Newsprint supply now adequate, but new price boosts in offing

By ROBERT HOLDEN

NEW YORK (AP) — America's newspapers seem to have gained the upper hand for the moment in their effort to control newsprint costs.

There is no newsprint supply problem on the horizon, inventories are large, and conservation efforts have taken root after many newspapers were stunned by shortages a few years ago, industry analysts say.

"The newspaper companies are in a position to bargain very strongly because the Canadian newsprint industry has so much excess capacity," says John Morton, of the brokerage firm Colin, Hochstetler Co.

American dailies last year obtained 66 per cent of their 7.7 million tons of newsprint from Canadian mills, 33 per cent from U.S. mills and 1 per cent from European mills.

Morton says Canadian producers are caught with an estimated 1 million tons of reserve capacity. Producers had to shut down some mills temporarily last year for lack of orders because of the large inventory build up by newspapers.

But the current supply-demand advantage to newspapers doesn't mean stabilization of the price of newsprint, which accounts for an average 25 per cent of a newspaper's total publishing costs—more for a metropolitan daily, less for a small-town paper.

Morton predicts Canadian producers will tack on another $20-a-ton price increase late this year or early in 1978 because the industry operates at a low profit margin and faces contract expirations this summer with the International Woodworkers of America.

The price of newsprint now is $305 a ton in the eastern United States, following a $20-a-ton increase in December, and $300 a ton in the western United States, where a $20-a-ton increase is expected this summer.

advertising on a nine-column basis rather than eight, and switching to the lighter 30-pound newsprint from the former industry standard 32-pound paper. The basis weight is the weight of 500 sheets of newsprint measuring 24 by 36 inches.

These conservation measures, as well as vigilance against waste and downplaying metropolitan dailies' circulation to rural areas, now are widely applied by newspapers around the country and have set the level of consumption back three to four years, according to Morton.

Dunleavy said such newsprint economy probably cut total consumption last year by a million tons.

However, newsprint consumption in the United States began to rise again in 1976 after two straight years of decline. Total consumption was 9.56 million tons, of which 7.7 million was used by daily newspapers, according to the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, which represents 13 Canadian newsprint-producers.

Consumption had declined from 10.75 million tons in 1973 to 10.2 million tons in 1974 and to 9.2 million tons in 1975.

Factors in the return to increased consumption include an estimated 20.8 per cent increase in advertising revenues in 1976 over 1975 and the introduction by many newspapers of special sections to increase circulation and handle the additional advertising, industry sources said.

Aussie airmail slowed

The U.S. Postal Service last week warned its customers mailing to Australia that a strike of Australian air traffic controllers will delay airmail destined for that country.

Postal officials say 25,000 pounds of airmail for Australia is now being held in Honolulu because air traffic cannot get through. The Australian Postal Administration has informed the U.S. Postal Service it cannot accept airmail now because of the strike.

Let's call a halt NOW

It is time for Congress to tell the environmental extremists that the nation must have the coal with which this country is blessed in order to meet the energy challenge, and for them to back off gracefully before they are shoved off and out of the way by citizens who are interested in the on going of this great country.

This whole business of allowing the environmentalists to slow down the economic progress of the nation and to even threaten its security is ridiculous.

We most certainly will go along with Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., who last Thursday severely criticized legislation under consideration in the Senate stiffening regulations on surface mining and challenged proponents of the measure to justify the further regulation of coal when the country is faced with energy shortages.

"Without any doubt," Tower said, "the strip mining bill will reduce the nation's ability to provide energy which we so desperately need."

At the same time the administration has urged efforts to increase energy resources, Tower said, such restrictions on the development of coal could continue our dependence on Arab oil.

He said further that it will diminish the nation's ability to recover through surface mining that coal which is most easily obtained, at prices at which Americans can afford to pay.

He explained that the bill will have an adverse impact on the Western regions of the nation and "place in the hands of Washington bureaucrats the regulations of surface mining operations which the states have adequately maintained."

The senior Texas senator pointed out that state regulation always has served well. He noted also that Texas in 1975 passed a stringent but reasonable surface mining law which won the praise of both utility companies and environmental interest groups, and both producers and consumers of coal.

"The Texas law has worked well," Tower said, "yet proponents seem bent on scrapping it and those of 37 other states which are doing the job of producing energy and protecting the environment right now."

Some of those bureaucrats and members of Congress who are so violently opposed to strip mining should visit the strip mining operations conducted by Texas Electric Service Co. and associates who are doing a superb job in East Texas in mining lignite with which to produce energy, and then putting the surface back in better shape than it was before the mining operations started. It is a fabulous piece of work.

