U.S. Army helicopter gunned down

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP)-North Korea gunned down an American helicopter today, killed three crewmen, captured another, and rebuffed U.S. demands for an immediate meeting on the tension-raising incident.

President Carter said the craft apparently strayed into communist territory through navigational error. He said he wants to insure "this does not escalate into a confrontation."

The North Koreans charged the Chinook chopper had made a deep intrusion into their airspace and was armed. American officials said it was carrying construction materials.

Communist representatives failed to show up at the Panmunjom truce village, although they offered to discuss the incident there on Satur-

Carter told seven senators who came to the White House that the North Koreans first fired a warning shot and the helicopter landed.

He said the Americans then "got out and inspected their helicopter, and then got into the helicopter and took off. After they took off, the North parently shot the helicopter down.

"We understand that two of the crew members were killed when the helicopter crashed. Another was killed in the exchange of gunfire in some way we don't know yet. And the fourth one apparently has been captured."

At Panmunjom, there was no word on the Americans' identity or the disposition of the bodies.

The United Nations command in Seoul said the helicopter flew over North Korean territory unin-tentionally after it missed its landing site in the south.

'We asked the North Koreans to meet with us immediately at Panmunjom to discuss the whole incident," Carter told the senators. "We are asking them to expedite this meeting. At this time it's scheduled for Friday our time...We are trying to move it up if we can.'

The President said the chopper was on "a routine flight from the west coast of Korea to the east coast in daylight" and that it apparently lost a navigational fix.

"Of course, that's a surmise," the President said.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the helicopter was apparently hit by North Korean gunfire when it crossed the demarcation in. But he said he did not know the sort of weapons used

"It landed briefly, was inspected by the crew, was evidently approached by North Korean personnel," he said. "The helicopter took off and was shot

The spokesman said that while the President used the term "exchange of gunfire" there was "no indication there was an exchange in the sense of American or South Korean fire directed at North Koreans."

He said the helicopter was unarmed but he did not know if the crew members carried weapons.

Powell said the helicopter first took off from a military base at Pyong-Taek, about 35 miles south of Seoul on the Korean west coast.

It headed for Pangnung on the South Korean east coast about 15 or 20 miles south of the DMZ on "a strictly materiel support or transport mission, supporting the construction of an observation post in mountainous Powell said. He later said the post was being built for the United Nations Command. He also said he had no indication that the helicopter ever picked up its load or landed south of the DMZ after the Pyong Tack takeoff.

"The aircraft apparently veered north at the eastern end of the DMZ at the Pangnung area," the spokesman told reporters at a news briefing.

He said conflicting reports had been received about the exact location where the helicopter was shot down and he refused to give their range.

He said it was down "at least partially" in a river. The spokesman said warning shots were fired by the South Koreans just south of the DMZ to alert the Americans they were over North Korean territory.

The United Nations command in Seoul said the intrusion into North Korean air space was unintentional. It requested immediate return of crew and craft as well as an urgent meeting at Panmunjom.

The North Koreans countered with a proposal that the session be delayed until Saturday. They ignored a U.N. call for a meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday (6 a.m. CST) and did not reply to another proposal that they meet Fri-

While the official North Korean news agency announced the deaths of three of the men aboard, White House spokesman Jody Powell said the fate of all four men was uncertain.

Other U.S. sources said a beeper signal was heard, indicating at least one crewman had survived.

President Carter was advised of the incident as he listened to musical selections from "Carousel" with visiting West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt at a post-dinner entertainment at the White House.

The President coolly followed through with a planned private session with Schmidt, then went to the Situation Room to keep up with developments.

There be conferred with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, Secretary of Defense Harold Brown and Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser.

Retiring at 12:30 a.m. to the family quarters, Carter said: "We've done all we can do tonight.'

There was some confusion over exactly where the helicopter was brought down.

Powell said the incident occurred on or near the northern portion of the 2.5-mile wide demilitarized zone, which separates North and South Korea.

He acknowledged that in any event the helicopter was north of the DMZ's demarcation line and therefore over North Korean territory. However, Powell told reporters: "Any penetration of North Korean air space was accidental and regret-

By MALCOLM CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) - They started turning New York back on today, but the city was still reeling from a total electrical blackout triggered when lightning hit power lines and generating stations.

The blackout, which shut down the nation's largest city at 9:34 Wednesday night, continued into this after-noon as power technicians struggled to restore electricity one section at a

Mayor Abraham D. Beame declared a state of emergency and called for an investigation: "We cannot tolerate in this age of modern technology a power system that can shut down the nation's largest city."

The blackout, unlike the 1965 power outage that affected the whole Nor-theast, was limited to New York City, most of adjoining Westchester County and parts of Long Island. Also unlike 1965, there was looting in the city this time. Police arrested 2,000 persons during the long, humid night — at least six times as many as on an average night. The worst incidents of looting were in the Manhattan area, (primarily East Harlem and the upper West Side), Bronx and Brooklyn boroughs; 78 police officiers were reported injured, including one who

At noon, slightly more than half of Con Edison's nearly 2.8 million residential and commercial customers were still without power. Officials said they hoped to have most back in service by 2 p.m., but there was a possibility that some people might not get power for another 24

Con Ed said that all of Westchester County, all of the borough of Staten Island and most of the borough of Queens had power by noon.

But in the Bronx only 5 per cent had electricity, in Brooklyn less than 20 per cent and in Manhattan, only 25 per cent. Lower Manhattan, the nation's financial bub, was still dark.
Officials said it would be at least two hours after full power restoration before the city salubrays, on which millions depend for primary transportation, could start running.

For the most part, New Yorkers took the blackout in friendly stride. When the lights went out, they came out of the apartment buildings and brownstones carrying flashlights and candles to chat with their neighbors, help direct traffic and drink what cold beer and soda they could find. Small crowds gathered on street corners, traded anecdotes and listened to tranistor radios blaring the details of the Banks, state office buildings and Off Track Betting offices were closed. So were summer schools and gas station pumps.

Water was cut off in many of the city's larger buildings as electric pumps failed.

The subways were useless, most commuter railroads motionless. Wall Street was shut down, the stock market out of business for the duration. Elevators were immobilized.

Beame said there could be no subway or rail service until 21/2 hours after power was fully restored. Con-solidated Edison officials could not say when that would be.

Beame urged New Yorkers not to drive their cars. "Leave them where they are," he

Senate bolsters warhead chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving President Carter authority to go ahead with development of controversial neutron warheads, but is retaining the power to veto any effort to place the weapons into production. After nine hours of frequently emotional debate, the Senate Wednesday night rejected 58 to 38 a move headed by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to cut out funds for the weapon contained in

Some people get this age thing all out of sorts.

You can understand the unsettlement a person goes through on the eve of his 30th birthday. And you can almost feel the shock

(You who are there can salute Jack Benny, who hallowed that year . . . year after year after year.)

But who can understand, let alone sympathize with, those youngsters who fear that old-age is at the threshold at age 25? Forbid that!

They'll be looking back in the years to come and perhaps pondering over those youthful, fleeting years. A comely lass, who only in the past

And this gal who is feeling the pangs of 25-itis explained her apprehension. "That's a quarter of a century!"

"They say after 25 everything starts going downhill."

She seems to find enough interest and zest in life to keep her spirits up despite her age. But another apprehension seems to concern her. It has something to do

YMCA 'camp-in' youths praised

By KAY HORD

Never have so few done so much for so many with so little support. said Carl Forest Wednesday. referring to approximately 60 youths who joined the Alamo YMCA fundraising "camp-in" Saturday.

