Summit leaders will seek nuclear power agreement

By JAMES R. PEIPERT

LONDON (AP) — President Carter said Saturday night the United States and six other industrial nations meeting at a summit here will try to achieve a "comprehensive international agreement" on the use of fuels for nuclear power production.

Earlier Saturday, in the first round of the two-day summit, the leaders of the top non-Communist industrial nations pledged a coordinated fight against inflation, unemployment and trade barriers.

However, the leaders did not agree on nuclear energy policy during six hours of talks at No. 10 Downing St., official home of Britain's prime minister.

Carter told reporters he and the other leaders agreed to appoint a panel of technicians "to try to study all of the facets of the problem," which has become the key issue at the summit.

"There is such a diversity of interest and a deep concern about the future that we thought it was time to address this problem," Carter told reporters after returning from an evening at Buckingham Palace.

Carter and the other summit leaders dined with Queen Elizabeth II and members of the British royal family at a blacktie state dinner.

Carter said the "basic question" is how to guarantee adequate supplies of nuclear fuel for electrical production while guarding against misuse of the spent fuel to make nuclear explosives.

He said the summit leaders unanimously agreed that "unless we do take action, there will be a lot of other of the so-called threshold nations who will produce explosives in the future as India did a few years ago.

And all of us want to prevent that."

India became the sixth nation with nuclear capability, exploding a nuclear device on May 18, 1974.

Carter did not give any timetable for reaching an international agreement on nuclear non-proliferation.

Sources in the West German delegation said the study panel is to report back within eight weeks on its recommendations on curbing the potential spread of nuclear weapons.

"I thought it went well," Carter told reporters after an afternoon meeting. "We got started on energy and we will finish up on that tomorrow."

But he added, "How to resolve this (nuclear) problem with so many different kinds of nations' needs is one that will probably be our most difficult undertaking."

Asked if there were major problems, Carter said, "None that we can't resolve."

The United States has sought to limit the export of sensitive nuclear technology. But some nations, notably West Germany, see nuclear exports as a major source of foreign earnings and seek tighter inspection instead of export controls.

West Germany has declared it will go ahead with a planned $4.8 billion nuclear deal with Brazil despite U.S. objections. Washington also has also opposed a French sale of nuclear reactors to Pakistan and Japan's plans to build a nuclear enrichment facility.

Carter met privately for more than 90 minutes with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, and a top U.S. aide said they reached an understanding of differences on the

Warnke sounds danger warning on nuclear war

By ARTHUR L. GAVSHON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke says new developments in strategic weapons could increase dangers of nuclear war and may tempt one of the two superpowers to launch an unanswerable first strike against the other.

That would be "because of the fear you won't be able to strike second," Warnke declared before departing this week for Geneva to meet with his Soviet counterpart, Vladimir Semyonov.

Warnke, in an interview, professed himself "guardedly hopeful" that U.S. and Soviet negotiators will make progress toward a new agreement in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) by early October when a 1974 accord expires.

He and Semyonov will start discussing what he called several "secondary issues" this Wednesday in preparation for a later meeting "on the core issues" between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Warnke, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA), was asked if he feels Moscow shares Washington's view that there must be progress toward a SALT accord if the spread of nuclear weapons is to be stopped or slowed.

He replied: "I believe that the Soviet leadership does recognize that a strategic arms agreement would be in their own national self-interest. There are a variety of reasons. "The arms race is costly. More important, I think they've recognized further technological development could increase the risk at a time of high international crisis. "Take just one example. Both sides have the potential of improving the accuracy and yield of their weapons. Now that would mean there would be some chance that the landbased intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs with ranges up to 4,000 miles) of one side could be substantially destroyed by a first strike by the other side.

"Now as your ICBMs become both more dangerous and more vulnerable, there is a lowering of the nuclear threshold — and there is the temptation to strike first because you fear you won't be able to strike second.

"So that's the kind of development that they must recognize — as we do — as increasing the risk of nuclear war."

Warnke's concept that a first-strike nuclear attack by one or other superpowers might be unanswerable cuts across an assumption held by strategists of both sides for years.

That assumption was that there is a certain stability in the balance of terror achieved by the United States and Russia. Both countries were held to understand that neither could launch a first strike without sustaining immediate and awful reprisals. This theory came to be called "mutually assured destruction" — or, appropriately, MAD for short.

Under the 1972 SALT I pact, the United States and the Soviets agreed to limit their antiballistic missile sites and to curb their land-based and submarine-launched missiles.

The guidelines for a SALT II agreement were drawn in Vladivostok three years ago by then-President Gerald Ford and Communist Party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev.

Move over Brady Bunch...

DALLAS (AP) — Can the mother of eight find happiness married to the father of 15?

Barbara O'Keefe of Dallas can, especially on Mother's Day when the 23 O'Keefe children cook up their annual surprise to commemorate the event.

"Last year each one made a special card for me," the trim, 43-year-old Mrs. O'Keefe said. "They used construction paper and all the appropriate accessories, and each wrote a sentiment or poem of their own," she said. "They are very precious and I saved them all."

This year's Mother's Day event was being kept secret until the big day. Barbara, a widow, and Thomas O'Keefe, a widower, found themselves living on the same street in South Bend, Ind. They began seeing each other.

"At first, I never thought of it as dating," she said. "I thought he was being nice. Suddenly, I realized I was going with him, and a year and a half later (in 1975) we married."

The couple were transferred to Dallas last year when O'Keefe's company relocated to the city.

The O'Keefe "kids" range in age from 5 to 30, with 12 currently in residence at Dallas and another five back-and-forth between home and colleges. Six are married and live in other states.

The problems with such a large family are obvious, but things are working out well.

"We just now got a new table that can seat all of us," Mrs. O'Keefe said. "We had been using a card table set up next to the old dining room table."

She said she wasn't sure how much money the family spends a year on food, but said a guess of $15,000 would only be "a little high."

The O'Keefe's bed down in some 20 beds located in five suite-sized bedrooms. Their home has six bathrooms and two laundry rooms.

One of the biggest problems is getting around. "Like today, getting them to all their soccer and baseball games was a hassle," she said. The family has four cars and four licensed drivers.

Mrs. O'Keefe said all the children living at home pitch in a help with leaning, cooking and other housework.

It all seems to be working, although as Mrs. O'Keefe said, "I'm a little surprised myself."

Phone book reunites Big Spring man, son

BIG SPRING — Almer Silen has an unlikely name.

Fact is, you'll rarely find a Silen in a telephone book anywhere in the land.

But Silen found another Silen in Evansville, Ind., and it turned out to be his son... a son he had not seen or heard of for 36 years.

Talk about a quirk of fate... well, here's one that tales are made of.

This one happened in Indiana, in the Tornado Belt, where Silen and his Big Spring business partner, Ray Crooks, were in a whirlwind tour to market a couple of Silen's inventions — a tornado shelter and a fishing lure.

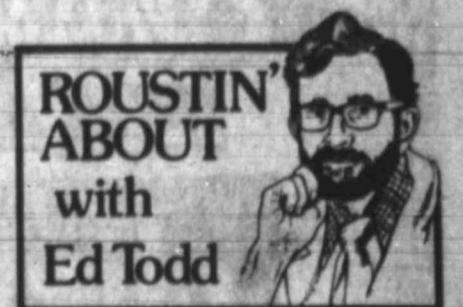

"It wouldn't happen again," said Silen, a gray-haired fellow who has widely traveled the country in his 72 years.

Silen and son parted company in 1941, when the son was just a toddler and the father was a pipefitter at a Portland, Ore., shipyard where Liberty Ships and other sea-faring vessels were being built.

A Silen's marriage broke up, and he moved out and on. He left the mother with the five children he had fathered by her.

Years passed, and A. Silen made no real effort to contact the family, although he knew the whereabouts of his ex-wife and the children.

He reasoned that it would not be "right" to contact the children and possibly create disorder. The children had taken on a stepfather, and A. Silen, too, had re-married and was creating another family.

However, both A. Silen and son had been checking telephone directories in the off chance the name Silen would crop up.

Slim pickings. (Unless you happen to be checking a Lithuanian phone book.)

The quirk happened, and here's how:

A. Silen and his partner were having coffee in an always-open restaurant at Evansville, Ind. They had just about wrapped up their marketing tour and were about ready to drive back home to Big Spring.

Something happened.

A. Silen walked over to the phone stall, got a hold of a Evansville directory to look up instructions on making a long-distance call, and... and the phone book he touched opened to page 191.

"And you know how the pages flip

Protest may help Irish strikers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Technicians at Northern Ireland's main power station threatened Saturday to cut off much of the province's electricity to protest intimidation by striking Protestant militants.

The technicians said the militants had begun an intense campaign of intimidation to force them to join their faltering five-day-old general strike. The workers voted Friday night against taking part in the strike.

Spokesmen for the power workers stressed in a statement that if they stopped work it would not mean they were joining the general strike. They said they could not continue working under "the intolerable strain" of the intimidation.

But the ultimatum by the workers at the Ballylumford plant, which supplies two-thirds of Northern Ireland's electricity, dramatically reversed the dwindling fortunes of the strike.

The Protestant protest action has drawn little public support, and a major cutoff of electricity could paralyze the province's economy — just what the strikers want.

The United Unionist Action Council, organizers of the strike, would not comment on the power men's ultimatum, but sources close to the 22-member strike command said it was unlikely the intimidation would stop.

"Why should it?" one insider commented. "The council wants power cut off and industry brought to a halt and if this is the only way they can do it, they'll do it."

The power men gave no details of the intimidation, but reliable sources reported that despite police protection, many technicians' families had been threatened, mostly by anonymous telephone calls.

Friday's vote at the plant appeared to be a fatal blow to the militants' attempt to bring Northern Ireland to a standstill and force the British government to meet their demands — tougher security measures against Irish Republican Army — IRA — guerrillas and a restoration of the Protestant-dominated provincial parliament, suspended four years ago.

The IRA seeks to unite the predominantly Protestant province with the largely Catholic Irish Republic to the south.

The strike, posing the gravest challenge to British authority here since a similar strike in 1974, was organized by the Rev. Ian Paisley's United Unionist Action Council and was supported by Protestant terrorist groups and the Ulster Defense Association, the biggest of the Protestant street armies.

It has been opposed by Protestant moderates, labor unions and community organizations.

Government officials said Northern Ireland Secretary Roy Mason ordered police to step up protection for the power workers, raising fears of renewed clashes between security forces and the Protestant hardliners.

If the power men carry out their threat, the effect of their walkout was not expected to hit industry until Monday morning. Most factories, which Friday reported 90 per cent turnouts by workers defying the strike, were closed for the weekend.

He came to Midland from Brownwood where he had been manager of the Thornton's store the past two years.

Miller, 33, joined Thornton's in February 1970 in Abilene, where he worked as a salesman, buyer and department manager. Previously he had been in the finance business and worked three years for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. He is a graduate of Draughton Business College.

He is a native of Foley, Ala., where he was graduated from high school. He is an Air Force veteran.

His wife, Carol, and daughters Cynthia, 7, and Melissa, 5, will remain in Brownwood until the close of school.

Board turns down Estes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former West Texas promoter Billie Sol Estes has been denied termination of his parole by a federal parole panel.

Estes had asked for early termination at a hearing in Fort Worth, Tex., last month. He has been out of jail since 1971, and his parole is scheduled to end in 1980.

The decision by the panel means

Estes is still prohibited from self-employment and promotional activities.

The flamboyant Texan, who now lives in Abilene, was convicted in 1963 of fraud and sentenced to 15 years in jail for his part in a multimillion-dollar fertilizer tank swindle. He entered prison in 1965.

Three law enforcement agencies, the IRS, FBI and the Texas Attorney General's office, have confirmed they are looking into Estes' recent business dealings after Mississippi promoter Don Trull turned over about 200 canceled checks, financial statements and letters.

Trull said he took the documents from Estes' office.

Jaworski refutes plea Graduates face of no wrong by Nixon test, Aggies told

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski said Saturday that Nixon's admission that he "let the country down" isn't enough to right his wrongs.

"He did more," Jaworski wrote for the forthcoming issue of Newsweek magazine.

He especially denounced Nixon's claim that "technically I did not commit a crime."

"Why," he asked, "if Mr. Nixon only made mistakes and was not criminally culpable, did he seek a pardon and embrace it? This is not the course of innocent people."

"All 38 members of the House Judiciary Committee considering articles of impeachment, including 10 Republicans who had been Nixon's defenders, some of them his closest friends and devotees, agreed that he was guilty of a crime — of obstruction of justice. A grand jury named him as a co-conspirator in the obstruction of justice ...

"These are hard facts. They cannot be diluted by the passage of time. They cannot be erased by the belated efforts of the man who created them ... I sympathize with his lot. But I cannot concur in his effort to distort historical facts."

The comments written for Newsweek represent a modification of Jaworski's views.

On April 23, 1975, for instance, Jaworski said Nixon "could not have received a fair trial on the obstruction-of-justice issue."

On Oct. 16 of 1975 he said that no where in the final Watergate report was there any criminal evidence against Nixon.

However, earlier, on Feb. 22, 1975, he said, "Nixon should do some soul-searching and tell the American people the truth."

Jaworski's article in Newsweek indicates he believes the resigned president did not do so.

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) — Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. David Jones told new Texas A&M graduates Saturday that those who go on to military officer careers will face problems.

"You will live in the crossed shadows of awesome power and will face competing priorities, scarce funds and scarce resources," Jones told those attending a commencement exercise.

"The nation will depend on you to succeed with what you have against whatever you may face," he said. "It may chasten your failings and overlook your achievements, but it will depend on you."

A&M graduated 108 newly commissioned officers — 38 in the Air Force, 33 Army, 21 Navy and 16 Marine Corps.

A record 2,536 degrees were conferred, including 98 doctorates and 266 master's.

Texas Commissioner of Higher Education Kenneth Ashworth told the graduates that a liberal education has his support. "A liberal education is that education that liberates the mind, that frees each of us from our place and our time and the events we suffer or enjoy or endure," Ashworth said.

Lt. Schumacher was a Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) cadet at A&M, which had an all-male cadet corps until 1972.

She was also awarded a bachelor of science degree in economics in commencement exercises at the school Saturday.

Miss Schumacher, from Gettysburg, Pa., was Texas A&M's first woman cadet to be named a Distinguished Military Student, a prerequisite for regular army commission consideration.

Her first duty tour this summer will be at Ft. Riley, Kan.

McGovern unleashes on Carter

By DON McLEOD

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern accused President Carter on Saturday of abandoning campaign promises and party principle out of fear of big business and a preoccupation with imagery.

In a harsh attack on the new administration, McGovern said, "It sometimes seems difficult to remember who won last fall."

Speaking at the convention of the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, McGovern called on the party "to continue the struggle for the principles the Democratic party stood for" in the election.

"The effort may be lonely for awhile," he said.

The speech was filled with pointed references to Carter's public relations efforts during the first three months of his term, and McGovern repeatedly accused Carter of neglecting action on his own campaign issues and the party platform.

"A strange silence has descended on our political life," said McGovern, the party's 1972 presidential nominee. "We all seem mesmerized by image, taken by symbol. We seem to count the ratings of polls far more than the content of policy."

McGovern attacked Carter's programs on economic recovery, energy, defense, welfare reform and health, saying all were being sacrificed or modified to suit special interests at the expense of the needy.

A week ago, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., another spokesman for liberal Democrats, praised Carter in an interview and said: "Everytime I've been with him, I come back with greater respect for him. I come back feeling that he knows a lot more than his critics give him credit for."

Humphrey continued: "Carter is not a stereotyped, orthodox, ideological liberal. If you expect a Democrat of the old vintage, that's wrong. But he is not really what you call a political conservative. He is in many ways a political maverick. I think he's fiscally conservative, but he's also a kind of populist."

McGovern, in his speech to the ADA, said: "We want to be able to applaud the President's record as strongly as we approved the platform on which he ran. But we will not be a cheering section for tinkling symbols that may signify nothing. We will not agree to substitute cold technocracy for compassionate values."

McGovern said defenders of the status quo were having an undue influence on the administration. "The advocates of change must not be content with labels, symbols and small consolations," he said.

"We must not trade full employment for a town meeting," he said.

McGovern said if the Democratic party fails to keep its promise of economic justice, "which is our oldest pledge and the greatest difference between the parties, then our success will become mere office-mongering for ourselves."

"A new administration was not elected in order to hand out ... jobs to politicians," he said, "but to provide jobs for unemployed millions of Americans."

"Yet in reviewing economic policy this spring, it sometimes seems difficult to remember who won last fall."

"The corporations have cried the wolf of 'business confidence' and the administration has 'run scared,'" McGovern asserted. "Retreats from the President's original economic plan have reduced it from $16 billion to $4 billion this year."

"Last year Jimmy Carter said that full employment was his first priority," McGovern said. "Then it should not be postponed until a second term."

Seabrook protest mushrooms

By H. JOSEF HEBERT

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A week after a peaceful anti-nuclear power protest, most of the 1,400 demonstrators arrested were still in custody Saturday with the issue becoming a battle of wills between the demonstrators and Gov. Meldrim Thomson. Thomson has vowed to have "law and order prevail," but that has become a costly vow as the demonstrators remain adamant that, with few exceptions, they will refuse to post bail unless all those arrested are freed on personal recognizance.

They are being held on charges of trespassing on the construction site of the Seabrook power plant in violation of a court order limiting last weekend's demonstration.

The cost of holding the protesters in four National Guard armories has been estimated by state officials at $50,000 a day, and Thomson has appealed for contributions from "corporations, labor unions and rank and file citizens throughout America" to help pay the bills.

About 200 members of the Clamshell Alliance, which sponsored last weekend's sit-in, staged a peaceful demonstration in the front of the State House in Concord on Saturday. One participant said the protest was to show support of those being confined in the armories.

State and county prosecutors say the protesters are expected to be tried within three or four weeks, but the legal system in Rockingham County, where the demonstration took place last weekend, already shows signs of strain because of the number of people involved.

"It's a real mess," said a spokeswoman for the county three-member board of commissioners. She said the commissioners were concerned about the costs of the many trials and of confinement of those convicted.

At week's end, officials of Hampton District Court said they were still unsure about the scheduling of trials.

Some who needed to return to jobs or school have been released on bail, but no figures were available.

Seventeen men and women were convicted on Thursday on the trespass charge, but 15 of them appealed the conviction and were returned to the armories. State lawyers concede that if the same pattern follows among others convicted, the cases could drag well beyond the summer.

After the judge gave a suspended 15-day jail sentence to the first of the 17 convicted, state Atty. Gen. David Souter went to Hampton to argue that the sentences were inadequate for "one of the most well-planned acts of criminal conduct in the state or the nation."

The sentence was changed and all 17 got 15-day jail terms and $100 fines.

In the armories in Somersworth, Manchester, Dover and Concord, the demonstrators have continued their protest against nuclear power.

"We're holding training sessions for future Seabrook operations and other nonviolent direct action ... This is turning into a training camp for nuclear power opponents," one of the demonstrators in the Concord armory wrote in a note handed to a visiting reporter.

Texans generally view resuming relations with Cuba more favorably than resuming relations with Vietnam, but neither is favored by a majority of Texans, a statewide survey has shown.

A statewide telephone survey conducted by Staples and Staff Inc. marketing research firm the week of April 18 to 23 included questions on Vietnam and Cuba, as well as whether more money should be spent on national defense.

Of the 509 persons responding, only

24 per cent said the U.S. should resume relations with Vietnam, compared to 58 per cent who said it should not. Eighteen per cent were undecided.

On the topic of relations with Cuba, one third (33 per cent) said the U.S. should recognize and resume relations with Cuba. Forty-seven per cent said no and 20 per cent were undecided.

Attitudes toward Cuba, however, vary drastically among population groups. Those under age 35 believe, by a 46 to 36 margin, relations should be resumed, compared to those 55 and older disagreeing by a 62 to 17 margin.

As many men favor closer ties with Cuba as disapprove, but women disapprove by better than a two to one margin.

Those in the Houston and Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan areas believe relations should be resumed by a 41 to 38 margin, while those in smaller towns and rural areas disagree by a 53 to 26 margin. Those with a college education are evenly split (44 to 44) on the subject, while those who are not high school graduates oppose increased ties by a 51 to 26 margin.

All population groups in Texas believe the U.S. should spend more on national defense, the survey results said.

Fifty-six per cent of those questioned said more should be spent on defense. Twenty-nine per cent said more should not be spent and 15 per cent were undecided.

Overall, men are slightly more likely than women to favor increased defense expenditure. Sixty-one per cent said more should be spent, compared to 50 per cent of the women.

Amarillo likely Davis trial site

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — District Court Judge Tom Cave is expected Monday to name Amarillo as the site and June 6 as the date for the murder trial of millionaire industrialist Cullen Davis.

Cave also is expected to disclose during the change of venue hearing whether he will remain as the presiding judge.

According to published speculation, it appears Cave will surrender jurisdiction to District Court Judge George Dowlen of Amarillo if the trial is moved to the Panhandle community.

Davis, 43, is accused of killing two persons and wounding two others at his $6 million mansion last summer. He will be tried first for the shooting death of his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12. A previous attempt to try Davis here ended April 13 in a mistrial when Cave cited a juror for misconduct.

Davis has been jailed here without bond since Aug. 20, when murder charges were upgraded to capital murder—murder in the commission of another felony.

Judges in five courts have upheld prosecutors' arguments that Davis, in effect, burglarized his own home by defying a divorce court restraining order barring him from the mansion.

Davis also is charged with the capital murder of former Texas Christian basketball player Stan Farr, 30, and the attempted murder of Davis' estranged wife Priscilla and Gus Gavrel Jr., 22.

Amarillo surfaced at mid-week as the most likely trial site when it was learned that Cave had toured the Potter County court and detention facilities.

The Fort Worth judge met with Dowlen in Amarillo but neither would discuss details of that conference.

Cave did disclose during a judicial conference at Huntsville Thursday that he had ruled out Austin, San Antonio, Houston and Lubbock as possible trial sites.

He indicted earlier that El Paso and Odessa were long shot possibilities.

Andujar relishes Saturday as GOP woman governor

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sen. Betty Andujar was sworn in Saturday as the first woman Republican governor-for-a-day, but predicted a GOP woman would officially hold the office "in the foreseeable future."

"I think there will be a woman Republican governor of Texas in the foreseeable future," said Mrs. Andujar, 64, of Fort Worth, after her elaborate inaugural ceremonies. "My nomination would be, among others, Anne Armstrong."

Mrs. Armstrong, the former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain who is being touted by some as a possible Republican gubernatorial candidate in 1978, was unable to attend the ceremonies because of illness.

Asked if she would run for governor, Mrs. Andujar replied, "Well, I'm going to enjoy this day. Then I'm going to contemplate my own future."

More than 1,000 persons crowded into the Senate Chamber to watch Mrs. Andujar sworn into the ceremonial post by Chief Justice Joe Greenhill of the Texas Supreme Court.

Mrs. Andujar is president pro tem of the Senate and becomes governor when Gov. Dolph Briscoe and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are out of the state.

Hobby's office said he was in Mexico, while

Briscoe's office would only say the governor was "officially out of the state."

"She had made her own record in the Senate and it is good," said Sen. A.M. Aikin Jr., D-Paris, who presided over the ceremonies. "I don't like Betty Andujar, I love Betty Andujar. She's a wonderful lady. She has made a record in the Texas Senate that she can well be proud of."

Former Gov. Allan Shivers cracked, "Gov. Andujar, I want to suggest that your administration will be the next-to-most successful the state has ever had."

In her "inaugural" speech, Mrs. Andujar, the diminutive mother of two and grandmother of four, praised the family structure of the United States and said it is vital for the country to survive.

As governor, Mrs. Andujar signed a series of proclamations, one honoring her husband Dr. John J. Andujar, a Fort Worth physician. Another proclamation designated the town of Mansfield, which is in her district, as temporary capitol if anything happens to Austin.

Her Senate salary of just under $20 a day rose to the governor's level of $183.

She was honored Saturday afternoon by a luncheon attended by state Republican leaders.

Tower exhorts elderly

DALLAS (AP) — Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., told a meeting of retired persons Saturday that they are a "fledgling power center" and that he expects them to become a powerful lobbying group.

In remarks prepared for delivery to the Texas Association of Senior Citizens, Tower cited the rising median age in the U.S. and said he is encouraged by the prospect of a nation of older Americans.

"I shall not miss the somewhat embarrassing accounts of people who have become millionaires from the sale of 'pet rocks,'" Tower said. "Perhaps we will have more good music, better TV shows and movies, better books and a little more decorum in public places."

Cubans training Ethiopians for war on rebels

By BRIAN JEFFRIES

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Cuban military advisers are helping train thousands of Ethiopian peasants and workers for a "people's war" against antigovernment factions, Western diplomats say.

The diplomats said about 20 Cuban military advisers were in Ethiopia, with another 200 expected to arrive soon.

When Fidel Castro made a brief stop here during his Africa tour in March, Ethiopian leader Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam asked the Cuban president for advisers to help defeat resistance groups fighting in northern and western Ethiopia, the sources said.

Cuban troops helped a Marxist faction win a three-way civil war in Angola last year, and at least 10,000 Cubans are believed still in that central African nation. Cuban advisers have also been reported in Mozambique and a few other African nations.

Ethiopia's Marxist government has built two training camps near this capital city capable of handling 200,000 recruits. Truck convoys rumbling back and forth from the camps are becoming a familiar sight.

Last Thursday night, 56 trucks were seen, each jammed with some 50 ragged young Ethiopians. As they rode in the night darkness, they clapped, cheered and chanted slogans.

Two regular army soldiers driving a jeep with a machine gun brought up the rear of the convoy. It was not clear whether the jeep was there to guard the convoy or to deter conscripts from leaving.

At the camps the conscripts are put through a 20-day training course.

