Dutch storm hijacked train

ASSEN, The Netherlands (AP) — Dutch security forces stormed a hijacked train and a village school in simultaneous actions at dawn Saturday in an attempt to free 55 hostages held for 20 days by Asian terrorists, Dutch officials said. There were unconfirmed reports of six persons killed at the train site.

Associated Press reporters at the scene said many people were seen coming out of the train and some stretchers were brought from the four coaches.

Five jet fighters buzzed the area near the train and dropped what appeared to be smoke bombs as police and army troops opened fire, the reporters said.

The Justice Ministry in The Hague, seat of the Dutch government, announced the rescue strikes took place simultaneously as the sun came up at 4:55 a.m. Saturday.

South Moluccan extremists, who sought Dutch support for their efforts to bring independence to their Pacific island homeland, seized more than 150 hostages in simultaneous raids in northern Holland the morning of May 23. After four days, the terrorists freed 105 school children and teacher

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — James Earl Ray, serving 99 years for the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., climbed over the wall of Brushy Mountain State Prison with six other prisoners Friday and escaped into the East Tennessee hills.

One prisoner was shot and recaptured immediately, authorities said, but Ray and the other five remained at large.

The escape was discovered at 8 p.m. EDT, a prison spokeswoman said. She said the prisoners scaled the wall with a makeshift ladder assembled from metal conduit, apparently using materials from the prison machine shop.

It was not known if the other prisoners — reported serving a total of 800 years among them — were shot, but the escape of the state's most famous prisoner touched off a manhunt by 125 prison guards, 10 state troopers, sheriff's officers from at least six counties and agents of the FBI and the Tennessee Bureau of Criminal Identification.

One of those who escaped, Johnny Hacker, like Ray, was serving 99 years for murder. It could not be determined immediately for what crimes the others were serving.

Troopers set up several roadblocks, but a prison spokesman said the fugitives headed over the back wall of the isolated prison and into the rugged, wooded mountains behind.

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said President Carter ordered Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell to offer whatever federal assistance was needed in the search for Ray.

Powell said Carter had ordered the Justice Department to give him a report Saturday morning on the progress of the search.

Ray's brother, Jerry, a night watchman at a golf course in suburban Chicago, said he had visited his brother about a week ago but said there was no talk of an escape attempt.

He said he doubted Ray had any outside help in the breakout and that he knew nothing of his brother's whereabouts.

Contacted at his home in Atlanta, the Rev. Martin Luther King Sr., speaking for the King family, said there would be no comment on Ray's escape.

Ray, 49, a Missouri prison fugitive when King was slain, was sentenced March 10, 1969 — his 41st birthday — on his plea of guilty to the slaying of King, a Nobel Prize-winning civil rights leader.

King was gunned down on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis on April 4, 1968. Ray was later arrested in London, where he had fled under an assumed name.

"We've got all our cars out looking for him," authorities in Morgan County, Campbell County and I'd say Fentress County, Anderson County, Knox County and all those around there have been notified," said Mike Wilson, a sheriff's deputy in neighboring Scott County.

Subcommittee to make public secret documents

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A House investigating subcommittee, overriding objections from Gulf Oil and the Canadian government, decided Friday to make public a package of 28 secret documents on the hellowcake cartel, an international producers' club which manipulated world uranium prices.

The documents cover secret meetings in 1972 and 1973 when three foreign governments and international uranium corporations, including Gulf, organized themselves to fix bids and limit production in order to drive up the price of hellowcake, the common term for uranium oxides, the raw fuel for nuclear power plants.

Lawyers from Gulf argued Friday in a closed session of the House Commerce Oversight Subcommittee chaired by Rep. John Moss (D-Calif.) that the internal memorandums and letters from their corporate files should be kept confidential because they represent "attorney-client" communications.

A letter from the State Department also forwarded the objections of Canada which helped initiate the cartel five years ago through its government-owned uranium company. The Canadian government enacted a law last fall aimed at halting U.S. anti-trust investigations into cartel documents originating in that country.

The subcommittee voted 11 to 0 to make the documents public at a hearing next week. Commerce Chairman Harley O. Staggers (D-W.Va.) was present for the vote, to discourage any thoughts of appealing the issue to the full committee.

The world price of uranium went from $6 a pound to $42 in subsequent years and the U.S. price eventually followed it, though industry circles still argue over how much the cartel contributed to that escalation.

Moss said the documents do show an impact on U.S. prices from the cartel activities and the subcommittee will pursue the question of whether future energy supplies might be subject to international manipulation if the United States expands its nuclear power industry.

Gulf, which fought release of the documents in federal court as well as before the subcommittee, said in a brief statement Friday: "We hope the documents will be responsibly reviewed in their totality. The release of the documents does not affect our position that Gulf violated no U.S. laws."

Gulf has acknowledged that it participated in the cartel through a subsidiary, Gulf Minerals Canada, but it contends that it was operating under directives from the Canadian government.

The cartel activities became the focus of billion-dollar lawsuits last year when Westinghouse had to default on its uranium-supply contracts with public utilities. About 20 public utilities are suing Westinghouse and Westinghouse is suing Gulf and 28 other companies, claiming that the cartel squeezed it out of the uranium market and drove up the price.

President says Congress bowed to lobby pressure

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter accused Congress Friday of bowing to the oil and auto lobbies when it junked key parts of his energy plan.

"The people of this country will be the ones to suffer if our hopes for an energy plan are thwarted," Carter declared. "They will be the ones who will pay for ... (the) special interest victories."

The President's statement was reported by White House Press Secretary Jody Powell, who stopped short of describing Carter as angry. But Powell, clearly angry himself, said of one subcommittee's 12-10 vote to remove price controls from natural gas:

"We will do our best to kill the damn thing."

Carter and congressional supporters said there still is a good chance that Congress would restore Carter's proposals.

"It is important to remember that it is early in the process, the full Congress has not yet acted," Powell said.

Rep. Thomas L. Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Ad Hoc Committee on Energy, said chances are excellent the House would ultimately overturn the committee's tax and natural gas deregulation actions, with one possible exception, the standby gasoline tax.

Ashley said the Thursday decisions by the House panels were tentative and preliminary, and the "battle is just beginning."

The White House was especially irked at the vote to decontrol natural gas prices.

According to Powell, Carter estimated the decontrol would cost consumers $86 billion over eight years.

Carter receives mixed reviews on B1 meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressional critics of the costly B1 bomber project said President Carter gave them the impression Friday that he will recommend at least limited production of the dart-shaped craft.

However, other senators and House members who met with Carter to voice their opposition to the B1 said the President gave no hint of his ultimate decision.