The "camp-in," to raise $60,000, died an early death 24 hours after it started. The original plan was to have interested youngsters camped at the site of the proposed Alamo YMCA until $60,000 was raised or July 15

'It was a good thought, but it died due to a lack of interest and participation on the part of the community." said Forest, one of the adult supervisors for the "camp-in."

'I think the kids did a fantastic job. They raised $2,100 on Saturday. They showed their support," he said. "And I don't think that the entire campaign was a failure. We learned a lot. Cash was not our main objective. We wanted to raise $60,000 in pledges and interest, and we did hand out a lot of brochures.

'We started Saturday morning, and the group grew throughout the day. We even cleared some land for our tents. Then, about 6:30 or 7 p.m., a patrolman came by and informed us that there had been some complaints from the citizens and that we were to stop soliciting on the streets."

That was the first major blow." Forest said. "We had about 60 kids that night. We spent the night

Solons debate school bill

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas House members, debating a school finance bill priced at almost $1 billion, voted today to reduce the school year from 180 to 175 days.

The Senate version of the bill, however, preserves the present 180day year, creating one more issue that probably will have to be resolved by a joint conference committee.

While approving a shorter year, the House refused, 85-59, to force all school districts after 1977 to delay the start of the academic year until Sept.

Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, sponsored the amendment shortening the school year saying that many rural districts lack air conditioning and both students and teachers suffer if school starts during the dog days of

New plan forged by deregulation advocates

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - House members trying to remove price controls from new natural gas came up with a new plan Wednesday - aimed at picking up the one extra vote they needed by making deregulation conditional upon enactment of an excess profits

Two weeks ago the House Commerce Committee voted 22 to 21 to approve President Carter's proposal to continue price controls, but at a higher level. However, that vote only placed several alternatives before the committee, which will make a final decision Thursday when it has agreed to complete action on the major nontax portions of Carter's energy package.

The Ways and Means Committee Wednesday formally reported the tax portions of the bill to the House by a vote of 24 to 13.

Lobbyists from the gas industry and the administration sought votes in this multibillion dollar struggle over the price of natural gas.

Supporters of ending controls apparently tied deregulation to an excess profits tax because one member of the committee, Rep. Thomas A. Luken (D-Ohio), who voted for the administration plan before, indicated he would vote for deregulation—if it were tied to a tax to avoid giving windfall profits to gas producers.

If Luken switches and all other members vote as before, deregulation would win in committee by a one-vote margin and would then go to the House, which is divided on the issue.

But the deregulation excess profits tax proposal may never come to a vote alt may be ruled out of order because taxes are under the urisdiction of the Ways and Means

Supporters of deregulation would then come up with another plan, and there is at least one other member of the committee, Rep. Marty Russo (D-Ill.), who voted with the administration two weeks ago, who would like to find a compromise

Outdoor cooks need use very little equipment

By MARIAN BURROS The Washington Post

The great American summer pastime, which certainly rivals and maybe surpasses baseball, is outdoor cooking. No other country does as much of it; certainly none has raised it to the high art that calls for an incredible variety of costly equipment and gadgets found in hardware stores and housewares sections of fancy department stores throughout the United States.

Actually, very little equipment is needed to barbecue successfully: a sturdy grill with adjustable grids and draft doors, which are essential so that the heat from the fire can be regulated; a long-handled fork; two sets of tongs - one for the food and one for the coals; a long-handled basting brush, paintbrush or dishmop; a longhandled spoon. It's best if these utensils have wooden handles to keep your hands from being burned

In addition, you need a grill scraper, long matches, mitten-shaped potholders and some kind of watering can or even a water pistol to douse any flareups.

Nonessential but nice to have if you go into outdoor cooking in a big way are: a carving board and knife, a hinged metal grill for cooking small items like hamburgers, skewers for kabobs, a small pot with a long handle in which to keep basting sauces warm, a meat thermometer

Once you have assembled the necessary equipment and the food you wish to cook, you will have to start a fire. This is probably the single biggest problem for novice outdoor cooks. In an attempt to get the fire going, too much charcoal is often used. Not only is it a tremendous waste, it also results in too big a fire which ends up burning the food instead of cook-

A single layer of charcoal is all that is needed Charcoal briquets are the easiest form of fuel to use.

If your unit doesn't have an opening for a draft, you can make a fire base of small sones. Arrange them up to the edge of the fire bowl and then put the charcoal over them

The easiest way to start the fire may be with an electrical starter (if you have an electric outlet nearby). Place the starter on the charcoal until a gray ash forms on it which means the charcoal is burning. If you are using a liquid starter, place the charcoal in a pyramid in the center of the firebox and drizzle the starter over the charcoal. Allow it to stand for a few minutes so the charcoal will soak up the liquid Then light in several places with long matches. To regulate the heat during cooking, open the dampers or fan and tap ashes or move the grid down closer to the fire to increase the temperature; to decrease the temperature, close the dampers. sprinkle a little water on the charcoal or move the grid up from the fire. If you want to save partially used charcoal, remove it with tongs to a bucket; cover in order to put fire out. If the grill has a cover, close it and the dampers. You ulso can douse the charcoal with water, but dry it thoroughly before using tagain The grill itself needs some care. The grids should be cleaned as soon as possible after cooking, first with the scraper, then with soap and water. When you are cooking over a churcoal grill there are certain precautions that should be taken so that no one is injured:

-Never use kerosene or gasoline to start a fire. You could end up in the hospital.

-Don't use more liquid starter once the charcoal has ignited. It can flare up dramatically

-Wear clothes without dangling scarves, strings or shirttails.

-Use the grill in a well-ventilated area, not in the

-Keep children and pets away from the grill. These recipes are an interesting change from ham-

Low cost eggs supply protein, fewer calories

Newsday

It's costing more to fill your market basket the last few weeks, according to the Department of Agriculture. But if you are at all aware of seasonal trends, or simply have been keeping your eyes open while you shop, you must know that some foods have actually dropped in price, a few even drastically.

Late spring always brings good buys on eggs, for instance. And this week they're as low as 59 cents for a dozen large. Eggs are not, of course, exactly what meat-and-potatoes people crave for dinner. But two eggs will supply, with fewer calories and less cholesterol (if these are things that concern you), as much protein as an average serving of meat.

Americans tend to think of eggs mainly as a breakfast food. Perhaps it is because we relegate them to morning that our repertoire of substantial egg dishes is limited.

Not so in other parts of the world, however. Following are two egg dishes that are relished by the tough Basque shepherds who live in the south of France, near the Pyrenees and Spain.

Piperade is certainly the better known of the two. It is, in fact, the most well-known of all Basque dishes and is an amalgam of onions, sweet peppers and tomatoes in which eggs are often scrambled. baked or poached. Piperade is often served with thin slices of the regional cured ham, "jambon de

Similar to Italian proscuitto, Bayonne ham, with its salty yet sweet flavor, is the accompaniment, not the main attraction. An equally good partner, although none is really necessary with the rich eggs and vegetables, is grilled chunks of skewered calves liver seasoned lightly with salt and pepper.

Piperade also takes advantage of two other late spring buys, the green peppers and plum tomatoes now arriving from Florida. Look for firm, but redripe tomatoes at about 59 cents a pound. Ones that are slightly overripe will do as well and should only cost about 39 cents a pound. Firm, glossy peppers should cost no more than a dollar for 3 pounds.

The second recipe here is another typically Basque egg dish which uses a current best-buy, russet potatoes. Here the eggs are cooked in an omelet style with slices of the sauteed potatoes, bacon and sweet marjoram. Unlike most French omelets, however, the Basque omelet is cooked in the Spanish pancake form.