The government has not said how this "people's army" will be deployed. But Western diplomats say it could be used to back regular army units in Gondar, formerly Begemdir, province.

Between 2,000 and 6,000 guerrillas of the rightist Ethiopian Democratic Union (EDU) have captured several towns in the province since the beginning of the year.

The EDU was founded in 1975 by Ethiopians exiled by the late Emperor Haile Selassie. It is led by Gen. Iyasu Mengesha, who has been joined by soldiers and middle class professionals fleeing the Marxist upheavals here.

The EDU is portrayed by Ethiopia's government-controlled media as fighting for a return of feudalism, which Ethiopia's revolution replaced. The EDU promises non-Marxist civilian rule.

"I am willing to fight against the EDU," said one Ethiopian worker, "I don't want the Emperor's men to return."

The other possible target for attack is the northern province of Eritrea, where secessionist guerrillas of the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) have waged a hit-and-run war for 15 years.

Mengistu last week reported heavy fighting around Tessenai and Alighider in Eritrea. He said the military situation in the province, where guerrillas this year have captured town after town, is deteriorating.

The timing of the offensive is open to speculation, however. The rainy season has begun, and when it peaks in July much of the country will be a quagmire.

Sources said it was uncertain whether a hastily trained peasant army would be able to operate in such conditions.

It also was not clear whether the peasant army would be thrown into battle alongside the 25,000 regular troops.

Last June tens of thousands of peasants marched into Eritrea to fight the rebels, who ambushed and quickly scattered them. The regular army reportedly fired at the fleeing peasants.

Because of this, Western analysts said any new peasants' march will concentrate on the weaker and less experienced EDU forces.

The government-controlled press, radio and television have mounted a massive propaganda buildup for the coming offensive, which the government calls "the red campaign to crush invaders."

The militia units now being trained also are expected to be better armed than their predecessors.

Western intelligence sources say Ethiopia recently imported some 45,000 weapons from Eastern bloc nations, including Kalashnikov and AK47 rifles.

Zaire, helpers recapture Sanikosa

By MATT FRANJOLA

KINSHASA (AP) — A joint Zairean-Moroccan task force recaptured the agricultural town of Sanikosa in Shaba Province today after "bitter fighting" with rebel troops, the government news agency AZAP reported.

It was the second town recaptured in two days by the task force, pushing westward from the copper-mining center of Kolwezi. The government and Moroccan troops on Friday retook Kawayongo, a small village of several hundred people on the rail line leading to the Angolan border.

Both towns are just east of the mission town of Kasaji, 150 miles west of Kolwezi, where a dozen British missionaries were stationed before the rebels — most them exiled Lunda tribesmen — invaded the province from bases in neighboring Angola two months ago.

The government news agency said the rebels lost "many dead" in the fighting, but it gave no figures. It did not mention casualties among the task force.

In a sweep of the area, the government troops captured one prisoner and a large supply of ammunition and supplies, including Soviet-made rocket launchers and mortars, the announcement said. The prisoner was identified as the operator of a SAM4 surface to air missile unit.

At Kawayongo Friday, the Zairean forces captured Soviet-made SAM7 shoulder-held heat-seeking antiaircraft missiles, AZAP said.

The rebels are believed led by former officers of a secessionist army that tried to separate Shaba, then called Katanga, from the rest of Zaire.

The rebels occupied about one-third of the province in early March but have been put on the defensive since the government launched a two-pronged offensive in mid-April. The government force is backed by some 1,500 Moroccan troops.

A number of American Methodist missionaries trapped at Kapanga were last heard from 15 days ago, travelers from the area said. The missionaries then said they were all safe and well.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE

A mortgage is the pledge of your home to secure a loan. If you fall behind in your monthly payments, the lender is entitled to foreclose. Quite simply, he can sell your home in order to recover his money, though in most states you have the right to reacquire your foreclosed property by paying the mortgage and covering the foreclosure costs.

If the home is sold under foreclosure, you would get any cash left over after the loan is paid. (The court will oversee the transaction to protect your rights.)

Fortunately, foreclosures on family homes don't happen often these days, even during financial crunches. Most lenders prefer to work out some arrangement with you rather than foreclose. Your best protection is to keep up mortgage payments. But if you get into a jam, tell the lender right away and see if you can figure out a compromise about payments.

If you have any questions on this subject or any other aspect of real estate, feel free to phone or drop in at DON JOHNSON realtors 7602 Andrews Hwy. Phone 683-5333. We're here to help! Come in for your free copy of "Homes for Living" magazine.

Panamanian leader warns against failure in talks

CANCUN, Mexico (AP) —

Panamanian leader Gen. Omar Torrijos says the U.S. Canal Zone will find itself "without water, without lights, without a canal and without gringos" if negotiations over a new Panama Canal treaty fail.

Torrijos made the comment Friday when a reporter asked whether Panama would close the canal or cut off the zone's water supply if the negotiations, which resume Tuesday in Washington, are not successful.

Torrijos, speaking at a news conference in this Yucatan Peninsula resort, said the Carter administration has not yet committed itself to completing the negotiations.

"We have to have a definition from the government of Mr. Carter during this new round of negotiations," Torrijos said. "I understand that his administration is a new one and it requires time to get to know the problem thoroughly."

The talks will be the second round with the Carter administration and the 15th round since 1968, he noted.

Torrijos has said previously that Panama would resort to guerrilla warfare to gain control of the canal, but he expressed hope Friday the negotiations would be successful.

Panama wants ownership of the canal and sovereignty over the Canal Zone by the end of the century. The United States was granted control "in perpetuity" under a treaty signed after the United States helped Panama gain independence from Colombia in 1903.

Torrijos was in Cancun to seek support on the canal issue from Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

Lopez Portillo told reporters the United States should negotiate a settlement with Panama and said the issue "will condition future relations between the United States and Latin America."

Panama's foreign minister, Nicolas Gonzalez Revilla, said in an interview here "there haven't been any satisfactory advances in the negotiations" since Carter named his negotiating team.

Pravda raps U.S. once more

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist party newspaper Pravda claims the United States is "impeding and, in effect, torpedoing" progress toward East-West agreement on disarmament.

In a 3,000 word editorial, the newspaper accused the United States of "using the slogan of disarmament solely for demagogical purposes, in the interests of playing a political game."

Pravda said U.S. proposals offered in March by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance were "really aimed at attaining unilateral advantages and therefore absolutely unrealistic ones."

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko leveled a similar charge when he turned down new nuclear arms reduction proposals.

The American package called for reductions in nuclear weapons and delivery systems held by each side. As an alternative, the United States offered to ratify weapons ceilings agreed to in principle by Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev and then-President Gerald R. Ford in 1973.

Vance and Gromyko are scheduled to resume arms limitation talks May 18 in Geneva, Switzerland.

Pravda said there already are enough Soviet proposals on the table to "fill more than one thick volume," and the Soviet Union is ready to talk at any time about any of them.

'Fannie Mae' fighting off government

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Federal National Mortgage Association, a $32 billion corporate giant, is fighting to prevent the government from exerting stronger control over its operations in the mortgage market.

Usually called Fannie Mae, the profit-making company, which was spun off by the government in 1968, is resisting legislation that would add public members to its board of directors and require it to disclose information as public agencies must do under the Freedom of Information Act.

The Carter administration is sharply divided on the issue. Some high officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development favor more public control to induce Fannie Mae to invest more heavily in low-income housing. The Treasury Department is opposed.

Fannie Mae has hired the Washington law firm of Williams & Connolly to furnish legal ammunition against the move by Sens. William Proxmire (D-Wis.) and Alan Cranston (D-Calif.). In a memorandum, the firm has declared that the legislation "is designed to undermine shareholder control" of Fannie Mae and would dilute stockholders' property rights.

Proxmire contends that the company's board "is overwhelmingly on the side of private interests and has little consideration for the public interest. There is no consideration for the needs of low-income housing. Even the so-called public members on the board represent the industry."

Most important, if Fannie Mae gets in trouble, it has a $2.25 billion line of credit to rely on at the Treasury.

Recent presidential actions make Carter's stock rise

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter's stock appears to be rising on Wall Street.

The many economic conservatives in the financial world tended to view Carter carefully during last year's campaign and through his early days in office.

But a number of the President's actions recently—notably his withdrawal of the $50-per-person tax rebate proposal last month—have led Wall Streeters to the conclusion that he is a good deal more conservative on economic matters than they had earlier believed.

This shift in perception was underscored last Tuesday when Chairman Arthur Burns of the Federal Reserve Board, who is widely known for his conservative viewpoint, made a point of praising Carter.

Burns, in his quarterly report to the Senate Banking Committee, described Carter as "courageous" in putting as much emphasis as he has on fighting inflation.

The federal budget director, Bert Lance, reported the same day that members of the administration had begun having monthly luncheon meetings with Burns.

As one broker succinctly put it: "Personally I'm a lot happier with the Russians calling Carter names and Burns praising him than I would be if it were the other way around."

A good many market analysts, meanwhile, maintained that the revised image of Carter was helping the stock market.

Despite rising interest rates and an unfavorable wholesale price report for April, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 9.84 to 936.74 in the past week.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index climbed 1.05 to 99.49, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .65 at 54.31.

Big Board volume averaged 21.21 million shares a day, up from 19.55 million the week before.

The Dow gained ground in each of the week's first four sessions, staying on the plus side Thursday despite the government's report that the wholesale price index rose at a two-digit annual rate for the third consecutive month in April.

The average did give up some of its gains with a 6.70 point drop on Friday, after the Fed issued weekly figures that showed the money supply continuing to expand a good deal faster than the central bank wants it to.

Among those analysts maintaining that the market has benefited from a shift in the perception of Carter was Kenneth W. Johnson at Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood.

"The whole tone lately has been that Carter isn't the freespending type of politician some people had feared he might be," he said.

Merrill Lynch Economics maintained in a recent report: "Prospects for the economy took a definite turn for the better in mid-April with the scrapping of the rebate portion of the Carter administration's stimulus program."

The firm maintains that the move increased the chances of stable economic growth this year. "Inflation rates are now also expected to be slightly lower this year and next, but a moderate uptrend remains likely."

In addition, the firm said, "The Federal Reserve was potentially facing a dilemma in stabilizing financial markets and monetary aggregates during the spring and summer as the rebate payments made their way into the spending stream."

"The Fed's job is not as difficult now."

Mahon plans to attend hearings on cotton dust

WASHINGTON — U.S. Congressman George Mahon announced today that he will be in Lubbock on Tuesday and will testify at the field hearings of the OSHA cotton dust exposure standards.

Prior to departing for Lubbock Monday, he will meet with Dr. Eula Bingham, the new assistant secretary of labor for occupational safety and health.

Mahon will urge Secretary Bingham to abandon strict cotton dust exposure standards, pointing out that if fully implemented, they would tend to paralyze the entire cotton industry.

In a statement to the press, Mahon said, "OSHA is the most unpopular agency in the federal government because of some of the foolish and irresponsible action the organization has taken in the past."

Continuing, Mahon said, "It would be indefensible for OSHA to require cotton gins and cotton seed oil mills to spend an estimated $500 million for plant equipment when there is not adequate proof a genuine health hazard exists in these industries; and I am appearing at the hearings on Tuesday to impress this fact on OSHA officials responsible for writing the proposed standards."

Texas unhappy at TV violence

A large majority of Texans believe there is too much violence on television and that children watch too much television.

Staples and Staff marketing and research firm conducted a statewide telephone survey of 506 Texans the week of March 18 to 23.

Of those questioned, 73 per cent believe there is too much violence on television today. Among women, 80 per cent think there is too much violence, but only 66 per cent of the men surveyed believe there is.

Similarly, those over age 55 believe there is too much violence on television by an 82 to 16 margin, but those in the under 35 age bracket agree by only a 67 to 30 margin.

Eighty per cent of those surveyed believe children watch too much television.

Of those parents of children between 3 and 15 years old, 68 per cent said they monitor their children's television viewing.

student to begin the registration process, so the earlier a student gets a permit, the better his chance of getting a schedule which suits his needs, Windsor said.

Summer session classes begin on June 1 and continue through July 1. The second summer session registration is July 5. Classes begin July 6 and close August 10.

Summer lecture classes are conducted from 8 to 9:50 a.m., 10 to 11:50 a.m., 6 to 7:50 p.m., and 8 to 9:50 p.m. Those classes which require labs have labs scheduled in the afternoons.

Automotive technology and welding technology classes will meet for eight weeks from June 1 to July 21 from 6 to 10:30 p.m.

An interim summer session also is offered at Midland College from May 16 to May 27.

The interim session provides an opportunity for students to earn three hours of college credit in just two weeks. There is no preregistration, and registration will be conducted at 8:30 a.m. May 16. Classes meet from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1:30 to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Classes being offered during the interim session include the following: English 2301, masterpieces of the western world; English 2302, masterpieces of the western world II; History 2301, United States history to 1877; History 2302, United States history from 1877;

Also, Government 2301, state and federal government; Government 2302, state and federal government; Speech 2301, fundamentals of speech, and Speech 2302, business and professional speech.

An additional interim course, Biology 2201, marine biology, has been filled.

Additional information about summer sessions and interim session may be obtained from the Office of Student Services in the Administration Building or from Dr. Raymond Yell, dean of instruction.

Cold remedies really useless

Dear Dr. Solomon: The other day, on a TV news program I heard the science reporter say that the oral cold remedies you can buy without a doctor's prescription do no good. What do you think of them?—Mike D.

Dear Mike: Very little. That reporter was quite right, except that he didn't go far enough in my opinion. Most of these over-the-counter combination capsules and spanules (timed-release capsules) are not worth their cost, and some may actually do more harm than good. Many of them contain up to three different antihistamines, plus a couple of decongestants and painkillers, maybe with an anti-cough agent, expectorant, antacid, laxative and caffeine thrown in for good measure.

The Midland Genealogical Society will conduct a beginners' workshop from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in the Genealogical Section of the Midland County Public Library.

The next regular meeting of the society will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Community Room of the Commercial Bank & Trust building.

By MARY KELLY
Escanaba Daily Press

FAYETTE, Mich. (AP) — A normal middle-class suburban life style is exactly what Lewis VanSickle wants to avoid.

He left just such a situation in the Lansing area about four years ago and has set up housekeeping on a remote few acres of land in Fayette, on a peninsula east of Escanaba.

The self-styled hermit is thriving, growing his own food and ignoring, for the most part, the rest of human society.

VanSickle is probably as self-sufficient as a person can be in 20th century America. Providing most of his own needs, he spent less than $300 last year.

He lives in an ancient but sturdy camper trailer that is functional and without frills. He heats and cooks with wood, uses a kerosene lamp and carries water from Fayette State Park. Even the soap he uses is homemade. A small generator provides power for a light in his root cellar and a radio.

Although he isolates himself from people as much as possible, VanSickle is surrounded by animals and has a deep concern for their care and well-being.

There is Mildred, a mammoth sow who is temperamental and has eyes smaller than raisins. Ben is a black Labrador Retriever who he calls "dumb and useless," but who is bursting with energy and good doggy happiness.

There are cats, including one VanSickle calls Nuisance, and an assortment of geese, chickens and turkeys.

VanSickle does not fit the stereotype of the grouchy old hermit. He is 42 and has excellent health and vitality.

Seattle Slew Kentucky Derby winner

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Unbeaten Seattle Slew got into high gear turning for home and shot through the tunnel of noise that is the Churchill Downs homestretch to win the $267,200 Kentucky Derby Saturday.

The 1-2 favorite shot under the wire in front of Run Dusty Run, with another stretch runner, Sanhedrin.

third. SEATTLE SLEW, who was near the pace all the way to the final turn before making his winning drive, covered the 1 1/4 miles on this warm, muggy day in 2:02 1/5.

As the field of 15 3-year-olds charged around the final turn, it appeared that Slew might taste defeat for the first time in his seven-race career.

But when much-criticized jockey Jean Cruguet asked Slew to move, the dark bay son of Bold Reasoning came up with a winning answer.

Seattle Slew joined Majestic Prince as unbeaten Derby favorites to reach the winner's circle for the famed blanket of roses that shoots a horse's value into the millions of dollars.

THE WINNER got home 1 1/4 lengths in front of Run Dusty Run. Sanhedrin was a neck further back and 3/4 lengths in front of Get the Axe, who carried Willie Shoemaker on his 20th Derby trip.

Shortly after the finish of the race, Jorge Velasquez, who rode Sanhedrin, claimed foul against Run Dusty Run and jockey Darrel McHargue for interference in the stretch. The foul claim was quickly rejected.

Seattle Slew had trouble right at the start of this 103rd running of America's most famous horse race. He stumbled coming out of the gate but recovered quickly and roared off in pursuit of For The Moment. Seattle Slew had the lead over For The Moment going into the clubhouse turn but For The Moment took it back.

For The Moment led Seattle Slew down the backstretch with Bob's Dusty third. Cruguet hit Seattle Slew seven times with the whip in the first half of the backstretch to get him moving.

That big move came on the turn as Run Dusty Run, Steve's Friend and Sanhedrin also began to pick up steam.

But Seattle Slew's move was the strongest.

THE WINNER, owned by Karen Taylor and trained by Billy Turner, paid $3, $2.80 and $2.80. Run Dusty Run, coupled in the betting with Bob's Dusty as a Smiley Adams-trained entry, returned $3.40 and $3.20. John Galbreath's Sanhedrin was $4.60 to show.

Completing the order of finish after Get the Axe were Steve's Friend, Papeote, Giboulee, For The Moment, Affiliate, Flag Officer, Bob's Dusty, Sir Sir, Nostalgia, Western Wind and Best Person. Each competitor carried 126 pounds.

"They made him work today," Turner said, looking a little shaky in the winner's circle. "I was afraid that they'd get him hurt. They had him in really tight early on. He moved when the time came."

"I was absolutely thrilled with the race. It showed that when he is hooked, he doesn't give anything up."

"I was happy... I knew he could do it," said Cruguet, the Frenchman who had been criticized by other trainers and in the press for his handling of Seattle Slew, although he has gotten the 1976 2-year-old champion home first every time out.

Although the stewards rejected Velasquez' claim of foul, the Panamanian who rode Sanhedrin thought Run Dusty Run cost him the race.

"I thought I had it won in the last eighth of a mile, but then he intimidated me," Velasquez said of Run Dusty Run. "He came in on my horse. I just filed a foul claim."

A FOUL claim has never been upheld in the history of this race, which has been called "the most exciting two minutes in sports."

Saturday, it was the most exciting two minutes, 21-5 seconds for the Taylors, a young couple from White Swan, Wash.; Cruguet, a jockey who once lost a sure Derby favorite because of injury, and Turner, a trainer who once was fired from handling a horse who went on to win the Derby.

Mickey Taylor, who is in the logging business, bought Seattle Slew for his wife at a yearling sale in Lexington, Ky. He paid $17,500, a very modest price in the yearling business. The purchase was made on the advice of veterinarian Dr. Jim Hill, who when he first saw Seattle Slew said: "If that colt isn't a runner, my name isn't Jim Hill."

Seattle Slew put Hill's name in all capital letters Saturday with a courageous performance in which he simply would not let challengers pass him when the drive to victory began.

Seattle Slew is insured for $3.5 million and the Taylors reportedly had already rejected a $7 million offer to sell him. Both of those figures will be increased now that the Slew is on the road to a possible Triple Crown.

THE NEXT STEP comes May 21 in the 13-16th-mile Preakness at Pimlico, Md., where he will meet some of his Derby rivals plus some fresh challengers. The final step in the Triple Crown, last won by Secretariat in 1973, will be the 1 1/4-mile Belmont Stakes June 11.

But Triple Crown title or not, Seattle Slew is thoroughbred racing's Horse of the Hour now.

"It wasn't easy," Karen Taylor said.

And she was right.

In Seattle Slew's six previous starts, he had won by from 3/4 to 9/4 lengths and was in the lead at every call of those races.

"I'm in a state of shock," Karen Taylor said. But with a colt like Seattle Slew, most any state has to be a happy one.

And today it was a rich one with the Derby victory worth $214,700.

It was a day of vindication for Cruguet, who has known hard luck in his career both in this country and in France.

He was the rider on Hoist The Flag, the unbeaten early Derby favorite in 1971.

El Paso bombs Midland Cubs in 15-1 rout

BY TED BATTLES

Gil Kubski continued his phenomenal batting binge against Midland, Cubs Manager Jim Saul was thumbed out of the game and El Paso's Diablos squared the Texas League series with a 15-1 trouncing of Midland at Cubs Stadium Saturday night.

For five innings it was a whale of a pitchers duel between Midland's Jeff Albert, 0-3, and El Paso's Bob Ferris and then all of a sudden it was all over.

The Diablos erupted for six runs in the sixth with Jim Anderson's whistling line drive to left for a three-run homer giving the invaders a 5-1 lead and ending the game, to all intents and purposes.

After that the game became a candidate for federal disaster aid.

SAUL GOT his invitation to leave after the Anderson homer. Catcher Duane Gustavson went to the mound to confer with the shaken Albert and Saul joined them. When Plate Umpire Steve Boga came out to speed up the game, there were words and suddenly Saul was thumbed, but not before getting his say.

"I thumbed him for what he said," Boga said. "It was a close pitch, I balled it and on the next pitch (3-2) count, Anderson homered. It was the classic situation. It happens to everybody, but this was the first time it happened to me, so I guess it was my turn."

"Nothing was said on the ball call until after the home run," he added.

"No, there was no buildup. There were some questions in the early innings, but no complaining then until the homer," Boga said.

Against Midland this season, Kubski is now 20 hits for 31 at bats. And he hasn't only picked on Midland. "I've never been over .400 with this many at bats before. Not in any kind of baseball. Not even Little League," says Gil.

WHAT'S EVEN more unusual to the native Texan who has spent his recent years in California is that "Normally, I'm a slow starter. Last year I was batting .077 going into June and was hitting .300 by July. I'm a streak hitter, but normally I'll hit around .280 and build up my average to hot spells during the streaks."

This is Kubski's second year in the Texas League and the first year he has played regularly. His first two years of baseball after attending the University of California-Northridge, were at Salinas.

For many Texans his name is a reminder of the past. Gil's dad managed at San Angelo in the mid-1950s and then at Roswell, N.M., when it was a Pittsburgh farm in the old Sophomore League in 1958-59.

WILLIE STARGELL was a kid outfielder with Roswell then. "He moved in and lived with us for the summer when no one would rent him an apartment. I've been a Stargell fan ever since, not only because of his ability, but because of what he is as a person. It's hard to believe now what it was like for a Black ball player in those days."

Gil led off with three straight singles and then capped the night with a two-run single in the ninth. That makes him 8-for-11 in this series alone.

"He's not a power hitter," says Manager Bob Rodgers, "but he's makes contact and has good speed."

THE WAY Ferris, a rangy righthander out of the University of Maryland, was pitching, and the Cubs were supporting Albert, it was El Paso's game all the way. Midland managed just six hits off Ferris, now 3-1, while committing the same number of errors.

Jay Peters had led off the fatal sixth with a solo homer to right, his fifth, all against Midland.

And then there was Kubski. Although he collected four hits and batted in three runs, the Cubs did better than usual. They got him out twice, although a run scored on one of those outs.

Aggies gain berth in national meet

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Southwest Conference announced Saturday that regular season baseball champion Texas A&M will get an automatic bid to the national tournament regardless of how the Aggies do in the SWC postseason tournament.

In releasing the format for the first postseason tournament, SWC commissioner Cliff Speegle said that the tournament champion will represent the conference in the first round NCAA playoffs at Arlington the last weekend of May.

However, Speegle said, if the champion Aggies do not win the tournament they still will get an automatic at-large tournament bid even if they are not the tournament runnerup. If A&M wins the tournament, the runnerup will get the at-large designation.

The tournament format was announced Saturday at the conclusion of the four-day closed spring business meeting of SWC faculty representatives and administrators. Texas, Baylor and Arkansas, who finished second through fourth, respectively, in the SWC, will be in the tournament in addition to A&M.

The outgoing president of the conference, Dr. Kenneth Herrick of Texas Christian, would not confirm that the league representatives discussed the recruiting of Odessa's Darrell Shepard.

"We've never officially announced an investigation of an individual or a school and we'll continue to follow that policy"

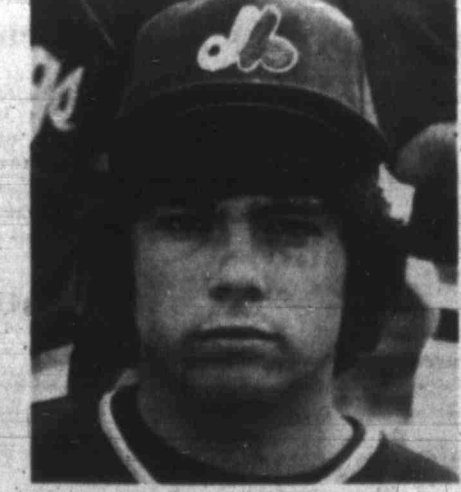

There was just one lead change Saturday, as the eighth week of competition in the Texas State Bowling Association Tournament got underway at the Super Bowl in Midland and Busby's Lanes in Odessa.

Ronald Riffel and Darwin Toner of Austin took the Class A doubles lead away from G. Lester and B.J. Davis of Canyon, by rolling an 1197. Lester and Davis had held down the top position prior to that with a 1190, and now move down into the second spot.

There were three minor shufflings lower down the line. San Antoni Stars rolled a 2806 to move into third place in the Class A team competition, Carlos Herrejon of San Antonio jumped into second in C singles with a 630, and Michael Joseph of El Paso is in third in the Class B All Events competition with a 1769.

MIDLAND AND LEE squared off Saturday in the finale for the 1977 baseball season with the Rebels posting a 6-5 come-from-behind win in the eighth inning. Brad Wright and Jimmy Zachry stood out for Lee and the Bulldogs. (Story on 4-B).

