board said the fares will remain in effect for a year while it monitors their economic soundness.

Also being evaluated on a one-year trial are half-price "peanut" fares inaugurated Feb. 1 by Texas International Airlines. The name comes from the airline's policy of serving only light snacks, including peanuts, on the selected discount flights.

For example, Texas International passengers now can fly between Los Angeles and Albuquerque for $38 each way, exactly half the normal fare and about $15 cheaper than a bus ticket.

The scheme has worked so well that Texas International president Jim O'Donnell reported traffic increased 700 per cent in the first month on those flights affected — two flights a day on each of five routes.

The carrier's competitors on the routes have moved to match the fares.

The CAB does not regulate intrastate routes, and carriers operating strictly in Texas, such as Southwest, and in California, such as Pacific Southwest, have offered cut-rate fares for years, with considerable success.

The board also is considering applications from 10 airlines to provide service from Chicago's Midway airport to nearly 20 cities in the Midwest at savings ranging up to more than 50 per cent. One proposal would cut the price of a one-way Chicago-Detroit ticket from $39 to $15.

Another request before the board, from World Airways, is whether to allow fly charter passengers to fly coast-to-coast for less than $100.

William Hardenstine, senior vice president for sales, said passengers would not be paying for extravagant promotion efforts, empty seats, such frills as free champagne or movies, automated reservation services or elaborate food and beverage.

Instead, World will offer "a seat moving between two points." Hardenstine recently told a congressional committee.

World's wide-body jets would operate from underutilized airports — Baltimore and Newark on the east coast and Oakland and Ontario, Calif.

Pan American World Airways also has petitioned the board for authority to carry passengers on a yet-to-be-determined cut-rate fare between New York and Los Angeles or San Francisco.

The international carrier, which currently has no authority to fly domestic routes, operates weekly flights from New York to Australia with a stop on the West Coast.

The bonanza for budget-minded overseas travelers this summer is a new ticketing arrangement called Advanced Booking Charter, or ABC, which enables passengers to get low-cost round-trip air transportation with fewer restrictions than on any of the previous charter plans.

The CAB authorized ABC last October.

Seats must be purchased 30 to 45 days in advance, but there would be no prepaid hotel accommodations or rental car and no restrictions on the length of stay except for a seven-day minimum in European countries.

A round-trip ticket from New York to London would cost between $300 and $389, depending on the time of year and day of the week. Next cheapest New York-London fare is about $380 on a tour-group plan requiring ticket purchase 60 days in advance and a minimum stay of 10 days.

Not all foreign governments have agreed to accept ABC flights, so travelers should check with their travel agent when planning their trip abroad.

Trans-Atlantic rates will be even lower if the CAB approves a proposal by Britain's Laker Airways to operate no-reservation Skytrain service between New York and London.

Tickets would be sold at the airport six hours ahead of flight time on a first-come, first-served basis, meals would cost extra and there would be no travel agents to pay a commission to. Laker estimates it could fill 80 per cent of the seats and thus could offer oneway fares as low as $135.

The Transportation Department recently recommended that the CAB approve the Skytrain service because of its potential cost savings to consumers.

The bill would relax CAB control over air fares and give airlines more freedom to enter and leave markets. Within certain limits, the carriers could raise or lower prices without approval from the board.

The General Accounting Office issued a report in February which concluded that less government regulation in the airline industry would have cut ticket prices by 22 to 52 per cent and saved travelers between $1.4 and $1.8 billion in the six years ending in 1974. It recommended that airlines rely more on competition rather than government regulation to determine service and prices.

When legislation does emerge, probably later this year, it is expected to call for a gradual lessening of CAB authority over a period of years. Sudden change could be disruptive.

Handicapped persons in Africa neglected

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Every day John Mwangi sits in his tattered clothes on the sidewalk of Nairobi's Tom Mboya street and begs for a living. The money he takes from foreign tourists and Kenyans are all that stand between him and starvation.

Ten years ago, Mwangi, now 36, was stricken with polio. Both his legs were left useless. Since then he has survived by begging.

"It has been terrible," he says. "Nobody in this country seems to care about us. I would like to mend shoes for a living but jobs are hard to come by."

There are an estimated one million mentally and physically handicapped persons among Kenya's 13 million population.

Devising rehabilitation programs for them and cooperating with the government to wipe out or at least control crippling diseases such as polio are just two of the areas of Kenyan life in which the American Peace Corps is involved.

Kenya, with 262 Americans, has the largest Peace Corps contingent in Africa and the second largest in the world. It will increase to 300 by July.

It is headed by black American Bill Robertson, of Roanoke, Va., who says he is attempting to redirect Peace Corps efforts in Kenya to place more emphasis on dealing with urban problems as millions in Africa quit the countryside for towns and cities.

"As far as Mwangi is concerned," says Robertson, "our plans to help create rehabilitation workshops, in cooperation with the government and voluntary organizations, can take him off the streets so that he will no longer be a beggar."

Goodwill Industries International, an American charitable organization which specializes in organization to provide employment for the handicapped, is working with the Peace Corps to help.

Reactor water used on irrigation project

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The first forest on the barren Hanford Nuclear Reservation is spreading its roots near the Washington Public Power Supply System's No. 2 reactor.

When the reactor goes on line about 1980, the 2,000 poplar and pine trees will be irrigated with warm cooling water from the reactor.

"There is no other tree in sight," said Dr. Dennis Oldenstadt of the Hanford Warm Water Utilization Laboratory.

The two to three-foot-high trees are the start of a proposed 900-acre experiment in using warm cooling water from nuclear reactors to irrigate crops.

"The fact that we have access to this amount of land and warm water so close to a nuclear power plant is unique. As far as I know, there's been no other similar experiment on such a large scale," said Oldenstadt.

The forest now taking root will be irrigated with Columbia River water until warm water is available from the reactor, under construction about 10,000 feet away.

The WPPSS has agreed to supply 4,500 gallons of warm water per minute for the project, but Oldenstadt said, "This is a very small part of the total flow." The No. 2 reactor and two other WPPSS reactors, under construction at Hanford "use tremendous quantities of water," said Oldenstadt, associate director of Washington State University's Agriculture Research Center.

The cooling water from the reactor is nonradioactive, Oldenstadt said.

AUSTIN — The Texas Arts Showcase will be held here Wednesday under sponsorship of the Texas Arts Alliance and the Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

Highlighting the event will be the presentation of a series of awards for distinguished and identifiable contributions to the arts in Texas during the past year. The awards program is scheduled for 8 p.m. Wednesday in the new B. Iden Payne Theater on the campus of The University of Texas.

More than 200 nominations from Texas Arts Alliance members were received for these coveted awards," said TAA board chairman Steven Oaks of Houston, "but only outstanding, volunteer efforts in each of the six categories — individual, organization, school, business, media and community — will be honored Wednesday. Selections were made by an anonymous committee." Each of the six categories had extensive criteria upon which the judges made their decisions, Oaks said.

Entertainment at the upcoming Texas Arts Showcase will include performances by the Fort Griffin Fandangle organization of Albany, pianist James Dick of Round Top, the Houston Jazz Ballet, the Oscar Ford Singers of San Antonio, the Dance Discovery group from Houston, a group from Dallas Theater Center, the San Antonio Mariachis, and others. A "Texas Thirty" art exhibit will be on view in the Alumni Center of The University of Texas during a reception following the awards program.

Tickets for the awards program may be reserved by contacting Jim Roll in Austin, 512-475-6583.

Museum gets gift

DALLAS (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz has donated a valuable painting by Georges Rouault to the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts.

The 1938 oil on panel had not been seen publicly since it was included in a 1945 Rouault retrospective at New York's Museum of Modern Art.

The gift was made to the museum, according to a spokesman, after 72-year-old Horowitz walked into one of the oldest New York galleries and asked owner Louis Goldenberg to suggest a good museum that might appreciate it.

Horowitz had bought the 31 1/2-by-25-inch painting in the 1950s from an art collector.

'Friends' group set annual meeting today

The annual meeting of the Friends of the Library, volunteer service auxiliary of the Midland County Public Library, will be at 2 p.m. today in the American Legion Hall at 206 S. Colorado St., just south of the library.

Election of officers and new directors to serve during the coming year will be one of the features of the meeting, said Mrs. Vincent Scury, retiring president.

Presenting the program at the gathering will be Dr. Fred Bullard of Austin, distinguished geologist and a world authority on volcanoes. Dr. Bullard presented a program on the famous Mexican volcano, Pericutin, here several years ago. His program here this afternoon, titled "Volcanoes and the Environment," will be illustrated with film slides.

Dr. Bullard is professor emeritus of geology at The University of Texas.

Today's meeting will be open to all residents of the city and county. A social hour will follow the event.

Symphony season due to close this week

A symphony season which has presented a wide variety of orchestral music and an array of talented guest performers will come to a close this week when the Midland-Odessa Symphony offers its final pair of subscription concerts.

The concerts, featuring the symphony chorale as well as the orchestra, will be at 8 p.m. Monday in Odessa's Bonham Junior High auditorium and 8 p.m. Tuesday in Lee High School auditorium here. Single tickets will be available for purchase at the doors each evening.

Continuing the pattern of outstanding guest artists, established at the opening concerts last fall with the appearances of guitarist Carlos Montoya, the concluding events this week will feature not one but two guest performers.

Pianist Claude Frank, one of the world's foremost interpreters of the keyboard music of Beethoven, will join the orchestra in performances of Beethoven's famous Piano Concerto No. 5 (the "Emperor").

Gifted young American baritone Ronald Raines will be featured soloist with the symphony and chorale in presentations of Carl Orff's exciting choral masterpiece, "Carmina Burana."

The pair of concerts will be conducted by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, symphony music director. The chorale has been under the direction of Richard Clark, associate chorale conductor.

Special guests at Tuesday's concert here will be delegates and visitors to the 12th annual conference of the Texas Women's Association for Symphony Orchestras. The conference will begin today and conclude Tuesday, with the Midland Symphony Guild as host organization.

Pianist Claude Frank, a native of Germany, began keyboard studies in Paris with a pupil of famed pianist Artur Schnabel. He and his family later fled Paris when France was invaded by Germany in early World War II, crossing the Pyrenees on foot and arriving in Madrid penniless. Undaunted, young Frank continued his keyboard practice and it was in Madrid that he played his first "professional" engagements. These engagements led to the family's being given American visas and they arrived in New York in early 1941. Ultimately, Frank became a pupil of the great Schnabel himself, and later he had study in composition and conducting at the famous Tanglewood Festival in Massachusetts. His actual performing career began at the urging of pianist Rudolf Serkin who heard him perform at another famous summer festival, the Marlboro Festival.

Frank's first European tour in 1956 drew rave reviews, and after his debut performance with the New York Philharmonic was engaged to perform with many of the nation's leading symphony orchestras. In subsequent seasons, he made repeat appearances with many of these same orchestras and has performed with additional ensembles not only in the U.S. and Canada but throughout Europe and elsewhere in the world.

Baritone soloist Ronald Raines, originally from Nacogdoches, has done extensive work in American musical theater as well as in opera and on the concert and recital stages. He is a graduate of Oklahoma City University's school of music and has won a number of prestigious vocal competitions in the Southwest and elsewhere.

macrame, woodcrafts, painted china, sand paintings in glass, original jewelry and photography.

Various artists and craftspeople will be demonstrating their creative specialties during the day.

from elsewhere in this region, including several from the Midland-Odessa area.

Doll gets shot first

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — Seeing a doctor can be terrifying to children, and many pediatricians have found it wise to administer a make-believe shot to a child's doll before giving a shot to the child.

That principle of play acting is now a regular part of the curriculum in the pediatric wing at the Sacramento Medical Center of the University of California here

'Law Day, USA'

The first day of May is celebrated in one way or another in many countries of the world, with the May Day observance meaning different things to different people.

The celebrations range from spring festivals to play days to sports events to parades to shows of military might.

But in the United States, the observance has a deeper meaning, having to do with law and order, with special emphasis on loyalty to country.

It is no wonder, then, that the annual observance is a most meaningful one for the United States and its citizens.

The celebration in America is known as "Law Day, USA." President Dwight D. Eisenhower proclaimed the first "Law Day" in 1958, to emphasize the importance of law in American life.

The annual observance is sponsored by the American Bar Association and state and local bar groups.

The Midland County Bar Association last Friday held its annual Law Day luncheon, with Texas Attorney General John Hill as the principal speaker.

Other special events are planned during "Respect for Law Week," beginning today.

Law isn't very effective in a free country unless it has the respect of the people, and this is why respect for law is so very important... so important that it demands the attention and support of all Americans. It is the American way.

This particular day also is known in America as "Loyalty Day" — a time for reaffirming our loyalty to the United States of America.

Reaffirmation of faith in and loyalty to this great and free nation are essential factors in the ongoing of this, the greatest nation the world has ever known.

Yet, most of us are inclined to take it all for granted, without giving much thought to the importance of loyalty to one's country. Right now is an excellent time to give thought to this very subject.

The United States of America, for more than 200 years now, has offered stability, along with a rich and rewarding style of life — and it yet offers it today.

Persons should, and hopefully will, respond affirmatively to the continuing offer, with a firm belief in and all-out support of the nation and the system of government which has made it great.

The United States did not become great by accident. It has become a great nation because of the loyalty of its people to its Constitution, to its laws and to those high ideals which they represent.

"Loyalty," "Law" and "Respect for Law" are words and phrases which should be uppermost in the minds and hearts of all responsible Americans today — and every day.

'THIS IS YOUR PRESIDENT SPEAKING — LIE DOWN — ROLL OVER — PLAY DEAD'

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rights fight presents challenge

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It begins to sink in that President Carter's human rights policy, if it is to be pressed seriously, challenges not only the despotic practices of foreign governments but the direction of our own programs abroad. In the past, the United States has encouraged a rise of military dictatorships, stabilized their finances, taught them the techniques of crushing democratic resistance and placed in their hands the most modern tools of repression.

If the human rights policy is to progress and have meaning, these collusions with dictatorial repression must be halted. Our dealings with dictators have become so routine that a reversal would constitute a revolution in the conduct of our foreign policy. Maybe the president envisioned all this from the start; maybe he did not. We shall soon see.

For decades, our government has been sending out military missions to train and equip the armies of underdeveloped nations. Nine times out of 10 these countries have become military dictatorships presided over by our proteges.

Certainly, we didn't set out after World War I to promote the brand of dictatorships we had just defeated. But in most areas of the globe, an anti-democratic dynamic was at work, galvanized in part by the need to mobilize chaotic societies against Communist takeovers and thus to forestall the ultimate dictatorship.

Yet in many countries a democratic alternative was possible. But our various missions — military, diplomatic, intelligence, financial — tended toward subtle alliances with military cliques. Why? First of all, we developed cozy relationships with the military comers. We were their teachers. At our School of the Americas in Panama, for example, we trained the best of the Latin American officers. In time, all but one of the countries sending students there were outright dictatorships. Not only did we ignore the implications of this; we taught courses in the techniques of counterinsurgency.

We developed a rapport with these officers as we guided them in building up and equipping their armies. When we compared the known military leaders to the inscrutable politicians flown up by the contentious masses, we tended to put our faith in the military. They were more responsible to our wishes, more effective at controlling the chaotic populations that we, in our arrogance, judged as ill-suited for democracy.

On a parallel line, the United States often undertook to train the secret police of developing nations, thus enlarging our presence in the subterranean world of intrigue.

In summary, our vision of what kind of society a given nation should have become distasteful as it passed through prisms of the military brass seeking order, of the CIA trying to topple unreliable foreign leaders and installing friendly ones, of the investors' primary interest in the kind of regime that would best reward and protect U.S. investments. With human rights near the bottom of our list of priorities, the bias in favor of military dictatorships was perhaps inevitable.

The case of Chile illustrates our manifold responsibility for the repression we now, at last, condemn. More than any other South American nation, Chile has a long, proud democratic tradition. Ever since 1811, Chileans have enjoyed a degree of political freedom unknown to their neighbors. There, our various missions were tilling the soil hospitable to democracy. But such was the tilt of our concerns that we made our alliance with the harbingers of totalitarianism.

When, in 1970, the democratic processes duly voted in the Marxist government of Salvador Allende, our CIA tried to negate that vote by bribing legislators in order to block his accession. Failing in this, our financial men sought to undermine Allende's civil government by cutting back aid while our military men kept up aid to the Chilean armed forces.

While the dictatorship tightened, U.S. apologists for Gen. Pinochet insisted that the suppression of democracy was temporary and was aimed only at the Communists and socialists. Leaders of the Christian Democratic Party, in private talks with us, disputed this. They furnished us with evidence that their own anti-Communist, pro-democracy party was being brutally suppressed and would also be outlawed.

After we published the evidence in November 1975, Chilean Ambassador Manuel Trucco denied our story just as the Pentagon had previously tried to help Chile discredit our reports on torture. But last March Pinochet ordered the dissolution of all remaining political parties, including the Christian Democrats, as we had said he would.

Instead of being defenders of Chilean democracy, Americans are prominent among its pallbearers. Unless President Carter completely reverses this policy of supporting dictators around the world, the human rights policy will die a suicide.

Any volunteers?

President Carter learned real quick like that even a dedication to speed-reading is no defense against the fusillades of paperwork in the government.

He appealed to his aides to go easy on the memos they expect him to read. He even revoked his order requiring Cabinet members to read each new regulation issued by their departments. But he still faces a tactical problem: how to knock out the enemy artillery.

Now if he were John Wayne he'd call for volunteers for a do-or-die mission — a commando force to penetrate enemy lines and pull the plugs on all those electric typewriters and Xerox machines. Yes, it would be risky, but that's how heroes are made.

NOW's bullying tactics turn people away from ERA

WASHINGTON — If the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) ever becomes part of our Constitution, it is doubtful that the National Organization for Women (NOW) could honestly claim credit. NOW's bullying tactics and strident voice turn away as many people from ERA as it attracts. Consider NOW's noisy convention last week in Detroit.

By prepared statement and vocal excess, NOW threatened to inflict economic damage on the citizenry of 15 states: rudely assaulted the Roman Catholic bishops of America; damned "boss-dominated" Southern Democrats; criticized the influence of the Mormon Church, and darkly accused the "right wing" of financing anti-ERA activities.

Thirty-five states have ratified ERA, three short of passage. There are 23 months left for the amendment to be approved but in the past 18 months 10 states have rejected it. Hence, NOW is nervous and becomes increasingly shrill.

Congress should vote to take away all federal funds from the unrattified states," cried Karen DeCrow, the outgoing president of NOW. "Government contracts and water projects should be taken away."

That recommendation would get Jimmy Carter into more water trouble, since many of the 15 states which have not ratified are in the South and West and do indeed have water projects.

But that isn't all NOW has in mind. The incoming president, Eleanor Cutrie Smeal, Ms., Mrs. and almpst Ph.D., urged economic sanctions, including boycotts of states which won't ratify ERA. Two immediate targets would be Florida and Nevada, whose Miami and Las Vegas are celebrated tourist attractions.

One delegate told how a day of telephoning resulted in pledges from 26 organizations not to hold meetings or conventions in Nevada. Next, the NOW militants will ask labor unions to also boycott these vacation states.

NOW also unloaded on the "behavior" of Roman Catholic bishops. Their department is "alarming," NOW declared, because they failed to approve ordination of women and a woman's right to decide on birth control. "We are confident that as the church slowly purges itself from its long history of false teaching on sexuality," the statement said, "its people will come to understand that the notion that life begins at the point of conception is in fact a racist, sexist and classist lie, and that it is not pro-life, but anti-life, antifreedom and anti-justice."

So much for the Catholics. How about the Mormons? Alas, their influence is so pervasive in the Mountain States that ERA has failed in Utah, Nevada and Arizona, and this is a lamentable shame as far as NOW is concerned.