5 tablespoons rendered bacon fat (preferably nitrate-free), olive oil, butter or combination oil and

1 pound onions, sliced very thin

1 pound green and-or red peppers, seeded and cut into 1-2-inch strips 1 pound fresh plum tomatoes, seeded and chopped

(or 11-pound can imported tomatoes, drained) Salt and fresh-ground pepper to taste

3-4 teaspoon dried marjoram

8 eggs

In a skillet, heat the bacon fat, oil or butter. Add onions and saute over medium heat until they are golden but not browned, about 20 minutes.

Add the strips of pepper, cover and cook for 10 minutes or until peppers are wilted.

Add the tomatoes. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add marjoram. Simmer, covered, for about 15 to 20 minutes or until tomatoes have become sauce-like. The peppers will be quite soft, but should still hold their shape. (If desired, vegetable mixture can be prepared ahead and stored, in the refrigerator, in a tightly closed jar or plastic container for several days.)

Beat the eggs well, then pour them over the vegetable mixture. Stirring occasionally, cook the eggs very slowly until they are set but still creamy. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

Good substitutes for the customary Bayonne ham are Italian prosciutto or American Smithfield ham. Or serve with fried or oven-toasted croutons.

Variations: Instead of beating the eggs and mixing them in with the vegetables, pour the vegetable mixture into a well-greased baking dish. Break eggs on top and bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until eggs have set to desired degree. Or break eggs into mixture, cover and cook until eggs are poached to desired degree. Or serve the piperade vegetable mix-ture topped with fried eggs.

BASQUE POTATO OMELET

1-4 pound bacon (preferably nitrate-free) 2 large baking potatoes, sliced thin

Salt and fresh-ground pepper 6 eggs

1 teaspoon sweet marjoram

2 tablespoons fine-chopped parsley
Salt and fresh-ground pepper
In a skillet, fry the bacon over medium-low heat until quite a bit of the fat has rendered. Raise heat, brown bacon and remove. Drain on absorbent paper. Pour off all but about 4 tablespoons of the fat. Add potatoes, season with salt and pepper, and saute until potatoes are tender and lightly browned.

Meanwhile, in a mixing bowl, beat together the eggs, marjoram, parsley, salt and pepper to taste. Crumble the bacon and add to eggs.

When potatoes are done, pour on egg mixture. Lower heat to lowest possible setting and cook eggs until the bottom has set. Run the omelet under a broiler for few seconds to set the top. Serve immediately. Makes 3 servings

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A U.S. Army helicopter was shot down over North Korea today and President Carter said three crew members were killed and a fourth captured.

The North Koreans ignored U.S. requests for a meeting at Panmunjom truce village to discuss the tensionraising incident

Carter told Senate leaders he wants to make sure "this does not escalate into a confrontation.

Carter said South Koreans fired a warning shot as the Chinook helicopter, carrying construction material, strayed north over the demilitarized zone. He said the crew left the craft after it landed in North Korea, inspected it, and then took off as North Koreans approached.

At that point, he said, the helicopter was shot down and two of the crewmen were killed in the crash. Carter said a third crewman was killed in an exchange of gunfire and the fourth was captured.

The North Koreans said hours earlier that three Americans had died and a fourth was captured.

Brooklyn and Queens were closed because of a lack of ventilation. Kennedy and La Guardia airports, stripped of all but emergency power, shut down, forcing airliners to Newark, Boston and other airfields.

Amtrak's trains into the city could not function. At Shea Stadium, thousands of fans watching a professional baseball game between the New York Mets and Chicago Cubs were plunged into

"It's going to be a hell of a mess. It will be worse than if we had a transit workers strike," said a Beame aide. In Times Square, youths roamed the streets, smashing windows, steal-residential neighborhoood. In Harlem and the Bronx, store windows were shattered and merchandise stolen. Also in the Bronx, a policeman directing traffic was shot in the leg.

He was reported in good condition. But there were many stories of cooperation and good-natured understanding during the blackout. At the Hamilton House for Senior Citizens, candles and a transitor radio were provided by a friendly neighbor. Civil Defense wardens, mostly idle since World War II, appeared at in-tersections to help guide traffic, while at other darkened crossroads virtually any citizen with a flashlight became an unofficial policeman.

Caravans led by those with flashlights or candles threaded their way up skyscrapers' stairways to a lead residents to their apartments.

Senate bolsters warhead chances

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is giving President Carter authority to go ahead with development of controversial neutron warheads, but is retaining the power to veto any effort to place the weapons into production. After nine hours of frequently emotional debate, the Senate Wednesday night rejected 58 to 38 a move headed by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to cut out funds for the weapon contained in a Public Works Appropriations Bill.

The bill now goes to a House-Senate conference committee which must

"Never have so few done so much for so many with so little support." said Carl Forest Wednesday. referring to approximately 60 youths who joined the Alamo YMCA fundraising "camp-in" Saturday.

The "camp-in," to raise $60,000, died an early death 24 hours after it started. The original plan was to have interested youngsters camped at the site of the proposed Alamo YMCA until $60,000 was raised or July 15

"It was a good thought, but it died due to a lack of interest and participation on the part of the community," said Forest, one of the adult supervisors for the "camp-in.

"I think the kids did a fantastic job. They raised $2,100 on Saturday. They showed their support." he said

'That was the first major blow.' Forest said. "We had about 60 kids that night. We spent the night

"The building will be built. I feel

"The Alamo YMCA will function as a recreational facility for the children, it will provide a community meeting place, and I think it will be the hub of the cultural center in west Midland," Forest said.

New plan forged by deregulation advocates

WASHINGTON — House members trying to remove price controls from new natural gas came up with a new plan Wednesday - aimed at picking up the one extra vote they needed by making deregulation conditional upon enactment of an excess profits

Two weeks ago the House Commerce Committee voted 22 to 21 to approve President Carter's proposal to continue price controls, but at a higher level. However, that vote only placed several alternatives before the committee, which will make a final decision Thursday when it has agreed to complete action on the major nontax portions of Carter's energy package.

The Ways and Means Committee Wednesday formally reported the tax portions of the bill to the House by a vote of 24 to 13.

Lobbyists from the gas industry and the administration sought votes in this multibillion dollar struggle over the price of natural gas. Supporters of ending controls apparently tied deregulation to an excess profits tax because one member of the committee, Rep. Thomas A. Luken (D-Ohio), who voted for the administration plan before, indicated he would vote for deregulation—if it were tied to a tax to avoid giving windfall profits to gas producers.

If Luken switches and all other members vote as before, deregulation would win in committee by a one-vote margin and would then go to the House, which is divided on the issue.

But the deregulation-excess profits tax proposal may never come to a vote. It may be ruled out of order because taxes are under the jurisdiction of the Ways and Means Supporters of deregulation would then come up with another plan, and the committee, Rep. Marty Russo (D-Ill.), who voted with the administration two weeks ago, who would like to find a compromise position.

The administration was also working to win back Rep. Ralph H. Metcalfe (D-Ill.) who voted against the President's plan two weeks ago. Rep. Tim Lee Carter (R-Ky.), who voted for deregulation two weeks ago, said Wednesday that, if the price of deregulated gas went to $3 per thousand cubic feet as opponents contend it will, that would be a "ripoff" of the public.

The new deregulation plan to be offered by Rep. Timothy E. Wirth (D-Colo.) narrowly defines the new gas to be deregulated and contains other provisions aimed at picking up middle-ground support.