Rebels scrimmage, Bulldogs rest during spring football workouts

Robert E. Lee's Rebels scrimmaged Saturday morning while Midland High's gridders took the day off as the first week of spring drills ended.

Coach Jim Acree's Rebs went at it hard and fast with quarterback candidate Todd Clements going down with a knee injury during the morning session.

Clements did break on one long touchdown run on a keeper play and the knee injury is not real serious. He bruised his left knee.

One other Lee player — running back and place-kicker, Jerry Moore was not as lucky, suffering a knee injury Thursday and he underwent surgery Friday.

Midland Coach Jerry Hopkins was pleased with his team and gave them Saturday off after a good drill on Friday.

"We were happy with the freshmen players and feel the varsity is coming along well, especially since we got only a limited view of the varsity in the first week," said Hopkins.

Acree, meanwhile, likes the way the varsity is hitting. "Our contact work is good, but we have a lot of young players," added Acree.

Only 1 change in keg meet

There was just one lead change Saturday, as the eighth week of competition in the Texas State Bowling Association Tournament got underway at the Super Bowl in Midland and Busby's Lanes in Odessa.

Midland College men capture Region V tennis championship

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

You'd never guess by looking at him that Tsuyoshi Fukui's Japanese ancestors had the audacity to bomb the hell out of Pearl Harbor and declare war on us 26 years ago. He's such a personable little guy, who seems like he wouldn't hurt a fly.

But don't let those friendly eyes and that amiable Eastern smile of his deceive you. Fukui is a killer all right, and Saturday on the Midland College tennis courts in broad daylight, with winning as his only motive, a tennis racquet as his murder weapon and a radar-aided assortment of placement shots as his "motus operandi," the 19-year-old youngster from the Land of the Rising Sun and New Mexico

Military Institute committed a double homicide and walked off with the men's singles title as the Region V Junior College Tennis Tournament came to a close.

Fukui first took care of Midland College's Denis McKeown, 6-4, 6-7, 7-5 in the morning semifinals, and made it a twin killing in the afternoon finals, by defeating McKeown's teammate, Tony Luttrell in straight sets, 6-4, 6-3.

The Chaps gained ample revenge a little bit later on though, as Derek Edmonds and Reg Luttrell won the men's doubles crown, and MC beat out NMMI for the men's team title. Midland finished first with 16 points, followed by NMMI with 13. Odessa gained the third and final qualifying berth for the men's national tournament to be held in Scottsdale, Ariz., May 22-28, by finishing third with five points.

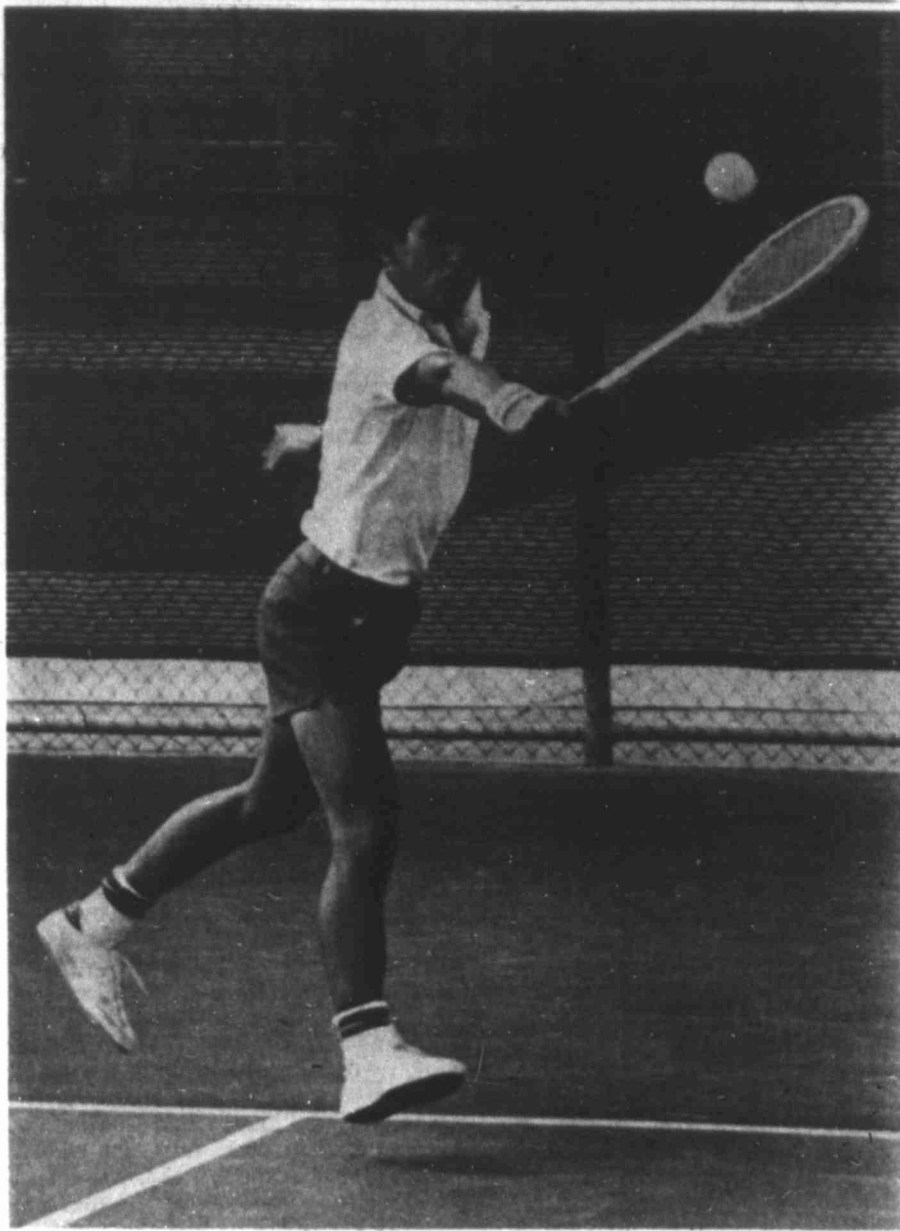

ODESSA WON both the women's singles and doubles titles Saturday, and captured that team championship with room to spare. The Wranglers had 13 points, while Midland was a distant second with six. Both schools earned berths in the women's national event however, which is scheduled for these same MC courts, May 16-19.

Sandy Collins defeated Odessa teammate Andrea Galloway, 6-4, 6-3 in the finals of the singles event, and Galloway and Cindy Menna took the doubles crown by beating Collins and Debbie Phillips in the championship match, 4-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Pittsburgh outslugs Cincinnati by 12-10

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Consecutive home runs in the fifth inning by Al Oliver and Willie Stargell, his second of the game, put Pittsburgh ahead and the Pirates held on for a 12-10 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday in a nationally televised slugfest.

Rivers, White spark Yankees

It was the 12th triumph in 13 games for the Pirates, and their seventh in a row. The Reds, off to their worst start since 1971, fell to 10-14 this season with their third straight loss.

NEW YORK (AP) — Mickey Rivers and Roy White slammed three-run homers and Graig Nettles added a solo shot to power Don Gullett and the New York Yankees to an 11-2 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

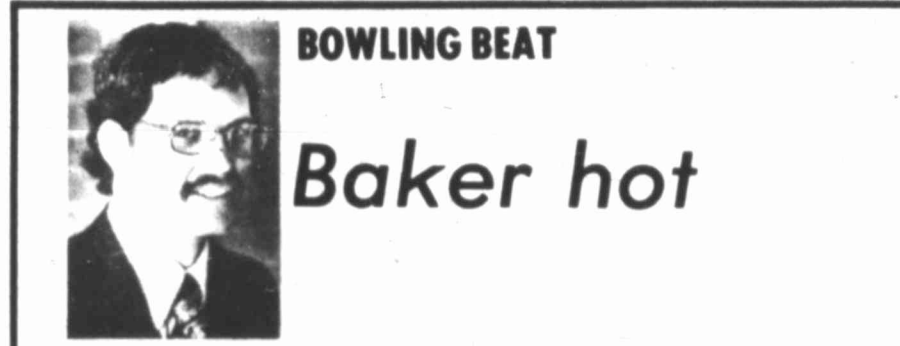

The triumph, coupled with Milwaukee's loss to Detroit, gave the defending champion Yankees sole possession of first place in the American League East.

Gullett, 2-2, surrendered a run in the first inning and then blanked the A's until Wayne Gross hit his seventh home run of the season in the ninth.

The Yankees nicked Oakland starter Rick Langford, 3-1, for two runs in the bottom of the first on singles by Willie Randolph, Rivers and Thurman Munson plus a double play.

MC men take tennis crown

right now, had to go three sets for the first time all year long in his semifinal clash with McKeown, and many felt the time was ripe for Fukui to fall. Especially after Tony Luttrell and McKeown teamed up to beat Fukui and his NMMI partner Alberto Jimenez in straight sets in a men's doubles semifinal match. Luttrell and McKeown eventually lost to Edmonds and Reg Luttrell in the doubles finals, 6-4, 6-7, 6-3.

But what people felt didn't matter to Fukui. He whittled away at Luttrell, ripping uncanny backhand passing shots by the MC Aussie everytime he tried to rush the net. With the first set tied 4-4, Fukui held service in the ninth game and broke Luttrell's in the tenth for the 6-4 win.

THE SECOND set was all Fukui, as Luttrell's serve completely abandoned him. The Japanese netter broke his serve in the second and eighth games to win going away.

The championship match was rather anti-climactic after Fukui's three-set-one and a half hour struggle with McKeown. McKeown not only took him three sets, but he almost went a step further. He almost beat him.

After splitting the first two sets and tied 4-4 in the third, the powerfully-built McKeown was up 15-40 in the ninth game, and had three chances staring him in the face to break Fukui's serve and almost put the match in the bag.

McKeown went into the match knowing that if he wanted to beat his NMMI opponent, he would have to rush the net often. Up 15-40, he came up for the kill, but his return went off the wood of his racquet, and Fukui took that point, and the next... and the next... and the next, to miraculously hold service.

"I knew if I broke him there I'd win the match," McKeown admitted afterward. "And when I lost those four straight points instead, it just shattered my confidence."

He maintained enough confidence to hold serve in the tenth game and tie it at 5-5, but Fukui took the next two games easily, to win the match.

WALKING OFF the court after the match, a tired Fukui turned to the fans watching and said with a smile, "Phew, I don't want to play him anymore." But he may have to since both will be competing in the national tournament, and while McKeown may have lost the match Saturday, he won a great deal of confidence.

"I know now that I'm capable of beating him (Fukui)," he explained. "The next time I play against him, I'll know that he's human and not some sort of a machine that cannot make a mistake."

NET NOTES: Fukui, only a freshman at NMMI, has accepted a scholarship to the University of Arizona. Ruanna Myers, a cute little netwoman from South Plains College, who was competing here, is almost totally deaf. The men's team score was retableted early Saturday, and it was learned that Amarillo only had three points instead of five, and was not tied with Odessa for the third and final qualifying berth as had been earlier thought. If there had been a deadlock, both schools would have went to nationals.

Stanley blanks Angels

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Bob Stanley posted his first major league shutout by out-dueling southpaw Frank Tanana with a six-hitter Saturday in the Boston Red Sox 3-0 victory over the California Angels.

Stanley, 2-0, a 22-year-old right-hander, struck out only three, but frustrated the Angels with his hard sinkerball, forcing them to continually pound the ball into the ground.

Tanana, who had won four in a row, allowed seven hits in taking his first loss. He struck out eight and walked two. He retired the first 11 batters in order before Jim Rice walked on a 3-2 pitch and George Scott drilled a triple to center with two out in the fourth.

Meet the Midland Cubs

As far as Keith Drumright is concerned, consecutive game hitting streaks aren't what they're cracked up to be.

Going into Saturday's game with El Paso, the Midland Cubs' second baseman had a 12-game hitting streak. But during that stretch his average has gone down from .350 to .259. And for a guy who batted .319 after joining Midland off the University of Oklahoma campus at mid-season last year, that's the wrong direction.

The 22-year-old from Springfield, Mo., just hasn't had enough two-hit nights, only two in the streak.

THE 5-10, 165-pounder lettered in baseball, basketball, golf and track at Springfield High and was named to All-Missouri second team as a senior.

At Oklahoma, he helped lead the Sooners to Big Eight Conference titles in 1973-74-75; NCAA District Five titles in 1973-74, the Midwest Regional championship in 1975 and the South Central Regional title in 1976.

OU played in the College World Series all four years Drumright was at OU, finishing fourth in 1975. Keith batted .316 as a freshman, .391 as a sophomore, .321 as a junior and .344 as a senior when he stole 34 bases and knocked in 55 runs in 75 games.

He helped re-edit the OU baseball record book...most hits for a season in 1976 (103), career records for most games (239), times at bat (863), runs scored (185), hits (295), and doubles (40).

Keith Drumright...Cubs second baseman.

DRUMRIGHT ALSO holds the season record for triples (7) and assists by a second baseman (193).

As a result, it's not surprising that Drumright was All-Big Eight second baseman in 1974-76, all-conference second team in 1975, all-District Five in 1974, All-Midwest Regional in 1976, NCAA College All-America second team in 1974-76, Sporting News All-America honorable mention in 1975 and first team in 1976.

One of Drumright's biggest thrills was his 10th inning homer for the U.S. College All-Stars in the final game of a series against Japan that gave the U.S. a four-game to three win in the series. It was the only home run of his collegiate career.

IN 1975 he played on the Anchorage Glacier Pilots which finished third in the NBC tournament at Wichita, batting .379 in the national tourney.

Billy Capps, a one-time Midland manager in the old Longhorn League, signed Keith to his Chicago Cubs contract after Chicago made him their fourth pick in the 1976 free agent draft. Last fall in the Arizona Instructional League he batted .297.

Hobbies include golf, bowling, fishing and other outdoor sports.

A cousin, Kelly Spinks, is a first baseman in the Los Angeles organization and was a teammate at OU for three years.

Cowboy zealots just can't wait

All those Dallas Cowboys fans are whoppin' and hollarin' it up like drafting Tony Dorsett made it state fair, Oklahoma-Texas time in Big D.

You'd think they'd just clinched a spot in the Super Bowl by obtaining bargaining rights to the All-America Heisman Trophy winner, but before they are carried completely away by their enthusiasm...it should be noted there are a couple of flies in the ointment.

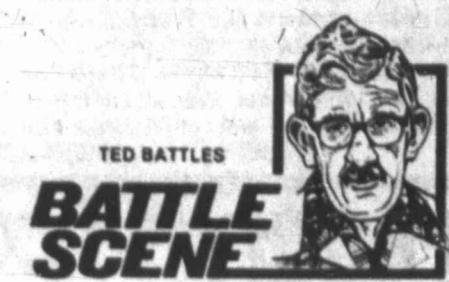

What if the Cowboys can't get together on financial remuneration with TD, huh? Maybe he won't be satisfied with Southland Life, One Main Place, downtown Highland Park, plus all the wealth that plays Preston Trail on any Sunday of his choice.

And then, after all that, what if the untried rookie from that eastern school in Pennsylvania can't make the team?

NOW THAT we've had our little joke, let's get on with the football season, "Landing" Dorsett creates that kind of let's-get-it-on anticipation.

The Cowboys have never had a Dorsett before and have done quite well anyway. It makes one drool like a St. Bernard admiring a steak just a window-away when one considers what Dallas might be like now that they've added the long-ball runner to their considerable repertoire.

Sure, the Cowboys have had their Duane Thomases and Calvin Hills, but neither offered the "he's gone" threat of a Dorsett. As valuable as they were, it's like comparing a plow horse to a thoroughbred.

Thomas was a slashing runner who ran over people in his all too short career while Hill was a converted tight end who hurled linemen, and, if he had get away speed, his chronic toe problems prevented him from using it.

SKEPTICS MIGHT snort, "How can Dallas get so excited over a No.2 draft choice? USC's Ricky Bell was the No.1 pick."

That offers an interesting area for debate. Some claim Ricky is more suited to the pros. He's bigger, tougher and runs in heavy traffic.

Ricky may be bigger than Tony, but the jury is still out on his durability. Dorsett played four years without mishap. Bell runs over people, but comes away limping sometimes. Dorsett may not run over anybody, but just runs around and away from them, great for life and limb and for playing another day.

Dorsett won the Heisman trophy and, according to the pro draft, did it with a less talented supporting cast than Ricky had at USC. The Trojans were 14 drafted. How many Panthers were picked?

IN THE NFL, it will be just the opposite. Dorsett will be playing with the steady, solid Cowboys while Bell will be with the expansion Tampa Buccaneers, where running over people will be an inescapable way of life.

The only question now is how soon and how much will Dorsett sign for. The Cowboys have never been known to spoil individual players in the interests of team morale, not to mention the bank account, and until it's signed and sealed, there's concern.

"My mother never really wanted me to fight," said Foreman, who was born in Marshall, Tex., where he now makes his home, but was raised in Houston.

"She was always worried and nervous when I was in the ring about my losing or getting hurt," he said.

Blue Jays Spinks batters Agosto in scoring KO victory

TORONTO (AP) — Mike Cabbage's two-run triple helped stake Paul Thormodsgard to a three-run lead in the first inning and the 23-year-old rookie right-hander hurled seven scoreless innings as the Minnesota Twins defeated the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1 Saturday.

Promising heavyweight Leon Spinks battered veteran Pedro Agosto with a series of punches and scored a knockout at 1:55 of the first round of their scheduled eight-rounder in the homecoming for the Olympic light heavyweight champion Saturday.

The 23-year-old Spinks, who weighed 198 pounds for his fourth pro fight in four months, continued a string of knockouts against the 31-year-old Agosto.

Also on the nationally televised card, Spinks' younger brother, Michael, outpointed Luis Rodriguez of Bethlehem, Pa., in a six-round light heavyweight match. Big John Tate of Knoxville, Tenn., was a winner by a fifth-round technical knockout over Jerry Thompkins of Elizabeth, N.J., in a six-round heavyweight bout which marked Tate's professional debut. The 202-pound Tate staggered Thompkins with a vicious uppercut before Rennie signaled the finish at 2:40 of the fifth round.

In a four-round heavyweight match, Lee Canallito of Miami decided Greg Sorrentino of Syracuse, N.Y., a protege of former middleweight and welterweight champion Carmen Basilio.

Leon Spinks, following a 90-second session of sparring with Agosto, skipped off the ropes and unleashed a battery of punches culminated by a sizzling left hook to the jaw.

Agosto collapsed on his back, hitting the canvas with his head. He struggled to his knees, but that was as far as he could get before referee Jim Rennie tolled the count of 10.

"I was looking at my corner and they told me to go to the body," said Leon, whose knockout was his third in a row in the first round and his biggest to date. "I'd thrown the same punch a minute earlier but he said it didn't hurt him. I guess this one just caught him flush on the jaw."

Foreman going to retire

HOUSTON (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman said Saturday he is retiring from the ring because of his religious beliefs and his love for his mother.

"Because of my religious beliefs, I believe it wrong to hit and beat up on another person even if it is a sport," Foreman told radio station KTOC.

Foreman said "it all started in Houston as a street fighter and that's where it's going to end."

"I've been lucky in the past not to have killed anyone in the ring and I thank God that I never hurt anyone seriously while I was boxing," he said.

Foreman said he had not decided what he would do in the future except that he would be engaged in religious activities.

"My mother never really wanted me to fight," said Foreman, who was born in Marshall, Tex., where he now makes his home, but was raised in Houston.

"She was always worried and nervous when I was in the ring about my losing or getting hurt," he said.

First round of NBA semifinals goes to Portland's Bill Walton

By The Associated Press

The first round of the UCLA Alumni Invitational went to Bill Walton, class of '74, with a lot of help from his classy Portland teammates of '77.

It was supposed to be a showdown between the two former star centers of UCLA's glory years, Walton and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, once known as Lew Alcindor, class of '69.

But what Friday night's National Basketball Association semifinal playoff between Walton's Trail Blazers and Abdul-Jabbar's Los Angeles Lakers turned out to be a runaway, namely Walton handing the ball to a variety of teammates who ran through the Lakers' defense and rolled up a 121-109 victory.

That shattered the Lakers' near-invincibility at home this year (they were 41-5 going into the game) and shifted the home-court advantage to the Trail Blazers. The teams meet again today before heading to Portland for the third and fourth games in the best-of-seven series.

Also on today, the Philadelphia 76ers, the one-on-one, playground champs of the NBA, try to widen their 1-0 semifinal lead over the Houston Rockets in Philadelphia.

Walton had 22 points to Abdul-Jabbar's 30 and Maurice Lucas, Portland's top scorer, had 28 points to Earl Tatum's 32. But the Lakers had nothing to match the high-scoring Portland balance—Lionel Hollins' 25 points and Johnny Davis' 20. More importantly, the Lakers had nothing to stop the Trail Blazers' back door plays. Time after time the guards or forwards passed to Walton, charged to the hoop, took the return pass and put in easy layups with the Lakers looking on helplessly and hopelessly out of position.

"They have tremendous quickness," said Lakers Coach Jerry West. "They were a lot quicker than we were ... I don't know how many baskets they scored from four or five feet, but it was quite a few."

Said Portland Coach Jack Ramsey: "We ran the way we wanted. Walton did a good job on Kareem with a little help ... We stressed ball and player movement, and, as a result, got some key baskets."

In many ways, the 76ers are like the Blazers—always moving, always looking for the close-in shot. "We run lots and lots of patterns out on the floor to get the ball to a player in the area where he can function and where he can get the high percentage shot," says Coach Gene Shue.

And Doug Collins adds: "We do the things that we have to do to win. When we played Boston we won by defense as well as offense. We beat Houston in the first game with offense."

"This team is a lot better than people think. We're the team to beat. I wouldn't want to change positions with any of the other three teams left in the playoffs."

Colorado City resident Carolyn Walker is featured artist at Theatre Centre during the run of "Right You Are, If You Think You Are," through

Colorado City artist's exhibition at Centre

Paintings and graphics by Colorado City artist Carolyn Walker make up the gallery show at Theatre Centre during the run of "Right You Are, If You Think You Are."

"Right You Are," a famous stage work by Italy's Luigi Pirandello, will have a matinee performance at 2:30 p.m. today, followed by concluding performances at 8 p.m. Wednesday and 8:30 p.m. Friday.

Today's matinee and Wednesday's presentation will offer student tickets for $1, in keeping with MCT's policy of offering specially-priced student admissions to productions that are of educational interest or special significance. The Pirandello play has long been regarded as one of the classics of 20th Century theater.

Mrs. Walker, the featured artist at Theatre Centre, is exhibiting paintings in oil, acrylics and watercolor, plus pen-and-ink works and lithographs. Of special interest are her mixed media paintings in vibrant colorations, combining acrylic underpainting with oil glazes.

Mrs. Walker has studied with some of the outstanding artist-teachers in the Southwest, among them Frederic Taubes, Jan Herring, Ken Gore and Bud Biggs. She maintains a studio-gallery in Colorado City where she teaches an average of 60 students weekly. During June and July, she will be the assistant to Jan Herring of El Paso in art classes to be conducted at Cloudcroft. She is a member of the Colorado City Brush and Palette Club.

the Big Country Art Association of Abilene and the Texas Fine Arts Association. She has won numerous art awards in juried shows throughout the state and is represented with works in many private and corporate collections in the Southwest and elsewhere. Mrs. Walker and husband Charles are the parents of two sons. Tickets for today's matinee of "Right You Are" will be available at the box office in advance of curtain time. Seating for the Wednesday and Friday concluding performances may be reserved by telephoning the theater at 682-2544.

Inge play to open Friday

The acclaimed stage work by the late American playwright William Inge is scheduled to open at the LTC Playhouse, 2504 Ave. P. Friday night, with performances to continue daily through May 17.

The production, directed by Linda Giss, features Terry Hickman as Cora, David Yirak as Rubin, Joan-Carol Baron as Reenie, Jeffrey Mitchell as Sonny, and Sam Cornelius and Mickey Adams as Morris and Lottie Lacey.

ENTERTAINMENT

Permian Playhouse lineup set

ODESSA — Permian Playhouse, Odessa's community theater, is announcing its season lineup for 1977-78.

The theater is inviting current members and prospective members to "Climb aboard the Carousel and whirl away to exciting places" during the coming season.

As the phrase suggests, "Carousel," the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical classic, will be one of the feature attractions of the new entertainment season. As a matter of fact, the musical will initiate the season with a series of presentations in late September.

In October, the theater will take audiences to medieval France in performances of Jean Anouilh's "The Lark," a drama with music about Joan of Arc.

In December, the scene shifts to New York for "Black Comedy," Peter Shaffer's amusing theater piece. Come January, the action moves to London for "Sherlock Holmes," by Thomas Hinton. Then, in March, the locale will be Mt. Ararat for Clifford Odets' "The Flowering Peach."

Finally, next May, Permian Playhouse will present another musical extravaganza as its season-closer. This one will be "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," with music and lyrics by Stephen Sondheim.

The PPH season membership campaign is now underway. Membership categories include regular memberships, at $36 and $28, offering 16 admissions through the season, and single memberships, for single persons only, at $18 and $14, both giving 8 admissions. In addition, special categories include benefactor, angel, donor, sponsor and patron memberships. Additional information on these is available from the theater office, 362-2329, or by writing to Permian Playhouse at P. O. Box 6713, Odessa 79762.

PBRPC board meets Wednesday

The regular meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission Board of Directors will be held 1:30 p.m. Wednesday in the conference room of the Air Terminal Office Building.

Among the items for consideration is a $210,313 request from the Midland

Independent School District for the head start program in Midland.

Other items for review and comment of the Regional Development Review Committee include applications for discretionary community development funds from the cities of Lamesa, Fort Stockton, Seagraves and Big Spring.

Ballet festival planned

HOUSTON — The Houston Ballet will stage its annual Spring Festival in a series of performances here next weekend.