Southern Democrats, NOW argues, are even worse. Their "boss-dominated" states form the bulk of opposition to ERA. The solid South and the border states which Jimmy Carter carried have voted down ERA. NOW regards this as outrageous.

Finally, Betty Friedan, a relative moderate in this collection of screamers, called for an investigation of "rightwing" money spent against ERA. She said nothing of the use of federal money spent on behalf of ERA in the administrations of Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Let us consider some of the absurd implications of what NOW proposes to do. No congressman in his right mind is going to work against a federal project in his home state because that state turned down ERA. How NOW can stop millions of tourists from visiting certain states is one question; but how can NOW boycott products like, say, peanuts (Georgia), furniture (the Carolinas and Arkansas), oranges (Florida), the Chicago Cubs (Illinois), cotton (several states), tobacco (Virginia), oil (Oklahoma)?

And does NOW persuade the scores of millions of Catholics and Mormons in our republic to standstrong for ERA when it assaults the very essence of many of these people's religious beliefs? A person can be a good Mormon or Roman Catholic and still support ERA. But to attack the Mormons' conservative view on family life as too influential or the Catholic Church's teaching on abortion, for example, wins few friends.

The Equal Rights amendment has merits and shortcomings. The phrasing is so simple and short that the interpretation of the amendment is far more important than the content. If ERA becomes part of our Constitution, there will be, no doubt, enforcement agencies established and plenty of fussing and probing.

God save all of us, women and men, if the likes of some of these NOW people find their way into the various levels of government to work their will. They could drive people of either sex nuts.

President's roots traced to London wine merchant

By RICHARD BLYSTONE

LONDON (AP) — A British genealogist believes he has traced President Carter's roots back to a 18th century London wine merchant.

Noel Currer-Briggs said in an Associated Press interview that he had traced the President to John Carter, a wine merchant whose son Thomas Carter was born in London in 1610 and sailed for Virginia in 1635.

"The Carter family was very prominent in the City of London," said Currer-Briggs, who is researching Carter's English connections for DeBrett's, the peerage and genealogy publishers in London.

The President's direct ancestors had distant cousins who once owned Chequers, the country estate 25 miles west of London now used as a retreat for British prime ministers, Currer-Briggs said.

Currer-Briggs said Chequers was in the hands of the Carter family's remote cousins from about 1300 to 1700.

A similar genealogical trace was reported last Thursday by the Deseret

News in Salt Lake City, Utah.

In a copyright story, the paper quoted a genealogist of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon) as saying he had traced Carter through family wills to a Thomas Carter Sr., who arrived in Virginia from England in 1635. The Mormon genealogist said Thomas Carter was the President's eighth great-grandfather.

President Carter is coming to London shortly for an economic summit conference and plans to visit the ancestral home of George Washington in northeast England. The U.S. Embassy said there are no plans for him to see any of his ancestral areas, including Chequers.

Currer-Briggs, an expert on American-British genealogies, said he spent weeks wading through court records, wills, deeds, parish registers, records of the guild-like Company of Vintners and other documents.

Christ Church, the Carter family's parish church in the old City of London, now the capital's financial district, was bombed in World War II and records there were lost. But Currer-Briggs found in the Public Records Office the will of Thomas' vintner-father, John Carter, 1581-1630, and made the connection.

"I feel that John Carter is positive," he said, "although in a case of this kind you are very unlikely to get a direct, watertight proof."

Less sure is a connection Currer-Briggs has turned up with a Richard Carter, who was granted a manor at Garston, 15 miles northwest of the center of London, in 1530.

The area is now part of the town of Watford, and a bus garage occupies the likeliest site of the old manor. The name Garston Manor is preserved on a new development of low-cost public housing.

The Carters got in on the ground floor in the development of America, Currer-Briggs said.

"Virginia was the great place to invest your money in the 17th century," he said. "Most of the big London merchants had a hand in the founding of Virginia, sending their younger sons or nephews over there as agents or to set up plantations."

regularly with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on the project. "The last I talked to them they were still working on it," he said.

A corps spokesman, J.E. Pate, said the corps expects to finish its "scope of work" plan by August. That plan will tell Hidalgo officials what questions they must answer on the environmental aspects of the project.

Soybean futures trading unchecked

CHICAGO (AP) — Trading in soybean futures on the Chicago Board of Trade has not been influenced by charges that members of the wealthy Hunt family of Texas has been engaged in manipulations, market sources said.

The sources said Friday that there was a huge demand for soybean futures and that it was independent of any concern over the federal charges. It accounted for the increase of 45 cents for some contracts, the limit under rules set by the Board of Trade, the sources said.

Seven members of the Hunt family and a family holding company were charged in a civil suit filed Thursday in U.S. District Court with a violation of federal law by buying too many soybean futures. Experts said the law is designed to prevent any group from getting a corner on the market.

On the Board of Trade, speculators do not buy the beans themselves. Instead, they buy "futures," or promises to deliver the beans by a certain date. Generally, speculators do not hang onto these "futures," or promises to deliver beans, and instead try to sell them for a profit. Other commodities, such as corn and oats, also are a subject of speculation.

May soybeans closed at $9.85 a bushel Friday. The Federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission asked in its suit an order that the Hunts sell any soybean futures holdings in excess of the legal limit and yield any profits illegally gained.

Discovery completes

DALLAS — Dorchester Gas Corp. has reported a dual zone gas discovery in the Retlaw area of Southeast Alberta, Canada.

The concern's No. 7-7-12-19 Retlaw was completed for a calculated open flow potential of 9.6 million cubic feet of gas per day through perforations in the Glauconitic zone at 3,646 feet.

The strike also was assured discovery production in the Tabor sand on a drillstem test at 3,710 feet. The test flowed gas at the rate of 4.7 million cubic feet per day.

Dorchester also announced the completion of No. 7-8 Retlaw as a one-mile extension to the discovery. From the Glauconitic zone at 3,606 feet it finished for a calculated open flow of 3.9 million cubic feet of gas per day.

Another offset, No. 10-18 Retlaw, has encountered multiple pay zones, drillstem testing gas at the rate of 9 million cubic feet per day, with 1,410 feet of oil, in the Tabor sand at 3,710 feet, and 1.3 million cubic feet of gas from the Glauconitic at 3,637 feet and 2.5 million cubic feet per day from the Viking "B" section at 2,905 feet.

This operation potentialed from the Viking "A" zone for a calculated open flow of 4.2 million cubic feet per day at 2,766 feet.

The projects are on a 5,280-acre block in which Dorchester's interest varies from 33 1/2 per cent to 50 per cent, with the balance of the interest owned by JSE Enterprises and Canada Northwest Lands.

Adobe O&G lists drop

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland has announced first quarter earnings of $1,401,000 or $21 per share on revenues of $9,634,000.

Income for the comparable period in 1976 was $1,754,000 or $26 per share on revenues of $9,317,000.

Adobe officials said first quarter results reflect the effects of the Federal Energy Administration's rollback in oil prices, increased costs from inflationary pressures and delays entailed due to the severe winter in placing 28 gas wells on production in Pennsylvania.

The company also announced it has agreed to participate in an exploration program in South Louisiana which includes a significant acreage position and more than $2 million of geophysical data.

Total exploration of the properties will require a four-year drilling program and expenditures by Adobe of approximately $13 million. Adobe will have a 50 per cent interest. Drilling will commence in the third quarter of this year.

The board of directors also authorized a quarterly cash dividend of four cents per share to be paid June 24 to shareholders of record June 3.

Association sets meeting

The National Stripper Well Association will hold its mid-year meeting May 9 in the Denver Hilton Hotel in Denver, Colo.

C. John Miller of Allegan, Mich., past president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America and past president of the National Stripper Well Association, will be one of the feature speakers.

The meeting will get under way at 8:30 a. m., with Ralfe D. Reber, president of the association, presiding.

The Innovators, a new engineering and manufacturing concern, held open house last week at its new plant at 800 W. Front St. in Midland. From left are Artis Dobbs Jr., machine operator; Morris Biffle, general manager, and John Biffle, shop manager. The Biffles are equal partners in the venture.

The Innovators opens manufacturing plant

A new manufacturing and engineering concern, The Innovators, owned by Morris Biffle and John Biffle, held open house at its plant, 800 W. Front St., last week.

Morris Biffle said the only product now in production is a new concept in rotating blowout preventers designed by him.

The product, Biffle said, is used to control the flow of drilling fluids and oil or gas while drilling in an underbalanced situation.

"It also is used to direct the flow of air or foam when drilling with air. It prevents the air, foam and debris from going through the rotary table onto the floor of the rig," he said.

Another primary function of the rotating blowout preventer is for the protection of personnel from toxic gases such as hydrogen sulfide, he pointed out. It is used to divert toxic gases to a safe disposal area.

"We will add product lines as rapidly as we can to round out our products used in the production as well as the drilling and exploration areas," Biffle said.

Other products have been chosen and will be added as soon as machines can be installed, Biffle said.

"We of The Innovators obviously have faith in the Midland-Odessa area and realize the need for our products here," the general manager said.

"We also are aware of the tremendous volume of national and international business transacted through the Midland-Odessa business complex and plan to grow and keep pace with the ever-growing energy industry."

Producers announced

HOUSTON — Wainoco Oil Corp. has announced completion of a gas strike in Texas, and of an oil discovery in British Columbia.

The Texas strike is No. 1 Eaves, a Lavaca County Yegua sand strike, which finished for a flowing potential of 1.9 million cubic feet of gas and 13 barrels of condensate per day, through a 14-64-inch choke and perforations at 5,450-5,456 feet. Operator reported a calculated, absolute open flow of 37 million cubic feet of gas per day.

The project indicated production in two shallow Miocene sands with the flowing of gas at 1,950 and 2,350 feet.

Wainoco and its 1976B partnership own 100 per cent of the working interest, converting to two-thirds interest following payout. Wainoco and limited partners also owns 1,350 acres in the vicinity.

The Canadian strike, four miles north of Fort St. John, completed flowing 442 barrels of oil per day, through Belloy formation perforations at 5,752 to 5,758 feet, on a 17-64-inch choke. The strike is situated on a 1,120-acre block in which Wainoco has a one-third interest. Wainoco Oil & Gas Ltd., the firm's Canadian subsidiary, owns an overriding royalty in the discovery, which, following payout, will convert to a one-third working interest.

communication skills and assertiveness training.

The course is designed to help people express themselves more effectively and confidently, how to stand up for their rights — say yes and no — without infringing on the rights of others, and how to be forceful without being hostile.

The course also will aid in developing skills that will enable a person to increase self-satisfaction, achieve goals and improve relationships with others.

Oil and Gas Fundamentals-I will be instructed by Dr. James H. Butler, consulting geologist.

Fee for this course is $50. The text book, "Oil from Prospect to Pipeline," is available for $6.95.

This informative basic course is of interest to office managers, secretaries, production clerks and other personnel — especially those new to the oil industry. PBGC officials said.

Oil and Gas Fundamentals-II will be offered later in the year.

Gardeners seek answers to transplant problems

A number of producers planted cotton this past week but the majority of growers have elected to wait a little longer before placing seed in the ground. Soil temperatures remain a little on the cool side, and past experience indicates that cotton planted in May often will germinate and grow off much better than April cotton. Some growers have been holding off planting hoping for another good rain but as of this writing no showers have developed.

During late May and June, many Texas farmers and ranchers will receive a crop or livestock questionnaire from the Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service or will be personally interviewed by the Service's field staff. This is part of the continuous effort of keeping track of Texas' biggest business-agriculture.

The information gathered through the questionnaires and interviews provides the basis for determining the acreage devoted to the various crops and midyear livestock numbers for the State of Texas and for each county. Reliable information on what is produced, how much, and where is important to farmers, ranchers and others in making production and marketing decisions and in providing an unbiased picture of Texas agriculture.

Cooperation by producers is the key to all crop and livestock estimates. Farmers and ranchers have recognized the need for accurate and timely statistics by participation in the program since its start over a century ago. All individual farm and ranch information is kept confidential, and only state and county summaries become part of the final published estimate. This is a cooperative effort of the USDA's Statistical Reporting Service and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

Texas homeowners and commercial growers have the largest crop of peaches in history. The cold, moist winter of 1976-77 was excellent for fruit development across the entire state. In order to harvest, your peaches must be thinned as soon as possible. Peaches should not be closer than four to eight inches apart on any single shoot. Short shoots less than 10 inches should have only one peach.

The small fruit should be removed before they are the size of nickel, which is before pit hardening and the fruit is approximately 1/4 inch in diameter. The fruit can be removed by hand or with a short rubber hose attached to a broom handle. It is important to thin fruit as soon as possible because as the peaches ripen less effect is realized from thinning.

A number of home gardeners have called the office the past few days about problems with newly transplanted vegetable plants such as tomatoes and peppers. The symptoms described were leaves turning white and plants dying. This is caused by transplanting plants directly to the garden from inside environments of the home or greenhouse without proper hardening. Transplants grown inside should be kept with

It's Fresh Air Week

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — It is more important than ever that Texans celebrate this week of (May 1-7) as Clean Air Week in Texas, says Charles R. Barden, executive director of the Texas Air Control Board. "Now, especially, is the time when everyone must realize the importance of the damaging effects of air pollution, when our nation is being called on to sacrifice in order to conserve our depleted energy resources," said Barden in a statement.

Roy Blake wields power in House

By LEE JONES

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — There's a story, possibly apocryphal, about a chairman of the House Calendars Committee when he legislature was an earthier place.

He despised a bill that had reached his committee. Someone asked what he would do with it. He took the official copy of the bill to the nearest restroom, tore it into tiny pieces, dropped it into the toilet and flushed it.

"That's what," he said. Nobody could get away with that in the computerized House today, but the calendars committee is still a graveyard for bills. And new tombstones sprout daily as time runs out for the session.

Most people think a bill is headed for the floor once a House "substantive committee" has cleared it. But they're wrong. It goes to the calendars committee. From there it might or might not go on a daily calendar for House debate.

"Right now, we've got about 300 bills — not counting the local and uncontested ones. . . Obviously a lot of bills are going to die there. We don't have enough days," said chairman Roy Blake, a Nacogdoches insurance agent.

One bill would halt the use of live animals in dog training. It's aimed at stopping greyhounds from chasing rabbits at racetracks, but Blake said it's "got coon hunters, dog trainers and squirrel hunters upset" and the sponsor won't narrow it.

"I hope it stays in calendars forever!" he said. And it probably will.

"In adopting the rules, the House did give the calendars committee a great deal of power. It means we can choose and pick what we want to set," Blake said.

Blake, 48, accuses other committees of ducking tough issues by passing out bills and expecting his nine-member panel to do the killing for them.

"I've had committee chairmen say to me, 'We reported out a bill but we shouldn't have.' I've had members tell me, 'I've got a bill down there, but I don't want it set.' I like that kind. I tell them we can take care of that request. If you are opposed to a bill, what better position can you be in than to be the sponsor," Blake said.

Blake smiles a lot and spends much of his time on the floor, slouching about with his hands in his pockets and making jokes with other representatives. He doesn't let the pressure of his job bother him, or seems not to.

Does it help to be able to say no?

"Sure does," he said.

"Fifteen came by my desk this morning wanting bills set. Then, when I get to my office, the lobby comes around. I ask, 'Where's the member?' They say, 'The members say they'll carry them (bills) on the floor but it's up to us to get them through committee," Blake said.

Blake admits that when there are so many bills and so little time, his committee's feelings about a measure or its sponsor can decide whether it reaches the floor.

"We are not supposed to consider bills on their merits but we are all human. We can't help but consider who's carrying the bill," he said.

But there is surprisingly little criticism of the committee for arbitrariness, partly because each member gets one priority bill that must come to the floor if it reaches the calendars committee.

Speaker Bill Clayton, like his predecessors, selected the committee from those he could count on to go along with him in guaranteeing action — at the strategically right time — on bills he deems important.

Blake says he goes along only so far, however, with the notion his panel is a "speaker's committee."

Companies nationwide report March gains

By KRISTIN GOFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Remember how you suffered in the winter of 1977?
Or, at least, heard about the suffering of those in the Midwest and Northeast where subfreezing weather and shortages of natural gas created quite a problem?
Back then it looked like the U.S. economy was going to take it on the chin in the first quarter of the year because of such problems as industry shutdowns, delivery delays and increased energy costs.
First-quarter earnings reports coming in from major industries this compares, the Journal said, with a 19 per cent gain it found in a similar survey a year ago.

The steel industry, which had poor earnings, and the auto industry, with surprisingly good profits, stand out as exceptions.
Several steel industry leaders coupled their earnings announcements with statements calling for price increases in the near future.

U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's largest steel producer, reported a 72 per cent drop in first-quarter earnings to $27.4 million from $97.9 million a year earlier. Bethlehem Steel Corp., the No. 2 producer, was among several reporting quarterly losses. Bethlehem said it had the second worst quarter ever: A $25.2 million loss compared with a $28.4 million profit in the first quarter last year.

WES-TEX EQUIPMENT CO. of Midland recently received the 1977 Distinguished Dealer Award from the International Harvester Co. From left are John Reed of Lubbock, IH district manager; Merrell Witt, president and general manager of Wes-Tex, and J. Howard Coonen of Dallas, Southwest Region manager for IH. The event will be held in the Pecos Community Center, Philip J. O'Jibway, district director of the Lubbock District of SBA, said.
The workshop is designed to provide business advice and counseling by businessmen with many years of successful experience. Its purpose is to help avoid business losses by strengthening management in all types of business, including farming.
According to Charles Maisel, Odessa SCORE chairman and coordinator of the workshop, "management knowledge is essential for business success and it is our aim to inform potential owners and managers of some of the things they can do to achieve success."

The workshop will begin at 8:30 a. m. following registration at 8 a. m. Topics to be discussed include "Opportunities in the Pecos Area," "Recordkeeping," "Financial Planning," "Sources of Capital," and "Business Regulations, Taxes and Insurance."
There will be a fee of $2.50 for the workshop to cover all materials.
Persons interested in attending can pre-register by telephoning or writing Mrs. Nita Smith of the Pecos Chamber of Commerce, P.O. Box 27. The telephone number is 915 445-2406.

past week indicated some of that. But overall the picture was not as grim as some economists initially predicted.
Company after company reported business troubles in the deep freeze months of January and February but noted improvement in March that tempered the quarterly earnings.
The Commerce Department's chief economist, Courtenay Slater, said much the same thing this past week as the government released its index of leading economic indicators for March. The index, which is designed to help forecast economic trends, increased 1.4 per cent from February — the largest gain in 20 months.
In its survey of 530 major companies, The Wall Street Journal reported that first-quarter earnings were up 7.7 per cent compared with the first quarter last year. That

R-T earns 1976 award for safety

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has been awarded a certificate of merit for its 1976 safety record of newspaper delivery vehicles in the annual Safe Driving Campaign sponsored by the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the International Circulation Managers Association.
The 562 newspapers which participated in 1976 achieved the lowest accident rate — 1.45 per 100,000 miles — since the program began in 1941, an ANPA spokesman said.
Certificates of merit are awarded to participants who complete the year without accident.
"Your newspaper's record for the year is most commendable, and I extend congratulations," said Jerry W. Friedheim, general manager of ANPA.
The Safe Driving Campaign is intended to promote cooperation with safety authorities in reducing fatalities and injuries resulting from unsafe driving, and to create a safe driving record in the newspaper business which would warrant reductions in insurance premiums covering motor vehicles engaged in the distribution of newspapers.

Property owners could have a major impact on the final energy policy draft, Dan K. Kuykendall, president of the National Association of Property Owners told a group of West Texas oilmen in Midland Friday.
Kuykendall said the input received from the Midland meeting on the question of what extent an energy problem is a property owner's problem will be incorporated in his association's national policy.
"If our basic aim is to preserve a free society, then we must insist that the solution to the energy problem must be through a free enterprise system. There is no other way," Kuykendall said.
"The major flaw of the President's energy program is the lack of new energy promotion and the failure to put the burden on free enterprise to solve the problem."