We have seen this East Texas operation, which offers proof that the opponents don't know what they are talking about. All they have to do is come and see for themselves. But they apparently are not interested in that. They appear to be interested only in slow-down, which could lead to eventual ruin.

It is time to call a halt to the efforts of those persons and groups who are bent on doing everything possible to strengthen this nation's dependence on expensive foreign oil for its energy requirements.

Senator Tower, who is an authority on the subject, explained that when Congress enacts statutes which supplant state law, "there are reams of testimony of how the states have failed to live up to their responsibilities."

He said the hearings on the present bill had produced no such evidence which would warrant a federal law to supercede those of the states.

Barring the presentation of evidence which justified such federal intervention into states authority, Tower said he would continue to oppose such legislation.

He is as right as he can be in his convictions. More power to him and others as they wage this particular battle in the very best interests of the nation as a whole.

Pot said to be making headway

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Slowly, the United States is coming to terms with marijuana, a drug that has been used by 36 million Americans and, indeed, has become third in popularity only behind tobacco and alcohol.

The White House narcotics adviser, Dr. Peter Bourne, has sampled pot. In fact, it has been smoked inside the First Family by Jack Carter and, before him, Jack Ford.

In the privacy of their executive suites, the tobacco tycoons would dearly love to legalize marijuana and take over the $5 billion trade. But the politicians aren't sure the country is quite ready for this.

House Narcotics Chairman Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., is willing to take the first step. He is convinced the federal government does not and cannot enforce the law against minor marijuana offenders. And criminal penalties against those who smoke an occasional joint, in the Carter Administration's opinion, "are more harmful than marijuana abuse," itself.

But some lawmakers, like Los Angeles police chief Edward Davis, want to continue arresting those who possess even small amounts of pot. "I have not heard that God has retracted the Ten Commandments merely because mankind often fails to live up to them," he contends.

At the other extreme, the chief spokesman for the pot smokers, Keith Stroup, wants to legalize marijuana totally—a position that would run counter to U.S. obligations under the International Convention on Narcotics Drugs.

Wolff's committee, meanwhile, has just finished drafting an exhaustive, 70-page study of the marijuana pros and cons. Although it hasn't yet been released to the public, we have obtained a copy.

"At present," reports the document, "the Drug Enforcement Administration is not arresting individuals for possession of small amounts of marijuana for personal use." The Justice Department believes that keeping such laws on the books undermines "the public's faith and confidence in the equal enforcement of criminal justice," the study contends.

Yet the study advocates heavy fines and jail sentences for those who smuggle and sell large amounts of marijuana. Backyard production would also remain outlawed, because the controversial weed can't easily be grown in quantities of less than an ounce.

The confidential congressional report also takes up the medical question. A single government agency, the National Institute on Drug Abuse, is spending $4 million a year studying the effect of marijuana on health. Yet the researchers are still uncertain.

They generally, but not unanimously, agree that an occasional joint probably does no great harm to the health. But heavy usage, some doctors believe, can cause brain, gene and other damage. Other doctors

MEXICAN MARXISTS:

They may join forces for 1982 election

By WILLIAM GIANDONI
Copley News Service

Mexico has the makings of a new Marxist political party.

At least, the Mexican Communist Party (PCM) and the dissident wing of the Socialist Popular Party (PPS) have announced that their central committees have started meeting jointly and that they are going to work toward "unifying themselves organically."

While the announcement initially was interpreted as indicating the PCM and the self-styled "majority" of the PPS had merged, Arnoldo Martinez Verdugo, secretary general of the Communist Party, denied that was the case.

But he and Alejandro Gascon Mercado, the Socialist leader, made it clear that they consider their first joint meeting was "an important step in the process of integration that may group all the Marxist-Leninists and partisans of socialism in Mexico."

However, there now seems to be some doubt that the Mexican Workers Party (PMT), the "Democratic Tendency" of the electrical workers union and the Revolutionary Socialist Party (PSR) will align themselves with the more orthodox Marxists.

It is not for any lack of revolutionary zeal. Quite the contrary. But some young leftists fear that the Communists and Popular Socialists might discriminate against their "neo-anarchist" leanings. Too, some seem to hope they may achieve government recognition as a political party without joining the larger group.

The possibility exists. Shortly after they were considering formation of one big party, to get around the electoral law requirement that a party have at least 75,000 members to qualify for a place on the ballot, the Federal Electoral Commission announced that it planned public hearings on changes in electoral laws. Talk by the interior minister aroused hopes that the membership requirements might be dropped, and that all political parties might be recognized officially.