The presentations will be Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings in Jones Hall for the Performing Arts in downtown Houston.

The festival evenings will present performances of romantic ballet favorites as well as blossoming new hits. On the bill are Balanchine's stunning "Concerto Barocco"; Houston Ballet artistic director Ben Stevenson's award-winning "Three Preludes," as well as a new work by Stevenson.

Two men jailed on drug charges

Two men were in the city jail Saturday night on following their arrest early Saturday morning for possession of more than 16 pounds of a green leafy substance believed to be marijuana.

An informant tip led to the arrest of the two men by city narcotics agents at the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Interstate 20, according to police reports.

Formal charges are expected to be filed against the men Monday.

MAN ESCAPES FROM CITY JAIL

Police are searching for Danny Lee Baker of Odessa, who escaped from Midland's city jail about 7 a.m.

Baker reportedly slipped by guards as prisoners were being moved from their cells, police said. He had been arrested on charge of carrying a prohibited weapon, police said.

Starting magazine no easy job

By THOMAS COLLINS
Newday

NEW YORK — Getting a magazine started is a little like watering a desert. Maybe something will grow and maybe it won't.

"You have to have the endurance of a camel," says Daniel Lopez, the editor and publisher of a new magazine for Latin-Americans called Nuestro. He is one who has had his share of sleepless nights, endless travel and watching more money go out than is coming in.

You need a minimum of $500,000 for starters, according to experts, and you have to wait about two years to break even. Still, each year, a number of souls brave those odds to put up their own and other people's cash and take on the title of publisher. Here's a list of recent magazines that are trying to make it without the help of a nude centerfold:

Identity — Like all the new magazines, Identity is a class book, with slick pages, four-color format and an acknowledged debt to Milton Glaser, the designer of New York magazine, who has probably influenced the layout of more magazines than anyone else in the country. It is a class book in other respects as well, meaning that it is literate and interesting. Identity is aimed at the Italian-American market, but you don't have to be Italian to like it. Managing editor Robert Daniel Fierro said the magazine began a few months ago with 42,000 subscribers, and circulation is now up to 100,000, half on newsstands. A group of private investors in Italy put up the money, and in case you're wondering who they were, Fierro says, "All our people are clean. One of the reasons we're in business is to counter that kind of question."

Savvy — It helps to start a new magazine safely wrapped inside another, already successful one. Savvy, a magazine for executive and professional women, had its first issue displayed inside New York magazine, following in the tradition of Ms. magazine a few years ago. It featured such articles as "The New Girl Network — Power System for the Future" and a photographic profile of four women who carved out lives for themselves without being super mommy or super boss. Savvy is the inspiration of Judith Daniels, former managing editor of New York magazine and the Village Voice, who says it is aimed at women who want a career but who also want "the other things — kids, husbands, boyfriends." She says she hopes to launch it as a national monthly publication by January. It is not anti-male or separatist, she says, but one of the office jokes is, "We want to hire handsome young men."

Nuestro — What Identity is doing for the Italian-Americans, Nuestro is trying to do for the Latin-Americans: strengthen their sense of identity and emphasize their achievements. Publisher Lopez started out with the idea and $650,000 nine years ago. He eventually raised $650,000. The four things to look for in starting a magazine, Lopez says, are: Is the market identifiable? Is it accessible? Is it substantial? And does it have enough money to attract advertisers? The Latinos seem to fill the bill, Lopez says. Nuestro will woo them by featuring their achievements in business, sports, politics, entertainment and the arts. Another goal of the magazine is to stifle the stereotypes. Nuestro, which is in English, is unhappy over the resurrection of the Chiquita Banana radio commercials.

Jazz — Sometimes, people get a bug in their heads about starting a certain magazine and they can't rest until they do it — as compared to some of us who get an idea, talk about it and do nothing about it. Thomas Stites, an editor at Newsday, began thinking about a magazine devoted exclusively to jazz 10 years ago and then did something about it, including taking some courses in publishing. The result is the country's first all-jazz quarterly, which began publishing last June. It recently brought out its third issue, which features a cover story on Miles Davis and a somewhat harrowing interview with him. Stites says that 15,000 copies are being printed, and besides being a labor of love — he likes both jazz and editing — "we're going to make money sometime."

Seven Days — Evidently, there is a feeling that a gap exists in the news magazine world despite the omnipresence of Time and Newsweek. Seven Days began life as a different kind of newsmagazine, and now, Seven Days comes along as an "alternative, oppositional news magazine." Seven Days is published by a nonprofit, tax-exempt institution, prides itself that it accepts no display advertising and is backed by a group of individuals associated with the feminist, civil rights and antiwar movements. You know where you are at when you read an obit on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" that deplores the fact that Mary, Ted, Lou Grant and Murray were apolitical and never thought of unionizing. It's a very clean, well-edited publication with a different point of view and a genuine "alternative" to the giants.

Assassin — The word for this magazine is: "strange." It apparently was written in its entirety by a New Yorker named David Kornblum, who has a partner in Montreal and who claims to draw on the expertise "of the world's highest-paid assassins and some of the key figures in the shadow world of intelligence." None of those people are identified, naturally, so you will have to take Kornblum's word that they exist. "I figured I'd have a credibility problem," he says. The first issue contains a host of unsigned articles that purport to have inside information about past and future assassinations — "Blueprint: The Assassination of Fidel Castro." It also contains stories on how to build your own nuclear weapon and how to go about killing a head of state. Kornblum says that his purpose is to shock people into doing something about the terrible things which his magazine says are going on. Much of it reads like pulp fiction. He says it cost only $25,000 to put the magazine out; and he claims to have printed and sold 128,000 copies.

A GRAPHIC, "Kickin' Up," by Midland artist Marian Ford, left, received the annual purchase award from the Midland branch, American Association of University Women, in the 11th Southwestern Area Art Show currently under way at Museum of the Southwest. The work will go into the museum's permanent collection. With Mrs. Ford above is Mrs. Delmer M. Woods, area cultural representative of the AAUW. (Staff Photo By Charles McCain)

Dallas to host the Met

DALLAS — The Metropolitan Opera comes to Dallas this weekend for its 34th spring "season."

The Met's Thursday through Saturday visit will feature performances of four operas in the Fair Park Music Hall.

The opening event will be a gala benefit performance of "Le Prophete," Meyerbeer's powerful and dramatic musical work, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Marilyn Horne is featured in the production.

Friday's presentation at 7 p.m. will be Wagner's "Lohengrin," featuring Pilar Lorengar as Elsa.

Two performances are scheduled on Saturday: A matinee at 1:30 p.m. will be Mozart's famous fantasy opera, "The Magic Flute," and the evening presentation, beginning at 8, will be Verdi's monumental "Il Trovatore," featuring a stellar cast headed by soprano Renata Scotta.

Information on availability of remaining seating for the four performances is obtainable by telephoning the Music Hall box office.

LEGENDARY HANK WILLIAMS comes to life on the stage of Midland Theatre Centre Thursday night when singer-guitarist Jim Owen, above, presents his one-man show, "An Evening With Hank Williams." Sixteen of Williams' greatest song hits are included in the show, for which tickets are on sale in advance at the Record Center and M. L. Leddy Co. The tickets, priced $4 each, also will be on sale at the theater before the 8 p.m. show.

Musicals scheduled released

DALLAS — The Dallas Summer Musicals will include five two-week shows and two one-week specials at the Music Hall in Fair Park.

The 1977 Summer Musicals season will be initiated with a June 7-18 production of "Camelot," starring Rock Hudson. The remainder of the season lineup is as follows:

A one-week special featuring Ginger Rogers, June 21-26, "The Sound of Music," starring Shirley Jones, June 28 through July 10; "Wonderful Town," starring Lauren Bacall, July 12 through 24; a special show featuring Mitzi Gaynor, July 28 through 31.

The national touring company of a new production of "Guys and Dolls" will come to town for a two week stand Aug. 2 through 14, featuring Leslie Uggams and Cleavon Little, and it will be followed by the Dallas Summer Musicals' own production of "The Fantasticks" to run Aug. 16 through 28 as the final attraction of the season.

DIRT, SQUIRT & QUIRT Grape culture, pecan grafting sessions slated

By CHARLES GREEN
Midland County
Extension Agent

Cotton planting continued to be the major activity by farmers in the area during the past week. Some rain and light hail Thursday may cause some problems on newly planted land in some areas. A good percentage of dryland has been planted in Midland County, with irrigated acreage generally being planted last. Livestock are in good condition over the area with pastures coming on well in response to the spring moisture and warming temperatures.

Two Extension-sponsored educational activities in the area of horticulture — pecan propagation and grape culture — will be conducted in Midland County Tuesday.

A pecan grafting demonstration will be given at the Jack Kirby Pecan Orchard located approximately six miles east of Midland. The time is 4:30 p.m. To reach the Kirby orchard travel east on Farm-to-Market Road 307 (Cole Park Road). About 2 1/4 miles after crossing under IH 20, turn right on County Road 1130 South, go about 1/2 mile then turn back left (east) on caliche road and proceed to the pecan orchard on the left.

At 7:30 p.m. in the County Extension office, Courthouse Annex, 218 W. Illinois St. a grape culture meeting will be held. In this meeting we will discuss the production of grapes, Vinifera and French-American hybrids, in West Texas. A status report on the progress of the Vinifera plantings in the West Texas area will be made. The grape meeting is open to those interested in both commercial and backyard grape production.

Few trees are able to reach maturity without receiving one or more wounds from a variety of sources. Yet trees are able to survive centuries to become the oldest living creatures on earth despite wounding. Some recent work has involved dissecting trees in an effort to understand the manner in which trees are able to compartmentalize and close an injury.

Trees do not heal in the true sense of the word. Injured tree tissue is never repaired and returned to the former state as is a cut on your hand. Trees react by closing the wound and compartmentalizing or isolating the injured tissue from the surrounding tissue.

Let's take a look at the sequence of events which follows wounding. The first event which occurs during compartmentalization and closure is that the injured cells leak their contents onto the injured surface, where they are oxidized to form a barrier to retard or prevent further infection. Next the most recently laid down wood is altered as is the tissue around the injury. This is accompanied by discoloration. The extent of the discoloration depends on the kind of tree, the vigor of the tree, the kind of wound, location of the wound and the time of wounding.

New growth rings are laid down the spring following the injury and callous tissue begins to grow over the injured tissue. Over a period of time callous tissue closes the wound. Pioneer pathogens, including fungi and bacteria, can invade the injured tissue. The result is further discoloration but does not include decay.

Decay-causing organisms can only invade tissue which has already been invaded by the primary invaders. Thus decay is the result of an orderly succession of events which can be halted at a step along the way. Normally decay does not proceed after the injury has been closed over.

Use of tree wound dressings have not been shown conclusively to prevent the sequence of events which leads to decay. In fact, discoloration may be less and closure rates may be more rapid on an untreated plant than on the treated plant. There are, however, a number of factors which can reduce injury and decay following an injury. Clean the wound by trimming away loose or injured bark. Shape the wound into a vertical ellipse or oval when possible. A sharp knife must be used to create a clean wound edge. Remove all dead, dying or weak branches from the wounded tree and the surrounding area. Cuts should be flush with the trunk.

Fertilize and water the injured tree to increase plant vigor and the rate of closure. Protect the tree from further injury. Thus, we see what happens when a tree is injured. Tree wound dressings are unable to alter the decay process. The earlier belief that tree wound dressings acted as a physical barrier to disease entry is suspect as the barrier is easily overcome by the checking or cracking which accompanies drying of the wound. However, the cosmetic reasons for painting wounds with a thin coat of black paint still remains.

El Paso mechanic develops super car

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — After looking at a reconditioned car that an El Paso man claims gets 100 miles per gallon of gas, a national Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) engineer said the system contains no fakery.

In a copyrighted story Saturday, the El Paso Times reported that engineer Richard W. Hern said he could find no faults in Tom Ogle's vaporized gas system.

"I think, personally, and with strong conviction, that there is no hoax," Hern, supervisor of ERDA's research center at Bartlesville, Ohio, said.

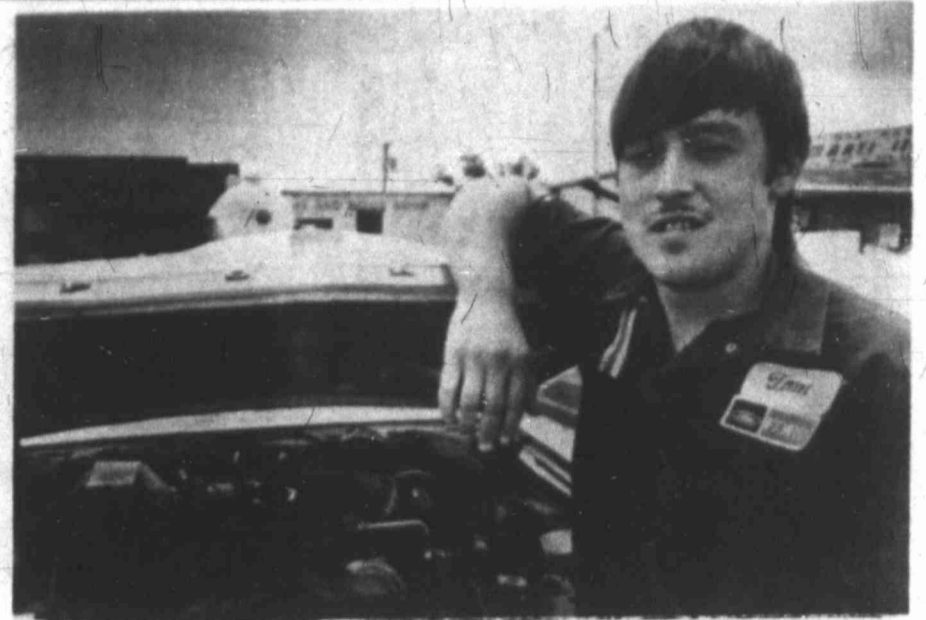

While impressed with Ogle's work, Hern said he could not comment about the 100 mile per gallon claims. He said he would require a laboratory analysis before commenting on the super mileage attributed to the 4,600-pound 1970 Ford.

The car recently made the 205-mile trip from El Paso to Deming, N.M., on less than two gallons of gas. Ogle claims to be the sole inventor of the vaporized fuel system that injects gasoline fumes into the cylinders. The Ogle system eliminates the need for a carburetor.

Hern said the system needs to be in "the rudimentary state of development with obviously much engineering refinement needed." He added, though, that it is not unusual for new engineering concepts to need such refinements.

The ERDA engineer was asked by U.S. Rep. Richard White, D-Tex., to come to El Paso to meet Ogle and analyze his fuel system.

"I applaud the inventor for his imagination and ingenuity and for developing a system that has such apparent potential for the nation's energy situation," said White.

Tom Ogle stands by his car, which he claims will travel 100 miles per gallon of gas. (AP Laserphoto)

North Sea oil may free England's people from historical restraints

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. J. Dickson Mabon says North Sea oil offers Great Britain the means of freeing itself from its historical restraints.

Mabon, the British minister of state for energy, visualizes the United Kingdom attaining oil self-sufficiency within four years.

"We have arrived as an oil producer," Mabon said while in Houston for the ninth Offshore Technology Conference.

Mabon told oilmen and newsmen the buildup in the North Sea oil production already has caused considerable improvement in Britain's balance of payments problem.

"We can't lose," he said. Britain, he said, has long been regarded even by friends as the sick man of Europe.

"For many years we have faced economic difficulties stemming from our role as an international reserve banker, from the effects of divesting ourselves of a huge empire, from the aftermath of the last war, and from the large scale imports of raw materials on which, as a small island, we must rely," he said.

"North Sea oil offers the means of freeing ourselves from these historical restraints. This year our trading balance should break even and in 1978 we should be well into the black."

Mabon placed current production from seven fields in the British sector at 750,000 barrels a day, well over one-third of domestic demand. He added that production has increased by more than 50 per cent in the past four months.

"Two more oil fields should come onstream later this year together with the Frigg Gas Field," he said.

"By the end of 1977, barring accidents, we should be producing at a rate equivalent to at least half of the United Kingdom demand the rapid buildup will continue next year."

This means, he added, production of 2,000,000 barrels a day or self-sufficiency is well within Britain's reach in the calendar year 1980.

Mabon said the United Kingdom recognizes very clearly its offshore oil will not last forever.

"It must be seen as fitting into an energy supply pattern changing over the decades and we have a plan now for the day when North Sea oil runs out," he said.

Mabon said Britain, therefore, is not putting all its hopes for the future on oil developments.

"The present estimated level of reserves should see us well into the 1990s and, perhaps, into the next century," he said.

"It is at that point that we will need to have so developed our coal and nuclear industries that we can bridge what would otherwise be a quickly widening energy gap."

By then, Mabon said, the United Kingdom hopes to have secured a modest but significant contribution from renewable energy sources like the waves and the sun.

"All of this, of course, applies in lesser or greater degrees to every other Western industrial nation, to a larger degree in most cases since the United Kingdom is about the only such nation which will actually attain energy self-sufficiency in the 1980s," he said.

Mabon said Britain already has a very ambitious plan for expansion of its coal industry into the next century and added that very large deposits of coal also have been found during the North Sea oil explorations.

"It is much too deep and remote to exploit now," he said. "Nevertheless, it is there for the future."

He said nuclear power is being developed with care.

North Sea oil buys us some time in this respect," Mabon said.

"We are sinking an increasingly large amount of cash into research and development of renewable energy sources and there is a good case for using some oil revenues for the purpose."

Hearings could spawn final Lo-Vaca order

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Spurred on by a Texas Supreme Court opinion, the railroad commission has called for hearings that could produce a final order on Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. gas rates by late summer or early fall.

The commission instructed Lo-Vaca and its corporate parents, Coastal States Gas Producing Co. and Coastal States Gas Corp., to appear at hearings set for July 18 and Aug. 8.

Chairman Mack Wallace said the unanimous decision to reopen the case resulted from the high court's opinion, issued Wednesday, that said the commission had a duty to issue a final order.

A temporary order cannot be appealed to the courts but a final one can.

Lo-Vaca has been passing through to consumers the full cost of the gas it buys, plus a nickel per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf) for pipeline expenses, under the commission's September 1973 temporary order.

The order set the price paid for gas by electrical generating plants operated by San Antonio, Austin, the Lower Colorado River Authority and others soaring from around 25 cents per mcf to $2.

Coastal and Lo-Vaca will be required to present evidence on various contracts and other retail arrangements, cost of gas and other data affecting rates that should be charged. Joseph Piotrowski Jr., acting director of the commission's Gas Utilities Division, said all data should be submitted in a uniform manner so that the commission and other parties can evaluate it readily.

"It is our intent to deal with the case as expeditiously as possible, considering its complexity," Wallace said.

Commissioner Jon Newton contended in his campaign last year that the commission owed it to Texans to issue a final order so Lo-Vaca's rates could be tested in court.

He contended that the automatic flow-through of gas costs caused rates to rise much faster than they should have because there was no incentive for Lo-Vaca to economize.

The supreme court decision upheld an Eastland Court of Civil Appeals decision denying the LCRA recovery of $25 million from Coastal and Lo-Vaca, based on the difference between prices in 1975 and those provided in their 1962 gas supply contract.

The Eastland court said the parties to the contract both knew or should have known that the commission could change the prices in the public interest.

Lo-Vaca contended in 1973 that it could not sell gas for less than it paid for it.

1976 year of recovery for U.S. oil companies

TULSA—Most of the U.S.-based oil industry logged a year of recovery in 1976, reports the May 2 issue of The Oil and Gas Journal.

The rebound in profits from depressed levels experienced in 1975 is indicated by the performance of a 28-company sample group polled by the weekly business magazine.

Companies included in the OGJ group range in size from Exxon Corp. with total 1976 assets of more than $36 billion to Clark Oil & Refining Corp. with assets of $324 million.

Net 1976 earnings for the group climbed 17.4 per cent to $12.1 billion. The companies' combined earnings, however, were shy of the 1974 level, a banner year for the industry.

Improved prices and a resurgence in demand for petroleum products after 2 years of demand decline fueled the recovery, reports the OGJ. These improvements were especially apparent in the U.S., where the industry also benefited from higher natural-gas prices as well as larger volumes and better margins for petrochemicals.

In fact, the OGJ says, most of the recovery's punch came from domestic operations. But abroad, the economic return from a global recession moved more slowly, with international revenues for some companies barely keeping pace with higher operating expenses.

The trend toward higher profitability at home weakened during the first quarter of 1977, the OGJ reports. Cause was severe weather in much of the U.S. which snarled operations and increased costs.

Industry executives told the business magazine normal profits will return as the year wears on.

The rise in 1976 profits added almost a full percentage point to the OGJ group's return on shareholders' equity, which advanced to 13.1 per cent. This compares with 15 per cent for manufacturing companies and 13.3 per cent for all businesses as calculated by Citibank of New York.

Oil's rate of return during 1976 also falls short of the level the industry deems adequate to sustain its high-risk investments, the OGJ reports.

Nevertheless, OGJ group's outlay for capital and exploration items rose 6.4 per cent to $26.2 billion last year with U.S. projects climbing the bulk of the spending.

Oil company executives told the business magazine the exploration expenditures were necessary to replace foreign production nationalized earlier and to replace normal production decline in existing fields.

Those two factors caused a 4.9 per cent drop in the group's worldwide oil production last year, the OGJ reports. Their combined output fell from 17.1 million barrels per day in 1975 to 16.2 million.

WASHINGTON OIL

Schlesinger says oilmen being offered incentives

By CLYDE LA MOTTE
Reporter-Telegram
Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Although Energy Adviser James Schlesinger makes it clear that he considers a free market approach to oil and natural gas pricing "out the window," he insists that domestic producers are being offered very attractive incentives to search for new reserves.

Obviously irked by complaints from producer groups and others that the Carter energy packages puts too much emphasis on conservation and too little on developing new domestic supplies, Schlesinger has begun emphasizing all the "goodies" in store for domestic producers.

For example, he claims that the plan for a $13.50 a barrel price for new-new oil (from wells drilled after April 20, if they are at least 2½ miles from an existing well, or from future offshore leases) will mean that U.S. producers will get a higher wellhead price than producers anywhere overseas.

He already has the Federal Energy Administration working on a plan to provide the $13.50 price without waiting for congressional action on the energy plan. This is the picture:

FEA will publish a proposed plan in the near future, calling for public hearings and written comments on the $13.50 price and the provisions for putting it into effect. There would be no new crude oil tax involved with this category.

After the hearings and comments, FEA will send a final plan to Congress. The latter will have 15 working days in which to reject the proposal or to let it stand.

This approach has several advantages for the Administration, regardless of the final outcome. For one thing, it would help mollify producers who are upset by the prospect of having controls in effect forever.

If Congress should reject the FEA proposal, then the blame would shift to Congress rather than being placed on the White House. If Congress lets the new price level go into effect, this would be tantamount to congressional approval, thereby giving the Administration a defense against those claiming it had "sold out" to the domestic industry.

A $13.50 price, if it is permitted, would still not be decontrol because it would leave the government's hand still grasping the price control mechanism. That is as Schlesinger wants it.

Nevertheless, his announcement that FEA would move ahead without waiting for further energy legislation was an indication that the Carter Administration planners anticipating some adjustments to the original energy plan proposal as cir-

Drillbit to determine Egypt's oil chances

TULSA — Egypt's chances of becoming a world-scale oil producer and exporter will be gauged by exploratory drilling throughout the country during the next year or two.

The Oil and Gas Journal reports the Egyptian exploration scene in its April 25th issue that set to expire in the 12 to 24-month period are 25 of the 36 production-sharing contracts Egypt has signed with the world's major oil firms and independents since May 1973.

Operators involved in the Egyptian campaign plan to carefully review the results of their wildcatting efforts before agreeing to renew their contracts, reports the weekly business magazine. And the results of their nearly half-billion dollar search on Egyptian properties haven't been spectacular so far.

The 28 companies — 16 of them from the U.S. — have drilled some 50 wildcats since 1974 on the tracts, the OGJ reports.

About half a dozen of the wells resulted in oil discoveries in the Gulf of Suez, the source of the bulk of the country's present oil and gas production. None of those strikes appears to be of giant size.

Onshore, 15 tests scattered over the country's vast desert and delta areas yielded a potential oil field and a promising oil and gas discovery.

Operators venturing into Mediterranean and Red seas' drilling have reported no strikes, according to the OGJ.

Despite the discouraging news from some areas, the operator's huge investment is continuing to grow. They initially paid $100 million to the Egyptian government in signature bonuses to secure concessions covering 25,000 square miles offshore and 155,000 square miles onshore.

New contracts fleshed out but not yet finalized cover 3,630 square miles of the Sinai Peninsula and adjoining offshore waters.

Besides bonus payments, the producers' exploration and drilling outlays through 1976 total roughly $370 million, with another $200 million scheduled to be spent this year.

Total investment by the end of 1977, reports the OGJ, should reach about $670 million. But, the final outcome of their search can't be predicted yet. Only drilling and foreign dollars will tell, the OGJ says.

New shale oil method may be best

CLEVELAND (AP) — McDowell-Wellman Engineering Co. of Cleveland has unveiled a process which it says offers a better method of extracting oil from shale rock than other processes now being tested.

The firm said Friday the process has been tested for two years in a pilot plant here.

Roger L. Hulet, president of McDowell-Wellman, said the process now is ready for the next step— "putting up a prototype plant at a shale mine."

Geologists have reported that there are vast deposits of oilbearing shale in Western states.

Hulet said his firm's process will be economically feasible sooner than other shale oil recovery systems being tested because it permits recovery of two other minerals as well as the oil. One of these minerals is nahcolite-bicarbonzite of soda—and the other is dawsonite, Hulet said. Dawsonite was described as a mineral which has value in the extraction of alumina.