Lobbyist gets input on energy

Kuykendall, a Washington lobbyist, said "right now we are working on setting the philosophical tone. Later on we may get into the specifics," he said.
He said the primary message NAPPO would attempt to communicate to the American public would be a "philosophical policy."
"We think the biggest part of the problem is that Congress seldom seeks out the people to find what they really want. We are going to have an influential effect on the Carter energy package. We have reason to believe that between now and August we can get half a million people actually communicating with their congressmen."
He said he believes new energy resources can be better developed through a system of free enterprise rather than by a socialized energy program.

Taco Patio work starts

Midland will boast one of the first four Taco Patio restaurants to be opened west of Fort Worth when the new Mexican-style fast food facility opens here in late summer.
Construction began last week in the 1000 block of South Big Spring Street.
Erecting the restaurant is Taco Patio of West Texas, Inc., a newly-organized entity, spanning a 127-county area of West Texas and New Mexico. It was established by I. B. Chapman II of Fort Worth.

L. T. Snell joins bank

ODESSA — Luther T. Snell will join State National Bank in Odessa June 1 as a vice president and manager of the instalment loan department, Homer L. Stewart Jr., president of the bank, announced. ## BUSINESS NOTEBOOK

Texas investors on top of fruitful arena

AUSTIN—Two researchers at the University of Texas at Austin say Texas investors "may be sitting on top of one of the most fruitful investment arenas in the country."
Andrew J. Senchack, Jr., visiting assistant professor of finance at Indiana University, and graduate student Peter DeVito say the Texas "submarket" is likely in the future to "provide Texans an opportunity to invest their discretionary income or savings in the Texas economy with the prospect of reaping substantial rewards."
The two studied 47 Texas-domiciled firms for the "risk-return" properties of their common stock performance from July, 1970, through June, 1975, "a five-year period roughly corresponding to a complete market and business cycle."
They found that "on the basis of average monthly rates of return, it appears that profitable investment opportunities may abound in Texas."
"In sharp contrast to securities in the four national markets surveyed, the average Texas submarket security showed a sizably higher return, averaging 1.69 per cent per month or approximately 20 per cent on an annualized basis."
"The next highest return was scored on an average NYSE (New York Stock Exchange) security, with a 0.59 per cent monthly return or about seven per cent annually."
Because the Texas "submarket" fared better than the national markets, which were hit hard during the test period, the researchers calculate that a $10,000 investment in the 47 companies would have been worth $27,300 after five years—compared to $14,275 for the average for the NYSE, or $11,180 on the American Stock Exchange.
There is, of course, a warning coupled with those high rates of return. The researchers note that the dividend policies of the Texas companies tend to differ from those of national companies, and that the Texas firms' dividends would tend to be lower and less stable.
"But they indicate that investors are likely to find some good buys among Texas based companies—if they choose carefully.

Credit union representatives attending the Dallas meeting of state-chartered credit unions indicated their support for having the Texas Credit Union Department acquire its own building.
Commissioner John (Pete) Parsons presented the proposal for the agency to build or buy its own quarters—and a straw vote showed some 125 in favor, and only two against.
Since State agencies are banned from borrowing funds, the TCUD would finance the building by a special assessment designed to the costs of the department's operations—and the cost of the building. Cost of the special fee would be "about equal" to the normal supervision fee, Parsons says.
Parsons says the cost of providing the building would be around $310,000 (including utilities and janitorial service) as compared to $331,000 for rental of a building over the next 30 years.
Sen. John Tower is introducing legislation to defer the proposed OSHA regulations for cotton dust standards.
Tower says he wants "an independent scientific panel" to investigate the problems and risks associated with cotton dust in industrial settings.
During the hearings held in Washington in April, he says, "significant information raising questions as to the validity of key OSHA assumptions was provided by public witnesses, and I think the tremendous opposition to many sections of these standards merits further attention before they are promulgated."
Tower also says OSHA is concerning itself with trivial matters instead of developing "generalized safety and health standards" as was envisioned when the Occupational Safety and Health Act was passed.
"Instead of broad standards on major issues," he comments, "we have OSHA inspectors checking to see if the restroom facilities are correct in our factories."
OSHA, he concludes, "is not doing its job, and its intrusion into the affairs of business on picayune matters reduces confidence in government's attempts to help American workers."

Southwest's annual report for 1976 (which shows net income of $4,938,734) notes that the airline inaugurated service to Corpus Christi March 1, with four round trips daily to Houston and Dallas, and connections in Houston for service to San Antonio.
Start of that service, the airline says, will allow full utilization of the company's sixth Boeing 737 (received in September, of 1976).
With the delivery of the seventh 737 in May, service will be inaugurated with four round trips daily from Dallas to both Midland-Odessa and Lubbock.
The eighth plane, due in late June, will permit inauguration of service to El Paso, with six round trips daily from Love Field—two non-stop.
The ninth plane—due in July—will be used to start service to Austin—and then a tenth plane is due in September to supplement service in other markets "as most urgently needed."
Two more planes will be delivered in early 1978, for service between Houston and Austin and Austin and West Texas.
"Southwest plans, in due course," the report adds, "to apply to the Texas Aeronautics Commission for authority to further extend its route system to include Amarillo...and the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area...If such authority is granted...we would hope to begin service in early 1979."
Southwest also has formed a wholly-owned subsidiary—Midway Airway Co.—for the purpose of filing an application with the Civil Aeronautics Board for 14 markets out of Chicago's Midway Airport.
Those cities include Buffalo, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Dayton, Des Moines, Detroit, Kansas City, Louisville, Memphis, Minneapolis/St. Paul, Omaha, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.
Southwest notes that the proposed Chicago operations are "substantial," with the investment required to begin operations exceeding the total investment in Southwest Airlines—and that there are now 100 carriers who have applied to the CAB to serve the same markets.
The company says it is "very hopeful" the CAB will approve the application by late 1978 or early 1979—with service to begin on the routes by Jan. 1, 1980.
"Favorable action...would thus assure continued extraordinary growth in the 1980's," the report concludes.

Van line gives award

City Transfer & Storage Co. of Midland has received a north American Van Lines Service Award for 1977.
The award was presented to the company for its "continuing contribution to the performance and growth of north American Van Lines."
Presentation of the award was made during the Southern Area Agent Meeting of north American Van Lines agents recently in Atlanta, Ga.
Presenting the plaque to City Transfer was John J. Kickham, president, and Kenneth Maxfield, executive vice president of north American.

Midland corporation reveals name change

FNB Development Corp. approved a corporate name change, the election of four new board of director members and the reelection of six directors, at its annual shareholder meeting last week in the Midland Hilton.
The firm approved a recommendation to change its name to Midland Southwest Corp., G. Arthur Donnelly III, president, announced.
The 1976 earnings were reported at the meeting which were 11 cents per share compared with 1975's 35 cents per share. Donnelly said earnings were down because the company adopted a new direction and liquidated certain assets during the previous period.
Newly elected directors are Arden R. Grover, Barron Ulmer Kidd, Douglas Scharbauer and Collins Hill Jr.
Grover is vice president and a director of Flag-Redfern Oil Co. and a director of O'Neill Industries of Midland. He also is a director of Telegraph Savings and Loan Association of Chicago, Ill.

Kidd is an independent oil operator in Dallas; Scharbauer is a Midland rancher and investor, and Hill, who lives in Houston, is a director of Southwest Mortgage and Realty Trust, Discount Pharmacy, Inc., and Sandra Corp.
Re-elected directors are James N. Allison Jr., president and publisher of The Midland Reporter-Telegram and the Plainview Daily Herald in Plainview; Richard S. Brooks, a Midland attorney; Jon P. Butler, senior chairman of the board of The First National Bank of Midland; Wilbur A. Yeager Jr., president and chief executive officer of First National; Sam W. Conner, a Midland independent insurance agent, and Donnelly.

Jubilant Don Yarbrough blasts State Bar of Texas

By ROBERT HEARD

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Regardless of his troubles — and he has many — Don Yarbrough says being on the Texas Supreme Court bench is "exhilarating."

"Absolutely fascinating," Yarbrough said of his new job. In an exclusive interview with The Associated Press he said ... "I've never had a job which was really any more challenging to me."

He faced a similar challenge, he said, when he took over a bank in Victoria "30 days from being closed by the FDIC."

"But this thing here is just unbelievable ... You feel like you're in the cockpit of a 747 airplane. To me, it pushes all of my buttons that need to be pushed."

"There's a strain of patriotism associated with it, a satisfaction that comes from it of knowing that you really have done something," he said.

He has written only one important opinion so far, a dissent in a congressional election contest that he thinks will help the loser to press his suit in the U.S. Supreme Court. But other opinions are awaiting his pen.

Yarbrough says he commands a position from which he can contribute to the system that permitted him to rise from the obscurity and poverty of a rural Dallas County community.

"I didn't have hot running water until I was a junior in high school," he said, "and we didn't have a commode that would flush until I was a junior in college. You talk about deprivation, we had it."

"Without the benefit of family, without the benefit of connections, without the benefit of all these things," he created a financial empire that allowed him to control $25 million in assets three years ago.

All of that is gone now, wiped out by enough troubles to rival those of the Biblical Job.

But he has had two stars to follow. At the same time one star sank with the filing of at least 16 civil suits against him, the other star rose with his victory in a race for a seat on the state's highest bench — a victory attributed by many to the similarity of his name to that of Don Yarborough, another Houston lawyer who ran unsuccessfully for governor in the 1960s.

He lost one of those suits last June to Rex Cooper and Douglas Ford, who claimed Yarbrough defrauded them in a bank deal. Yarbrough has appealed their $116,406 judgment.

It wasn't really fraud, he contends.

"In order to have fraud, you've got to have five or six different elements. You have to have specifically four. Now the jury found three of those elements, but they did not find the fourth element," he said.

"What was the fourth element?"

"That's the element of damages," he said.

"If I say to you it's not raining outside — oh, no, I say it IS raining outside, and as a result of all that — I know perfectly well that it is not raining outside — but you go over here and get your hat and coat and so on and so forth, and then you go outside and lo and behold you find that it is not raining outside. Well, you haven't been damaged," he said.

But in his example did he deliberately mislead the person he told it was raining?

"No, I did not," he said, forgetting in less than a minute that he had said he knew "perfectly well that it is not raining outside."

"But in candor, I have to report to you that the jury did not accept my version of the facts," he said.

A bar grievance committee in Houston has filed suit to disbar Yarbrough, alleging more than 50 violations of the Code of Ethics.

But these really are all part of "five or six" broad allegations, he said.

"It's kinda like saying, 'This man went down and was involved in an automobile accident.' Okay, that's one broad area. But then they say, 'He was involved in an automobile accident in a red car.' That's one count. 'He's involved in an automobile accident in a red car on Jan. 10.' That's two. No he's already got two. That's what they've done," he said.

"There is not one thing that the State Bar has alleged today with regard to areas of my alleged misconduct that if I had the responsibility to do it again today I would not do exactly as I did it previously."

"And furthermore, that I would not invite 500 witnesses to come down and watch us on the shoreline as we proceeded exactly in that manner," he said.

The grievance committee has asked to take 23 depositions "all over the country," Yarbrough said. In all, they probably will spend $150,000, he said.

"If you were to give me $50,000 cash on my desk today, and a fulltime secretary and a fulltime investigator that had some relative ability — maybe he could have personality defects, as I think probably some of theirs over there might well have, in the sense that they could not go elsewhere and make a living practicing law — you give me one fulltime investigator and a fulltime secretary and $50,000 and the power of subpoena, and I would be able to disbar any 10 lawyers in Texas, of your choosing, or anybody else's choosing."

"Put Leon Jaworski at the top of the list, if you want to," he said.

Jaworski has called Yarbrough unfit to serve on the high court.

"And furthermore, you could disbar any doctor, or any architect or any engineer or any pharmacist," he said.

"The law and our society have become so complex that it is virtually impossible to matriculate in business or in a professional capacity anymore, without offending somebody's guidelines, even though it may be perfectly innocent on your part," he said.

Of the possible targets, why did the bar single him out?

"You've got to understand that this is the first time in history, in modern history, that someone has had the gall — as has been described in the press — and the effrontery to become a candidate for the Supreme Court without the appointment of the powers that be," he said.

A candidate is supposed to go to the major law firms of the state and get the laying on of the hands of all the top lawyers, he said. He did not do that.

"I didn't know I was supposed to do that. It was simply a matter of ignorance on my part. I wouldn't have done it anyway," he said.

They are making an example of him, he said, to send out this message: "By golly, don't anybody ever do this again, because this is what we'll do to you, and can do to you. You may or may not have the stamina of a Don Yarbrough."

Even if the bar succeeds, Yarbrough intends to stay on the bench. The Texas Constitution does not say judges on the high court must be lawyers.

"I have made this determination: that I have been put in this office as a consequence of the power of the people. They put me here, and the people are the ones that are going to take me out of this place," he said.

He will not be up for election until 1982.

Meanwhile, "I've got 20 per cent of all the power in Texas, judicially," he said, referring to the five judges it takes to make a majority.

"I wouldn't want any more power than I've got. That's all I want. Because you invest too much power in any individual, it ruins that individual, and that individual loses his capacity for the vision to see where we want to go ... If I didn't have this (disbarment) thing, this would be the greatest life I could ever design for myself," he said.

His wife and three children still are in Houston because he must preserve the homestead status of his house, he said. But that soon will change, and he will be able to sell the house and move the family to Austin.

They will have to rent, however, and use nearly all of their money for attorneys' fees.

Because of his religious faith, he is optimistic for the future, he said.

Last year, he announced that God told him to run for the high court post, and he says God still has a hand in all that is happening to him.

After he became a "born again" Christian, he said, messages from God began to come to him whenever he was in a "prayerful situation."

"It got to the point where it was so plain and so clear it was like — it wasn't a normal voice — but the longer it went, the plainer it got, and it got down to 'You run for the Supreme Court.'"

He heard words?

"Words."

English words?

The news media misinterpreted his statement last year, he said. "They assumed I was ascribing some degree of great piety to myself."

"You know, Christ didn't come to save all the people of River Oaks with their teeth straightened and who have $35 haircuts. He came to take care of whores and bums — like me," he said.

This "blessing" might be withdrawn at any moment, he said.

"And I'll be the first one to admit that I'm not worthy of it. My personal life won't stand muster in terms of any righteousness or for any merit. It's sheerly by God's grace."

Red tape blocks benefits for black lung victims

By JULIE FREDERIKSE

PINEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Not many visitors make it down to Kettle Island "holler" in the Kentucky Cumberlands, so a few days passed before Otis Lowe could find someone to read him the letter he got from Washington, D.C.

The 75-year-old retired coal miner makes a kind of wheezing noise when he breathes, but that was the only other sound in his three-room shack in an abandoned mining camp as the message from the U.S. government was read aloud.

"Your entitlement to black-lung benefits is denied," the letter said.

"I think there's a racket here," Lowe exclaimed. "The doctor, he showed me the X-ray picture of my lung on the wall. I saw big, black spots of rock dust. I ain't got no breath left from them 44 years I worked in the coal mines. Don't that mean somethin' in Washington?"

"They got a law up there, in Washington that's supposed to take care of us, but we still got thousands who can't draw the benefits," said Ernest Green. Green is vice president of the Harlan County Black Lung Association, a grassroots organization funded by contributions of small change from the coal fields.

"Take me, for example. I'm old, I'm about spent, I should have quit workin' the face of the coal years ago, but I can't retire 'til I get those benefits. If the government would let me quit, my job could go to one of them young, able-bodied men they're keepin' up on welfare. It just don't make sense."

"The federal government's black lung program has turned into the most absurd, goddam mess you've ever seen," said attorney Steve Cawood, whose law practice in this tiny Appalachian mountain town is composed mainly of cases related to the coal industry.

Cawood's criticism was echoed by Arnold Miller, president of the United Mine Workers, and acknowledged by Carter administration representatives at recent House Labor subcommittee hearings. Congress is considering a bill to revamp the program it created to compensate coal miners and their survivors for the effects of the chronic respiratory disease due to long exposure to coal dust.

"When a man walks into my office and says that he has just been removed from the mines because his black lung has gotten too bad," explained Cawood, "the first thing I do is tell him that he can forget all the material he's read in the UMW Journal or the newspapers about the Department of Labor black lung program. I tell him that he most probably won't even get a hearing for several years and that he can expect his claim to be denied."

Figures from Washington reflect the frustration in Appalachia. The Labor Department's Division of Coal

Workers Compensation reports that, of about 105,000 claims for black lung benefits filed since it began administering the program in 1973, more than 50,000 have been denied. Another 50,000 claims are backlogged. Only 4,000 miners or their survivors are receiving checks from the federal government, according to the Labor Department.

"Anybody would concede that the program has problems," said a Labor Department official charged with administering black lung claims. "Our own review shows that it routinely takes over two years for a claim to even make it through the initial determination process, an amount of time that is obviously unacceptable."

The taxpayers might have another gripe about the federal black lung program. Although fewer than one of 20 claims are approved, the program costs more than $1 billion a year.

Congress intended, in its Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969, that responsibility for compensating black lung victims shift from the government to the coal industry. But the Labor Department says the operators have agreed to pay for only "a handful" of claims, forcing the government to foot most of the bill.

The National Coal Association concedes that the industry has settled only 138 black lung cases but explains: "We do not feel, in a number of instances, that the claimant was totally disabled."

'Stormy petrel' of NOW leaves organization torn by dissension

EDITOR'S NOTE — Karen DeCrow has been president of the National Organization for Women for two terms, some of the most volatile times in the 10-year history of NOW. As outgoing president, she talks about women's rights and the role she played.

By MARY FIESS

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Karen DeCrow used to be a lot of things.

She used to be an all-American girl who tried to act stupid and helpless to attract men. She used to be married and a dutiful housewife — twice. She used to be resorts editor for Golf Digest magazine.

She was editor of "The Pregnant Teenager" and author of "The Young Woman's Guide to Liberation" and "Sexual Justice." She was an unsuccessful candidate for mayor of Syracuse.

And until a few days ago, she was president of NOW, the National Organization for Women.

But she leaves the women's rights group with declining membership and trying to heal itself of a bitter dissension so serious that NOW founder Betty Friedan once threatened to start a rival organization.

The housewife turned crusader for women's equality probably has sparked more dissension within the country's largest women's rights organization than any time in its 10-year history.

Internal disputes, fired by Ms. DeCrow's differences with her board members, plagued NOW during her first term and came to a head at the rancorous NOW convention in 1975 at which she narrowly won reelection.

But in recent months, fighting has subsided and one of Ms. DeCrow's policies — more political involvement by NOW, including vigorous campaigns against anti-ERA and anti-abortion candidates — seems to be bearing fruit, at least in one or two instances.

In January, Indiana became the 35th state to ratify the ERA, thereby breaking a two-year logjam over its adoption. Ms. DeCrow took credit on NOW's behalf.

"It's obvious that the strategy of defeating anti-ERA candidates worked in Indiana," she said. Supporters regard the troubles of Ms. DeCrow's presidency as an inevitable but healthy result of her efforts to broaden membership.

Her most outspoken critic, Ms. Friedan, says the problem is Ms. DeCrow's "pseudo-radical rhetoric" and her attempts to divert NOW from the interests of the majority of American women — white middle class American women.

"No matter what's done, it offends some," Ms. DeCrow says with a shrug. "The timid, cautious people are not going to change the world."

At 39, Ms. DeCrow's personality and style are as controversial as her ideological differences with some NOW members. She can be maddeningly flip-pant, unyielding and independent.

At the Democratic National Convention, for instance, she flatly refused to accept a compromise with Jimmy Carter that promised somewhat less than the 50 per cent representation at future conventions that women convention delegates had pressed for.

"If God can ordain equal representation of women and men, can the Democratic Party do less?" she demanded.