While the Communists and Popular Socialists seemed to realize that that would only perpetuate the extreme fragmentation of Marxism in Mexico, some of the younger leftists appear to think they might be better off going it alone.

The Communists and Socialists presumably are working for the formation of a Marxist Party that would be able to participate in the 1982 Mexican presidential election, with some chance of success.

Up to now, no representative of an avowedly Marxist Party has ever won direct election to an important office in Mexico without government help.

That is what split the Socialist Popular Party in 1976. The then acknowledged head of PPS, Jorge Cruickshank Garcia, who was running for the senate from Oaxaca state, accepted the defeat of the PPS gubernatorial candidate in Nayarit state in return for support of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) for his own candidacy.

Senator Cruickshank still considers himself PPS secretary general, but Gascon Mercado insists that the PPS "majority" follows him.

Estimates are that none of the Marxist groups, except the Popular Socialists, have more than 10,000 members. The Communist Party never has been able to satisfy the 75,000 member requirement for official recognition.

INSIDE REPORT:

Mideast's entire political fabric ripped to shreds

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Not only have the odds on a new Middle East war escalated with the surprise election of hard-line Israeli nationalist Menachem Begin and his right-wing Likud party, but the region's entire political fabric has been ripped to shreds.

Begin, blessed with steely purpose and singleminded devotion to a "greater" Israel, has kept the lights burning into the wee hours at the White House. One reason is the suddenly escalated odds on a new Arab-Israeli war, but there are other disturbing political factors at work that may undermine U.S. Middle East policy:

— Moderate Arab leaders, such as Syria's President Hafez Assad, Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, Jordan's King Hussein and Saudi Arabia's King Khalid, now have their political necks in the noose. They will be challenged to turn militant and retrieve Israeli-occupied Arab lands, or face overthrow at home. — The brilliant Arab world from Soviet influence is now in tatters. With the possibility of a fifth Arab-Israeli war looming, President Carter is likely to come under irresistible pressures from American Jewish leaders — backed by Congress — to stop all U.S. military aid to the Arabs. This will only push them back to the Soviet Union. — The careful settlement formulations of Mr. Carter, spelled out in greater public detail than any predecessor ever dared, may now have turned to ashes. The prospective Israeli prime minister will never accept a Palestinian "homeland" west of the Jordan River and will not relinquish the Palestinian West Bank.

Begin's commitment to an enlarged Israel is not to be doubted. A man of great self-confidence and deadly serious purpose, he has always seemed immune from foreign pressures. He would not likely be moved even if Mr. Carter could somehow impose on Congress his own desire for moderate Israeli policies.

That prospect seems dim. Some Mideast experts in the Carter administration doubted that — even if Defense Minister Shimon Peres had kept the Labor party in power by winning Tuesday's election — the president could have persuaded Congress to accept his even-handed policies. That doubt stemmed from the ease with which Mr. Carter was forced to retreat from his arms-export control plans by the pro-Israel congressional bloc. Begin's wishes for an enlarged Israel have been spelled out frequently, not only in his important book "The Revolt" but in interviews such as one we had with him in the spring of 1975. On that occasion, he told us Israel would "never" descend from the Golan Heights, "never" retreat from the Jordan River and "never" yield Sharm el-Sheikh controlling the waterway into the Gulf of Aqaba.

But that fails to capture the essence of Begin, who told us with forceful clarity: "Zionism is one of the greatest movements in history, but make no mistake: we don't want to be a protected state, the way we used to be protected Jews — Schutz Juden. Just give us the tools and we will defend ourselves. If it were not for this little country, this whole region would have been taken over by the Soviets. The enemy is at our doorstep, and you should be worried not that we are asking too many arms from you, but too little."

Many Israeli politicians talk tough before elections, or to create bargaining positions that can later be modified. But Begin is not one of them. A most feared terrorist against British rule of Palestine before 1948, Begin always opposed partition of Palestine between Jews and Arabs. He always demanded all of Palestine west of the Jordan River, based on the Biblical history of the Jewish tribes of Israel.

Begin's claim that Israel should get sole credit for the expulsion of Soviet influence from Arab territories rests on his claim of Israel's military prowess. Therefore, Begin implies, the U.S. owes Israel support for its present boundaries.

Many U.S. experts, however, argue it was the intimate U.S.-Israeli connection that gave Moscow its entree as patron of the Arabs to counter Washington as patron of Israel. To counteract this, the U.S. began serious courtship of Arab leaders following the 1973 war. Even earlier, the Russians had been expelled from Egypt and their influence was waning in Syria and even Iraq — all unrelated to Israeli military might.