An official of Superior Oil Co. of Houston, which has been working with McDowell-Wellman on the process, said the process will permit recovery of shale oil at a cost of $10 to $15 a barrel, which he said is well below estimates for other shale processes.

Albritton gets honor

COLLEGE STATION — Ford D. Albritton Jr., chairman of the board of Midland-based Tipperary Corp., is one of four Texas A&M University graduates presented "Distinguished Alumni Awards" at spring commencement Saturday.

The award, A&M's highest honor and previously bestowed on only 55 of the institution's 80,000 graduates, is jointly presented by the university and its alumni organization, the Association of Former Students.

Such recognition is reserved for former students "whose exceptional contributions to society have singled them out as men of great stature and ability."

Distinguished alumnus designation is also being awarded this year to J. Roy Quinby of Plainview and Leslie L. Appelt and George P. Mitchell of Houston.

Albritton, a 1941 graduate of Texas A&M, serves as chairman of the executive committee for the Tipperary Corp., in addition to being board chairman. He also serves as chairman of the board of the Ashbrook Corp., based in Houston.

He founded his own company, Albritton Engineering Corp., in 1949 in Houston, but moved it to Bryan nine years later and sold it to Redman Industries in 1968. He continues to reside in Bryan.

He is the only person in Texas A&M's 100-year history to have been a member of the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents, from 1968 to 1975, and president of the Association of Former Students, 1969, and the Texas A&M Research Foundation, 1970.

He also served as vice president and a member of the executive committee for The Aggie Club, the organization which raises scholarship funds for student athletes, and has personally provided academic scholarships for several students.

Operators working 297 Basin rotaries

The Friday survey of drilling rigs in the Permian Basin showed 285 units working, a decrease of 12 from the 297 rigs reported two weeks ago.

Reed Drilling Equipment's weekly count showed 84 more rigs working Friday than in a similar week one year ago, when 201 rotaries were in operation.

Pecos County with 27 rigs was in top place, followed by Lea County, N. M., with 25 and Eddy, N. M., with 20 units. Twelve rotaries were busy in Irion County with Ward County reporting 11.

Ten rigs were tallied in Reeves County.

Today it's the fashion to "tint and tell," but hair coloring and perms have never taken kindly to one another. Fermodyl's unique Belgian laboratory technique has conquered the challenge with Ondulation, the organic curl control. Ondulation is a new dimension in hair waving. It gives superb wave for normal hair, is ideal for color-treated or naturally delicate hair. It is perfect for short hair, medium or long styles. Think of it as a "memory-bank" to maintain today's natural looking styles. For general conditioning, Fermodyl has an excellent series for hair treatment, depending on the hair, that completely rebuilds hair, stops breakage and stimulates new growth. It is the only conditioner made that penetrates the hair shaft and works from inside out. Perhaps you prefer the Redkin Trichoperm the latest in professional permanents. The Trichoperm comes in two types, the Trichoperm 122N and Trichoperm 144B. An outstanding feature of this permanent is that it has to be oxidized by drying under the dryer. Redkin Trichoperm 122N is non-alkaline, has no ammonia and no acid, and is for use on all hair except bleached or double processed hair. It will not burn hair and is the first permanent ever made with no ammonia and no acid. Johnny and Faye Miles, owners, welcome you to their salon. Johnny is the business manager and Faye handles the operation of the salon while the friendly staff give you individual attention. When you enter the salon, you will receive prompt attention and expert care and will leave with a fashionable style whether it is a shampoo and set, color treatment or permanent. Now there is no need to be bound by an appointment. You can fit a beauty treatment into your busy schedule on the spur of the moment. There is no appointment necessary at Curl and Swirl, conveniently located in the Town and Country Shopping Mall.

EPA suit names City of Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — The federal Environmental Protection Agency, concerned about U.S. failure to keep a clean water agreement with Canada, has sued the city of Detroit to try to make it clean up the sewage it dumps into Lake Erie.

The suit, filed Friday in federal court, demands improvements in Detroit's waste water plant that could nearly triple sewer rates paid by 3 million residents on the area-wide sewer system in 76 communities.

Detroit is the biggest city that the EPA has sued for being a direct polluter. Suits against other cities have been brought charging local governments with failure to force private interests to comply with pollution standards, according to EPA records.

Monsanto adds three employes

Monsanto Co. has announced the association of three new employes in its Southwestern Exploration Region offices in Midland.

Edward Bean has joined the firm as a senior geophysicist. He earned his B.S. degree from Texas Tech University, and has 20 years of experience with major oil companies in the Permian Basin area.

He is a member of West Texas Geological Society, Permian Basin Geophysical Society and the Society of Exploration Geophysicists.

R. E. Masterson has been employed as a geologist. He is a graduate of Trinity University with a B.A. degree in Geology and has worked for a major oil company in this area three years. His memberships include WTGS and Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists.

N. E. Voldseth also joined Monsanto as a geologist. He has B.S. and M.S. degrees in Geology from the University of Iowa and has worked three years in the Permian Basin area for a major oil company.

Voldseth is a member of WTGS, SEPM, Geological Society of America, and American Society of Petroleum Geologists.

Marathon expects record year

FINDLAY — Marathon Oil Co. expects its operational performance in 1977 to top last year's levels and its profits to reach another new record.

Harold D. Hoopman, president, said. He noted that the government's latitude in implementing present rules and regulations, on short notice or retroactively, makes it impossible to quantify the earnings increase.

"In the final analysis, the outlook for Marathon and for America's oil industry depends on the wisdom or folly of governmental policies," he told the company's 90th annual meeting.

Hoopman charged that President Carter's recently unveiled energy program was "conceived from a defeatist point of view," assuming there is little oil and gas left to be discovered in this country.

He said the President has turned his back on the free market system in favor of "massive and detailed regulation of the entire energy economy."

The alternative, in Marathon's view, is the "amazingly simple approach of price decontrol of crude oil and natural gas."

"If simple deregulation is politically rejected, Marathon would advocate deregulation coupled with an appropriate 'windfall profits' tax structured to insure that the industry will reinvest its share of the proceeds of decontrol in projects to replenish domestic energy supplies."

Hoopman stated that Marathon agrees in principle with President Carter that Americans must begin paying the replacement cost of energy used, and that this can be done without harm to the economy.

But, he differed with the President's methods, pointing out: "If the energy user is paying the replacement cost for the energy he consumes, then the prices that he pays should be spent to replace the energy. Government would be misleading the energy user if these funds are taxed away and then dissipated for other purposes."

He said the company's 1976 acquisitions of Pan Ocean Oil Corp. and ECOL Ltd. "have the potential to make substantial contributions to Marathon's profitability."

Indications to date are that the Brae field in the U.K. North Sea, a major attraction in the Pan Ocean acquisition, perhaps more readily apparent." Marathon has begun a three-year development program to substantially increase the ability to produce unleaded gasoline and reduce the volume of heavy oil, Hoopman noted.

"Marathon's refining and marketing operations are currently profitable and we project that the trend within our industry is toward greater profitability," he said.

Midlander promoted

James W. "Pinkie" Barnes has been promoted to engineering technician in the Drilling Organization in the Midland Division office, Mid-continent Production Division, Exxon Co.-U.S.A.

He previously was assigned field maintenance foreman in the Midland District.

He joined Exxon as a roustabout in his hometown of Andrews. Production field assignments followed in West Texas and in 1973, he was transferred from Robert Lee to the Bateman Ranch area.

Amoco official 'bullish' on Overthrust region

HOUSTON — The vice president of exploration for Amoco Production Co. said the company is "cautiously bullish" about the oil and natural gas potential of the Overthrust Belt in the western United States.

Speaking at an oil field service seminar recently in Houston, William L. Adams said the Overthrust Belt is "one of the most active exploration plays" in the United States.

Currently, he said, 12 seismic crews are operating and 12 wildcat wells are being drilled in the trend, which stretches along the Wyoming-Utah-Idaho and Montana borders. Amoco alone is drilling six wildcats and has seven active seismic crews, he reported.

According to Adams, present interest in the area was sparked by Amoco and its partners in 1975 with a farm-out wildcat which resulted in a "significant discovery" at what is now called Pineview field and has been heightened by four additional 1976 and 1977 Amoco discoveries.

"We have helped turn a 'dead' area into a 'live' one," he said. "It is no Prudhoe Bay, but neither does it require a multi-billion dollar investment and years of delay to get it to market."

"We know that excellent reservoirs are present, substantial structures exist, and the oil and gas are there. We intend to vigorously help develop this potential during the next few years."

The 1975 discovery at Pineview in Utah was followed by Amoco's discoveries at Yellow Creek and Ryckman Creek in Southwest Wyoming in 1976.

So far this year, a wildcat near Evanston is an apparent discovery and a Whitney Canyon wildcat has "apparent commercial shows" but, because of mechanical difficulties, a completion has not as yet been made, Adams reported.

According to the exploration vice president, Amoco controls 600,000 acres within the Overthrust Belt strip.

Discussing the discoveries in more detail, Adams noted that although 11 wells have been completed and four are drilling or testing at Pineview, the field limits are "still undefined."

"Oil and gas production has been established in both the Nugget sandstone and Twin Creek carbonates, with an average net pay of 300 feet," he said. "A total productive column of 1,650 feet has been indicated so far. In place estimates are 135 million barrels of oil and 135 billion cubic feet of gas."

Adams cautioned, however, that the estimates shouldn't be confused with "producible reserves," because those estimates will have to await further engineering study and production history.

Current gross production from the 11 completed wells is 14,800 barrels of oil per day, he said. Amoco's net interest in the field is approximately 20 per cent.

Amoco's Yellow Creek-Evanston discoveries are located about 20 miles northeast of Pineview. Adams said Yellow Creek was completed last year for 2.75 million cubic feet of gas per day from Twin Creek carbonate, and one successful offset well tested at 7.9 million cubic feet a day, with some liquids.

The company currently is testing the Evanston discovery five miles northeast at rates of 2 million cubic feet of gas per day.

"We now think these two discoveries may be on the same structure, with a productive column of 635 feet indicated," Adams said. "However, no estimate of gas in place has been made to date." Amoco's net interest in the complex is approximately 50 per cent.

At the Ryckman Creek prospect to the north, Amoco's discovery well was completed last year after testing gas in the Nugget sandstone at rates up to 5.8 million cubic feet of gas per day and oil rates of 522 barrels per day, according to the Amoco executive.

Currently, five wells have been completed and two more are drilling, he reported. The field has a total oil and gas column of 513 feet.

In place estimates are approximately 100 million barrels of oil and 250 billion cubic feet of gas in the field as currently developed, he reported.

Amoco owns 37.5 per cent interest in the field.

'In situ' engineering journal set for June

AUSTIN — An engineering journal dedicated to the technology of "in situ" or in place mining of natural resources will begin publication in early June.

Dr. Tom Edgar, University of Texas at Austin associate professor of chemical engineering, is editor of the new journal.

"Everyone is familiar with the technology of extracting oil and gas," says Dr. Edgar, "but eventually we may do most of our mining without sending men into the mines or having to deal with the environmental problems associated with strip mining."

He says the new journal titled In Situ, will bring together information on all aspects of in situ mining.

Dr. Edgar's area of research, and the subject of an article in the first issue, is the in situ gasification of Texas lignite.

Much of the state's lignite can be mined economically only with present strip mining methods, but a vast amount of lignite is either too deep or exists in beds too thin to be minable. The development of a practical and economic method of in situ lignite gasification could extend Texas' extensive lignite reserves by many decades.

"Fossil fuels are not the only resources which can be exploited by in situ mining," says Dr. Edgar. "Many metals such as copper are mined by solution mining and uranium is mined by leaching."

Dr. Robert S. Schechter, chairman of the Department of Petroleum Engineering, is an expert in tertiary oil recovery and conducts research in the leaching of uranium. He is one of three UT engineers or scientists on the editorial board of the journal.

When a resource such as coal, lignite or uranium is mined by an in situ process, a cavity is created in the rocks in which the resource is located. Dr. A. L. Podio, UT associate professor of petroleum engineering and a member of the In Situ editorial board, conducts research on the stability of chambers created by in situ methods.

Possible uses of the cavities include the storage of oil or gas and a future issue of the journal will feature an article by Dr. Podio.

Dr. R. W. Kaiser, a circumstances require. Schlesinger and his associates obviously want to build up momentum behind the program and thus prevent it from bogging down hopelessly in Congress. To do this the Administration has to gain some public support in the weeks ahead.

In an appearance last week before the Senate Energy Committee, headed by Sen. Henry Jackson (D-Wash.), Schlesinger used a mixture of eloquence and tough talk. At one point he quoted Winston Churchill as warning against "small" plans because such plans do not stir men's souls.

Much of the discussion thus far is in the area of generalities, rather than detailed specifics. The latter are being contained in the proposed bills being sent to Congress.

There no doubt will be a great deal of bargaining in the weeks ahead as various groups seek alterations in the plan. Schlesinger said wryly last week that he had realized from the outset that the proposed energy plan would not please everyone. Now, he said, he is discovering that it doesn't please anyone in all respects.

However, no rival plan is going to please everyone, either. The prospect is that opponents will be unable to get a general meeting of minds on a new approach, so about the best that can be expected is some revision in the Administration's package.

The real showdown will be over whether the public in general wants to give more freedom to private enterprise or whether it feels, as Schlesinger does, that the government is going to have to play the lead role from here on in.

Engineers to hear Mize

The Permian Section of American Institute of Chemical Engineers will hold its May meeting Thursday in the Coor's Hospitality Room, Highway 80. A social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., and the dinner and program is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Woodrow W. Mize, assistant executive director for the Texas State Board of Registration for Professional Engineers will be the guest speaker. His subject will be "Engineering Registration: The Public - The Engineer."

Mize is a 1941 graduate of Texas Tech University, with the B.S. degree in Chemical Engineering. He worked as a chemist for El Paso Natural Gas Co. from 1941-1942.

He served as an engineer with the U. S. Department of the Navy during 1942-1964, returning to El Paso Natural Gas division engineer, holding that position until he was promoted to serve as plant manager, complex manager and vice president from 1956-1968.

Mize was a consulting engineer from 1968-1973 at which time he assumed the post with the registration board.

He was active in civic organizations during his employment with El Paso Natural.

Companies acquitted

CHICAGO (AP) — Five potash companies accused of conspiring to set prices and production levels of the mineral have been acquitted by a federal judge in a retrial.

Judge Prentice Marshall of U.S. District Court said Friday that an overview of the case failed to show that the firms conspired to maintain levels of domestic potash to match price levels legally set by the government of Saskatchewan, Canada, to regulate potash mined in the province.

The mineral is mined mainly in New Mexico and Saskatchewan.

Federal antitrust lawyers had contended that from 1968 to 1974 the firms agreed informally to raise their prices to the level set by the government of the late Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher.

This was the second time the case had been tried. An earlier trial before Marshall ended in a hung jury after 10 weeks of testimony.

Acquitted in the case were AMAX Inc. and AMAX Chemical Co., Greenwich, Conn.; Duval Corp. and Duval Sales Corp., Houston, Tex.; and International Minerals and Chemicals Corp. (IMC), Libertyville, Ill.

The government's case was based on evidence that in 1968 New Mexico potash producers assured Thatcher that they planned no sudden production increase to undermine the Saskatchewan pricing plan.

Study group sets meeting

The Midland Reservoir Study Group of Society of Petroleum Engineers will hold its May meeting Friday at 11:30 a.m. in the American Legion Hall.

He joined an independent company after graduation, working four years in secondary recovery operations. He resigned to form his own company which became Injection Engineering Services, which he currently is serving as president. Ford developed a tracer injection technique known as velocity technique.

Field examples of production increases effected through utilization of a new technique will be included in Ford's Friday presentation.

The study group will suspend meetings for the summer.

Interest increased

CORPUS CHRISTI —

Peninsula Resources Corp. has announced that its wholly-owned subsidiary, Peninsula Pipeline Corp., has increased its interest in a 75-mile long intrastate natural gas pipeline from one-third to one-half.

The 8 and 10-inch pipeline crosses the Texas counties of Colorado, Austin, Waller, Harris and Montgomery.

John L. Hada Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said that the system will be operated by Texas Gas Corp., a Corpus Christi-based pipeline company and owner of the other one-half.

The line presently transports approximately 7.5 million cubic feet of gas a day.

Several wells capable of producing 3 million cubic feet a day are presently being tied into the system. The estimated capacity of the system is in excess of 50 million cubic feet of natural gas per day.

Both companies will undertake an active program to acquire natural gas in the area to substantially increase the present volume.

Peninsula's total purchase price for the additional interest was $500,000, consisting of cash of $250,000, and non-recourse obligations in principal and interest to be paid quarterly from a portion of the net revenues from the pipeline operations.

Peninsula Resources Corp. paid $366,000 for its original one-third interest.

Freeport reports offshore opener

NEW YORK — Freeport Minerals Co. has announced a gas discovery at Eugene Island Block 310, offshore Louisiana.

The Eugene Island discovery was drilled to a total depth of 10,188 feet and gas sands were logged between 6,600 feet and 6,800 feet.

On a drillstem test from perforations between 6,702 and 6,722 feet, the well flowed 7.7 million cubic feet of gas per day on a 20/64-inch choke, with a flowing pressure of 2,410 pounds per square inch.

A confirmation and extension well will be drilled 5,000 feet northwest of the discovery to help determine platform requirements.

The strike is the second commercial discovery made on five Transco-operated blocks acquired at the November 1976 federal lease sale in which Freeport Oil Co. of Midland Tex., a sub-siary, has a 25 per cent interest.

A multi-zone gas-condensate discovery on Vermilion Block 310 was announced last month.

Another well on West Delta Block 34 had non-commercial gas shows and additional exploratory drilling is planned for the block. Exploratory tests on two other blocks, Vermilion 25 and East Cameron 336, are being abandoned.

Canada exploring all avenues for transporting oil, gas

By DAN FISHER The Los Angeles Times

"We haven't foreclosed any options."

That is how an official in Canada's Department of Energy, Mines and Resources assesses that country's current thinking regarding rival proposals for transporting natural gas from Alaska and the Canadian Arctic.

Canada's decisions in this area are critical to the gas-hungry United States, as well. In fact, the important role the United States' northern neighbor will play is, perhaps, one of the least understood facets of the growing debate over delivery systems for the huge cache of North Slope Alaskan gas that sits atop the much ballyhooed Prudhoe Bay oil field.

Three rival systems have been proposed to bring that Alaskan gas to the lower 48 states. Canada can foreclose two of them.

A complex decision-making process that roughly parallels the one going on in this country is under way in Canada. It reaches its first major checkpoint this week with the anticipated release of the results of a two-year study into the social and economic impact of a proposed natural gas pipeline across Canada's northwest Territories. The political impact of this so-called Berger report probably will be more important to Canada's decision than its technical content.

The Berger report follows a U.S. Federal Power commission recommendation to President Carter last week that said one of two trans-Canadian pipeline routes should be chosen to move the Alaskan gas. But due to Canada's veto power over both those options, the Berger recommendations are widely considered to be more significant to the final decision than the FPC conclusions.

Both the Berger and FPC recommendations are merely the first of the official advisories.

Ultimately, it will be up to the very top levels of government in both countries — President Carter and Congress in the United States and Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and his cabinet in Canada.

The decision making processes in both countries are scheduled to culminate by this coming Sept. 1, but it is widely anticipated that it may well be the end of the year before any decision in either is really final. At that, legal challenges and financing details may take into 1978 to work out.

In a way, Trudeau and Canada face the tougher choice. They must consider a myriad of options. Depending on what the Canadians do, President Carter and the Congress may have only one.

The rival proposals from the U.S. point of view include the two trans-Canada pipelines favored by FPC and an all-American system that would avoid crossing Canadian territory by shipping gas in liquefied form from south Alaska to California in special cryogenic tankers.

The all-American system is proposed by El Paso Natural Gas Co. and it has the support of Alaska and organized labor. It would include a new gas pipeline roughly paralleling the nearly complete trans-Alaska oil line to carry the fuel from the North Slope to Gravena Point, a port on Alaska's southern coast. There the gas would be liquefied and loaded aboard the special tankers for a voyage to regasification facilities proposed for Point Conception on the California coast. Gas would then proceed to markets throughout the country via mostly existing pipelines.

The more ambitious of the Canadian pipeline proposals calls for a line headed east along the Arctic coast from Prudhoe Bay. At Canada's Mackenzie Delta it would pick up additional gas from undeveloped reserves known to exist there before heading south through Canada's Northwest Territories into the province of Alberta. From that point, separate pipeline spurs would carry gas to markets in the Eastern provinces, California and the West Coast, and Chicago and the northern tier states.

Known as the Arctic Gas proposal, this is the plan reviewed by Justice Thomas Berger, whose report is anticipated this week. It is also the line favored by California's gas utilities and tentatively endorsed by the state's Public Utilities Commission.

The other Canadian pipeline route is a latecomer to the competition. Known as the Alcan project, it would involve a pipeline headed south from Prudhoe Bay along the route already traversed by the trans-Alaska oil pipeline. At a point south of Fairbanks, however, it would branch off in a southeasterly direction, following the route of the Alcan Highway into Canada. In its most recently revised form, the Alcan line would also split once into Alberta province, with one branch headed to California and the West Coast and the other to Chicago through the northern tier states.

The Alcan route was favored by two of the four FPC commissioners in their recommendation last week. The other two favored Arctic Gas. Alcan is also the favorite of most environmental groups, which see it as causing the least damage. The other Canadian line would cross the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge in north east Alaska. The El Paso plan involves facilities in areas of high earthquake activity and the liquefied natural gas (LNG) portions of the proposed system raise safety issues in the minds of environmentalists.

With Canada's decision so crucial, proponents of all three routes are marshaling arguments on why selection of their specific plan would be in Canada's best interests.

El Paso argues that Canada doesn't really need Mackenzie Delta gas now and that a decision to reject both the Alcan and Arctic Gas proposals — in effect mandating El Paso's system — would allow Canada more time to deal with some thorny political issues.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas traffic deaths this year are barely ahead of 1976, the Department of Public Safety reports.

DPS records show a total of 944 dead on Texas highways and streets compared to 942 for the previous year, an increase of two-tenths per cent.

There have been 830 accidents this year in which deaths occurred, compared to 812 the year before, a two per cent increase.

Malpractice issue still simmers

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — After making the Senate cool its heels for more than two weeks, the House has called for negotiations over the smoking medical malpractice issue.

Representatives voted 106-26 on Friday to call for a conference committee to negotiate differences between the chambers over the bill.

Senators amended the House bill drastically before passing it on April 19, upsetting a delicate compromise between trial lawyers and several health care organizations. Most of the amendments came from the Texas Medical Association, which was not a party to the compromise.

Rep. Tom Uher, D-Bay City, the sponsor, said if the Senate changes are not removed, "we will have no medical malpractice legislation this session."

One item of controversy is a Senate provision allowing judges to reduce awards in malpractice cases by the amount of money a victim might already have received from his or her own insurance.

"I hope to have it (a bill) back to the floor of the House next week," Uher told reporters.

The House passed and sent to Gov. Dolph Briscoe for signature a bill requiring insurance companies to offer "underinsured motorist coverage."

It would fill the gap between actual cost of injuries received in an accident and the amount of liability insurance carried by the at-fault driver. The bill also adds property damage to the present uninsured motorist coverage.

Another major feature shifts from the policyholder to the insurance company the often impossible burden of proving whether a motorist was uninsured.

Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, beat a hasty retreat from his crusade to force the Senate to take up his property tax "reform" bill.

He knocked four bills off the morning calendar of local and uncontested bills because they were sponsored by senators who had not publicly agreed to vote to bring up his bill for a vote.

Sen. Tom Creighton, chairman of the Senate Economic Development

Committee, said the bill would stay there until Peveto could prove he had the 21 votes required to bring it up on the floor.

"We in the House have sat here for too long and let the Senate run over us, and that affects the integrity of the House," Peveto, D-Orange, said in a personal privilege speech.

Then came his chat with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, followed by withdrawal of his threat and release of the four bills, which then quickly passed.

"The lieutenant governor told me he would work very hard and commit himself to work with the committee and get it out and pass it," Peveto told reporters.

House members voted 68-59 against a Senate-passed bill raising from $10 to $25 per month the amount a judge can assess a convicted criminal to help defray the cost of probation.

Teachers planning to ask salary hikes

Midland teachers Tuesday will ask the school board for an increase in salaries, said Roy Dennis, representative of the Classroom Teachers Association of Midland.

The board meets at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school administration building.

"We are going to try to show that teachers' salaries have not kept pace with inflation and our purchasing power has been eroded considerably," Dennis said.

He said teachers "rank considerably lower (in salary) than people with comparable training and experience. We even rank lower than semi-skilled people."

No decision has been made on the amount of increase that will be requested, Dennis said. The average secondary school teacher makes $12,964 per year and the average elementary teacher makes $12,384 per year, school district business manager Don Furgeson said.

School board president Johnny Warren said the board will consider the request "but we can't do anything until the Legislature does something."

Dennis said the teachers want the board to have "whatever data we can offer" for use in considering the subject of teachers salaries.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the trustees are scheduled to consider a request from a senior citizens representative for the board to raise the property tax exemption for persons 65 or older from $3,000 to $10,000.

Property acquisition is scheduled to be discussed in an executive session.

Also on Tuesday's agenda will be budget amendment requests for elementary school supplies for next year and equipment for the Carver Cultural Center. The elementary supplies request is for $29,500. Schools superintendent Dr. James H. Mailey said these supplies should be purchased before next fall so that they will be ready when school opens.

For the Carver Cultural Center, $38,293 has been requested.

The trustees are due to hear a report on progress in setting up the Carver center, also.

The board will also hear a report on and consider approaches to improving the board room sound system and possible arrangements for tape recording board meetings.

Trustee Don Sparks requested at the last board meeting that possibilities of taping meetings be considered. Trustee Ed Runyan asked that a study be made into improving the board room sound system.