Reps. Robert Drinan, D-Mass., and Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., told reporters they sensed Carter was leaning in favor of the B1. Drinan also said the President talked about having secret information that presumably would influence his decision but Dellums said he heard no reference to secret information.

Rep. Bob Carr, D-Mich., also said he heard nothing to suggest Carter has a "secret reason" to support the $25 billion project.

Carter, who met Tuesday with congressional supporters of the B1, told the delegation he met with Friday that he had been studying the controversial bomber and wanted to hear conflicting views about it.

"Following this meeting," he said, "I will probably pretty much go into seclusion and study what the information is and make a decision. My inclination is to announce my decision before the end of the month."

Drinan emerged from the Cabinet Room session to report: "I think the President is leaning definitely to authorize it. He spoke very cryptically of secret information that is now available to them."

Carr, however, said Carter simply stated that as president "he now has access to CIA information" that he lacked as a candidate who once flatly opposed the B1. He said perhaps those who know Carter better "can tell by his blink rate or the way he twitches or scratches his ear lobe what's going on" but confessed he could not do so.

"I don't think he indicated at all that there is some new secret reason for us to go ahead with the B1," Carr added.

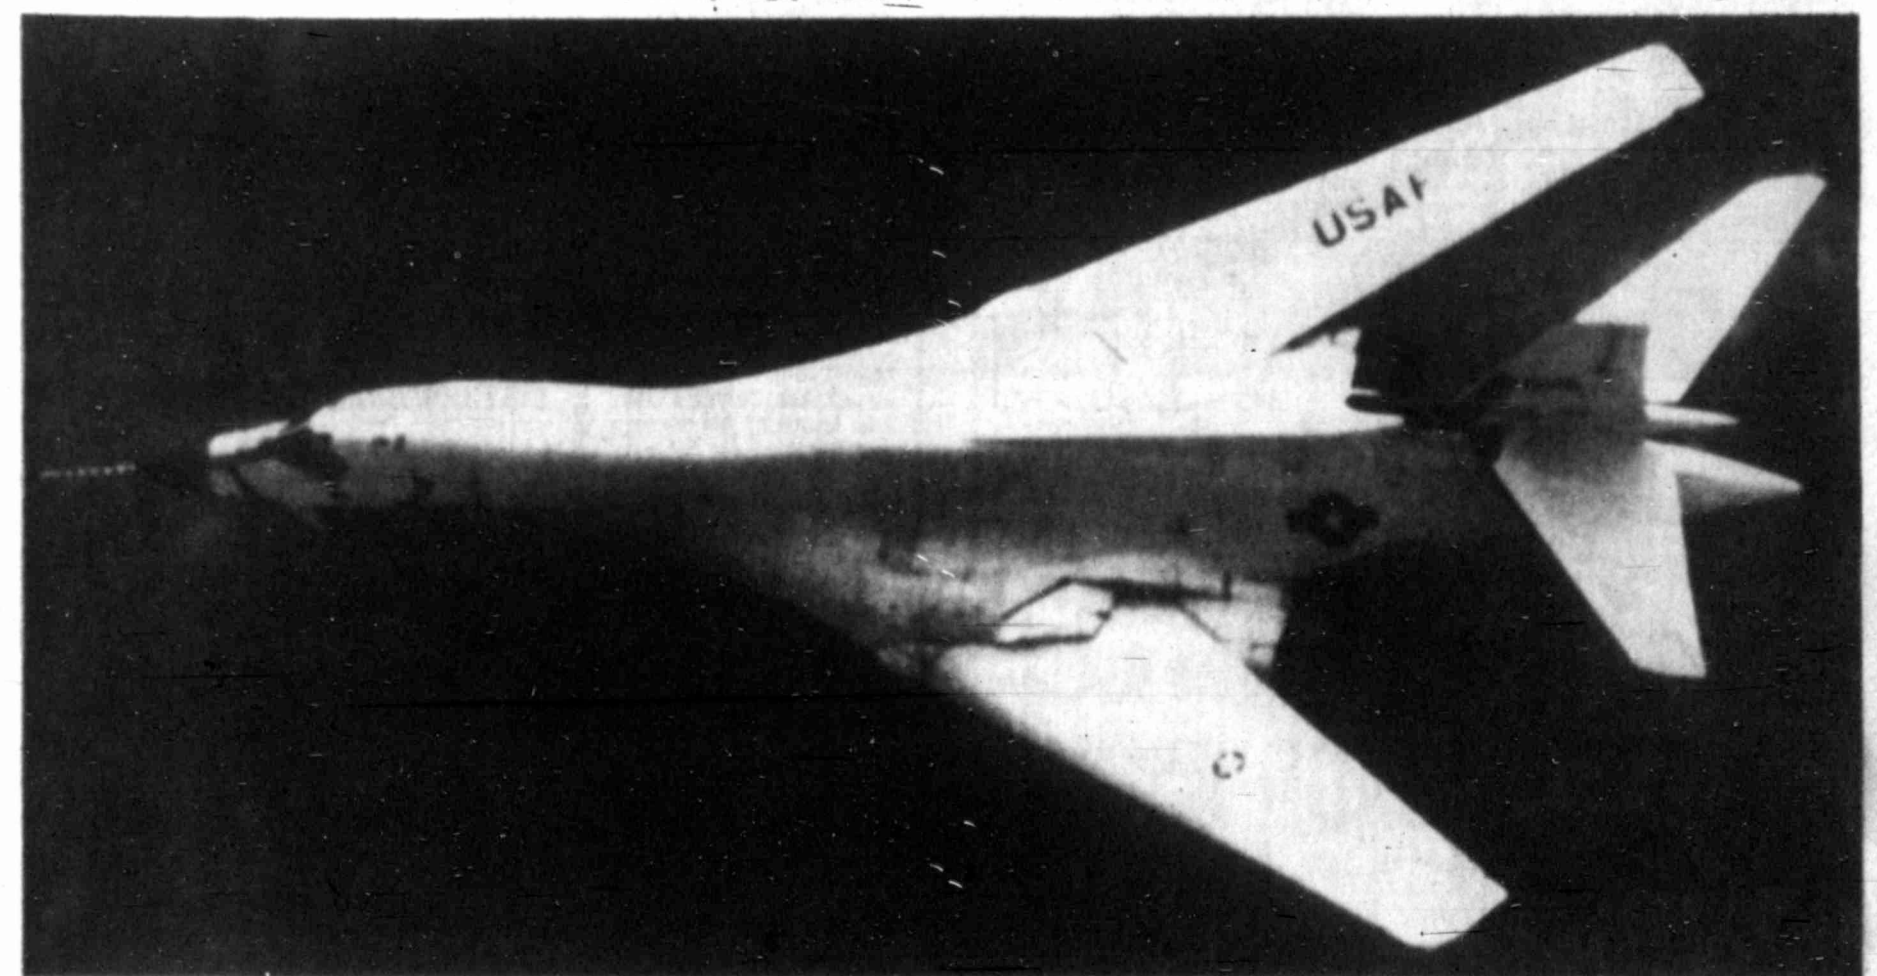

Rex Granum, Carter's deputy press secretary, said he could not confirm that the President talked about secret data because no one from the White House press office was present at the time.

Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., told reporters he made much of Carter's 1977 skepticism about the project.

"The point that I stressed with the President today," said McGovern, "is that the first line of defense of any country is the credibility of its institutions and the credibility in particular of the President."

McGovern said he urged Carter to stand by his 1977 opposition to the B1 "to protect his credibility."

Drinan and Sen. Wendell Anderson, D-Minn., reported the President said the B1 is supported by Defense Secretary Harold Brown, who was Air Force secretary in the early years of the project.

Air pollution crackdown extension approved

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Friday approved overwhelmingly a major revision of clean air rules, giving an extension from air quality standards to automakers and heavily urbanized areas of the nation.

The legislation, adopted 73 to 7, would give the auto industry until 1980 to meet tough new tailpipe emission standards now set to take effect with 1978 models.

The bill would give regions of the country unable to comply with clean air standards until 1987 in some cases to meet the guidelines — a 10-year extension. But to get that long a delay, states in which such industrialized cities are located would need their own air pollution controls.

The House passed similar legislation last month, but with more lax auto emission standards.

A House-Senate conference committee will have to reconcile the two versions, with automakers backing the House timetable for auto pollution and the Carter administration supporting the Senate version.

Before approving the bill, which completely rewrites the Clean Air Act of 1970, the Senate approved an amendment that could prohibit eastern utilities from buying coal from the West.

It adopted, 46 to 43, an amendment by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to give the government the authority to order power plants in the East to use local coal instead of buying cleaner-burning low-sulfur coals produced in the West.

Metzenbaum claimed that many eastern utilities intend to import western coal rather than install expensive pollution control equipment necessary to clean up emissions caused by burning the high-sulfur coal found in the East.

He said this threatens to increase unemployment in eastern coalfields.

The bill requires power plants that burn high-sulfur coal to install costly devices known as "scrubbers" to remove sulfur oxides from their smoke stacks. Utilities claim this will cause large increases in electric bills to consumers.

The Senate bill would give automakers a new timetable for meeting tough new auto-exhaust standards, putting off a 1978 deadline to 1980.

A bill passed last month by the House has the industry-sought timetable. A House-Senate conference committee will have to resolve these and other differences.

The Clean Air Act of 1970 called for a 90 per cent reduction in automobile tailpipe emissions. The deadline was first set for 1975, but the industry has already been granted three one-year extensions.

According to congressional testimony, the auto standards of the Senate bill would add between $300 and $350 to the sticker price of new cars beginning in 1980. The House-passed bill would add about $170, sponsors claimed.

While the standards only cover cars, the Senate-passed legislation would require the Environmental Protection Agency to establish emission rules for trucks and motorcycles and begin enforcing them in 1981.

Medical school censured

HOUSTON (AP) — The University of Texas Health Science Center at Houston was censured Friday by the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) for the dismissal of an associate professor of medicine.

The unanimous vote came Friday during the association's annual meeting in Madison, Wis.

The censure resulted from the 1975 firing of Dr. Said Assaf, who had also served as codirector of the center's Hematology Research Laboratory.

Dr. Truman Blocker, president of the health science center, called the AAUP action "unfortunate."

"I have reviewed the situation with regard to Dr. Assaf, not only with him but with members of the faculty. It is my opinion that we have followed the rules and regulations of the AAUP to the letter," Blocker said.

The vote by the 450 delegates attending the convention was based on a report issued last December by an AAUP investigating team.

The team concluded that the health science center violated the general principles of academic freedom.

Assaf joined the University of Texas medical facility in 1973 and his services were terminated in September 1975.

Since then, Assaf has filed three suits in federal court against the university system, claiming damages in excess of $8 million.

A federal court ordered that Assaf be put back on the payroll, and he draws his $31,000 annual salary although the university still refuses to let him teach or work in the laboratory.

John Davenport, director of public affairs for the health science center, said because of the legal actions involved "We cannot comment at this time."

Dr. Jordan Kurland, general secretary of the AAUP, said a vote of censure "tells the academic community that conditions relating to academic freedom and tenure have been judged by us to be seriously deficient."

With 78,000 members, the AAUP is the nation's largest organization of college and university instructors.

Aquifer ban seen as people's victory

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A city council vote prohibiting construction over the Edwards aquifer, San Antonio's only fresh water source, is being hailed by backers as a victory for the people over local developers.

But many leaders say the ban is the latest demonstration of an anti-business sentiment here and may cost the city millions of dollars in legal defense and lost jobs.

The council adopted the 18-month moratorium by a 6-4 vote Thursday, with all the majority coming from council members newly elected in April's municipal elections.

Developing interests were dealt a blow in those elections when all the candidates they supported were defeated.

The council imposed the moratorium over the objections of its planning commission, the city manager and the city attorney.

City Planning Commissioner William Dodds resigned after the vote, saying, "This is not government, but anarchy."

The complete building ban is intended to cover all areas of the aquifer and its drainage area over which the city has control. This is primarily the aquifer areas within the city or its five-mile radius of extra-territorial jurisdiction.

During the 18-month period, the city will not grant any zoning changes over the aquifer, will refuse to extend any city utilities to the area and will refuse to approve any housing subdivision or building plans in the region.

The 18-month period coincides with the city's wait for completion of a comprehensive aquifer study which is to pinpoint pollution problems that might result by development over the recharge zone.

When the study is completed, the council will decide what permanent action is needed to protect the underground water supply and its recharge area.

The new ban will involve primarily development on the city's affluent north side.

The council imposed the ban instead of other proposals that would have permitted regulated and restricted development while the aquifer study is being completed.

The vote Thursday was a victory for a coalition composed by the Aquifer Protection Association, a clean water group, and Communities Organized for Public Service (COPS), a citizens' group favoring inner city redevelopment and less north side growth.

City Atty. Jim Parker said up to $500 million in lawsuits by aquifer area property owners may be filed against the city as a result of the total ban on construction.

The city finance director said the suits, if filed, "would seriously jeopardize our ability to sell bonds. It could take us out of the bond market completely."

