Governor approves appropriations bill

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Gov. Dolph Briscoe approved the $15.5 billion general appropriations bill Friday without a change — the first time in 20 years a two-year spending bill has not been touched by a veto pen.

The 1977 appropriations bill was unmarked by Gov. Allan Shivers, who previously had okayed several other two-year budgets without veto.

There was no comment from Briscoe accompanying the terse announcement from his office. The governor was in Houston.

The spending bill, effective Sept. 1, increases state spending about 27 per cent during 1978-79.

Briscoe said earlier that he felt the 27 per cent increase — from $12.1 billion to $15.5 billion — was justified by the state's increased income.

Among other things, the state budget includes a 3.4 per cent pay raise increase each year for state employees, plus another 5.8 per cent, or $61.8 million, in 1979 to pay the employees' share of social security payments on salaries up to $16,500.

Dependent children in welfare families will get a raise from $32 to $35 per month. An extra $40 million was set aside for a prison hospital at Galveston to be operated in conjunction with the University of Texas Medical School.

Another $40 million will go to set up Texas' first statewide adult probation system, effective in 1979. Now all probation supervision is handled on the local level.

Briscoe signed a bill upgrading the 31 domestic relations courts, now financed by counties, to family district courts, funded partly by the state. Judges could buy into the state judicial retirement system, relinquishing their rights to locally funded retirement benefits.

The governor would appoint the first judges in the newly upgraded courts.

He also signed a bill creating 25 new district courts, including seven in Harris County, four in Dallas County, two in Travis County and one each in El Paso, Ector, Jefferson, Orange, Bell, Hale-Swisher-Castro, Johnson-Somervell, Jasper-Newton-Tyler, Potter-Randall, Chambers-Liberty, Polk-San Jacinto-Trinity and Jones-Shackelford counties.

Estimated two-year cost of the upgraded domestic relations courts is $2.2 million and the projected 1977-79 expenditures on the newly created district courts is $1.5 million.

Approximately 30 bills remain for Briscoe to act on, presumably today. The deadline is Sunday, but Briscoe has said he plans to start a European vacation that day.

Midlanders sizzle as mercury zooms to 106

If it felt hot Friday it should have. Although the early morning temperature was a pleasant 69 degrees, by 11 a. m. it was 90. But few probably realized how much further the mercury would go.

The 1 p. m. sun pushed the mercury over the 100 degree mark and by 2 p. m. it was a scorching 105.

The old record for the date was 105, a figure that had not been topped for 42 years.

Not until Friday at 3 p. m., that is, when the mercury hit 106 degrees.

Today may not be as hot. Friday night the National Weather Service predicted the mercury would reach only 104. And on Sunday the high temperature should be about 100 degrees.

The low temperature tonight is expected to be in the lower 70s.

Broiling temperatures and a slight, hot breeze were reported in Odessa, Rankin, Big Lake, Andrews, Lamesa and Stanton.

Other hot spots included Lubbock at 105, Childress at 104 and Amarillo and Wichita Falls with even 100s.

Readings throughout the central and eastern regions of the state were mainly in the 90s while some spots on the upper coast had temperatures in the 80s.

By late afternoon skies were clear to partly cloudy over most of Texas except in parts of Southwest and Southeast Texas where some isolated thunderstorms were reported.

The fair skies over eastern portions contrasted with Thursday's downpours that dumped as much as 5.80 inches of rain at Mabank, 5.73 inches at Winkler, 3.47 at Canton and 2.99 at Mexia.

The National Weather Service said thunderstorms were expected to enter the Texas Panhandle Friday night and stay around through much of Saturday. Rain storms were also forecast today for Southwest Texas.

The forecast for the rest of the state today called for partly cloudy skies and hot afternoons.

Tax on industrial use of oil gets tentative OK

By RICHARD L. LYONS
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee tentatively approved a tax on industrial use of oil and gas Friday that may produce only two-thirds the energy savings proposed by President Carter.

The tax and rebate program to push industry and utilities from use of oil or natural gas to coal was the big oil saver in Carter's energy package. He estimated it would save 3.3 million barrels of oil a day by 1985. His entire energy program would save an estimated 4.5 million barrels.

In two days of work on the proposal, the committee cut in half the revenue the tax would produce in seven years from 1979 to 1985, from $90 billion to $44.6 billion, according to the committee's staff. Committee staff and administration officials said they had no firm figures on energy savings, the committee bill would produce, but said it might be about one-third below the administration proposal.

The administration proposed returning the tax money through a system of credits or tax cuts to help industries and utilities pay for conversion to coal, which the country has in abundance. The committee will act on the rebate Monday and then proceed to reconsider all the tentative votes it has taken on tax provisions of the Carter program during the last two weeks.

The committee watered down the tax plan by exempting some power plants and lowering the rate. The first 50,000 barrels of oil (or 300 million cubic feet of natural gas) used by a plant in a year would be exempt from the tax. The committee also exempted fuels used in processing where coal would have an adverse impact on the product. Also exempted were plants that have been ordered by federal regulation, state law or court order not to convert to coal for environmental reasons.

The committee also set up a two-tier tax system. Plants that could easily convert to coal would pay the higher rate. Those that could not convert to coal, or with great difficulty, would be taxed at a lower rate to encourage conservation.

Under the committee bill, the tax on industrial use of oil would start in 1979 at 30 cents a barrel and climb to $3 a barrel by 1985. The tax on utilities' use of oil would not begin until 1983 and then would be a flat $1.50.

The tax on 1,000 cubic feet of gas used by industry would range from 20 cents to $1.10. For utilities the gas tax would begin in 1983 at 55 cents and climb to 75 cents by 1985.

Industries exempted under the fuel provision could be reclassified as subject to the tax only by congressional action, not by administrative action.

$36.1 billion authorized for weapons

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate Armed Services committees agreed Friday to authorize $36.1 billion to develop and produce weapons in fiscal 1978, including several that President Carter does not want.

Chairman John C. Stennis (D-Miss.) of the Senate committee, in announcing the results of a week-long conference to work out a compromise bill, said the extra money voted for weapons will be offset by reductions in manpower.

The conference bill to be submitted to the House and Senate authorizes $270 million more for missiles, planes, ships and tanks than Carter requested. But Stennis said manpower cuts would bring the total $20 million under Carter's budget request.

House champions of building another Nimitz-class carrier rather than switching to smaller carriers as Carter recommended failed to get their way completely as the conference voted money to finance Pentagon studies of various options with an eye to making the decision between now and late this year.

But the end of congressional actions this year on aircraft carriers is expected to be a budget request next January with no new carrier money.

Navy leaders said they needed $6 million this year to design a smaller carrier, a request denied by the House Armed Services Committee, in order to have time to include one in the fiscal 1979 budget to be submitted in January.

A clear victory for the Navy came as the House-Senate conferees approved $20.1 million to continue work on Project Seafarer, an underground grid which would send radio waves deep into the ocean to communicate

House axes federal money for abortions

By BETTY ANNE WILLIAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Friday to bar the use of federal funds to pay for or to promote abortions.

It also limited the government's authority to implement affirmative action programs to make up for past cases of discrimination against women and minorities.

The two restrictions were adopted as amendments to a $61.3 billion appropriations bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare during fiscal year 1978. Passage came on a voice vote.

House leaders succeeded in holding the total cost of the bill to $61.3 billion after persuading the Carter administration to accept a figure that high. Members who were prepared to offer expensive amendments generally withdrew them.

The abortion provision, offered by Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., was adopted by a vote of 201-155.

This was the second time the House has adopted the provision. It also passed the amendment last year before backtracking to accept a weaker amendment hammered out by a House-Senate conference committee. The weaker version that emerged from Congress allowed the use of federal funds for abortions when a woman's life was in danger.

The restriction was never implemented, however, because of a court appeal. The case now is in the Supreme Court but hearings are unlikely before the court term ends in July.

The strong language adopted by the House caused Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, to remark "I think we're going to be in the same situation we were last year. I don't think the Senate will accept this language."

Supporters of the abortion ban had to offer new legislation because the original ban will automatically expire on Sept. 30 since it was an amendment

Mentally retarded not so very unlike others

"They are like anybody else," Bobbie Martin said of a class of people who often live in a closed-in world. "They all have their special talents."

"They" happen to be mentally retarded persons. And Midland has a few — about 3 per cent of the population. Which is quite normal.

The mentally retarded are "more like other people than they are different," said Mrs. Martin, who's on the staff of the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens (MARC).

And that likeness should offer those among the so-called "normal" a clue on the treatment of the mentally retarded.

It's nothing special at all.

"The only way you can approach them is like you do anybody else," she said. Don't be uptight, and they won't be.

And once you know "them" you'll really begin to appreciate them for what they are — just people.

"Most of them know their limitations," said Beverly Soholl, who's Mrs. Martin's boss and the executive director of MARC.

Army officials rebuke general for remark

By TERENCE HUNT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Army officials rebuked a three-star general Friday night for his unauthorized warning that the United States might wind up in the middle of a Soviet-Chinese war, but took no action to block his pending promotion or new scheduled assignment.

Lt. Gen. Donn A. Starry, who arrived from Germany earlier in the day, spent 30 minutes on the carpet before Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Army Chief of Staff Bernard W. Rogers at the Pentagon.

Their response was seen as a small tap on the wrist.

After the meeting, Alexander and Rogers issued a statement saying they had reminded Starry of the need to clear speeches before delivery, and "we expressed our mutual concern that he had failed to do so."