The delicate U.S. maneuver now seems doomed unless Begin makes an astonishing and wholly uncharacteristic about-face. Mr. Carter is confronted with the most difficult undertaking of his youthful presidency — fashioning a Mideast policy that at the same time can fulfill national needs of the U.S. and satisfy a new Begin government in Israel. That may be beyond his or anybody else's skill, which is why the odds on war are rising.

Canadian elections may affect Trudeau future

By KENNETH REICH
The Los Angeles Times

QUEBEC CITY — Six Canadian parliamentary by-elections this Tuesday in parts of Quebec and Prince Edward Island may have a direct effect on the future of Liberal Party Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau and an indirect effect on the Quebec independence movement.

Five of the elections are in Quebec, where since Nov. 15 the Parti Quebecois, committed to separating this predominantly French-speaking province from the rest of Canada, has been in power. Its leader, provincial Prime Minister Rene Levesque, has said he will hold an independence referendum within the next two years. Although the P.Q., as it is widely known here, does not involve itself in federal parliamentary election campaigns, the results of this week's contests will be carefully watched to see if there is any spillover of P.Q. sentiments against the federal Liberal Party candidates in what traditionally have been Liberal strongholds.

In the background is the complicated maneuvering now under way over the date and the circumstances of the referendum on independence. A recent public opinion survey for the first time seemed to put a "yes" vote on this question within reach of the separatists, reporting that 3 of 10 Quebec voters favored independence, 4 of 10 were opposed and 3 of 10 were undecided. It should be noted, however, that even a "Yes" vote would not necessarily mean that Canada would break up, although it would vastly increase the possibility.

Trudeau and his government are strongly committed to the unity of Canada. Should the Liberal Party do well in this week's tests, Trudeau might be induced to call an early national election in order to solidify his and the unity position well in advance of the Quebec referendum.

But should the Progressive Conservative Party, a normally Ontario and Western-based group, make serious inroads in Tuesday's voting, it would be taken as a sign of Trudeau weakness, and would undoubtedly delay the national election, which the governing party is not required to call before 1979.

The young conservative leader, Joe Clark of Alberta, while a believer in Canadian unity too, has been openly appealing for the support of P.Q. voters in the five Quebec elections. Some observers believe Levesque would like to call his referendum in the atmosphere of uncertainty that might follow a Trudeau fall from power.

The situation in this week's elections is clouded, however, by the fact that as in most elections, local issues rather than national ones could well prove decisive and that the official P.Q. hand is largely hidden. Levesque and his ministers here are endorsing no one.

In addition, the four most significant elections — two each in the Montreal and Quebec City areas — are taking place in districts where the national Liberals have been so strong in the past that they might still retain their seats if their majorities were greatly reduced. Even the size of the turnout may be subject to disputed analysis, since some P.Q. supporters disdain participating in federal elections.

Despite all these uncertainties, both Trudeau and Clark have been campaigning intensively in the various districts, or ridings as they are known here, and appearing in Quebec City Thursday Trudeau startled listeners by declaring, "One way or another my head is on the block."

Some observers say that the prime minister would never have indicated he felt so much was at stake were he not extremely confident of a positive outcome Tuesday.

In the view of many, Trudeau, who has been prime minister since 1968, was on the skids until the separatists won the Quebec provincial election. Since, then, he seems, if the polls are to be believed, to have recovered his political fortunes, due to the apparent belief among many English-speaking Canadians that as a three-fourths French Canadian himself, he is the figure who has the best chance to preserve national unity.

Begin rejects Carter proposals

By RUDY ABRAMSON
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Israel's prime minister-to-be Sunday described President Carter's Middle East peace proposals as a revival of a plan offered in 1969 by then-Secretary of State William P. Rogers and supported by no one in Israel except a few Communists.

In an interview conducted in Tel Aviv, Menachem Begin, leader of the suddenly powerful right-wing Likud Party, lived up to his reputation as a hardliner, sternly rejecting the key elements of U.S. peace strategy.

He spoke on the ABC television program Issues and Answers about the time President Carter was telling an audience at Notre Dame University that he expects Israel will withdraw from some of the occupied territory west of the Jordan River.

Begin indicated quite the contrary. He told American interviewers there is a national consensus in his country against a return to pre-1967 borders. When the Rogers proposal was offered in 1969, Begin said, then-Prime Minister Golda Meir said it would be treasonous for an Israeli leader to accept it.