Holt Atherton, board chairman of the Greater San Antonio Chamber of Commerce, said one large industry already has canceled plans to locate here because of the political climate.

President disappoints Texas lass

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Nine-year-old Sandy Chandler wanted to help her mother get out of jail, so she spent all her savings on a trip to Washington to tell President Carter about her problem.

"But it was all a waste," the 55-pound sixth-grader said Friday after returning from the White House. "The only person I did not see was the President. He was too busy playing tennis."

There was a touch of bitterness in her words as she added: "I spent all my money to go to Washington and I don't think it was fair that the President did not see me. It is the government's fault that my mother is in that situation."

Sandy flew to Washington on Tuesday morning after buying a $114 one-way ticket from a travel agent and leaving a note to her older sister, Delilah, 20, who lives with her.

Delilah called police, but later Braniff Airlines officials called to tell her Sandy was in Washington.

Last October, Sandy's mother started serving a three-year sentence for bond-jumping. She's at the Federal Correctional Institute, a minimum security facility in Fort Worth.

The sentence, according to Delilah, stems from a series of incidents dating back to 1969 when the family lived in Arizona. Mrs. Chandler worked at a beauty college while on probation on a mail fraud conviction.

Delilah said her mother's troubles began when she testified before a grand jury in connection with a Mafia investigation. She said her mother was under special guard and testified as a government witness, but her testimony helped acquit two men.

When Mrs. Chandler's guard was removed she tried to file suit against the district attorney, but she was charged with perjury by omission, her daughter said. The family moved to Calgary, Alberta, and stayed there until 1975 when Mrs. Chandler returned to Houston on the advice of her attorney.

The move to Canada had constituted bond-jumping, and eventually Mrs. Chandler was sent to prison.

The elder daughter said she was not sure about the disposition of the perjury charges and federal officials available also were uncertain.

A few weeks ago, Sandy and her sister moved to Fort Worth to be close to their mother whom they visit several times a week.

"Sandy had been asking me what we could do to help mother," Delilah said. "I jokingly told her once that that she could write to the President. She is a very smart girl. She's only 9, but she is already in the sixth grade and gets nothing but As and Bs."

Sandy said she had heard of a young boy who had made his way to Alaska. "I thought if he could go to Alaska, I could go to Washington."

Braniff officials said they did not realize Sandy was traveling alone until she got to the airport in Washington. They then called her sister and flew her to Washington and took them both to the White House on Wednesday.

Rain runoff seen as source of pollution

HOUSTON (AP) — Rainwater runoff is being blamed as a major source of pollution for Houston-Galveston area streams, including the Houston Ship Channel.

A spokesman for the Houston-Galveston Area Council said the report means the next step is to develop methods of treatment and management of stormwater pollution. The Council, under provisions of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act, was required to make a study of what is termed "nonpoint sources of pollution."

Such sources, the report said, account for 61,800 pounds per day of organic pollutants.

For comparison, the report placed municipal treatment discharges at 79,000 pounds per day and industrial discharges at 32,500 pounds a day, based on 1975 studies.

Organic pollutants are those which require oxygen from streams to be decomposed. They include residual material from sewage treatment plants, petrochemicals, and plant debris.

Sniper still at large

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Two men remained in the hospital Friday while police and Potter County deputies searched for the sniper who put them there earlier in the day during a shooting spree.

The sniper fired away at a foreign car, a Continental Trailways bus and a private company shuttle van in three separate incidents within an 80-minute period.

"We never really had him pinned down," said deputy Randy Banks of the sniper who apparently used a vehicle to move around the city.

Police said L. D. Gafford, 30, of Amarillo was wounded in the shoulder when he was struck by a bullet as he rode a shuttle van owned by the Colorado Interstate Gas Co. at about 12:25 a.m.

He was reported in satisfactory condition at Northwest Texas Hospital.

Norman Keith, 49, of Amarillo, driver of the Continental Trailways bus, was taken to the hospital with glass fragments in his eyes after a bullet shattered the windshield of the bus.

The first shooting occurred shortly after midnight on U.S. 287 near the northern edge of Amarillo.

At 12:55 Lyall Brown of Canyon called police to report that two shots had struck the driver's door and trunk of his foreign car. He was not injured. The incident occurred near the intersection of farm roads 1912 and 2575, less than ten miles from the scene of first shooting.

Chief to run for mayor

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Police Chief B.G. "Pappy" Bond, saying he wants to make his "hometown a better place to live," Friday announced he would be a candidate for mayor in the city's Nov. 8 election.

Bond said, "I am convinced I can do as good a job, if not better, than any of the prospective candidates listed."

"I am not a monied man and I have no financial, property or business interests. I know what I can do. And my mind is made up."

Mayor Fred Hofheinz, 39, now in his second two-year term, recently said he would not seek reelection. The announcement came as a surprise to political observers who had predicted that Hofheinz could win a third term.

Brown supports Carter on Korea

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Gen. George Brown, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Friday supported President Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. ground troops from South Korea, but also testified it may not save any money.

"There is some risk involved but it is of an acceptable degree," Brown told a meeting of two House International Relations subcommittees. If Carter's program for a gradual withdrawal is carried out, Brown said, "war would not result from a rational decision" on the part of North Korea. He added that "we cannot account for irrational acts."

Under questioning by lawmakers, Brown said that the uniformed service chiefs as well as the U.S. Army leadership had taken the position in writing that the infantry division to be removed from Korea should be reassigned to the "general strategic reserve" in the United States rather than demobilized.

In this case the savings would be "not significant" and the added cost of extra military aid to South Korea would offset even these. Brown testified. Despite the military view, however, he said there had been no government decision yet on the future of the forces to be withdrawn.

Rep. Lester Wolff (D-N.Y.), who chaired Friday's meeting, said on the basis of Congressional Budget Office data that demobilization of the division would save U.S. taxpayers some $900 million yearly. On the other hand, Wolff said reassignment of the division within the United States would cost an extra $150 million in the next five years, mostly in construction to house the unit.

Brown and Undersecretary of State Philip C. Habib, who visited Asia late last month to brief South Korean and Japanese leaders with the U.S. withdrawal program, discussed the matter with Carter in a White House meeting early Friday before giving testimony to House and Senate committees.

Habib said the withdrawal is "a natural, proper development in our ongoing security relationship" with South Korea. "In arriving at our determination that the ground forces should be withdrawn, we have carefully weighed the military and international considerations involved," Habib said.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker (Tenn.) sharply challenged the plan, charging that "we are withdrawing from Korea on the basis of a campaign promise (of Carter) and not a careful and comprehensive review by the U.S. governments."