Starry, 52, the second general to get into hot water within a month for speaking out of line, was not observed by reporters going in or going out of the building.

Arriving at John F. Kennedy Airport in New York earlier Friday, Starry told reporters only:

"I have just arrived in the United States en route to my new assignment. I have been ordered to Washington to discuss my speech with the secretary of the Army and the Army chief of staff. Thank you very much."

The general's nomination for a fourth star has been blocked on Capitol Hill at the request of Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., until members of the Senate Armed Services Committee have a chance to read the controversial speech the general made.

The commander of the 5th Corps in Germany, Starry already had been heading back to the states for a vacation and to take a new assignment. After the controversy

Director of SPCA finds challenge here

By JIM STEINBERG

Dalton Byerly came to Midland six months ago looking for a challenge. And that's just what he is finding.

One of the reasons he accepted a job as director of the Midland SPCA was because he wanted the challenge of setting up a new animal shelter. But when the Midland Planning and Zoning Commission voted to recommend disapproval of a permit for a dog kennel earlier this month Byerly began to wonder if that challenge wasn't more than he bargained for.

In spite of that setback, however, Byerly is optimistic about chances for approval of the kennel operations at 5101 Andrews Highway when the SPCA appears before the mayor and council July 12.

"I think a lot of people had wrong impressions when they protested the animal shelter before the planning and zoning commission. They didn't really understand that it would be a completely enclosed and air conditioned facility," Byerly said this week.

It was June 6 when the P & Z commission voted 5 to 3 to disapprove a specific use permit authorizing the SPCA to build a kennel at its present location where a shelter for cats and an animal rescue unit now operate.

"I was shocked," Byerly said of his reaction to the decision. At that time the SPCA had already invested between $4,000 and $5,000 worth of improvements on existing structures to operate a shelter for cats.

"We thought approval of the permit would be a routine thing. We never gave any thought to the idea that our request would be turned down.

Byerly began working with animals in a veterinary hospital in 1943. He has held down jobs in humane work in Florida and Georgia for 20 years prior to coming to Midland January.

Byerly expects that when the Midland SPCA becomes fully operational it will provide a complete animal adoption service in addition to the rescue work, cruelty investigation and education program it now provides.

But until a SPCA kennel is approved, Byerly said the future of the SPCA in Midland remains in question.

developed over his speech, he was difected to postpone his leave and report to Army superiors.

On Capitol Hill, Hart said no action should be taken on Starry's nomination for a fourth star until Armed Services Committee members had read the full text of the general's speech and Starry had met with superiors.

Starry told a class of high school graduates in Frankfurt a week ago that the United States may wind up in the middle of a Soviet-Chinese war.

He did not submit his comments to the Pentagon for prior review, as required under regular policy, a Pentagon spokesman said.

No troops, no facilities

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — There was a momentary communications gap at the White House Friday when Rex Granum, the deputy press secretary, got the bathroom confused with the battlefield.

Granum was explaining the administration's reaction to the Senate's refusal to endorse withdrawal of American troops from South Korea.

A reporter asked about the possibility of also withdrawing small tactical nuclear weapons called "Honest Johns."

"When they withdraw the troops," said Granum forthrightly, "they withdraw the facilities."

Later, Granum explained he thought the reporter had asked about latrines, using the slang word "johns." His response had not been intended to apply to the weapons, he added.

with submarines.

The Navy, despite strenuous objections from environmentalists and many state officials, intends to transform its Seafarer test sites in Michigan and Wisconsin into an operating communications system.

Opponents of Seafarer contend it would harm animal and plant life and interfere with civilian communications.

The conferees rejected the earlier House action authorizing $139.8 million for civil defense. The compromise figure is $95.5 million, $5.5 million more than Carter requested.

One weapon the conferees voted to keep building over Carter's objections is the A-7 attack plane built in Dallas by LTV, Inc. Carter had argued it is obsolete but the conferees voted to build 12 more in fiscal 1978 and another 12 in fiscal 1979. Similarly, the conferees rejected Carter's recommendation to build only 78 F-15 fighters in fiscal 1978, raising the total to 108.

In offsetting the extra money authorized for weaponry, the conferees voted to cut the nation's active duty force of service people to 2,085,100, a reduction of 3,900 from what Carter requested.

The Pentagon's civilian work force would have to be reduced by 12,100 people to reach the ceiling of 1,018,600 set by the conferees.

The Pentagon also would have to reduce the number of admirals and generals by 6 per cent over the three-year period fiscal 1978 through 1980 and cut the number of civilians in grades 13 through 18 by 6 per cent over the same period.

House axes abortion funds to a yearly appropriations bill.

Opponents of the ban argued that it would discriminate against low-income women who are eligible for Medicaid and would prevent abortions for many women involved in cases of rape and incest.

The affirmative action amendment, offered by Rep. Robert S. Walker, R-Pa., says no funds may be spent to enforce any ratio, quota or other numerical requirement related to race, creed, color, national origin or sex. It applies to employment and admissions policies.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano lobbied against the Walker amendment, saying it would halt much of the progress made in civil rights in the last 15 years. He expressed concern about the agency's ability to enforce anti-discrimination provisions in the Civil Rights Act of 1964 and the education amendments of 1972.

Opponents of the House ban were quick to criticize the action.

Karen Mulhauser, executive director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, said passage of the amendment is "the first step in the general attack on abortion rights.

Police probe rape report

Investigation into the rape of a Midland woman Tuesday afternoon continues although Midland police juvenile officer Lt. Clyde Spaulding says officials are satisfied they have a suspect in the case.

A 16-year-old Midland youth was apprehended about 10 p.m. Tuesday in connection with the rape.

Spaulding said the woman was bound and raped in her north Midland home about 4 p.m. Tuesday. After the intruder left the house, she managed to escape and have a neighbor report the incident to police.

Nothing was believed to have been taken from the woman's home, Spaulding added.

County Attorney Leslie Acker said he has filed a motion seeking either transfer of the case to district court or adjudication (a ruling) that the youth is a delinquent.

If adjudicated a delinquent, the youth could be sent to a Texas Youth Council or other approved facility or put on probation.

Acker said he is waiting for more information about the rape case before determining which course of action to recommend. He also said he has not had time to study the case fully.

Acker said he will make a recommendation to Juvenile Judge Barbara Culver at the hearing on the motion.

The youth was released into the custody of both his parents and their attorney shortly after his arrest, Spaulding said. Those persons are responsible for the youth, he said.

Releasing a juvenile to his parents is the usual procedure in juvenile cases, he said.

MIDLAND POLICE Sgt. Jerry Waid, right, accepts the charter certificate for the affiliation of the Midland Police Officers Association with the International Brotherhood of Police Officers from Joe Wilson, vice president of the brotherhood, at a meeting Thursday night. According to Waid, the affiliation will provide Midland police officers with $10,000 accidental death benefit and legal representation of any job-related litigation.

Former coach planning to appeal on contract

BIG SPRING — An ex-Big Spring high school basketball coach will allege discrimination as the reason for his contract not being renewed for the 1977 school year, it was reported Friday.

James Griffin will take his appeal to the Texas State Education Commission next week. He became the first black head coach in District 5-AAAAA two years ago.

Interim Superintendent Lynn Hise said Friday that Griffin's prior complaints that he had received no written explanation for the non-renewal was not entirely accurate.

"We will not release the contents of the letter," said Hise, "but Mr. Griffin should have received a write-off," Mrs. Soholt said.

Sounds normal enough, huh? And many are doing all right. Quite a few have grown into responsibility and have attained confidence in and respect for themselves.

They can be happy! Many of the older ones have jobs, are married, and are rearing families. And even the younger ones are slowly coming out of their closed-in world.

In part, that is being accomplished through programs such as parent counseling, recreation, arts and crafts classes, camps, social activities, Boy and Girl Scout troops, and more. Many attend school classes and are trainable for productive work and rewarding lives. . . . Varying degrees.

"What's so amazing," said Mrs. Soholt, "(is) some of them were so introverted and felt they couldn't do anything." Many came out of their "shells" and found the outside world okay.

Many are learning and running. "I think Midland accepts them, and they are our friends, and they are part of our community," Mrs. Martin said. "They just belong here," Mrs. Soholt said.

And that should help make their families, their parents, be even prouder of the growing children. After all, they do love them.

Those parents . . . are as proud of that retarded child as they are of anything else," she said. And the children, who want to be appreciated, will respond with loads of affection. They're a loving lot.

Jobless interested in Hondo

HONDO, Tex. (AP) — Since the mayor complained that his town's unemployment rate is too low to qualify for federal aid, he's gotten calls from loafers everywhere volunteering to come practice their unemployment in Hondo.

"And those are the ones who don't call collect," Mayor Woodrow Glasscock said Friday. "I'm not taking collect calls."

The calls came in response to publicity about a letter Glasscock wrote to President Carter on Monday asking for a list of the nation's hard-core unemployed.

He said Hondo, a South Texas farming community of about 6,000 with an unemployment rate of 3 per cent, needed money for a $1.1 million civic center. But he said he had twice been told Hondo couldn't qualify for federal aid unless its unemployment rate were over 6 per cent.

Glasscock told Carter that if it took a high unemployment rate to get federal funds, he would try to meet the requirement — by importing the unemployed.