"Another report scheduled for the board meeting is one on progress in the district goals and objectives formulation process.

Plans for summer school organization are to be approved by the board at the Tuesday meeting, Mailey said there are no major differences between the proposal for this summer and in the operation last summer.

The board agenda also includes a possible pupil expulsion proceeding in an executive session.

Bids for classroom typewriters also are to be considered.

Ringling the bell

With BOB TIEUCEL

From a Black Perspective: The names of musicians Scott Joplin and Duke Ellington are among the final 33 sites associated with black Americans to be designated as National Historic Landmarks, bringing to 61 the number of such sites or structures to receive this status.

Under secretary of the Interior James A. Joseph said this latest selection of sites concludes a three-year nationwide study of sites and structures associated with black American history that possess national significance. The sites are located in 10 states and the District of Columbia.

The study was conducted for the National Park Service by the Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation (ABC), a non-profit organization headed by Robert A. and Vincent A. DeForrest of Washington, D.C. The first 28 landmarks associated with black Americans were approved in 1974 and 1975.

"The latest selection of sites," added Joseph, "reflects a fitting climax to this study. These sites recognize black Americans who have been prominent in such fields as art, music, sports, law, literature, religion, architecture and medicine."

The landmark designations constitute an "honor roll" of the nation's historic sites. As such, they are added to the National Register of Historic Places, an inventory of the nation's cultural properties deemed worthy of preservation. Placement on the register makes the site eligible for certain benefits and protection.

Twenty leading scholars in the field of Afro-American history served on a panel to urge the study of these sites. Another 50 persons, including educators, architects and historians, served on the Afro-American Bicentennial Corporation advisory board to nominate sites for consideration as landmarks.

Joseph has also been asked to serve on "advisory committee of 100" to establish First National Afro-American National Park near Boley, Okla., it was learned.

Attention junior and senior high school students: We have been asked to remind you the Eighth Annual $500 Scholarship Contest sponsored by the National Baptist Sunday School and Training Union Congress will be held June 17 in San Diego, Calif. A paper of approximately 500 words is to be written by each contestant. The subject: "What is the will of God for my life; and how can I know it?"

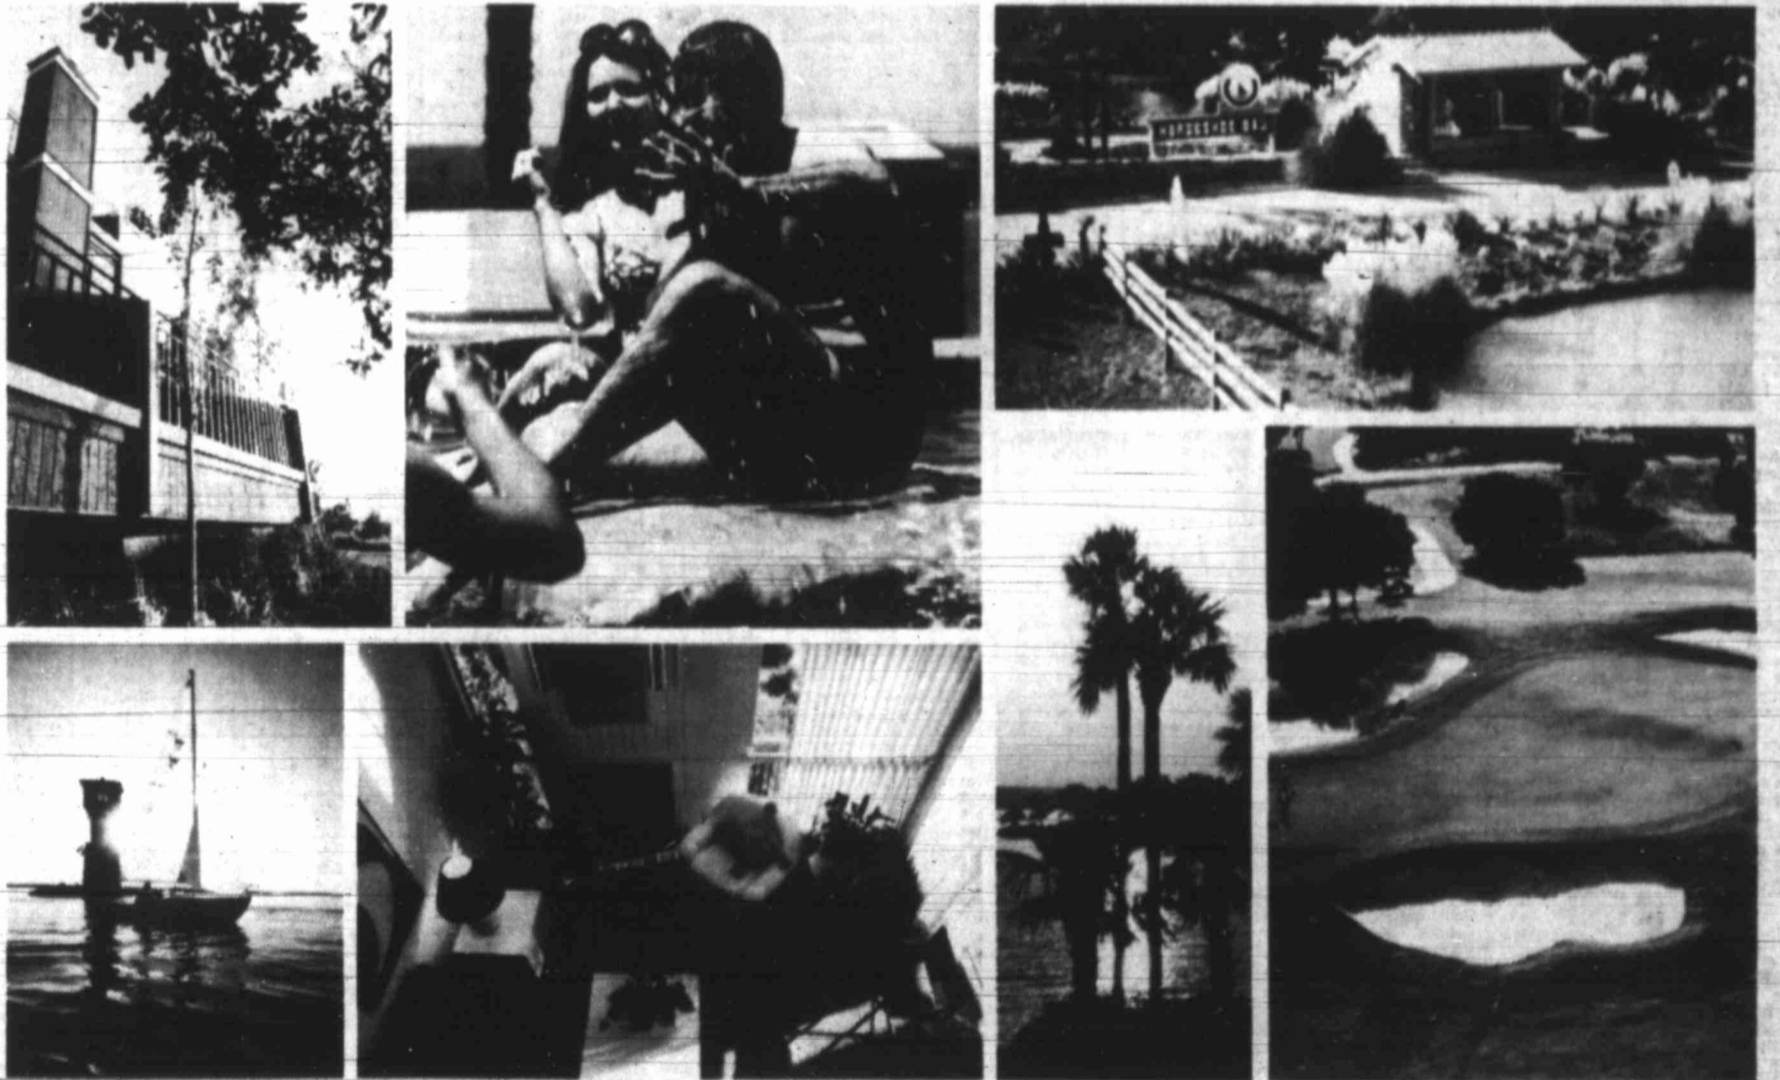

The contest is being held in connection with the 73rd convening of the National Baptist Sunday School and Baptist Training Union Congress. For further information, consult your pastor or write San Diego Convention, Dr. S. M. Lockridge, chairman, 1200 Third Avenue-Suite 824, San Diego, Calif. 92101.

Bellringers will recall that Dr. Lockridge has made numerous appearances as a speaker and evangelist in West Texas and New Mexico in recent years.

"The next great agenda for black Americans, if we are to survive, must be economic development," says a black educator and economist. Dr. Edward Irons of Atlanta, Ga. told several hundred participants of the 10th annual meeting of Black Methodists for Church Renewal that economic development was "the single most difficult activity to get involved in this nation." Enterprises Now, Inc. (ENI), a minority enterprises small business investment company, was created by black Methodist group in 1972 and is supported by the United Methodist Church.

Mrs. Ben Hill, widow of the late Rev. Ben Hill of Tulsa, Okla., legislator, editor, minister and widely known civic worker, has agreed to serve on the Committee of 100 to make Boley, Oklahoma, a National Park.

'Queen of the land'

"Show Mom You Care," the newspaper advertisement said.

And this is just what sons and daughters here and elsewhere are doing this very day — showing Mom that they care.

Yes, this is Mother's Day 1977 — one of the most popular and most widely-observed special days of the year.

It is entirely fitting that the occasion honoring Mother should receive the attention of everyone. True, she merits a whole lot more attention and expressions of love every day, but there most certainly is nothing wrong with a nationwide expression of love and appreciation directed to her on one designated day. Mother didn't expect or request such an observance in her honor in the first place, but neither does or should she shy away from it.

Anyway, today is her day — an occasion when Mother assumes her rightful position as "Queen of the Land."

It is wonderful that Mothers and Grandmothers — from the youngest to the oldest — are being remembered and honored in so many ways on this particular occasion, which is so wonderful and so meaningful.

Gifts, cards, flowers, telephone calls and messages of all kinds are being or have been received by Mothers from sons and daughters who take this means of showing their love, devotion, admiration and gratitude to Mother for her love, tender care, forgiving spirit and ever-watchful interest through the years. It is a most meaningful occasion.

And the never-waning memory of Mother also remains as precious as ever.

It is noteworthy that a West Texan, Mrs. Bette Foster of Del Rio, was selected as the 1977 Texas Mother of the Year. Mrs. Gloria Grace Berry Langdon of Tonkawa, Okla., is the national "American Mother of 1977."

The spotlight is focused on them, as representatives of Texas and American Mothers, but congratulations and all best wishes are directed to all Mothers and Grandmothers on this, their own very special day.

Metric motoring

The American people for sometime now have been afflicted with such bad jokes as "inching into the metric system" to emphasize the human resistance to change.

But now the Federal Highway Administration has decreed that the conversion to international standards will proceed at the maximum speed of 90 kilometers per hour. All speed limit signs will be changed to the new system in a brief 90-day period ending on Sept. 30, 1978.

Milepost and guide signs, such as those designating distances to cities, will be converted by Sept. 30, 1982.

Many Americans aren't ready for this changeover; and what an expensive item this will be. In Texas alone, the cost will run into the millions of dollars. This is money which could be used in road building.

The switch from miles to kilometers should pose no driving problems since speedometers and odometers can be adjusted easily to the metric system. Motorists slow to familiarize themselves with conversion tables, however, may be concerned that they will be susceptible to highway disorientation.

There should be no real problem, although a sign proclaiming "Hog Hollow — 10 kilometers" may be meaningless to reluctant learners.

Somewhere to the traveler's right, a dilapidated billboard — relic of a departed era — will bear the comforting exhortation "Eat at Joe's — six miles."

When automobile speedometers are changed, it may give some satisfaction to the speed demon lurking in most of us. Cruising along the fine Texas highways at "90" surely will make it seem like we're getting there faster than we do now at 55... or thereabouts.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Bureaucratic octopus thrives

WASHINGTON — In his third week as a leader of bureaucrats, Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell discovered he was being swallowed up by the noxious environment he had sworn to master. It had been the practice of his predecessors to jot down the name of everyone who called them on the phone, along with a note as to the subject matter. These informal scribbles quickly became enshrined as the Atty. Gen.'s "telephone log," and Bell was urged to continue the tradition. Heedlessly, he pledged to do so. After three weeks of faithfully scribbling down notes on his incessant phone calls, while departmental business lagged, he came up for air to lament: "I am about to be subsumed by my logging operation."

He would not be the first high appointee who discovered during the honeymoon that he was in bed with an octopus, smothered in its loving embrace, the undulating arms simultaneously caressing him and keeping him occupied. With too many arms to outmaneuver, the incoming administrative head usually becomes the pampered captive of the octopus he is supposed to control.

Jimmy Carter invaded Washington with a fragmentary force of no more than 1,200 men and women, most of whom needed instructions to find the bathroom. Yet they were thrust into command of a world-wide civilian force of 2,832,000 bureaucrats and a military force of 2,100,000 volunteers. Most of the Carter appointees are already in the process of being detoothed and bound by the Lilliputians of the permanent bureaucracy.

Taken together, the federal bureaucracy is at once the hope, the burden and, perhaps when all is done, the Nemesis of a free society. Of these assessments, probably only one is controversial. Hope? Yes, profound though the hazards posed by the bureaucracy may be, it is wrong to dismiss it, as critics often do, as though it were a needless excrescence that has mysteriously congealed upon the body politic.

In fact, the bureaucracy is indispensable. Our society can do without Congress for a decade and would be better off for the absence. It can get on without a president for years on end, as past duds in the White House have demonstrated. But without the bureaucracy, our commonwealth in its present state would begin to fall apart in five minutes.

The public bureaucracy is the glue that holds our society together. It is the bureaucracy which strikes down the absconding husband and refloats the scuttled wife; which cares for the child abandoned by its parents and the parents neglected by their children; which sustains the worker dismissed by his employer and the employer undersold by the remorseless Japanese; which combats the venereal diseases and treats the hallucinations spawned by the new morality; which defends the landscape against the bulldozer and makes good the obligations of defrauding banks.

OPTIMISM FADES Middle East peace: as distant as ever

By JAMES CARY
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The United States will push for an overall settlement in the Middle East this year, if and when it can line up a properly prepared peace conference in Geneva for Israel and its Arab neighbors to attend.

Informed sources, reporting this, remain somewhat skeptical, however, that such a meeting can be brought about under the preconditions that President Carter has laid down.

The President told newsmen April 26 that it would be better not to have a conference unless there are strong possibilities beforehand for what he called "substantial achievements."

And for such progress to be in sight in advance the known positions of both Israel and the Arabs on a number of issues — particularly on Israel's final borders, the nature of the peace desired and the Palestinian problem — will have to change.

It is precisely because these positions have not changed that many close observers of the Middle East were astonished by the optimism coming from the White House and State Department until recent days.

Both President Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance had freely predicted that a Geneva conference would be held in the second half of 1977.

Then, during or just prior to the visit of Jordan's King Hussein here April 25-26, there was a sudden shift and Mr. Carter seemed to agree with the Jordanian monarch's position that without prior understandings a Geneva conference could turn into a disaster.

Raising unrealistic hopes for a settlement when no settlement was possible could contribute to new pressures for a renewal of hostilities.

Nevertheless, Mr. Carter, despite his new grasp of Middle East complexities, has a plan for attempting to bring about favorable conditions for a successful Geneva meeting.

First he will complete his series of meetings with Middle East leaders — with President Hafez Assad of Syria in May and with Prince Fahd, deputy prime minister of Saudi Arabia.

Then the United States, after reviewing what each of the leaders has said, will send Vance back to the Middle East for final talks in Israel, Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Saudi Arabia.

It will not be until after those discussions that the United States will know whether the required "strong possibilities for substantial achievements" exist.

If the determination is favorable, it is then that the United States will push for an overall settlement.

Informants say that whatever framework of peace seems achievable then will depend partly on what has been learned, but that the ideas that Mr. Carter has already thrown out are apt to be part of it.

Among other things, he has called for Israeli withdrawal back to its 1967 borders with minor adjustments; for a series of staged Israeli withdrawals from captured Arab lands, perhaps extending over two to eight years; buffer zones; peacekeeping forces and a firm commitment to Israel's right to exist.

Most notable in all this is the absence of any suggestion on the future of Jerusalem, one of the most explosive of all the issues because it is the site of places holy to both Arab and Jew.

State Department informants will only say grimly, "Jerusalem is an issue that will have to be decided in the context of an overall settlement."

For the present, however, the road to Geneva is strewn with what appear to be immovable obstacles.

Assad recently told British journalists in Damascus that Syria would make no concessions to Israel, and if there is not a just settlement at Geneva the Arab nations would not hesitate to attempt to achieve their goals by force.

Likewise, the Palestine Liberation Organization, recognized by all the Arab nations as the legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, has refused to change its charter that calls for the destruction of Israel.

And Israel, in turn, states it will not sit down in Geneva with any representative of the PLO present — whether disguised as a member of another nation's delegation or not.

NICK THIMMESCH

Poor boy Richard Nixon collects his 'nickles'

WASHINGTON — David Frost could well declare, "that was the week of Richard Nixon," and indeed it was. No figure in America can command more attention, once it all starts, than the former President with the heavy brows hanging over his eyes, the familiar jowls and nose.

Gerald Ford rightly feared that if he didn't pardon Nixon, the Nixon drama would have swirled around the capital for many months. It, not the Ford Presidency, would have been in the limelight, and how could the government ever focus on the real problems facing the nation?

In a lesser way, Jimmy Carter must have thought how odd it was that he took second place to Nixon this past week, though Mr. Carter embarked on his first overseas trip as President.

We live in a time of mediocrities, banalities, comfortable living and weak leadership in all sectors of our lives. We look for definition, for somebody who stands out, one way or the other. And so there is endless fascination for Richard Nixon, though his role now is that of an ogre (in the public's eye) who emerged on television last week to explain how Watergate villainy came about.

In this media age, it is easy to beat the drum for such an event as Frost's interviews with Nixon. We have a suitably intriguing backdrop, Watergate. Nixon and his lieutenants provide a cast easily identified from previous media exposure. We have the eternal element of moral choices, good and evil, and what might have been. And we have Nixon himself, whom the media loves to mess with, and has for nearly 30 years. Thirty years? Yes, 30 years.

● Nick Thimmesch ●

It will be 29 years ago this summer that Nixon first got his mitts on the Hiss case, one which propelled him to national fame. TV was in its pioneer days then — Milton Berle, Bishop Fulton J. Sheen and Whittaker Chambers. From that time to the very moment you are reading this, Richard Nixon has been a large figure on the American landscape, particularly with the media. The media needs Nixon. People who are confused about the meaning of life need Nixon to vent on. Two generations of liberals needed Nixon to attack in order to justify their own ideas. And Nixon always played the role to the hilt.

So now he puts himself in the ring, like a gladiator ready to show his scars again for the right price. He can fight. He can punch, counterpunch, duck and dodge. He has a story to tell about his Presidency, one of the liveliest in American history, and not all Watergate by any means.

Since he has a poor boy complex and is the sort who took pop bottles back to the store for a refund long before recycling was a virtue, he gathers up the nickels that David Frost offers. Perhaps $600,000 and more isn't nickels, but it is in some people's terms, people who wouldn't subject themselves to the ring. I remember the broken-nosed fighter Joey Giardello fighting for a small purse once and later daubing at his split lip and saying, "What a beating for $500."

It is simple to depict Nixon as the villain of our time. Too simple, and also shallow. Ye gods, if all the Watergate tapes were played, it might be Henry Kissinger sitting there in front of David Frost explaining how he wanted Daniel Ellsberg jailed.

If Presidents Kennedy and Johnson had to sit in front of David Frost and subject themselves to questioning based on the amount of material Frost had on Nixon, well, it just wouldn't have happened. Kennedy would have been too smart and proud. Johnson would have been too clever. And it can only happen to Nixon in one of his nickel-nursing phases.

There was very little untoward activity in the Nixon Administration that hadn't been performed in previous Administrations. Nixon's foolish tapes, the dumb games played by him and his uncertain staff, a Washington powerhouse establishment that hated him, an overheated media, and the accumulated feeling of exasperation of the great failures of the Sixties — all came to bear on Nixon, and thus we had the first President in American history forced to resign.

Yes, Nixon has been with us 30 years and is probably good for many more. It took him six years to move upward from a fly-specked law office in Whittier, Calif., to the Vice Presidency and the White House. Nixon was on five of the six Republican presidential tickets nominated in the 1952-72 period. Of the five presidential level races he was in, he was on the winning ticket four times, and there is good reason to believe had the 1960 election stolen from him, Nixon was never a dull figure in the third quarter of this century, though he was always a square one.

It's easy to blame all public and private evil on Nixon. That saves us from thinking about hard matters like energy, the decline in education, the obesity which plagues us, the paucity of housing, the Middle East, and how to keep trouble in the world at a minimum in our time.

Far better to stare at the tube, and let the juices flow against Richard Nixon, and reflect on how suave David Frost is, and how all this Watergate stuff won't happen again. Could this fascination possibly become boring? Not until we have another ogre to vent on.

ART BUCHWALD
Lethargy
strangles
America

WASHINGTON — There's something going on in America now that not many people can put their finger on. There is a malaise and a feeling that nothing is happening. I felt the same way and discussed it with Rademacher.

He has a theory and it's worth exploring. "It's the television reruns that are doing it to all of us."

"Most people in this country are so TV-oriented that they don't know how much it affects their lives. When the networks start rerunning their shows, people feel their lives have stopped and won't start again until the fall when the fresh segments begin again."

"It's frightening but it's true," I agreed. "When I see a rerun of a M-A-S-H program, I get the feeling I've been there before. It's a real downer."

"We all get that feeling," Rademacher said. "For tens of thousands of years people have lived their lives by the seasons. There was spring, summer, fall and winter. You got new hope and spirit as the weather changed. It kept your juices flowing. But now that people live their lives through the tube and there are only two seasons — the regular TV period and the rerun season — no one has much to look forward to during the reruns."

"Talk about deja vu," I said. "The problem is getting longer every year. As costs of TV shows go up, the networks and TV producers are making fewer shows and putting on more reruns. When people watch a rerun they feel that nothing new has happened to them that day."

"I watched a repeat of a Carol Burnett show the other night," I said. "I laughed at the first time I saw it. I have to admit it made me sick."

"It's like reading a newspaper you've read before," Rademacher said. "How do they expect the American people to think of fresh ideas and be creative if night after night they have to watch the same programs they saw in the fall and the winter?"

"But the worst part of it," he said, "is that as soon as the networks start their rerun season, people tend to repeat themselves at home and in the office, and they say the same things to each other that they said during the regular TV season."

"My wife and I do that," I agreed. "Everyone does it. Even the President of the United States. No one thinks of anything new to say until the middle of September."

"The TV networks have sure put this country in a rut," I said. "Of course, the news reports aren't reruns are they?"

"We're not certain of that," Rademacher said. "Most of the news in the spring and summer sounds like you've heard it before. I think that's why Walter Cronkite goes off the air for three months. He doesn't want people to think he's a rerun."

Rademacher said that historically spring was always the season when everyone came alive. "But since TV, it is now the fall that everyone looks forward to, when the new network shows blossom on the air bringing hope and joy to advertisers all over the land. The fact that 90 per cent of the new shows will die by January is not important. They will be replaced by an even 'newer season' which will last until April."

"Then comes May and the longer the rerun season the more lethargic people get," he continued. "You can see it everywhere."

"There's always baseball on TV," I said. "The trouble with baseball on television is that even if it's a new game it looks like a repeat."

"I guess you could say the same for golf. Wait a minute. I know of one show going on this month — it's David Frost's interviews with Richard Nixon. That isn't a rerun."

Rademacher said, "I wouldn't be too sure about that."

THE TUNNEL AT THE END OF THE LIGHT

Big cars -- the American way

By WILLIAM GREIDER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — My daughter at this moment sometimes happens when children develop intense interests, it educates the parents.

On a Sunday afternoon I learned something about the true nature of horse shows. I thought horse shows, especially jumpers going over fences, belonged to rich people, the town-and-country tweeds.

What we discovered at one of the stables in Rock Creek Park here was an extraordinary scene — hundreds of ordinary folks gathered to ride and jump in friendly competition. Scores of well-muscled horses. Friendly banter. The easy ambience of a country fair, right in the city.

But more startling still was the awesome fleet of monster vehicles assembled for this horse show. Bumper-to-bumper horse vans were parked around the ring. Not just your little single-horse trailers, but huge trucks with fancy interiors, capable of hauling four horses or six horses — gas-guzzling horse stables on wheels.

ONLY IN AMERICA, right? The puritan in me was naturally offended by the grossness. All that mechanical horsepower assembled for the purpose of playing horse-and-rider. You could probably run Europe on the oil Americans devoted to such non-essential marvels as horse vans.

But the small democrat in me felt good. I would like the kings and queens of Europe to come to Rock Creek Park some Sunday afternoon and try to guess who these people are. They are just regular people, ordinary Americans, enjoying a sport invented for dukes and earls.

Automobiles, camper vans, pickup trucks — they are gross, luxurious, wasteful vehicles. But they are also democratic. The horse show reminded me that someone ought to say this, now that the puritans are mounting another offensive.

I think cars and interstate highways and even those ridiculous summer-homes-on-wheels called "recreation vehicles" spread egalitarian values through America — the values of time and mobility — and they spread these qualities downward in our society, more directly than any patch-up government programs.

Cars give poor people more choices. If government regulation were to cripple the automobile society, in the name of saving oil, it would most surely hit the poor first and hardest, then ripple upward on the economic ladder to the rich, whose lives would not suffer at all. (I am reasonably certain that government regulation will not be allowed, because too many politicians understand that the very idea contains the seeds of class war.)

