Parties in Salt diplomacy opt to meet again

By BARRY SCHWEID

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko ended their second day of strategic arms limitation talks today and declared an overnight recess to consider their next moves.

The decision to meet again Friday was the only hint that some progress may have been made in the SALT negotiations. The two officials were also scheduled to meet later today to discuss the Middle East situation.

Under discussion at today's meeting was a Soviet proposal based on the 1974 Vladivostok agreement and a pair of American proposals rejected by the Kremlin March 30, U.S. officials said.

'The fact that we have had over five hours worth of talks and are going to talk some more leads to some implications that we are having full, businesslike, good-faith discussions,' Vance's spokesman, Hodding Carter, told reporters.

Carter said the two officials agreed to take a "pause" in their negotiations "to give the parties on both sides a time to reflect further on the ex-changes to date." Vance and Gromyko are negotiating a strategic arms limaty - SALT II - to replace one due to expire in October.

Vance and Gromyko initially planned to hold SALT sessions for two days but have already surpassed the length of the March talks in Moscow. During those talks, the two American proposals were rejected outright after only three hours of negotiations.

Earlier, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said "deep differences" continue between the United States and the Soviet Union on their SALT talks and predicted it would take "quite a long time" before the two superpowers could reach a new agreement. The U.N. executive, who held meetings with both Vance and Gromyko during the past 24 hours, told a news conference he hoped the talks would produce "some progress." He also presented a gloomy assessment of the prospects for peace in the Middle East, the second subject on the Vance-Gromyko agenda.

Waldheim said the conservative Likud party's victory in Israel's election made the situation in the area "more complicated" and made the resumption of a Geneva peace con-ference "questionable." He warned there was a danger of a new Middle East war unless there was "something constructive" this year toward a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict and said a permanent peace in the area was still years away. Vance and Gromyko opened their second meeting with good-humored exchanges with newsmen crowding around them in a conference room at the Soviet Mission, a block away from the hotel where Waldheim was meeting with reporters.

On Wednesday, President Carter told congressional leaders in Washington he still hopes for "substantial reductions" in the Soviet and American nuclear arsenals. But he said the two governments have not changed their conflicting positions on the fundamentals of a new treaty -SALT II — to limit or reduce the superpowers' stocks of long-range nuclear weapons.

Energy plan saving wrong, analyst says

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's estimates of the savings his energy program will produce are exaggerated, Congress' chief budget analyst testified today.

"Our preliminary evaluation indicates that the President may be somewhat optimistic in his energy savings estimates for the plan by 1985," said Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

The program also will require some Americans to make more sacrifices than others, said Ms. Rivlin.

Her testimony before the Senate Energy and Natural Rresources Committee followed Senate passage of the President's proposal for creation of a new energy department, one of the most sweeping reorganizations in the history of the federal bureaucracy.

After making an analysis of the economic impact of the Carter energy package, Ms. Rivlin said :

Energy.
In the House, two committees have approved the new department and the full chamber is expected to concur. The House is not likely to vote on the bill, however, until after its members return from the Memorial Day

If approved by both houses, the new Cabinet-level agency will take in 20,000 employes.

The bill's principal sponsor, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., called the new department the cornerstone of Carter's energy package.

If enacted, the department will be the first new Cabinet agency since the Department of Transportation was established in 1966

The President had hoped that the proposal, sent to the Congress March 1, would be approved before he delivered his April 20 energy message. The rest of the President's energy program is pending before various congressional committees.

'There is a difficult problem with the legislation," said a Corman aide. "Carter wants support for it. He feels that election day registration is a positive thing. But a number of people do not feel the same way he does.

The aide said most opposition "comes from areas where there is control, like in big cities, of large blocs of voters." Opponents feel "they would lose control of any group that could be whipped up on election day' to switch parties, he said.

Corman has not decided whether to support the plan, his aide said.

Hatch Act repeal shelved for now

By JEFFREY MILLS

WASHINGTON (AP) - House passage is all but assured, but supporters of a bill to remove restrictions on federal employes' political activity are postponing a vote in order to fight an amendment they find troublesome.

Supporters of the bill, which would repeal the Hatch Act prohibition against federal employes running for office or participating in partisan campaigns, had expected it to be approved Wednesday night. But late in the evening the House approved an amendment that would prohibit federal employe unions from using dues money for "any political The bill's sponsor, Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., suddenly pulled the bill off the floor to regroup his forces to oppose the amendment. The bill to repeal most of the 1939 act, which forbids 2.8 million federal employes from partisan political activity, now is expected to be brought up again next week.

Rep. John M. Ashbrook, ROhio, who offered the amendment on use of dues money, expressed surprise that the bill was withdrawn after the addition of his amendment. "I don't understand their objections. Most of that is already in the law," he said.

Clay was unavailable for comment.

Up to that point, numerous amendments to weaken the bill had been voted down. Observers said many members may have voted on the Ashbrook amendment without knowing that it was opposed by federal employe unions, which strongly sup-

Neither age nor affliction will cripple her yearning to put zest and pizzazz in her life.

"I'm not giving up. I like . . . traveling. I like to move around and do the best I can."

This mother-and-son team seems to be doing that very well. They left their home state of California over the weekend for a two-week motorcycle tour of the West, Southwest and Midwest.

Bachmann, an off-and-on motorcyclist since 1949, latched onto a 1,000cc 'cycle for the tour with his mom. He's a mechanical engineer for a telephone company and is a commercially-rated aircraft pilot.

But he had rather hit the open road on his two-wheeler. So had his mom. "Yeah," the son said, "she likes to ride on the motorcycle. It's really amazing. Three years ago, I couldn't get her on a motorcycle.

She leaves the driving to son. Bachmann and his mom scheduled a layover in Midland, simply because this is where her grandson, Kelly Jacobson, and his family, lives.

"Now, I can hardly keep her off."

In announcing their stopover here, Paggy Jacobson, the grandson's wife and mother-to-be of Mrs. Bachmann's first great-grandchild, sort of WASHN - The public, the experts, and the special interests had their say Wednesday in a five-hour hearing on the Food and Drug Administration's proposal to ban saccharin from diet beverages and foods.

One parent, K. David Stone, of Kansas City, Mo., representing the Heart of American Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association, said his 15-year-old daughter Jennifer needs saccharin-sweetened sodas not only to control her weight, but also to lead a normal life.

Similarly, two women testified that only with saccharin were they able to hold down their weight and maintain their health.

But Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, said there is "no scientific evidence" showing saccharin to be important for weight control.

He cited a three-year study showing "no significant difference in weight loss between users and non-users" of artificial sweeteners, of which saccharin is the only one now commercially available. And, he said, saccharin stimulates appetite in certain obese laboratory animals.

enrollment next year with the closure of Webb Air Force Base because some persons stationed at Webb are students.

Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls said the loss of the special appropriation was due to its being tied to an appropriation for Navarro County Junior College at Corsicana. The Navarro County appropriation would have been used to pay off a bank loan for expenses to cover unexpectedly large increases in enrollment last year and this year.

indicated to reporters that a delay is unlikely.

Martin testified that the amendment gave the FDA "no choice" but to ban saccharin once its scientists were satisfied that Canadian government tests established that it caused bladder cancer in rats. "You must ban it at the drop of a rat," Martin told the commissioner.

But Kennedy emphasized that if the Delaney amendment never had been enacted, he, at least, would have proposed the ban because the basic food-additives law requires positive findings of safety.

No one has provided such findings for saccharin. Instead, some critics of the agency want it to carry a burden Congress never imposed: proving that a food additive, sometimes in combination with other carcinogens, may cause cancer in humans. Such proof is difficult partly because the latent period before detection of cancer may be as long as 40 years.

Saccharin has been in an officially suspect category since 1972, on the basis of animal tests incriminating it in bladder cancer. Terming the tests inconclusive, the FDA did not propose the ban until last March, when the Canadian government completed its studies in 200 rats. Half had been exposed to saccharin from the time of conception. Twenty-one of the animals developed bladder cancer, compared with one of the 100 untreated control rats.

Carter pushing new wiretap bill

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - President Carter asked Congress Wednesday to close a loophole in the nation's electronic eavesdropping laws by requiring judicial warrants for national security wiretapping and bugging.

Carter said enactment of the bill would mark a major step "in resolving some of the questions that caused so much dissension and so much distrust in the months gone by.

The bill, entitled the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1977, was unveiled at a ceremony in the White House Rose Garden attended by Carter, Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell and about 60 members of the Senate and House who have legislative responsibilities in the wiretapping

Despite the appearance of strong bipartisan support, reservations expressed by some participants, particularly two of the bill's sponsors, Sens. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.) and Birch Bayh (D-Ind.), signaled that the legislation faces an uphill course in Congress.

The unexpected position of Kennedy and Bayh was due to their failure to work out a compromise with the Carter administration on some provisions of the bill.

Under present electronic eavesdropping law, enacted in 1968, a judge's permission is required to wiretap or bug individuals involved in criminal investigations. There is no such warrant requirement for electronically eavesdropping on Americans for foreign intelligence purposes. Wiretaps of government officials and reporters on national security grounds during the Nixon administration were widely criticized.

Legislation proposed by the Ford administration to require such a warrant died in the Senate last October after then Sen. John V. Tunney (D-Calif.) led a fight against the measure on grounds it was too loosely drawn and could lead to invasions of privacy by federal agents.

The Carter administration bill was strengthened substantially over the earlier measure in three ways:

-It would recognize no inherent power of the President to conduct electronic surveillance. The earlier bill asserted such executive power.

-It would extend the judicial warrant requirement to the supersecret National Security Agency's socalled "watch listing" of American citizens, under which overseas communications of specified Americans are automatically printed and disseminated to government intelligence agencies in a computerized system.

-It would allow judges to review the certification by the executive branch that serves as the justification for a wiretap. Under the bill, applications for warrants for foreign intelligence eavesdropping would be made to one of seven district judges designated by the chief justice. Denial of a warrant could be appealed by the government to a special three-judge court of review and, ultimately, to the Supreme Court. The target of the surveillance would have to be a "foreign power" or the "agent of a foreign power."

Nixon to condone broad actions by President in TV talk tonight

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL

WASHINGTON (AP) - Burglaries and other crimes are not illegal if they are ordered by the President of the United States, Richard M. Nixon says in his latest television interview.

In the interview to be broadcast tonight, the former President tells television personality David Frost that "When the President does it, that means it is not illegal," according to excerpts from the program published in today's New York Times.

Specifically asked about the White House-ordered burglary of the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, Nixon denied advance knowledge of the break-in. But he said if White House aide John Ehrlichman had told him of the planned burglary: "I would have said 'Go right ahead.

something, approves an action because of the national security or, in this case, because of a threat to internal peace and order of, of significant magnitude, then the President's decision in that instance is one that enables those who carry it out to carry it out without violating a law."

But Nixon stammered and objected when Frost asked the inevitable question - does that mean a President could order a legal murder?

"There are degrees, there are nuances which are difficult to explain," Nixon protested. He agreed that the dividing line would be the President's judgment.

Nixon said his administration got tough with Vietnam dissenters to avoid "a situation where this war would be lost in Washington.

Nixon says he practiced the politics of polarization in the Vietnam years to rally majority support behind his

"I had to make a choice," he says, speaking of protesters. "Are we going to allow this group to first - where they were violent ... violence prone to endanger the lives of others? (And) second, even more important, are we going to allow our potential enemies, those we were negotiating with in Paris, to gain the impression that they represented the majority?" A source on the Frost staff says Nixon makes no apologies for his conduct of the war, but expresses regret that he didn't accelerate military actions earlier to bring the North Vietnamese to the bargaining table.

The talks that finally brought the end of the war followed intensive air strikes against North Vietnamese supply lines and the mining of Haiphong and six other harbors in May of 1972. Nixon maintains, the source says, that such actions in 1970 might have hastened the end of the

Begin win realization of dream

JERUSALEM — When Israel's President Ephraim Katzir performs his constitutional duty by asking the leading party in Tuesday's parliamentary election to form a government, it will be the realization of a 46-year-old dream for Menachem Begin, 64, the leader of the frontrunning Likud party.

Whether Begin actually can put together a stable coalition government is another matter, but he is determined to try. The dream of becoming prime minister of a Jewish state is something Begin has held since his student days in Warsaw in the 1930s - long before the birth of

Begin was born in 1913 in Brest Litovsk and began his career as a political activist before World War II as a law student and as head of "Betar," a nationalist-right-wing youth movement in Poland

When the Germans came to Warsaw in 1939. Begin ran before them into the arms of the Russians, who were invading Poland from the other direction. The Russians promptly put him into a concentration camp, but he was released when he joined the Soviet-sponsored Polish army.

Begin arrived in what was then Palestine in 1942 as a Polish officer attached to the British. He was soon contacted by the extremist Jewish terrorist organization, the Irgun. He at first refused to join them but in 1944 he left the army and soon became leader of the Irgun in the struggle against the British and the Arabs

The Irgun was known for some of the most violent acts of terrorism at a time when violence was the order of the day. The British put a 10,000pound price on Begin's head. The Irgun eventually challenged the authority of the main Jewish resistance group, the Haganah, under and the Labor party.

Following the declaration of the State of Israel, the Irgun insisted on maintaining its private army. Ben Gurion realized that this was a direct challenge to the authority of the new state and, when the Irgun tried to bring arms into Tel Aviv aboard the steamer Atalena, he called the Irgun's bluff

Ben Gurion had the Atalena sunk. The commander of the shore battery was Yigal Allon, now No. 2 man in the Labor party.

Begin used his influence to stop the Atalena incident from escalating into a civil war and thereafter directed his efforts toward parliamentary op-position to Ben Gurion and the Labor

His last fling at extra-parliamentary activity was in 1952, when his followers tried to storm the Knesset (Parliament) in opposition to a World War II reparation agreement with West Germany. "There will be no negotiations with Germany." Begin told the Knesset. "Over less important issues nations went to the barricades." His followers were dispersed by the police.

His struggle against the Labor party has been a long one and his old antagonist, Ben Gurion, is now dead. Tuesday, however, he finally got the upper hand.

Begin served briefly as a minister without portfolio in a government of national unity (1967-1970) and he took it as his private crusade that Israel should not give up territory on the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and Gaza, which Israel captured in the 1967 war.

"It's a deliberate attempt by Ian Smith to try to escalate conflict and so win support for his racist regime," Young said of what Botswana called a Rhodesian strike this week at an army camp in Botswana. (Rhodesian officials said their troops pursued 10 guerrillas who had killed four persons on a Rhodesian farm)

Young added: "I think he also is trying to lure or taunt the liberation movement into bringing Cubans into the struggle in the hope we will react on his behalf. But the (Carter) Administration has assured him for many months now that we will not be drawn into that conflict.'

Young made his comments on Rhodesia as he emerged from talks with William-Aureilien Etekia Mbumua, administrative secretarygeneral of the Organization of African Unity. Wealthy Californian gets burial request

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) -Sandra Ilene West, a wealthy California widow, was buried today just the way she wanted -"in my lace nightgown and in my Ferrari with seat slanted comfortably.'

The 37-year-old widow of a Comfort, Tex., oilman was placed in a 1964 baby blue Ferrari, enclosed in a large graypainted wooden crate. She had died March 10 in her Beverly Hills home in California.

The crate, measuring 6 feet by 8 feet by 17 feet, was brought to the cemetery on a flat-bed truck. A crowd of several hundred curious onlookers, watched quietly as a large yellow crane lifted the crate from the truck bed, set it next to the truck and then deposited into the grave. Cement concrete was then poured on top of the box in the grave to protect further.

Los Angeles County officials watched the burial to make sure it was carried out according to a court order. The court had given its official approval to the unusual burial request. Mrs. West was buried next to her husband, Ike West Jr., of Comfort, Tex., an oilman who died in 1968.

A spokesman for the Public Administrator's office who watched the preparations for the burial Wednesday night said the procedure complied with the court order. They offered no details.

Mrs. West's body had been

Funeral home director Porter Loring said he was not aware of any family or relatives of Mrs. West at the burial.

Authorities in California have yet to say officially what caused Mrs. West's death. California officials say an inquest will be held next month.

The handwritten will left most of her estate, valued at between $3 million and $6 million to her brother-in-law, Sol West III, of Comfort, Tex.

The document contained a clause asking that she be buried "in my lace nightgown and in my Ferrari with the seat slanted comfortably.

A court battle erupted after Mrs. West's death concerning her estate.

Fred Seamaan, a San Antonio attorney, produced a will that he said Mrs. West had executed in his office last year. Seamaan, who claims to have been the West family lawyer for the past 20 years, said the document left most of Mrs. West's estate to Seamaan has also submitted his will to California courts for probate.

Loring said the emblmed body of Mrs. West has been kept at a local masoleum since arriving in San Antonio in March

The cost of the burial will be about $9,000, Loring said.

exas missing federal funds boat

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas is "losing" more than a hundred million dollars in federal funds each year because of formulas written by congressmen from other parts of the country

The federal government disbursed $72.4 billion this fiscal year to state and local governments for various social programs. Some governments get more than others.

-The public service jobs part of the Carter administration's economic stimulus program is sending $6.8 billion from Washington. $203 million is going to Texas. Michigan gets $347 million and California gets $785

-The emergency public works part of Carter's package sends $4 billion in this fiscal year for local projects that are supposed to stimulate lagging economies.

Texas will receive $88 million, or $279 for every unemployed person in the state. New Jersey will get $217. million, or $636 for each of its unemployed.

-The House has recently passed a three-year community development program that channels aid to cities. By 1980, the program will be sending $65 million annually to Detroit and $26 million annually to Houston, although they have nearly equal populations.

Behind the statistics lie the federal formulas. They are the means Congress uses to determine who gets the big slices of each federal pie.

The community development legislation, for example, has a new formula that channels more money to cities with large amounts of pre-World War II housing and declining populations. Detroit has both. Houston has neither.

The public jobs and public works bills both pump extra money into states and cities with unemployment rates of 6.5 per cent or more. Texas. with unemployment running just under 6 per cent, loses out.

formulas are written by committees which the Texas congressional delegation has long ignored.

The Texas congressmen are following a pattern that exists throughout the South and Southwest and is a holdover from those days when there were no urban interests in the region, explained Rep. Jim Mattox, a freshman Democrat from Dallas.

When today's veteran and powerful Texas congressmen came to-Washington, they gravitated toward the committees that dealt with oil and gas, agriculture, public works and the military. That was where the state's interests could be protected. There were no federal programs for such things as urban renewal or public jobs then, anyway.

"The Texas delegation still is in transition from being ruraloriented." Mattox said. "It still hasn't adapted to the New South emerging from the Sun Belt's industrial complex.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, says he has had little luck persuading his colleagues to get together with other southern and western delegations and consider a regional approach to urban legislation.

"Some of the members are very conservative. They have not been kindly disposed to things like housing and urban renewal. They haven't taken an interest in it." said Gonzalez, the lone Texan on the housing subcommittee.

A few Texans say the formulas don't bother them, even though their own districts get less. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, a Houston Democrat, voted against a floor amendment that would have made the community development appropriations for Houston and Detroit more nearly

"I didn't think of it as a regional issue. I thought the money should go where the need is greatest," Eckhardt said.

Mattox is less inclined to feel charitable to the cities of the Northeast and Midwest.

"Some of the problems New York City has have been caused by irresponsible acts by some politicians and the unreasonable demands of its people. The rest of the country shouldn't pay for New York's extravagances," he said.

Utility metering bill approved by House

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Legislation giving apartment tenants a new incentive to save electricity won final House passage today.

A voice vote returned the bill to the Senate which now must decide whether to accept House amendments. If senators accept the changes the bill would go to the governor.

The bill prohibits construction of new apartment houses that do not have either individual meters or submeters to measure each apartment's electrical consumption.

Existing apartment complexes could install submeters.

With submeters, a landlord could bill each tenant for the electricity he or she actually used.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, said the measure would encourage energy conservation by halting the construction of "all bills paid" apartments and making tenants pay for their actual energy

Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, failed with several attempts to weaken the submetering sections but finally succeeded with an amendment prohibiting landlords from making a profit on electricity.

