Nixon admits mistakes, but won't grovel

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon confessed that he lied about Watergate, that he made the wrong decisions, that he let "the American people down." But the only man to resign the presidency grimly vowed that he would never grovel before his enemies.

In a dramatic recitation of his mishandling of the Watergate scandal, Nixon steadfastly maintained in a 90-minute televised interview that he was innocent of crime but guilty of blunders — "mistakes of the heart, rather than the head."

"I let down my friends. I let down the country. I let down our system of government ..." Nixon said Wednesday as he broke his silence on the scandal that drove him from office 33 months ago.

"I let the American people down, and I have to carry that burden with me for the rest of my life," he said in

The first of four television interviews expected to earn him as much as $1 million.

Nixon said, "I have impeached myself...by resigning. That was a voluntary impeachment."

Viewers who expected a frank admission of guilt from Nixon were disappointed.

Despite persistent questioning by British television personality David Frost, Nixon refused to admit committing any offense for which he should have been impeached or prosecuted.

He admitted it was his fault the scandal "snowballed," but said: "People didn't think it was enough to admit mistakes, fine. If they want me to get down and grovel on the floor, no. Never. Because I don't believe I should."

In a program distilled from three days of taping at a private residence near Nixon's San Clemente estate, Nixon blamed his own bad judgment for the fall of his administration, but generally held to the same defense of his actions heard prior to his Aug. 9, 1974, resignation from the White House.

"I brought myself down," said Nixon. "I gave 'em a sword. And they stuck it in, and they twisted it with relish. And I guess if I'd been in their position, I'd done the same thing."

And, he said, "while technically I did not commit a crime, an impeachable offense... these are legalisms. As far as the handling of this matter is concerned, it was so botched up, I made so many bad judgments. The worst ones, mistakes of the heart, rather than the head, as I pointed out. But let me say, a man in that... top job — he's got to have a heart, but his head must always rule his heart."

Nixon admitted, "I said things that were not true" about the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters and subsequent cover-up. But he insisted, "Most of them were fundamentally true on the big issues, but without going as far as I should have gone and saying perhaps that I had considered other things, but had not done them."

He said he "went right to the edge of the law... a reasonable person could call that a cover-up. I didn't think of it as a cover-up."

Nixon, 64, was frequently combative and appeared angered by a number of Frost's questions.

But as the program neared its end, Nixon grew increasingly contrite, his voice breaking slightly as he said, "My political life is over. I will... never again have an opportunity to serve in an official position."

The reactions from persons who took part in the investigation of Watergate or in Nixon's defense were diverse.

James Neal, the chief prosecutor at the cover-up trial, said while Nixon "at the end made an appealing and sympathetic statement, I thought he was weak when he got down to the facts."

Rep. Robert McClory, a Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee that voted to recommend Nixon's impeachment, said, "I think he made a terrible mistake in subjecting himself to this kind of prosecution on television."

"I thought he came off rather badly. He seemed harried, very nervous, seemed cornered many times. He seemed uneasy. He was entirely on the defensive."

Former Nixon speech writer Ray Price, who attended the taping sessions in Laguna Beach, Calif., last month, said, "I think it was a very generous concession by the President of his own errors."

Richard G. Kleindienst, a former attorney general under Nixon, and former Special Watergate Prosecutor Henry Ruth both ignored the broadcast in protest against a former president's being paid high stakes for recounting his days in public office.

Carter leaves for overseas talks

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter embarked on his first overseas diplomatic mission today predicting success in a quest for world peace and promising to turn the summit into "continuing day-by-day" cooperation with America's allies.

"I feel good about the prospects for success," Carter said in farewell remarks on the White House lawn, "and I think I'll come back after this five-day trip with a major step having been made forward in dealing with the world's problems."

A short while thereafter, Carter took off from nearby Andrews Air Force Base.

Carter said the aim of economic discussions in London which begin his European visit will be "to put people back to work" and fight the inflation which he said is robbing working people around the world.

"I feel well-briefed and well-prepared," Carter said, "and my only hope is that I can well and truly represent what the American people would like to see their President do in discussing world problems with other government leaders."

"We will be pursuing our long-range goals for world peace, for nuclear disarmament, on holding down the sale of conventional weapons, of preventing the spread of the capability for nuclear explosives among nations that don't share it, for discussions about the proper use of energy and the sharing of world trade with others, for loans and direct aid to less developed countries," Carter said.

Carter also said he would seek "the establishment of basic mechanisms by which these discussions can continue, not just at the summit level on special occasions but on a continual, day-by-day interrelationship."

Although Carter has met with several world leaders in Washington in the first three months of his presidency, this is his first overseas mission, and he said, as he boarded his helicopter, that this is the only trip outside of this country which he plans this year.

Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who led a delegation of well-wishers at the brief White House ceremony, told Carter he was leaving with the "complete and enthusiastic support of the American people," which he said was the "strongest mandate that any President could ever have."

In advance of today's midmorning departure for London and an international economic summit, Carter said, "I'd like to have a common approach among the developed industrialized nations toward dealing with inflation and unemployment."

Although this is the central challenge facing Carter and his foreign counterparts, they also will confront other minefields of conflicting national interests.

Wholesale prices increase once more

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, an indicator of prices consumers eventually pay, soared 1.1 per cent in April, the third big monthly increase in a row, the government reported today.

The April increase, which matched the March rise in wholesale prices and followed a jump of nine-tenths of a per cent in February, adds to worries of accelerating inflation. The March increase had been the biggest monthly jump in wholesale prices since October 1975. Government economists had expected the April jump because farm prices have been rising at a rate of better than 1 per cent for the past five months.

In April, prices for farm products increased 3.4 per cent, the biggest jump in a year, while prices for processed foods and feeds climbed 2.5 per cent.

Wholesale coffee prices rose another 7.3 per cent last month following a jump of nearly 31 per cent in March.

Not all the news was bad as the increase in prices for industrial commodities eased slightly last month. These prices rose six-tenths of a per cent in April, following an eight-tenths increase in March.

Economists look to prices of industrial goods as a truer measure of underlying inflationary trends. Much of the recent increase in farm and food prices has resulted from the winter weather's effects on crops and shipments, and economists expect these prices to begin moderating with the new harvests.

Price trends at the wholesale level are eventually passed along to the consumer, at least in part, since they represent higher costs to businesses that produce the goods consumers buy. Consumers are already feeling the effects of higher prices at supermarket counters, where the index for consumer foods — those ready for sale on grocery shelves — rose 2.5 per cent at the wholesale level last month.

The 1.1 per cent April increase in wholesale prices, if continued for a 12-month period, would result in an overall increase of 13 per cent for the year marking a return to the double-digit range for inflation that the nation experienced in 1974. Consumer prices that year rose 12.2 per cent. Consumer prices last year rose 4.8 per cent.

Over the past twelve months wholesale prices have increased 7.2 per cent.

The big increases in wholesale prices this year have been matched by large increases in consumer prices, which have risen at a 10 per cent annual rate during the first quarter.

Senate OKs court status change

AUSTIN — The Senate Wednesday passed Senate Bill 266, co-authored by Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson, which changes the Midland Court of Domestic Relations into the 318th District Court, with preference to be given to family matters.

The change will provide general district court powers and transfers the funding from the county to the state.

Judge Joe Mims, who has presided over the court since its creation in 1965 under legislation sponsored by Sen. Snelson will continue as judge of the court under terms of the bill.

SB 266 is an omnibus bill which transfers 31 existing courts of domestic relations and juvenile courts into state district courts.

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives for its consideration.

Meals-on-Wheels makes life a bit easier for needy

The aging man suffers from gout and is plagued by the discomforts of being old and poor. He doesn't get around well.

His partially-blind and sick wife is confined to a wheelchair. She doesn't get around at all.

But this man, at 89, still has a yearning for life. And the Meals-on-Wheels program here for the poor, the aged, and the ailing is helping him along.

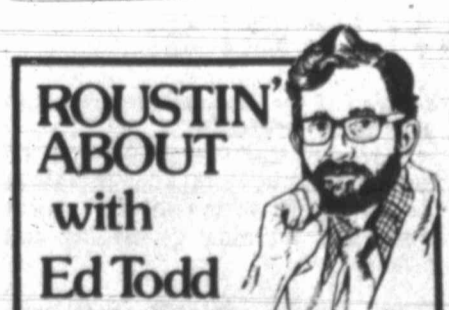

At least, so says the program's director, dietician Elizabeth Glenn.

The hopeful man told her, she said: "Meals-on-Wheels lets me stay home, lets me be here, so that I don't have to go to the nursing home and then over there... to the cemetery."

No matter how nourishing it may be, the food will not be the man's fountain of youth. But it may prolong his life span and possibly suppress other diseases that might otherwise creep upon his tired body.

The program provides 75 Midlanders with hot noon-time meals during the weekdays. It gives them the needed nourishment they might otherwise go without.

All are poor, all are 60 years old or beyond, and all suffer from either physical or mental afflictions that inhibit their preparing nutritionally balanced meals.

Meals-on-Wheels insures that they get at least one decent meal a day during the weekdays.

"Some people say we served them hot dogs," Mrs. Glenn said. "I tell them 'no.'"

The evidence in the kitchen of Midland Memorial Hospital backs her up. That's where the food is prepared, packaged and then promptly dispatched to the hungry and needy.

And the folks receiving this "gift," this palatable service are appreciative, Mrs. Glenn said.

Caffeine may lead to depression

TORONTO (AP) — A new study further linking caffeine and mental disturbance has found that among a group of psychiatric patients those with a large caffeine habit were more depressed.

The study of 83 psychiatric patients also showed that patients who drank large amounts of coffee containing caffeine were more anxious and tended to use tranquilizers more often.

The conclusions by researchers at the University of Michigan were drawn in a paper to be presented today at the American Psychiatric Association.

The doctors concluded that the higher the caffeine intake — and this included tea, cola drinks and pills that contain the stimulant — the more likely it was that the subject would report symptoms of mental discomfort.

But the Michigan researchers emphasized that because their subjects were under treatment for psychiatric disorders, they did not know in what way the results could be applied to the general population.

They also said they could not definitely link caffeine consumption with depression.

Previous studies have linked high caffeine intake with increased anxiety.

"Individuals may become depressed and later self-medicate themselves with caffeine," said Dr. John F. Greden, who headed the research.

Or, he suggested, "chronic caffeine ingestion might play a causal role in producing depressive symptoms."

For purposes of the study, high caffeine consumption was arbitrarily classified as 750 milligrams or more a day from all sources. The average cup of coffee contains about 100 mg. but can vary widely. Tea contains 50 to 75 mg. of caffeine per cup.

Low consumers of caffeine were those whose intake ranged from none to 249 mg., and moderate use was classed as 250 to 749 mg. per day. The doctors noted that one patient consumed 400 mg. of caffeine a day solely from stay-awake pills and another consumed a startling 4,000 mg. per day from various sources.

The doctors said they could find no particular level of coffee drinking at which the presence of mental symptoms began to show up.

Former Chancellor Erhard dies

By DAVID MINTHORN

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Former Chancellor Ludwig Erhard, who fashioned West Germany's postwar "economic miracle" but was forced from office by a recession, died early today at the age of 80.

The portly, cigar-smoking Erhard, whose appearance reflected the prosperity his policies fostered, had been in declining health for months. He was hospitalized in March after an automobile accident in Duesseldorf, where he was attending a convention of the Christian Democratic Union.

Although Erhard served three years as chancellor, his most notable achievements came during his 15 years as West Germany's chief economist — first as adviser to the British and American occupation forces and then as economy minister under Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

His rise to prominence began in June, 1948, when, against the advice of the Allies and other German politicians, he revalued the Deutschmark and ended rationing and other economic controls.

The moves, plus the massive infusion of American economic aid and the hard work of the German people, revived the defeated country's economy. Production doubled within a year, and eventually the nation that lost the war became the strongest in Western Europe.

In 1949, at the formation of the Federal Republic of Germany, Erhard became economy minister in Adenauer's first cabinet and held the post until Oct. 16, 1963, when he succeeded Adenauer despite the old chancellor's opposition.

But by the time Erhard took over the government, the boom had slowed down, and the coalition of conservative Christian Democrats and liberal Free Democrats held together by the iron-willed Adenauer was coming apart.

Erhard's critics accused him of indecisiveness in a succession of crises, and he resigned in December, 1966, after the Free Democrats bolted the coalition because he planned to raise taxes despite the recession. Erhard was succeeded by Kurt Georg Kiesinger, who formed a new coalition of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats.

A firm friend of the United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Erhard worked for an Atlantic partnership that would bring the United States and Europe closer together and resisted efforts by French President Charles de Gaulle for a more restrictive European policy.

The son of a poor shopkeeper, Erhard was born Feb. 4, 1897 in Fuerth, a city in northern Bavaria. He studied at universities in Frankfurt and Nuernberg, where he earned a doctorate in economics. In 1924 he joined the Nuernberg Commercial Institute but was fired 18 years later

Louisiana congressman resigns

NEW ORLEANS (AP)

— Richard A. Tony stepped off the airliner that had brought him back from Washington where he had just resigned from Congress and began campaigning to win back his seat in a new election.

Tony, 42, his election tainted by alleged vote fraud, resigned from the House on Wednesday after six months and two days as a congressman.

"Keep my seat warm," Tony said in his resignation letter to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, "and tell my colleagues not to forget me because I am running again and will win again."

The House accepted Tony's resignation a few hours after he left town. Two members of a three-man panel that investigated the election said that if he had not quit they would have recommended that he be thrown out of the House.

It was not that Tony himself did wrong, they said, but the election was so crooked it could not be straightened out. In Chalmette, a New Orleans suburb, Tony shook hands and kissed babies. He found his law office jammed with about 60 supporters.

He asked for contributions to the campaign, which is likely to be a long one, stretching through a Democratic primary election, with a runoff likely between the two top candidates for nomination, and then the general election.

Gov. Edwin Edwards must set a date for a new general election in the 1st Congressional District, which spreads into four parishes — with 58 per cent of its total vote in New Orleans.

Most of the fraud, outlined by 22 pleas of guilty entered in U.S. District Court by election officials, took place in St.

Bernard Parish, where the casting of ballots for dead or nonexistent citizens has long been regarded as a common way of politics.

Tony said, once again, that he will outline evidence that backers of James A. Moreau, a former New Orleans councilman, stole a thousand votes, compared to a few hundred by his side, in the Oct. 2 Democratic runoff.

He did not elaborate on what this evidence might be.

In that election, Moreau was upset by 184 votes.

U.S. bishops vote to bring remarried divorced back

CHICAGO (AP) — Roman Catholic bishops have acted to lift a century-old decree excommunicating divorced American Catholics who remarried.

The action here does not by itself qualify them to share Holy Communion without further steps to resolve their status.

"It welcomes back to the community of believers in Christ all who may have been separated by excommunication," said Bishop Cletus F. O'Donnell of Madison, Wis., head of a canonical committee that proposed the action.

The bishops' decision on Wednesday to repeal the 1884 decree of the Third Council of Baltimore must be approved by the Pope. This is considered certain since the decree applies only in this country. Of the 49 million Catholics in the United States, about 5 million are divorced and remarried.

Roman Catholicism forbids divorce and considers second marriages invalid unless prior unions have been annulled. Simple, broad procedures have been introduced in church tribunals for obtaining annulments.

Excommunication, the church's severest penalty, was a "terrible, terrible thing" for those affected, Bishop O'Donnell said, cutting them off from the church, its prayers or from holding any offices in it. "They were looked on as kind of outcasts. This was wrong."

Growth hormone isolated

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Genetic engineers working with minute fragments of the chemical that transmits heredity say they have isolated and analyzed the gene that directs the production of a human growth hormone.

The gene is one that orders the human placenta — also called the afterbirth — to produce the hormone lactogen, which directs the growth of a fetus from a tiny cluster of cells to a fully-formed infant.

The researchers said the development could speed the day — still years away, however — when scientists can use genetic engineering to "order" bacterial cells to produce the growth hormones needed in the treatment of dwarfism and other genetic defects.

Other scientists have been successful in analyzing genes from lower animals, but human genes are far more complex and difficult to work with. The report by a research team at the University of California-San Francisco represents only the second human gene scientists have been able to analyze.

"We're concerned with understanding the control of the growth hormone," said Dr. John Shine, a member of the UCSF research team. "We would hope to be able to get bacteria to produce the growth hormone," he said in an interview here on Wednesday.

The research was presented this week by Dr. John Baxter of the UCSF Metabolic Research Unit to meetings in Washington of the Association of American Physicians and the American Society for Clinical Investigation.

Shine said the next step is to plant the gene into bacterial cells and analyze the results. It is this kind of "recombinant DNA" research that some scientists fear could lead to the creation of new life forms hazardous to man.

But Shine said the method used by the UCSF researchers involves isolating the specific gene before it is planted into the cell, instead of the "shotgun" approach used in some experiments.

Visitors from afar

Mayor Abraham Beame of New York City and Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neill III of Massachusetts have been in Houston this week visiting with offshore oil operators concerning the possibility of locating onshore facilities in their respective areas.

Now this really is an interesting development, a change of pace, if you please, insofar as the visitors are concerned.

Could it be that they see the handwriting on the wall and that they are convinced that offshore drilling and production in their areas are inevitable?

Yes, it very well could be, but the economic aspect undoubtedly has a great deal to do with it. Economic conditions haven't been the very best in New York City and New Jersey and, seeing the possibility of gaining a new industry and new jobs, if and when offshore drilling begins in earnest, the mayor and governor couldn't afford to take a chance on missing out on something big.

It is reported that they spent considerable time and money in visiting with and wining and dining delegates to an offshore technology conference at Houston.

O'Neill and his party apparently spent their time in attempting to convince those with whom they talked that oilmen are welcome in Massachusetts, despite what they might have heard to the contrary.

The New Yorkers busied themselves with getting the message across that New York City is more than concrete and that ample space is available for onshore installations.

It is fine for the visitors from the North and East to reverse the normal trend and to come to the great Southwest in an effort to sell their areas for industrial development, but first we might suggest that they try to sell their environmentalists on the urgent need for offshore drilling — or to tell them to go jump in the Atlantic Ocean. Or perhaps that order should be reversed.

Anyway, the date for the start of offshore operations in the Atlantic, off the New York and New Jersey coasts, still is debatable, thanks to environmental extremists. They are the ones who have delayed this and other projects all too long, even to the overall detriment of the nation's welfare.

Gov. O'Neill apparently is of the belief that some progress is being made in overcoming this obstacle. "We believe," he said, "we can have offshore exploration as well as tourism and fishing."

O'Neill believes that the first lease sale for the Georges Bank Basin, 50 to 100 miles east of Cape Cod, will be held in September. The sale, according to the Massachusetts delegation, will involve approximately a million acres.

Mayor Beame and his delegation are interested in the Baltimore Canyon area about 75 miles offshore from New York. Oil operators last year paid more than $1 billion for federal leases in that area, but the sale was voided by a federal judge because of environmental impact statement problems.

The case is on appeal and there are those who believe the ruling eventually will be reversed and that exploration will be started in the not-too-distant future.

Yes, this is a most interesting situation, one with perhaps far-reaching implications.

Hopefully this is the New York City and New Jersey delegations' way of letting the offshore drillers know that conditions are changing and that they should get ready for action in finding new oil and gas reserves in the Atlantic Ocean. Maybe they know something that the rest of us don't. Anyway, the nation needs the petroleum which may be found there.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Huge appetite for green backs.

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The federal animal has a voracious appetite for greenbacks; it consumes cash at the rate of $697,298 per minute.

There is no available arithmetic on how much of the federal intake is wasted. Recurring headlines have described the staggering cost overruns, the misspent millions, the careless waste of the taxpayers' money.

Perhaps more insidious are the small extravagances. By themselves, they are too trivial to attract front-page attention; but taken together, they add up to an appalling sum.

Bureaucrats are constantly on the move, for example, pursuing the taxpayers' business in faraway places. Take the Small Business Administration. It employs only 4,300 people, of whom less than 1,500 can be classed as wanderers. Yet, they managed to spend an incredible $4.7 million on travel during the 1976 fiscal year. The next year, the travel budget soared like an airliner to $5.3 million.

We checked the individual travel records since July 1975. One official, Harold K. Fletcher, ran up a $20,854.95 travel bill. Another, C. Mack Higgins, spent $20,054.85, and Mitchell Kobelinski spent $16,160.54.

Eight officials flew off to Hawaii in the middle of last winter to cavort in the sun with business executives — a $10,000 junket. Yet, by the Small Business Administration's own admission, there were officials stationed in Honolulu who could have met with the business executives.

Bureaucrats also seem to have an irresistible itch to move their offices around. For no apparent reason, the Health Resources Administration shifted about 2,800 employees from one end of Washington to the other. Government auditors described the move as a little more than furniture shifting. They estimate the move across town will cost the taxpayers close to $3 million.

Bureaucrats also spend in-calculation amounts on status symbols. The evidence of a bureaucrat's importance can be seen, at considerable expense to the taxpayers, in his office. Is it large enough to impress visitors? How deep do you sink in the rug? Is there a trim of woodwork around the walls? Does the office contain a kingsize desk? A flag stand? A sofa suitable for taking naps?

Whether the bureaucrats sip water from a silver decanter or a brown plastic jug is another sign of their status. The Navy also provides its top brass with bronze bookends, plaques and ashtrays, plus an extra supply to hand out to visiting dignitaries.

Most procurement people have a cavalier attitude toward the taxpayers' money. An enlisted man in the Army, for example, is granted $7.88 after three years to replace an overcoat that won't wear out for 10 years.

Procurement officers also have a habit of signing purchase orders and asking questions afterward. The military storerooms hold millions worth of spare parts for cancelled and antiquated weapons.

he has all 'answers'

Q — Why is there an energy shortage?
A — Because not enough dinosaurs died so they could rot and make oil to last us beyond the year 2040.
Q — Why don't we raise more dinosaurs and kill them and bury them in the ground so they will rot and provide oil for us?
A — Because the environmentalists won't let us kill dinosaurs. They are a protected species.
Q — What about foliage and other fossils? Why can't we bury them so we can have more oil?
A — It takes a billion years for vegetation and fossils to rot and turn into oil. Most people don't want to wait that long.
Q — What happened to all the oil we were supposed to get from Alaska that would make us independent of the Middle East?
A — That oil is going to be shipped to Japan and we will get the oil that Japan would ordinarily buy from the Middle East.
Q — Won't that make us more dependent on Middle East oil than we were before?
A — No comment.
Q — What does President Carter propose to do to solve the energy crisis?
A — Declare moral war on it.
Q — How do you fight a moral war?
A — By taxing people who use gasoline. He expects to raise the price of gasoline by five cents per gallon until people use less of it.

Q — Won't that be a burden on people who need their automobiles to go to work?
A — They will get rebates providing they don't have gas-guzzling cars.
Q — How will I get my rebate?
A — By filling out IRS Energy Form 19876 listing your name, address, Social Security number, number of dependents, as described in Paragraph C. You will add the weight of the car to gallons of gas consumed, and then divide the total by the number of cylinders you have in your engine, and then multiply this figure by your earned income, making an allowance for state and city taxes as described on page eight of the amended IRS Energy Form 1218, Article 3A. This figure will then be noted on page three, line 6B and subtracted from your date of birth on line 6C. Once the form is filed, no later than April 15, or unless you ask for an extension, under the IRS Energy Act S-304 you will receive a rebate of as much as $50 or pay a penalty of $200, which of course can be appealed.
Q — Will the oil companies benefit from the President's plan?
A — Only to the extent that they will receive as much money for their "new" oil as we are now playing the OPEC nations.
Q — Does this mean the price of gasoline will go up for the consumer?
A — Does the sun rise in the morning?

Q — What is a gas guzzler?
A — A gas guzzler is any car that gets less miles to the gallon than the car you own at the present.
Q — The Supreme Court just ruled that you could spank children in school. Does President Carter plan to spank people who drive gas guzzlers?
A — Not at the moment. But the Department of Energy has a standby plan in case its goals on the purchase of small cars are not met. They would set up a Government Spanking Bureau and before you would be permitted to buy a big car you would have to go there and get 20 whacks on your backside.
Q — There are some people who like to be spanked, and who might buy a big car just to get beaten. What will you do about them?
A — The government has their names in a computer, and if it finds out they bought a big car just to get spanked they will be refused the privilege and asked to pay an excise spanking tax instead.

NICK THIMMESCH
A most awkward moment for the U.S. Supreme Court

WASHINGTON — The gentlemen of the U.S. Supreme Court do not want to talk about it, but there is a serious question they should answer honestly and without covetousness.

Did a justice of the U.S. Supreme Court discuss with a reporter what went on in a closed session of the justices on the matter of review of the convictions of John Mitchell, H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman?

Nina Totenberg, who covers the court for National Public Radio (NPR), reported that the justices, by a 5-3 vote, with Justice William Rehnquist abstaining, decided not to grant a review of the case involving the celebrated Watergate defendants.

Miss Totenberg's report of the closed session included the rich suggestion that Chief Justice Warren Burger, whom she pointedly identifies as a Nixon appointee, stalled the announcement of the vote in order to win one of the justices (Stevens or White) to the side of granting a review. Her broadcast also emphasized that the three justices voting for review were Nixon appointees; thus she raised the question of motives.

Now this story is a bombshell, in terms of the court, for these august men, by tradition, never discuss the deliberations of their famous Friday conferences, not even with their wives at pillow-talk time. But because of the Story's obvious impact, and the promotion of it by Miss Totenberg and federally funded NPR, it got wide attention. The New York Times eventually confirmed and front-paged it, thus giving it credence.

Nick Thimmesch

The official reaction of the court was "no comment." Unfortunately, the name of Justice Potter Stewart came into speculation as the "source," and he was moved to deny he played that role or had even discussed the case with Miss Totenberg. She won't reveal her sources (plural) on the story, and added the intriguing remark that she has "several good friends on the bench," that "invisible people" at court should be considered as possible tipsters.

Naturally, defense lawyers asked the court for time to explain how the outrageous leak might have affected their clients' appeals. Naturally, the court this week rejected this request. After all, the court might have to acknowledge that it had done wrong if it looked into itself — on request.

There is a question of fairness and ethics here. No Supreme Court justice should discuss what goes on in closed sessions. No clerk to a justice or a lesser functionary should discuss such matters, either. And yet, we live in a time when the leak of privileged or confidential information is more often the rule than the exception. Consider the most recent leaking of new Watergate tapes concerning Richard Nixon.

Though I am a journalist, I am sorry somebody leaked to Nina Totenberg, if that is what happened. The Supreme Court ought to be the last refuge for all citizens. If that's gone, isn't fair play a rather hollow concept in our republic?

Nina Totenberg does not like Chief Justice Burger's work. She questions his motives in this case as well as those of other Nixon appointees. She would like to see all the defendants in prison, and her enterprising reporting, to her, is a way of ensuring that the three defendants get what she thinks they deserve. So while her NPR report amounts to a challenge of Chief Justice Burger's motives, her own motives are also open to question.

There is justification for such questioning. She says it was "unusual" for Burger to delay announcement on the review issue "for no apparent reason," and to practice "covert lobbying" for his viewpoint. Well, justices do lobby one another on many issues before final announcement is made. To which she answers:

"It's different because it's an abuse by the Chief Justice. This is political hanky-panky in favor of the defendants. He is taking too long to release the decision."

"If anything, this story helps the defendants. There's been a week-long flap over it. The defendants have really lost their case. Their only chance was this flap over the leak."

Those are rather assertive judgments. Miss Totenberg's script reads that a Nixon-appointed Chief Justice, buttressed by two Nixon-appointed Associate Justices, is trying to swing votes in favor of three top officials of the Nixon Administration. She has also decided that these officials have lost their case. Otherwise, as she said in her broadcast, it could develop that "...Haldeman and Mitchell will remain free, probably for another year, perhaps forever."