Asked once whether she would marry again, the twice divorced Ms. DeCrow said she doubted it, mainly because, "it just isn't my cup of tea," and because she is convinced "the best sex and friendships occur outside of marriage."

One recent day, a just-awakened Karen DeCrow, clad in a plush long robe and squinting to see without her contact lenses, opened her front door at 11 a.m. "I'm a nightowl!" she explained.

She grew up in Chicago in what she describes as a happy, middle-class Jewish family "with no boys." She was a "gutsy kid who thought I could do anything I wanted," and in high school she "ran almost everything," got straight A's and had no shortage of dates. But she was mainly interested in finding a husband "who would be a great success."

"I used to sit around the coffee shop looking for medical students, or sit in that part of the library where the law students studied," she said.

Six months after graduation, she was married to a law student.

In both marriages, she moved where her husbands' jobs took them and did most of the housework," she says.

"I had gotten the message very clearly — that women are subordinate to men, that women are supposed to be helpmates, that men are judged by their actions, women by their appearances, and that, as Simone de Beauvoir says, men are punished for being failures, women are punished for being successes."

When she ran for re-election, she pledged to take NOW "out of the mainstream and into the revolution" by making poverty, racism and lesbian rights concerns of the women's movement.

That position aroused the angry criticism, but she says she decided lesbian rights was a feminist issue when she saw "the furor it caused in NOW and realized that people are terrified of any person who is not going to play the proper role."

She decided not to run for another term as president, which brings up the question, what will the once-president of NOW do now.

"I have lots of lovely alternatives," she says. "I'm definitely going to write a book on my trip to China and practice law."

"Maybe I'll run for Congress."

Sicilian hometown hails visiting screen director

BISACQUINO, Sicily (AP) — Hollywood director Frank Capra, who turns 80 next month, made a sentimental journey to find his roots and got a hero's welcome from the Sicilian town he left 74 years ago.

Capra's car was mobbed Friday as he drove past the stone huts, cactus trees and vineyards of southwest Sicily into this town of 8,000. The local band accompanied the procession through the streets.

"Oh, zio, ciao, benvenuto," were the greetings from six nephews and nieces, all dressed in black, and their 36 children. None had met the movie-maker before.

"I worked hard all my life. I had some success. But the real success is yours for being so close to the earth and God," Capra told the cheering crowd through an interpreter.

"Welcome," Mayor Antonio Russo told Capra, "this is your land. This is a land that demands sacrifice but also forms generous people. And our people still go to exile."

At the turn of the century Salvatore and Rosaria Capra sold their two-story stone house for 2,000 lire, worth $220 now, and left with Frank and five other children. First they traveled on mule-back to Corleone, then by bus to Palermo and finally by boat to America.

The Capras left behind one daughter, Ignazia, who died here in 1961. Her children opened their arms and houses to the director from Palm Springs, Calif.

One relative even knocked down a wall in a house to create a dining room large enough to seat 50. They offered him Sicilian rose wine and bubbling white spumante to go with a six-course bistecca dinner topped with birthday cake.

"How wonderful to be back with you," said Capra, who turns 80 on May 18.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Anjelica Huston, who was in the house where film director Roman Polanski allegedly raped a 13-year-old girl, will testify for the prosecution, authorities say.

Miss Huston's testimony can put the girl in a bedroom with Polanski," Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael Montagna said Friday. "It corroborates the girl's story."

NOT AT BERG MOTOR CO.

Look at these EPA Gas Mileage Estimates:

CADILLAC	CITY	HIGHWAY
	14 MPG	18 MPG
Coupe DeVille	14 MPG	18 MPG
Sedan DeVille	14 MPG	18 MPG

OLDSMOBILE	CITY	HIGHWAY
	16 MPG	21 MPG
98 Coupe, Standard 350 V8	16 MPG	21 MPG
Optional 403 V8	15 MPG	21 MPG
98 Sedan, Standard 350 V8	16 MPG	21 MPG
Optional 403 V8	15 MPG	21 MPG

Certainly your individual fuel economy can vary due to your own driving habits, weather conditions, traffic, etc., but these EPA estimates do dispel the Gas Guzzler identity of Cadillac and Oldsmobile 98.

We invite you to come by our dealership to get the full economy with luxury story, and drive the Cadillac or Oldsmobile of your choice.

Gene Littler shoots sizzling 67 for Houston Open lead

HOUSTON (AP) — Gene Littler birdied the par-five 16th hole after a controversial shot into the green, finished out a five-under-par 67 and opened up a five-stroke lead over George Burns in Saturday's third round of the $200,000 Houston Open Golf Tournament.

Stanton, Estacado win regional track crowns

ODESSA — It took longer to get the results of some of the races than it did to run the meet. So long, long after most folks had gone home and after track officials reviewed tapes of controversial races at nearby Odessa College, Stanton and Lubbock Estacado were declared winners of the Region V track meet.

James of Dunbar had it his way. Ector's Alvin Woodard beat James by four or five yards in the 100 and as the pair came up the track they were jawing at one another.

HOWEVER, IN the final A race of the day, and one of the best, Stanton nipped Wellington in the stretch to win the mile relay with a 3:24.2 to a 3:24.6 for the Rockets.

Rebels topple Permian behind Richard, 3-1

ODESSA — Jeff Mathews' two-run, seventh inning single catapulted the Lee Rebels to a 3-1 District 5-4A victory over Permian here Saturday afternoon.

Mathews' safety broke a 1-1 deadlock and gave Coach Ernie Johnson's diamondmen a 1-4 second half district record. Permian fell to 2-3.

Mike Richard went all the way on the hill for the Rebels, scattering four hits, walking just two and striking out six. Lou Swain was the victim of the unfavorable decision for the Panthers, although he also gave just four hits and struck out eight.

Lee's Pat Moore walked to lead off the seventh, and with one out, Don Rasure was also walked by Swain. With Mathews in the batter's box, Johnson put on the double steal, and it worked to perfection, putting both Moore and Rasure in scoring position. Then, Mathews unloaded his timely single through the left side of the Panther infield.

Permian got on the board first in the contest, notching a single run in the fourth. Stan Striffler hit a ground rule double, went to third on a sacrifice fly by Chris Dawson, and scored on Bobby Riggs' base hit through the middle.

Lee bounced back two innings later on a run scoring single by Brad Wright. Todd Clements started the rally with a double to left, and went to third on an infield grounder before Wright knocked him home to tie things at 1-1.

Swain held the Rebels hitless through the first four innings, before Robbie Robertson singled through the left side with two down in the fifth.

Lee will be on the road Tuesday, traveling to Abilene for a tilt with the Eagles, before closing the 1977 season next Saturday against Midland.

Odessa High downs Purple Pack with rally

Odessa High came up with a seventh inning run Saturday afternoon to break a 3-3 tie and hand the Midland High baseball team their twentieth defeat of the season, 4-3, at the Memorial Stadium diamond.

The Bronchos' Don Connally was the lad that twisted the knife into the carcass of Coach Larry Peel's Bulldogs, as his sacrifice fly with no one out in the seventh, scored teammate Barney Marquez from third, with what proved to be the winning run.

Canadiens waltz past New York Islanders

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Montreal's Steve Shutt, Guy Lafleur and Jim Roberts were handed easy goals in the first 8½ minutes, and the Canadiens waltzed to a 4-0 victory over the New York Islanders Saturday night for a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven National Hockey League semifinal series.

The Canadiens can wrap up the Stanley Cup series, and gain the final round for the 24th time, Tuesday night in Montreal where they haven't lost in 38 games since last Oct. 30.

Montreal goalie Ken Dryden was rarely tested and faced only 18 shots in recording his third shutout in eight playoff games this season. It didn't take the high-flying Canadiens long to deflate a roaring crowd of 15,317 at the Nassau Coliseum, and they were helped as much by the Islanders' generosity as by their own ability.

Shutt, who set an NHL record for left wings by scoring 60 goals during the regular season, got his fifth of the playoffs and first of two in the loss, despite pitching a fine game. He gave up only seven hits and allowed only one earned run, but it was the same old, old story, as the Pack committed four errors, every one of them costly.

Brian Cantrell, the sophomore righthander for Odessa picked up the win, limiting Midland to just four hits. All three of the Bulldog runs were unearned.

With the score tied 3-3, Marquez led off the seventh with a double to left, and moved to third on an infield single by Cal Adams that shortstop Jimmy Zachry got to but was unable to make a play. After making the catch of Connally's fly, Midland centerfielder made a perfect one-hop throw to the plate that beat Marquez by more than six feet. But Roger Copeland, who came into catch for James Allen an inning earlier, dropped the throw, and Marquez came across. Copeland had missed the last two games with a broken nose which he sustained in a home plate collision in the Big Spring game.

Midland's Wilson 2nd in Regional mile run

Floydada won the AA division with 55 points. Morton was a distant second with 40.

"I can tell you one thing," McCowan said after the event. "I'll be back next year, and I'll be better."

Lubbock Coronado's Les Brewer was the surprise winner of the shot with a toss of 80-2 feet. Brewer had never thrown past 60 feet before and he did it three times here. San Angelo's Harold Ledet, the favorite, was second with a 59-8½.

Midland Lee senior David Skinner finished last in the 880, another race that was run in record breaking time. Hereford's James Mays broke the record with a 1:52.0. San Angelo's Ed Bruning was third with a 1:55.0, his best time.

Odessa struck first in the contest, scoring a pair of runs in the second inning. With one out, Joe Cortez reached base on an error and stole second. The steal was really unnecessary though, because third baseman Johnny Morrison followed it up with a home run to give the Bronchos a 2-0 lead.

The Bulldogs narrowed the gap to one in the bottom of the inning with an unearned run. A walk to Kevin Widner, an error on a ball hit by Allen and a grounder by Joe Mowles that nobody made a play on loaded the bases with one out, and a successful squeeze bunt by Doug Atnipp pushed across Widner.

Odessa added one more in the sixth to make it 3-1, but Midland tied it in the same inning when Zachry reached on an error, and Ricky Goode's line single to center went through the outfielder's legs. Both runners came around to score.

The Bronchos picked up the crucial run in the seventh, and Cantrell put Midland away in the bottom half, but not before a scare. Steve Cole hit a two out single to left to keep things alive for the Pack, and Pearce came within a few feet of winning his own game. But his fly ball to left was caught up against the fence.

Austin nabs LPGA lead in Alabama

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Debbie Austin of West Palm Beach, Fla., broke out of a first-round, three-way tie to take a one-stroke lead after the second round of the Ladies PGA Birmingham Classic by one stroke Saturday.

The blonde 29-year-old shot a 69 Friday she posted a four-under-par 68 to bring her total to 137 at the sixth annual tournament at Green Valley Country Club.

She has been playing on tours for nine years and has never won a tournament.

In the first round, Miss Austin was tied for first with Mary Lou Crocker and Debbie Massey. Miss Crocker fell back to 16th position with a second round 74 for a 142 and Miss Massey slipped slightly to third with a one-under-par 71 for 139.

Veteran Carol Mann, who was fourth Friday, moved up to second place with a 69. She shot a 69 in the first round for a 138.

Miss Austin played a remarkable solid round with three birdies and no bogeys. All her birdies came on the front nine, from a 10-foot putt on No. 2, a 13-footer at No. 4, and a 25-footer at No. 6.

"I felt I played as well as I possibly can," she said. "I hit the ball solidly, but didn't make a lot of birdie putts I could have. I had a lot of tries from under 15 feet. I had six good chances on the back nine."

"I thought I held my composure well and didn't make too many bad swings. I hope to hold up tomorrow. I'll take a 69 right now and let them shoot at it. But I have to play, so I'll try to play the course and not the people."

Evert loses in Georgia

PLAIN, Ga. (AP) — Chris Evert lost her singles match for the second consecutive day, but teammates' steady play made up for it as the Phoenix Racquets defeated the Soviets 30-23 in World Team Tennis Saturday.

The day's events, billed as the "First Annual Peanut Tennis Classic," also included an exhibition doubles match that featured President Carter's brother Billy and the clowning of Bobby Riggs.

A crowd of about 4,000 cheered the tennis and antics.

NBA playoffs resume play today

By The Associated Press

"Playoffs," John Havlicek said with masterful understatement, "bring out the best in everybody."

If nothing else, it brings out the best in the Boston Celtics.

The National Basketball Association's defending champions spent this year just sort of hot-and-coldly it along, winding up with a fair-to-middling 44-38 record and not even assuring

New York skipper angry over absence of Torrez from team

NEW YORK (AP) — Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees, angered by the unexplained absence of newly acquired Mike Torrez, said Saturday if it were up to him he would slap the missing pitcher "with the heaviest fine baseball ever saw." Martin was visibly upset by conflicting reports that had Torrez either visiting his ailing wife in Montreal or on a fishing trip with his agent.

"I'll tell you what I'd do if I were the general manager—I'd say for every day you're not here it'll cost you $5,000. He'd be on the next plane," Martin said. "If it's his wife, then I have no qualms about his not being here. But if it's his contract, then I don't understand it because he's signed for this year. "At least I'd appreciate a phone call. He hasn't pitched an inning for me and I'm already teed off at him. If he's not here by tomorrow, he's in deep trouble."

A spokesman for the Yankees quoted Torrez' agent as saying the pitcher was in Montreal with his wife. "His agent, Gary Walker, called me today and told me he was in Montreal because of his wife," said Cedric Tallis, vice president of the Yankees. "He said she lost a lot of blood and needed transfusions."

However, Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, reported Saturday that an identifying himself as Torrez' brother answered the telephone at the pitcher's home in Montreal late Friday night and said Torrez had gone fishing with Walker.

The newspaper also said Mrs. Walker told it from her home in Phoenix that her husband was "on a fishing trip somewhere in northern Arizona."

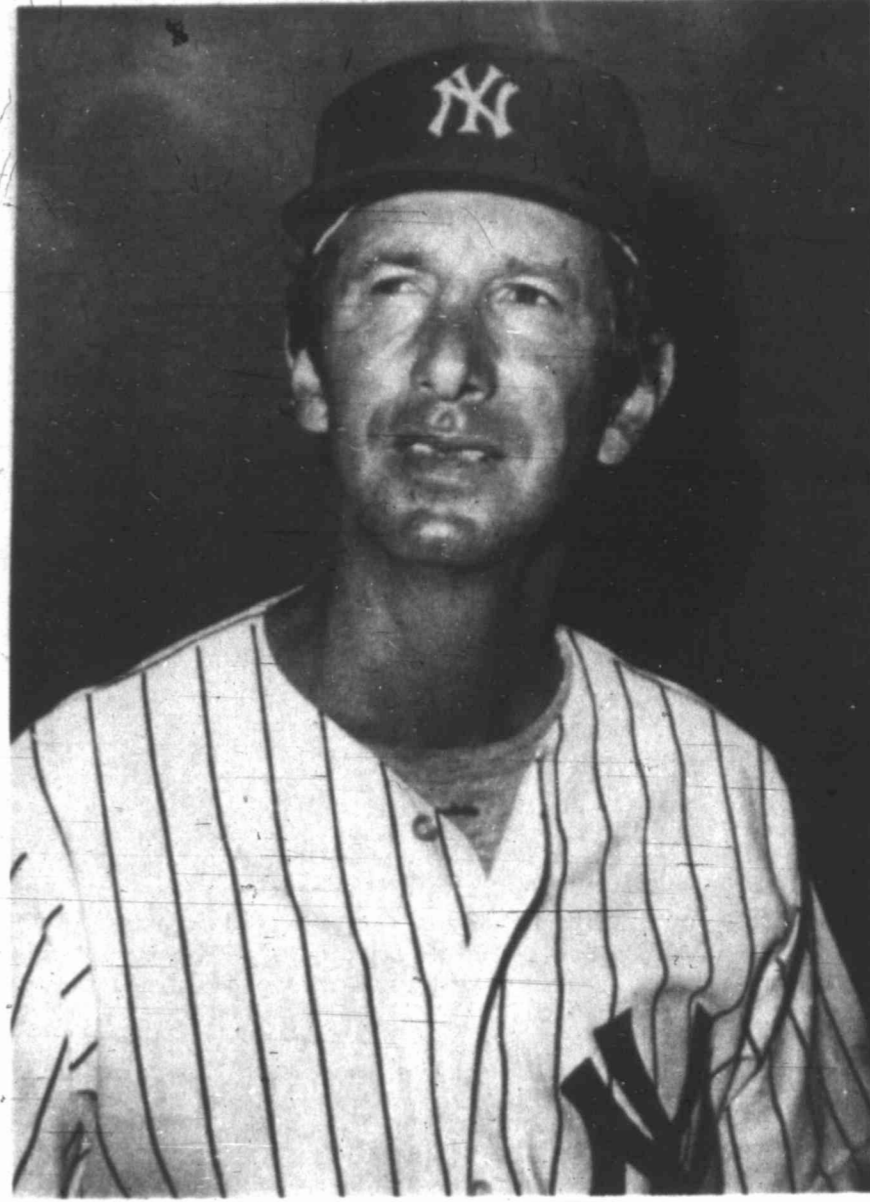

Mrs. Walker told The Associated Press Saturday that her husband was unreachable "somewhere in northern Arizona" and was not expected home "until tomorrow or possibly the next day."

Meanwhile, reporter Dan Lauck of Newsday said a man identifying himself as Walker answered at the agent's Phoenix number but the phone went dead when Lauck asked where Torrez was.

Torrez was acquired Wednesday from the Oakland A's in a trade for pitcher Dock Ellis, infielder Marty Perez and a minor league outfielder. Under baseball regulations, a traded player has 72 hours to report to his new team from the time he receives written notice of the deal from his old club.

"He left Oakland before the notice reached him," Tallis said. "But we assume the Oakland club wired him. This is a ridiculous situation. It's the damndest thing I ever heard of. We have done everything in our power to establish contact with him. "Certainly we understand that if it's a matter of a serious illness, you can't expect a fellow to leave his wife."

Torrez signed with Oakland for the 1977 season but is eligible to become a free agent at the end of the year because he has six years of major league service.

Bruins nearing crown in Stanley Cup series

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins, on the threshold of gaining the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup championship round, are taking nothing for granted as they bid for a four-game sweep of the Philadelphia Flyers tonight at the Boston Garden. "It's 3-0, but we're not counting them out," Boston Coach Don Cherry said. "In fact, when we were going into after winning the third game Thursday night, Jean Ratelle came up and said he hadn't won anything yet. You just don't count the Flyers out at any time—until you win four."

"We still have one more to go," said defenseman Mike Milbury, whose third period goal lifted Boston to a 2-1 victory Thursday night. "We'll give it our best shot Sunday night. Give those guys life and they'll be right back in it before you know it."

"They're capable of winning four in a row," warned goalie Gerry Cheevers, who has been spectacular against the Flyers. "I still say anyone would have to be insane to predict we'll win four in a row.

"They're a bunch of good, pro hockey players, a bunch of fierce competitors. They won't quit just because they're down 3-0. I expect them to come out flying."

Cheevers, who helped the Bruins to Stanley Cup championships in 1970 and '72, is credited with being the big difference in the first three games. He backstopped Boston to a 4-3 overtime victory and then a 5-4 decision in double overtime at Philadelphia.

Kendall breaks up game for Cleveland

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Fred Kendall's 12th-inning sacrifice fly broke up a scoreless pitching duel, and Cleveland's Dennis Eckersley fired a three-hitter for 11 innings, leading the Indians over the Milwaukee Brewers 1-0 in a nationally-televised baseball game Saturday. Loser Jim Slaton, 1-1, who had pitched out of several jams, carried an eight-hitter into the 12th but then gave up a leadoff single to John Lowenstein.