The 37-year-old mayor said he has been "overwhelmed by the response," which has included interviews on 27 radio stations coast to coast as well as 30 to 40 calls from individuals in Oklahoma, Wisconsin, Ohio, California, Kansas and Texas.

One volunteer said he could entertain the town with his music while he was unemployed and gave Glasscock a sample of his music over the telephone. A radio executive offered to quit his job for two months. Several college students offered to move to Hondo for the summer.

Glasscock said he tells callers he was "mostly trying to make a point," but he added: "I feel like we have a legitimate complaint and it makes me feel good to know there's that many people who feel the way I do."

"I hope we get our civic center out of all this. I think it's a very poor setup the way they have it right now," he said. "If you go out and go to work you're penalized for it. I think that's contrary to our American concept."

The mayor said he hasn't heard from any government official in Washington and said, "I don't know if President Carter has even seen the letter yet."

Aquifer ban may be in legal trouble

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The city's controversial moratorium on all development over the Edwards Aquifer and its recharge zone appeared to be in serious legal trouble Friday.

A council vote to rescind the ban loomed as a strong possibility.

The moratorium, already under attack from lawsuits seeking more than $1.5 billion in damages from the city, was dealt another blow from City Atty Jim Parker.

Parker, in an opinion, ruled Friday the ban is at least partially illegal.

One member of the city council, Helen Dutmer, had said previously she would switch her vote to impose the moratorium if Parker said the ban was illegal.

The moratorium was approved 6-4 last week and Mrs. Dutmer's ballot was the swing vote for the majority.

A U.S. Magistrate said late Thursday he would recommend the issuance by a federal judge of a preliminary injunction to block the start of the 18-month moratorium at midnight Sunday.

The city has five days to file a written protest before a judge will issue the injunction.

The injunction is sought by land developers with holdings in the aquifer region. They filed a $750 million class action suit claiming the city was in effect seizing property without just compensation to the owners.

A similar $800 million suit has been filed in state court.

If the ban goes into effect before a restraining order is issued, an assistant city attorney said the city could be held responsible for some damage.

The aquifer, a natural underground water system which flows along the city's northern edge, is San Antonio's only source of fresh water.

But political observers said anti-growth and anti-business sentiments were more behind the moratorium vote than a desire to protect the water supply. All council members agree the water must be kept unpolluted by development.

During the 18-month moratorium period, a consulting group is expected to come up with recommendations on how to protect the water supply from pollution the council would act on those recommendations after the moratorium is ended.

The moratorium, which covers about 6,000 acres inside the city and another 35,000 within the city's five-mile radius of extra-territorial jurisdiction, requires the city to disapprove all building permit requests and zoning changes for the next 18 months.

Also, the city would refuse to extend any utility services to the area, approve no zoning changes and approve no new subdivision plans.

Bryant says ridicule not her aim

By ROB WOOD

HOUSTON (AP)—Anita Bryant said Friday she has never had any desire "to punish...or to ridicule" those in the gay movement but "parents have the right to protect their children where flaunting, example setting homosexuals would disrupt and destroy society's moral values."

Miss Bryant told a news conference she had remained silent since she led a successful campaign to repeal a Dade County Fla., (Miami) ordinance that guaranteed equal housing and employment rights for gays.

"But now as I resume my career, I discover it is difficult to remain silent. The voices of a radical minority have screamed their curses at me and at the normal majority," she said.

"Those who are screaming the loudest are succeeding only in dividing the American people and making themselves and their lifestyles more unacceptable."

Miss Bryant's appearance as an entertainer during the Texas Bar Association convention sparked a demonstration Thursday night by an estimated 4,000 supporters of gay rights.

The protesters marched through downtown Houston in a candlelight procession that moved along the streets in front and to the rear of the hotel where the singer performed.

Miss Bryant told newsmen she had not planned a press conference but it was time to answer the protests and the demonstrations. "No matter how many names these homosexual militants throw at me, the truth cannot be hidden. Anita Bryant is no threat to these militants. They are a threat to themselves."

The singer said she had no scheduled appearances in behalf of her Save Our Children organization that was formed to fight the Dade County ordinance.

She said local communities "have learned what can be done and I am sure the citizens of those communities can do what is necessary for themselves."

After an appearance in New Orleans this week, Miss Bryant said she and her family plan a lengthy vacation.

She added "We have zero commitments. No definite plans except the vacation. Perhaps later there will be some appearances."

In answer to a question, Miss Bryant said she had no political ambitions and no plans to seek public office.

Prior to the news conference, Miss Bryant spoke briefly of her religious convictions at a prayer meeting for attorneys.

There was no violence during the gay rights demonstration Thursday night, even though the march ended in the same area where a prayer meeting, attended by about 300 persons, was conducted in support of Miss Bryant.

DISD busing approved

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Independent School District, which began a school busing plan this year as part of a desegregation order, has been given passing grades by a team of experts who audited the district's handling of the program.

The audit was conducted by an Austin branch of Educational Testing Service and the report submitted Thursday to U.S. District Court Judge William M. Taylor who had ordered the desegregation plan for the 7th largest city in the country.

The program covered the busing of approximately 14,000 students of the district's 150,000 total enrollment.

The desegregation order also called for the creation of four magnet high schools where attendance would be voluntary, but enrollment would be subject to racial quotas.

The audit praised the way the desegregation program had been carried out, but added it had found some shortcomings in the way the magnet schools were operation.

It said, "overall, the magnet schools showed evidence of providing resources and services congruent with their educational goals." But it noted that the schools were sometimes used as "dumping grounds" by other schools for their academically weaker students.

Dr. John Hood, who prepared the audit, said experts had found that 297 students out of 3,048 in the magnet schools were reading as much as five grade levels below their academic placement.

The report said also that three of the four magnet schools were housed in inadequate facilities and there appeared to be little parental involvement.

It can be profitable

Efficiency has been a byword in American industry. As a nation we have prided ourselves on the productivity of American workers, the good use of our natural resources and technology that brings them together into a great industrial machine. It may come as a shock to many Americans as the nation moves into the energy conservation ethic to discover that we aren't as proficient as we think we are. Foreigners have been telling us so for some time. West Germany says its industries use 38 per cent less energy per unit of output than American industry does. Although its winters are much colder, Sweden boasts that it consumes 25 per cent less heat per unit of product in its plants than the United States. And it is chic for foreign editorialists to declare, as The London Times did quite honestly, that it's time for American people to "give up their century-long, often profligate enjoyment and waste of energy." The truth is that we really have no choice. Conservation is the cornerstone of any energy policy, as our national leaders have been telling us. But it needn't be as painful as they say. Indeed, it can be quite profitable.

Family plan

The ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court may have clouded a previous decision that seemed to give municipalities control over use of private property. But it recognizes and defends as constitutionally sound the traditional concept of the family. The justices acted on the appeal of an East Cleveland, Ohio, grandmother against the definition of family set down by city officials. She could not, according to a city ordinance, have both her two sons and two grandchildren living with her. Justice Lewis F. Powell stressed the American emphasis on its "roots," noting that the "tradition of uncles, aunts, cousins and especially grandparents sharing a household also along with parents and children... is deserving of constitutional recognition." In 1974, the court had upheld a New York community's law that no more than two unrelated persons could share a dwelling, apparently confirming local government's zoning power. There was a significant difference between the two cases, however. In Ohio in 1977, the family was threatened. The Supreme Court came to the rescue.

What else is new?

Yes, that news item the other day was correct. The federal government actually is planning to reduce the national debt. Last anyone is planning a party to celebrate, a closer look is in order. All this means is that in April, May and June the Treasury will be redeeming about $2 billion more in debt securities than it issues. It can do this because money has been coming in faster than the government can spend it. However, the cash ledger doesn't tell the whole story. For the current fiscal year as a whole, the government is still projecting a $48 billion deficit in its accounts. The deficit for the next fiscal year is projected at $58 billion or more. Thus the federal debt is still climbing toward a phenomenal $700 billion — with an annual interest expense of $44 billion making debt service the third highest item in the budget behind Health, Education and Welfare and Defense. Call off the party.

INSIDE REPORT: Carter's relations poor with big labor, business

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
WASHINGTON — Although President Carter has been unable to ingratiate himself with American business, despite high-volume promises of a 1980 balanced budget, his relations with George Meany and the AFL-CIO have dropped to the lowest level of any Democratic President since Harry Truman a quarter of a century ago. Inside the AFL-CIO's 16th Street palace overlooking the White House, Meany himself recently delivered the ultimate rebuke in the privacy of his office — that Jimmy Carter "may be the most conservative President since Herbert Hoover." That such a description of Mr. Carter seems to be a gross exaggeration misses the point. The point is that almost five months into its first term, the Carter administration has gained the unusual reputation of being no friend of business and no friend of labor, an alien in both camps and a comfort to neither. Indeed, the political connection between the Carter White House and the AFL-CIO was quietly — and totally — severed several weeks ago, not by some lieutenant but by Meany himself. The divorce followed the first of what was to be a series of informal lunches. That luncheon, hosted by Hamilton Jordan, Mr. Carter's chief political aide, was held in the White House mess. Present, among others, were the new chairman of the Democratic National Committee, former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis (hand-picked by Mr. Carter for the unenviable job of taking political orders from the White House), and the AFL-CIO's top political operative, Alexander Barkan. The date was March 31, the very day that the Democratic National Committee snubbed Meany and the AFL-CIO in the election of new members to the executive committee. Meany himself was not all that provoked by the snub and about a week later Barkan, hoping to follow up Jordan's White House hospitality, invited Jordan and his deputy, Landon Butler, to a lunch at the Hay-Adams, also with Curtis present. "It was a home-and-home affair," an AFL-CIO official told us. But before the second lunch could be held, Meany ordered it called off. That anti-Carter decision by

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Will the FBI be the same?