Sunset bill approved in quick 136-0 vote

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - House members quickly gave final approval today to a bill that would automatically wipe out 179 state agencies over the next 12 years unless continued by specific laws.

The vote was 136-0. The "sunset" bill, already approved by the Senate. must return to the Senate for approval of House changes before it goes to the governor. Meanwhile, Rep. Lyndon Olson, D-

Waco, was looking for a way to revive Senate-passed bill setting up a statewide probation program, with state standards and state operating

Its initial cost of $30 million in fiscal 1979 appeared to be what caused the House to reject the measure Wednesday, 71-70, despite Olson's assurances that probation was cheaper than prison.

"I sure don't want to take all that money for a bunch of old hoodlums and convicts away from the state employes," said Rep. Emmett Whitehead, D-Rusk, sponsor of a bill to raise state workers' retirement

House amendments to the sunset bill included one adding the railroad commission to the list of agencies to receive life or death review.

"There are a number of people in my district who think we should have executed it a long time ago," said Rep. Bennie Bock, D-New Braunfels.

Rep. John Wilson, D-La Grange, said the commission probably never would be abolished but should be examined periodically "to see if they have performed effectively and in the public interest. Under the circumstances, they probably haven't done too bad a job.

Senators sent the governor a bill first-offense prostitution from a $200 fine to 180 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. Repeaters could get a year in jail and a $2,000 fine.

Sen. Bill Braecklein, D-Dallas, said the measure would apply to buyer as well as to the seller." The Senate also sent to the governor bills that would: -Create a 12-member commission to help business and industry convert to the metric system. -Set up pilot job-training programs for persons receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children.

Passed to the House was a bill prohibiting railroad commissioners from moving immediately from their official positions to jobs with industries they regulate.

State chicken contest winner has been named

AUSTIN-A San Antonio cook, a first-time entry in the Texas Chicken Cooking contest, was named state winner here and will advance to the national finals to be held in Jackson, Miss., July 27.

Mrs. Kay Grizzard derived her prize-winning recipe "Chicken Yucatan," after asking a Mexican chef his secret to a dish enjoyed during a vacation. "When I came home, I worked out the ingredients and it has been a family favorite ever since," she

The five state finalists competing for the top prize in the event sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture and the Texas Broiler Council, included Lynn Castro of Houston, second place; Diane Stallings of Amarillo, third place; Helen Longmire of Austin, fourth place; and Mrs. Olga Jaecks of Fort Worth, fifth place.

'The participation of all of the 1,500 cooks throughout the state who submitted recipes for consideration is certainly evidence of the popularity of Texas Chicken," commented Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown. "We would certainly like to see Mrs. Grizzard return from the national contest with the $10,000 first place prize."

The winning cook, wife of a retired Army officer, commented to her husband after the results were announced, "And I forgot to even taste it before it went back to the judges!

Judges for the event were Carolyn Bengton, food editor of the Austin Citizen; Linda Farrell, Agricultural Exension Agent, Austin, and Jane Ulbrich, food editor of the San Antonio Express. The winning recipe is as follows: CHICKEN YUCATAN

1 cup orange juice 1 cup dry sherry wine 2 Tbsp. minced parsley 1 tsp. flavor enhancer

1 tsp. salt 2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned

1/2 cup golden raisins ¼ cup corn oil ¼ cup slivered almonds 1 large clove garlic, minced

2 Tbsp. cornstarch In a bowl, mix together orange juice, wine, parsley, flavor enhancer and salt. Add chicken and raisins. Marinate 2 hours. Heat corn oil in fry pan over medium heat. Add almonds and saute over low heat until lightly browned. Remove with slotted spoon. Dry chicken on paper towels. Increase heat to moderate and add chicken. Brown on all sides, adding garlic last few minutes. Add raisins and all but 1/2 cup of the marinade; simmer 10 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Mix corn starch with reserved marinade. Remove chicken to serving dish. Pour the corn starch mixture into the liquid, stirring constantly, cooking until liquid is thickened. Simmer about 2 minutes. Spoon liquid over chicken and raisins; sprinkle almonds on top. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

Thrifty way with rock lobster tails

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

One of the best ways we know to make several frozen South African rock lobster tails go a long way is to use them in the great Japanese dish called

For it, you thaw each tail and with a kitchen scissors cut along each side of the soft underside membrane and remove it. The next step is to pull the meat carefully from the hard shell and cut it crosswise along the natural divisions to make small

Then the seafood is encased in a light batter and deep-fat fried until it is cooked through and the coating is delectably crisp. The thrifty feature of Tempura is that vegetables are always batter-dipped and fried and served with the seafood. This way you can use as many or as few of the rock lobster tails as your budget allows.

There's a big choice when it comes to the vegetables to batter-fry so you can buy what you like and is reasonably priced. Sweet onion rings and thin slices of pared sweet potato are utterly delectable. So are scallions (the root ends cut off) and strips of green pepper. Thin strips of pared carrot and white turnip are good. Small mushrooms and broccoli flowerets may be used. Tipped whole snap beans are traditional and delicious.

A simple batter may be used for Tempura. One we like is made this way. In a mixing bowl beat a large egg with a fork just enough to blend the yolk and white; add 1/2 cup cold water and 1/2 teaspoon salt and stir with a fork to mix. Now dump in 1/2 cup sifted flour and stir lightly with a fork only until there are no extremely large lumps, but plenty of small ones. Do NOT stir smooth.

Dip the pieces of rock lobster tails and the vegetables in the batter and deep-fat fry in peanut oil heated to 360 degrees on a frying thermometer. If using an electric appliance, follow the manufacturers' directions.

Have a dipping sauce on hand. For this you can use soy sauce flavored with grated lemon rind and lemon

If you have a suitable electric appliance, it's a good idea to fry the Tempura at the table so each batch may be served as soon as it is cooked. Tempura tastes best this way.

Creamy texture can be enjoyed without worry

By ARTHUR SCHWARTZ Newsday

Fat worries increase in direct proportion to the temperature, but so does my desire for cool and creamy foods. I've discovered, however, that it isn't necessary to load up a dish with cream or flour-butter thickening to achieve that velvety, mouth-coating feeling that soothes me so well. I can have cool and creamy without guilt now.

Creamy is a texture, not a flavor. And while it's true that fats such as butter certainly add a note of elegance to the texture of any soup or sauce, and that a bit of flour thickening is hardly dangerous to your well-being, there are saner, more nutritious alternatives to the high-fat enrichments and the flour thickenings traditionaly used to achieve the comforting texture we call creamy.

Let's take the thickeners or binders first. Flour is added to a soup or sauce for two reasons — it binds the ingredients together and it thickens the liquid.

If used with discretion, and cooked properly in fat, the starchiness of flour can be undetectable, although the fat it must be cooked in is awfully caloric. Quite often, however, (and restaurants are the chief offenders here) flour is overused or undercooked and makes the soup or sauce a revolting; pas-

Cornstarch and, less frequently, arrowroot are used as thickeners, but they're tricky and usually even less satisfactory than flour when improperly handled. Next time you are in a Chinese restaurant that overdoes the cornstarch, notice how sticky and artifically shiny the sauce looks after just a few seconds. Notice how it not only coats the mouth, but practically sticks to the roof as well - fine for peanut butter but not moo goo gai pan.

These thickeners are not always necessary for a thick texture, however. Vegetables cooked in the pan juices of a pot roast, then pureed, will thicken the liquid into an appetizing and nutritious sauce. Potatoes are a common natural soup thickener.

And in one recipe that follows, a combination of brown rice (much higher in calcium, phosphorous and potassium than white rice) and pureed whole asparagus (a good source of fiber), gives a rich but light thickening to a subtle cream soup. In the other recipe the almost magic thickening power of eggs when they are moderately heated adds body to a refreshingly tart beet borscht. And eggs add highquality protein along with their calories.

Creamy, as I said, is a texture not a flavor. Nevertheless, as the word implies, the milk products are creamy beyond any other quality they have. To enhance a soup's creamy sensation, however, the milk product doesn't have to be double thick, extrahigh-fat sweet cream or cultured sour cream.

Yogurt, even when made from whole milk, or pureed ricotta or cottage cheese are fine substitutes. In the following asparagus soup, only a bit of yogurt is used so as not to mask the gentle flavor of asparagus. This is a first-course soup to be followed by a fish or meat course.

The borscht uses considerably more yogurt, but it is a more substantial soup. For a full dinner menu, accompany it with dark bread and follow it with a cheese omelet and green salad.

CREAM OF ASPARAGUS SOUP

pound asparagus 3 scallions (white and light green only), chopped 2 tablespoons brown rice 2 cups water

1-2 teaspoon salt Fresh-ground pepper to taste 3 tablespoons plain yogurt or sour cream Few drops lemon juice

Wash the asparagus well, then slice each spear on the diagonal into several pieces, reserving a few of the asparagus tips for a garnish.

In a saucepan, combine the asparagus, scallions, brown rice, water, salt and pepper. Bring to a simmer. Cover and simmer until asparagus and rice are very tender, 20 to 25 minutes.

In a blender or food processor, puree the asparagus mixture. (With a blender, this will have to be done in several batches.)

Pour the puree into a clean saucepan and heat through. Stir in the yogurt or sour cream and lemon juice. Chill thoroughly. Taste and correct seasoning. Garnish with raw asparagus tips. Makes 4 servings.

CREAMY BORSCHT

4 cups water 1 tablespoon salt

1 medium onion, peeled

1 large clove garlic, peeled

2 bunches beets, washed, peeled and shredded

Juice of ½ lemon 2 eggs, lightly beaten

2 cups plain yogurt

12 steamed new potatoes (hot and freshly cooked) 1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill

In a saucepan, combine the water, salt, whole onion, whole clove of garlic, shredded beets and lemon juice. Cover, bring to a simmer and simmer for 45 minutes or until onion is soft.

Remove onion and garlic. In a small mixing bowl, beat some of the hot broth into the lightly beaten eggs. Pour egg mixture into remaining soup and stir well. Chill thoroughly.

Beat in yogurt. Taste and correct seasoning. Serve very cold with hot whole new potatoes; the contrasting temperatures add interest. Garnish with sprinkling of chopped fresh dill. Serves 4.

CLIP 'N COOK

OLIVE MEAT LOAF

1/2 cup ripe olives

1/2 pound (1 cup packed) ground chuck beef

1/2 tsp. salt

¼ tsp. paprika

% cup loosely packed grated medium-fine carrot % cup finely chopped célery 1 tbsp. finely grated onion

If the olives are unpitted, cut away from pits in wedges; if pitted, slice; add to remaining ingredients and, with your hands, mix well. Pack into a buttered 7½ by 3½ by 2 inch loaf pan; bake in a preheated 400-degree oven for 30 minutes. Let stand 10 minutes; pour off juice if necessary and turn out. Makes 3 medium-size servings.

Kissinger gets support on campus

The Washington Post

NEW YORK - The organized opposition on the campus of Columbia University to the proposed appointment of former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger to a teaching post is a "crude form of McCarthyism," a recently formed ad hoc committee of students in support of the apointment has charged.

Stephen Morris, a doctoral student in the Political Science Department at Columbia, said he and other supporters had obtained 197 student signatures favoring Kissinger's appointment in a week, including a majority of graduate students in the School of International Affairs.

The petition asserts that Kissinger's background in government and as a professor at Harvard University would make him a "unique and especially qualified asset" to Columbia.

The petition notes that "many" of the signers personally disagree with "many" of the policies Kissinger pursued while in office but warns that to reject his academic credentials on grounds of "purely political judgment" would constitute "a crude form of McCarthyism.

Amidst a growing controversy over the proposed appointment, a faculty organization has obtained more than 130 signatures of faculty and research staff members opposing Kissinger's appointment, while another group has prepared a petition signed by 1,000 students and faculty members protesting the appointment. There are approximately 16,000 students and 4,000 faculty members at Columbia.

Kissinger has not been formally offered the job, but is expected to decide by the end of the month whether he would accept a specially endowed chair in the Political Science Department. Opponents of the appointment say they base their objections on Kissinger's "immoral" in-volvement in Vietnam war policies, while backers of the former secretary of state view the issue as one of academic freedom and accuse the opponents of trying to keep unpopular views off

Morris said his group's 197 signatures came from students only in the two departments that would directly involve Kissinger, while, he charged, the opponents gathered signatures from all over the campus and even "got people off the street." Another counter-petition favoring Kissinger is being circulated generally among undergraduates and has been signed by approximately 1,000 students, Morris said.

Black gold brings Britain to life

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER The Washington Post

LONDON - Late last fall, Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey of Britain and William Simon, the conservative U.S. Treasury secretary, were locked in a backstage battle over a $3.9 billion loan that Britain thought it desperately needed. London finally got the money from the International Monetary Fund, but it took the intervention of the Secretary of State, Henry Kissinger, to get the funds on terms that Britain's Labor government thought it could afford.

Five months later, it now appears that the titantic struggle need never have happened. Black gold from the North Sea has completely transformed the nation's international balance sheet. Big debts are being turned into surpluses and some monetary authorities here are privately urging that Britain pass up the unused half, or more, of the loan that was won with so much effort.

Top figures in Prime Minister James Callaghan's government dismiss such heady talk as 'premature.

"When you have gone to so much trouble to get the money," said one key negotiator, "you're a fool not to keep and use it." But even this official acknowledges that if Britain stays on its present course, if the new bulge of black ink in the foreign accounts continues to swell, he might take a different view at the end of the year. By then Britain will have drawn about $2 billion of the loan and could forego the remaining $1.9 billion.

This dramatic turn in Britain's fortunes does not reflect any wise new government policy. It does not mean that British business or working habits have been magically transformed or even that there is any greater mastery here over inflation. The change has come about purely and simply because of the existence of North Sea oil and an exploitation timetable that is bringing the stuff ashore in ever-growing quantities.

To measure the importance of oil for Britain's global balance sheet, consider these figures: Last year, the nation spent on imported goods, tourism abroad and other foreign outlays nearly $2.5 billion more than it earned. That was the deficit on the current account. Oil imports to power industry, run cars and heat homes was the whole story and then some. Britain's net import bill for fuel last year was a huge $6.8 billion.

So far through April this year the plunge in the pound overall current account has swung into a surplus of $217 million, implying a balance of $1 billion for the year as a whole. As British oil replaced crude from Saudi Arabia, the fuel import bill for the three months stood at $1.2 billion. This suggests an oil deficit for the year of $4.8 billion, some $2 billion less than last year. In fact, it should be well under this because the British oil is coming home at an increasing

That, moreover, is a continuing trend. No matter how Britain's industrial exporters perform, oil production is to climb steadily until about 1982. Late in 1979, Britain's fuel deficit is scheduled to disappear and the nation plans to export crude in the 1980s. Barring a complete collapse of British industry, the nation will be racking up big surpluses in its dealings abroad.

The same banks, multinational corporations and oil governments that drove the pound down sharply last year have finally awakened to the startling change. They have been pouring money into British banks instead of pulling it out. Reserves of foreign currencies here have leaped from $4.1 billion in December to $10.1 billion in April.

The Bank of England, which ultimately receives the foreign currency, could have played it differently. Instead of building reserves, it might have let the price of the pound rise against other currencies. Indeed, a more expensive pound would cut the cost of imports and thereby slash living costs for the man in the street.

The IMF, which gave Britain the big loan, is said to be against such a plan, however. It reportedly fears that the pound, now about $1.72, is too high for the health of Britain's sluggish exporters. The Fund is said to want an even lower rate to keep Britain's inefficient manufacturers com-

Some commentators here, however, note that Britain's exporters did not take advantage of the falling pound last year to cut their prices abroad. Instead they pocketed windfall profits in foreign currencies. So, the argument runs, a rising pound now would not hurt exports but only cut back on the windfall profits.

The central point, however, is this: Six months ago it would have been unthinkable that Britons could debate letting the pound rise. The big IMF loan was secured to check a drastic fall in confidence and sickening

Carter trying to pry public away from big car

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) - You - yes, you — can save up to five hundred dollars a year, if you buy a snappy little economy car instead of a big, clumsy gas guzzler.

That's the commercial President Jimmy Carter wants to sell Congress and the nation.

If they buy it, Carter hopes, the United States will cut its gasoline consumption 10 per cent or more below its 1977 level, by 1985.

Of course, when Carter sent his message over to Congress last April 20. he phrased it less flamboyantly: he proposed a tax on gas-guzzling " cars, a rebate on economy cars, taxes on crude oil and standby taxes on

Under Carter's proposals, drivers would pay more per mile of travel, but drivers of gas-guzzlers that deliver low miles-per-gallon performances would pay more than the others; and those buying brand-new gas-guzzlers would pay the most.

Compared with a new higheconomy car, a new gas-guzzler in 1985, travelling 10,000 miles a year, could cost its owner $500 a year extra - a total of some $5,000 over its normal 10-year lifetime.

Carter figures that should be enough to steer a lot of people away from big cars to the small-car showrooms, and to make them spend a little less time on the road as well.

If so, U.S. gasoline consumption may be reduced from an estimated 7.33 million barrels per day this year to 6.6 million by 1985.

The 10 per cent reduction, about 730,000 barrels a day, really represents 3.8 million barrels a day less than the amount American drivers would burn by 1985 if they kept their big cars and road-roaming

Congress, in fact, took the first step away from gas-guzzlers in 1975 when it set auto efficiency standards requiring an average of at least 27.5 miles per gallon for new cars in 1985, a 40 per cent improvement.

An automaker who fails to meet he standard can be fined up to $100 per

But a Carter administration official said in an interview: "There is some thought and some evidence that these penalties may be insufficient.

"The automakers may be willing to pay the penalties, instead of meeting the standards which might cost them even more," he said.

Auto industry executives say they plan to meet his standards.

The Carter official added, there is some doubt whether those drivers eager for big flashy gas-guzzlers today will buy the new economy cars tomorrow.

Carter's answer to these fears was the "guzzler tax," actually a series of proposed auto taxes that get larger as fuel economy falls farther below each year's rising standards.

For example, a new 1978 car getting 18 to 19 miles per gallon would carry no tax penalty in Carter's plan; but one getting 17 to 18 miles per gallon would be taxed $52. A real guzzler getting less than 13 miles per gallon would be taxed $449.

By 1985, the break-even standard would climb to 27.5 miles per gallon. New cars delivering less than that would be taxed from $67 to as much as $2,488 for those that get less than 12.5 miles per gallon.

On the other hand, Carter proposed to pay rebates to the purchasers of gas-saving cars, ranging from $47 at 19 miles per gallon to $449 at 36 miles per gallon in 1978.

In 1985, the rebates would range from $62 at 28.5 miles per gallon to $440 at 37.5 miles per gallon. The Carter official said taxes and rebates were intended "to help move

the demand side toward meeting the standards or better." In other words, to tempt more people to buy small

If Congress' standards for new cars are met, the Transportation Department estimates, the average performance of all cars on the road, old and new, should rise from about 13.6 miles per gallon in 1975 to about 21 miles per gallon in 1985.

But gasoline savings will not match the automobile improvements, because there will be more cars on the road and more people to drive them in an expanding population. And Americans have a habit of driving a little bit more each year. If past trends continue, the auto standards alone would save more than 3.36 million barrels of gasoline a day by

But that would still be about 439,000 barrels per day short of Carter's goal. To take that final step, the public would have to cut down its driving a little - or to be more exact, to increase its driving less than otherwise.

In the past, the number of miles driven per person in the United States has increased about 4 per cent a year: Carter's goal could be met if driving increased only about 3 per cent a

Carter's public persuader is a proposed "standby gasoline tax."

Carter would allow gasoline consumption to increase slowly through 1980, but then it would be targeted to drop year by year to the 1985 goal.

Each year that this schedule is violated, a gasoline tax of five cents per gallon would be added starting in

By 1985, the extra gasoline tax could total 35 cents per gallon. But Carter has proposed separate taxes on crude oil that might add another five cents to the cost of gasoline, so by 1985 the driver could be paying 40 cents more at the pump than he does now.