In a written statement, Baker maintained that the withdrawal will "create uncertainty throughout free Asia, stimulate regional tensions and risk a major outbreak of hostilities on the Korean peninsula." Because of Baker's objection, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is expected to mount additional hearings into the plan. A substantial Senate floor debate is considered likely.

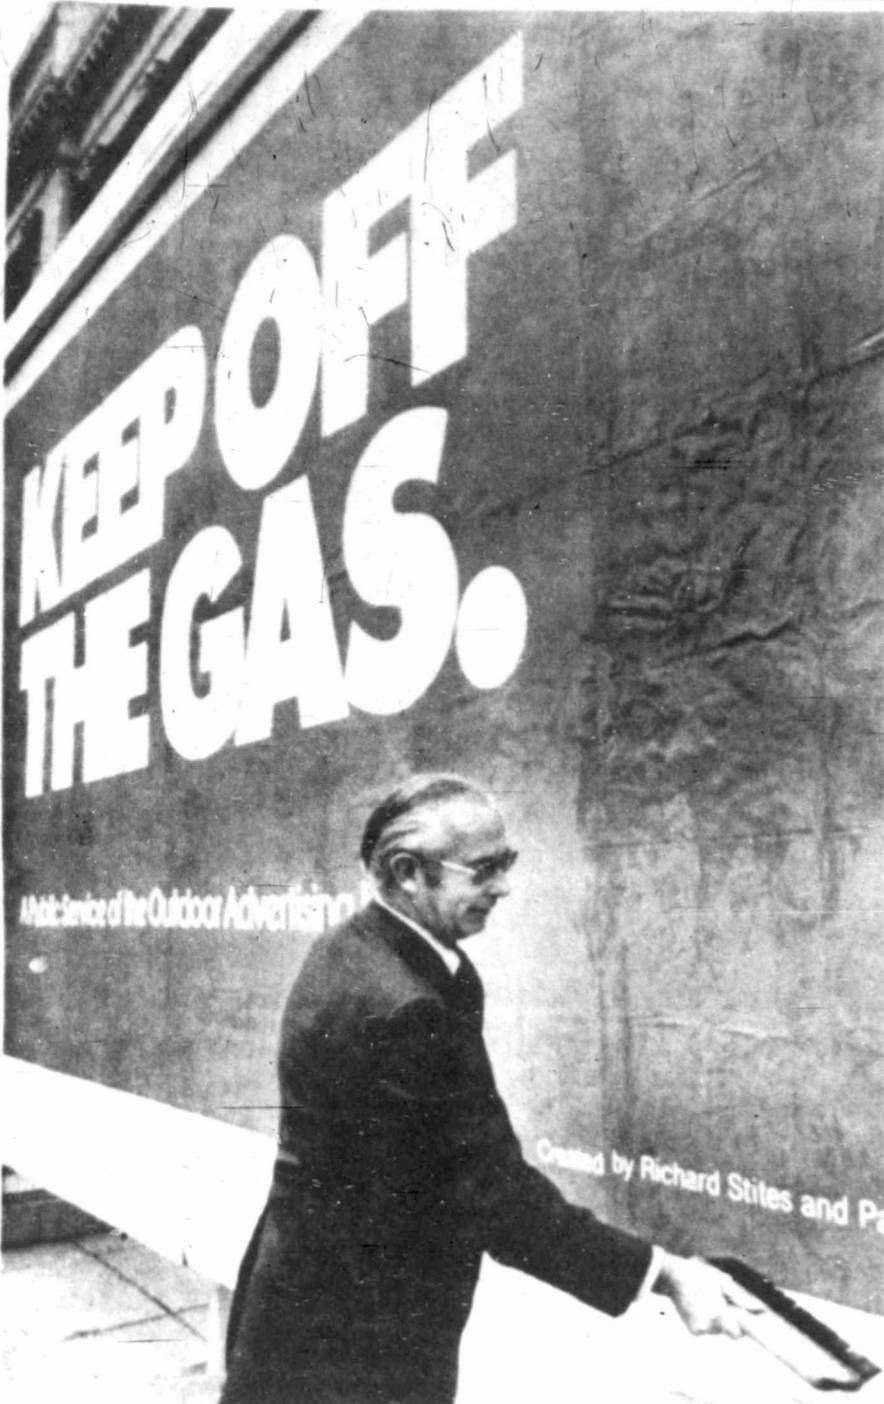

Brown, the nation's senior military man, was asked about the views of Major General John K. Singlaub, who was removed as chief of staff of U.S. forces in Korea for publicly stating that the troop withdrawal program will lead to war. The Joint Chiefs of Staff do not agree. Brown told the House subcommittees, and added that "I did not find any general officers who expressed those (Singlaub's) views" on his recent visit to Korea.

In a closed session of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at which Baker was present, lawmakers decided to ask the Central Intelligence Agency for documents on a new intelligence estimate reportedly showing that North Korea is stronger than was previously believed.

Staff briefings Friday morning by the CIA are also said to have expressed concern over the short warning time that would be available in the event of a North Korean attack.

Briscoe says he still plans special session

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Friday he had not changed plans for a special session of the Texas legislature in mid-July on public school financing, which he hopes will last only about a week.

"I would say the call (for a special session) would be between the 11th and 15th of July, maybe the 18th at the latest," Briscoe told a news conference Friday after he spent two hours in bill signing ceremonies.

"I am aiming for a one-week session. I hope it could be done shorter but I think a week or 10 days is a practical time," he said.

Briscoe commented briefly on a closed door session held Thursday with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton in which the leaders of the two legislative houses asked for an earlier session, maybe as early as June 20.

"I have no plans other than those I announced two weeks ago (after the May 30 end of the regular legislative session). "Nothing is changed, the mid-July date I said then will stand and that is the decision."

The special session became necessary after the regular session failed to act on a compromise $875 million public school finance bill that included $308.5 million for teachers pay raises. With only half an hour left in the session, the House refused to debate the issue, by a 92-55 vote with 100 votes needed for the two-third majority. The compromise was filibustered in the Senate by Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, and never got a vote of any kind.

"I think you can assume that the amount of money in the conference committee bill will be very close to the bill that passes the special session," Briscoe said.

Briscoe added that he did not "have any indication of any closer agreement among legislators than there was at the end of the regular session."

Briscoe repeated his earlier decision that public school financing would be the No. 1 task of the special session "and I have made no decision to include anything else."

I said earlier that I hoped there would be time in the special session to consider repeal of the utility sales tax and it still stands."

Briscoe also said that he considered some elements of property tax revision to be a part of any decision on the public school financing bill. Both Hobby and Clayton said Thursday they asked the governor to make property tax revision a subject of the special session.