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN
WASHINGTON — The FBI, once the Rock of Gibraltar of government agencies, has been shaken down to its foundations. Several agents have been accused of violating the laws they were sworn to uphold. One veteran of the wars against crime and sedition, John Kearney, has been indicted and faces trial. This has stirred a great debate in the backrooms of Washington. Most agents have lined up solidly behind Kearney; they believe he has been singled out by the Justice Dept. as a scapegoat. The people around Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell, on the other hand, warn that agents must live by the laws they enforce. Both sides have brought us confidential papers. We have listened to their impassioned arguments. The outcome could determine whether the FBI will survive as a formidable law enforcement agency. As the bootleggers and gangsters of the 1920s gave way to the drug traffickers and revolutionaries of the 1970s, the FBI stood unscathed. Its minions developed a reputation for vigilance and integrity. The greenest agent in the field became accepted in his community as a fearless, incorruptible bloodhound. But increasingly the FBI devoted an incredible portion of its manpower, its budget and its priorities to spying on citizens who merely exercised the constitutional guarantees of free speech, assembly and petition. The Socialist Workers party, for example, preaches a peaceful but unpopular Marxist political philosophy. It does not advocate the violent overthrow of the existing system. The party has every right under the Constitution, therefore, to operate in this country. Yet some FBI officials, in their zeal, began to look upon themselves as less subject to the laws they required others to obey. They allegedly burglarized party offices and stole financial records, membership lists and other documents. The Socialist Workers have shown us evidence, for example, that the FBI broke into their headquarters in Detroit in October, 1971. Some of the stolen records mysteriously turned up in the files of the Detroit police. One woman, named Norma Jean Lodico, resigned from the party, which kept the only copy of her resignation letter. Yet a copy of the letter later turned up in the files of the Civil Service Commission. She was called in for questioning, as an Interior Department employee, about her "subversive" activities. Other people, whose names appeared on the stolen records, also began getting visits and phone calls from FBI agents. The indicted Kearney, however, headed a special FBI team, which was assigned to investigate the Weathermen Underground. Unlike the Socialist Workers, the Weathermen were violent. They had claimed credit for numerous bombings across the country. FBI sources told us the weathermen were the most dangerous of all political dissidents. Now, Kearney has been charged with using illegal wiretaps and nail tamperings during his investigation of the Weathermen. His supporters showed us a memo about the case, which makes the following points: — Former Atty. Gen. Edward Levi, in a decision not to prosecute federal agents for opening mail, said: "Questions of the legality of intelligence methods... did not reach the courts until this decade... Whatever can be said about the law now, the department believes at the time the potential defendants acted, there was substantial basis for thinking that the law was otherwise." — Levi maintained that officials "at the highest levels" failed to clarify investigative guidelines. Therefore, "all this would render a prosecution by the government hypocritical." — Not until 1972 did the courts rule that the president lacks the power to authorize unwarranted wiretappings unless it involves foreign espionage. "In this connection," the document notes, "all the activities alleged in the

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE: The White House sells news that's prepackaged

By BENJAMIN SHORE
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — After several consecutive days of gathering news on Capitol Hill, we strolled over to the White House to see how our colleagues were getting along in this fifth month of the Carter presidency. The atmosphere remains as cordial as it was when the new administration was just getting settled in — and as cordial as the traditional adversary role of the press permits. But the news-gathering atmosphere on the Hill still is far more open and free-wheeling. The irony is that in the running battle for capturing the public's attention, the White House continues to win with ease. Most news about the President and his plans is prepackaged and sold at the daily press briefings. Very little is without design. A President is his own best salesman, whether he's holding a press conference, signing bills in the Rose Garden or chatting with gawkers on the sidewalk as he goes to church. There is no one in Congress who commands press attention like a President can. There's nothing exciting about Robert Byrd or Tip O'Neill. Yet these Senate and House leaders, plus several dozen committee and subcommittee chairmen, have more power over major legislation than the President could ever hope to wield. The White House, knowing this, takes its case to the people via the media, whose representatives gather each day for the ritual of the press briefing. This normally is a one-sided affair, with Press Secretary Jody Powell explaining Mr. Carter's position on the latest development at home and abroad. On our recent visit to the press room in the West Wing, the main subject was the House Ways and Means Committee's heavy-handed dismantling of Mr. Carter's energy plan. The deregulation of newly discovered natural gas, Powell said on behalf of the President, would be "a $70-billion rip-off of the American people," and the refusal to accept the gasoline tax increase and the gas-guzzler penalty tax was a serious error. In this manner, the administration speaks with one voice, while Congress speaks with 535 diverse voices. We would not have been able to find an administration official to say publicly that deregulating new natural gas wouldn't be a rip-off. But on Capitol Hill, we can and do find competing powerful legislators eager to bellow their true feelings. There is excitement not in the personalities in Congress but in their diversity and richness of viewpoints. At the White House, there is far less excitement in the daily sayings of one man. White House reporters know they are used as a transmission belt for the chief executive, and they accept the fact that the public needs to know his views. But they are easily frustrated by the sterility of the daily ritual which Powell early on referred to as "feeding" the press. So when Powell stumbles, as he did the other day, the winds shift dramatically in the press room. The results can be overkill in the press, but everyone on our side seems to enjoy it. The most recent Big Stumble was the assertion by Powell and his deputy, the affable and open Rex Granum, who used to make his living as a reporter, that it was the President who asked the IRS to audit his 1975 income tax return. Sensing a possible big fish on the hook, the reporters jerked at that version of the audit. Powell and Granum had to suspend their briefing for over an hour, confer with the President's lawyer, then come back and eat crow. The long newspaper stories the next day breathlessly recounted the discovery of a flaw in the White House's information machine, while barely mentioning that there was no apparent corruption for the President to try to hide. Now, that's the kind of excitement that can be found on Capitol Hill all day long, yet for some strange reason Americans still find their President much more interesting.

Cosgrave concedes in Irish election

By ED BLANCHE

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Prime Minister Liam Cosgrave conceded an upset defeat Friday night to Jack Lynch's Fianna Fail party in Ireland's general elections.

"While the results are not yet final, the indications are that there will be a change of government," Cosgrave said in a nationwide television broadcast.

The lead of Fianna Fail—Gaelic for Soldiers of Destiny—surprised pollsters and political commentators, who had predicted Cosgrave's coalition would scrape home with a narrow margin.

A return of Fianna Fail to power could have a major effect on events in war-torn Northern Ireland.

As Cosgrave spoke, Fianna Fail had taken 33 seats, while Cosgrave's Fine Gael-Labor coalition had 20 in the 148-member Dail, the lower house of parliament.

Indications were that business-backed Fianna Fail, which held power for 16 years until ousted in March 1973, would win up to 77 seats.

Ireland has a complex transferable vote system with a candidate needing a certain number of votes for election and the surplus distributed among other candidates in the districts. The system can require as many as 20 vote counts, and final results are not expected before late Saturday.

Inflation and unemployment were the major issues in the campaign.

Warfare between Roman Catholic and Protestant extremists in the British province of Northern Ireland received little direct attention from the candidates, but the Fianna Fail has opposed emergency measures adopted by Cosgrave's government against Irish Republican Army operations from the republic.

Fianna Fail has said it will abolish the special no-jury courts set up by the coalition to crack down on the outlawed IRA fighting to end British rule in the north.

Lynch has said he wants the British to give a declaration of intent to withdraw from the province, a move Britain has repeatedly said it will not make. Lynch has also indicated he may seek United Nations intervention in Northern Ireland to end eight years of sectarian bloodshed and IRA insurrection there.

There have been some indications of an economic upturn, but inflation is running at an annual rate of 16 per cent.

Both Cosgrave and Lynch won re-election in their districts.

When East played the deuce of hearts at the first trick, West was about to switch to clubs. But then he took a second look.

East's deuce could not be based on three low cards since in that case South would have the singleton queen. Clearly impossible South hadn't played the queen at the first trick.

East couldn't have started with 9-2 of hearts since he would have played the nine. Only two possibilities remained: East had started with the singleton deuce or with Q-2.

Either way, East's deuce encouraged West. West therefore led his lowest heart at the second trick, and East won with the queen.

Seeing what his partner wanted, East returned a club, and West defeated the contract with two club tricks.

If West had shifted to any suit at all after the first trick, South would have made the contract. A club shift would allow declarer to draw trumps and then discard on dummy's good diamonds.

AUSTIN — It was on a dusty, dry-hot afternoon on the High Plains that this writer first encountered a coyote.

My uncle, whose farm served as my summer home between my sophomore and junior years in high school, suggested that I take the .22 rifle with me to the north field, where I planned to plow under the wheat stubble.

"There will be coyotes out there most likely," he said.

Now I'd seen a couple of coyotes before. Ranchers and farmers had hung them on their five-wire fences all over the Panhandle to scare off the dead critters' companions.

And once I saw a scrawny shadow dash from intrusion of our pickup headlights, dragging a jackrabbit carcass between the thick, irrigate rows of milo flanking the dirt road near my uncle's ranch, northwest of Hereford.