Administration economists figure that should be enough, apart from any other price increases that may occur, to slow the growth of automobile travel and meet Carter's gasolinesaving goal.

But, of course, it would cost the driver more money: in a 37-miles-pergallon car, he would pay $108 more to drive 10,000 miles; in a 21-milespergallon car, $190 more; in a 12.5miles-per-gallon car, he would pay

Carter has proposed returning the oil and gasoline tax money to the public through equal rebates to all

Small-car families would find their extra driving costs reduced or eliminated in the long run, and might even make a modest profit on the

But the equal rebates would be too small to wipe out the larger costs of big-car families who would continue to pay a penalty for the appetites of their gas-guzzlers. Observers of Congress think the tax on gas-guzzling cars and rebate on economy cars have a good chance to

The crude oil tax, which would add about five cents per gallon to the costs of gasoline, fuel oil and other petroleum products, faces opposition from forces who want oil price controls lifted instead. But either way, roughly the same gasoline price hike is anticipated.

The standby gasoline tax, however, is in deep trouble in Congress and many prominent members, including the influential Sen. Henry M Jackson, D-Wash., have said it will

That would save drivers substantial amounts of money; it remains to be seen whether they would be grateful enough to save substantial amounts of gasoline in return.

Vance favors federal probe of Torres case

Vance said Wednesday he had

McManus trial jury deliberating

HOUSTON (AP) - A state district court jury resumed deliberations today in the capital murder trial of Vernon McManus, accused in the last July slaying of a wealthy Baytown

The state accused McManus, a former college football coach, of arranging the deaths of Paul and Mary Cantrell. Their bodies were found in their Baytown home July 25. Both had been strangled and their throats slashed.

Paula Cantrell Derese, 27, a daughter of the slain couple, was originally charged with capital murder in the case but prosecutors agreed to accept a guilty plea to a. lesser count of murder in return for her testimony. She spent three days on the stand as a prosecution witness.

She is awaiting sentencing.

The prosecution claimed the Cantrells were killed in a scheme to collect estate and insurance money. The jury received the case about

The jury received the case after the defense rested without calling a witness. The prosecution called several witnesses during eight days of

State District Court Judge I.D. McMaster denied two defense motions. One asked that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of innocent to capital murder and to reduce the charge to murder.

"This case has been handled upside down and backwards," defense lawyer Larry Doherty said in closing arguments. "They (prosecution) started out without a case and are now drawing the wrong conclusions for the wrong reasons.'

Asst. Dist. Atty. Mike Hinton called Doherty's remarks "insulting, absurd, ridiculous and just incredible."

Part of McMaster's charge to the jury told it to return a conviction of murder if the members believed McManus killed the Cantrells without assurances of receiving money from Mrs. Derese.

The prosecution explained why agreements were made with Mrs.

Pentagon disbanding effective intelligence unit

By BOB WOODWARD The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Pentagon is abolishing its crack, super-secret intelligence unit called Task Force 157. Successful, controversial and extremely secretive, Task Force 157 is the U.S. military's only network of undercover agents and spies operating abroad using commercial and business "cover" for their espionage. Run by the U.S. Navy for seven years in suburban Washington from the ninth floor of an Alexandria, Va., office building, the unit has recently controlled as many as 75 contract agents or "spies for hire" who monitor the key ports of the world. Soviet vessels and the shipment of nuclear weapons. The current commander of the unit is Navy Capt. Darryl A. DeMaris.

One informed government source last week discussed the reasons for abolishing the unit: "The simple truth is that spies are too hot to handle ... there were too many questionable business deals. They got the job done, but the potential for abuse was too

Pentagon and CIA spokesmen declined comment, saying that all matters relating to Task Force 157 are still classified.

Other sources maintain that the decision to close the unit reflects a sense of caution that is being applied to all intelligence operations.

Task Force 157 has been involved in some of the most sensitive intelligence missions of the last decade. The unit's top secret communications channel, for example, was used to set up then Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's secret 1971 visit to China.

The White House at the time considered it more secure from leaks than any such channels run by the Former Chairman of the joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral Thomas H. Moorer, confirmed Tuesday he had recommeded that Task Force 157 provide the communications channel for Kissinger.

Moorer was critical of the decision to abolish the unit, saying "I think there have been requirements for this capability in the past and there will be cases in the future. Task Force 157 was valued in the Pentagon because it was a small in-dependent intelligence unit that could cut through red tape with speed and secrecy. Some Pentagon officials maintain an important capability is being lost not just to the Navy but to the entire intelligence community.

However, following the congressional intelligence investigations,

Pentagon officials found they lacked the means to fully control the agents working for the small companies or 'cover' firms called "proprietaries."

Sources said numberous "cozy relationships" were discovered between the contract employes and firms selling equipment and supplies to Task Force 157.

The final decision to eliminate Task Force 157 was made last year and was ratified again this year in the Carter administration.

All operations are to cease or be transferred to the CIA or other intelligence agencies by Sept. 30 of this yeer, the sources said

The cover for the task force is the Naval Administrative Services Com-mand and Pierce Morgan Associates Inc., which operates as an international maritime consulting firm.

One of Task Force 157's highly classified assignments has been on occasion to monitor nuclear weapons shipments aboard Soviet and other vessels as they pass through strategic "choke points" or narrow passages on the oceans such as the Strait of Gibralter.

The unit was involved in drawing up a report in 1973 saying the Soviets had shipped nuclear weapons into Egypt during the October Arab-Israeli war.

The story of "Transportation" was told in a special film, produced by the Texas Depart-ment of Highways and Public Transportation, shown at the meeting of the Downtown Lions Club Wednesday noon in the Midland Hilton.

The film was shown by Menry Pierson of Odessa, district engineer of the Highways and Public Transportation Department, who also spoke briefly on the subject.

Pierson discussed the ad-ditional funding of the highway program by the present session of the Texas Legislature to meet the problem of inflation which had handicapped highway building and maintenance.

"The additional funding will put us back in the business of building and maintaining Texas highways," the speaker said.
It was pointed out during the Opening of talks gives air of real bargaining

By OSWALD JOHNSTON Los Angeles Times

GENEVA - The Carter administration's effort to negotiate a new strategic arms limitation treaty with the Russians resumed here Wednesday, and both sides left a cautious hint that some real bargaining is at last under way.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met with their negotiating teams for 2-1/2 hours in a session devoted entirely to the arms issue, it was announced officially. A second session on SALT is scheduled for Thursday morning.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III, speaking for Vance, described the session as "businesslike" and a "full exchange of views." He added that this description was jointly agreed to by the two sides, and that it was further agreed that no further information would be made public.

On the surface, this procedure is markedly different from that followed in Moscow last March when the "exchange of views" on SALT ended in deadlock.

On that occasion the two sides presented their proposals the first day. On the last day of Vance's talks with the Soviet leadership, it was announced that both sides had rejected those proposals. There apparently was no real bargaining at peared from the official description that the two sides began with a presumption that Moscow's deadlock did not wipe the slate clean. Rather, both sides began this time with a willingness to talk about what was already on the table.

"Both sides intend to consider the views of the other," Carter said, "and resume talking again tomorrow morning..to explore the various ideas in greater detail."

There was no indication that either side had presented anything new, although there have been semipublic indications from both Washington and Moscow in recent days that each side may be prepared to move away from the rigid positions presented in Moscow.

At the same time, however, both sides are officially holding to their irreconcilable public positions: The Russians to an insistence that the 1974 Vladivostok agreement be the basis for progress, the Americans to the view that "real arms control" would require a bold step beyond Vladivostok,

In Moscow last March, the Soviets flatly turned down the U.S. proposal that the Vladivostok strategic' weapons ceilings be lowered from 2,400 on each side to 1,800 in a package that would have called on the Soviets to scrap some of their largest landbased missiles while preserving most of the existing U.S. deployment.

When Vance, announcing the Soviet rejection, also revealed most details of the U.S. offer, the Soviets replied with an unprecedented public diatribe by Gromyko as soon as the American official plane departed from Vnukovo

But at Wednesday's opening session, it was almost as though the earlier polemics were forgotten. Gromyko, capable of a wry humor as well as his more characteristic glumness, elected to be pleasant when first encountering Vance for photographs at the Soviet United Nations mission here.

Mobutu clearly recognized the implications. His game plan, diplomatic observers said, was twofold: (1) to convince the non-Communist world that the invasion represented a threat to the entire continent, not just to Zaire, and (2) to convince his nation that he had the situation firmly in hand - even when he hadn't.

By last week, "the Guide," as Mobutu likes to be called, had scored his diplomatic victory, and perhaps a military one as well. The invaders had apparently retreated toward the Angolan border and faded into the jungle. He had turned the events in

Shaba province to his own advantage, and was again his old ebullient self. "As long as I live," he declared with typical modesty, "we shall conquer."

Mobutu had achieved his coup with political showmanship and skillful manipulation of the media. In addition to the 1,500 Moroccan troops who turned the tide militarily, Mobutu had rallied a wide range of international support despite his regime's unenviable record of human-rights violations, corruption, financial mismanagement and displaced national priorities.

He had done it by waving the red flag - and the response he received underscored the uneasiness that much of Africa feels about attempts by the Soviet Union and Cuba to increase their influence on the continent. Although the extent of Russian and Cuban involvement in the invasion is still unclear, the fact that the invaders carried Soviet arms and struck from Angola, where 13,000 Cuban troops are stationed, had sinister implications for many African nations whose own borders are vulnerable.

It was presumed that the invaders were intent on reclaiming their former province of Katanga, as Shaba was once called, but there was little to indicate that they were ideologically

Hearts No. 1 death cause

NEW YORK (AP) - The American Council of Life Insurance says cardiovascular-renal diseases were responsible for half the deaths among persons with ordinary life insurance in the United States in 1975, the last year for which figures are available.

It says cancer accounted for 21.4 per cent of policyholder deaths, pneumonia and influenza for 2.8 per cent of deaths, tuberculosis for 0.1 per cent, diabetes for 1.0 per cent, and other diseases for 16.1 per cent. In all. 91.2 per cent of ordinary policyholder deaths were from natural causes.

Joe McGuire

Midlander D&D speaker

ODESSA — Joe McGuire, a Midland independent oil operator, will be the speaker for the Odessa Desk and Derrick Club's "Industry Appreciation Night" meeting Friday.

The event will get under way at 7 p. m. in the Vagabond Inn. McGuire has been a Midland resident since 1974 when he formed

He attended Stanford University and the University of Arkansas and has had experience in all phases of the oil industry and has been active in civic affairs.

Prior to forming Mt. Carmel Drilling Co. at Mt. Carmel, Ill., in 1952, he was employed by an independent oil company.

He was involved in drilling activities in the Tri-State Basin of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky until 1969. At that time, he became engaged in drilling and production operations in the Permian Basin.

In 1974, he became inactive in Mt. Carmel Drilling Co. and moved to Midland.

He is a past president of the Independent Oil Producers of Indiana, Illinois and Kentucky and was Illinois' representative to the Interstate Oil Compact Commission. He is a former member of the Advisory Council to Gov. Richard Ogilvie of Illinois and served as mayor of Mt. Carmel from 1967 to

Promotion

Halliburton Services employe for 37 years and assistant manager at London for the British Isles, Europe and Africa, has been promoted to manager of Tools & Testing for the worldwide oil field services company. Nix has moved to the Duncan headquarters of Halliburton Services, a division of Halliburton Co.

In his Halliburton career, Nix worked 24 years in the United States. mostly in South Louisiana. His service includes four years as a tool operator at Houma and Lafayette, La.

at Lafayette in 1952 and to district superintendent at Morgan City, La., when he was promoted to area offshore operations manager in England. In 1969, he was promoted to assistant Eastern Hemisphere manager at London and, in 1976, became assistant regional manager.

Heading the guests from the Midland Division office were John E. Whitman, division manager for production, and Don D. Brown, division manager for exploration. Conoco, the No. 1 gas producer in

Gulf of Mexico waters and the No. 2 oil producer, plans to continue in efforts in offshore areas. "We have spent $84 million already on leases in the Atlantic offshore."

Pitcher said. "If various court rulings and other situations prove favorable to the oil industry, we could start up operations in the Atlantic next year, but it is doubtful if that will happen. 'We are making a huge effort in the North Sea. We already are active in four fields in that area and expect to spend one billion dollars there in the next four years. The result, we hope, will bring our production in that area to approximately 120,000 barrels of oil per day," Kircher said.

Referring to the Carter energy plan, Kircher said "what we are talking about here are proposals that are far from finalized.

"I think the goals are right, but the means that he has set up to achieve them are not properly designed. One blade of the proposal is conservation, but the other blade of the scissors, incentive for maximum exploration efforts, is missing," Kircher said.

"Under the proposals, we will not be able to avoid a high import level. Back to company business, Kircher said the president's stress on the use of coal "makes our decision 10 year ago to seek a good position in coal look very good at this time."

Kircher pointed out that URDA had selected Conoco for a huge coal gasification unit and that the company has many undeveloped coal areas in the West as well as proven coal areas in the Northeast.

He said Conoco was not, at this time, looking too seriously at solar asparagus 1 tablespoon butter 2 tablespoons water ¼ teaspoon salt 1/4 cup freshly grated

Parmesan cheese Break off tough whitish ends from asparagus. Soak in a sink generously filled with hot water for 5 minutes to relax the bracts so extraneous material will float out; soak in cold water for 10 minutes to refresh. Drain. With a sharp knife slice spears diagonally into very thin ovals up to buds; slice each bud in half lengthwise. Put the butter, water, salt and asparagus in an 8-inch skillet with a dome cover. Bring to simmering; cover tightly and simmer until as tender as you like - 3 to 5 minutes; watch so water evaporates but asparagus does not scorch. Off heat, sprinkle with the cheese.

PEANUT BUTTER

MELTING MOMENTS A friend and I devised this variation of an oldtime recipe and if we say so ourselves, it's delicious! 14 cups sifted flour 4 cup cornstarch 1/2 cup confectioners'

1/2 eup butter or margarine 4 cup super-chunk peanut butter In a medium bowl stir together the flour, cornstarch and sugar. With a pastry blender cut in the butter and peanut butter until a soft dough forms; if necessary, use your hands to work the mixture until it holds together. Using 1 level tablespoon for each, shape into balls. Place 2 inches apart on an ungreased cookie sheet. With flour-dipped fork tines, flatten balls in a crisscross pattern. Bake in a preheated 300-degree oven until just brown.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By NANCY HUDSON, LORI JONS

With only eight days of school left several activities have come to close.

Last Thursday night was the Spring Sports Ban-quet held in the MHS cafeteria. The sports that were recognized were track, basketball, baseball, tennis, swimming, and gymnastics.

Every year an award goes to the best girl and boy athlete. The athletes are voted on by their peers having to come by Doc's office before school and vote for their choice. The awards went to Amy Grimes and Phillip Ward. Amy lettered in volleyball three years: Phillip in football. Congratulations on such a great

Friday night is the traditional Bill Mimms game The game starts at 7:30 and tickets are $1 donation. The Pack will be against the Pack so the Bulldogs can't lose! Hope to see you all there!

Seniors have a busy schedule ahead. Friday, May 27, we get out of third period for rehearsal for Baccalaureate which will be Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the auditorium. Then Monday, June 2, at 9:30 a.m. there will be a rehearsal for graduation exercises. Graduation is June 3, at 9 p.m.—Lee goes first this year.

Following Graduation will be the All-Night Party! It will be from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. at the National Guard Armory, and JJ and his Music Machine will be there with tunes the whole night long. There will be a floor show by Fever at 1 a.m. Tickets go on sale next week so be sure to get your ticket because NO tickets will be sold at the door. McDonalds is catering the FREE food and drinks starting at 3 a.m. Remember the All-Night Party is for seniors or for seniors and their dates. Better start resting up for the big night ahead!

Miss Holt, the speech teacher at Midland High recently was awarded the Kiwanis Club teacher of the year award! Congratulations Miss Holt! Junior Rotarians this week are Suzanne Pomeroy and David Johnston, two very deserving students

The Library is closing soon so let's put to use the 'Evelyn Wood Speed Reading Course' and get the books turned in. You cannot take your finals until all

This week several students were racking their brains trying to figure out "cute" things to leave their classmates. If trying to sneak a view of someone's will, to see what they left you, they turn around and tell you that it's a personal joke and you won't get it, that's probably true! Be sure to watch for the seniors wills in the Bulldog next week.

There will be a Fellowship of Christian Athletes meeting tonight at Liz Ruwwe's house, 1705 Douglas

Now what you all have been waiting for... The test schedules for Monday, May 30, are 2nd, 5th and 6th periods. On Tuesday, the 31, periods 1, 3 and 4.

The President's cabinet for next year will be announced next week. The officers are carefully going over all the applications and we will know next week who will be attending the Student Council meetings next year on Tuesday mornings at 7:30! This is our last Chatter that we will ever write and we would like to thank The Midland Reporter-Telegram and Marvin Roscoe. It's been a great year and we could not have done it without you all! Be sure to read next week's Chatter when the new Chatter writers will make their debut. They will be Dinah Boyd, Kim Wood and Sherry Bailey. We wish you all the luck in the world and all the fun times you will have writing the Chatter.

Thanks for a great year, NANCY, LORI AND LIZ P.S. There will be a reception after Baccalaureate in the Youth Center May 29th. All Seniors and their parents are invited P.S.S. The new officers of the 77-78 Junior Council are Ty Hughston, president; Greg Parr, vice president; and Jo Linsey, secretary.

One-room school still doing job

WHITE EARTH, N.D. (AP) - Teacher Mae Helling's one-room country school is located in the remote, rugged rangeland of western North Dakota. Because of the isolation, she tries to prepare her students for the outside world after they graduate. Because they're farm and ranch children, the current nine students in grades one through seven know about the birds and bees.

Beyond that, they'll enter a new, alien way of life after graduating from the eighth grade and moving on to high schools in the prairie towns of Tioga and "I tell them that not everybody is going to like everybody else, and that there will be disappointments," says the whitehaired Mrs. Helling, who often wears cowboy boots to school.

"I tell them that they're going to hear about evolution — I don't teach it any more than I have to — and I suggest they just stand by the Bible, that they not be led away by fads.

"I teach them that the greatest commandment of Mrs. Helling, who says she's well past retirement age, has been a teacher for 45 years, including 17 at miles away at White Earth. Mrs. Helling isn't a "textbook teacher," but she says six former students were on the honor rolls at Tioga and Stanley this year.

the rural Chilcot School. The closest post office is 30

Desks are scattered informally about the room in the white frame building. A handbell that gets daily use is in the corner. "The thing is to do whatever work is best for the individual child," says Mrs. Helling, whose three grandchildren are among her students. "If I have a slow reader, we sit right down and work with him "We don't wait for any special period or time to talk about something. We just strike when the iron is hot - when the interest is there. Discipline problems are few: "We take care of that real fast. Sometimes we get to the seat of the problem. Sometimes we make public announcements (in front of the students) that are quite effective. Drug problems? "We don't have any. But that's not to say we couldn't. We try to alert our children without being too conspicuous so as to make the drug thing an attraction." Parents and neighbors, flock to the school at

Christmas and in the spring for eighth-grade graduation. They arrive via the Goat Trail "because that's what the road once was," says Mrs. Helling A fiddler breaks out a tune to start the festivity, a couple of guitar players join in, and everbody starts singing - mostly Western songs. Chirstmas and graduation are the highlights of the school year But there won't be any diplomas handed out on the school's front steps this spring because there aren't any eighth-graders Next year there will be two

Vance favors federal probe of Torres case

HOUSTON (AP) - Harris County Dist. Atty. Carol S. Vance says federal authorities rather than state authorities should investigate and prosecute the alleged police related death of a young prisoner.

Vance said Wednesday he had asked the Civil Rights Division of the U.S. Justice Department to investigate the May 6 death of Joe Campos Torres Jr.

He said if the Justice Department declines to take over the case, he will proceed to present it to a county grand jury as quickly as possible.