Having them free for another year would sadden, perhaps even anger, reporter Totenberg. But it is still up to the U.S. Supreme Court to decide whether the defendants have a right to review.

Let's hope the court uses its own head to make that decision and also rebukes whoever "leaked." The Supreme Court should be the last body in government to "cover up."

Lethal injection may replace electric chair

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas may be the first state to execute a man or woman by a lethal injection in the veins.

Right now it's a close race with Oklahoma. The Texas Senate approved on voice vote Wednesday and sent to the governor a House-passed bill that would change Texas' method of execution from "Old Sparky," the electric chair, to a fatal injection.

The measure, originally introduced by Rep. Ben Grant, D-Marshall, calls for those convicted of capital crimes and sentenced to death to die by injection of a "lethal substance."

The injection would be made by the director of the Texas prison system or anyone he designates.

Sen. Bill Braecklein, D-Dallas, said a licensed physician could not make the injection because of the oath he takes as a doctor.

If the Texas bill is signed into law by Gov. Dolph Briscoe, the bill becomes effective 90 days after the end of the legislative session on May 30.

"So far no other state has this," said a spokesman for Grant. "Both houses have approved it in Oklahoma and a conference committee report adopted. The Senate has adopted it and if the House adopts it later this week it will go to the Oklahoma governor."

Other House bills sent to the governor included:

—A complete revision and recodification of Texas liquor laws. "This makes no substantive changes," said Sen. Frank Lombardino, D-San Antonio. "It has been in the making for four years...It definitely does not provide for a full time paid (Texas Alcoholic Beverage) commission."

—Authorizes the Texas Employment Commission to set up special counseling services for "displaced homemakers," mostly divorcees and widows who have not worked for a living previously.

Senate bills sent to the House included:

—Replacement of certain juvenile courts and domestic relations courts by 35 state family district courts. Cost was estimated at $490,000 for the first year.

—Issuance of a certificate instead of a policy for auto insurance.

—Optional "under-insured motorist" coverage that would pay for injuries received in an auto accident caused by a driver whose liability policy was insufficient to cover the full cost. It also would enable drivers to increase their uninsured motorist coverage beyond the present maximum of $10,000 per person up to $20,000 per accident.

Don't set a place for Giscard

By DON COOK
The Los Angeles Times

LONDON — In an unexplained diplomatic snub, French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing will stay away from a dinner party at No. 10 Downing Street on Friday night for President Carter and the other participants in the forthcoming seven-nation economic summit.

The dinner, to be hosted by Prime Minister James Callaghan, was planned as an informal affair to let participants get acquainted before getting down to the serious business of the two-day conference on Saturday morning.

But the French president, who has yet to meet Carter personally, sent word from Paris that he will not arrive in London until Saturday in time for the opening summit session, and therefore will not be attending the dinner.

All the other conference heads of government from Britain, Japan, the United States, West Germany, Italy and Canada will be present together with their finance and foreign ministers. Apparently French Foreign Minister Louis De Guiringaud, who will be arriving in London on Friday, will attend the dinner despite the decision of Giscard d'Estaing to stay away. Also on the guest list, and apparently important to the reasons why the French leader will be absent, will be the president of the common market commission, Roy Jenkins.

A diplomatic snub of this kind in a major conference is not taken accidentally and without reason — particularly by the French. The British, however, are shrugging the whole thing off with some amusement. As one British official put it, "If the French want to look silly why should we worry about it?"

But the question remains — if President Carter crosses the Atlantic why can't the French president cross the English Channel to meet him for dinner?

There is a total absence of any official explanation from the Elysee palace in Paris to the British hosts as to why Giscard won't attend, but the hint has been dropped that it is because the Common Market Commission president had been put on the guest list. Giscard d'Estaing fought to prevent Jenkins from taking part at all in this summit meeting. In the end, under intense pressure from smaller countries of the Common Market at their last heads of government meeting in Rome, Giscard d'Estaing had to accept a compromise in which Jenkins would take part in sessions of the summit where Common Market matters were under discussion.

But the French do not give up easily, and the word being passed from Paris is that the French president did not think that the Common Market president should be included in social events in London — that he should be kept to the formal discussions at the conference table on matters such as trade and the tariff problems or the attitude of the Common Market on negotiations between the industrial and the developing world.

All this seems to diplomatic observers here to be a poor reason for the president of France to shun the dinner party.

It appears from sources here and in Paris that two other factors are probably behind Giscard's obvious snub.

The first is his own domestic political problems and an effort to produce a "Gaullist gesture" of French independence on this summit occasion. The second is a marked irritation on the part of the French just now with Carter.

The French president has already expressed his annoyance publicly over American contacts both in Paris and in Washington with leading members of the leftist opposition in France. He considers this to be an interference in French internal affairs.

This problem continues to be raised persistently by French officials in conversations with Americans, reflecting no doubt the increasing jitteriness of the political situation in France as the time for parliamentary elections moves closer and closer.

On top of this, Giscard d'Estaing was personally said to be furious over Carter's inadvertent disclosure that secret talks had taken place near Versailles among the British, French, German and American finance ministers three weeks ago in preparation for this London summit meeting. Carter blurted this out while conversing in front of a microphone at the White House that he was unaware was picking up his conversation.

Moreover Treasury Secretary Michael W. Blumenthal in the same inadvertent disclosure commented that he had found the French at the Versailles meeting "much more cooperative than I have found them in the past because of their weak economic situation." These comments did not sit well at the Elysee Palace.

Threatened by the left in the elections ahead and under constant critical attack from the Gaullists, who are his main base of parliamentary strength but who thoroughly dislike his policies and leadership, Giscard d'Estaing is increasingly having to find gestures or acts in the De Gaulle model to prove himself a worthy De Gaulle successor.

Apparently, not attending the dinner with President Carter falls into this category. But whatever he may be gaining in Paris with this gesture he certainly is losing in London.

IN MEMORIAM OF: WILLIAM MARK PARKER

Mark gave his love and friendship when it wasn't expected. He gave it to all he met. Mark never knew a stranger, for he reached out to everyone. Mark never let his friends feel loneliness, for he let them know he cared. Mark could cheer you up no matter how depressed you were, and then he would let you know, in his own way, that he was always there to listen, and help if he could. Mark had a radiance in his life, which is something few teenagers have. Mark lived his life for God. Our friendship grew as did our love for one another, yet it was never defined by words. We gave to each other the greatest gift in all creation, love. It was hard to say goodbye to Mark, like giving a testimony for God. I was reluctant to finish the last sentence. But the memories of Mark are buried deep in my heart, and cannot be taken away from me by anyone. We cannot always understand God's reason for taking the life of a loved one, but God always knows best. God knew what life held in store for Mark, and saw it best to take him from us. Today, on Mark's birthday, I am positive that he is happy in heaven. Mark is standing at the right hand of his God. We are filled with sorrow for the loss of this one that we treasured and loved so much, but remember, we will be with Mark someday soon. And once again, we will see the radiance shine through in Mark's life.

Escapee headed home

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (AP) — David Driscoll was en route to his home in New Mexico today after authorities determined that the man who escaped from a prison in Piedras Negras, Mexico, was not wanted for any offense in the United States.

Driscoll was in San Antonio today awaiting a flight to Albuquerque. He spent the night in the Maverick County sheriff's office while authorities checked his records.

The 28-year-old New Mexico man dodged bullets fired by Mexican prison guards and did a hand-cuffed dog paddle across the Rio Grande, to reach this South Texas border city. Some of his relatives arrived here Wednesday to accompany him home.

Driscoll spent 13 months in prison in Mexico following his arrest on a marijuana possession charge. He said that although he was tortured while in custody, he was never tried on any charge.

Hussein exam over

HOUSTON (AP) — King Hussein of Jordan was scheduled to leave here today after undergoing two days of physical examinations at a Houston hospital.

Hussein entered St. Luke's Hospital Tuesday for what hospital officials said was a routine physical.

No report of the examination findings will be made public, an official said, because "that is the way the king wants it."

The king was scheduled to go to the airport immediately after his release from the hospital.

Survey reveals Texans generally health conscious

Approximately one out of every four Texans is on some type of diet, a statewide survey has shown.

Staples and Staff Inc. marketing research firm surveyed by telephone 506 persons throughout Texas the week of April 18 to 23.

Of those questioned, 26 per cent said they are on a diet. Thirty per cent of the women, compared to 22 per cent of the men, said they are dieting.

In a related question, 66 per cent of those questioned said they disapprove of the ban on saccharin, even when they were reminded of the Food and Drug Administration finding which linked saccharin to cancer in laboratory mice.

Anglo residents, those who live in small towns and rural areas and those 55 or older disapproved of the ban in larger numbers than other groups.

Answers to other questions in the survey indicate Texans are concerned about their health.

Sixty-four per cent said they set aside some time each week for exercise. Men are considerably more likely to set aside time for exercise than women, with 72 per cent of the men questioned, compared to 57 per cent of the women, saying they exercise regularly.

Of those under 35, 73 per cent said they set aside time for exercise, compared to 62 per cent of those 55 and older.

Eighty-eight per cent of those surveyed said they have a family doctor. Women were slightly more likely than men to have a family doctor, with 91 per cent of the women questioned and 85 per cent of the men reporting they have one.

Even in the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, 86 per cent reported there is a person whom they consider to be their family doctor.

Although the type of physical check-up may vary considerably, 73 per cent said they have had a physical check-up of some sort in the past 12 months. That figure includes 79 per cent of the women questioned and 67 per cent of the men.

Members of minority groups are just as likely to have had such a check-up as white citizens.

Two-thirds of those questioned reported they had drunk at least one cup of coffee on the day of the survey. But 46 per cent of those who reported drinking coffee said they had cut down on the amount they drink as a result of rising prices. This decline was found in all population groups.

Slightly more than one out of three (37 per cent) of the adults in Texas can be classified as "smokers," with that percentage of those surveyed reporting having smoked a cigarette, cigar or pipe on the day of the survey.

Thirty-eight per cent of those who do smoke said they had tried to stop smoking in the past 12 months but had been unsuccessful.

Smokers as a group tend to deny or suppress the fact that smoking is injurious to their health. Eighty per cent of non-smokers said they believe smoking reduces the number of years a person lives, compared to only 45 per cent of the smokers.

Residents of the Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston metropolitan areas are more likely, by an eight to 6 margin, than residents of small towns and rural areas to believe smoking decreases lifespan.

Education also is a factor. Eighty per cent of college educated adults believe smoking reduces the number of years a person lives, compared to 55 per cent of those who did not graduate from high school.

Women are slightly more likely to believe in a link between smoking and longevity than men, by a 71 to 63 margin.

Although heart trouble is claimed to cause more deaths than cancer 52 per cent of those questioned feared cancer more, compared to 21 per cent who fear heart trouble more.

Sixty-one per cent of the women surveyed fear cancer more, compared to 44 per cent of the men. Conversely, 26 per cent of the men fear heart trouble more, compared to 17 per cent of the women.

Among smokers, 47 per cent said they feared cancer more than heart trouble, compared to 55 per cent of the non-smokers.

The researchers concluded that women tend to think more about cancer than men because 50 per cent of the women in the survey said someone in their immediate family has had cancer, compared to 35 per cent of the men.

The question included grandparents and nephews and nieces in the definition of immediate family.

In the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, 46 per cent reported that a member of their immediate family had had cancer, compared to 43 per cent of the statewide population.

Cleaning carpet very important

By ANDY LANG
AP Newfeatures

Keeping your carpet clean isn't only a matter of helping it retain its bright appearance, although that certainly is a sufficiently desirable end in itself. What many might consider an even more important reason is that cleanliness prolongs the life of a carpet to a considerable degree.

Carpets should be vacuumed at least once a week, using a cleaner equipped with a brush or beater-bar and without teeth, combs or rough edges. The cleaner should be moved slowly to allow the suction to pick up embedded soil particles. Although the vacuuming can be done in any direction, the final strokes should be parallel to give the carpet a uniform surface appearance. The cleaner should go over a given area from three to seven times.

For daily surface cleaning, a non-electric carpet sweeper will do the job nicely. It is designed to take up lint, crumbs, some dust and other surface litter. A straight suction-type vacuum cleaner also does this as well as picking up all surface dust. In both cases, however, little or no embedded dirt is removed, which is the reason for the more thorough once-a-week cleaning with a vacuum cleaner that combines strong suction with a revolving brush. The brushes should be kept clean and replaced when worn out.

What happens when a carpet accumulates so much soil that it becomes dulled? A special cleaning is in order. The Carpet and Rug Institute recommends one of three methods — the wet, an absorbent powder cleansing and the use of an aerosol foam spray.

Wet cleaning is suitable for most carpets. Use a mild, neutral detergent made especially for carpet cleaning and follow the directions for dilution and application. Avoid using soap, ammonia, washing soda or any strong household cleaning agent. Do not get the carpet too wet. Remove all furniture from the room before you start or place thick plastic wrap or aluminum foil under and around the legs of chairs, tables and other furniture. When the carpet is clean, brush the wet pile in one direction with a soft brush or a special plastic or wooden rake finishing tool. Dry the carpet by opening the windows and, if practical, turning up the heat.

Absorbent powders are often used for the removal of surface oil, following the manufacturer's directions carefully. To use aerosol foam spray, apply a thin layer on the carpet, work it in with a wet sponge, mop and vacuum when dry. Here, too, be sure to follow the manufacturer's directions.

Should you wish to use a professional cleaning establishment, try to get a recommendation from a neighbor and investigate both "on location" or "plant" cleaning. A pro can also remove stubborn stains or repair torn areas.

For handling spots and stains yourself, the best advice anyone can give is to act immediately. Blot liquids with clean white towels or tissues, then use another clean towel dampened with water or a mild detergent, working gently from the edge of the spot toward the center. Continue to blot until the carpet is nearly dry. Semi-solids or solids can be lifted with a spoon or dull knife before taking any other action. Whatever cleaning solution you use, pretest it first in an inconspicuous area. Hold a white tissue on the wet area and count to 10. Examine the tissue for carpet dye transfer. Examine the carpet. If there is damage to the carpet or its dye, the solution should not be used. But remember again — it's the action you take in the first couple of minutes that is important.

Home tours urged

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Swedes are being tempted to switch from lazy Mediterranean beaches to hikes and canoeing-cruising in the northern Swedish wilderness.

Under the motto "Open Sweden," tourist authorities are waging a campaign to promote the vacation possibilities of virgin areas, which cover a substantial part of this Nordic country.

While reserving a great portion of nature tours for foreigners, one of the campaign's chief aims is to decrease a negative tourist net of some $700 million last year.

That is how much Swedish tourists spent abroad with foreigners' expenses in Sweden deducted.

To reverse that trend, travel agencies and county tourist associations have played on the dream of many Swedes to return to nature by organizing hiking, canoeing, hunting and fishing expeditions at reasonable costs, tailored to fit different physical abilities.

These group travels are fully developed arrangements with guides, meals and provisions, accommodation and excursions. Costs range from $190 to $310 a week per person, including train ticket.

Still, the average Swedish tourist spends more time abroad than he does domestically. In 1975 Swedes spent 20 million nights abroad, but only 12 million in their own country as tourists, the Swedish Tourist Council says.

The council, the highest tourist authority in Sweden, decided to reduce this discrepancy, aware that 30 per cent of the Swede's private budget is allocated to travel and leisure.

The Swedish Forest Service, an agency responsible for all state-owned woods, has founded a travel agency of its own, Swedish Recreation. In cooperation with the tourist council it can supply 96 different canoeing expeditions, 38 mountain hikes, 60 fishing vacations and 40 cottages for rent.

In meeting tourist standards more common on the European continent, market director Lars Gunnar Svensson hopes to be able to sell a substantial part of wilderness group tours to foreign tourists also.

"Our aim is to allocate 60 to 70 per cent of our capacity to Swedes, with the remainder going to foreign tourists," Svensson said.

Swedish Recreation's main competitor in the field is the government-subsidized Swedish Tourist Association, administering some 270 hikers' hostels, 12 mountain hotels and 40 mountain cottages.

Vacation possibilities include canoeing on the famous Sjaunja Lake, hunting for elk, or more sophisticated activities like fishing trips to remote lakes by helicopter or sightseeing in the mountains by snow scooter.

Legislators Dave Allred, D-Wichita Falls, Ron Bird, D-San Antonio and Billy Hall, D-Laredo, display identical T-shirts during House debate Wednesday on the appropriations bill. Debate was

Appropriation bill cut

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — After seven days of debating everything from judges' salaries to campus homosexual clubs, House members expected to finish work today on the $15.7 billion general appropriation bill.

They have trimmed the bill by $252 million, and a proposed two per cent cut in general revenue appropriations would increase that to nearly $400 million.

A $263 million teacher pay raise bill and $213 million worth of benefit improvements for retired teachers are awaiting their turn on the floor, so the money is needed.

Rumors circulated Wednesday that the House might defeat the bill — the one item of legislation that must be passed either before final adjournment or in a special session.

Assuming it does pass, Senators will substitute their own $15.6 billion version. Differences will be worked out by a joint conference committee for a final up or down vote near the session's May 30 adjournment date.

Wednesday's floor session included an 87-56 vote to freeze the number of state employees and use the money saved for bigger raises for those already on the payroll.

Rep. Ben Z. Grant, D-Marshall, said five per cent annual raises instead of the 3.4 per cent recommended by the House Appropriations Committee would cost $172 million, but freezing employment at present levels would pay for them.

Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, won a 78-54 vote to restore Jan. 19, "Confederate Heroes Day," as a state holiday. The appropriations committee had cut it out.

"Which side did you fight on in the Civil War?" asked black Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont.

"If you are a southerner, the same side you did," Hollowell said.

Representatives approved without discussion a rider allowing the House to charge "a reasonable fee for rental of space" under its control in the Capitol — namely, space for the Capitol Press Corps.

The Austin bureau of HarteHanks newspapers has requested press room space but only if allowed to pay for it.

The House adopted, 110-28, a rider expressing legislative intent that state university boards "use all reasonable, legal means possible" to prohibit use of campus facilities by homosexual organizations.

Rep. Bill Ceverha, R-Dallas, said Texas A&M recently denied recognition to a homosexual organization, but the University of Texas at Austin has recognized one.

"What's next? Campus recognition of the Happy Flagellation Corps, Masochists Anonymous or the Foot Fetish Fraternity?" Ceverha asked.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, opposed the amendment, saying it would bloody the House politically in order to "give one more demagogue one more thing to put in his platform."

Becken first in benefit police marathon

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — If someone had told Al Becken six years ago that he could run 54 miles he'd have said it was impossible.

But Becken, a 48-year-old Civil Service worker, jogged the 54 miles around San Antonio's Interstate Loop 410 in seven hours, 56 minutes on Sunday.

He easily outran 28 city policemen and a few others who started the benefit police marathon at 6 a.m. "I went out there with the intention of running 35 miles," Becken told the San Antonio News after his feat.

"But when we got to 35 miles, I figured I'd go 45. When I got to Nacogdoches Road, I felt real good and they told me I only had about nine miles to go," he said.

Then Becken, who "couldn't even jog a mile" when he first began running several years ago, got leg cramps.

"That's where I should have stopped. Without that cramp, I could have run eight-minute miles," he said.

But Becken didn't quit. He forged ahead, walking the last three miles in 45 minutes and running the final stretch. Five policemen finished hours later and the other runners dropped out.

Becken had high blood pressure in 1972 when his oldest son persuaded him to start running. Today, he said, his blood pressure is normal and he is ill less often.

He joined the San Antonio Roadrunners in 1973 and now runs eight to 10 miles daily. On weekends, he and fellow roadrunners run anywhere from 16 to 20 miles per day.

"I ran my first marathon here in San Antonio and got hooked," the late blooming runner recalled. "I'm just hooked on running, period."

Jury finds Medders guilty

DALLAS (AP) — State District Court Judge John Vance today was to sentence Mrs. Margaret Medders, who once traveled in high social circles in the Southwest, following her conviction on a felony theft charge.

It took a state district court jury only 25 minutes Wednesday to find Mrs. Medders, 58, guilty on a felony theft of services charge in connection with her alleged failure to pay a $352 hotel bill.

The posh Fairmont Hotel claims Mrs. Medders owes them a total of $14,485 for lodging, food and services, but she was only tried on a specific charge of failing to pay $352 for a period between last May 25 and June 1.

Maximum punishment for Mrs. Medders would be ten years in prison and a $5,000 fine. State prosecutors have asked Judge Vance to give her the maximum punishment. Although Mrs. Medders was tried by a jury, she chose to have her sentence imposed by the judge, an option open to defendants in criminal cases in Texas.

Mrs. Medders and her late husband, Ernest, once gave parties for the famous and powerful at the ranch they operated near Muenster, north of here. On one occasion, they rode to Texas from Washington on Air Force One with President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Friends, neighbors and businesses were convinced that Medders and his wife were heirs to a billion dollar oil fortune, but their fortunes fizzled in 1967 when suits showered there was no oil fortune. The couple had accumulated an estimated $3 million in debts.

Child abuse trial defendant found guilty

HOUSTON (AP) — The prosecutor said 8-year old Daniel Brownell was a "vegetable" because of injuries inflicted on him by his stepfather.

A doctor testified the words "I cry" had been burned into the boy's back.

The doctor said brain damage had resulted from the trauma of a ruptured colon and the gangrene which had set it.

The blonde-headed boy was wheeled into court curled up on a roll-away bed and Dr. Wallace Fagan testified Daniel had the reflexes of a newborn infant and had to be fed with a syringe inserted in his mouth.

Fagan said the boy apparently could not see, hear or move.

"But nurses have told me that now and then there are tears in his eyes," the doctor testified.

Some of the jurors wept when the doctor testified. Prosecutor Hogan Stripling, in his closing arguments Wednesday asked the jury to tell "this community what you think of (this) behavior."

The eight-woman, four-man jury deliberated about an hour before convicting Lozier Ray Pickering, 25. It then assessed him the maximum 20-year prison sentence.

Carolyn Pickering, 28, Pickering's wife and the boy's mother, also is charged with injuring the boy. She is awaiting trial.

Pickering, a construction worker, did not testify in the emotion-packed trial which had an overflow crowd the final day in the courtroom of State District Judge Bob Scofield.

"If an eye for an eye were true, you should reduce Pickering to the life of a vegetable," Stripling told the jury.

J. B. Davis, Pickering's attorney, claimed there was no evidence directly linking Pickering to the child's injuries and criticized the circumstantial nature of the case against him.

"Don't find this man guilty because of what you feel for his child," Davis said in closing remarks to the jury.

Pickering brought the boy to a Houston area hospital last Oct. 13. Doctors said the child was in an unconscious condition. The boy still is a patient at the hospital.

Nixon admits mistakes, but won't grovel

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon confessed that he lied about Watergate, that he made the wrong decisions, that he let "the American people down." But the only man to resign the presidency grimly vowed that he would never grovel before his enemies.

In a dramatic recitation of his mishandling of the Watergate scandal, Nixon steadfastly maintained in a 90-minute televised interview that he was innocent of crime but guilty of blunders — "mistakes of the heart, rather than the head."

"I let down my friends. I let down the country. I let down our system of government ...." Nixon said Wednesday as he broke his silence on the scandal that drove him from office 33 months ago.

"I let the American people down, and I have to carry that burden with me for the rest of my life," he said in the first of four television interviews expected to earn him as much as $1 million.

Related stories,

Nixon said, "I have impeached myself...by resigning. That was a voluntary impeachment."

Viewers who expected a frank admission of guilt from Nixon were disappointed.

Despite persistent questioning by British television personality David Frost, Nixon refused to admit committing any offense for which he should have been impeached or prosecuted.

He admitted it was his fault the scandal "snowballed," but said: "People didn't think it was enough to admit mistakes, fine. If they want me to get down and grovel on the floor, no. Never. Because I don't believe I should."

In a program distilled from three days of taping at a private residence near Nixon's San Clemente estate, Nixon blamed his own bad judgment for the fall of his administration, but generally held to the same defense of his actions heard prior to his Aug. 9, 1974, resignation from the White House.

"I brought myself down," said Nixon. "I gave 'em a sword. And they stuck it in, and they twisted it with relish. And I guess if I'd been in their position, I'd done the same thing."

And, he said, "while technically I did not commit a crime, an impeachable offense ... these are legalisms. As far as the handling of this matter is concerned, it was so botched up. I made so many bad judgments. The worst ones, mistakes of the heart, rather than the head, as I pointed out. But let me say, a man in that ... top job — he's got to have a heart, but his head must always rule his heart."

Nixon admitted, "I said things that were not true" about the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters and subsequent cover-up. But he insisted, "Most of them were fundamentally true on the big issues, but without going as far as I should have gone and saying perhaps that I had considered other things, but had not done them."

He said he "went right to the edge of the law ... a reasonable person could call that a cover-up. I didn't think of it as a cover-up."

Nixon, 64, was frequently combative and appeared angered by a number of Frost's questions.

But as the program neared its end, Nixon grew increasingly contrite, his voice breaking slightly as he said, "My political life is over. I will ... never again have an opportunity to serve in an official position."

The reactions from persons who took part in the investigation of Watergate or in Nixon's defense were diverse.

James Neal, the chief prosecutor at the cover-up trial, said while Nixon "at the end made an appealing and sympathetic statement, I thought he was weak when he got down to the facts."

Rep. Robert McClory, a Republican member of the House Judiciary Committee that voted to recommend Nixon's impeachment, said, "I think he made a terrible mistake in subjecting himself to this kind of prosecution on television."

"I thought he came off rather badly. He seemed harried, very nervous, seemed cornered many times. He seemed uneasy. He was entirely on the defensive."

Former Nixon speech writer Ray Price, who attended the taping sessions in Laguna Beach, Calif., last month, said, "I think it was a very generous concession by the President of his own errors."

Richard G. Kleindienst, a former attorney general under Nixon, and former Special Watergate Prosecutor Henry Ruth both ignored the broadcast in protest against a former president's being paid high stakes for recounting his days in public office.

Carter bound for overseas talks

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is bound for Europe and his informal initiation into the exclusive club of world statesmen.

Although Carter has met at the White House with a variety of presidents, prime ministers and princes, his first overseas mission will involve him in multinational talks with the political heavyweights of the industrialized world.

In advance of today's midmorning departure for London and an international economic summit, Carter said, "I'd like to have a common approach among the developed industrialized nations toward dealing with inflation and unemployment."

Although this is the central challenge facing Carter and his foreign counterparts, they also will confront other minefields of conflicting national interests.

In addition to discussing how to achieve economic stimulation free of rampant inflation, the conferees will discuss other knotty issues such as help for the world's poor nations, nuclear policy, East-West relations and trade.

The summit will occupy only part of a busy six-day schedule for Carter. He also will participate in a NATO summit in London, fly to Geneva for talks Monday with President Hafez Assad of Syria, take part in a four-nation meeting on Berlin, and confer individually with his country's most powerful global allies.

Carter's only respite from business will come Friday morning when he makes a four-hour tour of England's New Castle area, where his forebearers once lived.

A low-key arrival ceremony, free of speeches, awaited Carter tonight at London's Heathrow Airport. During five nights in the British capital, he will stay at Winfield House, the home of the American ambassador.

Summitry will get off to an informal start Friday night with a dinner at 10 Downing Street, the office-residence of Prime Minister James Callaghan. Formal sessions will be held Saturday and Sunday at the same site.

Callaghan has visited Carter at the White House, as have three other summit participants: Premiers Takeo Fukuda of Japan and Pierre Trudeau of Canada and Roy Jenkins, president of the European Common Market Commission.

Carter will be getting acquainted with three others: French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Premier Giulio Andreotti of Italy.

Each government head will be accompanied by his foreign and finance ministers. In Carter's case, that includes Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal.

Wholesale prices increase once more

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, an indicator of prices consumers eventually pay, soared 1.1 per cent in April, the third big monthly increase in a row, the government reported today.