Despite the rumble of the 15-year-old tractor and the clanking of that plow, five gray coyotes soon had fallen into formation, trotting not more than 10 feet behind the plow.

I put the rifle in my lap and stopped the tractor. The critters disappeared into the stubble.

The weapon once again holstered, I turned a corner and saw the five outlaws once more stalking my machine. Twice I rounded that field with the coyotes, now brown with dust, right in my wake.

"What are those stupid animals doing?" I mumbled, reaffirming my belief that coyotes are worthless, dumb creatures.

It was just then that my tractor flushed a cottontail. Those "lazy" coyotes suddenly seemed quite alert and efficient as they pursued, surrounded and pounced upon their prey. The capture done, one of the animals toted the prize into a nearby brushy pasture (remember the soil bank?) and the other four immediately fell back behind the tractor.

This went on for several hours until the coyotes had caught five or so rabbits and an injured pheasant.

Stupid? No, clever and persistent and a declining minority.

Nowdays, there's little patience with the coyote. Sheep and goat ranchers in particular have determined that the coyote should be eradicated.

In Lampasas County, a $50 bounty has been posted for each coyote brought in dead (not alive) and even Atty. Gen. John Hill's office is quietly supporting a Wyoming ranchers' federal court fight to use certain restricted coyote control devices, including the controversial cyanide trap.

Environmentalists and "do-gooders" are taking a lot of heat in the rural areas for their efforts to protect the coyote population.

Coyote control problem continues controversial

There seems to be a good deal of misunderstanding on both sides of the issue. A lot of that stems from a lack of understanding of the coyote itself.

Contrary to what many conservationists will argue, coyotes do kill baby lambs, kids and calves.

And, contrary to what many ranchers may believe, these kills do not provide the sustenance from which most coyotes exist.

A versatile animal, a coyote can adapt to his situation.

When youngsters clear out the rabbits in their kinfolk's pasture with their pellet and .22 rifles, that's when increases in calf and lamb kills often are reported.

Eliminating a coyote's food source seems to trigger that adaptation mechanism. Other animals might move on — the coyote seems to prefer a diet adjustment.

Scientists report that once a coyote has killed a domestic animal and fed it to its young still in the lair, there are indications that the coyote puppies will grow up to prefer — and hunt — sheep and calves.

And then there was the case of the sheep kills in the Texas Hill Country. Numerous county newspapers carried headlines decrying the coyote as the ruination of the sheep and goat industry.

Soon, however, it was discovered that many of these mutilations were caused by packs of dogs — many of them belonging to the victimized ranchers themselves — which were wandering the fields at night looking for a fun chase and kill.

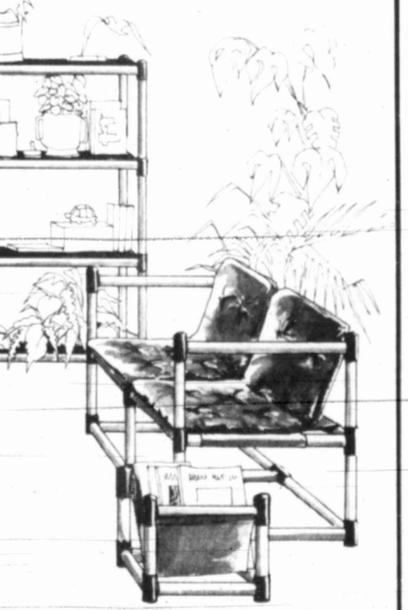

No solution to the coyote problem will appease those with extreme views on the issue.

A reasonable program carried out by state or federal experts with the least emotional involvement may be the answer.

Wholesale slaughter is as ridiculous as no control at all.

Keep On Going

They were marching down Main Street, and right at the height of the parade the tuba player blew a sour note. A really sour note.

People snickered. Some burst out laughing. But, regardless, they had to hand it to the tuba player... he kept right on blowing, right on going.

Makes you stop and think. Sure, it's natural to laugh at someone else's sour note. But how about our own mistakes? No one can get through life without them — that's sure.

The question is, do you stop or do you keep on trying, keep on going? If you've been in church lately, you'll know the answer to that one.

Opening door is vital task, story of Rhoda points out

By CHARLIE SHEDD

The Bible has always been a best seller. Suddenly it has become "hot copy," which means individuals, couples, families are turning to scripture for answers. Dr. Charlie Shedd has been asked to do a weekly Bible study for the whole family. OPEN THE DOOR, RHODA

Acts 12—

It was dangerous being a Christian in those days. You could be killed. Or locked up. Peter knew, because that's what they did to him. They put him in jail. Naturally, his friends gathered to pray for his release. He was their leader, all important to their cause. They prayed long, they prayed earnestly, and their prayers were answered.

Peter escaped. Of course, he hurried for cover. Being careful to stay in the shadows, he went where he knew his friends would be.

At a time like this every minute would count. And that's one reason the story of Rhoda has special meaning. She was in charge of answering the door. Right there in the middle of their prayers, they heard a heavy knocking. So Rhoda went, and whether she saw him or heard his voice, she knew it was Peter. Without stopping to let him in, she hurried back to make the announcement, "It's Peter."

—For pondering. For sharing. For discussion.

Can you think of a time when you were so excited, so ready to celebrate, you forgot some crucial item? Or when someone else in the family did?

Acts 12:15-16 has an interesting twist:

When Rhoda told them who was at the door, they said, "You must be out of your mind." But she kept on telling them it was Peter. Then they said, "You must have seen his ghost." "Maybe it was an angel." "Don't be ridiculous." Finally, someone decided to go see, and they were absolutely amazed.

Why were they amazed? They had been praying for Peter's release. Didn't they really think God could answer their prayers? Or was it because their prayers were answered so quickly?

The Bible says if we pray, believing, we will receive.

—Further questions: Do you remember a time when you prayed and your answer came so fast it surprised you?

What prayers do we say, not really expecting anything?

Do we, as a family, honestly believe God answers prayer? Today? This minute?

Right now, let's decide on something we should pray for together, expecting.

Episcopal dean offers cathedral resignation

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Washington Cathedral Dean Francis B. Sayre Jr., who shepherded construction of the massive gothic cathedral for 25 years and made its pulpit a conscience for the community and the nation, announced that he will retire in January.

Dean Sayre submitted his resignation — effective Jan. 17, his 63rd birthday — to the Cathedral Chapter, or governing board, which accepted it "with regret." A spokesman for the Chapter said a search would begin soon for a successor.

In the quarter of a century that he has served as dean of the Episcopal Cathedral Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, Dean Sayre has taken up causes that ranged from outraged attacks on the McCarthyism of the 1950s to the civil rights and anti-war movements of more recent years.

But he still was able to devote considerable time and energy to the continuing planning and building of the magnificent cathedral structure that in many respects is America's counterpart to England's Westminster Abbey.

Under his leadership, the cathedral, which was begun in 1907, received 50 per cent of the stained glass now in place — including the remarkable west rose window installed last year. He also was responsible for the completion of the south transept, the central tower, the west facade and the completion of the nave.

Under Dean Sayre's leadership, the cathedral has been open to the community to a far greater extent than is usually true of such structures. While it remains unmistakably Episcopalian, its facilities are available to other religious groups, both in and out of the Christian tradition.

At least one Jewish congregation — Temple Sinai — met regularly in the cathedral until its own structure was completed.

In an interview last spring, he defined his vision of the role of the cathedral in relation to "that other hill — Capitol Hill — where the decisions that affect the whole nation are made."

It is the role of the cathedral on its hill to assess those decisions, to see that they are "rooted in the humanity which we all share as a nation ... when they are not rooted in that (humanity) they will be divisive," he said.

Dean Sayre has not hesitated to speak out when he felt the decision-makers across town were wrong. In 1954 he used his pulpit to attack Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, and his Communist-hunting tactics.

"Jim Pike and I swapped pulpits — we were the first anywhere to speak out" against McCarthy, he recalled of the era when criticism of McCarthy carried grave risk of being branded as Communist or fellow-traveler.

"I got bushels and bushels of letters from all over the country — mostly attacking me," he said. "But I felt the church had a very profound role to play."

He was equally outspoken in the years of the civil rights movement and was one of the clergy who responded to the call of Martin Luther King Jr. for help in the Selma, Ala., struggle for voting rights.

During the anti-war movement of the late 1960s and early 1970s, the cathedral became a major rallying point for opponents of the nation's involvement in Vietnam. In January 1973 thousands packed the Cathedral and others stood outside in a cold rain to be part of a "counter-inaugural" concert by Leonard Bernstein.

In 1971, he traveled to South Africa to aid a fellow Anglican cleric, the Rev. Gonville French-Beytagh of Johannesburg, who had been arrested for his opposition to restrictive racial laws in that country.

In 1972, Dean Sayre generated a bitter controversy among many of the liberals who usually supported him. In a Palm Sunday sermon, he sharply criticized Israel for "oppressing" Arab residents of Jerusalem and other territories taken by Israel in the Six-Day War.

Six months later, he added fuel to the fire by further criticism of Israel — this time for its air attacks on Syria and Lebanon in retaliation for the slaying of Israeli athletes at the Olympics.

The dean readily acknowledged that his outspoken position on controversial issues has cost the cathedral thousands of dollars, but he defends the course he has followed.