The body of Torres, 23, was found floating in Buffalo Bayou. Policemen Terry Denson, 27, was later charged with murder. Four other officers were fired from the force and another suspended.

McManus trial jury deliberating

HOUSTON (AP) - A state district court jury resumed deliberations today in the capital murder trial of Vernon McManus, accused in the last July slaying of a wealthy Baytown

The state accused McManus, a former college football coach, of arranging the deaths of Paul and Mary Cantrell. Their bodies were found in their Baytown home July 25.

Both had been strangled and their throats slashed. Paula Cantrell Derese, 27, a daughter of the slain couple, was originally charged with capital murder in the case but prosecutors agreed to accept a guilty plea to a lesser count of murder in return for her testimony. She spent three days on the stand as a prosecution witness.

The prosecution claimed the Cantrells were killed in a scheme to collect estate and insurance money.

The jury received the case about mid-afternoon Wednesday deliberated for about an hour and then requested trial exhibits. The panel deliberated for about 90 minutes more and then retired for the

The jury received the case after the defense rested without calling a witness. The prosecution called several witnesses during eight days of testimony

State District Court Judge I.D. McMaster denied two defense motions. One asked that the jury be instructed to return a verdict of innocent to capital murder and to reduce the charge to murder. "This case has been handled upside down and backwards," defense lawyer Larry Doherty said in closing arguments. "They (prosecution) started out without a case and are now drawing the wrong conclusions for the wrong reasons.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Mike Hinton called Doherty's remarks "insulting, absurd, ridiculous and just incredible."

Part of McMaster's charge to the jury told it to return a conviction of murder if the members believed McManus killed the Cantrells without assurances of receiving money from Mrs. Derese

The prosecution explained why agreements were made with Mrs.

"When you have your parents murdered, anything less than the death penalty is an injustice, but Paula had the only testimony that put him in the Cantrell house on the night of the murders," prosecutor L.H. Stewart said. "We made no promises of leniency other than that she willl not die because of her conduct."

Doherty told the jury that Mrs. Derese did not tell the truth.

"By her very agreement on the plea, she was never obligated to tell the truth," he said. "She lied to you. They let the real criminals go... and tried to squeeze McManus for something he didn't do."

Carter trying to pry public away from big car

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — You — yes, you — can save up to five hundred dollars a year, if you buy a snappy little economy car instead of a big. clumsy gas guzzler.

That's the commercial President Jimmy Carter wants to sell Congress and the nation.

If they buy it, Carter hopes, the United States will cut its gasoline consumption 10 per cent or more below its 1977 level, by 1985.

Of course, when Carter sent his message over to Congress last April 20, he phrased it less flamboyantly: he proposed a tax on gas-guzzling cars, a rebate on economy cars, taxes on crude oil and standby taxes on

Under Carter's proposals, drivers would pay more per mile of travel, but drivers of gas-guzzlers that deliver low miles-per-gallon performances would pay more than the others; and those buying brand-new gas-guzzlers would pay the most.

Compared with a new higheconomy car, a new gas-guzzler in 1985, travelling 10,000 miles a year, could cost its owner $500 a year extra - a total of some $5,000 over its normal 10-year lifetime.

Carter figures that should be enough to steer a lot of people away from big cars to the small-car showrooms, and to make them spend a little less time on the road as well. If so, U.S. gasoline consumption may be reduced from an estimated 7.33 million barrels per day this year to 6.6 million by 1985

The 10 per cent reduction, about 730,000 barrels a day, really represents 3.8 million barrels a day less than the amount American drivers would burn by 1985 if they kept their big cars and road-roaming

Congress, in fact, took the first step away from gas-guzzlers in 1975 when it set auto efficiency standards requiring an average of at least 27.5 miles per gallon for new cars in 1985. a 40 per cent improvement.

An automaker who fails to meet he standard can be fined up to $100 per But a Carter administration official said in an interview: "There is some thought and some evidence that these penalties may be insufficient. "The automakers may be willing to pay the penalties, instead of meeting the standards which might cost them even more," he said. Auto industry executives say they plan to meet his standards.

The Carter official added, there is some doubt whether those drivers eager for big flashy gas-guzzlers today will buy the new economy cars

Carter's answer to these fears was the "guzzler tax," actually a series of proposed auto taxes that get larger as fuel economy falls farther below each year's rising standards.

For example, a new 1978 car getting 18 to 19 miles per gallon would carry no tax penalty in Carter's plan; but one getting 17 to 18 miles per gallon would be taxed $52. A real guzzler getting less than 13 miles per gallon would be taxed $449.

By 1985, the break-even standard would climb to 27.5 miles per gallon. New cars delivering less than that would be taxed from $67 to as much as $2,488 for those that get less than 12.5 miles per gallon.

On the other hand, Carter proposed to pay rebates to the purchasers of gas-saving cars, ranging from $47 at 19 miles per gallon to $449 at 36 miles per gallon in 1978. In 1985, the rebates would range from $62 at 28.5 miles per gallon to $440 at 37.5 miles per gallon.

The Carter official said taxes and rebates were intended "to help move

the demand side toward meeting the standards or better." In other words, to tempt more people to buy small

If Congress' standards for new cars are met, the Transportation Department estimates, the average performance of all cars on the road, old and new, should rise from about 13.6 miles per gallon in 1975 to about 21 miles per gallon in 1985.

But gasoline savings will not match the automobile improvements, because there will be more cars on the road and more people to drive them in an expanding population.

And Americans have a habit of driving a little bit more each year. If past trends continue, the auto standards alone would save more than 3.36 million barrels of gasoline a day by But that would still be about 439,000 barrels per day short of Carter's goal. To take that final step, the public would have to cut down its driving a little - or to be more exact, to increase its driving less than otherwise.

In the past, the number of miles driven per person in the United States has increased about 4 per cent a year; Carter's goal could be met if driving increased only about 3 per cent a

Carter's public persuader is a proposed "standby gasoline tax."

Carter would allow gasoline consumption to increase slowly through 1980, but then it would be targeted to drop year by year to the 1985 goal.

Each year that this schedule is violated, a gasoline tax of five cents per gallon would be added starting in

By 1985, the extra gasoline tax could total 35 cents per gallon.

But Carter has proposed separate taxes on crude oil that might acid another five cents to the cost of gasoline, so by 1985 the driver could be paying 40 cents more at the pum p than he does now.

Administration economists figure that should be enough, apart from any other price increases that may occur, to slow the growth of automobile travel and meet Carter's gasolinesaving goal.

But, of course, it would cost the driver more money: in a 37-miles-pergallon car, he would pay $108 more to drive 10,000 miles; in a 21-milespergallon car, $190 more; in a 12.5miles-per-gallon car, he would pay $320 more.

Carter has proposed returning the oil and gasoline tax money to the public through equal rebates to all

Small-car families would find their extra driving costs reduced or eliminated in the long run, and might even make a modest profit on the

But the equal rebates would be too small to wipe out the larger costs of big-car families who would continue to pay a penalty for the appetites of their gas-guzzlers.

Observers of Congress think the tax on gas-guzzling cars and rebate on economy cars have a good chance to be adopted.

The crude oil tax, which would add about five cents per gallon to the costs of gasoline, fuel oil and other petroleum products, faces opposition from forces who want oil price controls lifted instead. But either way, roughly the same gasoline price hike is anticipated.

The standby gasoline tax, however, is in deep trouble in Congress and many prominent members, including the influential Sen. Henry M Jackson, D-Wash., have said it will

That would save drivers substantial amounts of money; it remains to be seen whether they would be grateful enough to save substantial amounts of gasoline in return.

Wealthy Californian to get burial wish

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) -After weeks of delay, a wealthy California woman was to be buried today seated in her blue Italian sports car in a ceremony that a funeral director said would be discreet and dignified.

Sandra Ilene West, who died in her Beverly Hills, Calif., home March 10, said in a handwritten will reportedly written by her in 1972 that she wanted to be buried in the car in a grave next to that of her husband.

Porter Loring, owner of Porter Loring Funeral Home, said Mrs. West will be dressed in a lace nightgown, as she requested in her will, and placed in her 1964 Ferrari.

The car will be put into a concrete reinforced wooden crate that will be buried beside the grave of her husband. Ike West Jr., a Texas oilman who died in 1968, Loring said.

Loring said the order approved by a California probate judge earlier this month allowing Mrs. West to be buried according to her directions stated the burial should be conducted with dignity and discretion.

Loring said he anticipated that some security precautions at the burial site to insure that the court orders were met.

Authorities in California have yet to say officially what caused Mrs. West's death. California officials say an inquest will be held next month The handwritten will left most of her estate, valued at between $3 million and $6 million to her brother-in-law, Sol West III, of Comfort, Tex.

A court battle erupted after Mrs. West's death concerning her

Fred Seamaan, a San Antonio attorney, produced a will that he said Mrs. West had executed in his office last year. Seamaan, who claims to have been the West family lawyer for the past 20 years, said the document left most of Mrs. West's estate to

Seamaan has also submitted his will to California courts for

Loring said the emblmed body of Mrs. West has been kept at a local masoleum since arriving in San Antonio in March.

The cost of the burial will be about $9,000, Loring said.

Texas missing federal funds boat

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Texas is "losing" more than a hundred million dollars in federal funds each year because of formulas written by congressmen from other parts of the

The federal government disbursed $72.4 billion this fiscal year to state and local governments for various social programs. Some governments get more than others.

-The public service jobs part of the Carter administration's economic stimulus program is sending $6.8 billion from Washington. $203 million is going to Texas. Michigan gets $347 million and California gets $785

-The emergency public works part of Carter's package sends $4 billion in this fiscal year for local projects that are supposed to stimulate lagging economies.

Texas will receive $88 million, or $279 for every unemployed person in the state. New Jersey will get $217 million, or $636 for each of its unemployed.

-The House has recently passed a three-year community development program that channels aid to cities. By 1980, the program will be sending $65 million annually to Detroit and $26 million annually to Houston, although they have nearly equal populations.

Behind the statistics lie the federal formulas. They are the means Congress uses to determine who gets the big slices of each federal pie.

The community development legislation, for example, has a new cities with large amounts of pre-World War II housing and declining populations. Detroit has both.

Houston has neither. The public jobs and public works bills both pump extra money into states and cities with unemployment rates of 6.5 per cent or more. Texas, with unemployment running just under 6 per cent, loses out.

The formulas are written by committees which the Texas congressional delegation has long ignored

The Texas congressmen are following a pattern that exists throughout the South and Southwest and is a holdover from those days when there were no urban interests in the region, explained Rep. Jim Mattox, a freshman Democrat from

When today's veteran and powerful Texas congressmen came to Washington, they gravitated toward the committees that dealt with oil and gas, agriculture, public works and the military. That was where the state's interests could be protected. There were no federal programs for such things as urban renewal or public jobs then, anyway.

"The Texas delegation still is in transition from being ruraloriented,' Mattox said. "It still hasn't adapted to the New South emerging from the Sun Belt's industrial complex.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, says he has had little luck persuading his colleagues to get together with other southern and western delegations and consider a regional approach to urban legislation.

'Some of the members are very conservative. They have not been kindly disposed to things like housing and urban renewal. They haven't taken an interest in it," said Gonzalez, the lone Texan on the housing subcommittee. A few Texans say the formulas don't bother them, even though their own districts get less. Rep. Bob Eckhardt, a Houston Democrat, voted against a floor amendment that would have made the community development appropriations for Houston and Detroit more hearly similar.

"I didn't think of it as a regional issue. I thought the money should go where the need is greatest,"

Eckhardt said. Mattex is less inclined to feel charitable to the cities of the Northeast and Midwest.

"Some of the problems New York City has have been caused by irresponsible acts by some politicians and the unreasonable demands of its people. The rest of the country shouldn't pay for New York's extravagances," he said.

House to decide fate of utility measure

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Apartment tenants would have a new incentive to save electricity under a bill that was up for a final House vote today.

bill each tenant for the electricity he or she actually used. Tenants with individual meters would pay directly to the electric company.

Rep. Buck Florence, D-Hughes Springs, said the measure would encourage energy conservation by halting the construction of "all bills paid" apartments and making tenants pay for their actual energy

Rep. Ron Waters, D-Houston, failed with several attempts to weaken the submetering sections but finally succeeded with an amendment prohibiting landlords from making a profit on electricity.

Also expected to receive final House approval was a "sunset bill" automatically wiping out 179 state agencies over the next 12 years unless continued by specific legislation.

The House was expected to pass and send to the governor a bill prohibiting car insurance penalties for speeding tickets received for driving between 55 and 70 miles per hour on the state's highways.

Such tickets also would not go on one's driving record.

In Wednesday's preliminary debate on the so-called "painless speeding bill," sponsoring Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, said, "Insurance companies will not make as much

Reduction of the top highway speed limit from 70 to 55 miles per hour in 1974 increased the number of traffic tickets issued by the millions. Two speeding tickets in a year results in an automatic 15 per cent increase in one's car insurance premium.

AUSTIN-A San Antonio cook, a first-time entry in the Texas Chicken Cooking contest, was named state winner here and will advance to the national finals to be held in Jackson, Miss., July 27.

Mrs. Kay Grizzard derived her prize-winning recipe "Chicken Yucatan," after asking a Mexican chef his secret to a dish enjoyed during a vacation. "When I came home, I worked out the ingredients and it has been a family favorite ever since," she

The five state finalists competing for the top prize in the event sponsored by the Texas Department of Agriculture and the Texas Broiler Council, included Lynn Castro of Houston, second place; Diane Stallings of Amarillo, third place; Helen Longmire of Austin, fourth place; and Mrs. Olga Jaecks of Fort Worth, fifth place.

"The participation of all of the 1,500 cooks throughout the state who submitted recipes for consideration is certainly evidence of the popularity of Texas Chicken," commented Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, "We would certainly like to see Mrs. Grizzard return from the national contest with the $10,000 first place prize.

The winning cook, wife of a retired Army officer, commented to her husband after the results were announced. "And I forgot to even taste it before it went back to the judges!

Judges for the event were Carolyn Bengton, food editor of the Austin Citizen; Linda Farrell, Agricultural Exension Agent, Austin, and Jane Ulbrich, food editor of the San Antonio Express.

The winning recipe is as follows: CHICKEN YUCATAN 1 cup orange juice 1 cup dry sherry wine 2 Tbsp. minced parsley

1 tsp. flavor enhancer 1 tsp. salt 2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned

1/2 cup golden raisins ¼ cup corn oil ¼ cup slivered almonds 1 large clove garlic, minced 2 Tbsp. cornstarch

In a bowl, mix together orange juice, wine, parsley, flavor enhancer and salt. Add chicken and raisins. Marinate 2 hours. Heat corn oil in fry pan over medium heat. Add almonds and saute over low heat until lightly browned. Remove with slotted spoon. Dry chicken on paper towels. Increase heat to moderate and add chicken. Brown on all sides, adding garlic last few minutes. Add raisins and all but 1/2 cup of the marinade; simmer 10 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Mix corn starch with reserved marinade. Remove chicken to serving dish. Pour the corn starch mixture into the liquid, stirring constantly, cooking until liquid is thickened. Simmer about 2 minutes. Spoon liquid over chicken and raisins; sprinkle almonds on top. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

Thrifty way with rock lobster tails

By CECILY BROWNSTONE AP Food Editor

One of the best ways we know to make several frozen South African rock lobster tails go a long way is to use them in the great Japanese dish called Tempura.

For it, you thaw each tail and with a kitchen scissors cut along each side of the soft underside membrane and remove it. The next step is to pull the meat carefully from the hard shell and cut it crosswise along the natural divisions to make small

Then the seafood is encased in a light batter and deep-fat fried until it is cooked through and the coating is delectably crisp. The thrifty feature of Tempura is that vegetables are always batter-dipped and fried and served with the seafood. This way you can use as many or as few of the rock lobster tails as your budget allows.

There's a big choice when it comes to the vegetables to batter-fry so you can buy what you like and is reasonably priced. Sweet onion rings and thin slices of pared sweet potato are utterly delectable. So are scallions (the root ends cut off) and strips of green pepper. Thin strips of pared carrot and white turnip are good. Small mushrooms and broccoli flowerets may be used. Tipped whole snap beans are traditional and delicious.

A simple batter may be used for Tempura. One we like is made this way. In a mixing bowl beat a large egg with a fork just enough to blend the yolk and white; add 1/2 cup cold water and 1/2 teaspoon salt and stir with a fork to mix. Now dump in 1/2 cup sifted flour and stir lightly with a fork only until there are no extremely large lumps, but plenty of small ones. Do NOT stir smooth.

Dip the pieces of rock lobster tails and the vegetables in the batter and deep-fat fry in peanut oil heated to 360 degrees on a frying thermometer. If using an electric appliance, follow the manufacturers' directions.

Have a dipping sauce on hand. For this you can use soy sauce flavored with grated lemon rind and lemon

If you have a suitable electric appliance, it's a good idea to fry the Tempura at the table so each batch may be served as soon as it is cooked. Tempura tastes best this way.

Waldheim says arms agreement will take time

By BARRY SCHWEID

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) -United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said today that "deep differences" continue between the United States and the Soviet Union on their strategic arms talks and predicted it would take "quite a long time" before the two superpowers could reach a new agreement.

Waldheim's comment came as Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko opened the second session of their SALT negotiations after a "full exchange of views" at Wednesday's initial session.

The U.N. executive, who held meetings with both Vance and Gromyko during the past 24 hours, told a news conference he hoped the talks would produce "some progress." He also presented a gloomy assessment of the prospects for peace in the Middle East, the second subject on the Vance-Gromyko agenda.

Waldheim said the conservative Likud party's victory in Israel's election made the situation in the area "more complicated" and made the resumption of a Geneva peace con-ference "questionable." He warned there was a danger of a new Middle East war unless there was 'something constructive" this year toward a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict and said a permanent peace in the area was still years

Vance and Gromyko opened their second meeting with good-humored exchanges with newsmen crowding around them in a conference room at the Soviet Mission, a block away from hotel where Waldheim was meeting with reporters.

On Wednesday, President Carter told congressional leaders in Washington he still hopes for "substantial reductions" in the Soviet and American nuclear arsenals. But he said the two governments have not changed their conflicting positions on the fundamentals of a new treaty -SALT II - to limit or reduce the nuclear weapons.

"There is no new American proposal," White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters. "We have presented what we believe to be fair and equitable proposals. We are willing and eager to ... sit down Soviet Communist party leader Leonid Brezhnev rejected the American proposals when Vance made them during is visit to Moscow in March. The Russians offered no new proposals of their own at the time, and there was no indication that Gromyko advanced any at his first meeting with Vance Wednesday.

Vance and Gromyko met for two hours and 20 minutes Wednesday, and U.S. spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters afterward: "Both sides feel they are engaged in a full effort of negotiation. I assume that means good faith on both sides.'

There is no projection at this point how long the negotiations will go on, the spokesman said. This was taken to indicate that they might last more than the expected two or three days. Vance cautioned reporters earlier not to expect a speedy breakthrough.

Senate gives House energy agency plan

By MIKE SHANAHAN

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter's plan to create a super energy agency in one of the most sweeping federal reorgnizations in history is being sent to the House after winning Senate approval.

After only 61/2 hours of debate, the Senate voted 74 to 10 Wednesday to approve Carter's Department of Energy. In the House, two committees have approved the new department and the full chamber is expected to concur. The House is not likely to vote on the bill, however, until after its members return from the Memorial Day the first new Cabinet agency since the proposal, sent to the Congress March 1, would be approved before he delivered his April 20 energy message. The rest of the President's energy program is pending before various congressional committees.

The Senate made one major change in the proposal by Carter and his principal energy adviser, James R. Schlesinger, who is in line to head the new department.

Reluctant to give the new secretary excessive powers, the Senate included a four-person board with authority to set prices on oil and natural gas.

Carter had wanted the new secretary to have full authority to control prices and allocations in the natural gas and oil industries.

As approved by the Senate, the department will assume all the functions of the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Energy Adminstration and the Energy Reserach and Development Administration.