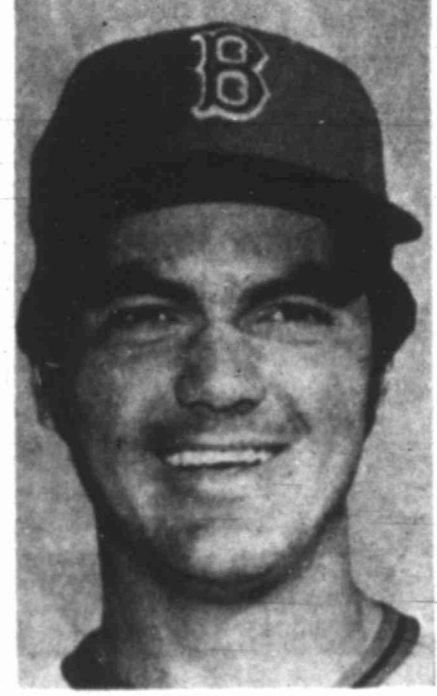

Larvell Blanks dropped a bunt down the third base line, and catcher Larry Haney threw the ball down the right field line for a two-base error, permitting Lowenstein to race to third and Blanks to take second. Lowenstein scored when Kendall, the next batter, flied to center.

The Brewers loaded the bases in the last of the 12th with nobody out, but reliever Dave LaRoche pitched out of the jam with the help of a homerun double play to LaRoche fanned Haney to end the game in dramatic fashion.

Eckersley, 2-1, retired 13 successive batters until hitting Don Money with a 1-2 pitch to start the Brewers' 10th. Money took second on a sacrifice, but Eckersley made a fine play to throw out Sixto Lezcano on a chopper to the left side.

United States keeping alive in Davis Cup

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The United States managed to stay alive in Davis Cup tennis competition Saturday by beating Argentina in the crucial doubles match of the American Zone final.

In a two-hour match, Americans Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNair defeated the Argentine pair of Elio Alvarez and Ricardo Cano 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, reducing Argentina's lead in the best-of-five series to 2-1.

The remaining two singles matches are scheduled for today. Saturday's was expected on both sides since the U.S. team is regarded as having the strongest doubles pair. The only surprise was that Argentina did not field its top player, Guillermo Vilas, in the doubles as had been expected.

Born Argentine non-playing team captain Oscar Fursten said he decided at the last minute to replace Vilas with Alvarez in order to give Vilas a chance to rest for Sunday's match against Dick Stockton of Dallas. Ricardo Cano, who upset Stockton on Friday, meets Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in the other singles match. Vilas beat Gottfried on Friday.

In the doubles, the American pair showed top form from the start, but they appeared more vulnerable when McNair, from Washington, D.C., served. His service was broken once by Cano, but the Americans in return broke Cano's service twice to comfortably take the first set.

In the second set, the U.S. players broke Alvarez's service in the seventh game to take the vital lead and hold on to it until they won the set. McNair scored continually when close to the net in the third set and smashed balls at his opponents' feet, as the U.S. pair broke Alvarez's service twice for the set win.

"We knew Argentina had troubles in doubles but I did not think it was going to be that easy," said Stewart of Houston. His teammate McNair said: "I'm very happy that we won the vital point for the United States, but this does not mean our troubles are over. We still have to win twice tomorrow to make it."

Alvarez, the Argentine player who does not even figure in his country's national tennis ranking because he lives in Los Angeles, said that he felt satisfied despite the defeat. "It was better this way without Vilas, otherwise the pressure would have been bigger," Alvarez said. Vilas and Alvarez have played before in doubles but the last time they lost their country's only point against Chile two weeks ago.

Rangers bomb Chisox with three homers

CHICAGO (AP) — Claudell Washington, Ken Henderson and Willie Horton blasted home runs Saturday to power to Texas Rangers to a 14-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Washington's homer came off starter Chris Knapp, 3-1, with two outs in the third after Chet Lemon had dropped Bert Campaneris' fly ball in center field for an error.

Henderson and Horton both homered in the eighth inning off Wilbur Wood, who was making his first appearance since May 9, 1976, when his left knee was shattered by a line drive off the bat of Detroit's Ron LeFlore.

Henderson greeted Wood with an inside-the-park homer and after Mike Hargrove had singled and Toby Harrah had walked, Horton hit the upper deck facade for his second homer. In between the home run barrage, Sandy Alomar drove in three runs with a pair of singles and scored another. Tommy Boggs started for the Rangers but was unable to get past the fourth inning when Lemon knocked him out with a two-run single. Nelson Briles relieved and gained his second victory against no losses.

NEW YORK (AP) — Thurman Munson and Reggie Jackson homered in support of Ed Figueroa's seven-hit pitching and the New York Yankees trounced the Seattle Mariners 7-2 Saturday for their third consecutive triumph and ninth in 10 games.

Jackson's third home run of the season and first in Yankee Stadium touched off a four-run third inning against loser Gary Wheelock, 2-3, and Bill Laxton after Munson homered in the first inning and Willie Randolph tripled two runs across in the second. Bob Stinson smashed his first home run of the season into the upper right field stands in the third inning for Seattle.

Hisle paces Twins past Tigers, 7-3

MINNESOTA (AP) — Larry Hisle drove in four runs and southpaw Geoff Zahn registered his fourth straight victory of the season Saturday as the Minnesota Twins whipped the Detroit Tigers 7-3.

Hisle led the Twins' 12-hit performance with three hits, including a two-run first-inning homer off losing pitcher Dave Roberts, 1-4.

Zahn, 4-0, scattered 12 hits, struck out seven and walked two. The Tigers, who had scored a run in the first inning on Rusty Staub's RBI double, scored single runs in the fourth and the fifth innings. Tito Fuentes singled in the fourth-inning run and Jason Thompson's fifth home run of the season concluded the Tiger scoring. Minnesota took a 7-3 lead in the sixth inning when pinch-hitter Butch Wynegar singled in a run and extended his hitting string to nine games.

Ali: surrounded, yet alone

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

It was the night before the Muhammad Ali-Joe Bugner fight in 1973 and John Marshall was bidding time in a Las Vegas casino playing black jack. Suddenly, a man who introduced himself as Ali's lawyer, sat down next to Marshall and asked the 42-year-old Hollywood producer if he would like to meet his famous client. Marshall didn't have to be asked twice.

"I had always been fascinated by the man," Marshall explained, "and I jumped at the opportunity to meet him. We clicked as soon as we were introduced. I liked him and he liked me."

It doesn't seem humanly possible that one man can create so many diverse opinions about himself, but Ali has. Many have labeled him a modern day folk hero and worship the ground he walks on. Still others would like nothing better than to see a gun put to his head. They regard him as a traitor to his country for his refusal to enter the service in the late sixties, in addition to an arrogant conceited bum.

Marshall claims to know Ali better than any white man in existence. Since they met four years ago in Vegas, the two have traveled all over the world together, and on May 20, in more than 650 theaters across the United States, the Marshall-produced film, "The Greatest," the screen biography of Ali, starring the heavyweight champion himself, will be released.

WHAT IS Ali really like? Are his constant displays of pompousness and arrogance for real, or are they merely a guise? Does he really believe the words that spout continually from his mouth ("I am the greatest"), or are they just a promotional stunt to sell his fights as many people claim? Are we seeing the real thing, or is it all merely a facade, hiding an entirely different human being?

"It's a total facade," Marshall said, "because in fact, Ali is not arrogant at all. As an individual, he is very generous; generous to a fault. He is very modest in private life. He's like a fairground Barker. The only time you

Marshall related an incident that he witnessed just eight months ago. He, his wife and Ali were walking down Fifth Avenue in New York City, when they were accosted by a typical Madison Avenue type man and his daughter. The young girl's name was Susan and she was about 10 or 11 as Marshall best remembers.

The man asked Ali if he could have an autograph for his daughter. "The extraordinary thing about the public when they ask for an autograph," Marshall said, "is that it's never for themselves. It's always for my daughter, or my son, or my sister or my grandmother."

ALI BENT down by the young girl, and asked her if she went to school. She said yes. Then Ali asked her if she knew who he was before her father stopped and asked him for his autograph.

"Yes," she answered and added, "Daddy's right. You always say you're the greatest."

then asked Susan if she would like a photograph of him. Again she said yes. He told her he would go back to his hotel room and get her one if she made him one promise.

"I want you to take it to school tomorrow," he explained, "and show it to all your friends. Tell them Muhammad Ali gave it to you, but tell them I'm not really the greatest. I just say I'm the greatest to promote my fights."

That, Marshall says, is the real Ali. Marshall made an interesting analogy about Ali. "He is the epitome of the loneliness of the long distance runner," he said quite thoughtfully.

as he leaned back and stroked his beard. "He is a man that is constantly surrounded by the public. He can't go to a motel or an airport or walk down the street without being constantly mobbed by people from all walks of life: from sophisticated stock brokers, to ad men, to bankers, to lawyers, to presidents, to kids in the streets, to pimps and to prostitutes."

"But when he is on his own, he is very much alone. He is a private person and a very lonely man in many ways. He has very few real friends."

"There are an awful lot of people that think they know Ali, but they don't really know him at all," he added. "There are very few reporters who have interviewed Ali alone. They've always been one of 50 or 60 or more."

That's true. And when he's in front of numbers, he becomes Ali, the showman. Ali, the promoter. There is no little girl named Susan in front of him any more. She is replaced by quote-hungry sports writers; sports writers whose words will reach millions. And Ali uses them like messenger boys to promote his next fight.

THE INTERVIEW is slowly drawing to a close. Marshall has a meeting with a lawyer in just a few, short minutes, and I don't have any more room on my tape recorder. But he does make one final analogy about Ali; one last epitomization.

"He has led a most unusual and controversial life," he said of his friend. "The title song of the movie, 'I Always Knew I Had It In Me,' is very appropriate. He is the epitome of 'To Thine Own Self Be True.' He has always done things his way, which have proved to be correct. He is a man who has continually gone against the norm, and has that great ability to turn what appears to be absolute disaster into total victory."

"How many men at the height of their boxing career could be taken out of it for three and a half years, and then come back and become the highest paid athlete in the history of the world?"

How many indeed.

UTEP's Waigwa in Penn upset

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Texas-El Paso's Wilson Waigwa, dead last in a nine-man field on the first lap, ticked past defending champion Paul Cummings on the final turn out of the backstretch to win the Penn Relays mile in 3 minutes 53.58 seconds, the second fastest mile ever run at historic Franklin Field.

Waigwa, a late entry in the event, ran by a field that finished with the top six runners all under four minutes. The UTEP runner from Kenya was about six yards as Cummings faded under the hot pace to finish fifth in 3:57.2.

Steve Scott of the University of California-Irvine, who last month ran a 1:48.1 in a half-mile and a 3:57.8 mile within one hour, finished second to Waigwa in 3:55.1.

Steve Foster of the Florida Athletic Club, the 1,500-meter Florida relay champion, was third, also in 3:55.1.

Ron Speirs, the former Rutgers runner now representing the New York AC, was fourth in 3:56.9, followed by Cummings and East Tennessee's Ray Flynn, the Ohio Valley champion, in 3:59.4.

Earlier on the sun-splashed 70-degree second day of the 83rd annual track and field carnival, the Tennessee Volunteers ran away with the 6,000-meter relay and then captured the 440-meter shuttle hurdles on a disqualification.

Scott set the early pace, running the first quarter in 58.6, with Speirs second and Cummings third. Waigwa was running last, at least five yards behind the next runner.

Scott still led at the half-mile mark, clocked in 1:58.4. Speirs and Cummings were still his closest competition. Waigwa had moved up two notches, but was still well out of the chase.

Cummings moved ahead of Scott in the third lap, with Speirs dropping back to third and Waigwa making a big move as he took fourth. The three quarters was run in 2:58.1.

A crowd of 39,000, sensing the field might better the meet record of 3:52.3 set by North Carolina's Tony Waldrop in 1974, started to roar as Waigwa accelerated in the back stretch of the final lap.

He went by those first three runners as if they were standing still.

The UTEP star widened his lead once he got in front and won easily by about six yards with a 54.9 final quarter. The rest of the field just battled for second in the stretch.

Czechoslovakia rallies to down Sweden on ice

VIENNA (AP) — Defending champion Czechoslovakia rallied in the third period Saturday to defeat Sweden 3-1 in the World Ice Hockey Championships, spoiling the Swedes' unbeaten record.

In a later game, the United States played the Soviet Union in the Stadhalle.

At 7:21, Frantisek Pospisil, the Czech captain, set up Oldrich Machac's insurance goal, a slap shot from just inside the blue line.

The Swedes scored first, at 8:52, on a goal by Martin Karlsson, assisted by Per Olov Brasar. Czechoslovakia tied with a power-play goal at 18:25 when Marian Stastny, Peter's brother, set up Jaroslav Pouzar. The Czechs claimed a goal in the second period when a shot by Frantisek Kaberle almost got past Astrom, but Canadian referee Marcel Vaillancourt ruled the puck had not crossed the line.

Cowboys in market

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry says it is imperative that the team comes up with a third quarterback for the 1977 National Football League season.

"We were in a very precarious situation last season when Danny White (the backup quarterback to Roger Staubach) was running around with a torn cartilage and Roger got his hand hurt," says Landry. "With just a couple of hits in the wrong spots, we could've very easily have been out of business."

Landry continues "I believe we should come up with a third quarterback. We didn't get to play Danny as much as we would have liked last season, but when we put him in he performed for us."

Bell probable first choice

NEW YORK (AP) — The Tampa Bay Buccaneers' record-setting utility finally pays off this Tuesday when they get the first shot at the cream of the collegiate crop in the National Football League draft.

And, unless the Bucs pull a reverse, the guess is they'll welcome another Southern California alumnus to former USC Coach John McKay's roster.

Ricky Bell, the former star running back for the Trojans, figures to be the No. 1 pick of the Bucs, not the first team to go winless in a season but the first to do it in a 14-game season. They achieved that feat by losing to the other 13 American Conference teams plus the Seattle

Seahawks, the NFL's other expansion entry. According to which scout you're talking to, the top college running back last year—the Heisman Trophy notwithstanding—was either Bell or Pitt's Tony Dorsett, the Heisman winner. Bell, at 6-foot-2 and about 220 pounds, has a bit of an edge in size over the 5-11, 200-pound Dorsett—but that's not the principal reason McKay figures to go for Ricky when NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle proclaims the draft open at 10 a.m., EDT, in New York.

McKay coached Bell at Southern Cal, just as he coached Anthony Davis, another star runner joining the Bucs after a brief stint with the Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian Football League...and just as he coached a number of other names on the Tampa Bay roster.

Bell, by the way, has some impressive statistics—276 carries for 1,417 yards and 14 touchdowns in 10 games, plus 11 receptions for 85 yards. Dorsett, too, has solid numbers—338 carries, 1,948 yards and 21 touchdowns in 11 games, plus seven catches for 73 yards and a TD.

New York skipper angry over absence of Torre from team

NEW YORK (AP)—Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees, angered by the unexplained absence of newly acquired Mike Torre, said Saturday if it were up to him he would slap the missing pitcher "with the heaviest fine baseball ever saw." Martin was visibly upset by conflicting reports that Torre either was visiting his ailing wife in Montreal or on a fishing trip with his agent.

"I'll tell you what I'd do if I were the general manager—I'd say for every day you're not here it'll cost you $5,000. He'd be on the next plane," Martin said. "If it's his wife, then I have no qualms about his not being here. But if it's his contract, then I don't understand it because he's signed for this year.

"At least I'd appreciate a phone call. He hasn't pitched an inning for me and I'm already teed off at him. If he's not here by tomorrow, he's in deep trouble."

A spokesman for the Yankees quoted Torre's agent as saying the pitcher was in Montreal with his wife.

"His agent, Gary Walker, called me today and told me he was in Montreal because of his wife," said Cedric Tallis, vice president of the Yankees. "He said she lost a lot of blood and needed transfusions."

However, Newsday, a Long Island newspaper, reported Saturday that amn identifying himself as Torre's brother answered the telephone at the pitcher's home in Montreal late Friday night and said Torre had gone fishing with Walker.

The newspaper also said Mrs. Walker told it from her home in Phoenix that her husband was "on a fishing trip somewhere in northern Arizona."

Mrs. Walker told The Associated Press Saturday that her husband was unreachable "somewhere in northern Arizona" and was not expected home "until tomorrow or possibly the next day."

Meanwhile, reporter Dan Lauck of Newsday said a man identifying himself as Walker answered at the agent's Phoenix number but the phone went dead when Lauck asked where Torre was.

Torre was acquired Wednesday from the Oakland A's in a trade for pitcher Dock Ellis, infielder Marty Perez and a minor league outfielder. Under baseball regulations, a traded player has 72 hours to report to his new team from the time he receives written notice of the deal from his old club.

"He left Oakland before the notice reached him," Tallis said. "But we assume the Oakland club wired him. This is a ridiculous situation. It's the damndest thing I ever heard of. We have done everything in our power to establish contact with him.

"Certainly we understand that if it's a matter of a serious illness, you can't expect a fellow to leave his wife."

Torre signed with Oakland for the 1977 season but is eligible to become a free agent at the end of the year because he has six years of major league service.

Bruins nearing crown in Stanley Cup series

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Bruins, on the threshold of gaining the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup championship round, are taking nothing for granted as they bid for a four-game sweep of the Philadelphia Flyers tonight at the Boston Garden.

"It's 3-0, but we're not counting them out," Boston Coach Don Cherry said. "In fact, when we were going nuts after winning the third game Thursday night, Jean Ratelle came up and said he hadn't won anything yet. You just don't count the Flyers out at any time—until you win four."

"We still have one more to go," said defenseman Mike Milbury, whose third period goal lifted Boston to a 2-1 victory Thursday night. "We'll give it our best shot Sunday night. Give those guys life and they'll be right back in it before you know it."

"They're capable of winning four in a row," warned goalie Gerry Cheevers, who has been spectacular against the Flyers. "I still say anyone would have to be insane to predict we'll win four in a row.

"They're a bunch of good, pro-d hockey players, a bunch of fierce competitors. They won't quit just because they're down 3-0. I expect them to come out flying."

Cheevers, who helped the Bruins to Stanley Cup championships in 1970 and '72, is credited with being the big difference in the first three games. He backstopped Boston to a 4-3 overtime victory and then a 5-4 decision in double overtime at Philadelphia.

Kendall breaks up game for Cleveland

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Fred Kendall's 12th-inning sacrifice fly broke up a scoreless pitching duel, and Cleveland's Dennis Ekersley fired a three-batter for 11 innings, leading the Indians over the Milwaukee Brewers 1-0 in a nationally televised baseball game Saturday.

Loser Jim Slaton, 1-1, who had pitched out of several jams, carried an eight-inning lead into the 12th but then gave up a leadoff single to John Lowenstein.

Larvell Blanks dropped a bunt down the third base line, and catcher Larry Haney threw the ball down the right field line for a two-base error, permitting Lowenstein to race to third and Blanks to take second. Lowenstein scored when Kendall, the next batter, fled to center.

The Brewers loaded the bases in the last of the 12th with nobody out, but reliever Dave LaRoche pitched out of a jam with the help of a home-

Ekersley, 2-1, retired 13 successive batters until hitting Don Money with a 1-2 pitch to start the Brewers' 10th. Money took second on a sacrifice, but Ekersley made a fine play to throw out Sixto Lezcano on a chopper to the left side.

After an intentional walk to Jamie Quirk, Steve Brye hit into a forceout to retire the side.

Evans, Fisk power Bosox over Oakland A's, 8-4

BOSTON (AP)—Dwight Evans belted a two-run homer and Carlton Fisk drilled three hits and scored three runs as the Boston Red Sox breezed to an 8-4 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Given the lusty support, veteran right-hander Luis Tiant, 21, earned his 181st career victory with ninth-inning relief help from Jim Willoughby.

Evans put the Red Sox in front for good with his fourth homer, a tremendous blast over the high screen in left center in the second. The Red Sox then gambled on the base paths for runs in the fifth and the sixth.

United States keeping alive in Davis Cup

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The United States managed to stay alive in Davis Cup tennis competition Saturday by beating Argentina in the crucial doubles match of the American Zone final.