South African minister will speak in Midland

Mr. Nyaba was born in a fetish witchdoctor family in Northern Ghana. Named for his grandfather, he was trained in the ways of witchcraft and was to be the reincarnation of the powerful fetish priest who was his grandfather. He embraced Christianity while attending a government boarding school. He became very active in religious instruction classes through his high school years and later as a teacher himself. Ultimately he embarked on a three-year pastoral training course in an Assemblies of God Bible Institute in Ghana. After spending some years as a pastor in Ghana, he came to the U. S. to further train himself for the ministry, enrolling in Southeastern Assemblies of God College at Waxahachie. He received his B.S. degree from that school last month and currently is on a three-month speaking tour to Assemblies of God congregations in the Southwest, before returning to Ghana to resume his pastoral work there.

Court rules state may execute under law enacted after crime

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled 6 to 3 Friday that a state can execute an offender under a law enacted after the commission of the crime.

The court ruled that imposition of the death penalty on a Jacksonville, Fla., man who murdered two of his four children did not deny him the constitutional protection against ex post facto laws.

Justice William H. Rehnquist wrote in the opinion for the court that "the brutality and heinousness" of the murders and of the torture and abuse of the other two children are "relevant ... to the trial judge's imposition of the sentence of death" on Ernest John Dobbert Jr.

But dissenting Justice John Paul Stevens wrote, "The atrocious nature of this individual's crimes, which the court recounts in such detail, is of course no more relevant to the legal issue than the fact that 10 of the 12 jurors who heard all of the evidence voted to spare his life."

The decision is the latest in a series on the death penalty since the court ruled five years ago that state capital punishment laws were unconstitutional because they were imposed randomly, executing some and imprisoning others.

"Of the hundreds of prisoners on death row at the time," Stevens said, "none was resented to death" because "our state courts and legislatures uniformly acted on the assumption that none of them could be executed pursuant to a subsequently enacted statute." But under the rationale now adopted by the court there is "no such constitutional barrier," he said.

Florida Attorney General Robert L. Shevin told a reporter that the decision affects none of the 86 other persons — including one woman — who were on the state's death row as of the end of May.

The American Civil Liberties Union's Capital Punishment Project said the decision may affect few if any of the 283 other persons now on death row in 17 other states.

Shevin said that "if there was ever a case in which the death penalty was warranted, I believe this is it." He added, "I'm pleased with the victory for the state, because there was a good substantial legal argument on both sides."

The ACLU project's Henry Schwarzschild said that "the law ... that the Supreme Court made is dubious, the morality of it appalling and the social policy of it outrageous."

Louis O. Frost Jr., attorney for the imprisoned 37-year-old Dobbert, declined immediate comment but said he will petition for a rehearing. The court almost never grants such petitions.

Dobbert was convicted of murdering his daughter, Kelly Ann, 9, on New Year's Eve, 1971, and his son, Ryder Scott, 7, sometime between New Year's and April 18, 1972. Police never have found the bodies. He also was convicted of torturing his son, Ernest John III, 11, and of abusing his daughter Honore Elizabeth, 5. An anonymous tipster told a welfare agency in Jacksonville in January 1972 that there was evidence of child abuse at the Bobbert residence. But an investigation turned up no evidence of it, and the case was closed.

Two months later, Ernest, who had been beaten, was found wandering in the city. He told authorities that his father, in addition to beating him, had beaten Kelly Ann and Ryder to death and had left a battered Honore locked in a closet. The child described Dobbert as "a wonderful father except when mommy's not here."

Police got a warrant for Dobbert's arrest, but he fled before they could serve it.

Briscoe pardons eight

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A man convicted in Midland County of murder with malice aforethought and one convicted of theft over $200 were among eight persons pardoned by Gov. Dolph Briscoe

Leivy Matthews, sentenced July 16, 1975, in Midland County to 10 years for murder with malice aforethought, was paroled to Louisiana after earning credit for three years and five months.

Keith Mansell, sentenced Nov. 9, 1976, in Midland County, to three years for theft over $200, was paroled to Midland County after credit for one year and three months.

Also paroled to Midland County was Maurice Taylor, sentenced Feb. 10, 1975, in Midland County to 10 years for two counts of possession of heroin, after earning credit for five years and seven months.

Briscoe paroled the three men along with five other persons sent to prison from West Texas. He acted on the recommendations of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Raul P. Bernal, sentenced Feb. 26,

1974, in Ector County to 12 years for possession of heroin and possession of narcotic paraphernalia, was paroled to Andrews County after earning credit for six years through time served and good behavior.

Barbara Fenton, sentenced March 29, 1976, in Ector County to seven years for possession of heroin, possession of marijuana and forgery, was paroled to Ector County after earning credit for three years and three months.

Leroy P. Lopez, sentenced Dec. 29, 1976, in Ector County to two years for forgery, was paroled to Ector County after earning credit for one year and five months.

Russell L. O'Neal, sentenced Aug. 18, 1975, in Midland County to 10 years for theft over $200, was paroled to Arkansas after earning credit for three years and four months.

Osie L. Phillips, Jr., sentenced March 21, 1975, in Ector County to six years for theft over $200, was paroled to Ector County after earning credit for three years and 11 months.

Manure nets no reaction

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP) — If you want to be heard, says restaurateur John Beery, first you have to get attention. One way is to dump five cubic yards of horse manure on the steps of City Hall.

Beery was mad because the city had dumped debris on city property next to one of his three restaurants.

"I protested that what they were doing was bad for the neighborhood and bad for business," he said. "But all they told me was that they were sorry, but they didn't have the money to do it any other way."

Officials to file answer to request

BIG SPRING — Howard County officials expect to file an answer to Trans-Regional Airlines' request for suspended service even though the time limit has expired.

Howard County attorney Harvey Hooser contacted the Texas Aeronautics Commission (TAC) Tuesday and informed it that he had not received a complete copy of the information Trans-Regional had submitted to justify its request. Hooser followed the call with a letter asking for the extension until 15 days after the county receives a copy of the Trans-Regional letter.

A TAC spokesman said Wednesday that unless the airline can show hardship, he could see no reason the request for an extension would not be granted.

Trans-Regional suspended its services May 1 under a temporary order granted by the TAC. The Trans-Regional letter requesting the suspension cited financial hardship from dropping passenger lists and lack of cooperation from the county as reasons for the requested suspension.

Regents appointed

LUBBOCK — Three regents have been appointed to the Texas Tech University Board of Regents after what Gov. Dolph Briscoe termed "careful consideration."

Newly appointed to the six-year terms were Lubbock businessman Roy K. Furr and Baird rancher James L. Snyder. Regent Clint Formby, a Hereford radio executive, was appointed to his second term on the board.

Furr replaces Bill E. Collins of Lubbock and Snyder succeeds Dr. John J. Hinchey of San Antonio, whose terms expired Jan. 31 this year.

Because the state legislative session has ended, the two new regents and Formby will serve without Senate approval until January 1979, when the legislature will meet again in regular session.

At that time the Senate can either approve or reject the governor's appointees. In addition, the terms of the other three Tech regents will expire Jan. 31, 1979, and Gov. Briscoe again will have to consider making board nominations.

Seaver leaves loud reminder

NEW YORK (AP) A radio blared in the New York Mets clubhouse. "That's Tom Seaver's radio," said Bud Harrelson. "He had it here for as long as I can remember. It's a nice radio and he left it here."

"I guess he wanted to leave part of himself with us," Harrelson looked around the clubhouse, smiling faintly. "I guess what Seaver was trying to say was, 'I'm putting you in charge of the radio, Bud. Take care of it.' I put it over Jon Matlack's locker, since he's the club representative—and that's where it's going to stay."

SEAVER HAS left the Mets, but the melody lingers on, it seems. "He'll never look right in red to me," said Harrelson, talking about Seaver's new team, the Cincinnati Reds. "I'll always think of him in blue—New York Mets blue."

Harrelson squeezed into a tight pair of blue jeans and stood up, running fingers through his curly hair. "You know, you grow close to a guy after playing with him for 10 years," said Harrelson, who roomed with Seaver for eight of his seasons with the Mets. "You're with him 172 days a year—having hundreds of dinners together, exchanging hundreds of bad jokes..."

Harrelson's voice trailed off as he turned around to pull something off the shelf of his locker. He fixed his gaze at the floor. "I'll be sad for a while," he said.

OF ALL the Mets, Harrelson would be the one most affected by the loss of Seaver. The pair met in the minor leagues when both played for New York's Jacksonville farm team and shared common hardships and joys during the Mets' uneasy early existence.

"We were perfect roommates," Harrelson reminisced. "Tom did all the reading—and I did all the talking."

Harrelson noted that Seaver "used to read a lot" during their days together as roommates. "He would read these big, thick books," said Harrelson, holding his index finger and thumb two inches apart. "I don't know what he read—but he sure read a lot. He read about everything."

When Harrelson split with his first wife, it also marked a split of sorts in the shortstop's relationship with Seaver.

"I GUESS I needed my solitude more," said Harrelson, "and Tom did, too. It used to be fun to go back to the room and talk about the baseball games. But I guess we outgrew that after a while."

When the Mets completed the controversial trade for the Cy Young Award pitcher Wednesday night, Harrelson said he was overcome by sadness.

"I knew he had been traded, even before it was announced," Harrelson said. "He wasn't with the ballclub in Atlanta. I knew he was gone. I felt bad..."

Harrelson was especially sensitive about Seaver's dramatic departure from the Mets' clubhouse Thursday morning. He made it a point to stay away from Shea Stadium when Seaver came in to clean out his locker.

"I didn't want to talk to him at a moment like that," said Harrelson. "I don't think I could have taken it. He's a great guy."