The Wirth proposal, worked out in conjunction with Rep. Bob Krueger (D-Tex.) and Rep. Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio), states that deregulation of new onshore gas would take effect only after enactment of an excess profits tax - holding producers to a 'reasonable rate of return'

Outdoor cooks need use very little equipment

The Washington Post

The great American summer pastime, which certainly rivals and maybe surpasses baseball, is out-door cooking. No other country does as much of it; certainly none has raised it to the high art that calls for an incredible variety of costly equipment and gadgets found in hardware stores and housewares sections of fancy department stores throughout the United States.

Actually, very little equipment is needed to barbecue successfully: a sturdy grill with adjustable grids and draft doors, which are essential so that the heat from the fire can be regulated; a long-handled fork; two sets of tongs - one for the food and one for the coals; a long-handled basting brush, paintbrush or dishmop; a longhandled spoon. It's best if these utensils have wooden handles to keep your hands from being burned.

In addition, you need a grill scraper, long matches, mitten-shaped potholders and some kind of watering can or even a water pistol to douse any flareups.

Nonessential but nice to have if you go into outdoor cooking in a big way are: a carving board and knife, a hinged metal grill for cooking small items like hamburgers, skewers for kabobs, a small pot with a long handle in which to keep basting sauces warm, a meat thermometer.

Once you have assembled the necessary equipment and the food you wish to cook, you will have to start a fire. This is probably the single biggest problem for novice outdoor cooks. In an attempt to get the fire going, too much charcoal is often used. Not only is it a tremendous waste, it also results in too big a fire which ends up burning the food instead of cook-

A single layer of charcoal is all that is needed. Charcoal briquets are the easiest form of fuel to use.

If your unit doesn't have an opening for a draft, you can make a fire base of small sones. Arrange them up to the edge of the fire bowl and then put the charcoal over them

The easiest way to start the fire may be with an electrical starter (if you have an electric outlet nearby). Place the starter on the charcoal until a gray ash forms on it which means the charcoal is burning.

If you are using a liquid starter, place the charcoal in a pyramid in the center of the firebox and drizzle the starter over the charcoal. Allow it to stand for a few minutes so the charcoal will soak up the liquid Then light in several places with long matches.

To regulate the heat during cooking, open the dampers or fan and tap ashes or move the grid down closer to the fire to increase the temperature; to decrease the temperature, close the dampers, sprinkle a little water on the charcoal or move the grid up from the fire.

If you want to save partially used charcoal, remove it with tongs to a bucket; cover in order to put fire out. If the grill has a cover, close it and the dampers. You ulso can douse the charcoal with water, but dry it thoroughly before using t again. The grill itself needs some care. The grids should be cleaned as soon as possible after cooking. first with the scraper, then with soap and water.

When you are cooking over a churcoal grill there are certain precautions that should be taken so that no one is injured:

-Never use kerosene or gasoline to start a fire. You could end up in the hospital.

-Don't use more liquid starter once the charcoal has ignited. It can flare up dramatically.

-Wear clothes without dangling scarves, strings or shirttails.

-Use the grill in a well-ventilated area, not in the

-Keep children and pets away from the grill. These recipes are an interesting change from ham-burgers with which to try out your grilling techni-

'Space doctors' cure public areas, offer ideas for redesign

SEATTLE (AP) - The "space doctors" have been consulted to diagnose a disease affecting two firms' public

The symptom: not enough loiterers. The Project for Public Spaces has "cured" several people problems in New York City in the past, one PPS success, Atlas Court at Rockefeller Center, is jammed by pedestrians at all hours of the day.

PPS has been called in to examine Seattle First National Bank Building's plaza and another at the new Federal Building.

Sea-First is anxious to turn its formal plaza into a pleasant public space. And Don Miles of Seattle, a co-founder of PPS, says he's curious to discover why, despite "heroic design efforts," the Federal Building plaza isn't used more

PPS says trees and benches aren't necessarily the answer. Through the use of time-lapse photography, PPS examines traffic patterns within the space in question. Time-lapse telescopes hours of action into a few minutes and peak periods and social habits become apparent.

The firm spent several weeks

recently photographing the SeaFirst plaza and is now analyzing the results

Miles doesn't know yet what the firm will find, but said the results so far have been surprising.

The filming technique was used with considerable success when analyzing the nonloitering problems of Atlas Court, said Miles and another cofounder, Robert Cook.

PPS film showed the courtyard was being used, but mostly during the

People leaned against the walls and some low-placed signs. The planter ledge around the base of the Atlas statue was being used as a narrow and somewhat uncomfortable bench. Miles said. Planter foliage was being

Using this information, PPS recommended redesigning the planter to in-clude a bench. Railings were installed to accommodate the leaners and signs were raised.

"The impact was incredible," Miles said. Usage more than doubled and there no longer is one peak period.

"There's nothing worse than space designed for pedestrians with no pedestrians present," Cook added.

"It's a little like an empty church."

Battle stations taken on OPEC crude pricing

By JOE ALEX MORRIS JR. The Los Angeles Times

STOCKHOLM - Hard-liners on the oil price issue lashed out Wednesday at suggestions that the present price freeze should be extended through

Their reaction at the meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) here raised doubts whether predictions by moderate OPEC members like Saudi Arabia can be carried through

"We will do our best. Cross your fingers." said Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani. But his open attempt to set pricing policies by public statements obviously raised hackles on the necks of some fellow oil ministers.

The reaction of the hard-line faction appeared to have tempered the newfound solidarity between Saudi Arabia and Iran's chief negotiator Jamshid Amouzegar, who on Tuesday endorsed Yamani's call for a freeze through 1978. After the conference ended. Amouzegar said no one could predict what would happen to oil prices in 1978. And he criticized the press for misreporting his

"This is not a service to anybody." he said. "You must give the full picture." He had been quoted as saying that there could be no price increase as long as there was an oil glut, and he expected this situation to last for at least another year before the world demand catches up and prices start to rise again.

Where Amouzegar has changed his emphaeis if not his complete tune is in his current stress on letting world economic conditions and market factor splay a decisive role in setting future oil prices. Heretofore, the Iranians had been among the loudest in calling for the oil price increases to be tuned to the rate of inflation in the industrialized world. But the continuing prospects for recession, plus new alarm over an oil glut, have apparently caused them to change their line.

The Iranian switch did little to ease the uncertainty created by the dogged remnants of OPEC's hard-liners, who seemed undaunted by the loss of Iran to the opposition ranks and wasted no time in challenging Yamani on the price freeze issue

Lybian Oil Minister Ezzedin Ali Mabruk sharply criticized suggestions of a price freeze, and he was backed up by other oil policy radicals, notably Algeria and Iraq Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul Karim said the high rate of inflation "exported to us" will be considered when the ministers meet in Caracas in December to decide whether to raise prices in 1978. He wouldn't predict what will happen, but said the time was now past when a single power "or any foreign power' could dictate prices to OPEC. By this he meant Saudi Arabia and the United States, which put heavy pressure on Saudi Arabia last December to hold the price line.

OPEC Secretary-Gen. Ali Jaidan stressed that no decisions had been taken for 1978, and that it all depends on market conditions. This put him somewhere in the middle between Saudi Arabia, which stresses the need to help the world out of its recession.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

and Iraq, which accents the inflation factor which is cutting into the oil producers' real income.

Yamani, at a press conference, even went so far as to suggest that Saudi oil prices may go down rather than up, as they have in the past four years when they more than quadrupled. He said he hoped Saudi Arabia would be able to cut back on its differentials, the price added to the base, or market price for oil to account for quality differences from the norm and distances from major markets. Asked to speculate on price movements beyond next year, Yamani was unequivocal. "They will go up.