The bill would also:

-Give the new agency broad authority to obtain information on the nation's energy reserves. Critics of federal energy policy complain that the energy companies are the only sources of information on reserves.

-Establish strict conflict-ofinterest rules for department employes, including prohibitions against owning stock in energy companies and a ban on contacts by high-level department employes with energy companies for a year after leaving the government.

—Give the energy secretary a voice in the leasing of oil, gas and coal rights on federal lands and off the outer continental shelf.

-Transfer some parts of more than 20 different agencies, including the Defense Department, to the agency.

Begin begins coalition hunt

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) Menahem Begin, propelled to the threshold of power by his conservative Likud party's election victory, began a search today for coalition partners to give him a majority in the Knesset, Israel's parliament.

High on his agenda was a conference with Shimon Peres, whose defeated Labor party ruled Israel since its birth in 1948. Begin has asked Labor to join a national unity government, but several Labor party sources said there was little chance such a coalition could be formed.

Begin campaigned on a platform demanding annexation of the West Bank of the Jordan river, which Israel captured from Jordan in the 1967 war. The Laborites talked about exchanging part of the territory for peace with the Arabs but planned to ring the area with Israeli civilian settlements or military posts.

The 63-year-old Likud leader adopted two key policies of previous Labor governments Wednesday. Speaking at a news conference, he called for direct negotiations, with "no prior conditions," between Israel and the Arab governments it has fought in four wars, and rejected 'any externally-devised formula for a settlement" from the United States or the European Common Market.

But Begin said he believes "President Carter will keep his commitment" to the pledge in the Democratic presidential campaign platform to work for direct Arab-Israeli negotiations "without any externally-devised formula for a settlement.

The new U.S. ambassador to Israel, Samuel W. Lewis, arrived in Tel Aviv Wednesday and pledged the United States would "never seek to impose" its will on Arab-Israeli negotiations. The statement appeared aimed at calming Israeli fears that Carter was preparing a peace plan and might try to force its acceptance by threatening to reduce military and economic aid to the Jewish state.

The Likud victory in the election Tuesday took the U.S. government by surprise, as it did governments everywhere. But White House Press Secretary Jody Powell told reporters President Carter wants to meet with Southwest has two fares for each route, one for weekdays from 6:30 to 7 p.m. and one for nights and weekends. One-way fares to the cities to be served are as follows: Dallas, $25 weekdays and $15 other times; Houston, San Antonio and Corpus Christi, $40 weekdays and $25 other times, and Harlingen, $50 weekdays and $30 other times.

Kitty Campbell of the Southwest reservation office said most flights to other cities go through Dallas, although fares are based on direct flights. Southwest will use Love Field in Dallas and Hobby Airport in Houston.

Hatch Act repeal bill withdrawn

By MARY RUSSELL The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Supporters of a bill that would remove the restrictions on political participation by some 2.8 million federal workers withdrew the measure from the House floor Wednesday night after opponents managed to attach an antiunion amendment.

According to labor lobbyists and Rep. William Ford (D-Mich.), the amendment, offered late Wednesday night by Rep. John Ashbrook (R-Ohio), would prevent federal employe unions, such as the Postal Workers or the American Federation of Government Employees, from using dues or fees for any political purpose what-

Faced with that prospect, managers of the bill, which was intended to largely repeal the Hatch Act of 1939, withdrew it from consideration. Under the Hatch Act, employes can vote, voluntarily contribute to a campaign, express their opinions, wear buttons and run for nonpartisan offices, but they cannot work in a campaign, solicit contributions or run

Under the bill withdrawn Wednesday night, employes would be allowed to run for office, and could take a leave of absence to do so, could solicit contributions and participate in campaigns, although not on the job or in uniform. Supervisors still could not solicit subordinates, agency employes could not solicit individuals governed by the agency and some employes, like law enforcement officials, would remain "Hatched."

The Ashbrook amendment carried by a 229-to-168 vote, with 94 Democrats joining 135 Republicans in voting for it. Ten members voted present, indicating either confusion about what the amendment did or a form of protest vote.

Ford said the effect of the amendment would be to prevent the unions from "even printing a notice of an election" or conducting voter registration drives or endorsing a candidate in their own newsletter.

Ford denied the vote was ominous for labor and predicted the vote would be turned around and the bill passed when the House took it up again, possibly some time next week. "It was late. House members were angry at the lateness of the hour, the failure to put on a time limit upset them and younger members didn't understand what was happening," Ford said.

Labor was pushing very hard for the bill, which had the strong endorsement of the Carter administration.

Hearing held on saccharin issue

The Washington Post

WASHN - The public, the experts, and the special interests had their say Wednesday in a five-hour hearing on the Food and Drug Administration's proposal to ban saccharin from diet beverages and foods.

One parent, K. David Stone, of Kansas City, Mo., representing the Heart of American Affiliate of the American Diabetes Association, said his 15-year-old daughter Jennifer needs saccharin-sweetened sodas not only to control her weight, but also to lead a normal life.

Similarly, two women testified that only with saccharin were they able to hold down their weight and maintain their health.

But Dr. Sidney M. Wolfe, director of Ralph Nader's Health Research Group, said there is "no scientific evidence" showing saccharin to be important for weight control.

He cited a three-year study showing "no significant difference in weight loss between users and non-users" of artificial sweeteners, of which saccharin is the only one now commercially available. And, he said, saccharin stimulates appetite in certain obese laboratory animals.

Slight chance for rain

A slight chance of showers and thundershowers remains in the Midland area through Friday, with an additional possibility that the showers might be severe today and tonight. Skies will remain partly cloudy through Friday, said a National Weather Service spokesman at the Midland Regional Air Terminal

The low tonight should be near 60. The high Friday should be in the mid-80s. Southerly winds should decrease to 10 to 15 mph tonight. A 20 per cent probability of precipitation exists today and tonight.

Cloudy conditions typified most of the Midland area cities this morning. Andrews was overcast, calm and about 67 degrees at 8 a.m. Crane was clear and warm. Stanton was warm, sunny and calm.

Lamesa was starting to become cloudy and breezy about 8 a.m. Big Lake was heavily clouded and fairly cool with a slight breeze.

Odessa was cloudy and breezy. A tornado warning was in effect Wednesday night in a ten-county region which included Crane, Ector, Glasscock, Reagan, Upton, Andrews, Martin, Howard, Borden and Gaines

Rep. Abner J. Mikva (D-III.), usually one of the FDA's staunchest allies, joined other critics of the ban who expressed incredulity that the government proposes to end the use of saccharin while not proposing to prohibit cigarettes. Congress commanded the agency to assure the safety of food while denying it power of television cameras. One sign said,

'Take Away Saccharin - Take Away

to do anything about smoking. The hearing, which resumes Thursday, produced no "blinding flashes" of new information, FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy told reporters. But it sharpened conflicts over some fundamental issues. Perhaps the most volatile one is the Delaney Amendment, a 1958 law that requires the FDA to keep out of foods any additive shown by sound tests in laboratory animals to cause cancer.

For years, food processors and some scientists and legislators have urged repeal or dilution of the amendment, contending that the FDA should be allowed to assess the benefits and risks of each suspect

Mikva termed the amendment "nonsensical" - "a Pavlovian response to a Pavlovian test." But FDA officials told reporters privately that by making decisions on cancercausing additives subject to administrative discretion, changes in the amendment could expose them to heavy political pressures.
Mikva is one of 194 House sponsors of a bill to modify the amendment to empower the FDA to weigh benefits against risks in dealing with food additives that cause cancer in laboratory animals.

Backed by Rep. James G. Martin (R-N.C.), the principal sponsor, Mikva appealed to Commissioner Kennedy to postpone the probable effective date of the ban - late summer — so that Congress can legislate "without a gun at its head." Kennedy

Howard College payment omitted

AUSTIN - An expected special payment to Howard College to compensate for an anticipated loss of enrollment next year was left out of the Approprations Conference Committee's spending bill for 1978

The bill was reported out of committee Tuesday without the $100,000 payment which had been included in the Senate Finance Bill. The payment would have been made only if a proposed bill to base funding for colleges on projected enrollment, rather than past-year enrollment.

Howard College is expected to lose enrollment next year with the closure of Webb Air Force Base because some persons stationed at Webb are students.

Sen. Ray Farabee of Wichita Falls said the loss of the special appropriation was due to its being tied to an appropriation for Navarro County Junior College at Corsicana. The Navarro County appropriation would have been used to pay off a bank loan for expenses to cover unexpectedly large increases in enrollment last year and this year.

indicated to reporters that a delay is

Martin testified that the amendment gave the FDA "no choice" but to ban saccharin once its scientists were satisfied that Canadian government tests established that it caused bladder cancer in rats. "You must ban it at the drop of a rat," Martin told the commissioner.

But Kennedy emphasized that if the Delaney amendment never had been enacted, he, at least, would have proposed the ban because the basic food-additives law requires positive findings of safety.

No one has provided such findings for saccharin. Instead, some critics of the agency want it to carry a burden Congress never imposed: proving that a food additive, sometimes in combination with other carcinogens, may cause cancer in humans. Such proof is difficult partly because the atent period before detection of cancer may be as long as 40 years.

Saccharin has been in an officially suspect category since 1972, on the basis of animal tests incriminating it in bladder cancer. Terming the tests inconclusive, the FDA did not propose the ban until last March, when the Canadian government completed its studies in 200 rats. Half had been exposed to saccharin from the time of conception. Twenty-one of the animals developed bladder cancer, compared with one of the 100 untreated control rats.

Mrs. Vera Britt, right, receives her award as Woman of the Year for 1977-78 from Faye King, last year's winner. The winner was named by the American Business the Tall City Charter Chapter of Association.

Tall City ABWA picks Woman of the Year

Vera Britt was named Woman of the Year by the Tall City Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association

Mrs. Britt is bookkeeper for Barnes Pelletier Shoes. She has been a member of the chapter since 1972. As the chapter's Woman of the Year, she may enter competition for the 1977-78 top ten business women of ABWA and the American Business Woman of the Year awards. The national winners will be announced at ABWA's national convention Oct. 20-23 in Salt Lake

The local honor, given each year, is based on the member's achievement in her field of business, education, participation in the association and in community activities.

Giving the program for the chapter's meeting was Mrs. Nancy McKinley, president of the Midland

Historical Society, who discussed Midland's older senior citizens and presented a history of Midland pioneers and landmarks in the county

Freda Evans, employe of Webb-Davis Co., gave the vocational talk. She prepares invoices, keeps accounts and does other secretarial

The organization awarded Jodi Fisher, a Midland College student, one of the group's scholarships. Miss Fisher is the daughter of Mrs. Marian Fisher. The group also voted to continue scholarships for Gayette Lott, Southwest Texas State University sophomore, and Mindy Bean, University of Texas junior.

Salad supper meetings will continue in June with the first one scheduled in the home of Laverne Pilcher.

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I was saddened by the recent letter concerning the birth of an abnormal child. The parents were depressed, and friends wondered if they should acknowledge the birth or "ignore the tragedy."

I am the biological mother of six children, and I, too, dreamed of the "perfect" infant during my pregnancies. I can understand the trauma associated with the birth of an "imperfect" child. But if only these parents can see their way through this initial period of shock, guilt and dismay, these emotions will subside, and they might learn to recognize the magnificent human spirit that lives within each and every one of these children. Each child has something unique to give. To see the child who is "slow" achieving his level of accomplishment, no matter how small,

is so gratifying!

As parents of 19 children-13 of whom are adopted and eight of whom are severely handicapped-we, too, have learned a beautiful lesson. The child who is handicapped, be it physically or mentally, is possessed of a certain spark, perhaps a compensating factor put there by God.

Whatever it may be, if we, the socalled "normal" people will nourish that spark, we will discover that not only the lives of these children but also ours will be immeasurably enriched.-GRATEFUL

DEAR GRATEFUL: Thank you for a beautiful letter, which gives me the opportunity to publicize AASK (Aid to Adoption of Special Kids), a non-profit, publicly supported, taxexempt organization. AASK serves as an adoption agency, exclusively for handicapped children with special needs. For information write to Box No. 11212, Oakland, Calif. 94611.

DEAR ABBY: Our 18-year-old daughter has graduated from high school and has a steady job, so now she says she can do as she pleases. She is living at home, but pays no room or board

Her "old-fashioned" parents want to know if we have the right to set some rules for her. We have asked her to be home by 1 a.m. when she goes out on a date. (She's been coming home anywhere from 2 a.m. until 4:30.) When we object to her going to her boyfriend's bachelor apartment to watch TV for an evening, she says we have "dirty minds."

She tells us if we don't "get off her back" she will move out and rent with girlfriends. We want her to live at home. She wants to be independent. Please give us some guidelines.— BEWILDERED

DEAR BEWILDERED: Tell your daughter to sit down with a pencil and paper, and figure out exactly how independent' she is. Tell her that when she is able to support herself entirely-which means paying for room, board, clothes, transportation, entertainment, travel, doctor, dentist, and insurance-then she may live where she chooses and by her own rules. But as long as she lives with you, she will have to live by yours.

The airlines' flight attendant team will be dressed in ensembles created by Bill Klages of Fashionaire. a division of Hart Schaffner and Marx. The designer worked with members of the flight attendant corp in creating a uniform that is functional and yet stylish.

The uniform will feature a style similar to that of the business executive—the two-button, single breasted blazer with side pocket flaps and a fitted vest. But, there is one exception and that is the hot pants. All three are fashioned from polyester knit in Southwest orange

The blouse will reflect the colors of the Southwest Boeing 737 with diagonal stripes of desert gold, warm red and Texas earth-tone brown combined with sky blue. A scarf will carry the Southwest logo and the uniform will be topped by a wide-brimmed felt rust

Leather boots and shoulder purse of brown complete the outfit.

For summer, the outfit will be a mini-skirt and biblike top of denim satin polyester. The bib will have a single front center top pocket and rear patch pocket with scarf material sewn into the pocket creating a handkerchief effect. Hazardous practice

The practice of some motorists in making a complete U-turn in the middle of a block in Midland's downtown business district hopefully isn't habit-forming. Several such instances have been observed in recent weeks.

The practice does present hazards and could become even more hazardous should it become common.

The city's traffic ordinance on the subject reads:

"The driver of any vehicle shall not turn such vehicle so as to proceed in the opposite direction upon any street in a business district, and shall not upon any other street so turn a vehicle unless such movement can be made in safety and without interfering with other traffic."

So, we would suggest avoiding the temptation to swing completely around in the business district. In the outlying areas, the matter pretty well is left up to the driver to determine the safety factor, but unfortunately he or she cannot see in all directions at once, and this is where the danger factor enters the scene.

Drivers of motor vehicles, who operate largely on the honor system, really should think twice before whirling their vehicles around in the middle of a block in the business district - for safety reasons, if nothing else.

They perhaps wouldn't think of doing this in Dallas or Fort Worth, for instance. But they likely would counter with the comment, "Yes, but Midland isn't Dallas or Fort Worth." True, but the safety factor is just as meaningful in Midland as anywhere else. The same code of driver ethics applies in Midland, Austin, Houston or elsewhere.

Another practice which is becoming all too common is the failure of some motorists to come to a complete stop - and then looking both ways - before making a right turn on red light. This really is hazardous. Vehicles proceeding on the green light have the right-of-way, and they usually are traveling at the maximum speed permitted. Think about it.

Traffic is becoming heavier by the day in the Tall City, making it all the more urgent for motorists to drive with extreme care and caution anywhere and everywhere in the city. And this includes youthful bicycle operators who sometimes ride with reckless care and abandon, often-times without the use of hands on the handle bars. They create hazards for themselves and others.

Defensive driving is the watchword. Let's make it an everyday practice.

New ethics law

President Carter has proposed a far-reaching new ethics law to protect the government against the selfish interests of its own public officials.

Such legislation definitely is needed.

Mr. Carter already has laid down a code of ethics for almost 2,000 of his political appointees, including the White House staff.

What he now is proposing is an Ethics in Government Act which would give the force of law to the Carter code, expand its coverage, make it permanent and provide machinery to enforce it.

The legislation would create a new Office of Ethics in the Civil Service to regulate tighter controls over conflicts of interest. It would also expand existing restrictions on government employes after they leave office, to prevent them from improperly converting their government experience to their personal gain. All policy-making officials would be required to make financial disclosures to the public. The legislation would cover was that a few years ago people started giving us houseplants instead of cut flowers. The children gave their mother a palm tree for Mother's Day; they gave me a philodendron for Father's Day and three dieffenbachias for Christmas.

My wife put them in the living room. Then relatives brought a snake plant a few months later, and a friend presented us with a fatsia plant which my wife put in the library to help "cheer" it up.

She dutifully watered them and talked to them and they started to grow...and grow...and grow. Then she decided the living room looked bare and bought some grape ivy which she wrapped around the fake balcony and some aspidistras which she placed in the corner near the television set.

Someone sent us a schefflera for an anniversary, and friends who have a farm in the Shenandoah trucked in two spider plants which were put in the dining room. A future son-in-law presented us with three rubber plants, and on my birthday I was given a potted elephant's-ears all of my own. My daughter, who was going away to college, asked us if we would keep her weeping fig plants while she was away, and someone, I can't remember who, sent us a box of screw

One Saturday I bought a machete and tried to chop a trail through the living room to my library. But after four hours I realized it was hopeless. The more I hacked away the faster the houseplants grew. We closed off the living room..

We were sitting in the dining room one evening when I noticed I couldn't see anyone at the table. It was an eerie feeling as I shouted through the palm leaves: "is anybody there?" I thought I heard a voice coming from the end of the table saying, "You Tarzan, me Jane," but it could have been the wind. I looked up and saw one of my children sitting in a branch of the palm tree. "What are you doing up there? Sit down and eat your dinner. "Where can I sit?" she wanted to

"In your chair," I said "I can't find my chair," she said. 'Do you think they'll ever send a rescue ship to find us?"

"They're only plants," she said "What about scorpions and snakes? You can't have that much foliage without scorpions.

We put some defoliant down between the dining room and kitchen and started to eat all our meals in the kitchen. Occasionally, a kangaroo vine or the grape ivy tried to sneak in, but I kept an ax by my side and every once in a while I chopped off a length of it before it crawled to our food.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hopefully, this may save a life

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - The grim Korean phrase "up se burida," an assassination order, has been transmitted from Seoul to the Korean Central Intelligence Agency in this

Its operatives have been instructed to eliminate one of the South Korean regime's most outspoken critics, radio commentator Dr. Youngche Kang. By exposing the plot in advance, hopefully we may save his life. We cannot reveal how the death message was intercepted, without endangering sources. But U.S. authorities are aware that the terse words "up se burida" have been received by the KCIA in America. The phrase, according to Korean linguists, means "to be eliminated by force" or "to dispose of by force" or "to be made to disappear." parently, this is what the KCIA has in mind for the forthright Dr. Kang. The broadcaster got wind of his danger a few days ago and complained at once to the Washington field office of the FBI. For several months, the FBI has been investigating KCIA intimidation of

Korean exiles in the United States. This isn't the first time that Kang has been menaced by-the KCIA. On Aug. 17, 1973, The New York Times reported that he had received a less explicit threat. He was then editing a monthly political sheet, "Free which was highly critical of South Korean President Park

At the urging of Kim's friends, we made a personal appeal to President Park to free the opposition leader. Interestingly, Park agreed that the abduction was probably the work of the KCIA. But he added earnestly: "I swear to God that I had nothing to do with this ugly affair." He refused, nevertheless, to release Kim.

Later, on July 17, 1975, we broke the story that the KCIA was buying off U.S. congressmen and terrorizing Korean exiles in this country. A Korean embassy spokesman called

NICK THIMMESCH

Here's really 'good news' story from Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA - There is so much fretting and fussing over unemployment, that curse of enterprise economies, that when one encounters an organization that successfully trains and places people in jobs, well, it's a breath of fresh air. Since 1964, when he reached into the seamier sections of this city to help the unemployed and unemployable find work, Dr. Leon Sullivan and his Opportunities Industrialization Centers have trained 476,000 people across the republic and placed 75 per cent of them in jobs.