Briscoe's other comments at the news conference included —That he has not vetoed any bills yet, but has a stack marked for "close scrutiny" including the measure on no insurance penalties for 55-70 mph speeding tickets and one banning open ice-dispensing machines in hotels and motels. June 19 is his deadline for acting on bills passed by the legislature.

—That he would have "a statement that you will be interested in" at a "political meeting of supporters and coordinators from across the state" Saturday morning in Austin.

—That he still hoped to get away this summer for a vacation in Europe.

Governor to make announcement today

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe hinted broadly Friday that he will announce his future political plans at a special meeting of his supporters and campaign workers Saturday morning in Austin.

"I'm making a statement that I think you will be interested in," Briscoe told a news conference. "You are welcome to attend."

Will he announce for a third term?

"Well, I haven't finished writing my speech, but it's a political meeting," he replied.

Briscoe aides said supporters and campaign "coordinators" from past Briscoe election drives had been invited from throughout the state. Some will come in chartered buses.

Several times in recent months, Briscoe has come close to announcing for re-election but each time hedged by saying "it's too soon for a formal announcement."

Each time he quickly added "but I want to say that I like the job, and each time I travel around the state I find stronger support today than I had in my first two elections."

Briscoe ran an unsuccessful race for governor in 1968, which was eventually won by Gov. Preston Smith. He ran again in 1972 and was elected to a two-year term. The state constitution was changed by voters giving governors four year terms. Briscoe was reelected in 1974 to serve the first four year term.

If Briscoe should be re-elected to a second four-year term and serve out that term for a total of 10 years he would have been Texas governor longer than any other governor.

Mobil Oil withdraws from Seadock project

HOUSTON (AP) — Mobil Oil Corp. has withdrawn from Seadock Inc. but the president of the supertanker off-shore terminal consortium says four other companies have expressed interest in joining the project.

Mobil's departure leaves eight companies backing the $900 million project that has an Aug. 1 deadline for Seadock's acceptance of a federal license to build the terminal 25 miles offshore from Freeport, Tex.

Hugh L. Scott, Seadock president, said Friday two or more of the potential participants could offset the loss of Mobil.

Scott would not identify the four but said they have indicated more than a casual interest in joining prior to the July 19 deadline for new participants. He described the four as two large and two smaller companies.

Exxon announced two months ago it was uncertain whether it could continue in Seadock because of license regulations imposed by the Department of Transportation (DOT). A spokesman said Friday the matter was still under study.

In New York, a spokesman said Mobil withdrew because the DOT failed to recognize Seadock as a "high risk business venture."

"There must be an opportunity to earn a return commensurate with such risks," he said.

"The decision regarding Seadock was made with great reluctance since Mobil continues to believe that deep water ports are in the national interest."

In addition to Exxon, others still in Seadock are Cities Service, Continental, Crown Central, Phillips, Shell, Dow Chemical, and Gulf.

Modern shepherd far cry from white-robed biblical type with crook, lamb under arm

By GEORGENE KALEINA

BENEDICT, Md. (AP) — He wears jeans and a red, white and blue baseball cap instead of the long, white cloak. He carries a striped cane rather than a staff. And most of his time is spent in the barnyard, not on a bucolic hillside, tending his flock.

But Gary Hornbaker is nonetheless a shepherd, translated in today's language as a "livestock general manager."

"When you mention that you're a shepherd, people stereotype you as a Biblical shepherd — the guy walking around with a white cloak on, a staff in his hand and a lamb under his arm," said the 26-year-old animal husbandry graduate of Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

"People automatically ask, 'Do you just sit on a hill and watch sheep all day?'"

For Hornbaker, with four years on the job, being a shepherd involves more than just keeping the animals together and watching that none of the lambs stray into brambles.

"Today, you have to be a nutritionist, a veterinarian, as well as a businessman," he said.

Just then a truckload of buyers rounded the bend and a bargaining session began. Hornbaker told two men dressed in suits that he'd sell them the lambs they wanted for $45.

"Can't you give us a break... It's for a charity barbecue," one of the men said. "I bought them from you two years ago and they were cheaper. Besides, we have friends who want to buy from you."

The two sides finally settled on a price, and Hornbaker came away laughing. "That's part of being a shepherd," he said.

"That's all part of the job," agreed Frank A. Robinson, owner of Serenity Farms, Inc., where Hornbaker works. "If they didn't try to dick down the price, it wouldn't be the same."

While he lacks the Biblicalera attire, Hornbaker looks like he could fit in with shepherds who used to graze their sheep for five months at a time. He sports a bushy red beard that hides the full cheeks on his tanned, slightly weathered face.

"I've put down shepherd as my occupation on my income tax return for a couple of times," he said. "But this year, Frank came up with the title, 'livestock general manager.' Besides, I didn't want to give the IRS guys a good laugh."

Sometimes, he added, he tells people he's a shepherd just to see how they react.

Hornbaker does most of his herding with the help of Border Collies, which he raises and trains. The dogs' natural instinct, he said, "is to run sheep. The dogs follow my voice command."

Working with Bo, one of his dogs, Hornbaker gathered in about 400 sheep. Bo slowly crawled through the weedy grass following his master's cues of "come up... to the right... all the way around, Bo." When he got too far off to be heard, Hornbaker directed the dog with waves of his cane.

Hornbaker said he became a shepherd because "I like to work with livestock and don't want to be confined behind a desk."

People in the city, he said, "get in tight places, get tensed up and always worry about money."

Money is a problem with shepherds, too, he conceded, with an annual wage he put on the level of teachers' pay. He tells people, though, that the cash is "enough to buy a pouch of tobacco."

Hornbaker studied nutrition and reproduction in his courses at VPI and worked with the school's shepherd and veterinarians. That got him what he describes as a peaceful job, but one in which he's exposed to the weather year-round and must put in 10-hour days, seven days a week, during the winter.

"The winter is the most important time to be with the sheep when they're lambing," he said. "These little guys depend on you and you can't let them down."

After the lambs are born, they are kept on feed until they go to slaughter. That time of year brings some questions at home, Hornbaker said.

"My wife can't understand how I can help the sheep give birth to the lambs and then turn around and cut their throats," he said. "But I tell her, it's part of the business."

Trump opening lead sometimes advisable

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

As a rule, to open a trump is to play declarer's game rather than your own. However, it is a fine idea to open a trump when partner passes your takeout double of one of a suit. Your best chance to defeat such a low contract is to draw trumps and then take your side tricks.

South makes the contract if West leads the king of diamonds. Declarer takes the ace, ruffs a diamond, cashes the ace of hearts and gives up a heart. The defenders may return a trump, but it is too late. South wins and ruffs a heart in dummy. Now he can ruff another diamond in his hand, and he thus makes two high trumps, two ruffs in his hand, one ruff in the dummy and the red aces.