In a two-hour match, Americans Sherwood Stewart and Fred McNeil defeated the Argentine pair of Elio Alvarez and Ricardo Cano 6-3, 6-4, 6-3, reducing Argentina's lead in the best-of-five series to 2-1.

The remaining two singles matches are scheduled for today.

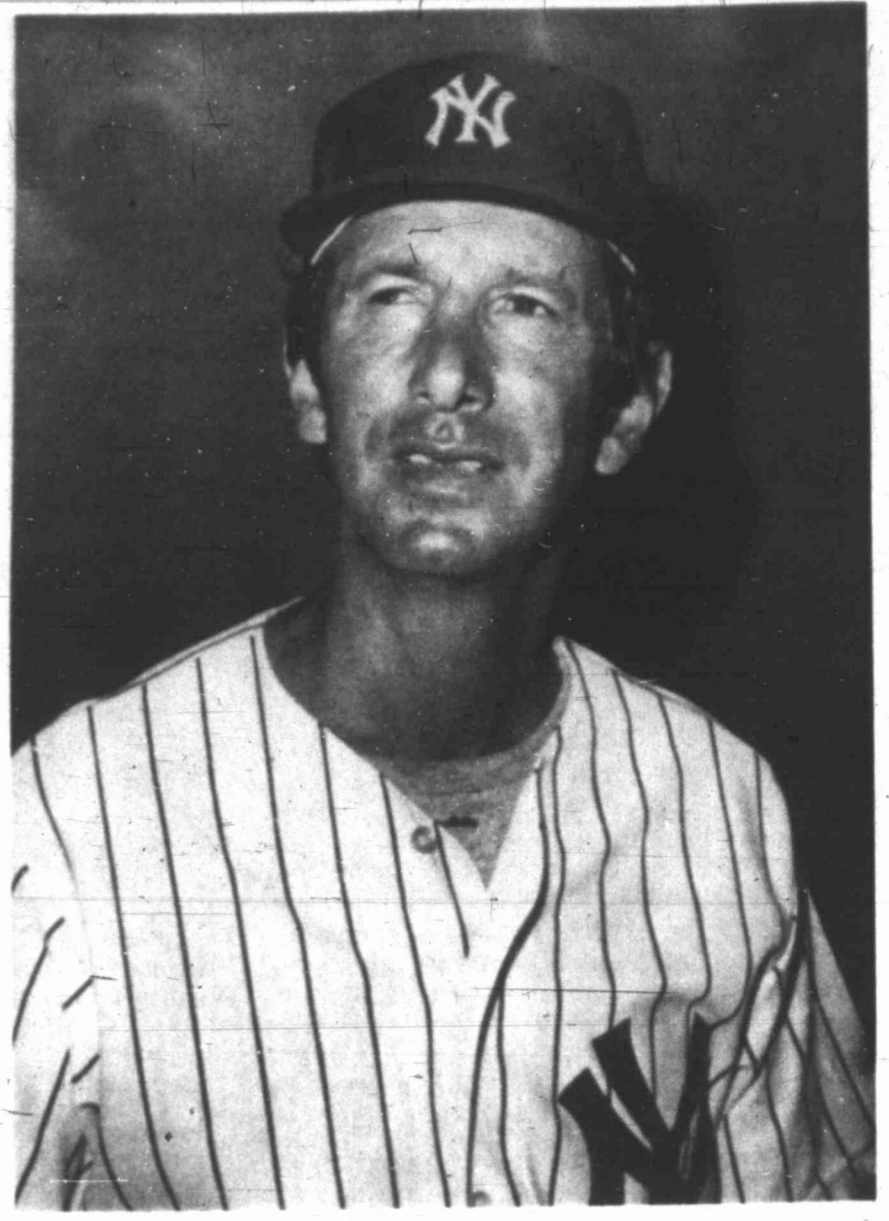

Saturday's was expected on both sides since the U.S. team is regarded as having the strongest doubles pair. The only surprise was that Argentina did not field its top player, Guillermo Vilas, in the doubles as had been expected.

But Argentine non-playing team captain Oscar Furlong said he decided at the last minute to replace Vilas with Alvarez in order to give Vilas a chance to rest for Sunday's match against Dick Stockton of Dallas. Ricardo Cano, who upset Stockton on Friday, meets Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in the other singles match. Vilas beat Gottfried on Friday.

In the doubles, the American pair showed top form from the start, but they appeared more vulnerable when McNeil, from Washington, D.C., served. His service was broken once by Cano, but the Americans in return broke Cano's service twice to comfortably take the first set.

In the second set, the U.S. players broke Alvarez's service in the seventh game to take the vital lead and hold on to it until they won the set. McNeil scored continually when close to the net in the third set and smashed balls at his opponents' feet, as the U.S. pair broke Alvarez's service twice for the set win.

"We knew Argentina had troubles in doubles but I did not think it was going to be that easy," said Stewart of Houston. His teammate McNeil said: "I'm very happy that we won the vital point for the United States, but this does not mean our troubles are over. We still have to win twice tomorrow to make it."

Hisle paces Twins past Tigers, 7-3

MINNESOTA (AP)—Larry Hisle drove in four runs and southpaw Geoff Zahn registered his fourth straight victory of the season Saturday as the Minnesota Twins whipped the Detroit Tigers 7-3.

Hisle led the Twins' 12-hit performance with three hits, including a two-run first-inning homer off losing pitcher Dave Roberts, 1-4.

Zahn, 4-0, scattered 12 hits, struck out seven and walked two.

Hisle slammed his fifth homer of the season, giving the Twins a 2-0 first-inning lead and his second-inning single produced two more runs as Minnesota took a 4-1 lead.

Rod Carew was then hit by a pitch and stormed out to the mound and punched Roberts, causing his ejection from the game. Dan Ford followed with a double to give the Twins a 6-1 cushion and finish Roberts.

The Tigers, who had scored a run in the first inning on Rusty Staub's RBI double, scored single runs in the fourth and the fifth innings. Tito Fuentes singled in the fourth-inning run and Jason Thompson's fifth home run of the season concluded the Tiger scoring.

Minnesota took a 7-3 lead in the sixth inning when pinch-hitter Butch Wynegar singled in a run and extended his hitting string to nine games.

Ali: surrounded, yet alone

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

It was the night before the Muhammad Ali-Joe Bugner fight in 1973 and John Marshall was bidding his time in a Las Vegas casino playing black jack. Suddenly, a man who introduced himself as Ali's lawyer, sat down next to Marshall and asked the 42-year-old Hollywood producer if he would like to meet his famous client. Marshall didn't have to be asked twice.

"I had always been fascinated by the man," Marshall explained, "and I jumped at the opportunity to meet him. We clicked as soon as we were introduced. I liked him and he liked me."

It doesn't seem humanly possible that one man can create so many diverse opinions about himself, but Ali has. Many have labeled him a modern day folk hero and worship the ground he walks on. Still others would like nothing better than to see a gun put to his head. They regard him as a traitor to his country for his refusal to enter the service in the late sixties, in addition to an arrogant conceited bum.

Marshall claims to know Ali better than any white man in existence. Since they met four years ago in Vegas, the two have traveled all over the world together, and on May 20, in more than 650 theaters across the United States, the Marshall-produced film, "The Greatest," the screen biography of Ali, starring the heavyweight champion himself, will be released.

WHAT IS Ali really like? Are his constant displays of pomposity and arrogance for real, or are they merely a guise? Does he really believe the words that spout continually from his mouth ("I am the greatest"), or are they just a promotional stunt to sell his fights as many people claim? Are we seeing the real thing, or is it all merely a facade, hiding an entirely different human being?

Marshall related an incident that he witnessed just eight months ago. He, his wife and Ali were walking down Fifth Avenue in New York City, when they were accosted by a typical Madison Avenue type man and his daughter. The young girl's name was Susan and she was about 10 or 11 as Marshall best remembers.

The man asked Ali if he could have an autograph for his daughter. ("The extraordinary thing about the public when they ask for an autograph," Marshall said, "is that it's never for themselves. It's always for my daughter, or my son, or my sister or my grandmother.")

ALI BENT down by the young girl, and asked her if she went to school. She said yes. Then Ali asked her if she knew who he was before her father stopped and asked him for his autograph.

"Yes," she answered and added, "Daddy's right. You always say you're the greatest."

Ali was silent for a moment, and then asked Susan if she would like a photograph of him. Again she said yes. He told her he would go back to his hotel room and get her one if she made him one promise.

"I want you to take it to school tomorrow," he explained, "and show it to all your friends. Tell them Muhammad Ali gave it to you, but tell them I'm not really the greatest. I just say I'm the greatest to promote my fights."

That, Marshall says, is the real Ali. Marshall made an interesting analogy about Ali. "He is the epitome of the loneliness of the long distance runner," he said quite thoughtfully.

as he leaned back and stroked his beard. "He is a man that is constantly surrounded by the public. He can't go to a motel or an airport or walk down the street without being constantly mobbed by people from all walks of life: from sophisticated stock brokers, to ad men, to bankers, to lawyers, to presidents, to kids in the streets, to pimps and prostitutes.

"But when he is on his own, he is very much alone. He is a private person and a very lonely man in many ways. He has very few real friends.

"There are an awful lot of people that think they know Ali, but they don't really know him at all," he added. "There are very few reporters who have interviewed Ali alone. They've always been one of 50 or 60 or more."

That's true. And when he's in front of numbers, he becomes Ali, the showman. Ali, the promoter. There is no little girl named Susan in front of him any more. She is replaced by quote-hungry sports writers; sports writers whose words will reach millions. And Ali uses them like messenger boys to promote his next fight.

THE INTERVIEW is slowly drawing to a close. Marshall has a meeting with a lawyer in just a few short minutes, and I don't have any more room on my tape recorder. But he does make one final analogy about Ali; one last epitomization.

"He has led a most unusual and controversial life," he said of his friend. "The title song of the movie, 'I Always Knew I Had It In Me,' is very appropriate. He is the epitome of 'To Thine Own Self Be True.' He has always done things his way, which have proved to be correct. He is a man who has continually gone against the norm, and has that great ability to turn what appears to be absolute disaster into total victory.

"How many men at the height of their boxing career could be taken out of it for three and a half years, and then come back and become the highest paid athlete in the history of the world?"

How many indeed.

UTEP's Waigwa in Penn upset

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Texas-El Paso's Wilson Waigwa, dead last in a nine-man field on the first lap, ticked past defending champion Paul Cummings on the final turn out of the backstretch to win the Penn Relays mile in 3 minutes 53.58 seconds, the second fastest mile ever run at historic Franklin Field.

Waigwa, a late entry in the event, ran by a field that finished with the top six runners all under four minutes. The UTEP runner from Kenya was about six yards as Cummings faded under the hot pace to finish fifth in 3:57.2.

Steve Scott of the University of California-Irvine, who last month ran a 1:48.1 in a halfmile and a 3:57.8 mile within one hour, finished second to Waigwa in 3:55.1.

Steve Foster of the Florida Athletic Club, the 1,500-meter Florida relay champion, was third, also in 3:55.1.

Ron Speirs, the former Rutgers runner now representing the New York AC, was fourth in 3:56.9, followed by Cummings and East Tennessee's Ray Flynn, the Ohio Valley champion, in 3:59.4.

Earlier on the sun-splashed 70-degree second day of the 83rd annual track and field carnival, the Tennessee Volunteers ran away with the 6,000-meter relay and then captured the 440-meter shuttle hurdles on a disqualification.

Scott set the early pace, running the first quarter in 58.6, with Speirs second and Cummings third. Waigwa was running last, at least five yards behind the next runner.

Scott still led at the half-mile mark, clocked in 1:58.4. Speirs and Cummings were still his closest competition. Waigwa had moved up two notches, but was still well out of the chase.

Cummings moved ahead of Scott in the third lap, with Speirs dropping back to third and Waigwa making a big move as he took fourth. The three quarters was run in 2:58.1.

A crowd of 39,000, sensing the field might better the meet record of 3:52.3 set by North Carolina's Tony Waldrop in 1974, started to roar as Waigwa accelerated in the back stretch of the final lap.

He went by those first three runners as if they were standing still.

The UTEP star widened his lead once he got in front and won easily by about six yards with a 54.9 final quarter. The rest of the field just battled for second in the stretch.

Czechoslovakia rallies to down Sweden on ice

VIENNA (AP) — Defending champion Czechoslovakia rallied in the third period Saturday to defeat Sweden 3-1 in the World Ice Hockey Championships, spoiling the Swedes' unbeaten record.

In a later game, the United States played the Soviet Union in the Stadhalle.

At 7:21, Frantisek Pospisil, the Czech captain, set up Oldrich Machac's insurance goal, a slap shot from just inside the blue line.

The Swedes scored first, at 8:52, on a goal by Martin Karlsson, assisted by Per Olov Brasar. Czechoslovakia tied with a power-play goal at 18:25 when Marian Stastny, Peter's brother, set up Jaroslav Pouzar. The Czechs claimed a goal in the second period when a shot by Frantisek Kaberle almost got past Astrom, but Canadian referee Marcel Vaillancourt ruled the puck had not crossed the line.

Cowboys in market

DALLAS (AP)—Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry says it is imperative that the team come up with a third quarterback for the 1977 National Football League season.

"We were in a very precarious situation last season when Danny White (the backup quarterback to Roger Staubach) was running around with a torn cartilage and Roger got his hand hurt," says Landry. "With just a couple of hits in the wrong spots, we could very easily have been out of business."

Landry continues "I believe we should come up with a third quarterback. We didn't get to play Danny as much as we would have liked last season, but when we put him in he performed for us.

Seahawks, the NFL's other expansion entry. According to which scout you're talking to, the top college running back last year—the Heisman Trophy notwithstanding—was either Bell or Pitt's Tony Dorsett, the Heisman winner. Bell, at 6-foot-2 and about 220 pounds, has a bit of an edge in size over the 5-11, 200-pound Dorsett—but that's not the principal reason McKay figures to go for Ricky when NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle proclaims the draft open at 10 a.m., EDT, in New York.

McKay coached Bell at Southern Cal, just as he coached Anthony Davis, another star runner joining the Bucs after a brief stint with the Toronto Argonauts in the Canadian Football League...and just as he coached a number of other names on the Tampa Bay roster.

Bell, by the way, has some impressive statistics—276 carries for 1,417 yards and 14 touchdowns in 10 games, plus 11 receptions for 85 yards. Dorsett, too, has solid numbers—338 carries, 1,948 yards and 21 touchdowns in 11 games, plus seven catches for 73 yards and a TD.

The Seahawks, who played in the National Conference a year ago and switch over to the AFC (Tampa Bay moves to the NFC) this year.

Granddaddy draft changed face of pro football

By The Associated Press
On Tuesday morning at 10 a.m., National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle will approach the podium in a ballroom at a New York hotel and announce that the league's 1977 player draft is under way. A clock not unlike those featured on stadium scoreboards throughout the NFL will begin to tick off the seconds, starting at 15 minutes. The news media will come to attention and the small table inhabited by representatives of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers will become everyone's focal point.

Sometime the next day, perhaps late in the evening, the draft will end. Everything undoubtedly will have run smoothly and many of the 26 clubs will begin predicting Super Bowl championships.
The NFL's draft is the granddaddy of all professional sports selection systems. It began in 1936 when Bert Bell, head of the Philadelphia Eagles, convinced the rest of the team owners that the wealth of football talent should be spread more equitably.

"My old man didn't have too many football players," recalls Bert Bell's son, Upton, formerly the general manager of the New England Patriots. "The rich teams, the Giants, Redskins and Bears, were able to buy whomever they wanted. My old man's team wasn't drawing or making money and their players weren't very good. So he had to do something."

The original draft in many ways resembled a scavenger hunt. The complicated scouting reports and computerized analyses of talent were unheard of. Except for a handful of well-known collegiate stars, the draftees were selected without rhyme or reason.
The intricate telephone hookup established in 1963 and used by the NFL today also is a far cry from the original draft setup.

"It would have cost the teams twice their payroll just to get the phone lines in," notes a league spokesman. "Besides, one man usually ran the whole operation, like George Halas in Chicago or Bell in Philadelphia. They'd just go into a room with all the other owners and make their picks." Nobody remembers how the picks were recorded in 1936, but the large boards and overhead projectors used today certainly weren't in vogue then.

Another change in the mechanics of the draft has been in the time allotted for each selection. In the old days, there was no time limit and some clubs might take several hours to come up with a choice. Now, through the first two rounds a team has 15 minutes to pick, then gets five minutes for the remaining rounds.

Trinity Mayfair to offer food, gifts, rides

Mary R. Griffith will be one of 50 artists from Midland and the state who will exhibit their work.

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Gifts for Mother's Day, food for the freezer and carnival rides for children will be part of the offerings of this year's Trinity School Mayfair.

The fourth annual Mayfair will be held from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday on the school campus.

Mary deCompiagne, who was chairman of the event two years ago, said the bakery goods and frozen foods are among the most popular items and are always sold out early. Frozen food, for parties or family meals, can be left in the freezer while the purchaser sees the rest of the fair, she said.

Among the 50 artists who will be displaying and selling their work will be a glassblower, who will demonstrate his craft, Laura Williams, publicity chairman for this year, said. That attraction is especially popular with children, she said.

Mrs. deCompiagne said one year a babysitting service was offered for adults attending the fair, but it was not used. "There's so much there for children," Mrs. Williams said.

She said bad weather has plagued the fair in past years, but, except for the carnival rides, the fair is protected from the elements, with booths located under the eaves of the building and in the covered patio. "Rain or shine, the thing still goes on," Marcia French, the event's first chairman, said.

Mrs. French said artists are eager to come and display their work. Many items are suitable for Mother's Day gifts, Mrs. deCompiagne said.

Usually, five or six of the artists are actually working, sketching or working a potters wheel, during the event, she said.

In addition to the baked and frozen foods for sale, snacks, lunch items and cold drinks will be sold all day, and a chicken dinner will be sold from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Entertainment will be provided hourly and a live band will perform dance music in the evening.

All items purchased may be left at checking booths and picked up when the buyer is ready to leave, Mrs. deCompiagne said.

When the first fair was put together, organizers viewed it as a way to raise money through a school-wide effort, and to provide entertainment for the community, Mrs. French said. Another purpose was to make the community more familiar with Trinity, she said.

Both Mrs. deCompiagne and Mrs. French told of people who had worked with the fair and enrolled their children in Trinity because they were so impressed with the school spirit demonstrated at the fair.

All three women said the fair involves everybody connected with the school, and a great many people that aren't. "Every parent is involved and many people outside the school are involved. Ex-students are a great help," Mrs. deCompiagne said. Students work in a variety of ways, from distributing bumper stickers to cleaning up the campus the week before the fair.

The past two years, $25,000 or more has been raised each year, from food sales, booth fees and the 50-cent admission fee for adults, Mrs. deCompiagne said. Children under 12 are admitted free.

The cake bake-off drew about 50 entrants last year. Prizes are awarded for first and second place best tasting cake and first place for decorating. Entry blanks are available in today's Reporter-Telegram.

Money raised in previous years has gone for such projects as a new gymnasium, a pre-school playground and the scholarship fund for the school.

DEAR ABBY

IRS adds wrinkle to facelift deduction

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I know you're not a tax expert, but I understand that you consult top authorities in all fields, so I'm writing to you. I am a 59-year-old woman, and believe me, I look every day of it—and then some. My husband recently died after a terrible 18-month illness, and all that weeping and grieving put years on my face.

I'm sure a facelift would not only improve my appearance, but do wonders for my morale, so I've decided to get one. A friend who had one four years ago tells me that a facelift is NOT a tax deductible medical expense. Another friend who recently had one tells me that it is! Is it or isn't it?—WRINKLED IN NEW YORK

P.S. Have you ever had a facelift, Abby?