Dr. Sullivan, a Baptist minister who went through the whole civil rights campaign, decided that "integration without preparation is frustration." So he established the first O.I.C unit in an abandoned jailhouse to recruit people who just couldn't get jobs. The prevailing philosophy was and is that there's no point in blaming whitey or society or the man, it's up to you to help yourself, find your self-dignity, catch up on your education and move into a job with your head held high.

Employers were slow to take to Dr. Sullivan's project, but once they learned he turned out well-trained, positive-minded graduates, they supported him in impressive numbers. Today, the chief executive officer of 32 major companies, including General Motors, IBM and Scott Paper Co., serve on his industrial advisory council and help raise funds for the 150 OICs across the country and in some foreign countries. "We can train a person for one-third of what it cost the federal government," Dr. Sullivan says. "We produce taxpayers and consumers. I believe in milk and honey in heaven and ham and eggs on earth. We could cut down unemployment dramatically if we had the chance.

"In 10 years, if things keep going the way they are now, there will be 50 million Americans on welfare or unemployment. When 40 percent of the nation's resources go to subsidizing the poor, that's the end of free enterprise, and we're not far from that situation."

In 1976 OICs trained 61,255 persons, at an average cost of $1,500. Sullivan would like to up that number to 100,000, and build until 1 million are trained in the next four years. He has ambivalent feelings about federal

"Any little change at the national level can cause risk to your federal funds," he says. "But in recent years we have been getting some federal

Sullivan had been bothered with a federal requirement that some funding must come through a local "prime sponsor," a mayor's office for example. So he got Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.) to sponsor a bill providing direct funding to OfC-type projects. The bill cleared the Human Resources Committee last week.

In our society, discrimination, the quick or cyclical change of an industry's fortunes and the lack of skills or proper attitude - all cause unemployment. Discrimination is a reality which OIC staffers can hammer away on. They can't do much about the situation of a suddenly depressed industry, other than retraining people. But in the area of finding people with no skills and a downbeat attitude, and changing both, ah that's where OIC excels.

"If a person needs math or reading we give it to him," explains A. Melvin East, deputy executive director of the Philadelphia OIC. "If an 18-year-old comes in here and complains that he didn't finish high school, we know he has taken the first step because at least he mentioned it.

"We work on the inner person, and try to improve his attitude. We try to maximize his self-confidence. We don't deal with anger as much as we do frustration. Anguish and anger must be set aside for a person to go into our program or into a job. We don't have disciplinary problems because we just say, 'If you want to learn here, you must stick to business.""

Sometimes people come to OIC so discouraged that they finally ask why it wouldn't be better just to stay on welfare. East says such people are told they can make out better on welfare now, but in the long run they'll make more money and have a better life with a job. "You subject yourself to political whims by staying on welfare," he explains, "You can get stuck in it and never get out."

He and others in the 4,000-person staff seem well motivated because they see the scope of their challenge. "If we don't get this hard-rock unemployment now, especially among youth," East says, "we'll have more problems with alcohol, drugs and crime tomorrow."

Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.), subcommittee chairman, said Congress has a constitutional right to inspect the records of the private company, to determine if the wiretaps had a legitimate national security justification or were illegal harrassment.

Opponents generally sided with the Administration. Rep. Samuel Devine (R-Ohio) criticized Moss for having "gratuitously intervened in the AT&T case" and having "requested special counsel when in fact there are 12 very competent counsel on his payroll on the oversight subcommittee.

The disputed formula provides special funding for cities of declining population and deteriorating housing. At the same time, the bill continues the formula of previous years so that no newer city would get less money than it now receives.

Rep. Mark Hannaford (D-Calif.) sponsor of the amendment, said: "If (a congressman) represents a district largely comprised of suburbs in the West, he is going to have a hard time explaining this legislation to his constituents.

Rep. Edward W. Pattison (D-N.Y.) an opponent of the amendment, said the areas of greatest need "are in the older deteriorating cities...where economies are lagging...where we have conditions marked by crime, poverty and inadequate service

THE CITIES Adopted, 279 for and 129 against, an amendment setting aside 25 per cent of "action grant money for cities of 50,000 or fewer residents. It was attached to HR 6655 (see above vote), later passed and sent to conference with the Senate. The set-aside applies to the actiongrant program contained within the overall "community development" program. It enables the smaller cities to compete among themselves for an estimated $100 million annually in action grants, which are categorical grants designed to upgrade social and physical conditions of cities.

Rep. Charles Grassley (R-Iowa), the sponsor, said his amendment would eliminate the unfair advantage that large cities like Detroit and Newark, with their "grantsmanship" specialists, have in competing for federal funds.

Rep. Thomas Ashley (D-Ohio), an opponent, said that "the smaller communities as well as the larger communities should compete for funds based on need and not on some kind of mathematical formula.

ALASKAN OIL Tabled, 66 for and 27 against, an amendment to prohibit the export of Alaskan oil to Japan or other Pacific countries. It was proposed to S 69, the Export Administration Act, later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. John Durkin (D-N.H.), sponsor of the amendment, said that without his amendment "the good old oil companies once again are motivated by greed...and are going to allow the eastern seaboard to buy more highpriced, uncontrolled-priced OPEC oil, and the Alaska oil, our oil, is going to be sold to Japan...

Sen. Adlai Stevenson (D-Ill.), a supporter of tabling, said the amendment would not lower domestic oil prices. 'The fact is that to bring the oil from Alaska to the eastern and central parts of the U.S. is very expensive, so expensive that we might end up with a curtailment of production....It is cheaper to bring oil to New Hampshire from OPEC countries than from

The 66 senators voting to table opposed export prohibition and the 27 senators voting "nay" favored Durkin's proposed ban.

SCIENCE RESEARCH Rejected, 31 for and 62 against, an amendment requiring that each state receive a minimum amount (at least one-fourth money) of National Science Foundation research funds granted to scientists and universities. In fiscal 1978, the amendment would have guaranteed at least $2.1 million in grants for a state's recipients. The overall bill (HR 4991) was later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), the sponsor, said the amendment would correct the tradition of most NSF research money ending up in a few states. "There have been charges that awards are made by NSF on the basis of an alleged 'old boy system'...incestuous in nature and discriminatory in terms of NSF's grants policy," he said.
Sen. Edward Brooke (R. Mass.), an opponent, said a policy of minimal allotments to each state "would be directly counter to the principles by which the National Science Foundation operates, namely, that it funds only the highest quality scientific research."

Bentsen and Tower voted "nay"

ABSENTEEISM Agreed, 75 for and seven against, to direct the Sergeant at Arms "to request the attendence of absent senators." The vote was called by Sen. 1. SOURDOUGH STARTER

1 package active dry yeast 21/2 cups warm water (105° to 115°)

1 cup instant nonfat dry milk 2 tablespoons sugar

4 cups all-purpose flour

a) Stir yeast, water, dry milk and sugar in 21/2 quart crock or nonmetallic bowl until yeast is dissolved. Stir in flour gradually until a smooth batter forms. Let stand loosely covered in warm place. 3 to 5 days Stir down batter occasionally Store loosely covered in refrigerator

B) Replace exact amount of starter used for each recipe by stirring equal amounts of homogenized milk and flour back into starter. (For example, replace 1 cup starter with ½ cup homogenized milk and 2 cup flour) Let stand loosely covered until it bubbles, overnight Stir down Each time this process is repeated, the starter becomes more active and develops a more sour flavor. Note: if stored as much as two to three weeks between usings, just pour off the watery layer on top and replace following procedure in (b)

2. SOURDOUGH PANCAKES

1 cup instant nonfat dry milk

1 cup Sourdough Starter

(see Recipe No. 1)

1¼ cups all-purpose flour

1 tablespoon sugar 1/2 teaspoon baking soda 1/2 teaspoon salt

1 egg, slightly beaton 2 tablespoons whole milk

a) Mix dry milk, water, Sourdough Starter and flour in non-metallic bowl, cover loosely. Let stand in warm place until mixture is coarse and bubbly, at least 8 hours.

b) Mix remaining ingredients into sourdough mixture until smooth. Pour 1/2 cup batter at a time onto hot, lightly greased griddle. Turn pancakes as soon as bubbles form: cook other side until golden brown about 3 minutes. Serve with butter and syrup if desired. (Makes 8-10)

3. SOURDOUGH FRENCH BREAD

1 cup warm water (105° to 115°) 1 cup Sourdough Starter (see Recipe No. 1) 2 cups all-purpose flour

2 teaspoons sugar 11/2 teaspoons salt 1/2 teaspoon baking soda

1 to 11/2 cups all-purpose flour

a) Mix 1 cup water, the Sourdough Starter and 2 cups flour in nonmetallic bowl, cover loosely. Let stand in warm place until mixture bubbles and has a definite sour aroma, about 24 hours

b) Mix sugar, salt and baking soda into sourdough mixture. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Knead dough on well-floured board until smooth and elastic, 8 to 10 minutes. c) Roll dough into rectangle, 12 x 8 inches. Roll up, beginning at narrow end Pinch seam. Place loaf, seam side down, on greased baking sheet. Fold ends under, cover. Let rise in warm place until double, about 11/2 hours

d) Heat oven to 400°. Make 4 diagonal slashes, ¼ inch deep, across top of loaf with sharp knife. Brush gently with water.

e) Place shallow pan on bottom rack of oven, fill with boiling water Bake bread in center of oven until golden brown and loaf sounds hollow when tapped: 25 to 30 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

margarine, melter

3 tablespoons vegetable oil a) Mix dry milk, water, Sourdough Starter and 2 cups flour in nonmetallic bowl, cover loosely. Let stand in warm place until mixture is coarse and bubbly, at least 8 hours. b) Mix oil, salt, sugar and baking soda into sourdough mixture. Stir in enough of the remaining flour to make dough easy to handle. Knead dough lightly on well-floured board, about 2 minutes.

c) Roll dough into rectangle. 15 x 10 inches, on well-floured board Cut into fifteen 1-inch strips. Roll each strip into even round strand. about 14 inches long. Double strand over and twist to form bread stick. Place bread sticks on greased baking sheet, brush with melted butter. Cover with plastic wrap. Let rise in warm place until double.

d) Heat oven to 375°. Bake bread sticks until golden brown, 30 to 35 minutes (Makes 15)

Trees in urban areas now on verge

By EARL ARONSON AP Newsfeatures

There is a botanical time bomb in the nation's cities that could be even more deadly to urban trees than pollution. It is a lack of a diverse number of tree species.

That is the view of two experts engaged in a scientific battle to save millions of trees lining city streets

Picture how empty and cold a city would become if the trees lining its streets were to disappear, say Dr. Howard Irwin, president of the New York Botanical Garden, and Dr. Thomas S. Elias, assistant director of the associated Cary Arboretum.

Writing in "Scientific American" magazine, they say city trees are dying because of the adverse city environment and insufficient diversity of tree species.

Growing under multistoried buildings, they relate, is like being situated at the base of a rocky canyon. hardly an ideal tree-growing location since little sunlight trickles beyond the slabs of concrete and brick, and trees must adjust to fluctuating levels of ventilation. The ranyon-like skyscrapers on one day cause stagnant air and on another concentrate and redirect air, creating gales of wind, the scientists contend.

The city tree, they add, must suffer smog, too much or too little water, dogs, and de-icing salt. And the small amount of urban soil available to street trees is often inadequate, lacking humus, and often so compact even air finds trouble reaching the roots, let alone water. The tree also has to contend with rubble in the soil, toxic metal pipes or steam conduits that overheat roots.

The scientists note that Dutch elm disease virtually wiped out the stately, popular American elms of the eastern United States and warn that a similar disaster could hit other species.

Large populations of one species are particularly susceptible to rapid spread of disease or insect attack. Dr. Elias noted that in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., for instance, a 1974 survey showed 57 per cent of the 8,027 street trees were Norway maples, 11.6 per cent were nowering crab apples and 11.2 per cent were sugar maples. The three species made up about 80 per cent of street trees there. So a disease attacking maples could wipe out 68.2 per cent of the trees. The Urban Trees Act introduced in Congress would authorize an appropriation of $10 million and direct the Secretary of Agriculture to match dollar-for-dollar private contributions made to cities to plant trees.

NEW YORK (AP) — The county courthouse, the symbol and often the center of small town America, is the subject of a current exhibition of photographs at New York's Museum of Modern Art.

The courthouse was to the American small town what the church was to the European village, says project editor Richard Pare. "It was a cap to the city. It sort of held the town down."

For the past two and a half years Pare, a young British photographer who said he'd never been in an American courthouse before, has been editor of Joseph E. Seagram & Son's Bicentennial project to document county courthouses across the nation.

Since then he and 23 other photographers have taken over 8,000 photographs, of over 1,000 cour-

"The project is very definitely a celebration of the quality of architecture in small towns in America," he said.

The project was conceived and directed by Phyllis Lambert, daughter of Seagram's board chairman. It documents about a third of the 3,101 courthouses in the 48 contiguous states. Hawaii doesn't have a county system, and Alaska's is too new, said Pare.

"The idea of the thing is to represent the entire spectrum of the subject and all its different aspects," he said. Although most of the courthouses photographed are 19th century, they vary in age from some built in 1725 to some currently under construction.

Pare admits he was a bit skeptical about the project at the beginning. "I thought it was all going to be green paint and parking tickets," he said. But he found that county courthouses came in just about every architectural style from colonial to modern, including Romanesque Revival, the elaborate Beaux Arts and even the neo-Gothic generally thought more appropriate for chur-

The courthouses range from simple log cabins to million-dollar edifices, from projects of unknown builders to designs of top American architects such as H.H. Richardson and Frank Lloyd Wright.

Most of the better courthouses that have survived are in small towns, where there was no need to tear them down every 25 years, as the communities and their needs grew, Pare noted

Midland Youth Center chatter

By NANCY HUDSON LORI JONS & LIZ RUWWE

With only eight days of school left several activities have come to close. Last Thursday night was the Spring Sports Banquet held in the MHS cafeteria. The sports that were recognized were track, basketball, baseball, tennis, swimming, and gymnastics.

Every year an award goes to the best girl and boy athlete. The athletes are voted on by their peers having to come by Doc's office before school and vote for their choice. The awards went to Amy Grimes and Phillip Ward. Amy lettered in volleyball three years; Phillip in football. Congratulations on such a great

Friday night is the traditional Bill Mimms game. The game starts at 7:30 and tickets are $1 donation. The Pack will be against the Pack so the Bulldogs can't lose! Hope to see you all there!

Seniors have a busy schedule ahead. Friday, May 27, we get out of third period for rehearsal for Baccalaureate which will be Sunday at 6:30 p.m. in the auditorium. Then Monday, June 2, at 9:30 a.m. there will be a rehearsal for graduation exercises. Graduation is June 3, at 9 p.m.—Lee goes first this year.

I ollowing Graduation will be the All-Night Party!
It will be from 11 p.m. to 4 a.m. at the National Guard Armory, and JJ and his Music Machine will be there with tunes the whole night/long. There will be a floor show by Fever at 1 a.m. Tickets go on sale next week so be sure to get your ticket because NO tickets will be sold at the door. McDonalds is catering the FREE food and drinks starting at 3 a.m. Remember the All-Night Party is for seniors or for seniors and their dates. Better start resting up for the big night ahead!

The Library is closing soon so let's put to use the "Evelyn Wood Speed Reading Course" and get the books turned in. You cannot take your finals until all fines are paid!

This week several students were racking their brains trying to figure out "cute" things to leave their classmates. If trying to sneak a view of someone's will, to see what they left you, they turn around and tell you that it's a personal joke and you won't get it, that's probably true! Now what you all have been waiting for... The test schedules for Monday, May 30, are 2nd, 5th and 6th periods. On Tuesday, the 31, periods 1, 3 and 4.

The President's cabinet for next year will be announced next week. The officers are carefully going over all the applications and we will know next week who will be attending the Student Council meetings next year on Tuesday mornings at 7:30!

This is our last Chatter that we will ever write and we would like to thank The Midland Reporter-Telegram and Marvin Roscoe. It's been a great year could not have done it withou sure to read next week's Chatter when the new Chatter writers will make their debut. They will be Dinah Boyd, Kim Wood and Sherry Bailey. We wish you all the luck in the world and all the fun times you will have writing the Chatter.

NANCY, LORI AND LIZ P.S. There will be a reception after Baccalaureate in the Youth Center May 29th. All Seniors and their parents are invited. P.S.S. The new officers of the 77-78 Junior Council are Ty Hughston, president; Greg Parr, vice president; and Jo Linsey, secretary.

One-room school still doing job

WHITE EARTH, N.D. (AP) - Teacher Mae Helling's one-room country school is located in the remote, rugged rangeland of western North Dakota. Because of the isolation, she tries to prepare her students for the outside world after they graduate. Because they're farm and ranch children, the current nine students in grades one through seven know about the birds and bees Beyond that, they'll enter a new, alien way of life after graduating from the eighth grade and moving on to high schools in the prairie towns of Tioga and

"I tell them that not everybody is going to like everybody else, and that there will be disappointments," says the whitehaired Mrs. Helling, who often wears cowboy boots to school.

"I tell them that they're going to hear about evolution - I don't teach it any more than I have to - and I suggest they just stand by the Bible, that they not be led away by fads.

"I teach them that the greatest commandment of all is love. Mrs. Helling, who says she's well past retirement age, has been a teacher for 45 years, including 17 at the rural Chilcot School. The closest post office is 30 miles away at White Earth. Mrs. Helling isn't a "textbook teacher," but she says six former students were on the honor rolls at Tioga and Stanley this year. Desks are scattered informally about the room in the white frame building. A handbell that gets daily

"The thing is to do whatever work is best for the individual child," says Mrs. Helling, whose three grandchildren are among her students. "If I have a slow reader, we sit right down and work with him

"We don't wait for any special period or time to talk about something. We just strike when the iron is hot - when the interest is there.

Discipline problems are few: "We take care of that real fast. Sometimes we get to the seat of the problem. Sometimes we make public announcements (in front of the students) that are quite effective.

Drug problems? "We don't have any. But that's not to say we couldn't. We try to alert our children without being too conspicuous so as to make the drug thing an attraction. Parents and neighbors flock to the school at

Christmas and in the spring for eighth-grade graduation. They arrive via the Goat Trail "because that's what the road once was," says Mrs. Helling. A fiddler breaks out a tune to start the festivity, a couple of guitar players join in, and everbody starts singing — mostly Western songs. Chirstmas and graduation are the highlights of the school year. But there won't be any diplomas handed out on the school's front steps this spring because there aren't any eighth-graders. Next year there will be two.

Chicken gives good nutrition, adds relief to shopper's dollar

By BARBARA RADER Newsday

Getting enough good, solid nutrition for your shopping dollar is becoming a real challenge these days. With the consumer food index again on the rise, it's welcome relief to hear that chicken is in good supply and priced right at most supermarkets.

Book tells how to eat cheaply

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

A pretty sure way to attract interest in a cookbook these days is to tell the reader how to eat cheaply. That's what Ceil Dyer has done in her new book titled "Eating Well for Next To Nothing

The author starts off with some sound advice: to save money in the kitchen, you must revise your thinking from those bygone days of abundant food available at low cost and face up to today's soaring prices.

You can still hold down the cost, if you are careful. For one thing, always buy in season. when picking fruit and vegetables, shunning such delicacies as tomatoes in January and avoiding the frozen food counter when shopping

As in previous years,

Houses often are far from safe even with doors tightly locked

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

The key to the safety of your home and possessions may be no further than the lock on the front door.

Selecting the right lock can be confusing, however, if you don't know what you're looking for

The most common type of lock and the most vulnerable to attack - is the spring latch variety, also called the key-inknob model. A spring-loaded latch engages automatically and is locked by the doorknob.

Some spring-latch locks have what is called a "dead latch," which is a small metal bar or plunger to automatically lock the latch in place when it goes into the strike. Without this plunger, the National Bureau of Standards says, "it can be a simple matter to stick a thin piece of metal or a credit card between the door and the frame and open the latch bolt.