The April increase, which matched the March rise in wholesale prices and followed a jump of nine-tenths of a per cent in February, adds to worries of accelerating inflation. The March increase had been the biggest monthly jump in wholesale prices since October 1975.

Government economists had expected the April jump because farm prices have been rising at a rate of better than 1 per cent for the past five months.

In April, prices for farm products increased 3.4 per cent, the biggest jump in a year, while prices for processed foods and feeds climbed 2.5 per cent.

Wholesale coffee prices rose another 7.3 per cent last month following a jump of nearly 31 per cent in March.

Not all the news was bad as the increase in prices for industrial commodities eased slightly last month. These prices rose six-tenths of a per cent in April, following an eight-tenths increase in March.

Economists look to prices of industrial goods as a truer measure of underlying inflationary trends. Much of the recent increase in farm and food prices has resulted from the winter weather's effects on crops and shipments, and economists expect these prices to begin moderating with the new harvests.

Price trends at the wholesale level are eventually passed along to the consumer, at least in part, since they represent higher costs to businesses that produce the goods consumers buy. Consumers are already feeling the effects of higher prices at supermarket counters, where the index for consumer foods — those ready for sale on grocery shelves — rose 2.5 per cent at the wholesale level last month.

The 1.1 per cent April increase in wholesale prices, if continued for a 12-month period, would result in an overall increase of 13 per cent for the year marking a return to the double-digit range for inflation that the nation experienced in 1974. Consumer prices that year rose 12.2 per cent. Consumer prices last year rose 4.8 per cent.

Over the past twelve months wholesale prices have increased 7.2 per cent.

The big increases in wholesale prices this year have been matched by large increases in consumer prices, which have risen at a 10 per cent annual rate during the first quarter.

Senate OKs court status change

AUSTIN — The Senate Wednesday passed Senate Bill 266, co-authored by Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson, which changes the Midland Court of Domestic Relations into the 318th District Court, with preference to be given to family matters.

The change will provide general district court powers and transfers the funding from the county to the state.

Judge Joe Mims, who has presided over the court since its creation in 1965 under legislation sponsored by Sen. Snelson will continue as judge of the court under terms of the bill.

SB 266 is an omnibus bill which transfers 31 existing courts of domestic relations and juvenile courts into state district courts.

The bill now goes to the House of Representatives for its consideration.

Meals-on-Wheels makes life just a bit easier

The aging man suffers from gout and is plagued by the discomforts of being old and poor. He doesn't get around well.

His partially-blind and sick wife is confined to a wheelchair. She doesn't get around at all.

But this man, at 89, still has a yearning for life. And the Meals-on-Wheels program here for the poor, the aged, and the ailing is helping him along.

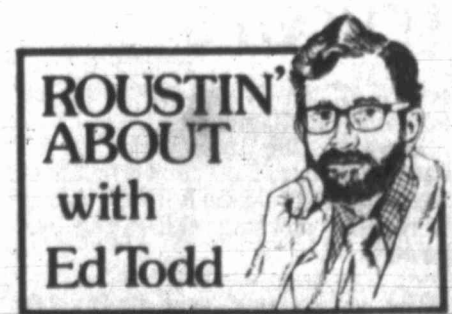

At least, so says the program's director, dietician Elizabeth Glenn.

"The hopeful man told her, she said: 'Meals-on-Wheels lets me stay home, lets me be here, so that I don't have to go to the nursing home and then over there ... to the cemetery.'"

No matter how nourishing it may be, the food will not be the man's fountain of youth. But it may prolong his life span and possibly suppress other diseases that might otherwise creep upon his tired body.

The program provides 75 Midlanders with hot noon-time meals during the weekdays. It gives them the needed nourishment they might otherwise go without.

All are poor; all are 60 years old or beyond, and all suffer from either physical or mental afflictions that inhibit their preparing nutritionally balanced meals.

Meals-on-Wheels insures that they get at least one decent meal a day during the weekdays.

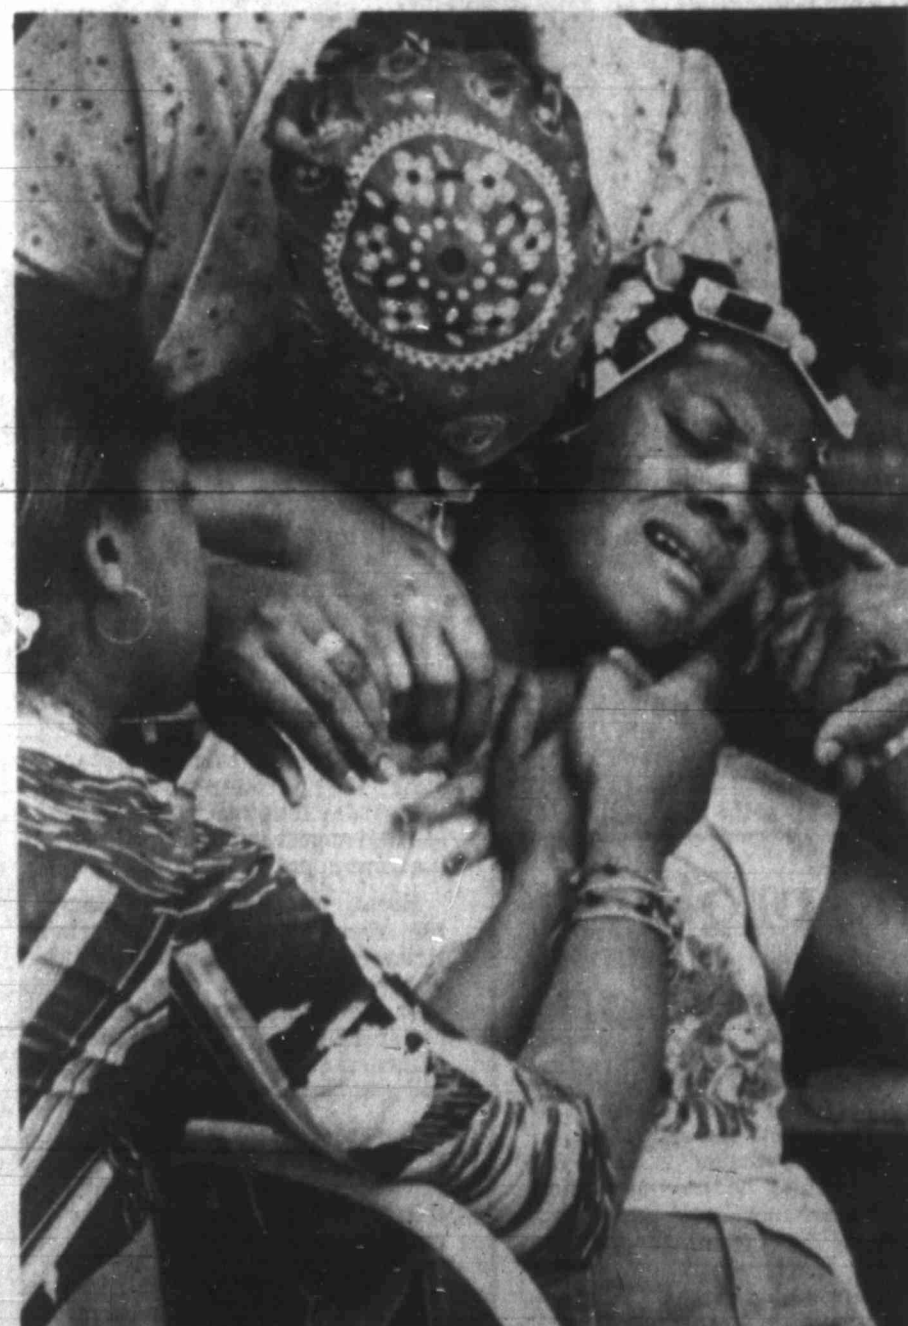

"Some people say we served them hot dogs," Mrs. Glenn said. "I tell them 'no.'"

The evidence in the kitchen of Midland Memorial Hospital backs her up. That's where the food is prepared, packaged and then promptly dispatched to the hungry and needy.

And the folks receiving this "gift," this palatable form of welfare, are appreciative, Mrs. Glenn said.

She proved her contention with a batch of notes written by some of those served by the program. "Just wanted to write a note and tell you how very much I enjoyed the hot meals and also the courteous service," wrote an elderly woman. "I could not have made it without your help and I do appreciate it. Thanks again for helping me when I needed it."

Another wrote: "Many thanks for your good service and God bless you all." And another, on Saint Valentine's Day, wrote: "Friday was the best dinner of the week."

The food has the variety found in about any cafeteria. And much of it is specially prepared for those on strict diets.

scale" based on income and circumstance. The food is carted to homes by teams of volunteers, often recruited through churches. In addition to the 75 folks served by the Meals-on-Wheels, 12 additional senior citizens are provided with hot meals in the Need-A-Meal program. These, however, pay $2 per meal. Generally, they are either ill, have undergone surgery or just "can't get around," Mrs. Glenn said.

The program also caters to a senior citizens' group here.

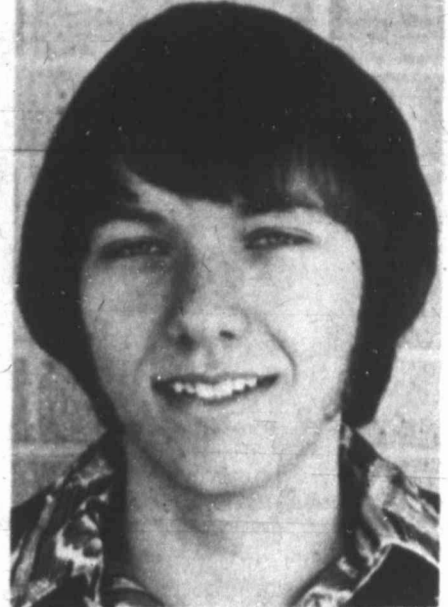

Meals-on-Wheels, the mainstay of the food program, is limited to 75 customers. Were the budget to allow it, that figure could multiply several times.

Those served by the program do appreciate the home delivery of hot meals.

Noted Mary Keegan, the program's bookkeeper, receptionist and Mrs. Glenn's "girl Friday": "Yeah, you better believe it," she said of the gratitude of the people. "That's what makes it worthwhile."

MIDLAND City Council PTA scholarship recipient from Midland High School is Troy Barrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Barrington. Barrington plans to attend Angelo State University. He will receive $1,100 over the next two years from the scholarship.

Though the service is largely supported by tax dollars, those on the Meals-on-Wheels serving line do contribute a mite toward paying for the food. It may be viewed as a donation, Mrs. Glenn said. At any rate, their donation is figured on a "sliding

50 persons indicted by state grand jury

Fifty persons were named in indictments returned Wednesday afternoon in 142nd District Court. Of the 56 cases presented to the grand jury, two were not indicted and four were passed, a district attorney office spokesman said.

First degree felony indictments returned included one murder and three aggravated robberies.

Other offenses included one robbery, two cases of indecency with a child, 16 burglaries, three aggravated assaults, two cases of driving while intoxicated, nine thefts, one carrying a concealed weapon, one arson, four forgeries, one credit card abuse, one possession of marijuana, two cases of delivery of marijuana and three cases of possession of heroin.

Colonel says will forms policy

The will of the American people actually forms this nation's defense policy and is its real strength, Col. Harold J. Field Jr. (USMC), New Orleans, La., said here Wednesday noon.

He went on to say that in his opinion the American people have the will to do what is necessary to keep the nation strong.

The colonel, who is the director of the 8th Marine Corps District, which includes the states of Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas, was the speaker at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton.

He discussed briefly the overall makeup of the military forces — strategic, combat and general purpose — and outlined the objectives of each. Most of his address, however, focused on the importance of the Reserve forces and on recruiting, as they relate to today's all-volunteer military.

"The Reserve forces are an integral part of our military posture," he said, "more important today than ever before. Our Reserve forces must be maintained at proper strength. We will be in very serious trouble if we let our Reserves go out of existence."

Switching then to the recruiting program and its tremendous importance, the speaker said "we need 1,000 recruits per day to maintain properly our all voluntary military forces."

Base Closure Office now open in Big Spring

BIG SPRING — The process of shutting down Webb Air Force Base this week with the opening of the Base Closure Office.

Col. Harry Spannaus, wing commander, said the base will be located in building 300. Col. Paul Brown will be base closure officer and Lt. Col. Ron Miller will serve as deputy.

Spannaus said the manning document which will describe the size and makeup of the caretaker force has not been received. The Air Force will keep the base maintained in top condition for turnover to the City of Big Spring, he said.

Only equipment designated as "mission essential" for another base will be removed before the turnover, Spannaus said. No decision has been made on who will be in charge of the base when it reaches caretaker status and no decisions have been made on reassignments.

The open house scheduled for May 22 and a fly-in of civilian planes May 21 may be the last basewide communitywide official function before the base is closed in June or July, he said.

He said he hopes as many as 10,000 people will visit the open house, which will include a performance by the Thunderbirds, a special Air Force flight team.

Partly cloudy weather may fade to fair skies

After several days of partly cloudy conditions, Midland is due to be fair Friday, the weatherman said. Partly cloudy conditions should remain throughout today and tonight, with a slight chance of thundershowers. The probability of precipitation will be 20 per cent today and tonight, said a National Weather Service spokesman at the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The low temperature tonight should be near 60, with a high Friday in the upper 80s.

Southwesterly winds should be 15 to 20 mph and gusty today decreasing to about 5 to 10 mph tonight.

A cloud cover of varying density enveloped the Permian Basin this morning.

Lamesans awoke to find a thick fog, which had begun to break up by about 8 a.m. Conditions also were warm and calm in Lamesa.

Andrews was 61 degrees about 8 a.m. and was partly cloudy, hot and calm. Crane reported partly cloudy skies and warm and calm conditions.

Rankin was calm and warm with high thin clouds. Odessa was partly cloudy, warm and calm.

Big Lake was windy, cloudy and about 65 degrees at 8 a.m.

Dry weather returned across most of Texas today.

Scattered light rain from Junction toward Del Rio and across the border into Mexico provided the only moisture. Thundershowers around El Paso dried up before midnight.

There was a checkered pattern of clouds and clear skies all across the state and temperatures were mild, ranging in early morning from 73 degrees at Brownsville and Dallas-Fort Worth down to 52 at Dalhart in the Panhandle. Wednesday's top marks went as high as 90 at Midland and 91 at Presidio and Wink in West Texas.

Considerable cloudiness was forecast over the state with occasional thundershowers late in the day over North Central and Southwest Texas. Fair weather was promised in the Panhandle.

depends entirely upon the honesty of the applicant. "Our objective is to get the best recruits that we can, to train them properly for military service, to further their education and service possibilities, so that when they return to their home communities they will be good citizens just like you are," Field said.

"We in the military are just like one of you," he continued.

"We believe in the dignity of the individual. We somehow must change the belief of many Americans that their military is made up of thugs and misfits.

"You, as good citizens can help us accomplish this, and you can also help the hard-working recruiter in his patriotic efforts. Please cooperate with him in every way possible. He needs your help," the speaker said.

"Help us also please to change the law so that we can gain access to juvenile records — for your sake and ours. We need your help also in changing attitudes toward the military.

"To deny us your help is to deny the nation," Col. Field concluded.

MC setting new record

Seventy-three students — a record number — are candidates for degrees from Midland College this year, president Dr. A. G. Langford said.

The fourth annual commencement ceremony will be held at 7 p.m. May 14 at the Lee High School auditorium.

Speaker will be Dr. Kenneth Ashworth, commissioner of higher education of the Texas College and University System.

The preliminary candidate list includes 12 students to receive associate in arts degrees, 16 students to receive associate in science degrees and 45 students to receive associate in applied science degrees. The Student Senate will host a reception for graduates, faculty and staff and their guests after the ceremonies.

Lee students take honors

Britain to circumvent strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The British government says it will keep Northern Ireland's power stations running despite a vote by key technicians at the biggest plant to join the Protestant general strike now in its third day. Roy Mason, Britain's Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, said Wednesday that army specialists are on hand to prevent "great suffering to the community."

Mason was defense secretary in 1974 when another Protestant general strike succeeded because another Labor government delayed taking over essential services until the power supply was cut to 25 per cent, natural gas service was way down and a water shortage threatened.

The government feared then that to send troops into the plants would provoke a Protestant uprising. But this time Protestant support for the strike is weaker.

Technicians at the Ballylumford power station, which supplies most of the province's power, voted Wednesday to join the strike called by the militant Protestants of the United Unionist Action Council to support their demand for an army crackdown on the Roman Catholic guerrillas of the Irish Republican Army and revival of the Protestant-dominated provincial parliament. However, the technicians set no date for their walkout, and officials at Ballylumford said the full shift was at work this morning generating full power.

The government said there was almost 100 per cent attendance for the early shifts today at major industrial plants, dairies and bakeries and among mail sorters, water, sewage and airport employees.

Protestant street gangs continued a campaign of intimidation to keep workers away from their jobs. The police reported some 500 cases of intimidation, and a spokesman said: "We are convinced that is just the tip of the iceberg."

A bomb shattering a power transformer causing a two-hour blackout Wednesday night in a half-square-mile section of Londonderry, second largest city in the province. No group claimed responsibility for the bombing, but security sources hinted they suspected Protestant extremists.

Public housing project residents to apply soon

By JIM STEINBERG

Applications for residency in the city's 100-unit public housing project for the elderly and handicapped will be accepted beginning June 1, the Midland Housing Authority's board of commissioners announced Wednesday.

The applications will be accepted by the Human Relations Council, 806 W. Ohio St., and processed by the Housing Authority, Chairman Harry Clark said.

Those applications will be formally reviewed by the authority between July 15 and 1. Tentatively, the move-in date for the complex under construction at Scharbauer Drive and Pecos Street has been set for Sept. 1. Fred Kester, secretary of the housing authority, said.

The commissioners set maximum income limit for one person at the complex at $7,200. And at least 20 per cent of the occupants must be from a very low income group — under $3,000, the commission decided.

Small town wins award

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Liberty Hill, the only tiny Texas hamlet with a town square full of sculpture, has been honored for its contributions to the arts in Texas.

The Central Texas town of 800 and the City of Dallas received Texas Arts Awards Wednesday night at the first Texas Arts Showcase at the University of Texas.

The first ever presentation of the 11 awards for distinguished contributions highlighted the Showcase, which included performances by many Texas musicians, singers, actors and dancers.

More than 500 persons from across the state, including several state officials, attended the ceremonies that completed the Texas Arts Alliance's annual meeting.

Basin sectors draw sites for 109 oil, gas tests

One hundred-nine location applications were filed last week with the Texas Railroad Commissions and the New Mexico Conservation Commission.

The count showed a decrease of 52 from the 161 sites staked two weeks ago.

New Mexico oil, gas work includes opener

Eddy County, N.M., gained an oil strike and two field extenders, a prolific oiler was finished in a Lea sector, and Chaves County drew three pool tests.

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 1-A HF Federal, has been finished as a Grayburg discovery in Eddy, 12 miles southeast of Artesia.

The 24-hour potential test gauged 14 barrels of 36-gravity oil and one barrel of water on the pump, through perforations at 1,629-1,653 feet.

Drilled to 3,038 feet, it has 5½-inch casing set at 1,896 feet, the plugged-back depth.

Top of the Queen was picked at 1,192 feet, Grayburg at 1,549 feet, and San Andres at 1,949 feet, under ground elevation of 3,475 feet.

It is 600 feet from north and east lines of section 10-19s-27e, two miles southwest of the Artesia field.

The Daugherty (Sab Andres) field of Eddy gained its second current well with completion of FRC Bearing Service & Supply Co. No. 4 Daugherty, 16 miles west of Loco Hills.

A reentry operation, it finished for a daily pumping potential of 26 barrels of oil and two barrels of water, through perforations at 1,988-2,056 feet.

Originally completed by Byrd-Frost-English, from the San Andres in 1947, it was deepened from old total depth of 2,061 feet to 2,089 feet, and 4½-inch casing was set on bottom. The producing section was acidized with 2,000 gallons and fractured with 86,000 gallons and 97,000 pounds.

Location is 1,051 feet from south and 1,672 feet from west lines of section 3-17s-27e.

The field was reopened earlier this year by Yates Petroleum Corp. No. 1-HC State.

An undesignated Yesso oil area of Eddy gained a new producer with completion of Marathon Oil Co. No. 3 Arquist-State, ½ mile southwest of Dayton.

The potential test gauged 16 barrels of 38.4-gravity oil and 41 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 938-1. Completion was on the pump, natural, through perforations at 1,472-1,622 feet.

Location is 330 feet from north and 1,650 feet from east lines of section 29-18s-26e.

LEA COMPLETION

Continental Oil Co. No. 1-18 Bell Lake Unit has been completed as a prolific ¼-mile northwest extension to Morrow gas production in the Bell Lake, South field of Lea County.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 76,643,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Gas-liquid ratio measured 2,942,000-1, and gravity of the fluid was 47.4 degrees.

It is bottomed at 13,960 feet, and has a 5-inch liner hung from 11,677-13,957 feet, and is plugged back to 13,912 feet.

CHAVES SITES

Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, N.M., will drill No. 1-D Federal as a two-mile west outpost to the Linda (San Andres) field of Chaves County, three miles north of High Lonesome.

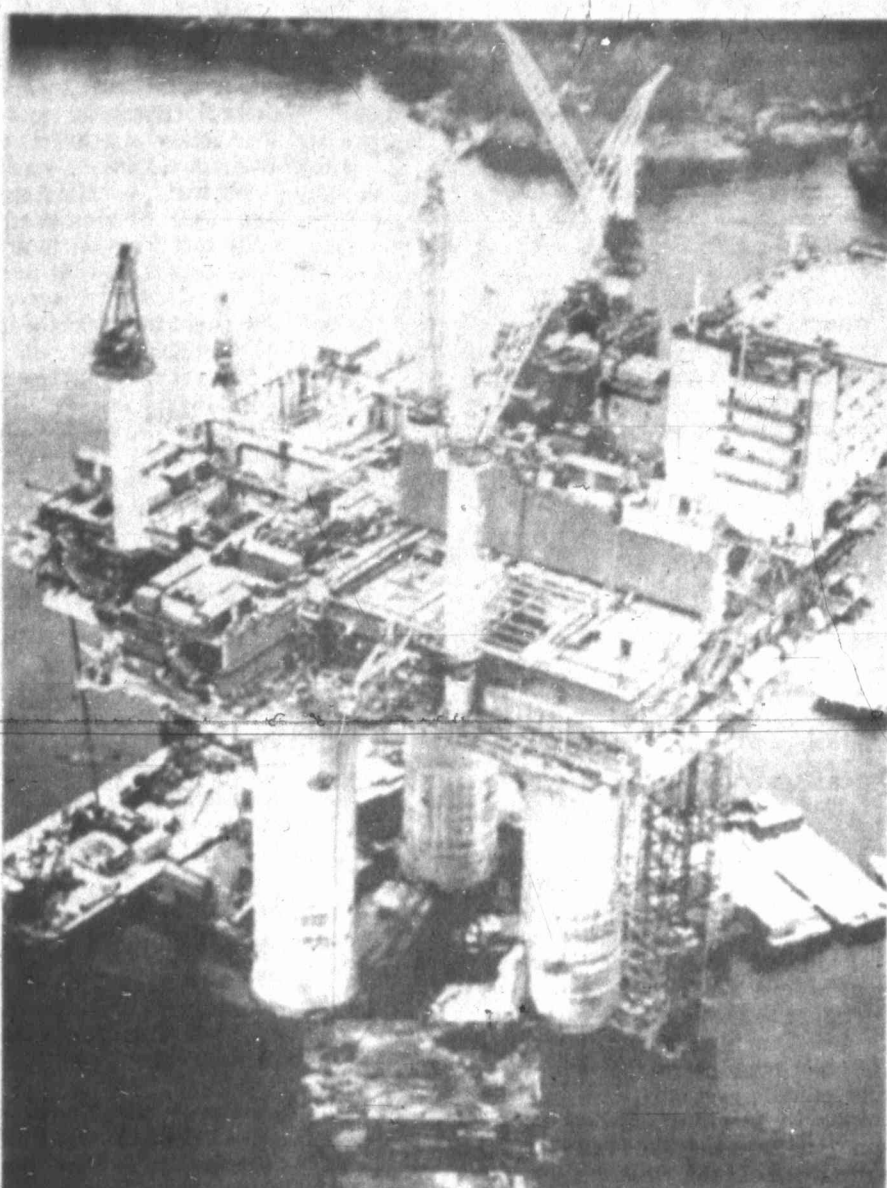

It spots 2,310 feet from north and 990 feet from east lines of section 1-7s-25e. Contract depth is 1,200 feet.

Fred Pool Drilling Co., Alto, N.M., has scheduled a ¾-mile southwest stepout to the four-well Chisum, East (San Andres) field of Chaves, 22 miles east of Roswell.

Wildcat, outpost set in West Texas areas

Concho County drew site for a wildcat, strike outposts are planned for a new pay in a Crockett field and an offset site has been staked in a Nolan sector.

Texas American Oil Corp., Midland, accounted for the 2,425-foot scheduled explorer in Concho, 10¼ miles southwest of Eden, and about ¾ mile east of an undesignated King sand oil discovery.

Drillsite is 467 feet from south and west lines of section 143. EL&RR survey.

M. Brad Bennett, Inc., Robert K. Hillin and NRM of Midland completed the discovery, No. 114 Norman, April 22, for 35 barrels of 38-gravity oil daily, plus 160 barrels of water, through perforations at 2,046-2,047½ feet.

CROCKETT OUTPOSTS

William E. Hendon Jr., of Midland, has filed applications to drill four outposts to the recent Yates gas opener in the Wamoco field of Crockett, 16 miles north of Ozona.

All have a proposed depth of 1,300 feet.

No. 2-A University-Amoco, ½ mile south of the discovery, is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 13, block 42, ULS.

No. 1-24 University, ¾ mile southwest, spots 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 24, block 42, ULS.

No. 2-24 University, one mile south outpost is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 24, block 42, ULS.

And No. 2-23 University, ¾ mile southeast of the pay opener, is 660 feet from north and west lines of section 23, block 42, ULS.

Hendon completed the discovery, No. 1 Amoco-University, a former Canyon oil opener in the field, in December, 1974, for 1,068 million cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 940-1,156 feet.

NOLAN STEPOUT

Frank W. Burger of Abilene, has scheduled No. 1 J. W. Byrd, a north stepout to production in the four-well JMR (Strawn) field of Nolan, three miles south of Sweetwater.

It is projected for a bottom depth of 6,150 feet, and spots 660 feet from south and 2,173 feet from west lines of section 70, block 22, T&P survey.

Gulf stakes east offset

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 J. O. Haymes is to be drilled as an east offset to Texland, Recor and Schumacher No. 1 Wilson, recently completed long southwest extension to the Levelland (Abo) field of Hockley County.

The new project is five and one-half miles southwest of Levelland, 467 feet from north and 467 feet from west lines of labor 15, league 31, Baylor County School Land survey.

It is contracted to 8,100 feet.

TRSWELL

Texland, Rector and Schumacher No. 1 Wilson was finished for a 24-hour pumping potential of 112 barrels of oil and 48 barrels of water, through perforations from 7,296 to 7,439 feet after a 12,000-gallon acid treatment.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of labor 13, league 41, Maverick School Land survey.

WT sectors gain tests

Pool tests have been planned for Ward and Crane sectors.

Union Texas Petroleum Corp., operating from Midland, has filed permit application for a 1¼-mile east outpost to the Beall (Devonian and Ellenburger) field of Ward County. The project is designated No. 1-16-16 University.

Projected depth is 16,000 feet, and drillsite is 2,800 feet from north and 2,500 feet from east lines of section 16, block 16, ULS.

CRANE TEST

Arvin Norwood Drilling Co., Midland, will drill No. 1-A Harris, one location west and southwest of upper Clear Fork oil production in the W.E.R. field of South Crane, about 10 miles southwest of Crane townsite.