Contemplating a reunion with the great pitcher on the playing field, Harrelson finally broke into a smile. "I don't know how I'll feel when I have to hit against him," he said. "I've never faced my best friend before. But I'll tell you one thing; I'll probably have a smile on my face."

Rain halts Pfister, Cox match

LONDON (AP) — Rain halted play in mid-afternoon Friday with Hank Pfister, of Bakersfield, Calif., and Mark Cox, Britain's No. 1, tied in the third set of the $100,000 tournament at the Queen's Club.

Pfister lost the first set 8-9, won the second 6-1 and was tied in the third at 4-4.

That was the only semifinal to get on court. The other match, between Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Raul Ramirez of Mexico, never got started.

On Saturday, last day of the tournament, Pfister and Cox will finish their match. Gottfried and Ramirez will follow, and the final between the two winners will be played after that.

Rose Bowl courts Super

The Los Angeles Times

PASADENA — It is widely believed in pro football that the city of Pasadena and the National Football League have a similar goal. They'd like to play the Super Bowl game in the Rose Bowl as often as every other January — at the least.

With 104,696 permanent seats this is the nation's largest football stadium, and for this and other reasons many NFL and Pasadena people prefer an annual arrangement.

There has been only one major hitch in their planning: The 7,000 seats that should be among the Rose Bowl's best — those in the first 14 rows — are the worst. They're too low to provide an unobstructed view of the field.

This is a handicap that may soon be eliminated.

Pasadena authorities say they are preparing to lower the Rose Bowl's playing surface an estimated 62.8 feet. The cost, including other structural changes, would be $280,000. And the hope is to complete the project by the 1980 Super Bowl, which has been awarded to Pasadena.

At the NFL meeting in New York this week, a Pasadena committee led by James Crain, the city's director of general services, said the work could start next January if the league committed itself to the Rose Bowl with a long-term contract.

NFL owners decided against such a contract "at this time" but will meet informally with Pasadena leaders this spring to keep the project alive.

A lowered field would benefit the New Year's Day game as well. In recent seasons, the colleges have discounted ticket prices in the first 14 rows.

Walter Hoefflin, assistant manager of the Tournament of Roses, said tickets in this area are now stamped POV (Possible Obstructed View). With the rest of the stadium sealed at $15 for the Rose Bowl, POV seats are sold for $12.50.

Super Bowl promoters, who charge a flat $20, made no such discount last January but are loath to return to Pasadena if the POV section remains.

Pasadena's promise to lower its playing field under certain conditions — and its willingness to do so to increase stadium revenues — contrasts with the unwillingness of Coliseum promoters to do the same thing for their three football clients, USC, UCLA and the Rams.

A Rams spokesman said Thursday: "Our days at the Coliseum are numbered. There's no way we'll still be there in 1980."

He declined to speculate where the Rams are going.

All-America team packs punch

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The 1977 All-American college baseball team announced Thursday features a team with a .424 batting average, and two pitchers with a combined 25-1 record.

The nine hitters on the 1977 honor team for NCAA Division I schools average almost 10 home runs per player, led by Arizona State's Bob Morner with 22.

The All-American team was selected by the American Association of College Baseball Coaches.

The 1977 first team:
C—Dennis Cirbo, Colorado, 400 BA, 17 home runs, 55 RBIs

1b—Glen Goya, Colorado State, 484, 17 HRs, 51 RBIs

2b—Bob Horner, Arizona State, 376, 22 HRs, 72 RBIs

3b—Bob Volk, Oral Roberts U., 407, 13 HRs, 43 RBIs

SS—Steve Macko, Baylor, 427, 6 HRs, 43 RBIs

CF—Nat Showalter, Mississippi St., 459, 4 HRs, 44 RBIs

CF—Darrrell Brown, California St., 396, 11 HRs, 44 RBIs

CF—Al Weston, Michigan St., 421, 5 HRs, 35 RBIs

DH—Larry Patterson, Gonzaga-Spokane, 448, 5 HRs, 55 RBIs

P—Steve Taylor, Delaware, 12-1, 1.59 ERA; Randy Martz, South Carolina, 13-0 ERA.

Jets-Bears to kick off 85-tilt summer slate

NEW YORK (AP) — National Football League teams will play 85 exhibition games this summer, beginning with the Hall of Fame Game between the New York Jets and Chicago Bears at Canton, Ohio, on Saturday, July 30.

The first full weekend of 14 games will run

Friday through Monday, August 5-8, the NFL said Friday.

The Jets-Bears contest, to be televised by ABC-TV, is one of 10 preseason games scheduled to be shown nationally. The others are Aug. 2, Miami at Minnesota; Sept. 2, Chicago at St. Louis; Sept. 3, San Francisco at Oakland, all on ABC; Aug. 14, Baltimore at Houston; Aug. 21, Cincinnati at Detroit; Aug. 28, Pittsburgh at New England, all on CBS; and Aug. 19, Minnesota at Baltimore; Aug. 27, Baltimore at Dallas; Sept. 8, Pittsburgh at Dallas, all on NBC.

Dropped from preseason schedule was the annual Chicago Tribune College All-Star game matching top rookies with the defending Super Bowl champions. The game was discontinued at the newspaper's request.

Five teams — Cincinnati, Cleveland and Miami of the American Conference and Dallas and Detroit of the National Conference — will play all six preseason of their games against interconference opponents.

Sally Little leads Judy by stroke

NOBLESVILLE, Ind. (AP) — South African Sally Little birdied four consecutive holes Friday afternoon to share a onestroke lead at five under par 67 with Donna Caponi Young after the opening round of a $50,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

The 25-year-old Miss Little, who credits Gary Player with inspiring her to play on the American tour, began her streak on the 14th hole, sinking a 7-foot putt on the 145-yard hole.

She completed the streak by dropping a two-foot putt on the 17th, a 116-yard par-three.

Mrs. Young, trying for her 13th victory since joining the tour in 1965, belled her cause with an eagle on the 452-yard par five 15th hole.

Judy Rankin, a two-time winner this year, is one stroke back at 68. Vivian Brownlee is another stroke back at 69.

Foster, Griffey grab All-Star voting lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Cincinnati outfielders George Foster and Ken Griffey took the lead for two of the outfield positions in National League All-Star voting announced Friday.

Foster and Griffey surpassed two of the first-week leaders, Lou Brock of the St. Louis Cardinals and Reggie Smith of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Pittsburgh's Dave Parker retained his lead for the third outfield post.

Cincinnati and Los Angeles dominated the rest of voting with Dodger third baseman Ron Cey and first baseman Steve Garvey leading at their positions and shortstop Dave Concepcion, second baseman Joe Morgan and catcher Johnny Bench all in front at their spots.

Parker leads all outfielders with 365,505 votes while Foster, the most valuable player in last year's game, has 355,005 and Griffey 314,758 in the latest tabulations. Those three are closely followed in the voting by Cincinnati's Cesar Geronimo with 311,362, Brock at 303,463, Smith with 297,899 and Philadelphia's Greg Luzinski with 295,733.

That gives the National League five outfielders separated by about 19,000 votes.

ABC gets green light

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — U.S. District Court Judge Alan Barrow denied a union request Friday for a temporary injunction that would have halted, or sharply curtailed, live television coverage of the U.S. Open golf tournament.

The National Association of Broadcast Employees and Technicians (NABET), which represents technicians and engineers for the American Broadcasting Co., had charged that the company was violating an Oklahoma law forbidding the use of strike breakers.

The union has been striking ABC since May 16.

Zachry certain arm will be OK

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitcher Pat Zachry, a key figure in the trade that sent Tom Seaver to the Cincinnati Reds, expressed confidence Friday that his ailing right arm will be sound once he conquers nerve damage in his elbow.

The ailment, he said, developed during spring training. "It's getting better but I don't think it will ever be pain-free again."

Zachry said the elbow problem stems from off-season surgery to repair a hernia. "I couldn't do anything for two months after the operation. When I started throwing in January, the arm went tight. At spring training, I started favoring my elbow and fell into a lot of bad habits.

"MY BREAKING ball is flat, my fast ball has lost its velocity and the changeup has nothing."

When told of Zachry's comments, Joe McDonald, the Mets' general manager, said he talked with Zachry Friday morning and the right-hander assured him his arm was fine. "He told me arm feels okay," said McDonald. "And in my talks with Cincinnati, I had never been apprised of anything wrong with his arm.

"We'll have to investigate this further."

McDonald said he would have Zachry talk to the Mets' team physician, Dr. James Parkes, before Friday night's game here against Houston.

Zachry flew to New York Friday and was scheduled to pitch for the Mets against the Astros.

Foxes find a home

MIAMI (AP) — The Orange Bowl, better known for Dolphins, also has a family of foxes.

They've been befriended by 73-year-old John Perez, chief custodian of the stadium, who summons them by calling: "Here kitty, kitty."

Why? "What the hell, I don't know how to call a fox," he said.

The foxes live under the bleachers and eat food scraps left by fans who toss hot dogs and peanuts around in the excitement of a game.

Perez says he has known about the foxes for some time, pretty much as a casual observer. But about two months ago he ran into two baby foxes and really got hooked.

With this being the off-season, with no fans to leave food behind, Perez started feeding the foxes. Each morning, a fox waits for him while he unlocks his office. Perez takes some dog food from a refrigerator and places it in a bowl for the fox.