For additional protection, your best bet is a good deadbolt lock, generally available for under $50. A deadbolt is a straight bar, usually rectangular, that is squared off at the end and locked only by turning a key or latch. The deadbolt should be at least fiveeighths of an inch square, made of steel or solid brass. It should stick out of the lock by a minimum of half an vertical rather than horizontal; it interlocks with strong rings on a specially constructed plate.

The chain lock, allowing you to open the door a few inches and check visitors without undoing the lock, is popular in many areas, but it should not be used as the primary source of security: Once the door is partly open, the chain may be overcome by force or snipped with a wire cutter. A peephole is better for screening

Note: Too many locks are as bad as too few. "More than one adequate extra lock adds little or nothing to security," says the Bureau of Standards. Extra locks can, in fact, create a fire hazard by interfering with escape routes.

Suppose a burglar breaks in despite an adequate lock? Would anyone know about the burglary if you are away from home or asleep?

A growing number of homeowners are installing alarm systems at costs generally ranging from $300 to $1,500. Recognizing the interest in the field, the Bureau of Standards has prepared a new pamphlet, "Home Security Alarms — What They Are and How They Work." It is available, free, from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009. (Also available free from the same source is a primer on locks, hinges, etc. called, "Home Security Starts at Your Door.")

a history or sociology

All security alarms are made up of three parts: the detectors or sensors, the control unit and the alarm itself. The detectors or sensors are electronic or electromagnetic devices to register the presence or action of an intruder. Among the more common types are: SWITCH SENSORS — electromagnetic devices installed at all entry points which can be reached from the ground. The alarm is triggered when a door or window is

PRESSURE MATS - used to protect specific areas. The mats can be hidden under a carpet or rug in a frequently traveled area or near an item of value such as a television set. When someone steps on the mat or exerts other pressure, the alarm is triggered.

ULTRASONIC MOTION DETECTORS - devices which fill the room with sound waves too high for most humans to hear. Any movement in the room disturbs the pattern and sounds the alarm. Note: some people and most animals are bothered by the high-pitched sounds so check any such sensor at home before buying.

INFRARED PHOTOELECTRIC SENSORS - project an infrared light beam between two points. Any interruption of the beam triggers the

The sensors can be connected to the control unit by direct wiring or a wireless system. Either method is effective, according to the Bureau of Standards.

There are two types of alarms, local and remote. The local alarm is the least expensive. The alarm is heard only at your home. Its effectiveness depends on the intruder being frightened away or on the neighbors hearing the sound and calling the

The remote alarm transmits a signal to a location away from your home and usually involves a monthly maintenance charge. There are several models of remote alarms:

AUTOMATIC DIALER - sends a prerecorded message or signal over telephone lines to someone you choose, such as a relative or an answering service. Its reliability depends on someone answering the call. You will have to check the telephone company to make sure the system meets its specifications. Do not direct your alarm to the local police department without prior approval.

DIRECT CONNECT - transmits the alarm signal directly to the police department. This type of service provides very good protection, but frequently is not available for the private home owner.

CENTRAL STATION - sends the alarm to a private security company which monitors the system, notifys the police and sends guards to your

Optional features on some systems include key-activated switches that allow you to turn the system on and off from the outside and test switches letting you check sensors without sending an alarm.

It is a good idea to make sure that any system you choose is tested by a major laboratory such as Underwriters Laboratories Inc. - UL. Once you have purchased the system, you should take care not to set if off accidentally.

Make sure pets are removed from protected areas once the system is activated. Do not demonstrate the system to friends just to show it off. Be careful when installing sensors. Some sensors may react to changes in temperature or humidity. The motion of a blowing or the sound of a telephone bell may cause an ultrasonic alarm to send a false

Finally, do not operate your alarm on the same electrical circuit as kitchen appliances or your heating or cooling system. The cyclical operation of these appliances may trigger an alarm.

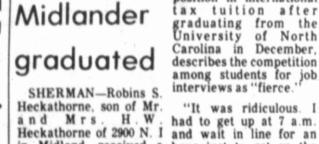

Check local laws such as those on noise control before you buy and find out whether installers are licensed. Get quotes from several companies and discuss installation and maintenance before you sign a contract. Find out how the sensors will look and determine how much rewiring and remodeling will be needed. Will the installer foot the bill if a painting touch-up is necessary? Will wiring be concealed or exposed? Who will take care of repairs?

have had the biggest save of his life a few nights earlier.

Midland's lone run came on a twoout single by Aaron Randall, after Karl Gordon opened the sixth with a pinch-hit single.

In looking back, the Cubs took themselves out of a couple of innings with their base-running when the score was 0-0 and as the game wore on the plays loomed bigger and bigger.

IN THE second Tony Pepper walked and missed the stop sign flashed by Manager Saul at third on Steve Davis' double and was thrown out at the plate. In the fifth, Kurt Seibert singled to center, but was doubled off first when he ventured too far off first on Steve Haug's sinking liner that was shoe-topped by left fielder John Yeglinski.

Arkansas' runs came after Mike Ramsey beat out a bunt single to open the fifth, stole second and then Eddie Daves walked, a sacrifice moved the runners into scoring position and

Winnipeg Jets beat Nordiques

WINNIPEG (AP) — The Quebec Nordiques saw their chance of regaining the home-ice advantage in the World Hockey Association final playoff series slip away Wednesday night because of glaring mistakes by some of their top players.

Chris Bordeleau and Marc Tardif, part of Quebec's highest scoring line, committed the errors that allowed the Winnipeg Jets to take control of the game and skate to a 6-1 victory.

"We contained them for almost two periods but then committed two bad mistakes," said Quebec Coach Marc Boileau. "It was a bad pass that gave them the second goal and a stupid penalty that gave them the third."

Bordeleau, the club's leading playmaker with 75 assists this season, made the bad pass that Willy Lindstrom intercepted at center ice. Lindstrom fed a quick pass to Dan Labraaten and the speedy wing went in to score what proved to be the winning goal at 13:16 of the second period.

Six minutes later, it was Tardif, Quebec's second-highest scorer this season, who took a hooking penalty behind the play. That came in the final minute of the second period, and with him still in the penalty box in the third, Anders Hedberg scored, giving Winnipeg a 3-1 lead. "The turning point in the game was that goal by Hedberg," said Boileau. "He put the puck between oins the Los Angeles the defenseman's legs and then got Richard Brodeur Rams is to work for a going the wrong way in the goal.

We played well enough to win but made too many mistakes ... Some times you can get away with the mistakes if you're playing a bad team ... but the Jets A dieting and trimmer are a good club and they jump on those mistakes."

Former Midlander honored by Auburn

AUBURN, Ala.—Gary Schatz, University of Auburn All-America swimmer and former Midland High athlete, has been named as the winner of the 1977 Cliff Hare Award, the highest honor an Auburn athlete can The award was presented to

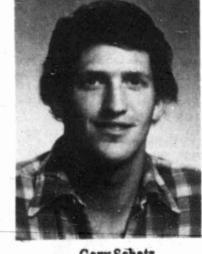

Schatz by Auburn President Dr. Harry M. Philpott in a special ceremony at Auburn May 7. The award is given annually, "to the student who, in addition to athletic and scholastic achievement, exhibits in great degree the qualities of leadership, integrity and courage " The award is given in memory of Clifford Leroy Hare, a member of Auburn's first football team and former president of the Southern Conference. Schatz is the first athlete since 1958 to win the award in a sport other than football or basketball. Schatz is a B-plus student, majoring in civil engineering. Schatz, a senior, has been an All-American swimmer for three years at Auburn. He made All-America in four events in 1975, four events in 1976 and five events in 1977. Schatz was the co-captain of the Auburn swim team this year. He leaves Auburn with school records in two individual events and three relays, one of which is an American record

In this year's NCAA Swimming Championships, Gary finished second in the 50-yard freestyle with a time of 19.90 seconds, becoming the second swimmer in the world to ever go under 20 seconds in that race. His other Auburn record is in the 100-yard freestyle.

Golf's big three set for Memorial tourney

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - It was like old times-Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer, once professional golf's Big Three, honing their games in front of a huge gallery.

"It's been two or three years since we all played together." Player said of the famed three-some that owns a total of 141 tour titles and 29 major championships.

The dominance of the Big Three has so eroded that only Nicklaus has an American tour victory in 1977. And only Player expressed confidence of winning the $225,000 Memorial Tournament, which began today.

"I feel I will have a win. It's just a matter of continuing to play. I'm confident," Player said Wednesday after matching Nicklaus' practice round of three-under-par 69. Palmer had a 74.

"It's a disadvantage for me playing on my own course," said Nicklaus, who created this $7 million Muirfield Village layout four years ago.

"I'm not really overwhelmed with my game now," said the 47-year-old Palmer. "It's a matter of building back my confidence I've lost over the last few years. I'm not making as many birdies as I've had."

Jim Palmer Jim Palmer given approval to pitch

BALTIMORE (AP) - The Baltimore Orioles' ace pitcher, Jim Palmer, has been pronounced fit to take the mound in Friday's game against the New York Yankees by an orthopedic specialist in Los Angeles. According to Orioles' spokesman Robert Brown, Palmer stopped off in Los Angeles for a checkup with Dr. Robert Kerlan before heading for New York and the opening of a fivegame series with the Yankees.

Kerlan reportedly told the threetime Cy Young awardwinner that his pitching arm is in good shape, and he should "continue pitching as he has all season.'

But Kerlan also reported that Palmer is suffering from a"whiplash type" of injury as the result of a collision with another Orioles' player several weeks ago during a practice.

Kerlan is the physician who successfully treated Los Angeles pitcher Sandy Koufax for an arthritic hand.

But he certainly finished things for the Philadelphia Phillies.

At first given a "night off" by Lasorda because he wasn't feeling well, Smith eventually played and provided the Dodgers with their winning runs in Wednesday night's 6-4 victory over Philadelphia.

Prior to the game at Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia, Lasorda had inquired about Smith's health, since he did not look well.

"I'm not feeling well," the right fielder said. 'Well, then," said Lasorda, "take and felt better. Then after a session with the Dodgers' trainer, he felt even better and decided he wanted to start

SMITH'S TWO-RUN homer in the seventh inning gave the Dodgers a 6-3 lead and supplied reliever Charlie Hough with enough of a cushion to withstand a Philadelphia uprising in the ninth.

"This is the best ballclub I have ever been with," said Smith, of the runaway Dodgers who are leading the National League West by a whopping 12 games over Cincinnati. "This club has it all-outstanding speed, pit-

The Phillies went ahead 3-2 in the bottom of the second. Bob Boone doubled home one run, another scored on an infield out and Twitchell singled across the third run.

THE DODGERS went ahead to stay in the fourth, knocking out Twitchell after a single by Lacy, Baker's double and a walk to Johnny Oates loaded the bases with none out. Reliever Warren Brusstar got Rhoden to hit into a home-to-first double play, but Lopes singled to left for two runs and a 4-3 Dodgers lead.

In the seventh with one out, Bill Russell singled and Smith followed with his ninth homer of the season for a 6-3 lead. Hough took over in the eighth and allowed the Phillies four hits, including Garry Maddox' RBI triple in the ninth, for his 11th save of the season.

Cardinals 8, Astros 4

Lou Brock and Mike Tyson each collected three singles, pacing a 15-hit St. Louis attack as the Cardinals beat Houston. Buddy Schultz hurled the final four innings for the Cards in picking up his third victory of the season without a loss.

Braves 10, Expos 8

Biff Pocoroba drove in two runs with a homer and double and Barry Bonnell added two run-scoring singles as Atlanta edged Montreal. It was the third straight victory for the Braves and the eighth straight defeat for the Expos in a game that was delayed 61 minutes by rain in the sixth inning.

Larry Parrish smashed his fire home runs of the year for the Expos, a solo blast in the fifth and a three-run shot in the sixth when Montreal rallied for four runs.

Reds 8, Pirates 3

Bob Bailey drove in three runs with a single and a sacrifice fly, leading Cincinnati over Pittsburgh, handing winless Jerry Reuss his fifth loss. Bailey, the sixth member of the Reds tried in the No. 4 batting spot this season, triggered a four-run firstinning with his two-run single and hit his sacrifice fly in the fifth, when the Reds scored twice without a hit.

Joe Morgan tied the Reds' all-time club record of 319 stolen bases in the fifth inning on the back end of a double steal, Cincinnati's second of the game. He shares the mark with Bob Bescher, who did it from 1908-1913.

A&M's Chandler doesn't like SWC tournament baseball coach Tom Chandler doesn't like the idea of the Southwest Conference starting a post-season baseball tournament - just when the Aggies won their first outright title in

"I don't favor it," said Chandler, who has watched the Texas go to the NCAA playoffs the last 12 years as either the SWC champion or co-champion. His team finished second seven times in that

"I won't be less than honest with you." he added. "We won it and we feel we shouldn't have to prove ourselves again. It's kind of a letdown."

And to top it all off, Chandler's Aggies, who waltzed to the championship with an 18-4 conference mark, have to prove themselves again in Texas' own Disch-Falk Field

"We hope to have it at College Station next year," Chandler said

Texas A&M, 36-12, meets fourthplace Arkansas, 14-10 in SWC play and 33-16 overall, in today's first game at 5 p.m., while second-place Texas, 51-7 for the season and 17-7 in the SWC, hosts third-place Baylor, 36-12 and 15-9, in the second contest at 8

The double elimination tournament continues through Monday with an off day Saturday.

All four coaches agreed Wednesday that the tournament on Texas' Astroturf field could be decided by pitching and defense, a possible advantage for Texas and Arkansas since their home fields are Astroturf. "Playing here (at Texas) is going to be a great factor, said Chandler, whose team won two of three from Texas in College Station this season. "The major disadvantage we have is playing on Astroturf. We do not have an Astroturf team. We're dependent on the long ball." Baylor Coach Mickey Sullivan, whose Bears crushed 31 home runs and led the conference in all but three offensive categories, echoed Chandler's assessment. His team has an earned run average over 3.20. Texas Coach Cliff Gustafson and Arkansas' Norm DeBriyn count pitching depth and defense as their teams' strong points. "Our hitting has really been poor in our last 20-25 games," said Gustafson, whose Longhorns' won a record 34 straight games at the start of the season. Texas pitchers, however, have a team ERA of 2.11, best in the SWC, and righthander Don Kainer is the nation's winningest college hurler to a slow start against Portland in their National Basketball Association (NBA) championship series Sunday, it could be a good sign, according to forward George McGinnis' analysis.

"I think this team likes having its back up against the wall," McGinnis said. "We just seem to play better that way.'

The 76ers certainly demonstrated their ability to come off the wall in their Eastern Conference championship series with the Houston Rockets, which the Sixers won 4-2. Philadelphia trailed most of the game in Tuesday's series finale before taking out a 112-109 victory in the final minute of the game. 'And in Sunday's game (when Houston erased a 17-point deficit to win) we got up by 17 and thought it Sigel, 33-year-old was all over," McGinnis said. "We didn't know how Berwyn, Pa., insurance to take the lead and keep it. Guard Doug Collins, whom the Rockets never today against Mike could control in the six games, was just glad the Holland, 21-year-old tense and sometimes confusing series is over and the University of South 76ers can plan for Sunday's opener against Portland "A lot of people thought it was going to be a cake walk for us," Collins said. "Then someone quoted me as saying we'd sweep the series and suddenly there was this water buffalo thing.

'Then Steve Mix said Moses Malone wasn't a good player. It was a tough enough series to begin with without all this other stuff being piled on.'

The fast-breaking 76ers were depicted as cheetahs and the Rockets, who run a more patterned offense, were the sluggish water buffaloes. The monikers started with a Philadelphia newspaper columnist after the first game and hung with both teams throughout the series.

But Darryl Dawkins, who provided Philadelphia's spark in a tightly played third quarter of Tuesday's game, disagreed with the tags. "I never called them water buffaloes and neither did any of the other players," said Dawkins, who hit 20 points in Tuesday's game. "I kept saying they shoot a mean ball. I guess you can say it came down to that last play (a charging foul against Houston's John Lucas) but it was a great game.

Pro lineman testifies about use of pep pills

TORONTO (AP) - A former tawa trainer, before an exhibition Canadian Football League lineman testified Wednesday in Ontario Supreme Court that a trainer for the Ottawa Rough Riders had pep pills available on demand and he saw them being taken by three-quarters of the team before a game.

Joe Vijuk, 31, is suing the Rough Riders, the Toronto Argonauts and individuals associated with both teams. He alleges negligence on their part in supplying him with amphetamines between 1970-1972, which he says caused him permanent physical and emotional damage. Vijuk claims in the suit that he was "induced, counseled, encouraged and required" to consume the drugs. He played for Ottawa in 1970 and part of 1971 before being traded to the Argonauts, with whom he concluded the 1971 season and returned in 1972. He said he was introduced to the

Weinberg pleased with team

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) - When Larry Weinberg became principal owner of the Portland Trail Blazers 17 months ago, he set about creating a hustling, unselfish team that someday might challenge for the National Basketball Association title.

But he didn't expect it to happen this quickly.

"We felt if we got a ball club that played good team ball, that hustled and never gave up, we would be successful," Weinberg said. "We were hoping that our team would evolve into this kind of team. In all honesty, we didn't expect it to happen so soon

Weinberg, 51, had owned a share of the Blazers since the team's inception seven years ago. He had spent most of the time as the team's treasurer.

During their first six seasons, the Blazers had managed to evade success. They never had a winning season, never made the playoffs and seldom displayed the unselfish attributes Weinberg sought.

Weinberg got the chance to becomeprincipal owner when his friend, Herman Sarkowsky, had to give up his controlling interest in the team in order to purchase the new Seattle Seahawks of the National Football League.

As Weinberg said, "A number of things happened that accelerated the time frame" for success.

Gaylord Perry admits he pitched against Jim Bunning. There is no truth to the rumor that he also pitched against Cy Young, but he now is in the record book with them as the only pitchers ever to win 100 games in both major leagues.

The 38-year-old right-hander, winner of 134 National League games, recorded his 100th American League triumph Wednesday night, pitching the Texas Rangers to a 6-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

"I'm tremendously flattered by joining the company of Jim Bunning and Cy Young," Perry said. "I pitched against Bunning in the National League and he was just super. Young was just great, of course. Relax, folks, Gaylord is just repeating what he has read in the baseball history books. Old Cy's last season was 1911, a few years before old Gaylord saw the light of day in Williamston, N.C.

In the only other AL games, the Chicago White Sox downed the Kansas City Royals 7-4 and the Milwaukee Brewers nipped the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 in 10 innings.

Perry fell behind 3-0 in the first inning, allowing three of Detroit's six hits. But he steadied as the game progressed and retired the last 18 neither is likely to without nearly around-theclock work by the drivers and crew members between now and this weekend-the last chance to qualify for the 33-car field.

Simon said his Vollstedt, a new creation nearly identical to Miss Guthrie's Romlin Lightning, was not as seriously damaged from his Tuesday practice crash as was first thought. Early today, Simon and helpers still were at work, pounding the dents out of the monocoque chassis, and fabricating new suspension pieces.

"New body panels are being flown in from the Vollstedt shops in Portland, Ore.," Simon said. 'We're getting the tub and everything straightened out pretty quickly.

We hope to have the car basically runable by Simon said his crash, which started early in the first turn and stretched for nearly a halfmile, out through turn two, was due to a broken "right rear anti-roll bar link. When it broke the car just sat down in the rear.' Miss Guthrie's car, which has been having suspension problems since she crashed in turn two last week, was the object of Simon's attention

Wednesday for the few spare minutes he had away from his damaged car. "We found two or three things that should make an improvement," Simon noted.

However, Simon's appearance in the car sparked rumors that Simon, as No. 1 driver on the Vollstedt team, might be exercising his right to take over the team's No. 2 car.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) -Gov. Dolph Briscoe, one of Texas' largest cattle producers, has called on his fellow ranchers to vote for a producerfunded program of beef research, market promotion.