Location is 467 feet from northeast and southeast lines of section 1, block 1, H&TC survey. Planned depth is 3,200 feet, which is sufficient to test the San Andres, Clear Fork and upper Clear Fork pays.

They will be honored at a dinner May 10 in the El Paso Country Club.

Marine geologist says Alaska offshore tough

HOUSTON (AP) — A marine geologist says oil companies drilling in the only offshore federal leases in the Gulf of Alaska are going to encounter much tougher problems than they anticipated.

Dr. Bruce F. Molnia, a marine geologist with the U. S. Geological Survey, said Wednesday the oil firms first will have to find the oil — "if it is there."

"The way they are going at it up there, they act like there is plenty there," Molnia said in an interview Wednesday.

He said three companies, Exxon, Arco and Shell, have rigs working in the Gulf of Alaska.

Molnia said once deposits worth developing are found, the companies face even tougher problems imposed by nature and environmental concerns.

He recently concluded a series of studies of the Icy Bay region of the gulf and presented a paper on his findings at the Ninth Annual Offshore Technology Conference now meeting here.

Icy Bay is some 800 miles south of the Alaskan stateleased oil fields at Prudhoe Bay. It is relatively close to the Gulf of Alaska port of Valdez, which is the end of the trans-Alaskan pipeline from Prudhoe Bay.

Drilling in the gulf began last November and Molnia expects that the companies know what the extent of the production from the gulf will be.

Since the bay is the only sheltered bay near many of the offshore tracts, it was selected as a primary onshore staging site to support the offshore activity.

Last June, the Chugach Natives, Inc., applied to the Alaska District Corps of Engineers to dredge the bay and build facilities to handle the offshore production. However, geologists found that currents and waves are causing sediment from the gulf to "silt up the bay," he said.

If that were not enough to discourage any sort of pipeline construction to handle the crude from the gulf, Molnia noted, "this is the most earthquake prone of anywhere there is offshore drilling."

Molnia said he was not in a position to make a recommendation one way or another but he guessed that the companies in the Gulf of Alaska will end up with a huge offshore storage terminal similar to one in the North Sea.

Getty test flows gas

Getty Oil Co. No. 1-41-21 University, Southwest Winkler County deep explorer, four miles west of Montoya-Ellenburger production in the Wink, South field and the same distance southwest of Ellenburger production in the Apollo field, flowed gas heavily on a drillsite test in the Ellenburger.

The test, using a 6,000-foot water blanket, and 1-inch top choke and ¾-inch bottom choke was open 120 minutes on the first flow period. It surfaced gas in 38 minutes at the rate of 3.9 million cubic feet per day. The tool was open 180 minutes on the second flow period, making gas at the rate of 5.3 million cubic feet per day, decreasing to 4 million cubic feet per day, recovery was 47 barrels of water.

Operator was conditioning hole to run logs at the project which is 1,980 feet from north and west lines of section 41, block 21, ULS, seven miles southwest of Wink townsite.

West Texas sectors gain wildcat projects

Three West Texas sectors have gained sites for petroleum activity.

American Quasar Petroleum Co., operating from Midland, will drill two Ward County tests as wildcats.

No. 1 Jeannie Crockett is to be reentered and plugged back from 22,228 feet, to 16,800 feet, for tests of the Morrow, 1¼ mile north of the firm's No. 1-27 Dunagan, Morrow discovery, 10 miles north of Barstow.

Originally drilled by Inceco Oil Co., it was plugged and abandoned in July, 1973.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and southwest lines of section 29, block 1, W&NW survey.

American Quasar also filed application to drill No. 2 Dunagan, a southwest twin to the Morrow discovery.

Slated as a 9,250-foot wildcat, it spots 1,640 feet from northeast and 1,320 feet from northwest lines of section 27, block 1, W&NW survey, 12 miles northwest of Barstow.

D. A. Metts, Midland, No. 1-1A Lawrence has been scheduled to drill as a Yates wildcat, ¾ mile west of Metts No. 1 McDonald, recent Yates discovery in Pecos, 12 miles northwest of Bakersfield.

Slated to 1,850 feet, it spots 1,650 feet from south and east lines of section 26, block 144, T&STL survey.

It also is a ½-mile south stepout to Queen gas production in the Girvintex field.

Amoco Production No. 2 Edwam Dickinson II, stepout to the two-well Devonian gas area of the Pecos Valley, North field of Pecos, spots 2,173 feet from northeast and southeast lines of section 33, block 3, H&TC survey, four miles south of Imperial. The test has a proposed depth of 3,800 feet.

Ellenburger oil production has been extended ½ mile northwest in the Yucca Butte, West field of Pecos County, 12 miles northwest of Sheffield.

The 24-hour flowing potential was for 170 barrels of 41.2-gravity oil, no water, through a 12-64-inch choke and perforations at 10,605-10,765 feet. The pay section had been acidized with 300 gallons and fractured with 4,000 gallons.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and 510 feet from east lines of section 67, block A-2, TCR&R survey.

Atlantic Richfield Co. has made plans to reenter and plug back to 13,000 feet at No. 21-A June Sanders, former Ellenburger well, for recompletion try as a current third Fusselman oiler and two-mile south extension to that pay in the War-San field of Southwest Midland County.

Operator intends to test through perforations opposite the Fusselman from 12,488-12,518 feet.

It is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 4, block 41, T-4-S, T&P survey, 18 miles south of Warfield.

Offshore repair ship due in three months

DALLAS (AP) — If the runaway oil blowout in the North Sea last week had happened three months later, Phillips Petroleum might have reduced considerably the time it took to cap the well.

A one-of-a-kind ship being built for Phillips is designed to be a floating repair shop for the oil company's offshore oil wells.

John Wilson, project coordinator for Phillips Inc. here, said his company will take delivery of the specialized vessel from Mitsubishi Heavy Industries of Japan July 29. The ship will leave immediately for the North Sea.

"The vessel couldn't have prevented the blowout," said Wilson. "But the ship is equipped so that it could have helped put it out. And in this last case, it probably could have shortened the time somewhat from what Phillips experienced."

The eight-day-long oil spill dumped more than eight million gallons of heavy crude into the rough seas near Stavanger, Norway.

Wilson said aside from its usefulness in oil-related disasters, the Sedco-Phillips SS has a regular compliment of 85 men whose job it is to inspect and repair offshore oil rigs.

"Under normal conditions, the ship's team of 26 divers inspect the platforms. This is a 365-day-a-year job by itself," he said. "We also have a 350-ton crane that can pick up pieces of equipment from the other platforms and boom them onto our decks where they can be repaired, cleaned and put back in place. We have a complete machine shop on board as well as an 18-man hospital, if it's needed, and a helicopter landing pad."

Outpost set in Sutton

Pennzoil Co., Midland, No. 1-C VanderStucken has been scheduled as a one-mile south outpost to Canyon gas production in the Miers multipay field of Sutton County, 20 miles southeast of Sonora.

Location is 660 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of section 33, block 14, TW&NG. Scheduled depth is 4,500 feet. It also is 1¼ mile northeast and ¾ mile southeast of Canyon gas production in the Sawyer field.

Ward tester yields oil

Getty Oil Co. No. 1-22-18 University, 1¾ miles south of the Wolfcamp gas pay opener and ¾ mile north and west of Wolfcamp oil production in the War-Wink, South field of Ward County, flowed 44 barrels of oil, 17 barrels of load water and 13 barrels of formation water in 11 hours, plus gas at the daily rate of 1.3 million cubic feet.

The flow was through 11-64-inch, to 16-64-inch chokes, and perforations at 13,192-13,246 feet. Testing continued.

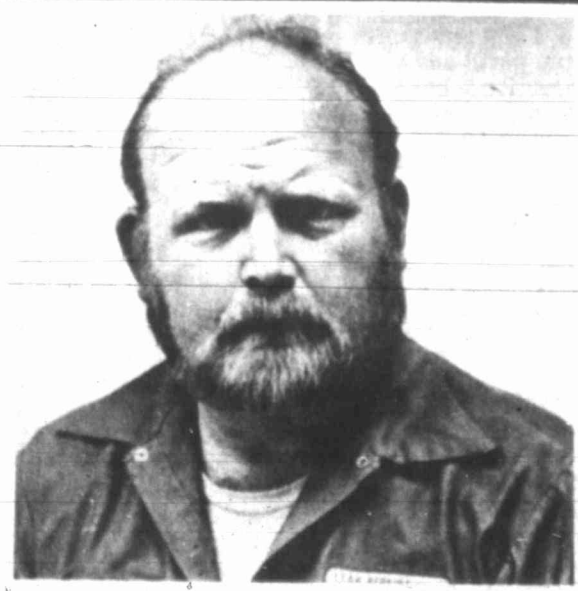

Location is 1,320 feet from south and east lines of section 22, block 18, ULS, seven miles northwest of Pyote.

Explorer rates flow

Texas Oil & Gas Corp. No. 1 O'Brien, Chaves County, N.M., prospector, 14 miles southeast of Elkins, and four miles north and slightly west of the Many Gates field, flowed gas at the rate of 2,701 million cubic feet on a drillsite test.

Gas surfaced in five minutes, on a ¼-inch choke, flowing at the above rate on the 1¼-hour test taken from 8,674-8,745 feet. Recovery was 95 feet of slightly gas-cut mud.

Operator was drilling ahead below 8,817 feet on a 9,600-foot Devonian contract at the project which spots 1,980 feet from south and 660 feet from east lines of section 11-9s-29e.

LARRY SIMMONS

Leak Repairs, Inc., subsidiary of Team, Inc., a specialty firm dealing with on-stream repairs, has recently located a sub-branch office in the Midland-Odessa area in order to better service the petrochemical, refining and pipeline industry in this locale.

The firm, whose corporate offices are in Houston, Texas, also has locations in Beaumont, Baton Rouge, Chicago, Toledo, Philadelphia, South Charleston, W. Va. and San Francisco.

Mr. Larry Simmons will be superintendent in this area and will have his crews on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week to deal with emergencies when they arise.

Leak Repairs has repaired leaks on stream up to 6,000 psig and/or 1700 degrees F without welding. They have engineered and developed a wide range of sealants and enclosures to deal with all types of product under pressure. It is known that emergency shutdowns, due to critical leaks, cost industry hundreds of thousands of dollars every year. Leak Repairs, Inc. was conceived to prevent these expensive shutdowns by providing "on-stream" repairs to leaking equipment, piping, tanks, etc. With the increasing cost of energy, raw materials, and manpower, the services provided by Leak Repairs are mainly directed to reduce costs.

The firm opened this branch here because of the refining and chemical facilities in this area. They plan to service a radius of 300 miles from this location, which would cover all West Texas, plus parts of New Mexico.

This sub-branch will be located at 704 West Louisiana, Midland, Texas 79701. The telephone number is 915-683-0913.

Young writer lacks only typewriter

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Young, black and gifted Judi Ann Mason has written eight plays, worked with Norman Lear on a television series and become the first person to win a national writing award twice.

Imagine what she could do with her own typewriter.

Her latest effort on a borrowed machine, "A Star Ain't Nothin' But a Hole in Heaven," won this year's American College Theater Festival national playwriting competition — making her the first repeat winner in the festival's nine-year history.

She also won the Norman Lear comedy writing award in 1975 for "Livin' Fat," which enabled her to work on several scripts for Lear's "Good Times" TV series.

So far, all of the 22-year-old's works have dealt with rural blacks in the South and have come from her personal experience, growing up in Elm Grove, La., and becoming an orphan at age 15.

"I don't feel able to write about other races yet,"

she says. "I don't want to misrepresent anyone. I have dedicated myself to showing people that the South is beautiful. I want to show the rest of the nation that everyone here is not a pig farmer."

"Livin' Fat," which has been performed off-Broadway by the Negro Ensemble Company in New York, is about a black family that was left with a large sum of money.

It is set in Bossier City, the northwest Louisiana town where Miss Mason attended high school after her father died when she was 15. Her mother had died seven years earlier.

sure. Any more plays will be written on her own typewriter. She says that will be the first thing she buys when she collects the $2,000 Theater Festival prize.

ENTERTAINMENT

Houston group to appear at OC

ODESSA — St. Elmo's Fire, a Houston-based musical aggregation, will be featured in the final edition of Odessa College's "Sandwich Series" Friday noon.

The outdoor concert is scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be open to the public. The "Sandwich Series," at which sandwich lunches may be purchased for $1, has been sponsored by the student activities office at OC. The closing event will be open to the public adjacent to the Student Union building.

St. Elmo's Fire is made up of five musicians who handle various phases of music from jazz to bluegrass with a distinctive blend of flute, banjo, mandolin, acoustic and electric guitars, drums, percussion and intricate vocal harmonies. A fast-rising ensemble, St. Elmo's Fire has performed at colleges and universities throughout Texas and in such night spots as The Troubadour in Los Angeles and the Ice House in Pasadena, Calif.

Further proof of the ensemble's virtuosity and versatility is the fact that it provided the score and the accompaniment for the Houston Ballet's original dance work, "Caliban," presented in performances in recent seasons.

"A Star Ain't Nothing But a Hole in Heaven" deals with a 17-year Louisiana orphan girl's decision about attending college in Ohio. It is set in Elm Grove. That play is scheduled to be performed at the Back Alley Theater in Washington.

Despite her success, Miss Mason says she is in no hurry to leave Louisiana and hasn't even decided whether to continue playwriting as a career. She has a double major in journalism and drama and is considering graduate school.

"People in other parts of the country don't understand that I'm happy here," she says. "New York is the cultural mecca of the nation and sooner or later it may have to be base for me."

"But I really want to stay in the South and even if I have to cater to them, I will continue to write about the South and the people here."

"I enjoy writing about people who speak broken English and are sort of backwoods. These are beautiful people; they are my people. I've been taught to be ashamed of this, but I'm not. I've come to love it."

Pirandello play parable of illusion versus reality

Is she or isn't she? Is he or isn't he?

One of the central characters in "Right You Are, If You Think You Are," Luigi Pirandello's classic brain-teaser, is mad as a hatter, but which one — the mother-in-law, Signora Frola, or the son-in-law, Signor Ponza?

Perhaps that's for playwright Pirandello to know — and us to decide for ourselves as best we can.

"Right You Are," which opened at Theatre Centre last weekend as Midland Community Theatre's third offering of its new season, is certainly not a play of action and high drama; it's a play of words and ideas instead, tending occasionally to tediousness. Still, it's a famous play and its creator was a Nobel prize winner in drama. I, for one, am glad of the opportunity to see this notable stage work, although I wouldn't especially care to see it again.

Personally, I think the most demented inhabitants of Italian playwright Pirandello's drama are the nosy neighbors of the unhappy Ponza and Signora Frola, meddlesome busybodies consumed with curiosity over the mystery of a man who keeps his wife shut up in one apartment, his mother-in-law incarcerated in another and prevents the pair from ever speaking to each other. Through subterfuge and shabby trickery, these "normal" upstanding citizens not only make fools of themselves but in their well-meaning brutality pry open secrets and pain in the hearts of people who want only to be left alone. "Lupini" — little wolves — is an Italian word that could well describe these relentless inquisitors.

Still, Pirandello has not served up a tale simply of man's inhumanity, or insensitivity, to man, but a parable of illusion versus reality. In the end, the author provides no more definite answer to his jesting question, "What is truth?" than that contained in the title of his play — you are right (that is, you have established what is true), if you think you are right.

MCT executive director Art Cole's cast for "Right You Are" has a few familiar faces but most members are theater newcomers, and most of them do well in their respective assignments. A few were not quite "into" their parts opening night, but hopefully are into them now.

MCT "old hand" Mike Bustilloz is seen as Ponza, with newcomer Teri Valero as the mother-in-law. Gary Askins, seen in several past MCT productions, is in another pivotal role. Lamberto Laudisi, a cynic who knows it is folly ever to arrive at an absolute "truth" and scoffs at his friends' attempts to solve the mystery of who is mad and who is sane. Others include Jerry Hickman as Commendatore Agazzi, Kathy Kerth as Amalia Agazzi, Lori Skelton as Dina Agazzi, Oza Whitten as Sirelli, Pat Voss as Signora Sirelli, Bob Wornell as the Prefect of police, Roseann Din-smoor as Signora Cini, Sidney Lennox as Signora

Nenni, Jerry Bullard as Commissioner Centuri, Steve Murphy as the butler, Diane Davis as Signora Ponza. "Right You Are" resumes with a performance at 8 p.m. today, for which special $1 student tickets will be available. Additional presentations will be at 8:30 Friday and Saturday and 2:30 Sunday, with concluding performances on May 11 and 13. —ROGER SOUTHALL

Call to pharmacy gets implantations of ears

Newsday

NEW YORK — The telephone rings in the pharmacy at Mercy Hospital on Long Island. It is 8 a.m. The caller, Dr. Emmett Campbell, says, "I need a right eardrum in the operating room by 9."

Pharmacist Dick Mason writes down the request, the bottle of solution containing the eardrum is prepared and it is sent upstairs within the hour. Four hours later the eardrum is in the patient's ear. Another ear implantation has been completed by Mercy.

That scene is being enacted frequently because of a special project, a small ear bank made possible through the efforts of Campbell, a leading ear surgeon, and Mercy's pharmacy department. The bank was begun in September, 1975.

The bank contains a supply of middle-ear structure from donors. Campbell says he asked Mercy to open the bank so that such structures as tympanic membranes (eardrums), and incuses (the middle bone of the chain of three small bones) could be readily available for surgery, which, he says, "makes compromise at the operating table unnecessary."

Campbell says the "handful" of other surgeons who employ this method also have inventories of parts on hand. Mercy's bank is stocked with at least two of every needed structure and replacements are obtained either from Project Hear in Palo Alto, Calif., or from the Cincinnati Ear Bank, two of the largest ear banks in the country. Those centers receive the donated structures and process and dispense them. One problem is the lack of donors.

"People are reluctant because they don't know too much about this program," Campbell says.

Campbell has performed more than 60 operations at Mercy, and with good success, he says. He declined to divulge his rate of success because, he said, his research is being considered for publication but he did say it was "much improved" over that of other methods.

The bank is needed because of the type of surgery Campbell performs.

use cut

FORT WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — There's a new wrinkle in saving energy while drying California's 360-million pound prune crop. Researchers using Honeywell recorder and sensitive thermometers found that 10 per cent of the natural gas used to dry the fruit was being wasted through unnoticed leaks in the drying tunnels. They estimate that simply by plugging the leaks 273-million cubic feet of gas can be saved during this year's drying season.

Vance foretells Mondale message

By OSWALD JOHNSTON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Vice President Mondale intends to tell South Africa's leadership later this month that the United States is "unalterably opposed to apartheid," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Wednesday.
Vance, addressing his first full-dress news conference in two months, thereby put firmly on the record what had become increasingly clear in recent months: that the United States intends to press South Africa to accept the principle of black majority rule for itself as well as for Rhodesia and the trust territory of South-West Africa.

Mondale's mission to Europe to meet South African Premier John Vorster, officially announced at the White House Tuesday, had previously been explained in terms of Vorster's "crucial role" in helping avoid racial conflict in southern Africa by urging the white regime in Rhodesia to accept a peaceful but speedy transition to black rule.
But Vance made it clear that South Africa's cooperation in pressing Rhodesia's prime minister, Ian Smith, or in accepting black rule in South West Africa (known as Namibia to nationalists) would not buy any preference in American eyes for its own racial policies.
"We are unalterably opposed to apartheid," Vance said. He added that Mondale's contact with Vorster — the first in the Carter Administration and the highest ranking American to meet a South Africa head of government since racial separation became policy after World War II — would be "constructive."

Mondale, he said, would discuss with Vorster "the questions of Rhodesia, Namibia and South Africa, and how they plan to move within South Africa in making progress in moving away from apartheid.... That is a subject that will be stressed by the Vice President with Mr. Vorster when he meets with him."
On other subjects, Vance made these points:
—Neither the United States or the Soviet Union have put forward any new proposals on limiting strategic weapons during the month of diplomatic contacts since Vance's mission to Moscow ended in deadlock.
"We have merely reviewed the existing proposals," Vance nevertheless said he believed it would be "useful and constructive" to meet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva later this month as planned to continue the negotiation.
—The Carter Administration intends to put forward what it considers a "fair and equitable" solution to the Middle East conflict as soon as President Carter and his aides have discussed the issues with Arab and Israeli leaders. This was the clearest hint so far that the U.S. peace effort will involve the active formulation of a plan rather than a more passive "honest broker" approach.
—The United States under no circumstances will pay "reparations" to Vietnam, but will not oppose Vietnam's membership in the United Nations. In so stating, Vance was reaffirming a policy position staked out by Carter himself in late March, and the formula was repeated again Wednesday in a joint communique by U.S. and Vietnamese negotiators in Paris after two days of talks.

There was little surprise in Vance's admission that the month of policy review since the Moscow talks — which has included meetings at least once a week and sometimes several times a week with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin has led to no new proposal.
Administration officials, including national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, have made it plain in public and semi-public sessions with the press that Carter and his foreign policy team have no intention of abandoning the proposal that was rejected in Moscow.

By the same token, Soviet officials have made clear their own refusal to accept any proposal that, in their view, scraps negotiating progress achieved by the Ford administration and substitutes a plan for substantial arms cuts they believe would count to Soviet disadvantage.
"It was offered as a package and it was rejected as a package," reporters here were told a few days ago by George Arbatov, chief America-watcher in the Soviet government, during a visit here.

Editor freed on bond

ODESSA, Tex. (AP) — City editor John Sliney of The Odessa American was free on $5,000 bond today after surrendering at the Ector County sheriff's office to face a bribery indictment returned by a county grand jury.
Two other former employees of the newspaper, James Beatty, district distribution manager, and his wife, Susan, switchboard operator, were also indicted Tuesday on charges of possessing more than four ounces of marijuana.
Olin Ashley, editor of The Odessa American, said the couple quit their jobs shortly after the indictments were handed down. Sliney is still at work.
The indictment against Sliney accused him of attempting to bribe Jimmy Edwards, a candidate for county attorney, last year. It specifically alleged Sliney promised to confer a benefit on Edwards with the intent to influence him.
Edwards was promised $5,000 to withdraw from the county attorney runoff election, according to Ector County Dist. Atty John Green. However, Edwards entered the race and lost.
In a statement issued Wednesday, Ashley said, "You can believe that it was no accident that the three people who were indicted are or have been employees of The Odessa American. Do you really suppose that in all of Ector County there were no other criminal matters that could, and probably should have been presented to the grand jury along with these cases? This smacks of selective prosecution."

Georgetown gets Libyan bonanza

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Georgetown University has announced that the government of Libya has committed $750,000 to endow a new professorial chair at the university's Center for Contemporary Arab Studies. The Libyan money represents the largest single contribution thus far to the center, which was launched at the university here two years ago after Middle East and African oil-producing states began amassing huge revenues and drafting massive domestic development plans that drew new attention to the Arab world.

Michael C. Hudson, the center's executive director, voiced hope that Georgetown also could arrange for some faculty and student exchanges and possibly other ties with Libyan universities.

Libya's gift, announced by the Rev. Timothy S. Healy, S.J., president of Georgetown, includes an immediate outlay of $150,000 and later installments totaling $600,000 over the next four years. The chair supported by income from this endowment will be named for Umar Al-Mukhtar, a national hero who fought for Libyan independence from Italy and died in 1931.

D'Artois to get hearing

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George D'Artois, the former Shreveport public safety commissioner, will get a hearing Monday on whether there is enough evidence to keep him in jail on charges of murder.

The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the hearing cannot be put off any longer to allow the prosecution more time to investigate.

District Judge Frank Foll docketed the case for hearing at 1:30 p.m. Monday in Baton Rouge.

D'Artois, a heart patient, was arrested April 19 and accused of paying $30,000 to have former friend Jim Leslie killed.

Leslie, a public relations and advertising executive from Shreveport, was slain by a shotgun blast last July when he got out of his car in the parking lot behind a Baton Rouge motel.

The plea to the Supreme Court said D'Artois was due a prompt hearing on the charge, and that there should be no excuse for delay because Sheriff Al Amis of East Baton Rouge Parish claimed to have the case solved when he had D'Artois arrested in Shreveport.

The preliminary hearing had been scheduled for May 5.

Shipments said often unguarded

The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — Shipments of uranium and plutonium suitable for use in nuclear weapons often move unguarded and unmonitored in international commerce and are vulnerable to theft, a former U.S. arms control chief said Wednesday.

Fred C. Ikle, who was director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under Presidents Nixon and Ford, said such shipments of weapons-grade nuclear fuels sometimes contain more than enough material to make an atomic weapon.

"We sometimes lose track of these things for months before their arrival is certified to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna," he said in an interview.

His concerns were reinforced by a report the congressional General Accounting Office released Monday charging that the United States lacks the ability to detect and respond quickly to a nuclear theft.

Accounting problems affecting tons of uranium and plutonium at commercial facilities have persisted since the 1950s, the GAO said. It said also that "Frequently, quantities large enough to make a weapon go unaccounted for from one to two months."

Ikle, now a consultant in Washington, also was critical of accounting procedures that the Atomic Energy Commission and its successor, the Energy Research and Development Administration, have used to keep track of the nuclear materials the United States loaned or sold to other governments.

He said ERDA has been working for the past two years to determine exactly where all the tons of uranium and plutonium shipped abroad since the 1950s have gone.

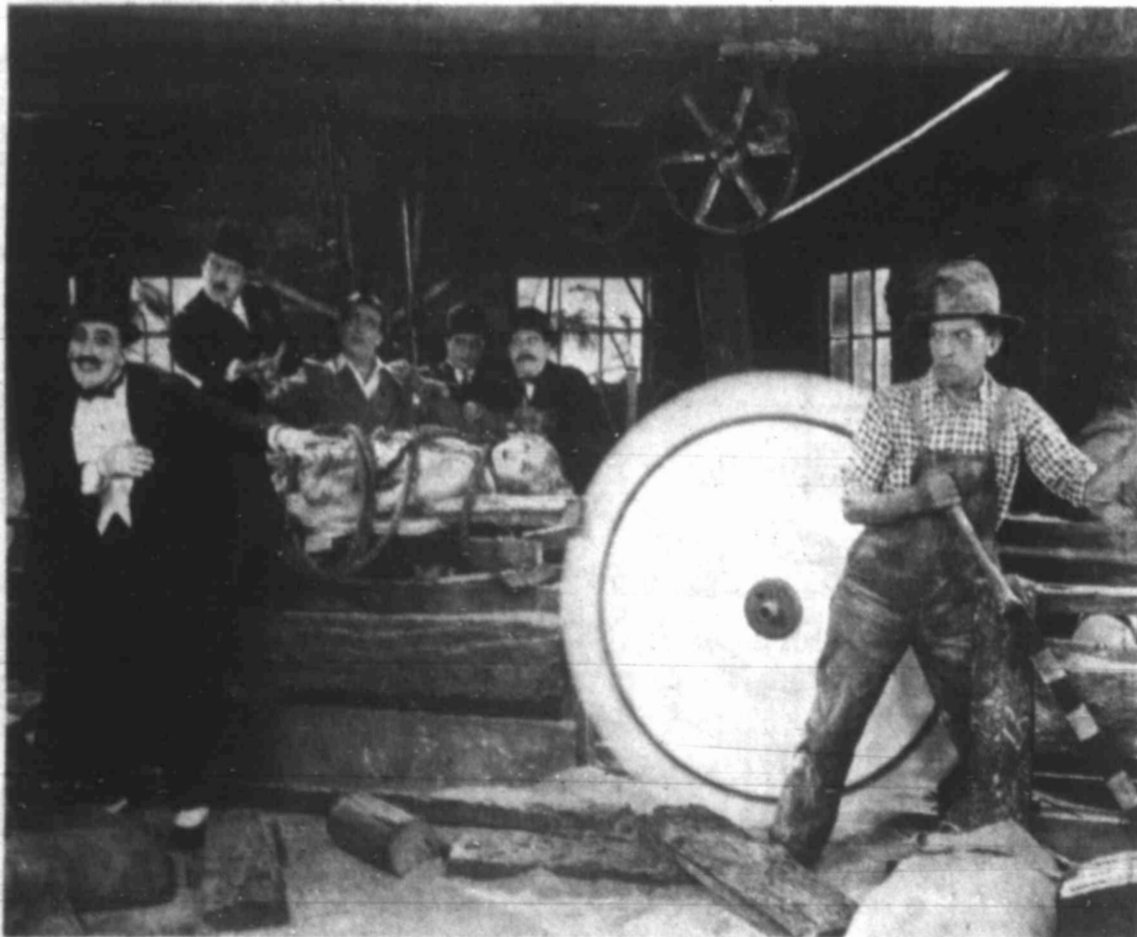

"Their statistics were in dreadful shape. They had to go back through a lot of old ledgers that were inadequately kept. It was a lot of work, and they kept discovering errors, things that wouldn't total up. They've been working for two years now and they're still at it," Ikle said.