DEAR WRINKLED: No, I never have, but when I think I need one, I'll certainly give it serious consideration.

And now, I have some good news for you: A new wrinkle concerning getting rid of the old ones developed last year. The I.R.S. ruled that the cost of cosmetic surgery is a legitimate deductible medical expense. Women (and men, too) can now get a complete facelift—chin, neck, jowls, under the eyes, the eyelids—the works—and it's tax deductible!

I am indebted to my good friend, Sylvia Porter, for this up-to-date information. And if you don't own a copy of her MONEY BOOK, get one. It can save you a small fortune.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

The Wine Cellar

by Sam Day

The best wines in the world are supposed to be the Burgundy and Bordeaux wines of France. Red and white wines are produced in both of these regions, and the best of each are commonly held to be the best in the world. Burgundy is the king of wines. It usually comes in a stout bottle with sloping shoulders. It is a heavy, "chewy" wine. It is known for its bold flavor. Bordeaux, on the other hand, are known as the queens of wine. They come in tall slender bottles and are usually on the light and dry side with a wonderful structure. Both wines have an aristocratic appeal and are sought for the main course of any meal.

And you'll find the best in wines from all over the world at IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3200 W. Wadley, 684-4256. A bottle of fine wine would make a special and unique Mother's Day gift. ## AT WIT'S END

Research rats keep interfering in how people run their lives

By ERMA BOMBECK

Even with research rats running interference for me, I don't know exactly when I'm going to die. But I do know how. I'm going to die of boredom. If they aren't discovering that kissing causes chipped fingernails and peanut butter brings on embarrassing itching, they're putting a curse on my pizza and the volume on my car radio. I can't enjoy anything anymore. In fact, I'm downright paranoid. I go around feeling cans to see if they're bent, spitting on my finger to lick stamps, holding my breath around smokers, boiling my water and

So, I switched to coffee. Someone said, "That is bad for you." I went to soft drinks. "The sugar is really harmful to your body," someone said. "I only drank drinks artificially flavored." "That's bad for you," someone said. "I'll eat snow." "And drop dead?" A friend of mine had a great idea for longevity. She bought a research rat and followed it around day and night. Everything it ate and survived, she tried. Everything it endured without damage, she went for. Two days ago she called and said the rat died. "What happened?" I asked. "Got hit by a mousetrap a block from home." "Tell me," I said wearily, "was it wearing lipstick? I have to know."

Mrs. Nita Ivy, and Mrs. Kay Sandridge are kneeling to do this small rubbing just as they did to rub the six-foot originals in England.

These women, members of the International Group of American Association of University Women, are learning the art of brass rubbing at a meeting of the group. Left to right are Mrs. Paul Smayres, Mrs. Robert Gersten and Mrs. Jagjit Yadav.

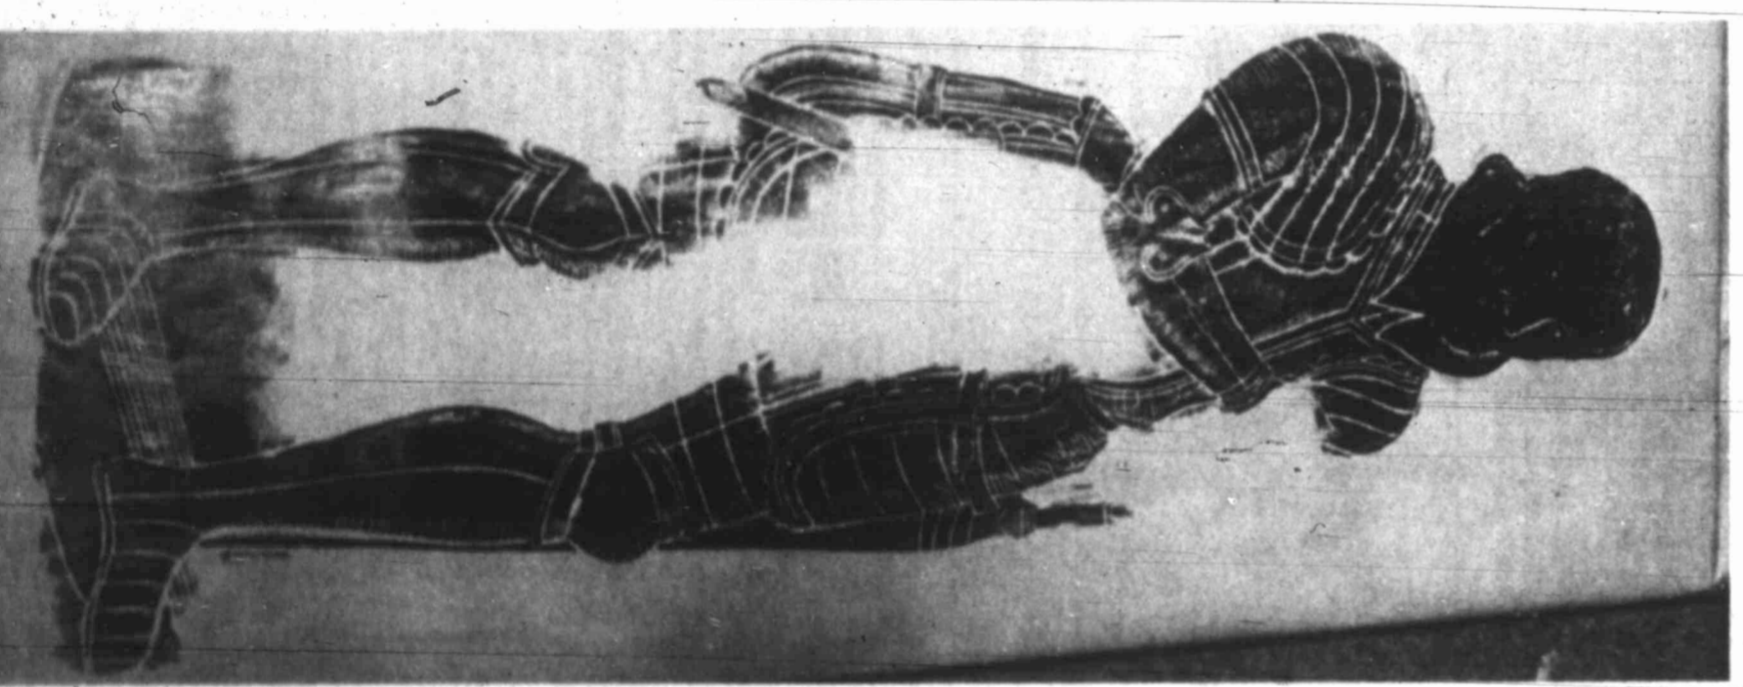

This hand is creating one of the limitless amount of rubbings that can be created from one original.

No cause to fear this set of brass knuckles

By PATSY GORDON

Everyone knows how to "rub" a coin by placing a piece of paper on top of it and scribbling over the outline until the design mysteriously appears. Well, picture if you can someone getting down on his hands and knees to do the same thing — only on a larger scale. Creative rubbings also can be achieved from textured and low relief surfaces, such as monumental brasses, which produce graphic images easily and inexpensively. Two transplanted Midlanders, Mrs. Nita Ivy and Mrs. Kay Sandridge traveled all the way to England to rub brass. Mrs. Sandridge also visited Norway and the Orient. Both women made the trips to be with their husbands who were transferred overseas by their companies at various times. A monumental brass is an engraved figure in- scription or other design placed to commemorate the deceased. These plates are found throughout central and northwestern Europe, but those in the churches and cathedrals of England are regarded as the world's finest.

The brasses were placed in church floors and on walls but many are almost totally obscured from view by being placed at great heights or under pews. Still others were placed on doors, exterior walls and in adjoining graveyards. "It's very difficult to do rubbings now because they have cut them off," said Mrs. Ivy. "But I did six rubbings in 1974 in St. Albans, northwest of London, the former site of a Roman monastery. When she couldn't get permission to do rubbings in London because it was tourist season, Mrs. Ivy took a train to St. Albans."

Mrs. Ivy explained that there are two kinds of brasses — the military brasses, which are the knights in shining armor, and civilian brasses. "I stayed with the smaller rubbings," said Mrs. Ivy, "because my house won't accommodate six-foot ones, although I do have one of that size." Replicas of the larger size brasses can be obtained by the interested novice. Most of the monumental brasses came over from the lowlands country to southeast England, said Mrs. Ivy. They were begun because of the expense and difficulty of getting Italian stone. The brass was mounted in stone after the figures were carved. Most of the continental brasses were rectangular in shape, similar to the photos on this page. Materials required to do rubbings are few. They include paper, wax crayon and masking tape. And of course, the brasses.

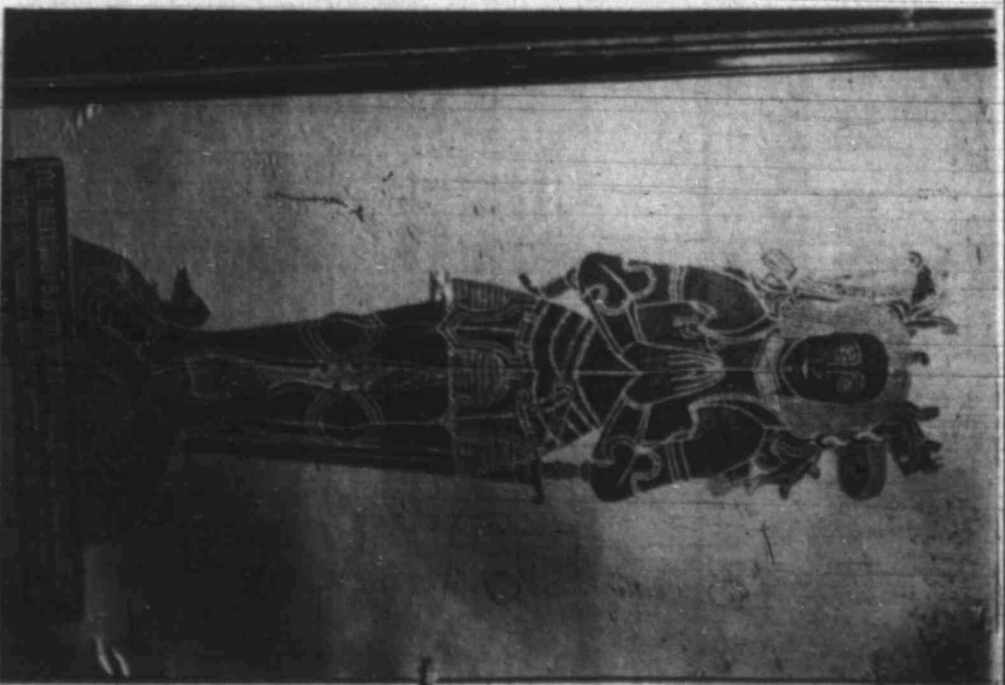

The paper on which the rubbing is made should be thin, strong and smooth. A step by step procedure of doing rubbings is given by Mrs. Ivy and follows: —Lay a sheet of paper over the brass after making sure the surface is clean. —Tape the paper securely. —Rub over the surface with the whole length of the crayon, not just the tip, to bring out the outline of the brass.

Mrs. Ivy emphasized if you rub evenly over the original, a rather grey picture results, with every part having the same emphasis. A more satisfying result is obtained if certain parts are made stronger in tone by harder rubbing and other parts understated by only light rubbing with the wax. "A greater sense of form can be expressed by the general direction and weight of the strokes."

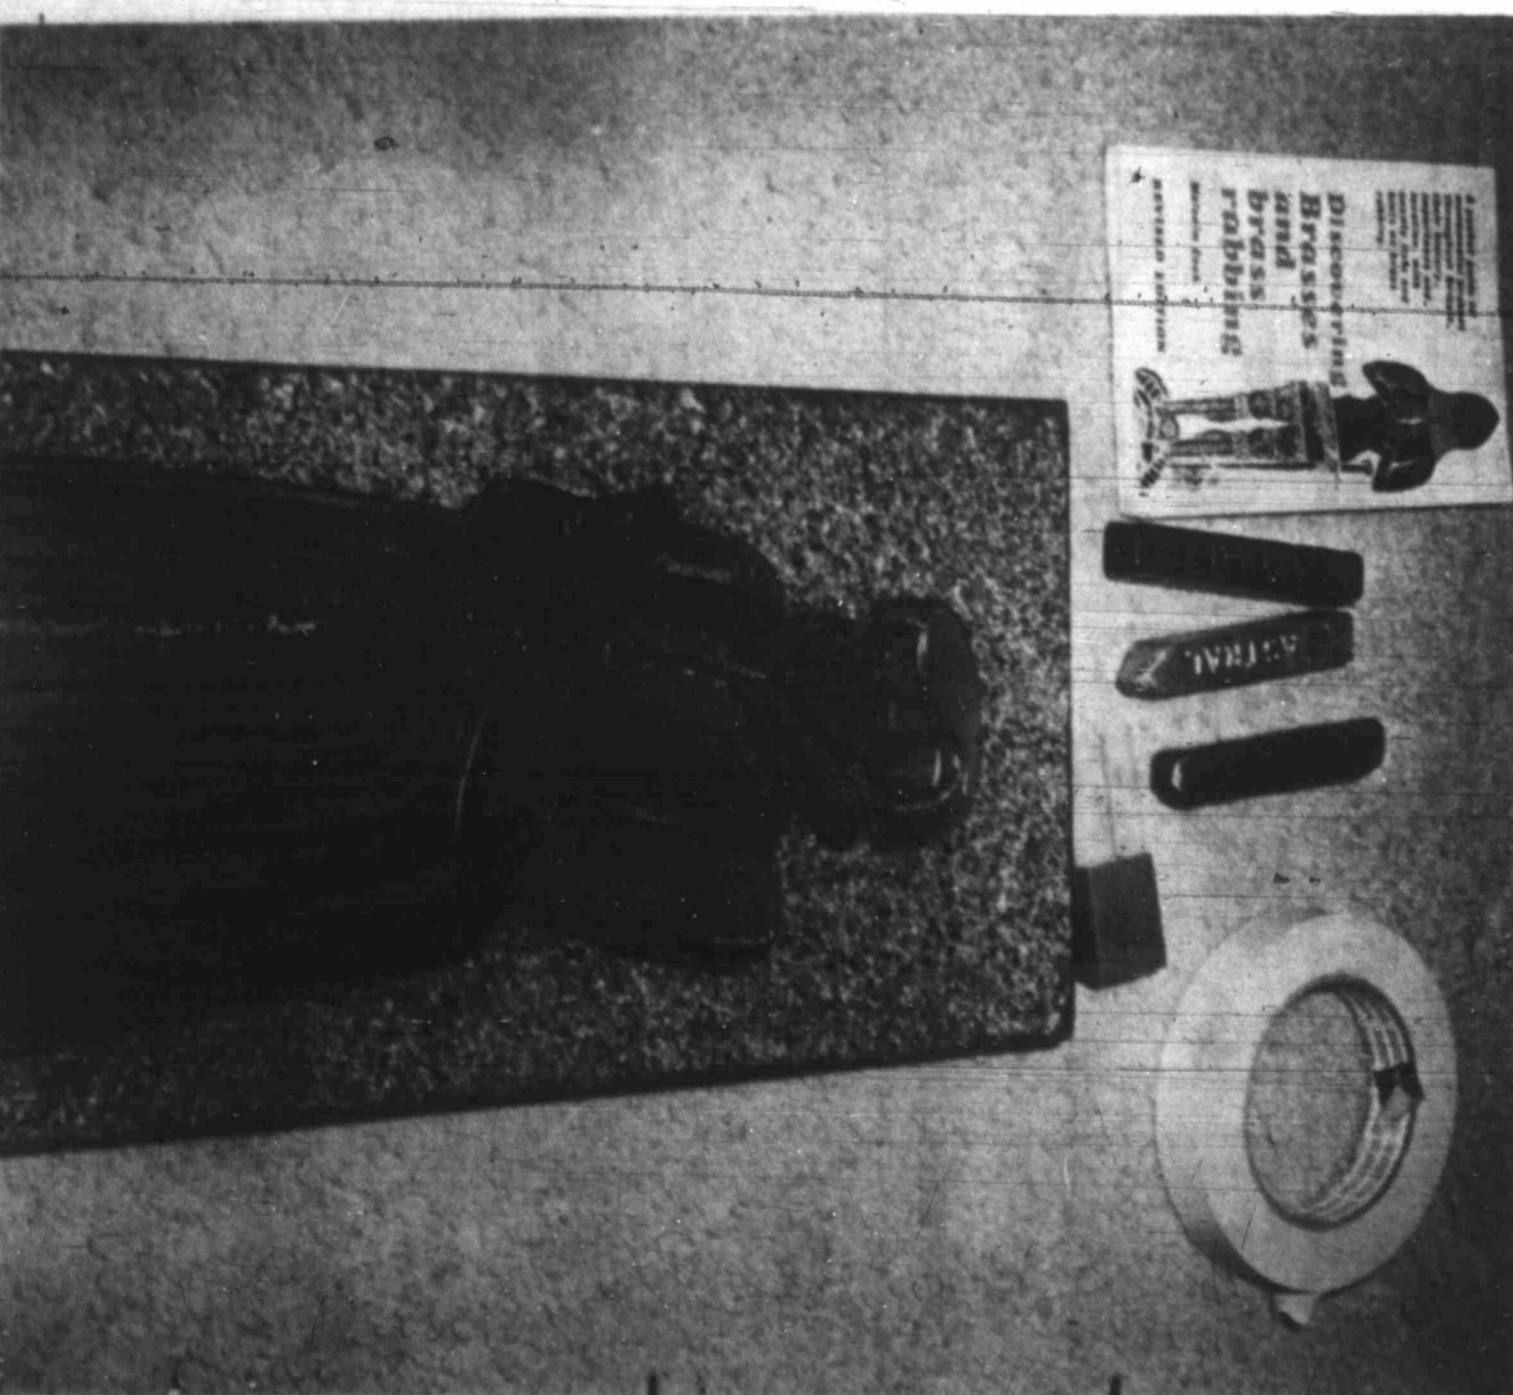

And probably the worst part of getting down on your hands and knees to rub these original brasses would be explaining yourself to the visitors that come through the churches and cathedrals and wonder if you are the caretaker of the brasses.

This is a brass monument to John and Maude Peacock, 1400.

One object that can make a beautiful rubbing is this brass to Nicholas Wadham, 1609, in St. Mary's Church in Somerset, England.

These are all the tools required to create rubbings from the replica of a monumental brass in the foreground.

Trinity Mayfair to offer food, gifts, rides

Mary R. Griffith will be one of 50 artists from Midland and the state who will exhibit their work.

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Gifts for Mother's Day, food for the freezer and carnival rides for children will be part of the offerings of this year's Trinity School Mayfair.

The fourth annual Mayfair will be held from 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Saturday on the school campus.

Mary deCompiegne, who was chairman of the event two years ago, said the bakery goods and frozen foods are among the most popular items and are always sold out early. Frozen food, for parties or family meals, can be left in the freezer while the purchaser sees the rest of the fair, she said.

Among the 50 artists who will be displaying and selling their work will be a glassblower, who will demonstrate his craft, Laura Williams, publicity chairman for this year, said. That attraction is especially popular with children, she said.

Mrs. deCompiegne said one year a babysitting service was offered for adults attending the fair, but it was not used. "There's so much there for children," Mrs. Williams said.

She said bad weather has plagued the fair in past years, but, except for the carnival rides, the fair is protected from the elements, with booths located under the eaves of the building and in the covered patio. "Rain or shine, the thing still goes on," Marcia French, the event's first chairman, said.

Mrs. French said artists are eager to come and display their work. Many items are suitable for Mother's Day gifts, Mrs. deCompiegne said.

Usually, five or six of the artists are actually working, sketching or working a potter's wheel, during the event, she said.

In addition to the baked and frozen foods for sale, snacks, lunch items and cold drinks will be sold all day, and a chicken dinner will be sold from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Entertainment will be provided hourly and a live band will perform dance music in the evening.