"I think that all Americans would welcome such research,' Briscoe said in a news conference Wednesday. "I hope all Texas cattle producers will register and vote.'

Cattleman across the nation will vote July 5-15 in the National Beef Referendum on whether to assess themselves to establish a $30 million to $40 million fund. It would take a two-thirds majority for the referendum to pass.

The fund would be raised by collecting a small fee - three-tenths of one per cent on the sale of each animal -and would be administered by a 68-member Beef Board. Board members would be nominated by cattlemen and appointed by the U.S. secretary of agriculture.

Texas, which Briscoe said is the nation's No. 1 cattle-producing state, would have seven of the 68 members of the board.

Spending priority shifts to cars

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Because of the money it lavishes on its automobiles, the American family has reached the point of spending more money on transportation than on food.

It also is putting proportionately less money into food for the family table and more into meals in restaurants.

These reversals of family spending priorities are recorded in a survey of 20,000 families conducted by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. If its findings could be sketched into one neat picture, it would portray the typical American family piling into its expensive car for a quick trip to the local fast-food emporium.

Whatever the reason, the typical family back in 1969 spent $693 to buy. maintain and fuel the automobile. In 1972, the average expenditure had increased to $1,566.

Although the proportion spent on food declined, that doesn't mean the American family wasn't eating as much or as well. For one thing, the size of the family was declining (from 3.2 persons to 2.9 in the period covered by the two surveys) and so there were fewer stomachs to fill.

There's also another reason: There is a kind of upper limit to what a family can spend on food. It can only eat so much. And although incomes rise, as they did during that period, the amount needed for meals usually stays fairly stable or rises only slightly. The result is that food pre-empts a declining portion of the money

And there's not much satisfaction in the statistics for companies that sell books, magazines and newspapers. The proportion of family expenditures that went for reading materials declined, from 0.9 to 0.6 per cent.

It was clearly the automobile - big. fast, expensive and lavishly equipped that caused the big shift in spending priorities during the decade.

For one thing, people bought more cars, says Eva Jacobs, chief of the BLS division of Living Condition Studies. The survey found that the average family had 1.3 cars in 1972, compared with only 1.0 a decade

They were also buying more expensive cars. It wasn't just that auto prices went up, which they of course did. More important, statistically at least, was the American preference for larger, more lavish cars. It doesn't show up in the survey, but Jacobs says retail sales data show the average car bought in 1972 was double that of 1960 in cost.

It shows that the proportion of family expenditures that went for food in 1972-73 was 20.1 per cent, as compared with 24.4 per cent in 1960-61, when the last BLS survey was undertaken.

The trend was just the reverse for transportation. In 1960, the average family put 15.2 per cent of its expenditures into transportation. That share increased to 21.4 per cent in

Stewart Lindbergh role to be broadcast

By JAY SHARBUTT AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - This Friday marks the 50th anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's historic New York-to Paris solo flight. NBC is noting it by airing "The Spirit of St. Louis" on Friday-night

The 1957 film about the man they called "Lucky Lindy" stars Jimmy Stewart, the tall, lanky veteran actor and self-professed flying nut who'd wanted to play the Lindbergh role for

Stewart chuckled in recalling a time shortly after the film's premiere when Lindbergh telephoned him, said he hadn't seen the movie yet, but that his wife and children had and they

Whereupon the aviator turned the phone over to his wife, Stewart said, and Mrs. Lindbergh told him: "At one point in the flight, when you were sort of getting out of the ice storm and were down close to the water, one of the children leaned over to me and said, 'Mommy, Daddy does make it, doesn't he?"

Stewart, who turned 15 the day Lindbergh took off for Paris, was asked about his first trip aloft in a

Stewart, who learned to fly in an era where pilots heard the wind whistling through the wires, worried whether the canvas on the wing would stay put, was asked if he thinks the fun's gone in this jet age.

"I think it has, in a way," he mused. "But I still have fun in my plane because it's very noisy and very uncomfortable, especially for somebody with legs as long as mine.

"It's a wonderful plane because it takes your mind off everything else. You can't think of anything else but flying it. You have to keep your mind on what you're doing.

He did mildly grouse about the fact that because of the increasingly crowded skies, he now must keep in contact with air traffic control centers, fiddle with radio devices called transponders, constantly report his position and stay alert for reports of traffic near his airplane. "It's not like the old days," Jimmy Stewart sighed. "Then, you'd go up and be the only one around for a hundred miles. And you could do about what you wanted to.

Organ season concludes over, to Ch with recital by Obetz

Midland's West Texas chapter, American Guild of Organists, will conclude its current season with a traditional recital featuring an outstanding guest organist.

The event, free to the public, will be at 8 p.m. Monday in the sanctuary of the First United Methodist Church, North Main and Ohio streets. The recitalist will be Dr. John Obetz, widely known concert performer who also is a member of the faculty in the Conservatory of Music of the University of Missouri, Kansas City.

Dr. Obetz is heard by an audience of thousands during a nationallybroadcast weekly program played on the 109-rank Aeolian-Skinner organ in the auditorium at world headquarters of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints in Independence, Mo.

For his Monday night recital on the 48-rank Schantz pipe organ in the First United Methodist sanctuary, Dr. Obetz has progammed works by Jehan Alain, Felix Mendelssohn, J. S. Bach and Max Reger

Dr. Obetz received bachelor's and master's degrees at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., and a doctorate in sacred music at Union Theological Seminary in New York City, where he studied with Vernon deTar, acclaimed teacher and longtime organist at the Church of the Ascension in Manhattan. He had additional study in Europe and has participated in the International Academy for Organists in The Netherlands. He has concertized throughout the U.S., in England and in numerous European countries, has performed with the Aspen Festival Orchestra and has been solo artist with the Kansas City Philharmonic.

The Midland contingent will give a series of performances of MCT's 1977 melodrama, "Skullduggery in the Skies," at the Dundalk Maytime Festival. The performances will be presented in the ballroom of the Hotel Ballymascanlon, near Dundalk.

New scenery for the melodrama has been painted and sent off to Ireland, there to be stapled to wooden Slated frames being constructed in Dundalk.

Shipping boxes for the scenery, costumes, props and novelty items were specially-constructed by MCT volunteers. The crates were to go through U. S. Customs at Dallas and then will travel on the plane with the 53 Midlanders making the Irish efforts in offshore areas. We have spent $84 million already on leases in the Atlantic offshore, Pitcher said. "If various court rulings and other situations prove favorable to the oil industry, we could start up operations in the Atlantic next year, but it is doubtful if that will happen.'

"We are making a huge effort in the North Sea. We already are active in four fields in that area and expect to spend one billion dollars there in the next four years. The result, we hope, will bring our production in that area to approximately 120,000 barrels of oil per day," Kircher said.

Referring to the Carter energy plan, Kircher said "what we are talking about here are proposals that are far from finalized.

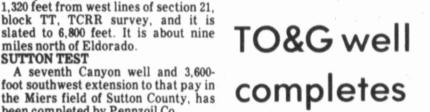

"I think the goals are right, but the means that he has set up to achieve them are not properly designed. One blade of the proposal is conservation, but the other blade of the scissors, incentive for maximum exploration efforts, is missing," Kircher said.

"Under the proposals, we will not be able to avoid a high import level. Back to company business, Kircher said the president's stress on the use of coal "makes our decision 10 year ago to seek a good position in coal look very good at this time." Kircher pointed out that URDA had selected Conoco for a huge coal gasification unit and that the company has many undeveloped coal areas in the West as well as proven coal areas in the Northeast.

PECOS COMPLETION

AUSTIN - The Railroad Commission of Texas has scheduled an Oil and Gas Division hearing at which the reservoir performance of the McElroy field in Crane County will be reviewed for redetermination of the most efficient rate of oil, gas and water withdrawal.

The hearing will commence at 9 a.m. July 12 in the Ernest O. Thompson Building in Austin. The Oil and Gas Division has held hearings on five of 34 fields that are scheduled for review.

Price, a Pecos County reentry operation, six miles south of Mc-Camey, has been completed as a fourth lower Leonard oil well in the El Cinco field of North Pecos, to flow 24 barrels of 40-gravity oil per day, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,764-1.

Completion was through a 16-64inch choke and perforations at 4,659-4,665 feet, following acid treatment with 3,500 gallons.

Location is 4.750 feet from south and 990 feet from west lines of the north half of section 5, block 12, H&GN

WASHINGTON - The Carter administration estimated Wednesday that the proposed B1 bomber fleet will cost $24.8 billion to procure — at $101.7 million per plane — and $40 billion over the next 20 years.

The Pentagon said that the B1 would be the first combat aircraft in history to break the $100 million cost barrier. The $40 billion total cost estimate, which includes operating expenses, came from the White House in response to questions submitted to bombers.

During his presidential campaign Carter called the plane "wasteful." But as President, he has refused to

"The B1 is an example of a proposed system which should not be funded and would be wasteful of taxpayers' dollars," Carter told the Democratic Platform Committee on June 12, 1976.

Wednesday, Carter wrote to a national coalition trying to shoot down the bomber that "I expect to make a decision on whether or not to produce the B1 this summer."

The President said Defense Secretary Harold Brown's current review of ways to modernize the American long-range bomber force "will be an important factor in my decision" as will "changes in the world situation such as an abrogation of current strategic arms limitation treaties.'

If Carter does order the B1 bomber into production Wednesday, "It will be a breach of faith."

charge during a press conference called by a coalition of 36 national organizations called National Campaign to Stop the B1 Bomber.

She and other coalition spokesmen said the United States does not need a new bomber; that the billions it would take to build it could provide more jobs if channeled into non-defense fields, and that the B1 would be the greatest fuel guzzler of all time because Coalition staffer Robert Brammer said the organization submitted 14 questions to Carter on Feb. 23 and received his responses Wednesday in a meeting with White House aides.

Carter said in his responses that the $40 billion estimate covers the cost of developing and producing 244 B1 bombers; operating them for 20 years, and buying and operating the KC-135 tankers they would need for aerial refueling.

The $40 billion estimate, Carter said, is in "constant" fiscal 1978 dollars — meaning no allowance was made for future inflation, which would add to the

Jeremy Stone, representing the Federation of American Scientists which is in the anti-bomber coalition, predicted the real cost of the 244 B1 bombers over the next 20 years would be about $90

Even at $40 billion, Stone said, the B1 would be "the biggest single military project since the Chinese Wall." He said there is no need to rush into buying the B1 because the B52 bombers now flying will last

The Pentagon figures released Wednesday on the B1 do allow for future inflation but not operating costs nor the price of buying tankers for the bomber. bombers, or $101.7 million each.

the bomber. Three test versions of the plane are already flying and a fourth test model is under con-

The Air Force considers the B1 a vital addition to the nation's strategic deterrent; says it would be for maximum speed and fuel efficiency. It would fly faster than the speed of sound at high altitude on the way to Soviet targets and then penetrate the Russian radar defenses.

The B1 can carry H-bombs, nuclear-tipped supersonic missiles and the subsonic cruise missile in its bomb bays.

The Pentagon's current B1 contract with Rockwell expires June 30. Carter could simply extend it for a limited period of time and declare he wants to keep building the bomber until he determines whether the Soviets are willing to reduce strategic weapons under an arms agreement.

to change HEW spending way

The Washington Post

that contracting procedures in his agency are shot through with waste and illegality, Health, Education, and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. Wednesday ordered a series of changes in the way HEW spends some $7 billion annually on grants and

At the heart of the new procedures is an effort to give HEW's purchasing officers authority to stand up to top agency officials who have frequently ignored procurement laws and regulations in the past.

'You've got the problem where the procurement man quotes the rule and some Nobel laureate who runs the office says he doesn't care," explained Thomas S. McFee, a deputy assistant secretary who worked with Califano on the new procedures. "We want the procurement officer to know that he catalogue of what he called "major deficiencies" in HEW contracting practices. But the department provided no specific examples of officials who had violated rules. McFee said the agency's inspector general is investigating some cases of improper procurement procedures.

Among numerous abuses set forth in general terms in Califano's memorandum is a "buddy system," in McFee's phrase, in which top HEW officials funnel money, through noncompetitive awards, to favored projects and contractors. Normally, Califano wrote, contract awards should be made only after HEW solicits bids from various potential contractors. In practice, "personnel ... in violation of law and regulations concert with vendors to subit supposedly unsolicited contract proposals."

Tomatoes provide one of the most rewarding crops that can be grown in a vegetable garden.

It doesn't take much space or any one particular type of soil to grow enough fresh tomatoes for an entire family. The homegrown product is far superior in flavor and quality to that usually found in stores.

A little bit of know-how can go a long way, according to University of Maryland specialists. Here are their suggestions:

Select a location in full sunlight, away from the roots of trees and shrubs which would compete with the tomato plants for nutrients and moisture.

When buying, choose plants that are 8 to 10 inches tall and dark green in color with a thick stem and no yellow plant continue to drop its flowers. For top-quality tomatoes free from sunscald, cracking and ground rot, grow your tomatoes in cages. This involves setting out plants in rows five feet apart with two feet between each plant in a row. You can make your own cages with a sturdy mesh, preferably concrete reinforcement wire, available at hardware stores, and place them over the plants when they are tall enough to require support.

Make the cages 18 to 24 inches in diameter and 3 1-2 to 5 feet tall, with openings of at least six inches. Form the mesh into cylinders and place one over each plant, pushing the cage about 6 inches into the ground.

The wire for such cages can be used in subsequent seasons. Ripe tomatoes can be picked between openings in the Tomatoes need the equivalent of about one inch of rain each week. If supplemental watering is necessary, heavy soakings at weekly intervals are much better than many light sprinklings. Do not wet the foliage any more than necessary.

Let them eat cake, pears, too

CECILY BROWNSTONE Food Editor

Years ago, an American cook invented the original upsidedown cake, pineapple atop vanilla-flavored batter. Since then cooks have made all kinds of changes in the fruit and cake layers. Now still another American cook has taken a cue from a subtle French way of combining pears and chocolate. Results: a new Pear Chocolate Upside-down Cake.

Canned Bartlett pear halves, coconut and a sweet buttery mixture go into the fruit layer. The cake batter is airy (it includes eggs and sour cream but no butter) and there's enough cocoa added to give good chocolate flavor. Just one caution: to be at its best, this dessert must be served warm from the

Pour over chilled pear layer. Bake in a preheated 375-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean - 40 to 45 minutes. Let cool in pan for 3 to 5 minutes. Turn upside down on a serving plate or tray and serve while still quite warm. Makes 8 servings.

Earthquake fears disturb Japan

check these ...

TOKYO (AP) — "It is, of course, the earthquakes," a young American student replied when asked what, if anything, disturbed him most in Tokyo.

"And you'll be surprised to learn that so many people, Japanese and foreigners alike, share the same fear," he added.

Many among Japan's 110-million population worry about the frequent quakes that are often strong enough to wake them from a sound sleep. Hardly a day passes without a tremor in some part of this island land.

The last massive quake disaster came in 1923 when 130,000 persons died in the Tokyo-Yokohama area, and the memory of that lives on in the minds of many of the older generation:

Apprehensions concerning quakes increased several years ago after a widely publicized prediction by a group of Japanese seismologists that another major quake might hit at any time in densely populated Central Japan. Some scientists even pinpointed the Suruga Bay area, 60 miles west of Tokyo, as the possible center of a quake they said could be worse than that of 1923.

A number of major quakes in the past two years in Europe, the Soviet Union, South America, China and other Asian countries further raised fears among the people living around Suruga Bay.

Local disaster prevention committees were formed, some old buildings were torn down, and disaster prevention kits, emergency evacuation ropes and ladders, emergency foodstuffs, and fire extinguishers were sold out.

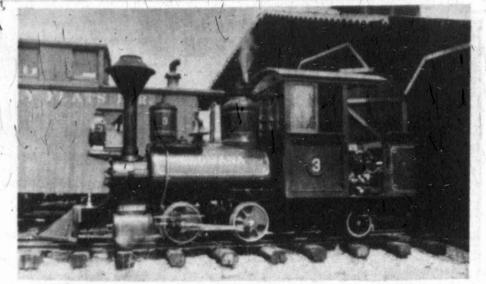

A series of surveys have followed the prediction concerning the Suruga Bay and other areas by the National Geology Survey Institute, the National Disaster Prevention Science Technology Center, and several university research teams.

"Nothing concrete has been determined so far," said Dr. Tsuneji Rikitake, a noted scientist in earthquake prediction and a professor at-Tokyo Institute of Technology.

However, he added, he agrees with many other Japanese scientists that the surveys have not reached a conclusion that would reject the specific prediction.

In the surveys, a series of recent tremors were recorded and analyzed, man-made tremors were set off for studies of seismic wave speeds and the underground geological foun-

Water district cites increasing revenues, expenses in early '77

Both revenues and expenses for the Colorado River Municipal Water District during the first four months of 1977 have been higher than they were for the same period last year.

Receipts in April were $569,462, a rise of $37,000 over receipts for the same month last year. The April figures brought the total revenues for the first four months of 1977 to $2,113,826. This figure is an increase of $245,000 over the same period last

Of the four month total, $1,276,727 was received from the sale of water to municipalities, up $152,000 from last year. Sales to oil companies amd industrial users totaled $798,593, up $86,000 from last year.

Water deliveries amounting to 5,376,118,000 gallons a drop of 154,000,000 gallons since last year. The drop reflects higher rates which were imposed to cover higher debt service and operating costs.

Of the water delivered, 3,185,562,000 gallons went to the cities, a decrease of 146,000 gallons for the four month period. Deliveries to oil companies dropped only eight million gallons.

Through the first four months, the district transferred $1,350,000 for debt service to the net revenue fund. Lake J. B. Thomas had 34,598 acre feet of water in storage as of April 30, and Lake E. V. Spence had 165,250 acre feet, for a total of 199,848 acre feet. District well fields have a potential of about 30,000,000 gallons per day.

But the San Francisco police department has been flooded with complaints lately, many of them passed along quietly by the local Japanese consul on behalf of visiting Japanese. that sexual favors were promised indeed, even bought - but never delivered.

On top of that, police say there are a substantial number of men, many of whom they have seen tossed out of the parlors on their ears by husky bouncers, who never file formal com-

"It's an embarrassing thing," said Dep. City Atty. James Lazarus, "to pay $50 for something that's illegal anyway and then not get it. They're too embarrassed to complain.

"What we've got is more of a conwith illegal sex.' As a result, a "truth in advertising" ordinance is about to be imposed on the parlors, which bear such promising names as House of Ecstacy, Sugar Shack and Tunnel of Love but which are supposed to offer nothing more

The ordinance, drafted by local pro-secutors and police officials, was approved last week by a Board of Supervisors' screening committee and will be presented to the full board for a

"It is." Lazarus said, "some way to try to clue people in to the deceptive practices.'

There are numerous stories of patrons being bilked out of hundreds of dollars by the encounter parlor "hostesses" who, with winks or smiles, suggest various forms of forbidden delights.

But the trick - or skill - is to "take the mark for all his money but you don't do a thing," one of the hostesses told a local newspaper recently. "The man might think otherwise, but all he's buying is my time."

The proposed new ordinance is supposed to make perfectly clear what is, or is not, available — to advise the customer, in other words, that "what you see is what you are going to get."

And what he will see likely will be a young woman in her underwear, or shorts and halter, wearing "in plain view" a city-issued identification badge with name, recent photograph and work permit number.

The parlors also would be required to post signs in English, Japanese, Chinese and Spanish warning customers that sexual acts are not permitted and that hostesses are neither permitted to remove their clothing nor to "touch or be touched

Advertising using words such as "nude," "topless," "bottomless" or "naked" in any language would be prohibited, and hostesses would not be allowed to leave with or meet customers off the premises. If the proposal wins approval from the supervisors, as expected, it would go to Mayor George Moscone to be signed into law: But he is taking a cautious approach.

'He believes the law already is pretty clear on fraud or illegal sex,' said press aide Corey Busch. "To go beyond that is a ticklish situation in terms of First Amendment freedoms.