GOES DOWN

South goes down if West opens his singleton trump. East covers with the nine of trumps, and South must win with the king.

South cashes the ace of hearts and leads a low heart. East wins with the ten and returns a trump driving out the ace—and removing the last trump from the dummy.

South can take the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond, but that is the end of the road for him. East gets in with the king of hearts and draws trumps. South wins no more tricks.

South is down two, losing 500 points instead of scoring 60 points below the line and 50 points above.

DAILY QUESTION

Dealer bids one spade, and you double. Partner responds two hearts, and it is up to you again. You hold: S8 HQJ97 DKQJ9 CAQ109. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three hearts. Partner will make a game in hearts if he has a couple of high cards—say the king of hearts and the jack of clubs or two kings. You cannot afford to bid the game all by yourself because you have forced partner to bid, and he may have a completely worthless hand.

Korean inquiry panel ruled out

WASHINGTON (AP) — House investigators say they would welcome the appointment of a Watergate-type special prosecutor to handle allegations that Korean agents used gifts and money to buy influence in Congress.

But President Carter's aides quickly dismissed the idea of such an investigation.

Republican congressional leaders urged Carter at a news conference Thursday to appoint the special prosecutor to undertake a thorough, impartial investigation of the allegations involving South Korea.

"Simple fairness says the Democrats ought to be as willing to investigate this situation fully and fairly as we were willing to investigate Watergate fully and fairly," said Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker.

Carter's press secretary, Jody Powell, dismissed the proposal as an adept little two-step by Sen. Baker, and I have no desire to add to the attention he would hope to attract."

Powell said the President has no plan to appoint such a prosecutor, and that Carter is satisfied that the investigation "will be pursued aggressively by the Justice Department."

Health tabloid answers medical questions in layman's language

By The Associated Press
HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Question. What is schizophrenia?

A. It means broken or split mind. This happens when someone cannot tell the difference between what is real and what is imagined. It is a serious mental illness.

Q. How safe is the pill?

A. A lot safer than pregnancy. Almost 10 times as many women die from pregnancy as from the pill (10.8 per 100,000 population versus 1.3 per 100,000).

Q. My husband snores. Can I do anything about it?

A. Gently lift his chin to close his mouth. Then turn his head to one side. The snoring will stop. Snoring occurs when the tongue falls to the back of the throat during sleep. It rattles as breathing occurs. Both sexes snore.

Such questions and answers are found in a new tabloid newspaper of medical information entitled "Good Health," begun with a $15,000 investment by Dr. John P. Callan, a 38-year-old assistant clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of Connecticut School of Medicine.

Callan acknowledges that he hopes to turn a profit from the newspaper, but says his primary purpose is to "service the people." "The goal," he says, "is to present medical information in an easy to read and understand format. The obscure jargon of medical journals will be translated to everyday terms. Most medical journals are written by doctors for doctors.

Callan says he also aims to show people how they can get good quality health care at modest costs.

"People say doctors don't tell them enough and rush them through and don't give them enough information," he says. "We hope we can help alleviate that to some degree."

One article by a medical doctor discussed fees and noted that the average for a routine office visit in central Connecticut is $15, $40 to $60 for a complete physical and $5 to $15 for ear washing in addition to the basic office fee. The article said doctors' fees have risen about 30 per cent in the last four years.

But is the annual physical really necessary? "Probably not, especially in persons under 40," Callan notes in his question and answer column called "Probe." He says: "Many doctors are opposed to annual physicals. They feel it costs too much, takes up time that could be spent with sick people and does little to prevent disease before symptoms have developed."

Geiberger rattles PGA

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Al Geiberger, a soft-spoken, 39-year-old veteran, slow-moving and seemingly casual under a broiling sun, fired an incredible 13-under-par 59 that broke the all-time PGA Tour record Friday for 18 holes in the second round of the $200,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

round of the 1954 El Paso Open, by Wally Ulrich at Cavalier Yacht and Country Club in the second round of the 1954 Virginia Beach, Va., by Tommy Bolt at Wethersfield Country Club in the second round of the 1954 Insurance City Open; by Mike Souchak, again at Brackenridge in San Antonio, in the first round of the 1955 Texas Open, and, 20 years ago, by Snead.

The key was a string of seven holes beginning on the 15th. He played those seven eight under par—four consecutive birdies, a pitch-in for an eagle three and two more birdies on putts of 18 and 20 feet.

PAGEL HELD up when centerfielder Jeff Leonard did a pretty good job of acting as he drifted back like he had Lezcano's fly in his hip pocket and then played it quickly off the green wall.

San Antonio third baseman Marv Webb makes the big turn here after opening up the sixth inning of Friday night's game with Midland at Cubs' Stadium with a single to left. It was all for naught however, as the Cubs outlasted the Dodgers, 8-7. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Session to open without Carter; mayors grumble

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The annual meeting of the U.S. Conference of Mayors begins here Saturday with some grumbling among municipal officials that President Carter is absent though he had attended earlier meetings when he was seeking votes. "As a candidate, he (Carter) showed up last year with a basketful of commitments," one mayor says. "As president, we're getting the back of his hand and two Cabinet officers." The last president to meet with the mayors was Lyndon B. Johnson. A White House spokesman said Friday that Carter couldn't attend the mayors' meeting because the President had traveled extensively in May and "though he should stay in Washington during June" and attend to such issues as taxes and energy. Lewis Murphy, host mayor for the five-day meeting of big-city officials, has written Carter to protest the President's decision not to attend the conference. "Some urban policy leadership must come from the White House," Murphy said. "It would seem to me to be as important for you to speak to the nation's mayors on domestic issues as it was to speak to world leaders about international problems at the recent summit."

Harold Hotus, an aide to Mayor Kenneth Gibson of Newark, N.J., the conference president, says Gibson "isn't concerned with what Carter doesn't do in Tucson as much as what he does do in Washington." The mayors generally are pleased with the Carter administration's work on antirecession aid to the cities and with several jobs programs that have been signed into law. There is some criticism of Carter's economic program — the mayors favor more spending — and in many city halls it is thought Carter must do more to battle structural unemployment, joblessness caused by basic changes in the economy. After what they consider to be years of neglect, the mayors seem to want symbols as well as substance, especially from a Democratic president who swept the urban vote. "Symbols are substance," says one conference official. "A president's enthusiasm can quickly become the bureaucracy's enthusiasm. It's something we haven't had since the Great Society."