"On this we have a national consensus," he said. It is not only the point of view of the Likud, but of all the parties except the Communist, to reject unconditionally and under any circumstances that proposal. After he forms a new Israeli government, he said he expects to accept an invitation from President Carter for a personal meeting.

No invitation has been extended, but President Carter has indicated he expects to invite Begin to the United States once he becomes prime minister. "Why should there be any conflict between us and the United States?" Begin asked when interviewers pressed him on the issue of the West Bank territory.

"I will explain to President Carter. He knows perfectly well the Bible. I understand he knows the Bible about by heart. So he knows to whom this country belongs."

Begin refused to speak of Judea and Samaria, the ancient Biblical lands that were part of Jordan before the 1967 war, as occupied territory, or to use the word annexation to refer to Israel's determination to hold onto the land on the West Bank. "You don't annex your own country," he said. "It's our land."

'Forgotten women' launch new battle in Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — The "forgotten women" of World Wars I and II are launching a new battle in Congress in an effort to gain veterans benefits the government has refused to give them.

The biggest campaign is being conducted by former Womens Army Service Pilots, or WASPs — women who flew military planes over 60 million miles during World War II. A smaller group is made up of women who enlisted in the Army Signal Corps in World War I and often served just behind the front lines.

Witnesses supporting veterans benefits for the women will testify Wednesday before the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee.

Rep. Ray Roberts, D-Tex., chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, also plans hearings later for those groups and for others seeking similar recognition from the government. Others trying to win benefits include women who served in the Merchant Marine, Red Cross and the Women's Auxiliary Corps, the original WACS.

GI educational benefits have expired, but the women could claim government pensions and receive care at Veterans Administration hospitals. They also could apply for low-interest GI home loans.

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Calif., who backs the cause of the World War I women, estimates that between 40 and 60 of them are still alive.

Cleaners clean up

DETROIT (AP) — Maintenance men made quite a haul when they cleaned the one-acre reflecting pool in the lobby of the new Detroit Plaza hotel in Renaissance Center.

Opening day visitors to the $337-million Center, which is the keystone in the program to revitalize the downtown area, tossed $220 in quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies into the hotel's pool.

Trip said helpful

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Gov. Patrick J. Lucey said Sunday his weekend trip to Texas seems to have eased some of the uneasiness about President Carter's having nominated him as ambassador to Mexico.

Lucey, intending to resign July 1 as Wisconsin governor, said he anticipates no problems over getting confirmation from the Senate, whose Foreign Relations Committee begins its confirmation hearing Tuesday.

The governor talked Saturday in San Antonio with Mexican-American spokesmen at a meeting arranged by Rep. Robert Krueger, D-Tex., who had said in April that Carter should have nominated a Hispanic American.

"I sensed their disappointment that President Carter's choice for ambassador to Mexico was not one of their own," Lucey told newsmen while attending college commencement exercises in Milwaukee.

They seemed "reasonably satisfied" after the meeting, he said.

Topics included heroin traffic across the border, trade relations and illegal border crossings by migrant farm hands, subjects which he said may come up in the Senate hearing.

Reagan 'featured performer' at GOP gatherings

By RICHARD BERGHOLZ
The Los Angeles Times

GARFIELD, N.J. — The pitchers of beer were on the tables at the Russian Orthodox Church here, the plates of Polish sausage and chicken and Italian pasta had just been served.

On the cultural center stage, the "Great Swamp Dixieland Band" had just given way to the featured performer — Ronald Reagan.

The former California governor, wearing his conservative dark suit with the tiny American flag emblem on his lapel, was doing what he has been doing for the better part of the past two years — exhorting the Republican faithful into the paths of conservatism, and perhaps into his chase for the presidency.

At age 66, still somewhat embittered by his narrow defeat for the party's presidential nomination last year, Reagan was taking his message to the heart of New Jersey's tightly organized Republican strength — Bergen County.

Last year, Reagan tried desperately to crack then-President Gerald R. Ford's grip on the New Jersey Republican machine. He failed, getting only four of the state's 67 nominating convention delegates.

Now he is back on the tour of Eastern Seaboard states, determined to make political inroads, on the machines that went against him last year.

On the stage with Reagan is young Tom Bruinooge, a Bergen County attorney who battled tooth and nail for Reagan last year against the Ford organization.

Twenty-four hours earlier, it was the same type of Reagan operation in Rhode Island, where the Ford organization got all 19 convention delegates last year. Reagan was backed for a recouping effort now, designed to crack the organizational strength of the so-called moderates.