I CAN'T PROVE these claims with statistics, but anyone who has traveled much around this country has seen what I mean. The new pattern of country living is a man or woman who drives 100 or 150 miles a day from their farm or small town to a job in a medium-sized city.

In Kentucky people who live in benighted mountain countries drive the turnpike to good jobs in Lexington. In Illinois a woman drives 140 miles a day commuting from Carbondale to Mt. Vernon. In the West the distances are more awesome still.

The range of these working people in the country has been defined by the interstates, and it has greatly increased their job choices. The practice of long-distance commuting, outside metropolitan areas, has increased dramatically in the last few years; so has the population in those places. The energy statistics may put that mileage down in the luxury column, but I doubt that it looks that way to those people.

Here's another thing that doesn't show up very clearly in the statistics: cars help people, especially poor people, to create their own private "social security" systems to cope with their big problems — unemployment, family trouble, poverty.

You can run away from home in a car (and also return when you get homesick). The Okies drove to California in the 1930s, and that process, less obvious and dramatic, is still in motion today, all over this country.

I first saw it years ago in Cincinnati, my hometown, where thousands of Appalachian mountaineers — "hillbillies," we called them — came north to look for work. They lived in the slums and were widely despised, and many could not find jobs.

BUT THEY DID NOT just migrate to the city — they went back and forth, frequently. They might return to the home place in eastern Kentucky during lean times, come back to the city when jobs opened up, drive home to the mountains on the weekends, where friends and family were around for comfort.

These were painful times, but the old cars they drove were part of easing the pain. The Cincinnati bridges are still jammed with cars heading south on Friday afternoons.

You can find the same thing on Indian reservations. Talk to the most impoverished families in a remote canyon of a South Dakota reservation, and it is likely that some of them have been to Chicago or Cleveland or San Francisco. There are no jobs on the reservation; they do not like the wretched life in the cities. So they moved back and forth, searching earnestly for modest improvement in their lives.

And it is not just the traveling around, private and unplanned by the economists. It is the idea of traveling that is important to us, transcending all class lines. This notion, the roaming American, is as old as the republic, but it has survived, miraculously, in a new mythology built around the automobile (and lately the van).

The car is a subterranean linkage in this broad country; expressed in mad non-stop dashes from coast to coast, burning across the heartland's all-night radio band, tripping the continent on adrenalin. If you have not done it, if you don't understand why other people do it, read Kerouac's "On the Road" or Algren's "Walk on the Wild Side."

CARS ARE OUR leap into sensational experiences: I remember leaving lower Manhattan at midnight, plunging into the greasy air of the Lincoln Tunnel and 30 hours later sitting in a drugstore in a steamy small town of Mississippi, drinking Coke and listening to the dead voice of the counterwoman. Thirty hours later we were in the rain forest of Mexico, where tarantulas sometimes cross the highway.

I remember a wreck on the West Coast, coming back north, when a Mexican nun in a white habit sewed up my forehead. We limped north on buses and hitchhiking, feeling suspicious of ourselves without a car. I knew I was home at a used-car lot in Tucson, when the salesman warned us: "This car ain't got no garn-tee you know." He was from West Virginia, a familiar voice and I can still hear it, though this was 20 years ago.

These cars, I think, burned images in all our young minds — painful, frantic, gaudy moments, sometimes suicidal, occasionally triumphant. I am thankful that I lived through it (a few friends did not) and I can still say that it seemed necessary, those escapes by car. Adults, I discovered later, are not so different, only more cautious as drivers.

This is all very untidy. Economically wasteful. In a better world people would not wander around like this, burning up gasoline in futile searches (in a better world, people would not be poor or spiritually desperate). Still, there's an explosion waiting, I think, if the government tries to price Americans out of their wandering.

IF YOU WANT to see what it looks like, examine a Latin American city where the poor lack mobility — where they stack up in the cities and build tarpaper slums, unable to find work and unable to return home.

Right now the puritans are bringing up Europe again, to make us feel bad. Europe is more efficient, less wasteful. Europe does not squander oil the way we do. This is beyond dispute, but there are reasons which the puritans do not mention.

For one thing, we have lots of people in this country who drive the equivalent of halfway across France every day, just getting to work and back. The French do not do that much, especially the poorer French. It is a smaller place, more crowded, with less wandering.

Also the poor people in France do not own cars. They have motor scooters or bikes or they walk. With good fortune, they buy the bottom-of-the-line Citroen, a noisy, sluggish beast that would strain its guts out driving halfway across France every day.

But here is something else that Europeans enjoy: speed. Strange but true that Frenchmen are driving along their Autoroute in smaller cars at 80 to 100 miles an hour, while America chugs along the interstates in their behemoths at 55 m. p. h.

If we are talking about inefficiency, this is one of the grossest inefficiencies in America today. This nation spent billions of dollars building a rational system of high-speed highways; yet now millions of Americans are wasting millions of hours of their lives, driving slow in order to save a little oil. I know all the pieties about how slower is faster, but folks are already defeating that anyway with CB radios and native American stealth. If Americans drove better-designed cars, they could drive a lot faster, more efficiently.

TIME AND MOBILITY. What I'm getting at is that the political solutions to the energy problems will make a lot more sense — and will have at least a prayer of popular acceptance — if the energy debate recognizes the importance of those values in the automobile, especially for the less privileged. The solutions could aim to preserve those social values — even enhance them — instead of denouncing us for statistical luxuries.

So why not make a deal with American car owners when the nation's fleet of gross monsters becomes smaller and less wasteful, they can go back to driving 80 miles an hour on the interstates. Make a trade: size for speed, grossness in exchange for speed.

We have gambling Wrong assumptions

To The Editor:

Gambling, we are told, is an evil; the lure of something for nothing, "beating the house," can be addictive. It has been hinted that Midlanders have even resorted to emplaning at Midland Regional Air Terminal for Las Vegas, to indulge their gaming lust.

Well, folks, we've got gambling, with a capital G, right here in Midland City, with slot machines installed at our very own Air Terminal!

For the uninitiated potential gambler, you need only pull into the metered parking areas to have access to the "slots" in the form of 30 minute 25 cent meters. But these aren't your average parking meters, no siree. These little beauties have had their hands removed so that a player parking on a meter with time remaining can't possibly tell how much time he has, and how much is held by the "house."

Oh, the excitement of it all! Who would be so "chicken" as to put a quarter in a meter with time left on it? But how much time? Can the player get his transaction completed before the red flag flies? Will the lines at the counters delay the player long enough for one of the highly-trained, armed, certified, ever-alert meter men to cite the loser's vehicle?

The odds are great, the action fast (and occasionally furious) and the players often famous and powerful (even mayors), so why should we waste air fare flying to Vegas when we've got it all right here, courtesy of the Midland City Council?

Teens beware

To The Editor:

If you are a teen-ager — beware. There exists in Midland a city traffic court of no equal justice for teenagers.

Recently my son received a traffic ticket for allegedly going through a red light. He insisted that the light was yellow when he entered the intersection. Two other cars passed him in the other lane while he was moving through.

We appeared before the judge and requested a jury trial. Arriving at the stated time, we asked, "Where is the jury?" The judge replied, "I'm the jury. If you want a jury trial, they could fine you to a maximum $200." As this violation carried a fine of $12.50, we decided to restate our case before the judge.

The trial was not unlike a kangaroo court. The city retains an attorney, a professional in the courtroom. The defendant, my son, was not allowed counsel — he stood alone. The attorney questioned the arresting officer, in typical barrister fashion, concerning the circumstances involving the alleged violation.

He did not question the officer about facts that my son brought to light concerning the intersection. During the cross-examination the attorney deliberately asked questions unrelated to the violation, and made comments that the defendant "really doesn't know what he is saying." This was done to confuse the defendant, a 16-year-old boy who, being a teenager, already had one strike against him. It was obvious before the trial was concluded that the verdict would be guilty.

Strange as it may seem, an adult received a citation for the same violation at the same intersection. His violation was probated, without a trial.

This was my first experience to witness a trial in the Midland traffic court. I was appalled and dismayed at the total lack of respect for equal rights. I don't expect any change in this system. All I can say is, teenagers beware, the double standard does exist — at least in this court.

To The Editor:

It was amusing to read the article in your recent Sunday edition — via the irrepressibly liberal Washington Post — exposing the romantic, though tragic, life of one of Cuba's revolutionary women.

Depicted like the average American housewife ("at the supermarket, at the bridge club... on a shopping spree... vivacious, chattering and carefree") with her young son attired in Cuba's military garb, its only purpose could be to entice support for Mr. Carter's plan for "play and trade" with this totalitarian regime.

As a result of this flowery expose of a typical Cuban mother, I seriously doubt there will be a massive rush of freedom seekers to this land of idealistic bliss. Rather, Cuba appears to be a reflection of its master, Russia, unable and unwilling to explain why everybody (not just Jews) seem to want out and nobody wants in.

But, then, everyone's loveable George McGovern has just returned from the island and says everything is great down there... or, at least, as good as Russia. Would you say ole George was hedging. But, anyway, Jane Fonda has told us for years how great Vietnam is, so naturally, Mr. Carter hopes to include ample amounts of our tax dollars to these human-righters, too.

When Mr. F. D. Roosevelt recognized Russia (and, incidentally, canceled their debts to us) in 1933, our country opened the floodgates to many of the same problems we have today with that and other socialist dictatorships. History repeats, repeats and repeats!

As most TV commentators often say, "I am sure most Americans believe (or agree) that..." the Washington Post, Mr. Carter, Mr. McGovern and Miss Fonda are very wrong in their assumptions and opinions and quite naive or misled in their predictions.

Choir is great

To The Editor:

I had the honor and privilege to attend the Buccaneer Festival in Corpus Christi with the Midland Lee High Choral. There they were in competition with 65 other choirs from Oklahoma, New Mexico and Texas.

The boys choir received a 2, the girls choir received a 1, the mixed choir received a 1 and a trophy. For those who do not know about the Lee High Choral, they have received standing ovations in Kansas City, Mo., at the Music Educators Convention and in Canyon, Texas, at the West Texas University.

This choir is not funded at all by our school system. This choir works very hard to earn the money it takes to make these trips. It is a shame that our public school system cannot find it in their budget to help finance a choir as renowned as Lee High Choral.

More important than the honors they bring back to Midland and Lee High School, they leave the places they visit with the knowledge that our students are gracious and very well-mannered. These students are the best ambassadors Midland and Lee High School could ever have, and yet it seems that our local newspaper chooses not to recognize them in their publications.

I feel by doing this they are ignoring the fact that Midland produces more outstanding young adults than the few who are caught participating in a pot party or speed chase.

POSITIVE THINKING
Why do we often insist on living the hard way?

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I met a friend of mine, a member of Congress, on a plane some time ago. He told me he was on his way home to his district to speak to a large meeting of constituents.

This particular group was quite hostile to him, he said, and would probably try to make things pretty rough for him. But, although they represented a minority in his district, he was going to face them just the same.

"They are American citizens and I am their representative. They have a right to meet with me if they want to." "Well," I commented, "you don't seem to be much worried about it." "No," he replied, "if I were to get worried about it, then I would be upset and would not handle the situation very well."

"Just how are you going to handle the situation?" I asked.

"I'll tell you. They'll be a noisy crowd and there will be over a thousand there. But I have my own way of meeting such situations. It's a little formula I learned a long while ago which has served me well ever since. This is it: I will breathe deeply, talk quietly, speak sincerely, hold my temper and trust the good Lord to see me through."

"I have learned one thing," the congressman continued, "and that is, in any situation, the secret is to relax and keep calm, having faith, do your best and you can usually make things come out okay."

I don't know what you think about it, but personally I believe this man has discovered something. Most people would go into a meeting like that all tied up, full of belligerency, with a chip on the shoulder, ready to meet their opponents blow for blow. And, inevitably, the results wouldn't be too good.

This man, however, had taught himself how to meet a tough situation and even gain the respect of those who differed from him. I imagine he could go home after such a meeting and sleep peacefully, without being plagued by bitterness or post mortem thoughts of how he could have handled the situation better. His formula is really a pretty good secret to learn. It's the way to personal power and real efficiency.

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

'PDJ' planning his political return

By BILL KIDD
Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Political observers used to take readings on the Soviet power structure by checking which official stood where during May Day celebrations in Moscow.

Texas political observers took some readings the day after May Day, when the House of Representatives celebrated Speaker's Day — noting which former speakers showed up, and which didn't.

Notably absent was Ben Barnes of Brownwood. Notably present were Gus Mutscher of Brenham (who may or may not have political ambitions beyond the confines of Washington County) and then Price Daniels, Sr. and Jr.

It is the second half of that father-and-son political act that is getting the attention these days.

Price Daniel Jr. or "PDJ" as he was often called during his term as speaker, has indicated he's planning to return to Austin, making a race for attorney general.

Friends of Daniel have been calling reporters to leak word of PDJ's poll (the exact results of which haven't been released formally) showing his chances in various races against various candidates.

Daniel himself has been checking out locations in Austin for a campaign office, they say.

Daniel says he is planning to "make a formal announcement and kick things off sometime this summer."

The poll, which he says he needs clearance from the pollster to release, showed him "very strong" in "several hypothetical races."

For example, he says, it showed his name recognition three times that of Secretary of State Mark White — and White appears to be the only other contender for the attorney general post (always assuming John Hill

And name recognition is a major factor — as Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough could testify.

Daniel says that while he "tested several possibilities — and all of them proved strong," it is the attorney general's post that he is seeking.

"It is the only race I'm considering," he confirms.

Daniel says he commissioned the poll to determine what his political status was: "I felt like things were still in good shape... I didn't realize they were in that good shape."

Daniel is likely to make a strong candidate — and will be able to point to his role in the "Reform Session" of 1973 following the Sharpstown Bank scandal.

His presence at Speaker's Day helped to point up the ironies inherent in the political process.

Ehrlichman says time will prove Nixon tale false

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Ehrlichman says former President Richard M. Nixon's version of the Watergate cover-up in his interview with David Frost was a "rationalization that will be tested and found false."

Nixon's former domestic affairs adviser also said in a magazine article he wrote following the Nixon-Frost interview Wednesday night that Nixon was "overcome with self-pity" when he fired him and that Nixon "offered me a huge sum of money. I declined it."

"I asked him why I was being fired," Ehrlichman said. "He didn't reply."

"I then said I had only one last request: that some day he explain it to my children. He didn't reply."

In the Frost interview, Nixon said when he told Ehrlichman and H. R. Haldeman, then White House chief of staff, that they were being fired, "I seriously considered whether I shouldn't resign."

Ehrlichman, however, said that when Nixon told him he was fired "at no time did he so much as hint that he thought of resigning."

Ehrlichman, now serving a 2½-to-8 year sentence at Camp Safford Federal Prison in Arizona on charges of obstruction of justice, conspiracy and lying in the Watergate cover-up, made his comments in an article he wrote in his jail cell for New York magazine and its West Coast sister publication New West magazine. The article will appear in both magazines Monday.

Ehrlichman said that while he listened to the Nixon-Frost interview, it was "clear to me that there is, at San Clemente, a version of the years 1971 to 1975 that is not merely revisionist. It's a history manqué."

"There was a stylish and classy and effective way to tell the truth about all this," Ehrlichman said. "But that chance was lost in March and April of 1973. There might have been a way for him to tell the truth in May of 1977, too. Instead, I heard a smarmy, maudlin rationalization that will be tested and found false. But it does have the virtue of symmetry."

Ehrlichman said he first discovered "I was put over the side by Richard Nixon when I listened to the tapes in 1974. All words, no pictures: Let's be sure no one tells Ehrlichman everything is being taped. Conversations with (Charles) Colson about clemency for (E. Howard) Hunt that Nixon lied about."

Commenting on his meeting with Nixon at Aspen Lodge at Camp David, Md., on April 30, 1973, Ehrlichman said, "When I arrived ... to be fired, it was obvious the President had been crying. (I made very careful notes as soon as I left Aspen, both as to what happened and what each of us said.) He was overcome with self-pity."

State lawmaker fasting

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Fasting Dallas Rep. Sam Hudson, concerned about his health, has started drinking fruit and vegetable juices and taking vitamins — but is still avoiding solid food.

Hudson went on a hunger strike 45 days ago because he couldn't get many of his more than 100 bills set for committee hearings. He has lost more than 35 pounds.

"I've still got 24 bills that haven't been set, most of them in health and welfare committee," said Hudson.

Ruth Andrade holds her new "son," Paul Garcia, as she explains how Paul came out of the car accident alive. His parents, Ephraim and Virginia Garcia, were killed in it.

With tragedy comes happiness into the Andrade family's home

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

"When he passed away, a part of me died. But these kids make me feel like a part of him again."

Ruth Andrade, already the mother of two sons, suddenly found herself without her twin brother and his wife and the mother of two more children. Ephraim Garcia, and his wife, Virginia, were killed April 12 in a head-on collision near Big Spring, leaving their two children, Paul, 3 and Melody, 7, without a home.

Mrs. Andrade has taken it all in stride. Even though the tragedy is a recent one, the Andrade home at 1705 N. H St. is not a sad one, and much of the happiness can be credited to Mrs. Andrade and her ability to make the best of every circumstance.

"It (the tragedy) brings sadness to us, but these children bring us joy," she said, holding Paul and his black-and-red checked stuffed bear on her lap.

When the Andrades heard about the accident, they had no idea they would be the one family out of several that would be chosen to take the children and rear them. Even today, the Andrades say they still don't understand why the rest of the family thought they would be the best for the children.

"Living so close (the Garcias lived in San Angelo) we visited, but not that much," Mrs. Andrade said. She listed several factors behind why they were chosen.

One is that she was Ephraim's twin sister. Another reason could be that "Ginger (Virginia) and I got along so well. We were so close it sometimes seemed as if we thought alike."

The two families even "happened" the same way, Mrs. Andrade said. Their oldest son, Marck, 16, was adopted and then they had Nick, 13. The Garcias adopted Melody before they had Paul.

The Nick Andrades have been married 17, almost 18, years. Nick has worked with the U. S. Postal Service almost that long. He graduated from Midland High School after moving to the Tall City in 1945.

Ruth, the daughter of a Baptist minister, grew up in central and West Texas. She came to Midland in 1956 as a kindergarten teacher, and then went to work as a secretary at Crockett Elementary School until the Garcia children came into her life.

Mrs. Andrade quit working then to be at home and help the children adjust to what has happened. "It's kind of like a vacation for me," she said. "But, the children are more important right now."

Taking over two children in a situation such as this is never easy, but in this case it was complicated with Paul being seriously injured in the accident and having to stay in the hospital a week. During that time, Mrs. Andrade was with him.

How he survived the accident is still a mystery, she said. Apparently the father knew there was no hope for himself, but tried to save Paul by covering the child with his body, and it worked. Investigating officers first thought all occupants in the Garcia car were dead until they heard Paul crying, she explained.

Melody was staying with some people in San Angelo when the accident occurred.

Even though the children are adjusting to what has happened, they still have questions and, like most mothers, Mrs. Andrade usually is the one who must find the answers.

"When they ask questions I take my time about answering, searching for the right answer," she said. Mrs. Andrade also often refers to the Bible for help with those answers, she added.

The church played a major part in the Garcias' lives and could be one reason why the children have adjusted to their parent's deaths. Mrs. Andrade explained that her brother and his wife had told the children that when they die, they will be in heaven, as will the rest of their family and friends. This the children remember.

Paul, pointing and looking upward, said, "We won't see them (his parents) down here, but we will up there."

But, there are times when they still wonder why. Mrs. Andrade said Melody has questioned her as to why God took their parents, and both children still dream of them.

The Andrades have an inner strength, they said, which is helping them over the rougher times and in coping with all situations.

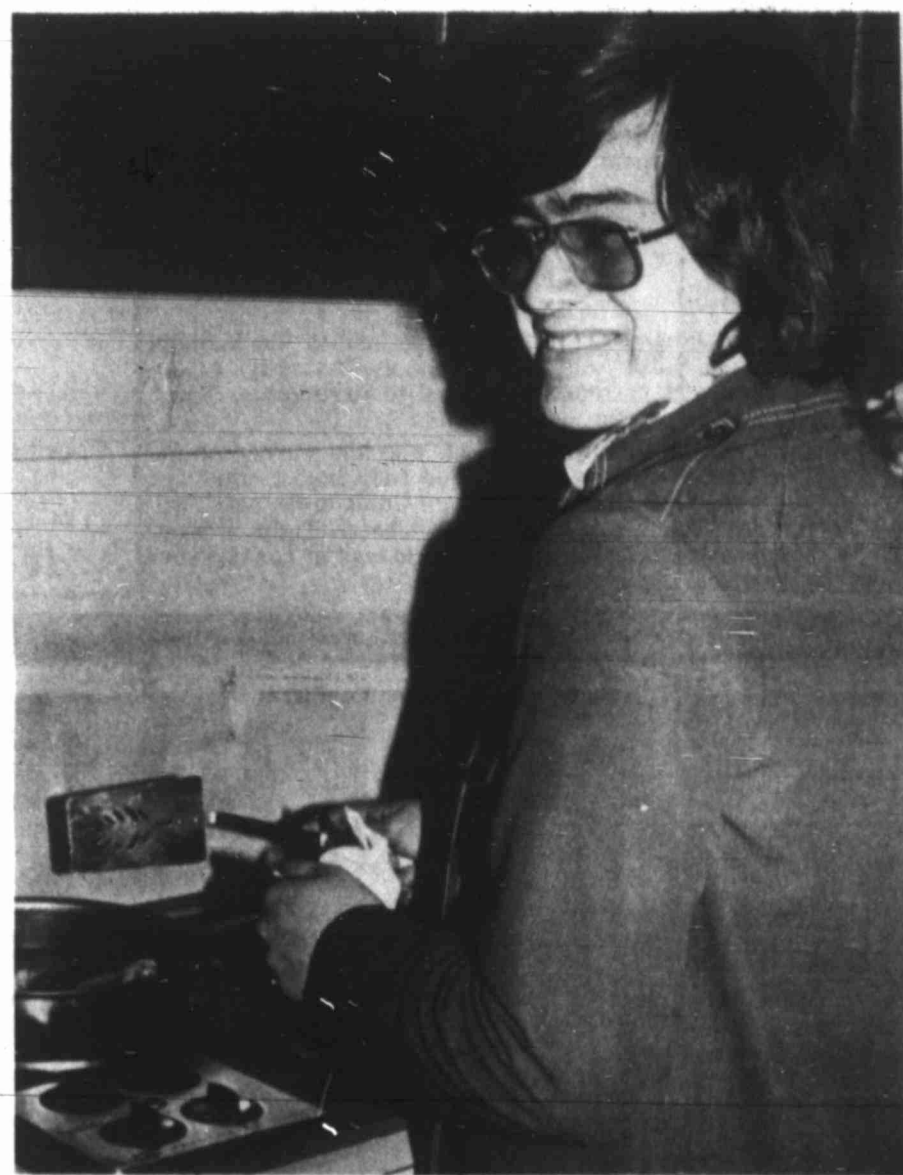

"We depend on the Lord a lot," Andrade said. "We have gotten closer to the Lord because of this and we let our lives be guided by Him."

There is sadness at times over the deaths of Ephraim and Virginia Garcia, but "I'm happier," said Mrs. Andrade, holding Paul close to her.

This will be a special Mother's Day for the Andrade family with the addition of Paul and Melody. But it won't be a sad one, not with Mrs. Andrade and a little help from the Lord.

'She makes me have joy'

By LANA CUNNINGHAM

Mother's Day is a time when people remember all the things their mother or wife has done for them throughout the year, and the Nick Andrade family is doing that.

For Mrs. Andrade today marks the first time she has been the mother of four children, having taken the two children of her twin brother and his wife when they were killed in a car accident.

Much of her time lately has been spent with these two, but her other two sons and her husband are not complaining.

Marck, 16, a student at Midland High School, remembers all the times she has taken him to the places he needed to go, since he has not obtained a driver's license yet.

"He means I'm his chauffeur," she said with a laugh.

Nick, who attends San Jacinto Junior High, admits his mother "is pretty hard working. She has been working really hard with the children (Paul and Melody Garcia). I don't know why, but I always remember my birthdays on Mother's Day. When they come along she always makes me have so much fun and joy."

Wives often are taken for granted, and it is only when a special day comes around that husbands remember what their wives do for them, Andrade admitted.

"Most men, we tend to take them (the wives) lightly and for granted. But, if I ever am without her, when she has to go on a trip, I miss her.

"She is a part of me. Everything she does for me is special," he said.

Andrade admitted he was spoiled before he married, having come from a family of seven sisters.

"She is such a loving person, so gentle and so kind. I wish I didn't take her for granted so much."

And from now on, Mrs. Andrade will have two more children who will remember all those special things she did for them.

But, there is time for that in the many Mother's Days to come.

Nick Andrade and his wife, Ruth, take time out to read the Bible and drink a cup of coffee. Reading the Bible is important part of their day, Andrade said.

day chairman; Mattie Chenoweth, parliamentarian, and Charleen Roseberry, assistant play day chairman. (Staff Photo by Charles McCain)

Teeing off to qualify for the annual club championship tournament of the Ladies Golf Association of Midland Country Club is Susan Britton, defending champion.

Looking on are, left to right, Becky Huff, association social chairman; Jane Long, tournament chairman, and Edie Stahl, publicity chairman.

By MICHAEL KERNAN
The Washington Post

It wasn't until years after my father died in 1954 that we realized how much he had kept my mother in line.

We hadn't dreamed anybody was keeping her in line, or could.

Even when she got together with her best friends, big-boned women given to the scarves and grand gestures of Isadora Duncan, the conversation turned arch and venomous.

A master of the double bind, she told us children that our father was "an easy mark" — the words stick with me — yet insisted that he be the co-trustee of her estate and her business adviser. He was, after all, a retired stockbroker.