A spokesman for ERDA said that since 1968 the agency has been computerizing its records of foreign nuclear shipments and expects to complete the process by the end of this year. This is expected to speed up the retrieval of information in the event of a suspected diversion.

Ikle said the potential loss of a few kilograms of plutonium or weapons grade uranium in transit is a much greater cause for concern than the recently disclosed disappearance of 200 tons of natural uranium in the 1960s. Officials of the European market confirmed Monday that this uranium — stored initially in West Germany and at the Dutch port of Rotterdam — vanished from a ship ostensibly en route to Genoa, Italy, in the 1960s. Reports in the Los Angeles Times and New York Times last week said a number of government authorities believe the uranium ended up in Israel.

Partisan comments follow talk

By The Associated Press

Former President Richard M. Nixon's interview with David Frost generally stirred the same partisanship that marked the Watergate era: His detractors complained the full story was yet to be told. His supporters applauded what they said was his candor.

"The evidence compiled by the committee and its staff total 7,200 pages and filled 36 books of information," said Rep. Peter Rodino, the New Jersey Democrat whose House Judiciary Committee voted to impeach Nixon.

"It showed clearly, conclusively and finally that Richard Nixon obstructed the Watergate investigation and that he abused the powers of his high office as president and that he failed to comply with lawful subpoenas," said Rodino after watching the 90-minute interview Wednesday night.

The show was the first of four covering the Nixon presidency, for which the former president reportedly will receive $600,000 and a share of the profits, for a possible total of more than $1 million. It was his first public discussion of Watergate since he resigned Aug. 9, 1974.

"I think it's going to have a healing and cleansing effect," said Raymond K. Price, Nixon's chief speech writer when he was in the White House. "I think it was forthcoming. I think it was a very generous concession by (Nixon) of his own errors."

One early victim of the scandal, Nixon's former presidential chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, watched the show at his Los Angeles home but would only say:

"I have no comment to make at this time. It's too complex to discuss in little bits and pieces. I may have something to say in the future, but I'm not going to make a lot of little comments at this time. I'm going to think this thing through."

Another top-ranking former Nixon aide, domestic affairs adviser John Ehrlichman, is serving a term at a federal correctional facility at Stafford, Ariz., for his part in the Watergate coverup. The warden said the show was not carried on the two channels available at the facility.

Former President Gerald R. Ford spoke at a YMCA meeting in Dallas Wednesday night, but didn't mention the interview with the man he succeeded and later pardoned.

A Ford aide said arrangements had been made to tape the telecast for later viewing by Ford if he desired.

There were no plans for President Carter to watch the show, said White House spokesman Jody Carter.

Many members of the Senate and House missed the interview because Congress was still in session when the telecast began.

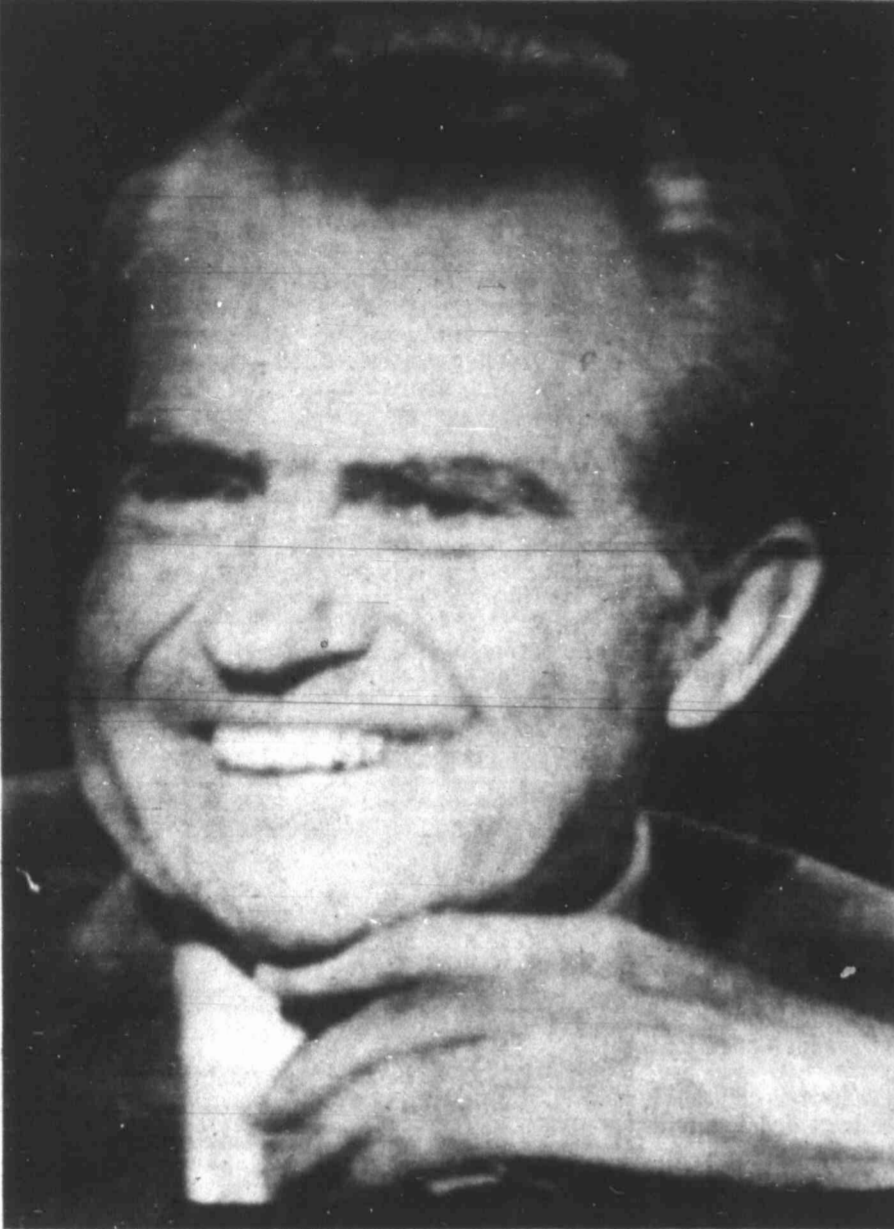

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said he had seen only a few minutes of the telecast "but I had seen enough."

He said he didn't like "the idea of a former president of the United States appearing in such a context and for money."

In Honolulu, Ben Bradlee, executive editor of the Washington Post — which first linked the Nixon White House to the Watergate break-in — said Nixon's admission that he let the American people down "was very moving."

"He said a lot. He said he made some bad judgments. He hasn't said that before," Bradlee said after watching the show. "Factually, I don't think there was anything new."

Show emotional, but questions still exist

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) — As theater, Richard Nixon's emergence from the tombs of Watergate was an emotional performance. But it did little to answer questions raised in courts of law or by committees of the Congress. The voluminous record amassed in the Watergate investigations and some of Nixon's own tape-recorded words are at variance with some of the statements made by the former president to television personality David Frost in Wednesday night's broadcast.

Petition drive to recall mayor likely to fail

HOUSTON (AP) — A petition drive to force Mayor Fred Hofheinz into a recall election appears to have failed. Sponsors said Tuesday the required petition had about 30,000 of the needed 62,000 signatures with only two days remaining.

The recall move was started by three groups, Citizens for Responsive Government, Citizens against Pornography and Women Who Want to be Women.

The organizations accused Hofheinz of being too lenient on adult book stores and X-rated movie theaters and protested the hiring of Nikki Van Hightower as the city's women's advocate.

The City Council recently abolished the job of women's advocate leaving Ms. Hightower without a job but Hofheinz immediately named her to an identical job in the mayor's office.

The law specifies that a recall petition must contain only names signed within a 30-day interval. The petition was put into circulation April 5 so signatures can be collected only until May 5. Suzanne Thomas, president of Citizens for Responsive Government, said.

Here is a look at some of those variances:

Nixon to Frost: "My motive was... not to try to cover up any criminal action."

The House Judiciary Committee, reporting its impeachment resolutions, decided "that since June 17, 1972, Richard M. Nixon (sought to) protect those responsible and to conceal the existence and scope of the unlawful and covert activities."

On June 23, 1972, talking with aide H. R. Haldeman six days after the Watergate break-in, Nixon worried about potential dangers of an FBI investigation: "That will uncover a lot of things. You open that scab (and) there's a hell of a lot of things and that we just feel that it would be very detrimental to have this thing go any further."

Nixon to Frost: "If a coverup is for the purpose of covering up criminal activities, it is illegal. If, however, a coverup... is for a motive that is not criminal, that is something else again."

Federal law says obstruction of justice occurs when one "influences, obstructs or impedes, or endeavors to influence, obstruct or impede the due administration of justice."

Nixon to Frost: "My closest aides to perjure themselves before a federal grand jury investigating Watergate."

However, Nixon, on March 21, told John Dean and Haldeman that "Perjury's a tough rap to prove" and that the way to evade answers was to say "I don't remember, I can't recall."

Nixon to Frost: "I didn't think of it as a cover-up. I didn't intend it to cover up. If I intended to cover up, believe me, I'd a done it."

On March 22, 1973, Nixon said to John Mitchell and Dean: "I don't give a shit what happens. I want you all to stonewall it. Let them plead the Fifth Amendment, coverup or anything else, if it will save it — save the plan. That's the whole point."

Nixon to Frost: "I did not commit a crime, an impeachable offense."

The Watergate grand jury named Nixon an unindicted conspirator, in a conspiracy involving "deceit, craft, trickery and dishonest means."

And the House Judiciary Committee recommended, after lengthy hearings, that Nixon should be impeached "for high crimes and misdemeanors" in obstructing justice, abusing the powers of his office and "failing to take care that the laws be faithfully executed."

Barber raises price at last

By GORDON HANSON

STARKWEATHER, N.D. (AP) — Sign of the times: Starkweather barber Martin Skrede has doubled the price of a haircut and now charges $1. Only recently has the ditty, "Shave and a haircut, six bits," changed for Skrede, 81, who has barbered for 64 years.

Skrede started barbering here in 1913 after immigrating from Norway. He charged 50 cents for a haircut and 25 cents for a shave until the Depression.

During the 1930s he dropped haircuts to 25 cents. But in the early 1940s he returned to six bits for the full treatment and it never changed for more than 30 years.

"Some people could hardly afford to pay that, and I felt sorry for them," he says with a faint Norwegian accent.

He doesn't give shaves any more. They've been done away with by electric and safety razors.

Skrede was 8 or 9 when he started cutting the hair of his nine brothers on their Norway farm. In 1913, at age 17 and unable to speak English, he came to Starkweather, population 200, and opened his one-chair shop.

Barbershops were once social gathering points for men on Saturday nights in small farming towns across the nation.

"It's still that way here," says Skrede. "They talk about the hard times or the good times, prices of grain, changes in the community."

During World War II, about 60 soldiers were stationed in Starkweather to help area farmers who were short on manpower. For the duration of the war, Skrede gave free haircuts and shaves to the soldiers. His wife, May, now 73, washed their weekly laundry without charge.

Biology may demote chemistry in future

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Our planet Earth can't stop at some celestial service station to fill up again on oil.

When the original underground tanks run dry, the oil energy journey is over. That may be only 25 years from now.

Where, then, will we get the fertilizers, plastics, wash-and-wear clothing, pesticides, medicines, dyes, paints and thousands of other products now made from chemicals in petroleum?

Some scientists are betting on bacteria, molds and fungi as one vital source.

"A biological revolution is coming. In the next 30 years or so, biology will replace chemistry in importance in this country," say Drs. Ronald E. Cape and Peter J. Farley.

They are president and vice president respectively of Cetus Corporation here, a company already engaged in pushing along just such a revolution. In one success, they increased the annual yield of a major antibiotic by 50 per cent by finding a new "bug" that does a better job of making that drug.

While oil can be used only once, microbes renew themselves, some every 20 minutes, while producing various chemicals. Only a few organisms cause disease — the vast majority to do useful things in nature.

"The business of a bug is to make a living," Dr. Farley says. "They eat whatever is around them. There's an infinite variety of microbes, and they are phenomenal chemical factories. Some use and concentrate uranium, others silver or lead, still others digest lignin in wood."

"We supply them with a kind of plush hotel, feed them nutrients, keep them warm, and let them do their thing, namely to grow and produce chemicals of interest to us."

Numerous scientists feel that microbes can tackle almost any task that synthetic organic chemistry can do, if you find the right organisms.

The search for new organisms or ones that have undergone mutation or genetic alteration has long gone on in many laboratories.

The springboard for a biological revolution is all of the knowledge of genetics and biology learned in the last 20 years, including understandings now of the exquisite genetic code of life, says Dr. Farley.

But industry has done little with it, except for the pharmaceutical industry's making antibiotics and giving Cetus assignments to find better strains.

Industry uses microbes and fermentation to make beer and wine and some other products, but "in some of today's industrial laboratories, Pasteur would feel at home," says Dr. Farley. "In some places, the biologist has the job only of keeping bugs out of the laboratory or production line, to avoid contamination."

Now, numerous major companies are taking new interest in microbes and biology. Cape and Farley say — industries such as food, chemicals, energy, mining, pollution control, paper and milling, as the inevitable end to the river of oil approaches.

One great strength for the biological revolution, Cape and Farley point out, is that both the microbes and the nutrients they need are renewable. Cornstarch, so abundant, is a source of sugar to feed the "bugs."

Farther down the line is the possibility of producing drugs or chemicals through genestitching, says Dr. Cape, whose degree is in molecular biology.

This is the much discussed recombinant DNA issue. Pieces of genetic material called DNA can be inserted into other cells, even across species lines, to give them new properties. Genes responsible for making insulin might, for example, be placed in common bacteria.

Some critics fear bacteria might be created which, escaping from laboratories or factories, could cause great harm or uncontrollable diseases. Safety precautions are being worked out before genestitching is applied on a significant scale in this country. Other nations are going right ahead.

When safety issues are resolved, Cetus may enter this field, says Dr. Farley, whose degree is in medicine.

One project Cetus is considering is development of an ideal or super-bug, he says. It would feed and be prolific on an inexpensive nutrient and be so genetically constituted that "it would become a basket case if it ever got away from you. It couldn't survive outside the laboratory."

Into it could be inserted the genes producing valuable chemicals.

This, Farley says, "would be genetics with your eyes open instead of closed," as has happened historically with nature's random mutations and genetic changes, for either good or bad.

Please feed 'em, Duluth Zoo asks

DULUTH, Minn. (AP) — Want to be a fox's father or a mallard's mother? real economy, you might prefer a sparrow hawk whose tiny appetite can be satisfied for $2.80 a month.

You can, under the Adopt-an-Animal program begun recently at the Duluth Zoo.

There's one hitch - you can't take your foster child home.

Adoption fees are based on estimates by zoo director Basil Norton of what it costs to keep an animal on a daily, monthly or annual basis.

For example, you can adopt mean old Brutus, the grizzly bear, for a mere $2.95 per day, $20.65 a week, $88.50 a month or $1,062 a year. If you prefer a bison, you can have one for only $2 a day.

The zoo's biggest eater, black rhinoceros Faru II, can be fed for $4.64 a day. Peggy, the hippopotamus, is a bargain at $3.20 a day. For Foster parents don't have to sign up for any specified period and some animals — the bears and the big cats, for example — can be adopted for just one day.

Small animals, such as monkeys, eat so little that their upkeep is figured by the week. The ringtailed lemur goes for just $3.92 a week.

Norton noted that contributions from the public will not go directly into the upkeep of the animals, but will free other funds for zoo improvements. All contributors of $2 or more will receive an engraved adoption certificate. Peggy, the hippopotamus, is a bargain at $3.20 a day. For

- 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon Imperial Brown Sugar
- 2 teaspoons paprika
- 1 teaspoon crushed dry oregano
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 cup catsup
- 1/4 cup water
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar

- 1/4 teaspoon liquid smoke, optional

Brown stew meat in small amount of fat or ground meat in its own fat. Combine sauce ingredients and toss with meat. Put in heavy skillet and bring to boil. Reduce heat to very low, cover saucepan, and simmer until stew meat is tender, about two hours. If using ground meat, simmer over medium heat without saucepan covered; cook until sauce has thickened, about 10 minutes. Serve on split, open-face buns with onion slices, pickles and mustard, corn on the cob and cola.

Yield: 2 cups or 4 (1/2-cup) servings.

Musical therapy degree offered

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — The theory that music can be therapeutic is being put to the test in an unusual degree program offered at Indiana-Purdue at Fort Wayne, the only statesupported institution in Indiana to offer the music therapy degree.

Training for music therapists is relatively recent. Music therapists have worked primarily in large mental hospitals until recent years when mental retardation began to receive more attention, said Carol Collins, director of music therapy at the university here.

The program is basically for training musicians to adapt music methods and activities to help accomplish a treatment goal such as better physical coordination, improved speech, or appropriate channeling of emotions.

In addition, Ms. Collins said, it also used as a research tool, for testing and observing children, to develop techniques for using music and games to help the urban child, particularly the disadvantaged.

The program is being carried on in conjunction with the Mental Health Center in Fort Wayne, area nursing homes and agencies serving handicapped children. Music appropriate to early childhood is applied to training programs for the mentally retarded functioning at that level. Students spend an average of 45 hours during their undergraduate studies participating in the treatment programs in community agencies.

Activities include singing, dancing, and exploring instruments with groups of handicapped children and adults or individuals.

In addition to their practical experience and observation, students take courses such as Influence of Music on Behavior, Psychology of Music, Music in Therapy and related courses. Since the students are music majors, they also study musical performance, history and theory. A six-month internship under the supervision of a qualified Registered Music Therapist comes after completion of all academic work.

This four-year curriculum is in its second year at IPFW. There are currently 30 Music Therapy majors who will receive a Bachelor of Science in Music Therapy degree.

"The main advantage of music is that it motivates people subtly and can change behavior patterns," Ms. Collins said. "When I worked in a mental hospital we had music activities, much like those in schools or communities, but the therapeutic part came in understanding a person's problem and how music could be used to work through that problem."

"Often the psychiatric patient has lost all self-confidence," she explained. "He's defeated and has to be hospitalized, so he has a very poor self-image."

For a hearty, substantial salad, strips of leftover boiled beef are combined with chunks of tomatoes and marinated in Italian dressing.

Bite into homegrown tomato to sample color 'red' taste

If you want to taste the color red, bite into a home-grown tomato—a succulent, beautifully ripe tomato. There's no pleasure quite like eating a tomato picked from the vine, bursting with a vitality all its own, its sun-ripened skin soft and the pulp firm but yielding.

Unfortunately, you won't find that kind of tomato in the marketplace, because tomatoes cannot be transported at their peak—except from the garden to the table. They're hardy plants to grow, but quite delicate when mature.

Tomatoes are our most versatile vegetable, appearing on the table from appetizer right through dessert. To enjoy them in their prime, now is the time to think about planting some seeds or seedlings for a summer-long harvest. With minimal care, just a few plants will produce a good quantity of fruit. Apartment dwellers can decorate their sunny windows with cheerful little cherry tomato plants in hanging containers. To get the best looking and best tasting tomatoes, check with a new book, "All About Tomatoes," which not only tells how-to, but also contains exceptional and excellent recipes using tomatoes, such as this one.

"Chilled Beef and Tomato Salad" is a wonderfully hearty salad—substantial enough with its marinated potatoes and strips of left-over boiled beef to satisfy the most hardened meat-and-potatoes family. The difference is that the beef strips and potatoes are combined with red, ripe tomato chunks, chopped onion and seasonings, chilled overnight in a marinade of Italian dressing (go ahead—use bottled), plus Worcestershire sauce. Sunday's left-overs never tasted so good!

CHILLED BEEF AND TOMATO SALAD

3 medium boiled potatoes, peeled
2 large tomatoes, peeled, seeded, and cut into chunks
3 cups boiled beef, cut into strips
1 tablespoon minced parsley
¼ cup Italian dressing
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 teaspoons chopped onion
1 teaspoon oregano
Salt and pepper to taste
Cut potatoes and tomatoes into medium-size chunks.
Mix all ingredients in a large bowl. Season to taste, cover, and chill overnight.
Serve on a cold platter, lined with lettuce leaves. Serves 4.

Candy refined today

COLLEGE STATION—"Candies, as we know them today, basically date back to the 16th century, Frances Reasonover, a foods and nutrition specialist, says.

"Of course in those days, they were made by hand, where today's modern machines take over the task of cooking, molding, coating, drying, and packaging.

In addition to machinery, one other major innovation hit the industry—refined white crystalline sugar—in the 19th century," the specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M System, said.

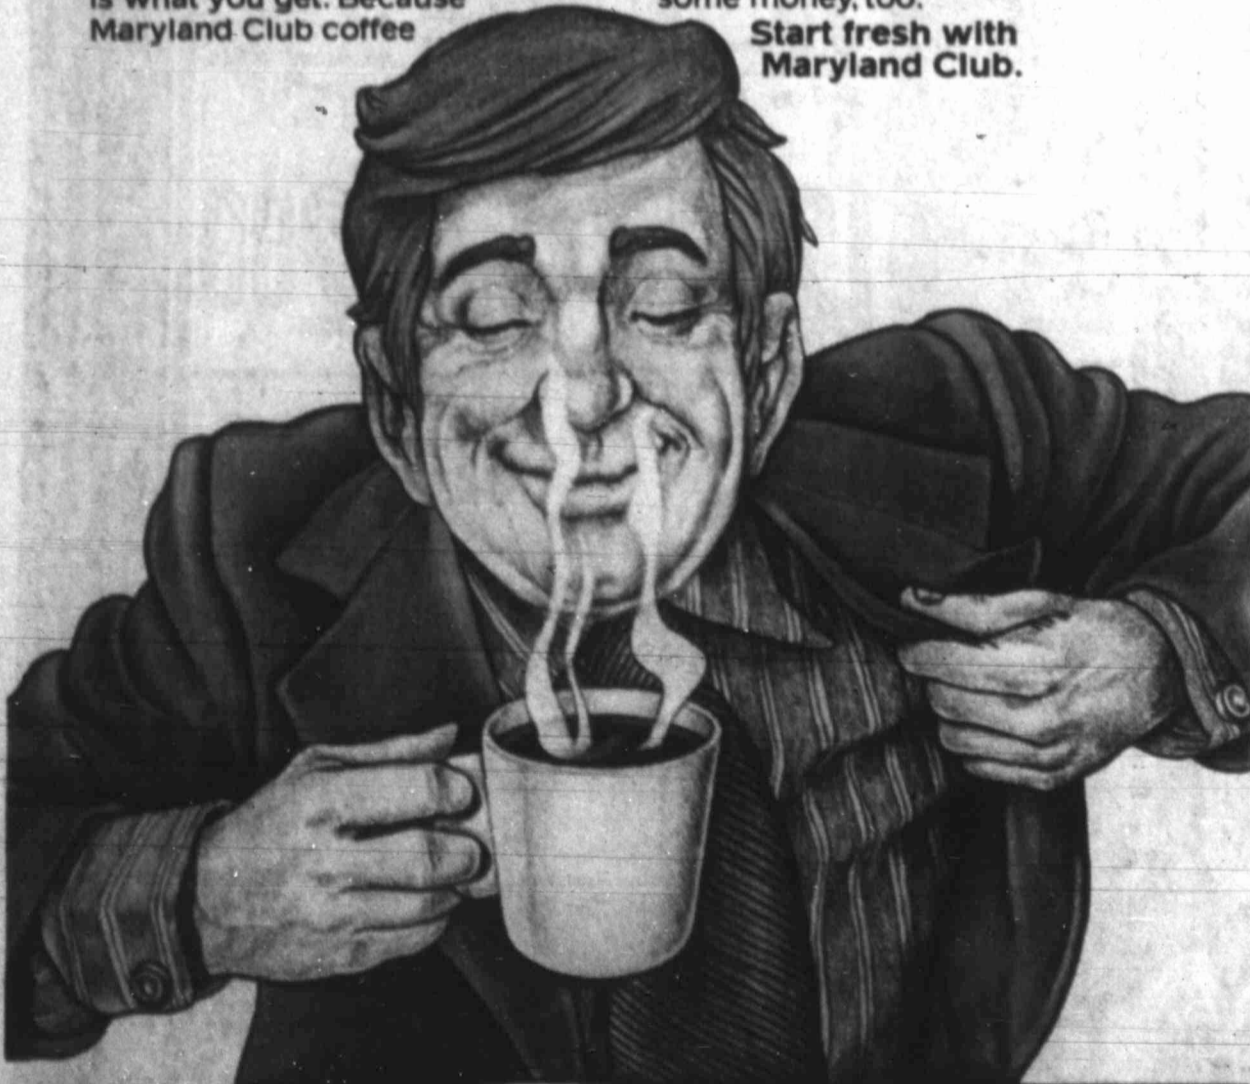

Initiating the history of candies, the ancient Egyptians—at least the rich ones—had a fondness for exotic sweets, she said.

Diabetics don't have to give up their favorite Mexican dishes

Your favorite Mexican dishes don't have to be banned from your weight-control or diabetic diet. Delicious, spicy concoctions can be included on your menu without adding unwanted calories. A diabetic diet consists of good food in sensible amounts and well-balanced meals, making it a healthy program for any weight-conscious individual.

The Permian Basin Chapter of the American Diabetes Association recently sponsored a seminar for Spanish-speaking people. Midland physician Dr. Ernest Vernezobere presented the program on diabetes and the Mexican-American diet. Samples of the Mexican dishes were provided by Annette Van DeWerken, dietician at Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

Below are a few examples of the tasty recipes a Mexican-American diet for a diabetic may include:

- GAZPACHO (Cold Mexican Soup)
 4 cups tomato juice
 1/2 onion, minced
 1 small green bell pepper, minced
 1/2 large cucumber, peeled and minced
 2 canned green chilis, seeds removed and chopped
 1 1/2 tps. Worcestershire sauce
 1 garlic bud, minced
 1/4 tsp. seasoned salt
 1 drop Tabasco sauce (optional)
 1/4 tsp. freshly ground pepper
 1 large tomato, finely diced
 2 Tbsp. chopped chives or green onion tops
 2 lemons cut in wedges
 Put 2 cups of tomato juice and all other ingredients except diced tomato, chives and lemon wedges in the blender. Blend juice in the blender. Pour the mixture into a large bowl and add the chopped tomato. Garnish with the chopped chives and serve with the lemon wedges. Makes 8 servings. Calories negligible, free food.

- TOASTED MEXICAN RICE
 1 cup uncooked white rice
 2 tps. chopped onion
 1 cup chicken stock
 1 cup tomato juice
 1 bud garlic, minced
 1/4 tsp. salt
 1/4 tsp. oregano

Participants in a seminar held by the Permian Basin Chapter of the American Diabetes Association include, left to right, Annette Van DeWerken, dietician at Odessa Medical Center Hospital; Dr. Norma Porras, president of the Lubbock Chapter of the ADA, and Elizabeth Glenn of Midland, registered dietician. The seminar was held in Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church.