In this he appeared to agree with Iran's Amouzegar, who predicted that in the long run rising demand and growing scarcity of oil will force the price up. Amouzegar went so far as to suggest this could eliminate the need for OPEC, at least as a price-setting mechanism.

The meeting here, held at a tightlyguarded resort south of Stockholm, was notable for not accomplishing anything. No one spoke up when the agenda came to the item "Other matters," which traditi nally led to some of the sharpest policy debates in the organization.

In fact, the meeting could have ended Tuesdas, efcept for the fact the ministers ad been invied to lunch Wednesday by King Carl Gustaf XVI.

There were, however, several interesting if inconclusive themes. One concerned a contingency plan to meet the threat of an oil glut, even a temporary one, and also U.S. plans to stockpile oil as a safeguard against another boycott.

Under this plan, proposed by the economic commission, all members would agree to absorb any surplus in the market by cutting back production on a pro-rated basis. There were no objections raised when it came up. but deegates stressed this was not the same thing as an agreement.

The plan will be activated "when the time is ripe," according to Iraq's Abdul Karinm.

He maintained there was only a "normal" surplus now, or "very little." Saudi Arabia's Yamani agreed with him hat there was no present worry about an oil glut.

If it occurs, Yamani said, it should not reduce demand by more than 2 billion barrels a day, something the OPEC nations could easily swallow.

money for welfare reform.

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - A major battle has erupted within the Carter administration over a proposal that virtually all federal housing subsidy programs be scrapped to provide

The Office of Management and Budget has suggested that the level of new subsidized housing commitments be cut from 400,000 units to 50,000 units a year. That reduction in starts plus cutbacks in ongoing programs could divert most of the $4.9 billion the Department of Housing and Urban Development currently spends to help pay for the improved federal welfare program President Carter has promised to send Congress next month.

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris met Wednesday with presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan and reportedly lodged a vigorous protest against the proposal.

Harris declined to discuss the matter with a reporter, but sources said HUD officials believe that the scrapping of the housing programs would mean the end of neighborhood revitalization efforts in thousands of small towns and big-cities.

The sources said HUD officials also believe that OMB's approach would be inflationary, because giving poor people money to search for their own housing will drive up housing prices.

HUD officials do not believe, the sources said. OMB's argument that "housing deprivation is caused by inadequate income, rather than by the housing industry's inability to produce enough housing, and can be overcome by raising incomes for the

One reliable source said Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. discussed the matter with Harris, and told her he is 100 per cent behind OMB's position.

Califano's press secretary said the HEW chief had no comment because "it's an OMB matter." But it is no secret that Califano has been scouring the federal government for other programs that could be "cashed in" to meet the higher costs of a national welfare payment while still obeying Carter's injunction against additional

Promotion of Oklahoma water plan encouraged

Oklahoma must "get off the fence" in the struggle for water rights or it will lose to surrounding states, a water study group says.

Oklahoma Water Inc., a group promoting development of the state's water resources, gave the warning in a report this week on the study of a plan to transport water from Arkansas to Texas.

Oklahoma must get off the fence and hasten the completion and adoption of a statewide comprehensive water plan, and initiate the actions required to bring such a cooperative venture about," the report said.

"It's time that we initiated some actions instead of reacting to what Texas and others have already donee. "If Oklahoma fails to do this, she may be left on the sidelines while other states put waters which otherwise would legally belong to Oklahoma to work for themselves."

The issue is over water which leaves the state of Oklahoma and flows in to Arkansas and Texas.

"At first glance, there appears to be enough water for everyone," the report said.

Estimates, according to the report, are that the annual outflow from Arkansas is about 76.5 million acrefeet and after allowances for that state's needs by the year 2020, it would be reduced to 43 million

"When compared with the projected need of the Texas High Plains of about six million acre-feet per year, the issue seems hardly worth a squabble. Closer scrutiny of the report however, reveals additional facts and leads to several questions."

the report said Questions raised, according to use of surface water in Oklahoma, allowances for navigation, high and low flows, consumptive demand and other requirements and the demand in Texas.

The Oklahoma group said the Arkansas-Texas study would allow the six million acre-feet for maintenance of present High Plains irrigation levels in Texas. There are more than 13 million acres in the area suitable for irrigation, more than doubling the current amount, it said.

'Watering these additional acres, which would be a reasonable expectation, would logically double the amount of import water needed for irrigation alone," according to the

"No mention is made of the need for municipal and industrial water for the High Plains in the report. One could reasonably speculate that Midland, Odessa, Lubbock, Amarillo and other smaller cities in the region, will require additional water supplies as the agricultural economy expands (with import water), precipitating federal spending.

The OMB memo says that "for planning purposes, HEW is assuming. at a minimum," that it can add to present welfare outlays the funds now being used for food stamps in the Agriculture Department, the workincentive program in the Labor Department and counter-cyclical jobs aid to the cities.

If the OMB suggestion on housing were adopted, it would shift more than half the current expenditures of HUD into the welfare-reform account.

The OMB memo, distributed last Thursday, gives three alternative policies for fitting housing programs to the new welfare reform program, including one that leaves existing HUD programs untouched.

But the final option, which has stirred the controversy, calls for deducting housing subsidies from the welfare payments of families receiving special housing benefits. and slashing future housing commitments from 400,000 units a year to 50,000 units. A OMB official said the document

"really just asks questions and is not a firm position of this agency." But HUD officials and those few outsiders aware of the OMB memo are treating it as a major threat to the federal currently receives any benefits from HUD subsidies.

It questions whether public subsidies add significantly to the overall housing stock and says that "most (low-income) families can obtain decent housing for less than it costs the government to obtain it on their

The OMB memo concedes that scrapping the housing programs would "significantly" reduce the benefits for those in subsidized housing, but transferring the savings to welfare reform would "be far more equitable and would leave the great majority of poverty-level households better off as a result.

HUD officials have argued in the past that housing subsidy programs prevent neighborhood deterioration and promote integration and concern for the environment, because of the restrictions placed on use of the money. There would be no such pressures operating if, as OMB's third alternative suggests, housing program money were given out in cash in the form of increased welfare benefits.

Sources said HUD officials are also concerned about the fairness of ending housing subsidies for the poor, but continuing them for middle class and wealthy homeowners in the form of mortgage tax deductions.

The battle over housing subsidies vs. welfare reform will go to Carter next week, when OMB collects agency positions in a final memo for the nearly 11 per cent between 1974 and 1975.

In 1974 there were 23,370,000 Americans listed as poor. The 1975 figures showed that more than 21/2 million more people were living in poverty.

"These were years when there were an additional number of people who fell below the poverty line - people who would not normally be poor," said Arno I. Winward, staff assistant for poverty statistics at the Census Bureau.

The bureau released two reports Wednesday, giving statistics on poor people in the United States and on over-all changes in the income of individuals and families from 1974 to 1975.

The bureau's poverty report said the number of Americans with an income below the $5,500 poverty, level increased 10.7 per cent from 1974 to 1975. That means there were 25.9 million poor people in America. It was the greatest percentage increase since 1959, Figures from the report on income showed that median family income was $13,720 in 1975, about 6 per cent higher than the 1974 median. That means there were as many families making more than $13,720 as there were making less than that figure. Yet, the report hows that after being adjusted for a 9 per cent increase in prices, the 1975 median income was actually $360 lower than it

LIMA, Peru (AP) - At times in his 30-year foreign service career, Robert W. Dean wanted to get out of Latin America because "it was considered a rather calm area of the world.