All items purchased may be left at checking booths and picked up when the buyer is ready to leave, Mrs. deCompiegne said.

When the first fair was put together, organizers viewed it as a way to raise money through a school-wide effort, and to provide entertainment for the community, Mrs. French said. Another purpose was to make the community more familiar with Trinity, she said.

Both Mrs. deCompiegne and Mrs. French told of people who had worked with the fair and enrolled their children in Trinity because they were so impressed with the school spirit demonstrated at the fair.

All three women said the fair involves everybody connected with the school, and a great many people that aren't. "Every parent is involved and many people outside the school are involved. Ex-students are a great help," Mrs. deCompiegne said. Students work in a variety of ways, from distributing bumper stickers to cleaning up the campus the week before the fair.

The past two years, $25,000 or more has been raised each year, from food sales, booth fees and the 50-cent admission fee for adults, Mrs. deCompiegne said. Children under 12 are admitted free.

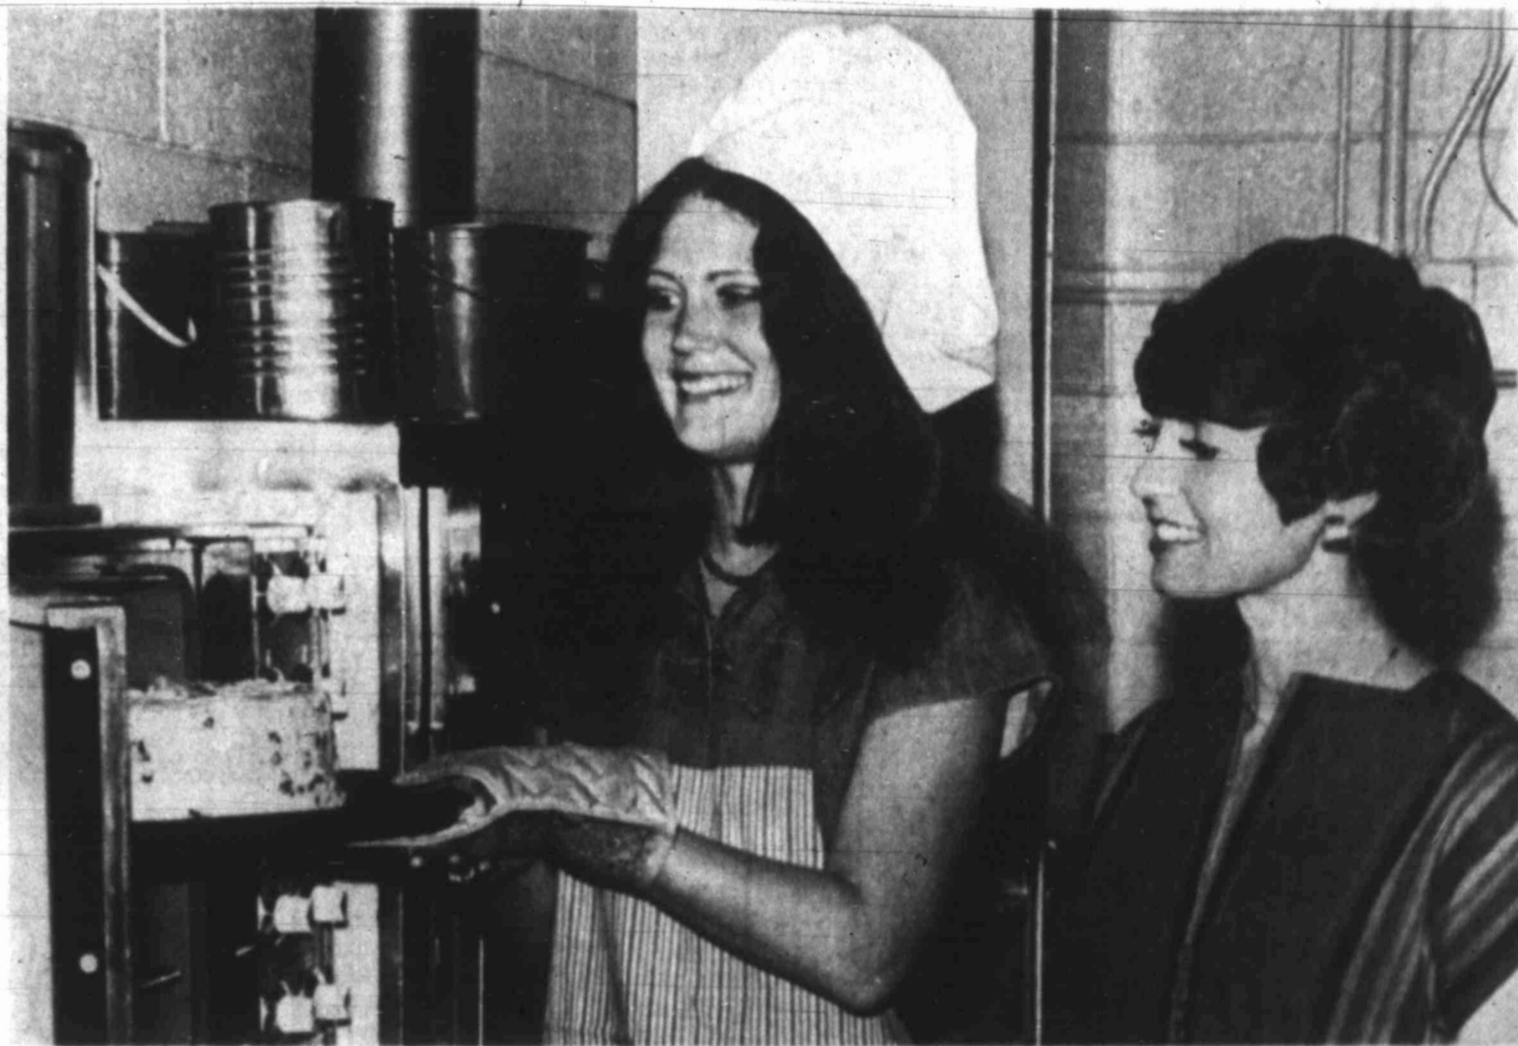

The cake bake-off drew about 50 entrants last year. Prizes are awarded for first and second place best tasting cake and first place for decorating. Entry blanks are available in today's Reporter-Telegram.

DEAR ABBY

IRS adds wrinkle to facelift deduction

By ANIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I know you're not a tax expert, but I understand that you consult top authorities in all fields, so I'm writing to you.

I am a 59-year-old woman, and believe me, I look every day of it—and then some. My husband recently died after a terrible 18-month illness, and all that weeping and grieving put years on my face.

I'm sure a facelift would not only improve my appearance, but do wonders for my morale, so I've decided to get one. A friend who had one four years ago tells me that a facelift is NOT a tax deductible medical expense. Another friend who recently had one tells me that it is! Is it or isn't it? WRINKLED IN NEW YORK

P. S. Have you ever had a facelift, Abby?

DEAR WRINKLED: No, I never have, but when I think I need one, I'll certainly give it serious consideration.

And now, I have some good news for you: A new wrinkle concerning getting rid of the old ones developed last year. The I.R.S. ruled that the cost of cosmetic surgery is a legitimate deductible medical expense. Women (and men, too) can now get a complete facelift—chin, neck, jowls, under the eyes, the eyelids—the works—and it's tax deductible!

I am indebted to my good friend, Sylvia Porter, for this up-to-date information. And if you don't own a copy of her MONEY BOOK, get one. It can save you a small fortune.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY in care of this newspaper. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

The Wine Cellar
by Sam Day

The best wines in the world are supposed to be the Burgundy and Bordeaux wines of France. Red and white wines are produced in both of these regions, and the best of each are commonly held to be the best in the world. Burgundy is the king of wines. It usually comes in a stout bottle with sloping shoulders. It is a heavy, "chewy" wine. It is known for its bold flavor. Bordeaux, on the other hand, are known as the queens of wine. They come in tall slender bottles and are usually on the light and dry side with a wonderful aftertaste. Both wines have an aristocratic appeal and are superb for the main course of any meal.

And you'll find the best in wines from all over the world at IMPERIAL LIQUORS, 3209 W. Wadley, 694-4254. A bottle of fine wine would make a special and unique Mother's Day gift. # Research rats keep interfering in how people run their lives

By ERMA BOMBECK

Even with research rats running interference for me, I don't know exactly when I'm going to die.

But I do know how. I'm going to die of boredom. If they aren't discovering that kissing causes chipped fingernails and peanut butter brings on embarrassing itching, they're putting a curse on my pizza and the volume on my car radio.

I can't enjoy anything anymore. In fact, I'm downright paranoid.

I go around feeling cans to see if they're bent, spitting on my finger to lick stamps, holding my breath around smokers, boiling my water and avoiding X-ray machines at the airport (my luggage doesn't look too good and I'm suspicious). Lord knows I've tried to please everyone.

A few years ago when they put the finger on cigarettes, I quit smoking and turned to music for entertainment.

Someone said, "Cooped up in here all day listening to all those decibels will make you deaf."

I went to the beach. Someone said, "The water is polluted and the sun will cause skin cancer."

I decided to stay indoors and eat.

I went to the hospital for a check-up.

Someone said, "X-rays are bad for you and so is some of the medicine they're giving you."

I decided to drink.

Someone said, "That will destroy your liver."

I decided to stay indoors and eat.

I went to the hospital for a check-up.

I decided to drink.

Someone said, "That will destroy your liver."

So, I switched to coffee. Someone said, "That is bad for you."

I went to soft drinks. "The sugar is really harmful to your body," someone said.

"I only drank drinks artificially flavored." "That's bad for you," someone said.

"I'll eat snow." "And drop dead?" A friend of mine had a great idea for longevity. She bought a research rat and followed it around day and night. Everything it ate and survived, she tried. Everything it endured without damage, she went for.

Two days ago she called and said the rat died.

"What happened?" I asked.

"Got hit by a mousetrap a block from home."

"Tell me," I said wearily, "was it wearing lipstick? I have to know."

Quilts use various types of fillings

By ERICA WILSON

With the increasing popularity in quilts these days, questions pour in from all over the country about what to use in filling them. Polyester batting, down feathers and, if you're very ambitious, sheep's wool are all great possibilities.

I've even heard of a company in Vermont that is now spinning hair from customer's dogs and cats for people who are particularly sentimental about their pets and opt for a more personal kind of quilt stuffing.

Sheep's wool may be a bit difficult to track down, unless you're lucky enough to have a sheep-owner friend whose farm you just happen to be visiting at sheep-sheering time. Sheep's wool has a delightful feel inside the fabric, very resilient and fluffy, and of course it can take to washing beautifully, as sheep do get rained on with great regularity.

As children in Scotland, we were very resourceful about sheep's wool during World War II. We'd go around gathering up all the odd bits of wool from the hedges, fences and thorn bushes that the sheep left behind.

It was easy to amass quite a pile of it, and we'd bring it back to the house and wash it in the bathtub with castile soap and warm water. My mother told us that changing temperatures caused the wool to mat, so we were careful to keep the washing and rinsing water the same. Finally, we'd fluff it out and dry it on a flat bed of turkish toweling, and in a day or two it was ready to be stuffed into a pillow or a quilt.

Down feathers are to my mind the most luxurious stuffing of all—very light and airy, but also very expensive. They've gained their greatest reputation in their ability to trap heat; I tease my teenage daughter Jessica that her down sleeping bag has become an appendage.

The reason for this incredible warmth (up to 50 per cent more than synthetic fibers) is that nature planned it that way. The feathers trap air, to keep the birds warm. And their density keeps wind out. In addition to ordering from interior decorators, it can be purchased in small quantities from companies such as J. Schacter Corp. in New York City. It may be expensive but it certainly lasts for years and years, and after countless washings or cleanings will no doubt outlive the fabric that covers it.

If you want a simple and inexpensive filler for your quilt, polyester fiberfill is the answer. It's available everywhere now—five and ten cent stores, department stores, needlework shops. You can buy it in sized sheets for quilts or in cotton-like pieces for pillows and such. It's washable, fluffy and in my experience has been perfectly satisfactory. One tip, however: be sure if you're using the wispy, cotton-like polyester that you overstuff whatever you're filling; unlike down, polyester has a tendency to flatten over time.

Dandelion falls from high level

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures
Writer

Time was when the lowly dandelion was carefully cultivated and displayed at flower shows. Now most homeowners regard the plant and its yellow flowers as a pest that foils their attempts to cultivate a lawn.

But, even though suburbanites may cringe at the sight of the bright blossoms popping up in their grass, many relish the taste of dandelion leaves. And farmers still make a golden nectar that author Ray Bradbury described in his nostalgic nove, "Dandelion Wine," as bottles of "summer caught and stoppered."

In the spring, dandelion greens make a flavorful salad when blanched, chilled and served with a tart vinegar and oil dressing. They are also popular as potherbs. Dandelion fanciers advise cutting the leaves while young since they become bitter with age. In fact, it is best to select only the tender inner leaves since the outside ones tend to be tough.

Some people like cooked dandelion leaves better than spinach and a few venturesome souls like the blossoms fried. They advise picking the buds when the yellow is showing only about halfway down, removing the stems and washing before simmering in butter. They claim the flower tastes like fried mushrooms.

Motorists out in the country for a drive would do well, however, to avoid picking dandelions along the side of a busy highway. They may be tainted with lead from automobile exhausts. Originally a European weed, the dandelion has been used extensively in the Old World. Europeans make sup from the roots. They also pick the heart of the plant before it begins to bud, bleach it and cook it in butter. The flavor is supposed to be like the bleached asparagus the French are fond of.

The dandelion plant was brought to America when the first colonists arrived from Europe and it soon spread across the land. Here's a simple recipe for dandelion salad.

- 1 pint tender dandelion leaves
- 1 cucumber, pared and sliced
- 2 strips bacon
- 3 tablespoons Italian salad dressing
- Dash paprika
- Wash dandelion leaves and pat dry with paper towel. Fry bacon strips till crisp and drain on paper towels. Crumble bacon into salad bowl. Add dandelion leaves and cucumber; pour salad dressing over and toss lightly. Sprinkle paprika on top. Serves 2.

Tips for young apartment hunters

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newfeatures

It's that time of year when students who have been living on college campuses begin to agitate for an apartment of their own or one they can share. A young woman doesn't want to commit herself to a new dorm agreement, or she may be newly graduated with high hopes of a career and an apartment of her own.

No matter, it's a big worry for parents. Mothers are concerned that daughter will live on snacks, fathers are concerned that his little girl living alone may be in grave danger, physically and financially.

If you try to get through to them on the telephone, one father, advises, "they'll turn off their ear phones." If you can't talk her out of the apartment idea, it's a good idea to put the advice in writing. She will, no doubt, not welcome your offer to help choose a place, so it is the next best thing.

Here are some of his suggestions that might be offered to students and career girls who may be looking for that first apartment:

—It's a good idea not to advertise on a public bulletin board or other public place that "two girls want an apartment," or whatever. Check out the safety of any housing area, especially in an unfamiliar city. This can be done with police departments and real estate people. In trying to find an apartment, study newspaper ads and seek help from reliable real estate people.

—Are the house and parking areas well-lighted at night. How far is it from school or work, stores, laundrette? If it is off the job or school path, it may increase travel costs and a long journey might prove a chore if one does not have good transportation.

—How does the rent of an apartment or house compare with other rents in the neighborhood? Are utilities included in the rental? Is a deposit required on rent or utilities? Check out the cost of utilities, especially if there is an air-conditioning machine. In some areas it could be a big expense. If at all possible, try to see the light and heat bills of a previous tenant if a house is to be rented. Landlords often boost rents when they lease to a group, so it is worth checking out the previous rental fee on the apartment.

—Does the lease have damage clauses? If so your security deposit may be used to absorb this cost if the landlord claims damage. One young man had to pay for a hole in the wall that was behind a poster when he rented an apartment. A career girl argued that she didn't damage a countertop, but the landlord insisted that she did.

—Leaking faucets and other defects should be repaired before an agreement is signed. An off-premises landlord may lag in fixing facilities later and young people could be stuck with plumbing bills.

—No matter how friendly a potential roommate may be, there should be a firm agreement about rent payment, utility bills and telephone bills — charges to homes might be reversed.

—How much decorating is permitted? Is it permissible to affix shelves in rooms or to put picture-hangers on walls? Seemingly harmless decorating ventures can incur the wrath of some landlords.

Expert says efficiency makes work easier

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (AP) — The next time the washer is going, the floor needs mopping, the baby is crying and you're fretting about dashing to the store to pick up a can of tomato sauce to finish making supper, stop and think.

There is a way to make housework less hurried.

It's based on using the same methods that industry has applied to make jobs more efficient, according to Dr. John M. Samuels, assistant professor of industrial engineering at Penn State University.

"The whole goal is to make work easier to do and to do it in less time. If you have to work, it might as well be done efficiently," said Samuels, a former General Motors production engineer.

"In industry, that equates to profit. In the home, it equates to more free time for a housewife to do what she wants, when she wants to do it," he added.

The idea of management efficiency is nothing new. Applying it to housework is just another step. And, the key is organization.

"You should make a list of what your work is and a list of interruptions that get in the way of doing the work. By writing it down, you will not duplicate effort," Samuels said.

"Then, analyze each task on an element-by-element basis and see how that task could be made easier," he added.

Like any other efficiency expert, Samuels is often challenged. Many housewives have written to him, asking him to "prove it." He has.

"We all have interruptions in our jobs. But we have to get the work done anyway. Having things organized gives you an added flexibility," Samuels said.

Greek Cypriot woman bewails single state

By ALY MAHMOUD The Associated Press

KYRENIA, Cyprus (AP) — Tears streaming down her weathered face, Maroulla Kyprianou complained, "Social tradition and partition of Cyprus have given me a raw deal."

At 58 she is still unmarried "because proposers shun penniless girls."

Maroulla is one of 14 Greek Cypriots who refused to flee Kyrenia when the Turkish invasion jolted Cyprus and took control of the northern mountain range in the summer of 1974. About 3,000 other Greek Cypriots still live in Turkish-dominated areas.

She said the 14 in Kyrenia were so poor and despondent that they decided to stay put and face death if need be. But the Turks, as many had warned, and "that was bad luck for me," she said in an interview.

Maroulla wiped her tears, forced a smile on her slightly wrinkled face, waved a 15-year-old portrait and boasted, "I was very pretty. And my body was extremely nice and shapely."

But men were uninterested, she said. Traditionally, Greek Cypriot women have to offer sizable dowries and fully furnished houses to their grooms. In some cases brides have to present grooms with cars and assure them of handsome income from real estate.

"Only real strong love can help a girl find a husband. But this type of love is so rare that most poor girls cannot hope to be married ever," she said. "Men find money and real estate more attractive than physical and moral beauty."

Maroulla lamented the "good old days" when she used to average $35 a week as a dressmaker in the then bustling tourist city of Kyrenia. Things have been pretty rough since 1974, when some 3,000 Turkish Cypriots from southern Cyprus displaced fleeing Greek Cypriots.

"We left our homes in the South and had to find new homes here. No usurpation. We only want to live," said Ali Mehmet, a 60-year-old Turkish truck driver. "We harbor no animosity and would like to live as brothers and sisters with Greek Cypriots. Ask Maroulla if she was ever harassed."

"No, Turks don't bother me," responded Maroulla. "They buy me Cokes and tea when I visit their coffee shop. But they don't help me beyond that."

"We are broke. Our Turkish neighbors are not much better off than we are. There is not much for us to exchange with them except boredom and despondency," said Maroulla's Greek Cypriot neighbor, Mrs. Christella Carasava, 68.

Kyrenia's dust-tormented church has been deserted since its first fled the city in 1974, along with about 200,000 Greek Cypriot refugees who are not allowed to return to the Turkish-controlled northern areas.