Spread the uncooked rice in a baking pan. Put the rice in a 400 degree oven, stirring frequently, until golden brown. Cool. ### WINE DRINKER

Cabernet prices up

By TOM GABLE
 Copley News Service

The prices of the premium Cabernet Sauvignon wines from California continue to climb to levels beyond the interest of most wine drinkers, but if you are still interested in a higher-grade red wine in a similar style, go with Zinfandel at two-thirds the price.

Zinfandel is a red wine grape of unknown origin unique to California. It is used as a blending grape in generic wines, as a blend with Cabernet and on its own as a varietal. The styles range from light and thin (Louis Martini, at $2.75 a fifth) to BIG, high-alcohol wines such as the Fetzer Ricetti 1974, at $6.50. There are even Zinfandel roses (Concannon, $2.75).

In between are some very good dinner wines that in their youth often are woody and fruity, and sometimes hard, but blossom into claret-like wines with a few years' bottle age. A few California wine makers even use the same wood aging techniques with Zinfandel as they do with their Cabernet Sauvignon.

In the lower-priced range are the Montevina 1975 - Zinfandel, from Amador County, at $3.75; the Kenwood 1973 and 1974 at $3.75 and $4.50, respectively; the Fetzer Lake County nonvintage at $2.50; the Fetzer Mendocino at $4; and the Souverain of Sonoma County, at $2.75. Both Kenwood Zinfandels have the aroma of very ripe grapes and excellent balance. They are ready for drinking now with good red meats but could improve with aging.

The Fetzer Lake County also has ripe grapes in the aroma, is a little lighter in style and is fairly priced. Its cousin from Mendocino is much richer, as the price would indicate, and has enough life to go with heavier foods, such as a good pasta with a spicy sauce.

The Montevina from Amador is high in alcohol (16.7 per cent) and has a long life ahead of it. It could go well with a barbecue.

Calories count, unfortunately

Calories do count. There is no magic way to avoid that fact. When the total amount of food you eat in one day provides your body with more calories than needed for the day's activities, the extra calories are stored as body fat. Weight is gained. When fewer calories are provided to the body than it needs, weight is lost, according to the Dairy Council.

It takes 3,500 calories less to lose a pound or 3,500 calories more to gain a pound. Just eating 100 extra calories a day for one year will add more than 10 pounds. The following chart lists amounts of common foods that supply approximately 100 calories:

| Food                    | Size of Portions          |
|-------------------------|---------------------------|
| Beer                    | 8 ounces                  |
| Butter or Margarine     | 1 tablespoon              |
| Chocolate Creams        | 2 average                 |
| Cookies, chocolate chip | 2 small                   |

DiETING can be 'weigh' of life

Did you eat too much during the winter months? Since you shed your winter coat, have you decided, "I'm going to lose weight"? That's good! Acknowledging that you need to lose weight is the most important step in losing some of that winter fat. Now make a definite commitment — "I will lose 5 pounds in one month." Tape it on your mirror or refrigerator door where you see it everyday.

If you have more than a few pounds to lose, check with your physician first. For those of you who want to lose just a few pounds, fad diets are not the answer. You need a diet that you can stick to and retrain your eating habits, if necessary, so that what you lose will stay lost. The Dairy Council recommends becoming familiar with the basic food groups and using them as a basis for meal plans in your weight control program. The basic food groups include (1) Milk and Milk Products, (2) Meat and other Protein foods, (3) Fruits and Vegetables, and (4) Breads and Cereals. Each group makes a special contribution in nutrients. Foods from all four groups combine to supply energy and essential nutrients to maintain a healthy body.

Take a look at your eating habits. How much are you eating? Does your way of preparing foods contribute to your weight problem? Keep a food diary for several days — and no cheating! List everything you eat or drink, the amount consumed, the way it was prepared, and where it was eaten. Is there a pattern to your eating? Do you eat more than you thought you did? The results you see in your food diary may be helpful in losing weight.

Four food group plan provides foundation pattern

It may surprise you that no single food is fattening. Some foods have more calories than others. But it's eating too much food in the total day's diet that adds pounds, says the Dairy Council.

Look at your total food intake for the day. How much food are you eating? Many adult dieters use 1200 calories a day as a diet plan.

An adult dieter can eat a balanced diet and still limit his intake to 1,200 calories a day. The four food group plan can provide a 1,200 calorie foundation-food pattern:

Milk Group - 2 servings (Skim milk, cottage cheese and plain yogurt have fewer calories.)

Meat Group - 2 servings (Use lean cuts of meat. Broiling, baking or roasting, and stewing allow you to prepare meat without adding extra fat.)

Fruit and Vegetable - 4 servings (include dark green or orange vegetables; citrus fruit or tomatoes. Cut down or eliminate fat added to these. Fresh fruit or fruit canned without sugar added will be lower in calories.)

Bread and Cereal - 4 servings (Include a variety of breads and cereals. Rice as well as macaroni and other pasta products are included in this group.)

Milk Group - One glass of milk is 8 ounces or one cup. The portion ordinarily served such as half grapefruit, a tomato, a peach, an apple. A serving of cooked item is usually 1/2 cup.

Meat Group - A serving of meat is 2 to 3 ounces cooked meat, not counting fat or bone.

Fruit and Vegetable - serving is one slice bread group and eat these frequently, the amount flaked cereal or 1/2 cup serving sizes.

One hundred-nine location applications were filed last week with the Texas Railroad Commissions and the New Mexico Conservation Commission.

The count showed a decrease of 32 from the 161 sites staked two weeks ago.

Texas Railroad Commission District 8 at Midland led in wildcatting projects, with 12 scheduled. The San Angel RRC office had nine and the Lubbock RRC office reported seven wildcats staked.

District 7-C led in development tests, with 28, while District 8 had 27 and District 6-A had 12.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
 Additives not always at fault

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that you should take a little extra vitamin C every day, just to play it safe? - Jocelyn R.

Dear Jocelyn: No, it is not true. If you are getting a varied diet—one that includes things like orange juice, tomatoes, green leafy vegetables and potatoes—you are almost certainly getting all the vitamin C you need.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Our little grandson, who is just seven years old, has trouble sitting still. Because of this continuous restlessness, he is not doing too well in school. I remember hearing some time ago that food additives can have something to do with overactivity in children. Is it worth trying to eliminate all the additives from the food he gets? - Estelle A.

Dear Estelle: Several years ago, the theory was advanced that artificial flavors, colorings and other food additives caused hyperkinesis (overactivity) in children and that if you eliminated them from the diet, the child would calm down. But there has not been any definite proof of this. And a recent study at the University of Wisconsin casts doubt on the theory. Thirty-six hyperactive boys between the ages of six and 12 were tested for six to eight weeks. Ratings given by parents and teachers showed no clear pattern of improvement when food additives were withheld.

An earlier study at the University of Pittsburgh, with a small group of younger boys, gave more positive results. In this case, however, the parents knew when the children were on an additive-free diet and may have been influenced by that knowledge when they reported whether or not they noticed any improvement. In the Wisconsin test, on the other hand, only the test coordinators knew which diet was being followed by whom at any given time.

Boys of your grandson's age tend to be extremely active anyway, and there is a tendency nowadays to label them hyperactive or hyperkinetic when they are actually normal. Often, too, a child's restlessness may be due to crowded, noisy schools or an adequate teaching staff. But if your grandson has real problem, he should be examined carefully by a pediatrician. Genuine cases of hyperkinesis can be controlled by drugs. However, this does require very careful medical evaluation and supervision.

(If you have a medical problem, see your doctor. If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Region V net tourney opening here Friday

It will be like old home week, or perhaps more like a family feud, when the Region V junior college men's and women's tennis tournament gets underway Friday morning at the Midland College courts.

Saturday, according to Midland College tennis coach Brian Gilley, will be director of the event.

men's division will qualify for the National Junior College Athletic Association championships. Midland will host the NJCAA women's event May 16-19, while the men's tourney is slated for Scottsdale, Arizona, May 22-28.

Seattle Slew ready for Kentucky Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Smiley Adams didn't smile when someone suggested he'd purposely avoided running Run Dusty Run against Seattle Slew this year.

"I've been waiting for this day since the 2-year-old Eclipse Award was made," said Adams, who saddled 1975 Preakness winner Master Derby.

Adams, a Kentucky native from the small town of Versailles, near Keeneland race track, has passed up running his horses at New York and West Coast tracks.

Adams also hasn't been smiling as much lately because Run Dusty Run has finished second in his last three outings, including the Blue Grass Stakes on April 28.

Adams is much taller at seven feet and he jumps so high," McGinnis said. "He's so good that even when you have him blocked out, he goes right over your back. Caldwell Jones (76ers center) will have his hands full."

Cipot's blast ruins no-hit attempt by Arkansas' Andy Replogle in 9th

By The Associated Press — Ed Cipot blasted a two-run homer over the 50-foot wall in right-center Wednesday night to spoil Andy Replogle's no-hitter and helped the Jackson Mets to a 6-2, 12-inning Texas League victory over Arkansas.

Paso got in two winnings in El Paso before the game was suspended because of a power failure. That game will be resumed when the two clubs meet again in a later series this season.

Palmer halts Oakland, but doesn't feel right

By The Associated Press

Jim Palmer doesn't like the way he's pitching.

Neither does Milwaukee, Texas, Detroit and now Oakland, for that matter.

Oakland got its dose of nonvintage Palmer Wednesday night, falling victim to the ace right-hander's seven-hitter as the Baltimore Orioles crushed the A's 9-2.

"I haven't thrown the ball well the last couple of starts," said Palmer, who hasn't given up more than two runs in any of his six starts this season. "I haven't had my good rhythm."

After losing to Texas 2-1 in 10 innings opening day, Palmer beat Milwaukee 1-0 on a two-hitter, beat Texas 5-0 on a three-hitter and beat Detroit 3-1 on a four-hitter. He also was involved in a no-decision game when he pitched 10 innings against California and left with the score tied, 2-2.

The American League Cy Young Award winner three of the last four seasons, Palmer sports an earned run average of 1.13 this season.

"I can pitch better," he said. Elsewhere in the AL, the Chicago White Sox tripped the Kansas City Royals 6-3; the Boston Red Sox beat the Seattle Mariners 5-2; the Toronto Blue Jays pounded the Milwaukee Brewers 10-3, and the Cleveland Indians nipped the Minnesota Twins 6-5. The Texas-Detroit and California-New York games were postponed because of rain.

May's eighth career grand slam came after the Orioles had loaded the bases on Al Bumbry's double and a pair of walks off Dock Ellis, who's been bombarded in both his starts since being traded from the Yankees to Oakland. His ERA for the two games is 20.26.

Red Sox 5, Mariners 2
Darrell Johnson, who was named as Boston's manager last season, had some kind words for the Red Sox after his expansion Mariners were beaten by Jim Rice's hitting and Reggie Cleveland's pitching.

"The Red Sox are the only team that can keep up with the Yankees," Johnson said. "There's always been enough hitting here but their pitching has to be strong. I know them better than anyone."

Rice slugged a homer and a triple in support of Cleveland, 2-2, who gave up eight hits in eight innings. Reliever Bill Campbell took care of the Mariners in the ninth.

Blue Jays 10, Brewers 3
Dave McKay would rather bat right than switch, and its paying off. McKay, a switch hitter with a .191 average, decided last week to bat right-handed exclusively. That switch paid off against the Brewers as McKay knocked in three runs, two with a homer in the seventh.

Indians 6, Twins 5
Minnesota reliever Tom Johnson walked Fred Kendall with one out in the seventh. Duane Kuiper moved Kendall to third with a single before Buddy Bell cracked his hit up the middle.

Johnny Grubb and Rico Carty each drove in a pair of runs for the Indians. Larry Hise hit a three-run homer, his fourth of the year, for Minnesota.

White Sox 6, Royals 3
Chet Lemon belted a 475-foot homer in the eighth inning and Oscar Gamble slammed a two-run shot in the ninth, powering the White Sox over the Royals.

Lemon's blast, his fourth of the season, was believed to be the first ball hit into the left-center field water fountain since Royals' Stadium opened in 1973.

Oilers grab 24 players

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers chose 10 of Houston's players with their 14 selections in the National Football League draft.

However, they took four defensive players in the final seven rounds Wednesday.

Among players selected Wednesday were Al Romano, a 6-3, 225-pound nose guard from Pittsburgh, taken in the 11th round, and soccer-style place kicker Ove Johansson of Abilene Christian, taken in the last round. Johansson kicked a 69-yard field goal, the longest on record, last year.

Other second day Oiler choices included cornerback Gary Woolford, Florida State, sixth round; center David Carter, Western Kentucky, sixth round; wide receiver Steve Davis, Georgia, eighth round; wide receiver Eddie Foster, Houston, eighth round; defensive back Bill Currier, South Carolina, 10th round; and linebacker Harvey Hull, Mississippi State, 10th round.

First day selections included offensive tackle Morris Towns, Missouri, first round; offensive lineman George Reihner, Penn State, second round; running backs Tim Wilson of Maryland and Rob Carpenter of Miami (Ohio) and tight end Jimmy Giles of Alcorn State, third round; and wide receiver Warren Anderson of West Virginia State, fourth round.

John, Jones sparkle during NL victories

By The Associated Press

Tommy John can thank television for his recent successes. More specifically, he can thank his friend for watching it.

During a baseball game earlier this season, a pal of the Los Angeles Dodger pitcher taped one of his performances and discovered a flaw in his delivery.

"I saw that I was leaning back too far," said John. "That was causing me to get my fastball off."

John has since corrected that slight error and the results can be seen in his last two starts. The veteran left-hander has allowed but one run in 15 2-3 innings and Wednesday night looked as good as ever with a four-hit, 2-1 victory over the New York Mets.

"I'm in a groove now," said John, whose checkered career includes a history of arm trouble. "I've had very good stuff in my last two starts."

THE VICTORY fattened Los Angeles' lead in the National League West to nine games over the Cincinnati Reds. Off to one of their best starts in history, the Dodgers have won 20 of their first 24 games.

Elsewhere in the National League, the San Diego Padres turned back the Philadelphia Phillies 4-1; the Pittsburgh Pirates routed the Atlanta Braves 8-0; the St. Louis Cardinals beat Cincinnati 8-1; the San Francisco Giants whipped the Montreal Expos 5-1 and the Houston Astros downed the Chicago Cubs 5-4.

Bill Russell and Reggie Smith singled in runs in the first for the Dodgers while Dusty Baker slugged his fourth home run of the year in the second inning off loser John Matlack, 1-3.

John, 2-1, held the Mets scoreless until the ninth, when Lee Mazzilli doubled and eventually scored on Joe Torre's groundout. John struck out two and walked only one, getting 19 outs on ground balls. After Baker's homer, the Dodgers managed only three more hits off Matlack, who left for a pinch hitter in the eighth. It marked only the second time in his last 10 decisions against Los Angeles that Matlack has lost.

Randy Jones

Padres 4, Phillies 1
ROOKIE GENE Richards drove in three runs with a single and his first major league homer, and fast-working Randy Jones hurled a four-hitter as San Diego defeated Philadelphia. Richards' homer followed a leadoff double by Jones in the seventh inning and provided last year's Cy Young award winner with a three-run lead going into the last two innings.

Jones, who came into the game with a 1-4 record, retired 17 men on ground balls while recording the first complete game of the season for the San Diego pitching staff. Southpaw Jim Kaat, like Jones a quick worker, lost his first decision of the year in a game that took only an hour and 29 minutes.

Pirates 8, Braves 0
Dave Parker drove in four runs with a pair of two-run doubles as Pittsburgh beat Atlanta and handed the Braves their 11th straight defeat.

Parker delivered a two-run double in each of the first two innings, helping the Pirates mount an early 5-0 lead off Frank LaCorte. Pittsburgh's Larry Demery hurled a threehitter before being lifted in the eighth when the Braves loaded the bases. Reliever Kent Tekulue got Jerry Royster to hit into a double play to kill the threat.

"The ball carries so well in Atlanta Stadium, it brings out the best in a hitter," said Parker. "This place reminds me of Philadelphia. Both are good parks to hit in."

Cardinals 4, Reds 1
LOU BROCK smashed three hits and passed Lou Gehrig on the all-time major league hit parade and Bob Forsch pitched a four-hitter to lead St. Louis over Cincinnati.

Brock hit one of three St. Louis homers in support of Forsch, 5-1. Gary Templeton and Tony Scott also blasted homers to pace a 16-hit Cardinal offense. Brock's three hits gave him 2,724 for his career and lifted him past the second place New York Yankee great into 32nd place on the all-time list.

Giants 5, Expos 1
Willie McCovey drove in two runs with a single and Jim Barr pitched a six-hitter as San Francisco broke a five-game losing streak with its victory over Montreal.

McCovey singled home a pair of runs in the first inning, kept a third-inning rally going with an infield hit and started an eighth-inning rally with a walk. Barr struck out five and walked two and was rarely seriously challenged.

"I had better control and better velocity on all my pitches today," said Barr, who improved his record to 4-2, best on the Giants' staff. "My curve ball and slider were both working, which is odd for me. Usually, I have only one or the other."

Astros 5, Cubs 4
JULIO GONZALEZ singled home the tying run in the ninth inning and the winning run in the 11th to lead Houston over Chicago. Joe Ferguson walked to open the 11th, was sacrificed to second and reached third when second baseman Manny Trillo bobbled Ken Boswell's grounder.

Boswell made it to third when Ferguson was caught in a rundown on Enos Cabell's grounder, then scored on Gonzalez's hit.

"He (Chicago reliever Bruce Sutter) was throwing fork balls low and I tried to get down low," said Gonzalez. "He added, 'I'm not surprised I'm hitting well. I was hitting over .400 the first month in the Puerto Rican winter league.'"

Midland Cubs win

right and Steve Davis powered a three-run homer over the wall in right at the 365-foot sign.

THE CUBS exploded for seven big runs in the fifth inning with Pagel getting a double and triple during the big uprising.

Pagel started off with a two-bagger. Pepper knocked him in with a single and Karl Gordon was hit by a pitch and Davis knocked in another run with a base hit.

nandez singled. Pagle then rammed his triple to deep left-center for two more runs, making the score 14-5 in favor of the Cubs.

Midland slaved one victory in four games with the Gold Sox, losing all three by one run and the fifth game of the series was rained out Tuesday night and will be made up at a later date in the season.

MIDLAND RETURNS to Cubs Stadium Friday night to open a five-game series with El Paso. They go to San Antonio May 11 through the 15th and then face Arkansas and Jackson in a big 10-game stand starting May 17.

Soviets nab win in WTT

By The Associated Press

Ten-year Natasha Chmyreva won both her sets, then veterans Alex Metreveli and Olga Morozova teamed to win a tiebreaker, giving the Soviets a 2-25 World Team Tennis victory over the Los Angeles Strings Wednesday night at Greensboro, N.C.

The 18-year-old Miss Chmyreva, one of the rising young stars on the women's tennis circuit, defeated Diane Fromholz 6-4 in singles, then joined Miss Morozova to score a 6-2 victory over Miss Fromholz and Rosie Casals 6-2.

But Los Angeles came on to win the next three matches. Dennis Ralston and Mark Cox beat Teimuraz Kakulia and Kosta Pugayev 6-3 in men's doubles, Cox won a tiebreaker 5-1 to beat Metreveli 7-6 in men's singles and Ralston and Ms. Casals defeated Metreveli and Miss Morozova 6-4.

That tied the match score 2-2. But in the tiebreaker, the two Russians most experienced at international competition, Metreveli and Miss Morozova, teamed to defeat Ralston and Ms. Casals 7-5.

It was the second victory in five WTT matches for the Soviets, who travel to New York to take on the New York Apples tonight.

In other WTT matches Wednesday night, the Indiana Loves beat the Cleveland-Pittsburgh Nets 27-21. The Phoenix Racquets trimmed the Golden Gaters 23-21 and the Sea-Port Cascades edged the Boston Lobsters 29-26.

Anthony hot again

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Three-time Bowler of the Year Earl Anthony scorched the Wonderbowl Lanes Wednesday, averaging 241 for the lead after the first four games of qualifying in the annual Bowling Spectacular.

Anthony put together games of 292-267-259-237 for a 965 set, just ahead of Steve Neff's 958.

The event features professionals bowling in mixed doubles, amateurs and collegiate teams.

Pam Rutherford paced the pro women with 918, and Patty Costello was second 865.

The pros were to bowl four more qualifying games today before pairing up to a 10-team field for the match game series. The champions will be decided Saturday.

Joe Vito Buenrostro of San Antonio led the men's amateur division with 848. Sheila Davis of Mason City, Iowa, led the women's amateur with 812.

Kuchen still is unsigned

STARKVILLE, Miss. (AP) — A last-minute contract dispute has blocked the expected signing of Notre Dame assistant basketball coach Dick Kuchen as head coach at Mississippi State University.

MSU Athletic Director Bob Tyler said Wednesday night the sudden dispute was irrevocable and that the hunt for a new coach would resume.

Kuchen, 31, had been acknowledged as the front runner after a six-week search for a successor to Kermit Davis as the Bulldogs' coach. Davis resigned March 18 with one year remaining on his contract.

"I know that many people were expecting Dick Kuchen to be named as our basketball coach," Tyler said. "But that is not the case."

"After Coach Kuchen had advanced quite a distance in our negotiations, a new impasse arose that could not be overcome," Tyler said. "It was simply a technical point associated with the type of basic contract that is used throughout Mississippi."

"I believe that our types of contracts are in order," Tyler added. "However, Coach Kuchen felt he could not comply with our contract."

Okker, Fibak take World doubles win

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The top-seeded doubles team of Tom Okker and Wojtek Fibak overcame a shaky start and defeated John Alexander and Cliff Drysdale 6-3, 4-4, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4 Wednesday night to advance to the semifinals of the $200,000 World Championship Doubles Championship.

They joined Vitas Gerulaitis and Adriano Panatta, who gained the semis with a 6-4, 3-6, 7-5, 6-2 triumph over Bill Scanlon and Billy Martin in the opening match of the five-day event. Okker and Fibak's troubles began in the second set when Fibak's service was broken twice. Their woes continued in the third set when Fibak lost his serve twice more, including the decisive game.

But in the fourth and fifth games, the twosome grew stronger and did not lose service once, giving up just nine points in 10 service games. Paving the way to their triumph was a break of Alexander's service in the fifth game of the final set when Fibak hit a strong forehand smash for a point. Both sides held service the rest of the way but Alexander and Drysdale could not come back.

In the first match, Panatta and Gerulaitis, playing as doubles partners for the first time, finally wore down their younger opponents. What helped the winners was the fact that they broke Martin's service six times. It wasn't until the final set that Gerulaitis and Panatta took command, forcing numerous errors.

In action tonight, Eddie Dibbs and Carlos Barazzutti will meet the second-seeded duo of Ross Case and Tony Roche, while Dick Stockton and Vijay Armitra tangle with Ken Rosewall and Ray Moore.

The semifinals will be Friday night with the $80,000 finals set for Sunday afternoon.

Designers stitch in warmth for new fall fashion line

By NINAS HYDE
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Even before President Carter gave his energy message on television, Seventh Avenue designers were stitching up clothes suitable for the coldest winter, inside the house and out.

Some designers see a way to beat the cold in shearling, storm coats, quilted jackets, quilted pants, and fur-lined or fur overcoats. Others have taken to layers of shirts, sweaters, jackets, shawls and coats, leg warmers and boots.

Only Halston starts from the skin with one-piece dance leotards in wool knit, cashmere knit and even stretchy satin versions for evening, worn under dresses, with skirts, or just alone under a big fur coat. If you are afraid of being cold with the door thermostats turned down, wiggle into a wool knit leotard, put an ultrasuede dress over it, and watch the sweat start to run.

While keeping warm may be a phony reason for buying new clothes next fall, the designers have injected enough fresh ideas into their collections to lure credit cards and probably cash of great quantities from customers' wallets.

Clothes do best when they are sensuous-feeling, pampering wearers with velvet coats, satin blouses, cashmere dresses and anything else that feels good to the touch. It has worked well in underwear, it's bound to succeed in clothes generally, and designers are using it for both daytime and evening.

And while the clothes for next fall feel good, they are often loose, almost to the point of being sloppy. Big blouses, full dresses, unlined full coats, jackets and sweaters that look like they came out of your boyfriend's closet make the point that comfort and ease are big this season.

Claire Pritchard, who buys dresses for Lord & Taylor, expects customers to like the freedom of full styles as long as the dresses, as at Gil Gimbez for Genre, fit closely across the shoulders and chest. "The fullness has to be controlled to be flattering," says Pritchard. "Then it can be as big and full as you want."

Pants are still very much around, and the assortment is endless: pegged, pleated, narrow, wrapped at the ankle, bloused to the knee. Noticeably missing, of course, is the kind most of us have in the closet, the fuller-cut variety, but that's to be expected.

AT WIT'S END Daughter-in-law spells out rules for babysitting chores

By ERMA BOMBECK

A group of women at a luncheon recently were in hysterics over a letter that was being passed around.

As it turned out, it was a letter from a daughter-in-law addressed to a new grandmother-in-law regarding her forthcoming baby-sitting chores.

The letter was six pages long. The first two paragraphs were given over to social amenities and the time of arrival.

From then on, it was a steady list of needs.

"Please add more lights for changing crib and bumper pads. The last time, it was inadequate.

"Four boxes of daytime diapers for a 19-pound infant.

"1 gallon skim milk. Make sure the date is recent for freshness.

"Plenty of moisturized towels and plastic bags for dirty diapers.

"Bottles may be washed in the dishwasher. However, nipples and caps must be done by hand. Push water through hole in nipple to make sure it works.

"Phisoderm soap.

"Vanilla ice cream.

"Two plastic pails and a large basket for laundry. Commercial washer and dryer may be used.

"That's funny. When my son was born he weighed 157 pounds and could dribble a basketball."

"So, what are you going to do?" asked one of the women.

"What every grandmother does. I'm going out and buy four boxes of daytime diapers for a 19-pound infant. Phisoderm soap, two plastic pails, a nipple bulldozer, and 15 pounds of cotton swab sticks to clean out two ears and two nostrils."

She folded the letter carefully and added, "It seems like a lot of fiddling around for a baby staying overnight."

DEAR ABBY

ERA won't change method of family support

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just came from a meeting in which the guest speaker was against the Equal Rights Amendment, and I must say now I'm more confused than ever.

She said if the ERA is passed, men will no longer be forced by law to support their families. She also said with ERA, women would be drafted just like men, and they would have to use the same bathroom and sleeping facilities. Is that true?—CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: If the ERA is passed, the matter of supporting one's family will remain unchanged. According to the courts, a married woman living with her husband receives only what he chooses to give her. Support will (as it always has) depend on LOVE, not LAW. (You can't get blood out of a turnip.)

The ERA means that women will be subject to the draft (if we ever have one again—right now, we don't.) If so, either or both parents could be exempt from service if it would be a hardship on the family, just as some men formerly were excused from serving if they had a legitimate reason.

And as for women being forced to use the same restrooms and sleeping quarters as men: that's so much hooey. The constitutional right to privacy will still justify separate restrooms, dormitories and barracks.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 10-year-old boy and my problem is girls. I have loved a lot of girls, but they never loved me. I gave them gifts, but they threw them away.

Last summer I went to camp, and there was this real pretty girl I liked a lot, and I thought she liked me. At the first dance of the season, as soon as the music started, I went over to this girl and asked her if she wanted to dance.