Reagan's No. 1 cheerleader and sponsor was Jim Nugent, the Rhode Island businessman who is a conservative leader in the tiny state where Republican winners, few and far between, usually travel the ideological middle.

Sunday night, Reagan plunged into

New York state Republican ranks, which generally were hostile to him last year, by appearing at a Buffalo GOP fundraiser at the invitation of a Reagan supporter, Rep. Jack Kemp of Buffalo.

The fact that Reagan is here testifies to his unquenched desire to make his voice heard in the party councils, and to his continuing drawing power as a 'speaker.'

PHILLIP HARDBERGER of San Antonio, Tex., gets a kiss from his wife Linda as he steps out of his single-engine plane, named appropriately spirit of San Antonio, upon his arrival at Le Bourget Airfield in France Saturday. The lawyer arrived at the historic airfield about two hours after two other Americans, who flew the same route as Lindbergh in 1927, arrived. Hardberger's flying time was 42 hours, 12 minutes. (AP Laser-photo)

Carter sends Congress message urging protection of environment

By FRANK CORMIER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter sent Congress a special message today urging stronger enforcement of existing environmental safeguards without adding significantly to federal spending. "The primary need today is not for new comprehensive statutes," Carter wrote, "but for sensitive administration and energetic enforcement of the ones we have." He pledged "firm and unsparring support from the executive branch" for efforts to combat air and water pollution, control pesticides, preserve wilderness areas and the handling of other environment-related programs.

produce still more new jobs, often where they are needed most." The message went to Congress shortly after Carter signed into law a bill he said will give individual taxpayers $5 billion of direct and immediate relief, with lower tax-withholding rates expected to take effect next month. In signing tax legislation that was part of his once-broader plan to stimulate the nation's economy, Carter told his White House Rose Garden audience of congressional bigwigs: "One of the most pleasant things for a President or the Congress to do is reduce taxes." If a measure can boost the economy at the same time, he said, that was an added bonus. Over the next 28 months, the new law will produce estimated tax reductions of $34.1 billion. At the same ceremony, Carter also signed a measure authorizing $225 million in grants and loans to help drought-stricken Western communities drill deeper wells, build viaducts and deal in other ways with the effects of the prolonged dry spell. Carter noted that all projects under the drought relief law must be completed by next April, which he saw as a harbinger of speedy assistance. The President took pains to acknowledge the presence of some key Congress members who helped expedite passage of both bills and actually turned over his microphone to Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., of the House Ways and Means Committee and Sen. Quentin Burdick, D-N.D. Ullman said he thought dealings between Congress and the White House on the tax measure "demonstrated that the President has flexibility." He said he thought the new law "established a pattern of working relationships between Congress and the President that should serve as a prototype for a lot of legislation coming down the pike." The ceremony preceded the dispatching to Congress by Carter of a major new environmental program stressing enforcement without a lot of

Begin hospitalized; heart attack ruled out

By STEPHEN GOLDSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Menachem Begin, expected to become Israel's next prime minister, was admitted to a hospital cardiac section early today for observation. But his doctor said Begin had not suffered a heart attack. Begin, 63, suffered a heart attack in late March and was hospitalized for three weeks. He was released on April 13 and was active in the Likud bloc's final drive to victory at the polls last Tuesday.

attack, which he said "was not severe." Begin appeared, thin and weakened in the last days of the campaign but he maintained a driving pace, enduring a lot of excitement in the past week. If Begin were unable to continue at the head of his five-party Likud bloc, there undoubtedly would be a period of political confusion. The man who ran in second spot on Likud's list is Simcha Ehrlich. But Ehrlich is from the Liberal party, not Begin's Herut party, and there was no assurance the other Likud members would accept Ehrlich.

Squid may be popular

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — If University of California researcher Pual Singh has his way, Americans will soon be eating—and enjoying—squid. Although squid is very popular in Europe and Japan, it has never caught on here. And Singh believes it is because squid, a gooey glob with tentacles, does not look appetizing. So Singh went ahead and, with the help of three graduate students, invented a squid-squeezing machine which would clean and turn the creature into white filets, no different in appearance than other fish steaks.