"But that's no longer the case," Ambassador Dean said shortly before he bade Peruvian and American friends good-bye in late June.

He's a 21-year-old golfer out of ichita Falls, and when he isn't speng time trying to find a place to lay is head at night, he's out on the golf ourse playing giant killer. At least, e was Wednesday, and the giant he ew was Doug Clarke, the defending hampion here at the 74th annual Frans-Mississippi Amateur Golf tourament, which enters its second day oday at Midland Country Club. Finkler, playing in his first matchlay tournament in nearly 11 years. eliminated the younger, but more ex. perienced Clarke one-up, in a duel that wasn't decided until the very last

But why the "man without a motel" slug, you ask? Well, ever since Finkler and some of his golfing teammates from Texas Wesleyan College in Fort Worth arrived in town last weekend for the tourney, they've had to play musical motels because of some sort of a convention in the Tall

After he beat Clarke, he still wasn't sure where they were going to stay Wednesday night, but he didn't really care at the time.

'We'll look around later and find some place," he said with a grin. "But right now, it's the farthest thing from

The closest thing to his mind was he victory, and he was going to savor it for the monment.

FOR CLARKE, there was only sympathy from some friends, and the consolation that there will indeed be a tomorrow — but not in Midland.

He should have figured it wasn't his day right off the bat, when he hooked his drive off the first tee, and spent nearly 15 minutes searching the brush for it.

It looked like the roof was going to save in on him when a bogey on the eighth hole put Finkler two-up, and the La Jolla, Calif., resident's drive on nine went so far into the left rough it might have qualified as unexplored territory. But he hit a miraculous iron shot from there that dropped just four feet away from the pin, and his birdie moments late, cut Finkler's lead to one entering the back nine.

FROM THERE, it was like watching a yoyo. A birdie by Clarke on 12 brought them even. Then, a birdie by Finkler on the next hole put him oneup again. Then a bogey by Finkler on 14 coupled by Clarke's par put them

When Clarke three-putted the fifteenth green however, for a birdie six, Finkler was one-up again, and things were beginning to look bright for the underdog. And when he drove his tee shot on the 198-yard par-three sixteenth close enough for a makeable birdie putt, things looked even

"I thought I was in good shape then after I made the green," he said. "I thought I had a good chance to go two-up, especially since Clarke's teeshot went off to the right. But then everything went wrong. "Everything" included a birdie putt that came up 12 inches short, and a second putt that wouldn't fall either. Suddenly, what could have been an almost insurmountable lead, turned into nothing more than premature

But this was not Clarke's day. He had been spraying his drives every which way all morning long, and his putting was just as erratic. In fact, he three-putted the par-five seventeenth for a bogey, while his opponent managed a par, and Finkler was oneup again with just one hole left to

"I was just trying to par the eighteenth," he would say later. "It's tough to make a birdie when you have to, and I figured all I had to do was par and put the pressure on him."

They'll talk about Clarke's drive off the eighteenth tee for years to come at Midland Country Club. The hole is a 470-yard par-four dogleg to the right. Clarke, in a do-or-die situation, chose to ignore the dogleg and gambled that he could clear the trees and trap. He gambled correctly.

The ball finally came down just thirty yards short of the green; and a birdie seemed a good possibility.

FINKLER GOT on the green in two, and Clarke, who needed a good second shot to put him within range of a birdie putt, came down 35 feet from the pin. Finkler putted first, and came up about a foot short of the hole — a foot which would seem like a mile moments later.

Clarke could have tied the match if he would have made that next putt. But he didn't. He too was short.

As Finkler prepared to make possibly the biggest putt of his life, no one was quite certain who was more nervous - the golfer, or the golfer's father, who had been doubling as his caddy during the opening round match. But nervous or not, Finkler hit the ball true and it fell - along with Clarke's hopes for a repeat of the Trans-Miss title.

After it was all over, Finkler took a deep breath snd said in mock confidence, "well, you might as well beat the tough ones first."

At least it gave him reason to look for a motel Wednesday night.

He also got a second chance to prove his maxim this morning when he faced John Grace of Fort Worth, who was runnerup in the United States Amateur Tournament just two years

"I can't play the way I did today and beat Grace though" he conceded. "I've got to start making some putts. I can't count on Grace playing like Clarke did."

Other than Finkler's upset of Clarke, things went pretty much as expected Wednesday, with most of the favorites winning their openers with ease, as the field was cut to 32 golfers. NCAA champion Scott Simpson,

Jack Ledbetter was weaving at the end, but hung on to notch his sixth straight victory as the Midland Cubs opened a five-game series with an 11-7 victory over the Tulsa Drillers at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night.

It was Ernie Banks Night and 1,065 fans showed up to see the soon-to-beinducted Hall of Famer honored by the Downtown Lions Club, the City of Midland and the Chamber of Commerce in pre-game ceremonies.

The Cubs and Drillers go at it at 7:45 p.m. today with Paul Mirabella, three straight shutouts, go against the Cubs' Darrell Turner, 7-5.

"WITH AN 11-2 lead going into the eighth, Jack (Ledbetter) was just trying to get the ball over and make them hit it," said catcher Duane Gustavson. "He really wasn't trying to be too selective in his pitches."

Ledbetter allowed 10 hits in hurling his sixth complete game.

Pacers working to stay in NBA

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - The Indiana Pacers are swamped with work these days, feverishly trying to allocate those thousands of season tickets they sold in order to stay in the National Basketball Association for at least another year.

A few doors down the hall, however, in the basement of the downtown Market Square Center, the penniless Indianapolis Racers are preparing to close shop for good.

The Pacers, faced with essentially the same problem as the hockey Racers-a lack of money-staged a monthlong season ticket drive

Men in blue lead a lonely life

NEW YORK (AP) - They're called bums and accused of being blind as bats, but baseball's umpires are a group of trained professionals who lead a lonely existence.

Ron Luciano

While baseball players spend half the season on the road and half at home, umpires spend all 162 games on the road and see their families an average of only six days a season. People look at our life as being glamorous," eight-year American Less than a month ago, a League veteran Dave Phillips said before a recent game at Yankee Stadium. "But I look at it as being a 24-hour job because I'm never home. I'm in each city to work and it's not a vacation.'

Umpires arrive at the ballpark about an 11/2 hours before a game and go right to work.

The umpire working behind the plate has to rub up six dozen baseballs with mud taken from the bottom of the Delaware River. The man who worked behind the plate the previous ? night must sit in the stands to make sure players from opposing teams do not fraternize with each other in accordance with baseball's rules.

In addition to officiating the game, umpires have to make all their own reservations for hotels, restaurants and airlines. They also have to arrange for transfer of their own equipment.

Most major league umpires have attended umpiring schools where they have been taught things like positioning on the field and how not to anticipate a play. Umpires then go through an apprenticeship in the minor leagues.

Umpires start at $16,000 annually and get a $1,000 raise each year. They receive $54 each day to cover hotels. meals and miscellaneous expenses.

The average umpire travels 100,000 miles a year from city to city and it takes is toll.

"It's hard on your family because you're away so much," said Tom Gorman, who umpired in the National League for 25 years before retiring last year. "A lot of guys never get home. But you have to have a great wife who is willing to raise your family.'

Being away from home, umpires are often helpless when family problems arise. One night Bill Kunkel was talking to his wife on the phone when she told him the lawn needed mowing.

"I can't reach it from here." he told her. "There's no lawn mower in the world that will reach from Milwaukee to New Jersey.