She said, "Yes, but not with you!" I got so mad I went straight back to my cabin and said, "That's the end—no more girls for me!" But, Abby, I can't seem to quit liking girls. Can you help me?—LONELY LOVER

DEAR LOVER: Time is on your side, and you have plenty of it since you're only 10. Maybe you come on too strong. Most girls are attracted to boys who don't seem to notice them. The word from here is, cool it, lover.

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago we had a new heating system installed in our home. The two men who did the work cursed during the whole job. They even criticized my house. One of them asked, "Who designed this joint?" I proudly told him that my husband and I designed it. Then he said, "I knew it had to be something like that. I never saw such a monstrosity."

We need air conditioning now and my husband wants to hire these two ill-mannered thugs to do it. I don't want them in my house even though their work was good and the price was right. What do you say?—HAD IT IN BEVERLY HILLS

DEAR HAD IT: I say, let your husband win this one. The men may be ill-mannered, but they're probably competent and honest, and they know where all the pipes are buried.

Did she or did he design the Barcelona chair?

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Did Ludwig Mies van der Or does his mistress, Lilly Reich, deserve much of the credit for the Barcelona chair and a number of other classic modern furniture designs attributed for the last half century to the Bauhaus Master?

Reich's importance to the designs is revealed by Ludwig Glaeser, curator of the Mies van der Rohe Archive at a new show of the furniture just opened at the Museum of Modern Art here.

To the design world, the impact is similar to what would happen if the Louvre director announced he believed Leonardo da Vinci's lover helped paint the Mona Lisa.

The truth of the story may remain forever hidden, obscured by wartime separations and losses, discreet and ladylike silences, a love affair complicated by a business partnership, professional courtesies and the overpowering Mies myth. But enough remains to make a story bound to have an effect on anyone who ever bought a $1,628 Mies chair or ever sat in one.

Glaeser made his points in an interview and in the catalog of the show, not yet published. For the exhibit, Glaeser gathered extensive oral histories and a study of the furniture drawings.

Glaeser's evidence: —All the famous furniture was designed during the years Mies and Reich lived and worked together, the mid-20s to the late '30s.

—Testimony of former employees and clients of Mies-Reich who told of her extensive role.

—The fact that Mies assigned one patent on an important cantilever device to her.

—Her extensive training in furniture design with Josef Hoffmann, the Wiener Werkstetten master who was a pioneer of modern design.

The two, who had only their profession in common, came together through a designers' organization in the 1920s.

Mies was self-educated, the son of a stone mason. He learned architecture as an apprentice. Reich was the sophisticated daughter of well-to-do factory owners. She was well-traveled, a student of the best design schools of her day and was widely admired for her "un-failing taste combined with rigorous standards."

In 1927, they collaborated on a glass industries display at the Weissenhof Exhibition, where they each had model rooms as well. This was the beginning of their lives and work together.

"It is certainly more than a coincidence that his involvement in furniture and exhibition design began in the same year as his personal relationship with Lilly Reich," Glaeser said.

Georgia van der Rohe, the architect's daughter (who is making a movie based on filmed interviews with her father) said at the Mies exhibit opening, "My father didn't live with us. My mother was not well. I suppose you might say she was fragile. She died young. We children and sort of a retinue of governesses and such, lived in various places in Europe, while she took 'cures.' We would just see him once or twice a year."

Glaeser explains how Mies and Reich worked: "Extremely articulate, she participated in the actual work through conversation, and while Mies did much of his thinking by sketching — consuming stacks of typewriter copy paper — where they each had had her ideas already in her head.

"Mies, according to one of his employees from these years, rarely solicited anybody's comments but was always eager to hear her opinion. Even without any temporal distance, the nature of such collaboration makes it nearly impossible to sort out ideas and hands."

Their most productive year, 1928, saw the beginning of the Tugendhat house in Brno, Czechoslovakia, one of the most important of modern houses, and the designs for the Barcelona pavilion for the German government. Mies and Reich were hired to design an industrial exhibit for the exposition. Then at the last minute, they were also asked to produce a pavilion to serve as a setting for the Spanish king to sign his name in a gold book.

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGNER (Fri., May 6)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A real chance is now present for you to advance and progress in a new plan of action through your own good judgment and efforts. Be wise, however, and concentrate on a workable formula if this plan is to succeed.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make new plans that seem wise, but be sure to show them to a bigwig and gain the backing you need. Make friends of associates whose thinking is logical.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You now can get the needed finances to gain your most cherished personal wishes. Use tact with one who does not agree with you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A good friend gives good suggestions how to improve your method of operation and have more success in the future. Welcome new changes.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Associates can show you a better way of operating in the future. Organize time and energies and accomplish a good deal.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A new plan you have in mind needs the backing of good friends, so be sure to get it. Use care where finances are concerned.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Success is indicated if you display self-confidence. You make friends easily and are able to sway them to your way of thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to be more idealistic where practical matters are concerned. Listen to what an associate has to say and go along with his ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Show associates you take your work seriously and gain their respect and cooperation. Don't be afraid to ask for advice.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Financial affairs are the most vital to you now, but find the best way for handling them efficiently. A money expert could help.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Try to visualize personal aims more vividly and then you know better how to gain them. Avoid unnecessary expenditure of money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 18) Organize your talents so that you can achieve more in the future. Be more cheerful and contented. Conditions brighten.

PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Look to an older friend for help in solving a personal problem. The ideas of a family tie can be the source of your gaining more money.

Rich kids said 'zombies'

By LOIS TIMNICK
The Los Angeles Times

TORONTO — When F. Scott Fitzgerald wrote that "the very rich are different from you and me," fellow author Ernest Hemingway is said to have commented, "Yes, they have more money."

They also have more psychiatric problems, or if not more, then certainly a different set of them, a Chicago psychoanalyst says.

Describing his experiences in treating 15 children from super-rich families, Dr. Roy B. Grinker Jr. said he found them to be "emotional Zombies" — defensive, self-centered, mildly depressed, bored, shallow, lacking in both self-awareness and empathy, disinterested in work, short on values, goals or ideals and operating on the notion that they could buy, spend, travel or screw their way out of all frustrations.

They generally seeked treatment only because analysis is "in," or when pushed after some behavior those around them considered too far out.

"In short," Grinker told a standing-room-only audience at the American Psychiatric Assn.'s annual meeting here, "they are not ideal patients...and their prognosis is generally rather poor."

(Part of the problem, Grinker admitted, is that most therapists hold middle-class values and subscribe to the work ethic — and are often envious of all that money).

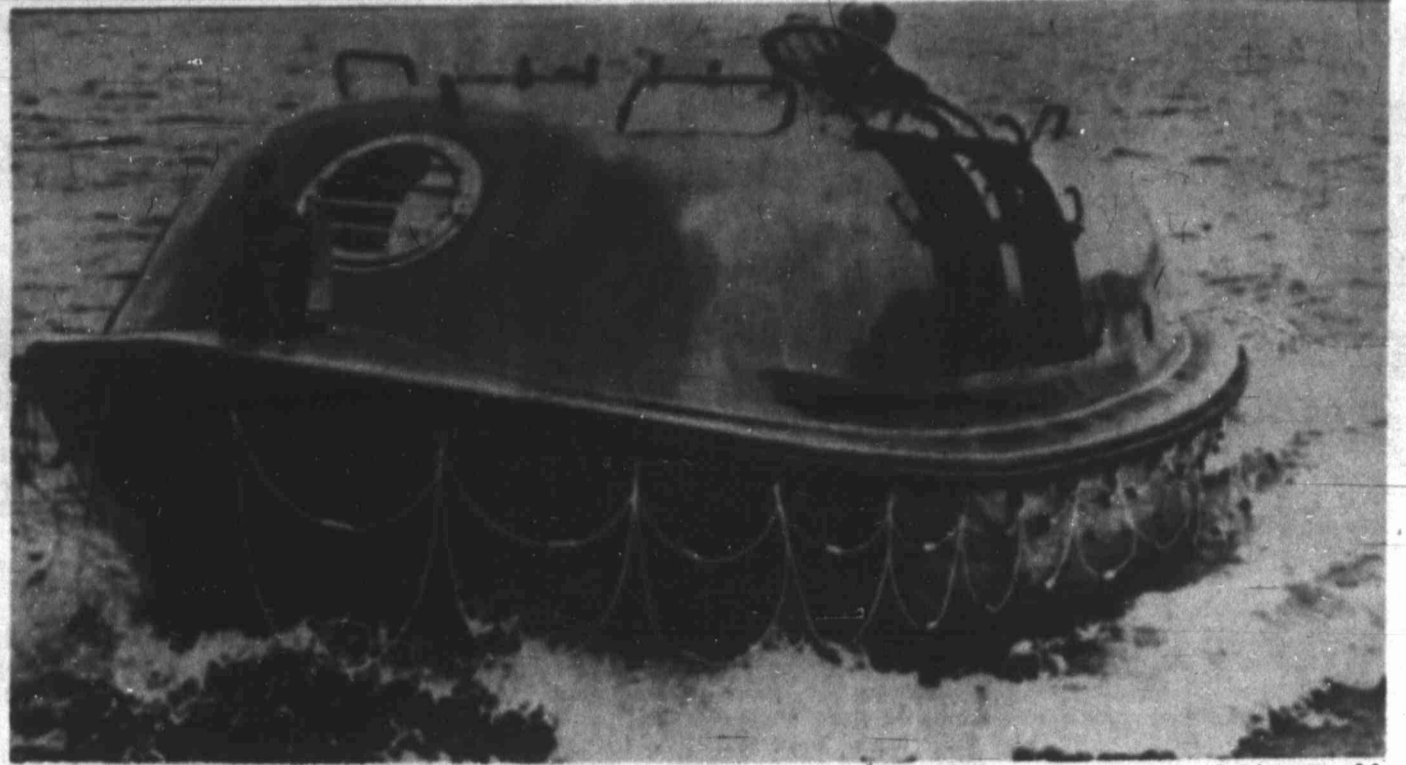

The "poor rich" in Grinker's study ranged in age from 17 to 50 and were multi-millionaires by inheritance. They were not the offspring of hard working immigrants who amassed great fortunes in the new country and were at least good models if not very good parents, but rather their grandchildren — third generation Americans raised by a succession of servants, disciplined inconsistently and taught to value little more than money and possessions.

"With the majority of these patients," he said, "the villain is not the money but the parental relationship. These are deprived children, they have no interested parents. What the family has gained in money it has lost in feelings, and at times even common sense. Some of the most simple sensible child-rearing practices are beyond the parents' imagination."

As a result, children of "the golden ghetto" do not develop in a healthy way. They feel unloved, unvalued and never gain a solid sense of "self," Grinker said.

"The similarity to children of the poor is startling," Grinker noted, in so far as both groups are deprived of adequate parenting and adults they can admire. But the monied, of course, can indulge themselves, are permitted by society to act on impulse and are socially well accepted, even envied or idealized.

Cancer of bladder linked to chlorinated water

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Several new scientific studies link death rates for cancer — mainly of the bladder — with the extent to which water is chlorinated to make it safe to drink.

One study showed that women in seven New York state counties served by chlorinated water ran a 44 per cent greater risk of dying from cancer of gastrointestinal or urinary tract organs than comparable women whose water was not chlorinated.

Another study of cancer mortality and chlorinated water sources in 200 counties across the country found increased rates of fatal cancer of the bladder and large intestine in older persons, particularly those over 60, but very low rates in persons under 40. The latent period of bladder cancer is 30 years or more, so it is unlikely to be detected in young persons.

The principal suspected cause of the deaths is chloroform, which is produced in reactions between chlorine and organic chemicals. Such chemicals occur naturally in water systems, run off the land into them, or enter as sewage or effluents. Chloroform is a known cancer-causing agent, or carcinogen, in laboratory animals.

In 1974, THE Environmental Protection Agency and a Dutch scientist each reported the presence of chloroform and another known or suspected chlorine-related carcinogens in treated drinking water.

Later in 1974, the EPA reported that drinking water taken from the Mississippi River at New Orleans contained these carcinogens.

In the same year, the Environmental Defense Fund, a non-profit group, disclosed that a year-long study showed that in New Orleans and other communities in southern Louisiana that derive drinking water from the Mississippi, fatal cancer in organs of the gastrointestinal and urinary tracts was 10 to 20 per cent more common than in parts of Louisiana where water comes from other surface sources and wells.

Cancer deaths attributed to the use of Mississippi River drinking water accounted for 15 to 20 per cent of the total in southern Louisiana, the EDF estimated.

After launching a nationwide survey, the EPA reported in 1975 that it had discovered chloroform and other carcinogens in small but measurable amounts in the drinking water systems of 80 communities.

And last September, Dr. Nancy A. Reiches of Ohio State University reported on a study of cancer mortality in the 3.5 million to 4 million Ohioans whose drinking water comes from two heavily polluted sources: the Ohio River, which forms the state's southern boundary, and Lake Erie, which bounds much of the state on the north.

SHE SAID THEIR cancer mortality is 8 per cent higher than that of about 1 million other Ohioans — residents of Columbus and three rural counties whose water comes from the Scioto River. The EDF and Resources for the Future cooperated in her study.

Until now, scientists did not have the evidence to incriminate any particular chemical. But chloroform was incriminated last week in the New York State and other studies discussed at a meeting here of the EPA's National Drinking Water Advisory Council.

In addition, Reiches, director of the Division of Epidemiology at Ohio State's Comprehensive Cancer Center, who did the nationwide 200-county study, said in a phone interview that still-unpublished results further incriminated chloroform.

The EPA commissioned Dr. Michael Alavanja and two associates at the Columbia University School of Public Health to investigate cancer mortality in seven New York state counties. The counties — Allegany, Cattaraugus, Chautauqua, Erie, Rensselaer, Schenectady and Saint Lawrence — had, for 15 years, relatively stable populations and water-supply systems.

The scientists examined each female death from cancer of gastrointestinal or urinary tract organs in the years 1968-1970. They confined the study to women because 85 per cent of them in the seven counties are housewives and, as such, much more likely than men to consume water mostly at home, and much less likely than men to be exposed to workplace carcinogens.

THE NUMBER OF such female deaths — in a total population of 1.81 million — was 1,595. The relative death risk was 1.44 times higher than in comparable women in the same counties whose water supply was not chlorinated.

In urban areas only, the relative risk was 2.24 times higher where surface was chlorinated than where it was not. This amounts to an excess over normal of 400 cancer deaths per 1 million population per year.

"To our knowledge, this is the first time a significant statistical relationship has been demonstrated between human gastrointestinal and urinary tract cancer mortality and chlorinated drinking water," the scientists wrote in a report to the EPA. They did not break down rates by particular body sites.

Dr. Reiches' study of the 200 counties encompassed major cities, including the District of Columbia, New York, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Cleveland. It excluded blacks because there are too few of them in some of the counties to permit reliable statistical analyses.

Survey finds Texans favor races, betting

Although 44 per cent of adult Texans believe organized crime is closely associated with horse racing and betting on horses, only 35 per cent disapprove those activities.

A statewide telephone survey was conducted by Staples and Staff marketing and research firm the week of April 18 to 23 among 506 Texans.

Fifty-four per cent of those questioned said they approve of permitting horse racing and betting on horses in Texas. Thirty-five per cent disapprove and 11 per cent are undecided.

Men, those who live in the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, those under age 35 and those with a college education are more likely than other population groups to approve. Each of those groups recorded approximately 60 per cent approval ratings.

The researchers who conducted the survey said, however, that these results should not be construed as meaning a referendum on allowing horse racing would mean its approval by a majority of voters.

When asked whether or not organized crime is closely associated with horse racing and betting on horses, 44 per cent said yes, 36 per cent said no and 20 per cent were undecided.

Women are more inclined than any other group to believe organized crime is tied closely with racing and betting on horses. Among women, 48 per cent said they believe the associations.

On another topic, 55 per cent of Texans said they believe penalties for smoking marijuana should not be relaxed.

While 34 per cent said the penalties should be relaxed, 11 per cent were undecided.

In the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth areas, 46 per cent of the people surveyed believe the penalties should be relaxed, with 48 per cent disagreeing. In contrast, only 25 per cent of the people living in areas with less than 50,000 population believe marijuana smoking penalties should be relaxed, with 62 per cent disagreeing.

Similarly, 47 per cent of those in the 18 to 34 per cent age bracket believe the penalties should be relaxed, compared to only 18 per cent of those 55 and older.

Satan finds work for busy hands

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Agood defender tries to foresee what declarer will do. If declarer threatens to ruff losers, the defender leads trumps. If declarer threatens to discard losers, the defender cashes his tricks quickly. But if there is no threat, the defender adopts a passive defense.

At the first trick East signals with the ten of clubs. West obediently leads a low club, and South ruffs. Declarer takes the top trumps and gives up a trump to West's queen.

What should West lead now? Should he lead a spade or a diamond through dummy's strength — or should he lead another club?

If West leads a low spade, declarer plays low from dummy and takes the jack with the ace. South then leads the ten of spades for a finesse through West's queen.

Diamond are just as bad. Declarer plays low from dummy, and East must win with the queen. South later uses the jack of diamonds to force out the ace, thus setting up dummy's king and ten. South gets rid of two spades on those good diamonds.

PASSIVE DEFENSE

West should defend with a passive club continuation. South must develop spades and diamonds by himself.

If South tries the spades, West gets in with the queen of spades to lead a diamond. East's two tricks defeat the contract.

"THINKING" with ODOM PHILLIPANS 4:8

The pure unadulterated gospel of Jesus Christ should suffice to draw men to God. I know one thing: the gospel is God's POWER to save. If the GOSPEL, he hid, "it is hid to them that are lost." (2 Cor. 4:3)

It is difficult for this scribe to see any lasting value in using "gimmicks" to get folks to come to the services of the church. There is a fad known as the "bus ministry" making its rounds among the churches these days which is almost a joke if it were not so serious. One of the most popular gimmicks to get a crowd to ride the "church bus" is the CONTEST FOR KIDS. I read recently where a "bus captain" had a "treasure hunt." He told the riders that he was going to do this once a month but would not tell them which Sunday it would be on. You see, that way they would ride the bus every Sunday thinking that this may be the Sunday of the "treasure hunt." They were told that when church is over and you board the bus, you might be sitting on a silver dollar, as one is put underneath one of the seats. Another gimmick was called "KITE SUNDAY." Every child who brought a visitor received a kite and a ball of string. They have been known to give away parakeets, baby rabbits, chickens, goldfish, and yo-yos.

Obviously the church practicing these unholy gimmicks to get people to attend their congregation have a problem. They don't have anything worthwhile from God to attract the masses, so they have to use some mundane something to get them to attend. It is apparent that they do not believe the people will ride their bus if they don't offer some kind of bribery. This is anything but a compliment to them.

My friend, I maintain that when the people of God have to use such worldly matters to get folks to attend their services, something is drastically wrong! Look fairly at the picture. Churches on the north side run bus routes on the south side. Churches on the west side run bus routes on the east side while the outside churches run westside routes! Now if these children wanted to attend a church of Christ because it is the church of Christ, would they not do so in the neighborhood where they would walk to a church of Christ? To ask the question is to answer it! The pure truth is that these people do not ride these busses because they necessarily want to attend the church of Christ. As one child told me recently, "They have better prizes than I got when I rode the bus." Nuff said!

Mother's Day goes far back

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Mother's Day, first observed here in 1908, has origins going back to the ancient Greeks.

According to Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins, a spring festival was held annually in Greece and Asia Minor honoring Cybele, goddess of nature and motherhood. This custom spread to Rome about 250 B.C. as the festival of Hilaria. The three-period of dancing and feasting began on the Ides of March.

Nowadays Mother's Day is celebrated not only in the United States but in Austria, Canada, Mexico, China, Japan, the West Indies, parts of Africa and in most South and Central American countries. To mark the occasion, Americans are expected to send more than 200 million Mother's Day cards this year.

Rare pooches look to be in need of a new tailor

By DAVID LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times

PLEASANT HILL, Calif. — They used to say that journalist Heywood Brown looked like an unmade bed. He would have been the envy of every Shar-Pei dog in existence. Which isn't many. The Shar-Pei, according to the Guinness Book of World Records, may be the rarest pooch of all.

"I am just about certain there are fewer than 100 in the entire world," said Ernest Albright.

Albright has become a bit of an authority on the rare Chinese dog. He raises them in the backyard of his home in this East Bay community.

Aside from having a tongue that looks as if they have been eating blueberries, the Shar-Peis aren't all that striking in appearance. They just look as if they could use a new tailor.

The easiest way to describe one would be to say that his mother must have been an accordion. The animal is an endless array of folds and wrinkles and dewlaps.

The skin hangs loosely and is so sandpaper coarse that a person can get a scrape if his forearm rubs across it.

"The breed goes back at least 2,000 years in China and they were originally used for fighting," Albright said. "The loose skin came in handy."

But the disposition of the dogs in Albright's yard is pure lovable. Especially if a visitor brings along a piece of dried liver.

"Their native diet was 50 per cent rice, but now they thrive on regular dogfood," Albright said.

And, from Mrs. Albright, an occasional fortune cookie.

The 62-year-old Albright, a retired oil company dispatcher, became interested in the breed seven years ago when he saw a magazine picture of one taken in Hong Kong.

"I wrote to kennel clubs and pet shops and schools in Hong Kong," he recalled. "Finally I found a man over there who was trying to preserve the breed. He located a bitch in Macao and I got it for $400.

Albright later acquired a male Shar-Pei from the same source, and in no time his yard was a wriot of wrinkles.

He keeps six dogs and has sold the rest. "The least I ever received was $500, but the price is usually $1,500," he said.

"I am running an advertisement in a Taiwanese paper offering $750 for others," he disclosed.

Gaullist leader, d'Estaing trying for truce

By JIM HOAGLAND
The Washington Post

PARIS — Gaullist leader Jacques Chirac and President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing are attempting to reach a political truce after seven months of open conflict that has pushed the ruling Centrist-Gaullist coalition to the brink of dissolution, according to informed political sources.

The still-tentative truce would award Chirac the politically dominant role within the coalition before and during the National Assembly election campaign scheduled for next spring, according to these sources.

Prime Minister Raymond Barre, whom Giscard had been trying to build up as the coalition's political leader, will reportedly devote himself almost exclusively to economic policy if the truce is firmly agreed on at a luncheon between Barre and Chirac on Friday.

Chirac's re-emergence as top political strategist within the coalition would give a much sharper anti-Communist tone to the elections, scheduled for March. He favors direct confrontation with the united front formed by the Socialist and Communist parties for the election.

Chirac publicly broke with Giscard and quit as prime minister last August, in part because Giscard did not favor confrontation politics. He directly challenged and humiliated Giscard's small Republican-Independent party by reorganizing the Gaullists and winning the race for mayor of Paris last March.

The president has been pushing Barre as a political counterweight to Chirac and to the left. Barre, a portly economics professor who stresses that he is a technocrat and not a party politician, quickly won high positive ratings in public opinion polls.

But Barre's increasingly shrill denunciations of labor unions and his open involvement in political party maneuvering on Giscard's behalf has begun to depress those ratings, and his prestige suffered enormously last Thursday when he angrily demanded that the Gaullists support his economic program or accept the responsibility for voting him out of office.

The Gaullists deputies stunned Barre by going into a caucus and making it clear that they were prepared to abstain and let the left vote down his government. Chirac intervened at the last moment and, according to the Gaullist version, saved Barre's government by getting the Gaullists to support him.

Political analysts do not discount the possibility that a good deal of the Gaullist revolt was stagemanaged.

Japanese 'Gary Gilmore' case arousing issues

By JOHN SAAR
The Washington Post

TOKYO. — The fate of a triple murderer known as "Japan's Gary Gilmore" because he wants to be executed has raised thorny medical and legal issues for justice officials here.

Only the minister of justice can now frustrate carpenter Matsuzo Ohama's desire to be hanged, although a court psychiatrist, his lawyer and a protest group insist he is insane.

The case originally attracted publicity because of superficial similarities with the bizarre saga of convicted killer Gary Gilmore, who sought execution and was finally shot Jan. 17 at the Utah state prison.

"Both men wanted to die. The difference is that Gilmore was sane and this man is not," said Ohama's court-appointed attorney, Yoshimitsu Imoto, 69.

So far the killer's deathwish has short-circuited the Japanese court system, puzzled his supporters and defied his lawyer's efforts to save him. Last month the deadline for filing a Supreme Court appeal ran out.

"I told him, 'This is the last chance — please call me anytime,'" said Imoto. "I waited by the telephone up to midnight but he didn't call. At our last meeting he said, 'My life is over. I want to die.'"

Now the case is under final review at the Justice Ministry. If and when the court sentence is upheld, Ohama will go to the gallows within five days.

The controversy is not over the principle of capital punishment. Japan has an extraordinarily low murder rate — approximately 2,000 a year in a population of 111 million — and the execution of 10 or so of the worst criminals annually does not provoke major opposition.

There is serious doubt, however, about Ohama's mental fitness to seek his own conviction and death. People close to the case believe it poses serious questions about Japanese attitudes toward criminal insanity.

After 38 years as a prosecutor and defender, the silver-haired Imoto has lost more sleep over this case than any other. "If the judges are mistaken," he said gravely, "it is an irretrievable tragedy for Ohama, for me and for Japanese justice."

In August 1974, Ohama killed a woman neighbor and her two young daughters because the sound of their piano practice became intolerable to him. He was a notable eccentric, carrying a fishing rod everywhere, and was under psychiatric care for an obsessive sensitivity to noise.

According to his lawyer, Ohama believed that the neighbors were trying to kill him with their scale-playing and acted in self-defense.

The emphasis on harmony and cooperation in Japanese culture is echoed in the justice system and Ohama's judges were empowered to show a wide latitude of mercy in sentencing a truly penitent killer. Ohama still feels no remorse and has written thousands of pages to rationalize his crime. The court found him neurotic but competent to stand trial, and sentenced him to death.

The verdict was bitterly criticized by an association of noise pollution victims. "The man is himself a victim," said one official, "the brutal noise drove him insane. I know how he felt, I sometimes feel I myself could kill."

The case gained notoriety as "piano satsujin," piano murder. Noise pollution is a bane of Japanese city life, and the piano as a popular symbol of affluence has become a common source of quarrels among neighbors. Pro- and anti-piano factions wrote and called the newspapers to give their opinions. Ohama, headlined as "piano-hating man," was meanwhile being tortured by noise in jail and gradually relinquished his desire to live, according to Imoto.

The murderer's wife divorced him and his family abandoned him. Soon the conscientious old lawyer earning only meager public defender fees was his only visitor.

Report reveals more CIA spying

By NORMAN KEMPSTER
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — With the approval of then-Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, the CIA used paid informants and hidden microphones to obtain information about the internal politics of a group of U.S.-administered South Pacific islands, the Senate Intelligence Committee has reported.

The committee chided the Nixon and Ford administrations for failing to "differentiate between intelligence techniques appropriate for use against an armed adversary and those proper for use against a people under U.S. administration and protection."

The committee, headed by Sen. Daniel K. Inouye (D-Hawaii), issued the report without change despite an objection from President Carter that part of it could compromise intelligence sources and methods.

According to the report, the CIA conducted "clandestine intelligence collection operations" in Micronesia, a group of more than 2,000 tiny islands which have been controlled by Washington under a U.N. trusteeship since 1945.

The CIA's effort was aimed at discovering the negotiating position of leaders of the strategically located islands who have been talking with the United States about possible independence since 1971.

According to the committee, the CIA recruited "Micronesian residents, some with affiliations with Micronesian political entities and some of whom were paid for their information." At least one of the informants "served on one of the island government entities involved in developing a compact with the United States as to future status."

The report said none of the Micronesians were told that they were reporting to the CIA. The committee did not say whom the informants thought they were serving.

In addition, the committee said, the CIA used a hidden microphone for three months in an effort to "produce information bearing on the status negotiations." The report said the electronic surveillance was unproductive and was discontinued. The report said Kissinger, in his role as then-President Richard M. Nixon's national security adviser, approved the collection effort in October, 1973.