Harvey Martin claims his 'tools' stolen

DALLAS (AP) — As far as Dallas Cowboy defensive end Harvey Martin is concerned, the recent ruling outlawing the "head slap" is like taking away a man's professional tools.

"What?" he asked almost in horror when told about the ruling by the National Football League. "When did this happen? Oh, Lord... and I am a defensive lineman."

In the past, on-rushing defenders have been permitted one slap on the side of the head of opposing blockers. Explaining the new ruling, NFL supervisor officials Art McNally, said that "the body follows the head, and the defensive players used the slap to clear a path to the quarterback."

Martin considered the head slap a "way of countering the new scientific ways of holding used by offensive linemen. As long as the offense continues to hold, I think the defensive linemen will continue to slap. Slapping might be illegal, but so is holding."

The Dallas lineman said the head slap, "is a good tactic which gives you a chance to turn the corner. I didn't use it every, but it was part of my game. Making it illegal upsets me, but I can't change my style. If I worry about it, my game will be off."

Martin said he had never "screamed" about illegal holding because the slap was an equalizer. "But taking away the slap is like taking away your hands. We'll just have to think of something else."

Ed (Too Tall) Jones the other end of the Cowboy defensive unit, described the slap as his favorite technique. "But we started slapping arms instead of heads. By slapping the blockers' arms away, they couldn't hold. I hate that they made it illegal, but I figured they would."

ZACHRY, WHO helped the Reds win their second straight world championship last year, said he was temporarily stunned when informed of the trade. "At first, I was mad. I didn't want to go to New York. I thought, 'Why me?' The last eight years, I've dreamed, sweated and cried to get here and then they say, 'See you later.'"

During the flight, Zachry scanned a sports page and swore softly after reading of Seaver's tearful farewell to New York. He is aware that winning games will not necessarily win him fame at Shea Stadium, where Seaver has reigned as the Mets' leader for the past decade.

Zachry said he refuses to place added pressure on himself by trying to replace Seaver.

New doctor arrives on scene

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The name of the goose contest is over, and the winning entry is "Dr. K."

That's "K" as in the baseball scoring symbol for strikeouts, the category in which Rich "Goose" Gossage leads Pittsburgh Pirate pitchers.

Last month, the Pirates put their live goose on display. The bird, donated by a farm in tribute to Gossage, now has a cage in the Pirate bullpen.

The "Dr. K" nickname, selected from more than 600 entries made to radio station WWSW, was submitted by Earl Kohlfelder, a reporter for the Pittsburgh Press.

Among the other entries were "The Happy Honker" and "Thunderbird."

Meanwhile, Gossage's pitching fortunes have taken a turn for the worse since the arrival of the goose and such gimmicks as the "Goose is Loose" scoreboard sign.

Jets get early jump on NFL grid teams

FOOTBALL — The New York Jets open the earliest NFL training camp when rookies report July 7 and veterans July 15 with the rest of the American Conference teams reporting a week later in the National Conference, the Dallas Cowboys and Tampa Bay Buccaneers are the early birds with July 10, rookies, and July 22, veterans.

Cincinnati's Bengals signed Ohio State fullback Pete Johnson, who was the leading scorer in Big 10 history with 58 touchdowns. S.S. "Red" Wilson, head football coach at Elon College for 10 years, retired with a 72-34-2 record and three Carolinas and South Atlantic Conference championships.

BASKETBALL — University of Louisville coach Denny Crum said he would consider an offer to coach UCLA, but so far no one has asked. The Lakers signed Brad Davis, 6-3 guard from Maryland, their second NBA draft pick. Charles O. Finley sued the NBA and four former members of the ABA, accusing them of a million-dollar default in buying his now-defunct Memphis Tams.

TENNIS — Led by Chris Evert, the U.S. defeated South Africa 3-0 Friday and gained the final of the Federation Women's Lawn Tennis Cup. Miss Evert and Billie Jean King took only 76 minutes between them to score singles victories in the semifinals.

AUTO RACING — John Watson

steered his Alfa-powered Brabham to the fastest qualifying speed in Friday's trials for Sunday's Swedish Grand Prix, averaging 105.01 mph in nipping South Africa's Jody Scheckter. The U.S. Auto Club, anticipating possible requirements on engine exhaust noise by the EPA, Friday ordered use of mufflers in all of its stock car races. Rain kept practice to a minimum Friday, but Benny Parsons managed to squeeze out the fastest time of the day in preparation for Sunday's 400-mile race for Grand National stock cars at Cambridge Junction, Mich., with a 157.21, followed by Richard Petty (156.86) and David Pearson (156.52).

HOCKEY — The New York (NHL) Islanders signed two members of the Swedish National team, all-star goaltender Goran Hogosta and defenseman Stefan Persson.

SHORT TAKES — Kenneth Bove, 44, Plainview, N.Y., who headed Kenneth Bove & Co. and two aides, were given suspended federal sentences Friday for a multi-million dollar fraud against customers, including sports figures Ed Kranepool, Julius Erving, and Walt Frazier. All three defendants were ordered by Lasker to devote one day a week for the next year to "useful community service."

New York officials are considering setting up a nationwide Olympic lottery to finance a year-round training site for world-class athletes at Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the 1980 Olympics. Gino Natali and Roberto Gazzel of Italy won the seventh and last event of the World Flying Dutchman Sailing championships Friday.

The possibility of a strike by pro soccer players as the English season drew nearer when Football League clubs turned down their proposals for freedom of contract.

IOC may award Games to country

PRAGUE (AP) — The International Olympic Committee took the first step Friday toward spreading the Olympic Games around instead of concentrating them in one city.

It agreed in principle to the Games, from 1988 onwards, being awarded to a country rather than a city. This changes one of the fundamental principles on which Baron Pierre de Coubertin founded the modern Olympic Games 80 years ago.

But the country hosting the Games can still be expected to name one city as a base for the Games. Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, told The Associated Press: "This opens the door to spreading the Games. But we will consider each application individually and on its merits. We don't want to spread the events too much."

Arpad Csanadi of Hungary, president of the IOC's program commission, which recommended the changes, said: "A city that hosts the Olympic Games could possibly have the boxing in another city nearby, for example. But we aim to have the final events in all sports in the host city itself."

Spreading the Games has been widely suggested as a solution to the problem of growing costs, which have reached a stage where few cities in the world can afford to put them on.

The 50-kilometer walk, one of the traditional events of the Olympic Games until it was omitted at Montreal last year, is to be restored to the program.

In deciding this, the IOC overruled its program commission, which had recommended against restoring the long walking race.

Anthony tops pin tourney

SEATTLE (AP) — Earl Anthony of Tacoma, Wash., maintained a 121-pin lead over Jay Robinson of Los Angeles through the second session of match play Friday in the $95,000 Columbia Professional Bowlers Association National Championship.

Cubs surprise of NL

had the best managing percentage in baseball with San Francisco since 1965 until 1968, then retired to build a small fortune in Salt Lake City real estate.

In public, Franks is still as un-talkative as someone who is renowned for investing other people's money. But in the clubhouse he is the "king of needles."

"Herman is the world's champion agitator," said Clines, quickly inserting a barb of his own. "Of course, it's taken him two months to learn the basic soul handshake. He was away from the game too long. I have faith that in another two months he'll just about have the three-phase shake mastered."

Knowing his team cannot win by the book, Franks has gambled relentlessly. Last week, Franks ordered Jose Cardenal to lay down a bases-loaded squeeze bunt in the 11th inning of a 0-0 game.

Cardenal, a 299 hitter in 1976 who has ridden the bench this season, showed none of the showboat tendencies so prevalent in his previous baseball incarnations.

AFTER A perfect bunt, Cardenal explained his new team play theory simply: "Jose just go along with the program."

Nearly all the Cubs have gone along with the new program. Bobby Ray Murcer, acquired at the price of a batting champion, has driven in the runs (37 already) that Bill Madlock could not. Murcer sits in a sawed-off rocking chair in the locker room and plays his "up-Against-the-Wall-Redneck-Mother" tape deck. "I'm a sophisticated cowboy," said the Oklahoman.

"There's no manure on my shoes." The bonus in the Murcer-Madlock trade was Steve Ontiveros, a "throw-in" now hitting 309 at third base. Next door at shortstop is the Cubs' No. 1 miracle — Ivan DeJesus — the man who was likewise a throw-in in the Bill Buckner-for-Rick Monday deal.

"You have to trade quality players to get quality players," said Kennedy. "But in both trades we not only got quality-for-quality, we also got numbers (two-for-one)."

Nevertheless, it is neither the place-setting singles of the keystone vacuum cleaners, Trillo and DeJesus, nor the clutch hitting of underrated centerfielder Jerry Morales (.468 with men on base last year) that will keep the Cubs afloat.

It is a kid relief pitcher named Bruce Sutter who is the Cub life raft.

The pitching staff is built around the 24-year-old fork baller. These days, Wrigley's Bleacher Bums wear tee-shirts that say, "Bruce Sutter — Oh, what a relief he is." But if the magician with 17 saves, a 0.79 ERA in 31 appearances and an unprecedented ratio of 67 strikeouts to five walks in 57 innings, suddenly turns sour all the Cubs will have acid indigestion.

The tall, pot-bellied Cub pitching staff of Bill Bonham, Ray Burris and Rick and Paul Reuschel (affectionately called Whale I and Whale II) are durable journeymen who have learned how soothing a seventh-inning shower can be when Sutter is on the mound.