In addition to the tough life away from home, umpires are maligned by fans, players and managers. When they make an unpopular call, the fans boo, the players argue and the managers kick dirt on their pants. "A lot of people look down on umpires," bemoans Gorman.

"They think we're morons." There aren't many umpires, however, who are morons. Ron Luciano, an American League umpire, holds a bachelors degree in mathematics and a masters degree in education administration from Syracuse University. He is an amateur bird-watcher and the American League guide lists him as a 'Shakespearean Scholar.'

Nick Bremigan is a hockey official and a substitute teacher in the offseason and Kunkel captains a sport fishing boat after the baseball season.

Although some ballplayers get a reputation for hanging out in bars and being playboys, umpires contend those practices are at a minimum with them.

'Most of the guys are married," said Phillips, "and most of those are happily married.

A lot of guys have a drink or two after a game but that's it. I go to bars to see people who I haven't seen for a while since we're on the road so much." "With a face and a body like mine, I'm not going to chase broads," says Luciano who stands 6-foot-4 and weighs almost 300 pounds. Luciano, however, indicated that drinking was once a problem for him. "One year, I drank a lot and let my diet go." Luciano recalled. "That plus the tremendous pressure gave me ulcers. They had to carry me off the field at Yankee Stadium one day." Phillips said that most players and managers realize that umpires have a

Lakers sign former UCLA between the rival leagues. But complications have ap-

LOS ANGELES (AP) - New Laker forward Jamaal Wilkes should give opposing coaches something to think about next season when they consider sagging three or four defenders around Kareem Abdul-Jabbar

The towering Abdul-Jabbar was frequently guarded by several players during National Basketball Association games last year, but the sharpshooting Wilkes should make that strategy said Wilkes, who signed with Los Angeles Wednesday after playing out his option with Golden State this past season. "Even with three or four opponents on him, he is still the best in the league," continued Wilkes. "I feel

I can help with outside shooting, movement and "I hope to take some of the pressure off Kareem,"

The Lakers, in need of a solid forward for the past few years, will count heavily on Wilkes for for rebounding. The 24-year-old, 6-foot-61/2 Wilkes averaged 8.2 rebounds and 16.5 points per game for the Warriors over the past three years.

Although Abdul-Jabbar is also a former Bruin All-American, he graduated the year before Wilkes started at UCLA, so the pair have never played organized basketball together.

Still, Wilkes made it known that Abdul-Jabbar's presence in Los Angeles was a big factor in his choosing the Lakers, and Abdul-Jabbar had said earlier that he hoped his team could land Wilkes. 'This is a once-in-a-lifetime decision to play with Kareem," said Wilkes. "I think he's the greatest center in NBA history.' Wilkes mentioned other reasons for his wanting to play in Los Angeles.

'I played four years at UCLA and that was a very fun time in my life," he said. "And I was raised in-Ventura, 60 miles from Los Angeles. My parents live 90 miles away in Santa Barbara. These were heavy considerations. "If ever a player complemented another player to perfection, I believe that Jamaal Wilkes does with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar," said Laker owner Jack present at the news conference announcing Wilkes' With the addition of Jamaal, I have reason to believe the Lakers may be one of the dominant forces in the NBA for some time to come." Cooke said in the statement. The terms of Wilkes' contract with the Lakers were not divulged, nor was any Los Angeles compensation to Golden State discussed.

Kent Cooke in a prepared statement. Cooke was not

"Our offer was more than competitive," a Warriors spokesman said, "but Wilkes' decision to return to Los Angeles outweighed the financial advantage of playing with us.' The Lakers must, according to NBA rules, compensate the Warriors to make them "whole." If the two teams cannot agree on compensation, a decision would then be made by the league commissioner. Golden State Vice President Scotty Stirling, perhaps a bit wistfully, suggested that Abdul Jabbar was the only player the Lakers had that could make the Warriors "whole" again. One name mentioned as a possiblity Wednesday was Earl Tatum, a sometime-starter for the Lakers as a rookie last season.

> NEW YORK (AP) - California's Frank Tanana and Detroit's Mark 'The Bird' Fidrych, both injured and both unavailable for the All-Star Game, nevertheless were named to the American League team today by Manager Billy Martin of the New York Yankees.

In addition to Tanana, tied for the AL lead in victories with teammate Nolan Ryan at 12 and the colorful Fidrych, the starter in last year's game, Martin chose six pitchers.

Two others are starters-Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles and Vida Blue of the Oakland A's-and four are relievers-Bill Campbell of the Boston Red Sox, Jim Kern of the Cleveland Indians, Dave LaRoche of California and Sparky Lyle of the Yankees.

With Tanana and Fidrych both sidelined, Martin will have to choose two replacements, for the American League team that will face the National League in the 48th midseason game Tuesday night at Yankee Stadium.

Like Martin, National League Manager Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds is going with an eight-man pitching staff.

Wednesday, he selected 12-game winner Rick Reuschel and relief ace

The left-handed Tanana, 12-6, with a 2.15 earned run average, has an inflamed triceps tendon, the result of what he claims is overwork. He has been advised not to pitch until July 21. two days after the All-Star game.

Fidrych, a right-hander with a 6-4 record and a 2.89 ERA after a late start because of a torn cartilage in his left knee, suffered during spring training now has a muscle pull in his right shoulder, also the result of overwork. And Detroit Manager Ralph Houk has said that Fidrych would not pitch until after the All-Star Game

After Tanana, the winningest pitcher on the AL team is Palmer. The veteran righthander has a 10-8 record with a 3.19 ERA

The left-handed Blue, the only AL pitcher with a victory in All-Star competition-he was the winner in 1971—has a 7-11 record this season with a 3.96 earned run average.

NY Apples blacked out

By The Associated Press

The New York Apples were about to turn the lights out on the Golden Gaters in their World Team Tennis match Wednesday night, but were beaten to the punch by the power failure that swept the New York City

The Apples were leading the Gaters 21-15 when the lights in the Felt Forum went out. The crowd of 3,345 was watching the fourth of five matches of the night, the men's singles clash between the Gaters' Tom Okker and the Apples' Sandy Mayer, when darkness struck.

A few emergency lights came on, but not enough to continue play. League officials tried to contact Commissioner Butch Buchholz for a ruling, but were unable to reach him. It is not known whether the match will be replayed onxpicked up where play was suspended.

In other action, the Los Angeles Strings crushed the Indiana Loves, 31-18, and the Sea-Port Cascades downed the Soviets 27-23.

The Apples match marked the homecoming of newly crowned Wimbledon champ virginia Wade. She beat Terry Holladay 6-1.

Aggie golfer in Western Amateur

FLOSSMOOR, Ill. (AP) — Brenda Goldsmith, one of the surviving favorites in the Women's Western Amateur Golf tournament, has no intentions of turning pro like some of her colleagues.

She wants to be a golf course superintendent.

Miss Goldsmith, 21, is a senior at Texas A&M and is the only female in a class of 35 studying turf management.

"I had several opportunities to work this summer as an assistant superintendent at several country clubs but decided to play golf," said the ponytailed San Antonio lassie. Her three brothers play golf.

"I don't think wanting to be a golf course superintendent is so unusual. You could get up early in the morning. get most of your work done and then play golf in the afternoon," she said. Miss Goldsmith won a fouryear golf scholarship at Texas A&M and was No. 1 on the girls' team. She now has used up her eligibility.