Carter's representatives to this year's conference are Patricia Harris, secretary of housing and urban development, and Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps. A number of lower ranking officials also will attend.

Polish may get the last laugh with jet-powered crop duster

By DAVID ZIMMERMAN

PARIS (AP) — One of the jokes flying around the Paris air show this year is a Polish crop duster powered by a jet engine. But the Poles may have the last laugh. The ungainly looking biplane is 41 feet long, has a 73-foot wingspan and is powered by a Soviet Yak-40 engine. It can carry about 2½ tons of chemicals and weighs more than six tons fully loaded. "Is that the one that looks like it's still in the packing crate?" one incredulous visitor said when asked if he had seen it. "It's grotesque."

An unofficial air show newspaper reported that "an Englishman looking in disbelief at Poland's unique M15 jet-powered agricultural biplane, said 'They shouldn't need any chemicals — all they have to do is fly it overhead and frighten the bugs to death.'"

Stung, the Poles quickly parried the affront by posting a handwritten letter on a bulletin board in the air show press room. It said:

"To Unknown Englishman: Let me express my deepest gratitude for the best advertisement one could imagine (and even free of charge). Hope for further cooperation!"

Officials at the Polish pavilion said in spite of wisecracks about the plane a great number of businessmen, including Americans, had stopped by to get more information on the M15. "It's the first jet-powered plane of its kind and carries the biggest payload in the world," a Polish spokesman said. "We designed it for the Russians, and while I don't have precise information, I think about 30 are being used right now, probably in the Ukraine and Kazakhstan."

He handed a reporter a brochure on the crop duster that described it as "a harmonious synthesis of great experience and innovation in aircraft design." He suggested the reporter talk to chief test pilot Andrzej Ablamowicz for more information.

In a planeside interview, Ablamowicz said, "This is an aircraft we designed especially for Soviet pilots. They asked for a jet engine because jet fuel is cheaper than conventional fuel. They also wanted a power plant that would be practically maintenance free so they sent us the Yak-40 because it's a real worker with almost no problems. The first test flight took place in 1973 and we sold the first production plane last year."

Asked the reason for the two wing design, Ablamowicz said, "When she's fully loaded she's quite heavy, so you need a big wing area for proper lift. If we used a single wing it would be twice as long as the one you see and would not have been practical."

The pilot said the crop duster, which has been flying daily at the show, has an operating speed of about 90 knots "and is probably ideal for the vast stretches of Soviet farmland. We don't use them in Poland, however, because the land is in smaller parcels so it just wouldn't pay."

The price of Poland's unique jet crop duster was unavailable.

Welfare team to look into nursing homes

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Welfare commissioner Raymond Vowell reported Friday that the state attorney general's office — at Vowell's request — has agreed to join in a probe of alleged mistreatment of nursing home patients in Lufkin and Nacogdoches. Vowell also said in a five page statement that the Department of Public Safety "may be requested to join an investigation if evidence warrants."

A welfare team will report directly to him on its investigation, Vowell said. He was specifically responding, he said, to allegations that have been reported in the Lufkin News. He noted that the Department of Health Resources, as well as the state welfare department, has "responsibility for continuous monitoring of nursing homes in areas of standards, nutrition, health care, safety, nursing, and sanitation."

Vowell said a welfare department check on beds allegedly soaked in urine "found this to be true," and a nursing home was warned for failure to meet health standards. The warning was removed a month later, he said, when "performance improvements were noted."

Vowell said the department investigated the alleged beating of a patient in "the Lufkin home and found" that six persons had been fired, and that the president of the company owning the home had suggested that the "nearest responsible relative of the patient" file a criminal charge. The relative said she wanted to talk to her minister, Vowell said, and called the nursing home executive back.

Costa Rica throws out financier Robert Vesco

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Financier Robert Vesco, wanted in the United States for allegedly bilking millions from small investors and illegally contributing to President Nixon's 1972 campaign, has been ordered to leave Costa Rica after five years as an officially welcomed fugitive. Vesco's office had no comment Friday on President Daniel Oduber's order that Vesco leave the country. Oduber said in a nationwide radio and television address late Thursday that he told Vesco to find another haven "because I don't want this matter to permanently sully the name of Costa Rica abroad."

Oduber, who has been criticized here for taking money from Vesco during his 1974 election campaign, did not set a deadline for the American's departure or indicate where he might go. "I do not think he should leave hurriedly," the president said. "He should put his affairs in order, and he is doing this. And he should clarify his situation before the courts of justice."

Vesco's personal secretary, Alberto Abreu, declined comment Friday, but added, "I imagine Mr. Vesco will make a public statement sooner or later."

There was speculation Vesco might go to Panama or return to the Bahamas, where he has holdings worth a reported $50 million — and where a court four years ago rejected a U.S. request for his extradition. Vesco, who would have become eligible for Costa Rican citizenship this month, faces U.S. charges that he looted $224 million from Overseas Investors Service, an international mutual fund, and made a secret $200,000 cash contribution to the Nixon reelection campaign.

A 42-year-old native of Detroit, Vesco has been a controversial figure in this Central American republic since his arrival. He loaned Oduber's predecessor, President Jose Figueres, $2.15 million to help his financially troubled private businesses.

In return, Figueres pushed through a law that virtually guaranteed Vesco could not be extradited. The so-called "Vesco law" was repealed last year. Earlier this year, Oduber's opponents accused Vesco of contributing heavily to the president's campaign. Spokesmen for Oduber said the money was in the form of loans which had been repaid.

Probers say fire burned awhile before discovered

FORT MITCHELL, Ky. (AP) — The fire that killed 161 persons at the Beverly Hills Supper Club on May 28 started in a concealed area and burned for some time before being discovered, an investigation team announced Friday. Fire Marshal Warren Southworth said that the fire, which started in a hidden area in the club's Zebra Room, was electrical in origin and that ceiling tiles and wood materials fueled the fire as it spread through other concealed spaces surrounding the room. Such a "concealed area" might be above a false ceiling or between walls, Southworth said. The fire burned for a "considerable time" before it was discovered, he said. However, Southworth declined to speculate on the exact cause or the precise time that the fire broke out at the posh supper club in nearby Southgate, five miles south of Cincinnati. "The ignition sequence led to an intense heat build-up within the concealed space which ultimately resulted in the accumulation of smoke and hot gases in the Zebra Room itself," Southworth said. "It was at this point when the fire was discovered and attempts were made to extinguish it." While attempts were made to extinguish the fire, Southworth said "simultaneous ignition" hit all combustible materials within the room. "The fire continued to build until it broke out of the Zebra Room through a set of double doors located at the north end of the room. The fire then raced through the structure, Southworth concluded.