In my turn, she made me co-trustee and executor even as she reminded me of my alleged incompetence with money and the realities of the marketplace.

My older sister, adopted as an infant during my mother's Bohemian days — in her Lady Bountiful way she used to talk of adopting a dozen children of all races — became a target once my mother married and had my younger sister and me. She would goad Gioia to door-slamming, screaming rages, responding all the while with icy sarcasm.

Once we gave a backyard circus, and Gioia, age 10, asked her if she wanted a "preserved seat." Most parents would have been mildly amused. My mother snarled, "Preserved in what?" I must have been 6 at the time, but I can still see the curled mouth and Gioia's hurt bafflement.

"It's something chemical between us," my mother said years later. "All she has to do is come into the room and I bristle."

I suspect it was guilt. My mother knew what it was to feel unwanted. She was an only child, born to a retired New Jersey physician and his wife late in life, a surprise they apparently never got over. The physician spent his last 30 years reading. His idea of punishment for his daughter was to shut her in a dark closet for hours. Otherwise, she remained in the company of a beloved black nurse, a succession of dogs, and her special friends, other genteel little girls in Morristown.

She hated Christmas. We heard little about her life before we came along. There were only a few disconnected anecdotes. Almost 40 years old when she married my father, she had never been domestic. She was an instinctive feminist and social rebel, a radical who used to go to dances with John Reed. She would tell us about: Miss Spence's School; being caught on a hiking trip in Germany when

World War I broke out; her aristocratic "Japanese beau;" the Eurhythmics, Theosophy, Coueism, swamis and other enthusiasms of the '20s; her marriage to an older man died; her brittle relationship with my father's large Catholic family and her struggles to be converted; the frosty confrontations with political lowlife my father knew, such as state legislators.

Old friends remember her as a young woman full of deviltry and ideas. As a lark, she arranged an outdoor Christmas display in the center of Morristown with music and lighted trees, surely one of the first of its kind. Once she and her best friend, low on cash, dined at the Plaza — ordering a single poached egg and two forks.

Some of the best stories came from my father, who turned her into a family legend, with her absent-minded driving and assorted eccentricities: the cases of condensed milk we took with us to France (she never having heard of Pasteur), her insistence that we children walk with hands in the air through the grimy Paris Metro, her faith in sleeping with the window open (on one Adirondack visit they woke to find the hot water bottle still in their bed but turned to ice).

After my father died, her avid interest in her children's affairs turned into an obsession. She took to rewriting her will, trying to anticipate what might happen to us and our own children far into the future. She unfailingly asserted her strong opinions about everything we did. A gentle Quaker lady was driven to cry out to her one Sunday at meeting: "Katharine, let your children go!" We were all in our 30s at the time.

For years my sisters lived near her in Los Angeles, but finally only Gioia remained to absorb the stream of imperious advice, accompany her to court on her traffic offenses (the driving had gotten worse), and generally shield her from a world she didn't understand.

The fact was, for all her sublime self-assurance, she was really rather foolish, as is sometimes the cause with people who have never had to work for a living, never had their sharp edges worn down by the hard give-and-take of the world. And the greatest joke was that she was most foolish of all about money.

The will became a mania. All of us received dozens of handwritten memos about the division of the silver, china, bad paintings and monstrous early Victorian furniture. The estate wasn't enough to make much difference in our lives, but she brooded over it like a Hetty Green. It got so that Gioia had to drive her to the bank every day to pore over the dog-eared papers in her safe deposit box. She was turning into a character from Balzac. She moved to a nursing home. Then to a nursing hospital and a bed.

Son's letter to his mother says more than regular cards

By ERMA BOMBECK

Mother's Day greeting cards are traditionally written for young mothers — the breakfast-in-bed, sticky milk kisses, 50-cent dusting powder variety.

But where is the greeting card for the 80-year-old mother who lost "Dad" last year, whose only son is in Alaska and who needs a cheery, "Hi There!" like a pair of gym shorts.

There are thousands of these women around today who have been retired mentally, physically, domestically, and emotionally to be "made comfortable."

I've been saving this letter for a whole year because it's so beautiful and couldn't have been written by anyone other than a 56-year-old son in Alaska who could not be with his mother. The mother was so moved by it, she wanted it shared.

"I hope you have a happy time on your day. The important thing is to make it a happy day. It's another year that God has granted you. You know He has you on earth for a reason so you must live it fully for Him. You have been one of His angels on earth for a long time, helping so many lonely and lost souls that have needed you. Every little act of kindness is listed in His book and I'm sure the book is so heavy there isn't anyone could lift it. There are still many that need the little lift that just being close to you gives them. You are a Very Important Person to me of course, but to so many others. Remembering this will give you a special kind of inner strength.

I know the years have made your body tired. As my 56 years already are weighing me down. You have something to drive down that tired feeling though that I and so many others don't — the strength of the true love of everyone you have ever contacted. Lack of this is the thing that brings sadness to so many. If you try, I'll bet you can feel its warmth and strengthening power at any given moment, day or night. So look ahead to the coming year. It has so many lovely things in store if you will only reach for them.

Take the mirror from in front of your face, so you can stop looking over your shoulder. What's behind you is now gone, the road is in front of you and each turn in it has something new and different.

Look at Mother Nature's work in your own front yard. The old rose bush still bears the most beautiful flowers. The tree that has had part of it taken away reaches out its leafy arms and is fuller and more beautiful in its enlargement of age. Sprout and blossom with this year so that those that look upon you can feel good and enjoy your own special beauty. This is my wish."

Maybe your mother doesn't need a reminder of the past today. Maybe she needs a reason for tomorrow.

The Wine Cellar

by Sam Day

When you come right down to it, there are few really great wines. It takes an almost magical combination of soil, sun, rain, and angle of slope to produce great grapes. Then these grapes have to be fermented and stored just right to give the balance, subtlety of flavor, and bouquet that make truly great wines. All wines are different from one another since there are so many chances of variation, and ultimately it is the drinker's taste that determines a really great wine. My great wine may not be the same as your great wine, though we may agree on which wines are terrible. In another spot, my favorite grape might produce a different taste altogether; on another hill, or on another part of the hill, I might get a different wine. No one knows exactly why one place produces great grapes while another one half mile away just does not make the grade.

Get your favorite wine at 1815 PEBBLE LAGOONS, 3209 W. Wadley, 684-4256. # State archivist traces records of Spaniards

Mrs. Richards S. Brooks of Austin, state archivist, presented the program at a meeting of the Aaron Estes Chapter, Daughters of the Republic of Texas, in the home of Mrs. Robert Knott.

Mrs. Brooks, whose paper was entitled "Texas Land Records," began tracing the records with the Spaniards who first came to the new world with Columbus, landing at San Salvador, San Domingo and Cuba.

Scarcely 26 years later, Hernando Cortes, at the age of 19, went first to San Domingo and then accompanied Diego Velasquez to Cuba.

Cabeza de Vaca is generally believed to be the first white man to set foot on Texas soil.

Other explorers followed — Coronado's party, 1540, explored portions of the present New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona, Texas and Oklahoma. De Soto, Espejo Mendoza, the latter going up the Rio Grande in 1528 and across to the Pecos River and then down the Pecos to explore West Texas.

Next in her tracings, Mrs. Brooks told of the travels of Juan de Onate, whose diary and report are the oldest records to be found in the General Land Office of Texas. He explored the Rio Grande in 1598, found the Pass to the North, El Paso del Norte, and went on into New Mexico. His exploration was followed by the establishment of several missions, the earliest "El Paso" on the other side of the Rio Grande in 1659 and Ysleta on the Texas side in 1681.

Mrs. Brooks also reviewed briefly San Jose de Palafox "The Impossible Dream" by the Rio Grande, showing pictures, maps and early documents of the establishment and annihilation of San Jose de Palafox.

During the business meeting it was announced the state convention will be held May 12-14 in the Hilton Inn at Dallas. Mrs. Max Perry, outgoing president, is planning to attend, along with Mrs. John P. McKinley, chairman of the state nominating committee.

Mrs. Edward Brannon, project chairman for the chapter, announced the arrival of 3x5 Texas flags and desks sets of Six Flags of Texas, which can be obtained by the public by contacting any member of the chapter.

Mrs. R. E. Estes and Mrs. Evelyn Estes Melear will be hostesses for the May 24 meeting at which time convention reports will be heard and new officers installed.

DEAR ABBY

Reader applies term 'Mother' to all women with children

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: I would like to help all young marrieds who find it difficult to address their mothers-in-law as "Mother."
When I made my first visit to the doctor's office after the birth of my first child, the nurse motioned to me and said, "Mother, you are next."
I knew she wasn't addressing me as HER mother. Suddenly I realized that she addressed all of us with children as "Mother."

Immediately my vision was broadened, and I came to understand that "Mother" applied to all women with children. That was the moment I was lifted out of the narrow rut of thinking that the title belonged only to my own mother. I soon put this knowledge to practice. When I wanted to attract the attention of friends, neighbors or even strangers, I would say, "Mother, watch your little one!"
You'd be surprised how quickly they reacted, having been reminded that they were mothers. The title is rightly theirs, and it never interfered with the special meaning it held for my own dear mother.

If we would all use the term freely, the next generation would learn from our example and thus alleviate a sticky problem — BIRMINGHAM
DEAR ABBY: What is the significance of wearing a single carnation on Mother's Day?—MIMI
DEAR MIMI: A red carnation is worn to signify that one's mother is living. And a white carnation signifies that one's mother is deceased. There should also be an identifying flower worn by those whose mothers chose motherhood by raising a foster child, adopting a child or raising a stepchild. And a special place in heaven awaits those mothers who chose an "imperfect" child, knowing that physically

NEEDLEPLAY

New process transfers photograph onto canvas

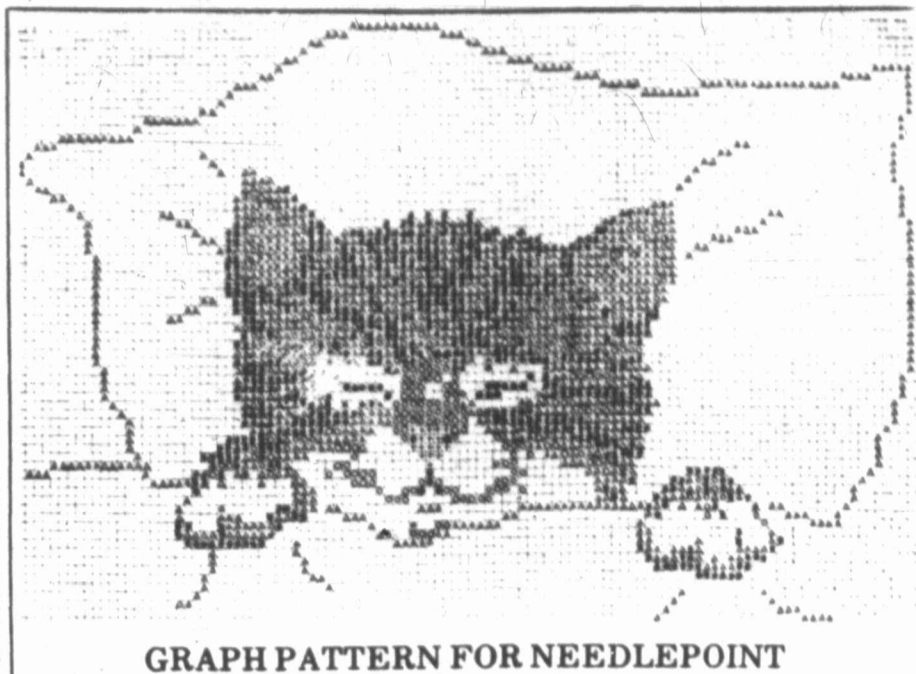

By ERICA WILSON

Well, I thought plastic canvas was the newest thing happening in needlepoint, but now something's got that beat. Did you know that you can have a photograph exactly reproduced onto canvas to stitch? It's a heat process, rather like a color Xerox, that covers the canvas with a thin film of paint, duplicating your photo.

You must work the canvas in an embroidery frame, however, because you'll have to "stab" your needle through the stiff paint, and you'll want your canvas nice and taut for that. Ask about this new process at your favorite needlework shop or in the stitchery department of a department store; more and more companies are doing it, and several of these are mail order. I've never been a great advocate of exact reproduction when it comes to needlework—like a painting, I think a needlepoint tapestry is better translated into the medium instead of slavishly duplicated. But I must admit this photograph transferring does open up exciting design possibilities.

What primarily comes to my mind are those huge photographic wall panels from Denmark that could be dramatically translated into needlework. The whole wall of your dining room could be a mossy green forest or the sun setting over the ocean. There's nothing to stop you from bringing the outdoors indoors with tapestry-like stitching. One favorable aspect of

GRAPH PATTERN FOR NEEDLEPOINT

This new technique is that you can expand on a photograph—a personal expression anyway—by stitching it. A friend of mine had an adorable Raggedy Ann costume complete with red circle cheeks—daughter put on canvas—and stitched it in vivid cherry reds, navy and white. She gave it to the grandparents for their anniversary, and I think it's the most cherished present they've ever received.

You don't, of course, have to follow the photograph you have duplicated exactly; a few spontaneous lines and colors of your own will bring some added movement into the design.

If you prefer not to zoom into the space age world of color Xeroxing, there are still the tried and true methods of transferring onto cloth and canvas that are every bit as valid, and often allow for more of your own creativity to come through.

There are basically two ways to get a design for needlework from paper to your stitching medium.

You can count the pattern on either canvas or even-weave material from a graph, or you can paint it or outline it on the fabric by hand.

With the counting technique, you first draw your design on to graph paper (being sure to get paper that is in equal scale to your canvas squares or your fabric thread spaces) and then simply count the design, line by line, onto the canvas or fabric. By the way, a great cloth for counting is Aida or Hardanger; both available in the notions dept., since they have large, clear holes that can be counted in a snap.

If tracing your design from paper seems easier, stretch your fabric in a stretcher frame, tape the design (drawn on paper) acetate—that clear, to the back of the plastic sheeting—in an art store and draw your permanent felt-tipped pen trace through, shining a light of some crevel or embroidery sort behind it.

Author lets hanger hatred cause her hang-up

Copley News Service

I hate hangers. Not dislike, you understand, but

*It's Mom who does the little things That make our home so bright
It's Mom we call when things go wrong 'Cause she can make 'em right!
It's Mom who brings to every day A special touch of cheer...

Have a Happy Day the gazebo Della Neal

all-out hatred that makes my teeth hurt. First of all, I truly believe they can reproduce at will. Also, I suspect they are capable of disappearing from the face of the earth without a sound.

That's why I become very excited when I find a way to foil them!

If your slacks are sliding off hangers (it's not your fault), try this: place the hanger between the pants legs. Fold one leg over the hanger in one direction, then fold the other leg over the first leg in the opposite direction.

I defy any hanger to let go of pants hung that way!

Dear Mrs. Kinser: It has been some time since I've written but now I'm wondering if you have any idea how the braided trim on jeans is made. I've done the weaving type but, try as I may, the braid doesn't turn out like what you see on store-bought jeans.

I enjoy your column and appreciate the fact that there is someone to whom we may turn when there is a problem. —Mrs. William Buchta, Omaha

What a nice compliment, Mrs. Buchta. Thank you. How about buying the denim braid by the yard? That's right. Ask at your fabric store for woven denim braid.

It is 100 per cent cotton, about one inch or more wide, and sells for a little over $3 a yard. Be sure to preshrink the braid as you do your fabric.

Dear Betty: I have a pants fitting problem. As I walk, I get wrinkles in the pants leg above my knee. I have watched others walk and their pants hang straight.

I know you can help me — that's why I'm writing you. Thank you for past services. — Edith Clippe

I'd better not fail you now, right? The problem you describe is caused by the pants being too long in front — either from waist to crotch, or from crotch to knee.

With your slacks on, stand before a mirror. Pin a horizontal fold across the slacks above the crotch line. Walk around. How are they?

If you still have trouble, move down to a spot below the crotch line. Pin a fold across each leg. Now walk around again. How's that?

Once you have pinned the fold where it will do the most good, transfer this change to your paper pattern, tapering the fold out to nothing at side seams. Write again if you need me, OK?

QUICK STITCH: Two plush washcloths and a bit of elastic can become a pair of cozy house slippers. For the Washcloth Slippers Leaflet No. 45, send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Stitching Witchery, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

Baskets save on tiny budget

Copley News Service

If you are on a budget, how do you add a little natural flair and fashion to your apartment without turning yourself into a financial basket case?

One solution is to bring that bare living or dining room wall alive with baskets. The natural unpainted wicker, which emerged as a strong accessory and accent piece last year, will continue to enjoy even greater popularity this spring.

Instead of waiting until you can afford that original painting or super framed litho to complete your living room decor, a collection of various-shaped baskets, cleverly arranged and hung on the wall will add new life and excitement to those rooms where you spend most of your time.

And, with practically every type of store selling baskets, you can pick and choose from every imaginable size, weave and depth.

For the wall, I suggest round, relatively shallow baskets — the kind you would put on tables as a catch-all, or perhaps a wicker serving tray. You can either hang them on nails — bottom out — or glue them to the walls face out.

Since they almost always are tan, beige, ivory or some other neutral color, a basket wall blends with almost every color scheme. But don't be afraid to mix up the shapes and sizes.

A narrow, oblong basket, the kind in which some restaurants serve crackers and breadsticks, are interesting visually when used to separate either round or square-shaped baskets. Baskets also look good interspersed with paintings or wall planters and provide a contrast to dark walls.

Natural tones warm-up room planned for guest, family use

Copley News Service

Q. We are considering converting our small basement into a den and guest room. Please suggest a practical and pleasant color scheme for a family that likes natural tones. The room will have a very limited amount of natural light. — T. W.

A. For a den-guest room which has a limited size, a sofa bed is a good space saver. Also try to include a lounge chair or two of them if space permits. Plan shelves for eliminating the need of furniture. Under the shelves you can place some small-scale chests for storage, always welcome in a room such as you plan. A wicker hamper provides double duty as a useful coffee table.

For a color scheme, you might consider walls of pale apricot with carpeting of a rust and beige two-tone twist. You might have a patterned fabric on your sleeper sofa in rusts and blues and beiges and perhaps a solid blue or solid rust or a weave of the two on a chair or two. Accessorize with natural baskets and hand-thrown pots in earthen tones. Add plenty of lamps or indirect lighting, too.

Q. My mother recently gave me a piece of handmade drawwork. The piece is white and about five inches square. It was done by a relative many years ago and so is valuable to me as a family keepsake.

However, it is also so interesting to look at with its varied geometric designs. I would like to display it in my home and am wondering how I might most effectively. — L. G.

A. If you like traditional things, you might frame your drawwork, placing it on a dark-colored velvet so it will contrast well. Perhaps a deep red, a rich blue or a black would be attractive, depending on your color scheme. If you want to highlight the textile, choose a plain wood frame, perhaps an oiled finish in a natural tone or an antique gold if it isn't too shiny. When you actually hang the piece of drawwork on the wall, you might see how it looks hung diagonally so it is a diamond in shape. I have seen paintings hung in this manner and I would imagine that a textile would also be unusual and attractive with this treatment.

If you like modern accessories better, sandwich the drawwork between two pieces of clear glass and hang it on a wall.

Naturally the wall needs to contrast with the white or you will lose much of the effectiveness of the handcraft. I have seen fragments of old textiles hung in this manner and they were very exciting — particularly because the background wall was a deep color and the fragments were light and pale.

Please send questions for Decor Score to Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

THE VISIBLE WOMAN

Women make headway into field of literature

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

We were having dinner in a restaurant recently when I overheard a conversation at the next table.

A young girl, about 10 years old, was enthusiastically telling her family about a story she'd read. A true story about "this lady who went off to war to look for her husband, and she was such a good soldier that she stayed. Nobody knew she was a lady, and when she got shot in the stomach, she took out the shrapnel herself, so the doctors wouldn't find out. She got better, and went back to fight, but she never found her husband."

I'd read that story, too, in the "Book of Women's Achievements" by Joan and Kenneth Mackays.

The woman soldier's name was Hannah Snell. Without knowing it, the girl answered a question that had been on my mind for some days. There's a boom in women's literature these days, but I wondered if anyone was really reading all those new books.

West Coast Review of Books recently devoted the better part of its spring issue to the subject of feminist literature. Many book publishing companies have committed large budgets to women's limts, while others have opened special divisions for feminist literature (Ms. Books, Knopf, for example). Book publishing companies, such as Sisters Press, have sprung up around the nation, so that women may have more control over topics. "Our Bodies Our Selves" (Simon & Schuster) was originally published in this way by a women's health cooperative in Boston, but it became so popular that a major publishing firm bought rights.

Perhaps this is a natural phenomenon. There has been such a chasm in literature by, for and about women, that when the floodgates opened, a great wash of words tumbled in to fill the void.

Some of the new books speak to women simply about their roles as women. "Nobody Speaks For Me" (Simon & Schuster) by Nancy Seifer is one of these. The author has interviewed 10 working women, each with an obstacle to overcome, and succeeds in showing how these women creatively involve themselves in positive living. Betty Friedan's "It Changed My Life" (Random House) is another book about women as women.

There are dozens of other books about women in their life-roles. Psychologist Shere Hite reports on women's sexuality. Jo Fleming writes about being the wife of an unfaithful husband in "His Affair" (M. Evans & Co.).

Many new books illuminate women who have accomplished something. Amy Lowell, Mary Cassatt, Maria Montessori and CoCo Chanel are the topics of some of these books.

Carrot termed healthy food

By TOM HOGE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

During my freshman year at college, I had a roommate who used to munch raw carrots in his bunk at night with a grinding sound that was not conducive to sleep.

As a result, I developed a violent antipathy toward either raw or sauteed in butter the golden vegetable that lingered till sophomore year when my roommate suddenly packed his trunk as soon as possible after purchase, but they do keep and moved in with a kindred spirit who spent his and will stay fresh for several weeks in the evenings cracking walnuts. It may have been refrigerator something I said.

Time heals all, and today the carrot is one of my favorite vegetables, both raw and cooked. Not only is sliced or diced, or eat it raw as sticks like my healthiest and combines well with virtually all slow-cooked foods, from beef ragout to vegetable soup.

Carrots have been cultivated for more than 2,000 years. The ancient Romans and Greeks are said to have relished them in meat dishes or alone as carrot, but this can be used to advantage.

vegetables. In Elizabethan England, carrots were not only popular as food but the ladies of the day adorned their hair with the wispy, fernlike leaves.

Most of us know and appreciate full-grown carrots as a sturdy accompaniment to casseroles and stews, picked, tender young carrot is an epicurean treat like most fresh vegetables; carrots should be used as soon as possible after purchase, but they do keep and will stay fresh for several weeks in the refrigerator.

The carrot is about the easiest vegetable there is to prepare. You simply scrape it lightly, cook it whole, or eat it raw as sticks like my roommate used to do. If the health aspect interests you, carrots are one of the best sources of vitamin A, which is vital for good eyesight and good bone formation.

Some people are repelled by the sweet taste of the carrot, but this can be used to advantage.

Libraries deliver information

CHICAGO (AP) — In Skokie, Ill., a fifth grader, bent on constructing a computer and needing simple blueprints, tried the library. After six hours of digging, the reference librarian came up with easy-to-make plans for a digital computer.

This is only one of the problems for which the librarians in Skokie are doing their best to provide answers.

This kind of information delivery service is becoming popular in libraries across the country, according to the American Library Association (ALA).

Although librarians get their share of uncommon questions, more often than not they are queried about what to do or where to go to solve one of life's problems, the association notes. These inquiries have led to the establishment of information and referral (I & R) centers in many libraries.

Basically, it means libraries collect and catalogue community, governmental and social agency information in one place. When someone calls with a question, the I & R librarian can quickly consult the "community catalogue" for an answer or refer the caller to an appropriate source.

One of the pioneers in formalized information service is the Detroit Public Library where TIP (The Information Place) answers more than 100,000 questions each year on everything from abandoned houses to zoos.

Clara Jones, director of Detroit Public and president of the ALA, explains why the library has become involved in the information "business."

"Traditionally, most information has come from books, but there has been a recent change in the kinds of demands made upon our materials and sources," Mrs. Jones said. "The information needs of today's city residents are oriented, to a large degree, toward basic human services that deal with problems of living and coping in a complex world."

"We have simply used those skills which are a librarian's stock-in-trade — locating, indexing, arranging — to establish an information clearinghouse," she said. "Essentially we're making it easier for the average citizen to cut through bureaucratic red tape. I & R is a logical and necessary outgrowth of the library's basic information commitment."

Many of the nation's libraries have taken the commitment seriously and inaugurated I & R services tailored to their individual communities.

The Seattle Public Library has its QIC (Quick Information Center), where librarians answer factual questions in three minutes. NICHE (Neighborhood Information Center that Helps Everyone) is the Montclair, N.J., library's information service. Located in a store front, NICHE helps people in crisis or survival situations with nutrition, housing and public assistance information.

Montclair also has a Women's Information and Referral Service (WIRS), which deals specifically with women's concerns such as legal aid, daycare, re-education and family planning.

Senior citizens in Corpus Christi, Tex., have their own information center in a retirees' housing complex. The Sioux City, Iowa, library has installed a service for Indians and the San Mateo County, Calif., library responds to questions in both English and Spanish.

The Dallas Public Library has CAT (Community Access Tool), a friendly computer with more than 3,000 agencies and organizations in its data bank. Within minutes CAT will furnish information on anything from finding a pet sitter to locating the nearest snake safari.

A number of libraries meet information needs through special telephone lines. St. Louis has a travel hotline which issues information on road conditions and special events in Missouri. ARTSLINE is a telephone cultural information service sponsored by the Erie/Butte County, N.Y., library. MED-HELP (Medical Health Listening Program) is the Memphis-Shelby County, Tenn., library's 24-hour, dial-up, health education service.