In addition, the committee said, Kissinger granted permission for a study of "the possibility of exerting covert influence on key elements of the Micronesian independence movement and on those other elements in the area where necessary to promote the support U.S. strategic objectives."

But the report said despite Kissinger's approval of the idea, the CIA never undertook a direct effort to manipulate the island's politics.

DMFA unveils gallery 'Soaper' satire in the works of ancient American art

DALLAS — The Dallas Museum of Fine Arts has opened its new Galleries of Ancient American Art, a permanent exhibition presenting one of the most important pre-Columbian art collections in any American museum.

More than 1,000 examples of Middle, Central and South American treasures from Mexico, Guatemala, Peru, Colombia, Costa Rica, Panama and Honduras are on display in the new galleries. The exhibition combines the DMFA's former collection of almost 300 pre-Columbian works with the recently-purchased Wise Collection of gold, silver, pottery, stone, textile, wood and bronze pieces. Acquisition of the major portion of the 2,675 works in the Wise Collection was made possible through the generosity of such well-known Dallasites as Mr. and Mrs. Jake L.

Hamon, Mr. and Mrs. John D. Murchison, Mrs. Eugene McDermott and Mr. and Mrs. Algur H. Meadows and the Meadows Foundation. The remainder of the collection has been loaned to the DMFA by Mr. and Mrs. Wise, residents of New York City where Wise has been a leading dealer specializing in ancient South American art for almost 50 years. Wise was one of the first collectors to recognize the artistic merit of ancient South American works and through the years has played an important role in the formation of American museum collections of this material.

The new galleries are open to the public during regular museum hours, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. each Sunday. Group tours of the new exhibition may be arranged by telephoning the DMFA at 214-421-4187.

HOLLYWOOD — Ed Mallory, Dr. Bill Horton in "Days of Our Lives," is producing a filmed satire based on the soaper with his 6-year-old son, John, in a key role.

"The picture satirizes networks and rating wars," he enlarges, "and implies that all are in the hands of children."

"CBS becomes Hitler's Germany; ABC, Italy. NBC is the good guys but insane."

"I'm not sure that I understand that! Do you?"

"It's all done with light humor, but if it gets more than private distribution I'll be surprised."

Though he's divorced from John's mother, actress Joyce Bulifant, Ed is so close to his son that he can say, "One of my real treats is watching him. He's just a funny guy. And he was marvelous in the movie."

"I definitely did not want to be divorced," he continues. "Marriage is the best arrangement."

"But it's a relationship in which there has to be give and take."

"Maybe I spent too much time on interests away from my home — on the pictures I've produced, for example."

"But anyone considering marriage should first ask the prospective partner, 'Hey, what do you do?' And then be able to accept the answer or forget the whole thing."

"Everybody has to be free to be his or her own person."

"Each must be free to say, 'I choose to love you. I don't have to love you, but I choose to.'"

As for Ed's time-consuming interests which may have detracted from his family life, he was a founder of Theatre East Dramatic Workshop in San Fernando Valley and through it has directed more than 50 plays; he's written and directed a series of educational documentaries; he's writing a book; and he has his own record company for which fellow "Days of Our Lives" star Bill Hays has recorded.

"I was shooting the satirical movie after work until 5 a.m. and 6 a.m.," he says.

Ed doesn't apologize for his soap opera commitment, though he objects to the nomenclature "soap opera" and "soaper."

"Soap hasn't sponsored those shows in years," he claims.

"Daytime television drama parallels life. We simply mirror a bit of today's society — though not necessarily in a way that will improve it."

Troupe to give concerts

ODESSA — A newly-formed modern dance company at Odessa College will give first performances this weekend. The ensemble, the Texas Modern Movement Company, will perform at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the college auditorium.

Tickets, priced $3.50 for adults, $1.50 for students, will be for sale at the box office in advance of each program.

The troupe, organized within recent months, is the only resident modern dance company in this area. In its forthcoming concerts, the ensemble will be performing both modern and jazz dance works. The company is composed of dancers from Odessa but membership in the troupe is open to all interested dancers in this sector of West Texas, said Gilda Worrell, choreographer and director of the organization. Persons interested in auditioning for places in the company are invited to contact Mrs. Worrell or Pat Hodges, dance instructor at OC. Next auditions will be held in early fall, she said.

Purpose of the company is to provide area dancers with performance outlets while at the same time providing area audiences opportunity to view modern dance on stage.

Women artists show set

AUSTIN — The University of Texas is among only four places in the U. S. where an important new exhibition, "Women Artists: 1550-1950," will be on view.

The show came to UT's Michener Gallery recently from the Los Angeles County Museum of Art and will travel to art museums in Pittsburgh and Brooklyn following its close here June 12.

The exhibit of approximately 150 works forms a historical survey of major women artists of the past four centuries.

Young writer lacks only typewriter

GRAMBLING, La. (AP) — Young, black and gifted Judi Ann Mason has written eight plays, worked with Norman Lear on a television series and become the first person to win a national writing award twice.

Imagine what she could do with her own typewriter. Her latest effort on a borrowed machine, "A Star Ain't Nothin' But a Hole in Heaven," won this year's American College Theater Festival national playwriting competition — making her the first repeat winner in the festival's nine-year history.

She also won the Norman Lear comedy writing award in 1975 for "Livin' Fat," which enabled her to work on several scripts for Lear's "Good Times" TV series.

So far, all of the 22-year-old's works have dealt with rural blacks in the South and have come from her personal experience, growing up in Elm Grove, La., and becoming an orphan at age 15.

"I don't feel able to write about other races yet,"

she says. "I don't want to misrepresent anyone. I have dedicated myself to showing people that the South is beautiful. I want to show the rest of the nation that everyone here is not a pig farmer."

"Livin' Fat," which has been performed off-Broadway by the Negro Ensemble Company in New York, is about a black family that was left with a large sum of money.

It is set in Sossier City, the northwest Louisiana town where Miss Mason attended high school after her father died when she was 15. Her mother had died seven years earlier.

ENTERTAINMENT

"A Star Ain't Nothing But a Hole in Heaven" deals with a 17-year Louisiana orphan girl's decision about attending college in Ohio. It is set in Elm Grove.

That play is scheduled to be performed at the Back Alley Theater in Washington.

Despite her success, Miss Mason says she is in no hurry to leave Louisiana and hasn't even decided whether to continue playwriting as a career. She has a double major in journalism and drama and is considering graduate school.

"People in other parts of the country don't understand that I'm happy here," she says. "New York is the cultural mecca of the nation and sooner or later it may have to be base for me."

"But I really want to stay in the South and even if I have to cater to them, I will continue to write about the South and the people here."

"I enjoy writing about people who speak broken English and are sort of backwoods. These are beautiful people; they are my people. I've been taught to be ashamed of this, but I'm not. I've come to love it."

Whatever the future holds for her, one thing is sure. Any more plays will be written on her own typewriter. She says that will be the first thing she buys when she collects the $2,000 Theater Festival prize.

"You know, we've got such a good place here with great pizza and terrific people, I've got a feeling we're going to do very well. I think we need a slogan."

"How about 'Leave the cooking to us!'"

"I have a feeling I heard it before."

"What about 'The proud pizza with the golden crust?'"

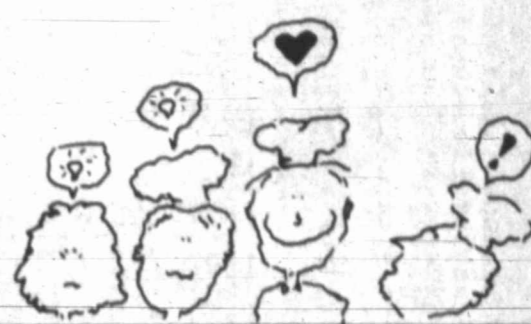

"That feels a little uppity. We wanna say something nice and simple like

'We've got a feeling you're gonna like us.'

But how can we say it?"

"????????????????????"

"Well, keep working on it."

Pirandello play parable of illusion versus reality

Is she or isn't she? Is he or isn't he?

One of the central characters in "Right You Are, If You Think You Are," Luigi Pirandello's classic brainteaser, is mad as a hatter, but which one — the mother-in-law, Signora Frola, or the son-in-law, Signor Ponza?

Perhaps that's for playwright Pirandello to know — and us to decide for ourselves as best we can.

"Right You Are," which opened at Theatre Centre last weekend as Midland Community Theatre's third offering of its new season, is certainly not a play of action and high drama; it's a play of words and ideas instead, tending occasionally to tediousness. Still, it's a famous play and its creator was a Nobel prize winner in drama. I, for one, am glad of the opportunity to see this notable stage work, although I wouldn't especially care to see it again.

Personally, I think the most demented inhabitants of Italian playwright Pirandello's drama are the nosy neighbors of the unhappy Ponza and Signora Frola, meddlesome busybodies consumed with curiosity over the mystery of a man who keeps his wife shut up in one apartment, his mother-in-law incarcerated in another and prevents the pair from ever speaking to each other. Through subterfuge and shabby trickery, these "normal" upstanding citizens not only make fools of themselves but in their well-meaning brutality pry open secrets and pain in the hearts of people who want only to be left alone. "Lupini" — little wolves — is an Italian word that could well describe these relentless inquisitors.

Still, Pirandello has not served up a tale simply of man's inhumanity, or insensitivity, to man, but a parable of illusion versus reality. In the end, the author provides no more definite answer to his jesting question, "What is truth?", than that contained in the title of his play — you are right (that is, you have established what is true), if you think you are right.

MCT executive director Art Cole's cast for "Right You Are" has a few familiar faces but most members are theater newcomers, and most of them do well in their respective assignments. A few were not quite "into" their parts opening night, but hopefully are into them now.

MCT "old hand" Mike Bustilloz is seen as Ponza, with newcomer Teri Valero as the mother-in-law. Gary Askins, seen in several past MCT productions, is in another pivotal role. Lamberto Laudisi, a cynic who knows it is folly ever to arrive at an absolute "truth" and scoffs at his friends' attempts to solve the mystery of who is mad and who is sane. Others include Jerry Hickman as Commendatore Agazzi, Kathy Kerth as Amalia Agazzi, Lori Skelton as Dina Agazzi, Oza Whitten as Sirelli, Pat Voss as Signora Sirelli, Bob Wornell as the Prefect of police, Roseann Din-smoor as Signora Cini, Sidney Lennox as Signora

Nenni, Jerry Bullard as Commissioner Centuri, Steve Murphy as the butler, Diane Davis as Signora Ponza. "Right You Are" resumes with a performance at 8 p.m. today, for which special $1 student tickets will be available. Additional presentations will be at 8:30 Friday and Saturday and 2:30 Sunday, with concluding performances on May 11 and 13. —ROGER SOUTHWALL

Houston group to appear at OC

ODESSA — St. Elmo's Fire, a Houston-based musical aggregation, will be featured in the final edition of Odesa College's "Sandwich Series" Friday noon.

The outdoor concert is scheduled from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and will be open to the public. The "Sandwich Series," at which sandwich lunches may be purchased for $1, has been sponsored by the student activities office at OC. The closing event will be open to the public adjacent to the Student Union building.

St. Elmo's Fire is made up of five musicians who handle various phases of music from jazz to bluegrass with a distinctive blend of flute, banjo, mandolin, acoustic and electric guitars, drums, percussion and intricate vocal harmonies. A fast-rising ensemble, St. Elmo's Fire has performed at colleges and universities throughout Texas and in such night spots as The Troubadour in Los Angeles and the Ice House in Pasadena, Calif.

Further proof of the ensemble's virtuosity and versatility is the fact that it provided the score and the accompaniment for the Houston Ballet's original dance work, "Caliban," presented in performances in recent seasons.

Call to pharmacy gets implantations of ears

Newsday

NEW YORK — The telephone rings in the pharmacy at Mercy Hospital on Long Island. It is 8 a.m. The caller, Dr. Emmett Campbell, says, "I need a right eardrum in the operating room by 9."

Pharmacist Dick Mason writes down the request, the bottle of solution containing the eardrum is prepared and it is sent upstairs within the hour. Four hours later the eardrum is in the patient's ear. Another ear implantation has been completed by Mercy.

That scene is being enacted frequently because of a special project, a small ear bank made possible through the efforts of Campbell, a leading ear surgeon, and Mercy's pharmacy department. The bank was begun in September, 1975.

The bank contains a supply of middle-ear structure from donors. Campbell says he asked Mercy to open the bank so that such structures as tympanic membranes (eardrums), and incuses (the middle bone of the chain of three small bones) could be readily available for

Campbell says the "handful" of other surgeons who employ this method also have inventories of parts on hand. Mercy's bank is stocked with at least two of every needed structure and replacements are obtained either from Project Hear in Palo Alto, Calif., or from the Cincinnati Ear Bank, two of the largest ear banks in the country. Those centers receive the donated structures and process and dispense them. One problem is the lack of donors.

"People are reluctant because they don't know too much about this program," Campbell says.

Campbell has performed more than 60 operations at Mercy, and with good success, he says. He declined to divulge his rate of success because, he said, his research is being considered for publication but he did say it was "much improved" over that of other methods.

The bank is needed because of the type of surgery Campbell performs.

Energy use cut

FORT WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — There's a new wrinkle in saving energy while drying California's 360-million pound prune crop. Researchers using Honeywell recorder and sensitive thermometers found that 10 per cent of the natural gas used to dry the fruit was being wasted through unnoticed leaks in the drying tunnels. They estimate that simply by plugging the leaks 273-million cubic feet of gas can be saved during this year's drying season.

Vance foretells Mondale message

By OSWALD JOHNSTON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Vice President Mondale intends to tell South Africa's leadership later this month that the United States is "unalterably opposed to apartheid," Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Wednesday.

Vance, addressing his first full-dress news conference in two months, thereby put firmly on the record what had become increasingly clear in recent months: that the United States intends to press South Africa to accept the principle of black majority rule for itself as well as for Rhodesia and the trust territory of South-West Africa.

Mondale's mission to Europe to meet South African Premier John Vorster, officially announced at the White House Tuesday, had previously been explained in terms of Vorster's "crucial role" in helping avoid racial conflict in southern Africa by urging the white regime in Rhodesia to accept a peaceful but speedy transition to black rule.

But Vance made it clear that South Africa's cooperation in pressing Rhodesia's prime minister, Ian Smith, or in accepting black rule in South West Africa (known as Namibia to nationalists) would not buy any surferance in American eyes for its own racial policies.

"We are unalterably opposed to apartheid," Vance said. He added that Mondale's contact with Vorster — the first in the Carter Administration and the highest ranking American to meet a South Africa head of government since racial separation became policy after World War II — would be "constructive."

Mondale, he said, would discuss with Vorster "the questions of Rhodesia, Namibia and South Africa, and how they plan to move within South Africa in making progress in moving away from apartheid.... That is a subject that will be stressed by the Vice President with Mr. Vorster when he meets with him."

On other subjects, Vance made these points: —Neither the United States or the Soviet Union have put forward any new proposals on limiting strategic weapons during the month of diplomatic contacts since Vance's mission to Moscow ended in deadlock.

"We have merely reviewed the existing proposals," Vance nevertheless said he believed it would be "useful and constructive" to meet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko in Geneva later this month as planned to continue the negotiation.

—The Carter Administration intends to put forward what it considers a "fair and equitable" solution to the Middle East conflict as soon as President Carter and his aides have discussed the issues with Arab and Israeli leaders. This was the clearest hint so far that the U.S. peace effort will involve the active formulation of a plan rather than a more passive "honest broker" approach.

—The United States under no circumstances will pay "reparations" to Vietnam, but will not oppose Vietnam's membership in the United Nations. In so stating, Vance was reaffirming a policy position staked out by Carter himself in late March, and the formula was repeated again Wednesday in a joint communique by U.S. and Vietnamese negotiators in Paris after two days of talks.

There was little surprise in Vance's admission that the month of policy review since the Moscow talks — which has included meetings at least once a week and sometimes several times a week with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin has led to no new proposal.

Administration officials, including national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, have made it plain in public and semi-public sessions with the press that Carter and his foreign policy team have no intention of abandoning the proposal that was rejected in Moscow.

By the same token, Soviet officials have made clear their own refusal to accept any proposal that, in their view, scraps negotiating progress achieved by the Ford administration and substitutes a plan for substantial arms cuts they believe would count to Soviet disadvantage.

"It was offered as a package and it was rejected as a package," reporters here were told a few days ago by George Arbatov, chief America-watcher in the Soviet government, during a visit here.

Texan escapes

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Roy S. Bell, whose family lives in Texas, escaped from the detention ward of the Maricopa State Hospital Wednesday after brandishing a pistol and handcuffing a guard to a bed.

The 41-year-old Bell escaped from the Arizona State Prison once before, but was caught after only 30 minutes of freedom.

Editor freed on bond

ODESSA, Tex. (AP) — City editor John Sliney of The Odessa American was freed on $5,000 bond today after surrendering at the Ector County sheriff's office to face a bribery indictment returned by a county grand jury.

Two other former employees of the newspaper, James Beatty, district distribution manager, and his wife, Susan, switchboard operator, were also indicted Tuesday on charges of possessing more than four ounces of marijuana.

Olin Ashley, editor of The Odessa American, said the couple quit their jobs shortly after the indictments were handed down. Sliney is still at work.

The indictment against Sliney accused him of attempting to bribe Jimmy Edwards, a candidate for county attorney, last year. It specifically alleged Sliney promised to confer a benefit on Edwards with the intent to influence him.

Edwards was promised $5,000 to withdraw from the county attorney runoff election, according to Ector County Dist. Atty John Green. However, Edwards entered the race and lost.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Ashley said, "You can believe that it was no accident that the three people who were indicted are or have been employees of The Odessa American. Do you really suppose that in all of Ector County there were no other criminal matters that could, and probably should have been presented to the grand jury along with these cases? This smacks of selective prosecution."

Georgetown gets Libyan bonanza

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Georgetown University has announced that the government of Libya has committed $750,000 to endow a new professorial chair at the university's Center for Contemporary Arab Studies. The Libyan money represents the largest single contribution thus far to the center, which was launched at the university here two years ago after Middle East and African oil-producing states began amassing huge revenues and drafting massive domestic development plans that drew new attention to the Arab world.

Michael C. Hudson, the center's executive director, voiced hope that Georgetown also could arrange for some faculty and student exchanges and possibly other ties with Libyan universities.

Libya's gift, announced by the Rev. Timothy S. Healy, S.J., president of Georgetown, includes an immediate outlay of $150,000 and later installments totaling $600,000 over the next four years. The chair supported by income from this endowment will be named for Umar Al-Mukhtar, a national hero who fought for Libyan independence from Italy and died in 1931.

D'Artois to get hearing

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — George D'Artois, the former Shreveport public safety commissioner, will get a hearing Monday on whether there is enough evidence to keep him in jail on charges of murder.

The Louisiana Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the hearing cannot be put off any longer to allow the prosecution more time to investigate.

District Judge Frank Foil docketed the case for hearing at 1:30 p.m. Monday in Baton Rouge.

D'Artois, a heart patient, was arrested April 19 and accused of paying $30,000 to have former friend Jim Leslie killed.

Leslie, a public relations and advertising executive from Shreveport, was slain by a shotgun blast last July when he got out of his car in the parking lot behind a Baton Rouge motel.

The plea to the Supreme Court said D'Artois was due a prompt hearing on the charge, and that there should be no excuse for delay because Sheriff Al Amoss of East Baton Rouge Parish claimed to have the case solved when he had D'Artois arrested in Shreveport.

The preliminary hearing had been scheduled for May 5.

Shipments said often unguarded

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Shipments of uranium and plutonium suitable for use in nuclear weapons often move unguarded and unmonitored in international commerce and are vulnerable to theft, a former U.S. arms control chief said Wednesday.

Fred C. Ikle, who was director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency under Presidents Nixon and Ford, said such shipments of weapons-grade nuclear fuels sometimes contain more than enough material to make an atomic weapon.

"We sometimes lose track of these things for months before their arrival is certified to the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna," he said in an interview.

His concerns were reinforced by a report by the congressional General Accounting Office released Monday charging that the United States lacks the ability to detect and respond quickly to a nuclear theft.

Accounting problems affecting tons of uranium and plutonium at commercial facilities have persisted since the 1950s, the GAO said. It said also that "Frequently, quantities large enough to make a weapon go unaccounted for from one to two months."

Ikle, now a consultant in Washington, also was critical of accounting procedures that the Atomic Energy Commission and its successor, the Energy Research and Development Administration, have used to keep track of the nuclear materials the United States loaned or sold to other governments.

He said ERDA has been working for the past two years to determine exactly where all the tons of uranium and plutonium shipped abroad since the 1950s have gone.

"Their statistics were in dreadful shape. They had to go back through a lot of old ledgers that were inadequately kept."

"It was a lot of work, and they kept discovering errors, things that wouldn't total up. They've been working for two years now and they're still at it," Ikle said.

A spokesman for ERDA said that since 1965 the agency has been computerizing its records of foreign nuclear shipments and expects to complete the process by the end of this year. This is expected to speed up the retrieval of information in the event of a suspected diversion.

Ikle said the potential loss of a few kilograms of plutonium or weapons grade uranium in transit is a much greater cause for concern than the recently disclosed disappearance of 200 tons of natural uranium in the European market Monday that this uranium — stored initially in West Germany and at the Dutch port of Rotterdam — vanished from a ship ostensibly en route to Genoa, Italy, in the 1960s. Reports in the Los Angeles Times and New York Times last week said a number of government authorities believe the uranium ended up in Israel.

NATO admission for Spain not to be pressed

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Changing a long-standing U.S. position, the Carter administration will not press for Spain's admission to NATO until the Spanish commitment to democracy has been tested.

U.S. officials cite next month's elections, Spain's first free balloting since 1936, as the point where U.S. officials can begin to determine the country's commitment to democratic principles.

State Department officials revealed the change in policy as President Carter was departing today for summit talks in London, including a meeting with NATO allies.

The U.S. officials stress that the administration still wants to see Spain join the 15-nation military alliance. But the officials said active U.S. backing for the admission of the Spanish might prove counter-productive.

Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger frequently argued at NATO meetings for the admission of Spain at a time of erosion along the alliance's southern flank.

But the Carter administration is hesitant to push Spain into NATO without an assurance of Spanish commitment to democracy.

"We feel that it would be inappropriate at this time to continue while Spain is still in the process of advancing toward democracy, which the world needs to see in practice during next month's elections," one administration official said.

"If things go well it would not be surprising if member countries of NATO itself were to invite Spain to join them. That remains to be seen," the official said.

"But in the meantime, informally and in principle, the U.S. position is to support the proposition when it comes up but we ourselves don't intend bringing it up," he said.

King Juan Carlos' reform program culminates June 15 in the first democratically organized national election since Spain's civil war.

In all, about 180 political parties, from communists to followers of the late dictator Francisco Franco, will be on the ballot. Officials in Washington fear pressure, and especially U.S. pressure, for Spain to join NATO at this time might become a campaign issue.

Administration officials also say Scandinavian member nations of NATO, as well as Britain, are concerned about the stability of the existing regime of Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez. The influence of powerful right wing pro-Franco forces inside and outside the armed forces has contributed to these uncertainties.

Communist and socialist factions already want Spain to cancel agreements that allow the United States to maintain bases there. And right wing elements consider the country better off outside of NATO, because of the minimum Spanish commitment now required in exchange for $1.2 billion in U.S. aid.

Ford discusses weapons in Dallas address

By TOM DECOLA
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — Former President Gerald R. Ford talked about energy in Dallas Wednesday night, but ignored the subject of a televised interview with the man he succeeded.

Ford's speech to the annual Dallas YMCA meeting was delivered at the same time that British journalist David Frost's first interview with former President Richard Nixon was aired.

A Ford aide said arrangements had been made to tape the telecast for later viewing by Ford if he desired.

Ford was to spend the night at the home of wealthy Dallas businessman Trammel Crow.

The Nixon interview did not deal with the pardon Ford gave Nixon following Nixon's resignation in 1974 over the Watergate affair.

Ford was in Dallas to play in the pro-am event preceding the Byron Nelson PGA tournament. He did not answer reporters' questions at the golf course concerning the Nixon interview and was whisked away from the hotel site of the YMCA meeting without talking with newsmen.

Instead, Ford called for a bipartisan attack on what he called an energy "crisis."

"In meeting that crisis," Ford said, "there must be unselfishness, cooperation and belt-tightening."

He said that the country is now "able to put a chicken into every pot, but we're running out of gas to cook it."

"The answer is not more bureaucracy, but more stimulation to the marketplace," Ford said. He cautioned against endangering "our political and economic systems by using the wrong approach on energy."

"America has prospered in the past by depending on individual initiative, competition and the free enterprise system," Ford said. "We must not abandon that approach as we face this new challenge."

He said future generations must have substitutes for oil and gas. "It is our responsibility to expand that search now," he said.

Open records suits bill wins passage in Senate

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senators today passed and sent to the House a bill allowing citizens to collect their attorneys' fees from the government if they win open records suits.

It also contains a provision allowing a government body to withhold otherwise public information if disclosure would cause it to lose federal funds, services or "essential" data.

The bill was recommended to the legislature by Atty. Gen. John Hill, and passed without discussion or explanation at a Senate session for local and uncontested bills.

A spokesman for Hill said the trade-off of public disclosure for federal funds addresses problems created by federal privacy legislation, chiefly in the field of educational records.

Texas law has been less restrictive than federal statutes in allowing personnel of schools and colleges to examine student records, and the state ran the risk of losing federal educational aid, the spokesman said.

"It speaks to future federal privacy legislation that we expect to be passed," he said.

When the State Insurance Board recently denied access to a report on the ground it might lose a federal contract if it released the document, Hill went to court to force the board to open the record to the public.

The bill also says that if a citizen must sue to obtain public documents and wins, the judge may require the government body to pay his or her attorney fees.

Another key provision removes from the open records act criminal penalties for government workers who releases information that is held confidential by the act.

The measure attempts to comply with the so-called Buckley Amendment by prohibiting employees of schools and colleges from looking at student records unless they have "legitimate educational interests" in them. It also denies a student's husband or wife automatic access to his or her records.

The bill makes a sweeping statement that the open records act does not limit any right to information provided by other laws, ordinances, constitutional provisions, administrative rulings or court decisions. It says the act does not restrict access to documents that had been available for inspection before the act passed in 1973.

In fact, it said, the custodian of a document may release it even if not required to do so by the law, provided it has not been made confidential under some other statute.

Reid Brannon, Assoc. 694-5588

Reid is the son of Ed and Sue Brannon, respected names as designer-builders of fine custom homes. He has the artistic and technical background in the industry and the personal integrity necessary for a people-oriented service. He will benefit from my teaching, help experience in every deal. We solicit your listing. As members of MLS, you will get full coverage and cannot get better representation. I specialize in "Hard Cases." Sixteen years experience as a dealer in Midland home sales and Hill Country land sales qualifies me to give you the extra help you need during these changing economic times. Real Estate is the basis of all prosperity and everyone needs to invest. I can help you to buy your first home or to trade a house, an apartment house or a ranch. It is the service that motivates me and I am interested in helping you make the right investment for you. We own several top quality rental homes here, beautifully decorated and maintained for discriminating families. They are about 30,000 to 75,000 and screen you. Call to be put on our list. I am in the market to buy an office. If you have an older home in "O" or commercial zone, call. We are also interested in houses or apartments or lots. Trading has tax and other advantages. Besides Midland homes we are also in the market for a beautiful 200 acre riverfront stock farm near Menard for $200,000; a 150 acre stock farm near Junction with a new luxury home; 3480 Sq. ft., 4 br., 2 bath, 2 fireplaces. Native stone, shake shingle roof, it's beautiful; a 100 acre maize and cotton farm near Corpus. We have a wide variety of knowledge of Menard-Mason and Junction-Kerrville properties and cooperate with any broker anywhere. Let us know your needs!