Court upholds convictions

By RICHARD CARELLI
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today upheld the Watergate cover-up convictions of former Atty. Gen. John D. Mitchell and onetime White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman. Mitchell and Haldeman have remained free pending the outcome of this appeal. Ehrlichman already is in prison. The court's action today means Mitchell and Haldeman likely will be imprisoned soon. The justices rejected the claims by the three powerful officials of former President Richard M. Nixon's administration that the three-month trial that ended in their convictions Jan. 1, 1975 was unfair. The justices made no comment in refusing to review the case. There were no recorded dissents, but Justice William H. Rehnquist noted that he took no part in deciding the case. On April 21, National Public Radio reported that the court had voted 5-3 at its private conference April 15 to turn down the appeals but that Chief Justice Warren E. Burger held up announcing the decision in an attempt to muster enough votes to grant review. The votes of four justices are needed to grant review of such cases. Lawyers for the cover-up defendants asked the court for permission to argue that the justices should reverse the convictions because of the news leak. The attorneys said the report had tainted the court's deliberations, adversely affecting the rights of their clients. The court denied that request on May 2.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Benefits of saunas

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've got a lot of friends who are big on saunas. They all say a sauna makes you feel wonderful and is really good for your health. They have been urging me to try it, but I worry about what the effect of that dry heat might be. I'm 48 and in pretty decent shape—I jog, play tennis. However, I'd like to make sure saunas are indeed safe before I get sold on them.—Keith G. claims about the health virtues of saunas: that they will cure colds, help mend injuries, take off fat. There is little evidence that saunas have any effect on diseases, and the weight you lose in a sauna is just water that will be regained almost immediately.
The sauna does have one merit—it's relaxing.
A final note of caution, though. If you ever feel dizzy or get a headache in a sauna, get out right away. And before taking up this Finnish habit, you—and anyone else over 35 or with a health problem—should check with the doctor.
Dear Dr. Solomon: The pediatrician prescribed eye drops for my three-year-old daughter. This will be a long-term medication, and every time I approach her with the bottle in my hand, she screams. It is a daily struggle. Do you have any hints.—A.D.
Dear A.D.: Here is the best method for you to give eye drops without help: Sit on the floor or a flat surface. Place your child's head between your thighs with the arms underneath, then close your legs over the child's trunk and legs. She will be immobilized while you may use both hands to lift the lid and drop in the drops. You ought to try talking to her calmly first, of course.

There are also precautions that even the healthiest person should observe: You can faint if you go into a sauna direct from vigorous exercise; cool off first. Also, don't take a sauna right after a meal or when you have been drinking or if you are sleepy. And do not stay in a sauna more than 15 minutes at any one time.
There have been many unfounded

Reagan 'featured performer' at GOP gatherings

By RICHARD BERGHOLZ
The Los Angeles Times

GARFIELD, N.J. — The pitchers of beer were on the tables at the Russian Orthodox Church here, the plates of Polish sausage and chicken and Italian pasta had just been served.

On the cultural center stage, the "Great Swamp Dixieland Band" had just given way to the featured performer — Ronald Reagan.

The former California governor wearing his conservative dark suit with the tiny American flag emblem on his lapel, was doing what he has been doing for the better part of the past two years — exhorting the Republican faithful into the paths of conservatism, and perhaps into his chase for the presidency.

At age 66, still somewhat embittered by his narrow defeat for the party's presidential nomination last year, Reagan was taking his message to the heart of New Jersey's tightly organized Republican strength — Bergen County.

Last year, Reagan tried desperately to crack then-President Gerald R. Ford's grip on the New Jersey Republican machine. He failed, getting only four of the state's 67 nominating convention delegates.

Now he is back on the tour of Eastern Seaboard states, determined to make political inroads on the machines that went against him last year.

On the stage with Reagan is young Tom Bruinooge, a Bergen County attorney who battled tooth and nail for Reagan last year against the Ford organization.

Twenty-four hours earlier, it was the same type of Reagan operation in Rhode Island, where the Ford organization got all 19 convention delegates last year. Reagan was backed for a recouping effort now, designed to crack the organizational strength of the so-called moderates.

Reagan's No. 1 cheerleader, and sponsor was Jim Nugent, the Rhode Island businessman who is a conservative leader in the tiny state where Republican winners, few and far between, usually travel the ideological middle.

Sunday night, Reagan plunged into

New York state Republican ranks, which generally were hostile to him last year, by appearing at a Buffalo GOP fundraiser at the invitation of a Reagan supporter, Rep. Jack Kemp of Buffalo.

The fact that Reagan is here testifies to his unquenched desire to make his voice heard in the party councils, and to his continuing drawing power as a "speaker."

Nicklaus nabs crown in Memorial tourney

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Jack Nicklaus finished off a round of one-der-par 71 in the Monday morning dew and, some 21 hours after he'd started the final 18 holes of play, won his own, weather-plagued Memorial Golf Tournament.

Nicklaus, prime mover behind the tournament that seems destined for major championship status and designer of the storm-lashed Muirfield Village Golf Club course, tried to play down the anti-climax of a daytime finish by calling his 63rd career triumph "one of my most important achievements in golf."

The Golden Bear parred the three holes he had to play Monday and finished 72 holes over the beautifully manicured monster he created from the woods and fields he hunted as a boy with a total of 281, two in front of Hubert Green, the only man who had a chance to catch him over the final few holes that were completed Monday morning.

Green finished with a round of 69 and a 283 total.

The day-late finish was made necessary when a third line of violent spring storms swept through suburban Columbus, Ohio in the gathering gloom of early evening Sunday and, at 8 p.m., EDT, forced a postponement until Monday of the completion of the round. Only 10 men were stranded on the course and had to return.

Bobby Wadkins, the longshot alternate who was second, two strokes back of Nicklaus, when national television coverage ended Sunday, collapsed completely when play resumed. He double bogeyed the 11th hole, taking two strokes to get out of the wet grass behind the green, bogeyed the next two holes and finished with an 81 and a tie for 11th at 290.

Masters champion Tom Watson was third with 71-285, four back of the winning Nicklaus and not a factor in the title chase Monday.

Lou Graham was the only other player to break par for 72 holes over the 7,101 yards of rolling, wooded hills Nicklaus turned into a course that drew unabashed praise from the elite, invitational field as one of the world's finest. Graham shot a closing 70 for 287, one under par.

Those matching par 288 were Fuzzy Zoeller and Chi Chi Rodriguez. Rodriguez finished off a 69 and Zoeller an erratic 71 before play was postponed Sunday.

It was Nicklaus' third victory of the season, a total that is matched only by Watson, and the 63rd official triumph of his unmatched career, putting him alone in second on the all-time winning list behind Sam Snead's 84. Nicklaus had been tied with Ben Hogan for second.

He collected $45,000 from the purse of $225,000 and became the first man to go past $3 million in career earnings. He now has $202,041 for the year and $3,010,253 for his professional career that started in 1962. Arnold Palmer is second on the career list with $1,750,376.

picked up his sixth victory with no losses as he scattered eight Aggie hits before leaving the game in the sixth after suffering muscle spasms in his back. Nickey Reichenbach hurled the final three innings.

David Piczynski suffered his second loss against six victories in his four-inning stint as Aggie pitcher.

A&M still stands an excellent chance of an at-large berth in the NCAA finals because of its winning the regular season SWC baseball crown.

Whitworth takes LPGA tournament

JAMESBURG, N.J. (AP) — Like good wine, Kathy Whitworth gets better with age.

The 37-year-old Texan uncoiled a vintage clutch play Sunday that has made her the LPGA tour's all-time money winner, firing a 67 to win the LPGA Classic with an 11-underpar 202.

It was her third win of the year, tops on the tour. She also heads the 1977 money list.

"I never would have thought I'd get this good of a start," the 18-year veteran said. "I don't know what to attribute it to maybe it's just a better attitude."

She says she's playing as aggressively as ever—and that's what she did in taking a onestroke lead into Sunday's final round.

Miss Whitworth appeared to put the 54-hole event out of everyone's reach when she birdied four of her first six holes at the 6,056-yard par-71 Forsgate Country Club course.

Donna Caponi Young, who managed a 69 to finish second with an eight-under-205, made the only challenge after Miss Whitworth built a six-stroke lead through 13 holes.

When the leader bogeyed 14 after hitting a trap, Mrs. Young, playing behind her, sunk 10-foot birdie putts on 14 and 15 to cut the lead to three. "I thought if I kept the pressure on, Kathy would falter a little," Mrs. Young said.

The challenger missed a birdie putt on 16 and when she heard Miss Whitworth had hit par on 17 and 18, she said, "I knew it was all over then."

Sylvia Bertolacini finished a distant third at 209 and Sandra Post and Mary Lou Crocker trailed at 210.

Joanne Carner finished alone at 211, while Jane Blalock and Kathy Postlewait had one-under-par 212. Jerilyn Britz finished at even-par 213.

"It helped a lot to get ahead early," Miss Whitworth said of her 32 on the front nine.

Hillin qualafies

2nd car at Indy

Bobby Jones, a '35-year-old Indy rookie, qualified a second car for Midland businessman Bobby Hillin. Jones qualified on the final day, and will be in the 12th row.

During the first week of qualification, George Snider qualified a Hillin car for the fifth row.