She was a finalist in the Western Amateur in 1973 and a semifinalist in-1974. Her match today against comedalist Beth Daniel, of Charleston, S.C., shaped up as one of the best of the third round

Another classic battle figured to be between Lauren Howe, 1976 Western Junior champion, and 28-year-old Cindy Hill, 1974 U.S. Amateur titlist. Both are from Colorado Springs, Colo., where Miss Hill won the Broadmoor Tournament last week and works as manager of a shoe store.

Miss Daniel, 1975 U.S. amateur winner, survived Wednesday's second round at Flossmoor Country Club with a 1-up decision over Julie Stanger, of Phoenix. Miss Goldsmith advanced with a 2-up victory over Andrea Gaston, of North Ridge, Calif.

Miss Howe moved up by defeating Sherry Keblish of Miami 4 and 2 while Miss Hill edged Sally Austin, of Chapel Hill, N.C., 2-up.

A double round today trims the match-play field to the Friday's semifinals. Still in the running are the other co-medalist, Carolyn Hill; Lancy Smith, 1974 Western Amateur champion; Kelly Fuiks, this year's winner of the Women's National Public Links tournament, and Mari McDougall, who captured the Western Junior crown two weeks ago.

By EARL ARONSON AP Newsfeatures

The smooth green lawn and the attractive shrubbery and flowers around your home make quite a difference in the price, should you decide to sell your property

Those lawn and garden people, Scott's, decided to find out how much difference the greenery made in the selling price of a typical suburban home. They put questions to 98 real estate people in Chicago. Denver and northern New Jersey.

The survey indicated that not only did the value rise, but that the plantings made the prospective buyer believe that the house itself had been taken care of. Also, the property sold much faster.

'Space doctors' cure public areas, offer ideas for redesign

SEATTLE (AP) - The "space doctors" have been consulted to diagnose a disease affecting two firms' public

The symptom: not enough/loiterers. The Project for Public Spaces has "cured" several people problems in New York City in the past; one PPS success, Atlas Court at Rockefeller Center, is jammed by pedestrians at all hours of the day

PPS has been called in to examine Seattle First National Bank Building's plaza and another at the new Federal Building.

Sea-First is anxious to turn its formal plaza into a pleasant public space. And Don Miles of Seattle, a cofounder of PPS, says he's curious to discover why, despite "heroic design efforts," the Federal Building plaza isn't used more.

PPS consultants have been dubbed the "space doctors" because they try to find out what makes one public space more attractive to pedestrians than others.

PPS says trees and benches aren't necessarily the answer.

Through the use of time-lapse photography. PPS examines traffic patterns within the space in question. Time-lapse telescopes hours of action into a few minutes and peak periods and social habits become apparent.

The firm spent several weeks

recently photographing the SeaFirst plaza and is now analyzing the results

Miles doesn't know yet what the firm will find, but said the results so far have been surprising.

The filming technique was used with considerable success when analyzing the nonloitering problems of Atlas Court, said Miles and another cofounder, Robert Cook.

PPS film showed the courtyard, was being used, but mostly during the

People leaned against the walls and some low-placed signs. The planter ledge around the base of the Atlas statue was being used as a narrow and somewhat uncomfortable bench, Miles said. Planter foliage was being

Using this information, PPS recommended redesigning the planter to include a bench. Railings were installed to accommodate the leaners and signs were raised.

"The impact was incredible." Miles said. Usage more than doubled and there no longer is one peak period.

"There's nothing worse than space designed for pedestrians with no pedestrians present," Cook added.

"It's a little like an empty church."

Policy could establish dangerous precedent

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) -President Carter's energy policy could establish a dangerous precedent of relying on the federal government, rather than industry, to solve all its crises, Oklahoma Gov. David L. Boren says.

Boren, chairman of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission, said the result could be a loss of economic freedom in this country "and if we lose our economic freedom, we will lose our political freedom.

Boren told the closing session of the commission Wednesday that Carter's energy policy asks America "to accept defeat before we have begun to

The commission, made up of 36 states which produce or have the potential of producing oil and gas, will hold its next meeting in December in Santa Fe, N.M. But it made it clear it wants Boren to present its protest of he Administration energy policy to the President as soon as possible.

Boren was particularly critical of what he called the energy policy's failure to "stress production in any way, shape or form...

You've got to come to the conclusion that the federal government has made the deliberate decision that it's better to use their (foreign) oil than it is our oil." An, while conceding that conservation is important. Boren said the administration seems to place its main emphasis on conservation, rather than production. And, he said, government figures repeatedly refer to 216 trillion cubic feet of natural gas reserves, good for about 10 years, when new natural gas reserves have been discovered.

In addition, he said, the 1974 price averaged 52 cents per thousand cubic feet, while current prices of $1.75 for the same amount would prolong both

Lake Jackson Mayor Vic Akers said, "It will be a tremendous loss energy-wise to Brazoria County and to people throughout the state and neighboring states."

"I feel it is a matter of the Carter administration putting out a few calls and telling people in private industry who backed out that we need the facility.

'The loss of the project would affect as many as 100,000 jobs nationwide and up to 30 per cent of the nation's crude oil supply.' said Mayor Tobey Davenport of Freeport "It means more the the United

December to hold the price line.

By JOE ALEX MORRIS JR. The Los Angeles Times

STOCKHOLM - Hard-liners on the oil price issue lashed out Wednesday at suggestions that the present price freeze should be extended through

'We will do our best. Cross your fingers," said Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani. But his open attempt to set pricing policies by public statements obviously raised hackles on the necks of some fellow oil

The reaction of the hard-line faction appeared to have tempered the newfound solidarity between Saudi Arabia and Iran's chief negotiator Jamshid Amouzegar, who on Tuesday endorsed Yamani's call for a freeze through 1978. After the conference ended, Amouzegar said no one could predict what would happen to oil prices in 1978. And he criticized the press for misreporting his statements.

'This is not a service to anybody.' he said. "You must give the full picture." He had been quoted as saying that there could be no price increase as long as there was an oil glut, and he expected this situation to last for at least another year before the world demand catches up and prices start to rise again.

Where Amouzegar has changed his emphaeis if not his complete tune is in his current stress on letting world economic conditions and market factor splay a decisive role in setting future oil prices. Heretofore, the Iranians had been among the loudest in calling for the oil price increases to be tuned to the rate of inflation in the industrialized world. But the continuing prospects for recession, plus new alarm over an oil glut, have apparently caused them to change their line.

The Iranian switch did little to ease the uncertainty created by the dogged remnants of OPEC's hard-liners, who seemed undaunted by the loss of Iran to the opposition ranks and wasted no time in challenging Yamani on the price freeze issue

Lybian Oil Minister Ezzedin Ali-Mabruk sharply criticized suggestions of a price freeze, and he was backed up by other oil policy radicals, notably Algeria and Iraq Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul Karim said the high rate of inflation "exported to us" will be considered when the ministers meet in Caracas in December to decide whether to raise prices in 1978.

He wouldn't predict what will happen, but said the time was now past when a single power "or any foreign power' could dictate prices to OPEC. By this he meant Saudi Arabia and the United States, which put heavy

Asked to speculate on price movements beyond next year, Yamani was unequivocal. "They will

In this he appeared to agree with

Iran's Amouzegar, who predicted that in the long run rising demand and growing scarcity of oil will force the price up. Amouzegar went so far as to suggest this could eliminate the need for OPEC, at least as a price-setting mechanism. The meeting here, held at a tightlyguarded resort south of Stockholm, was notable for not accomplishing anything. No one spoke up when the agenda came to the item "Other matters," which traditi nally led to some of the sharpest policy debates in the organization. In fact, the meeting could have ended Tuesdas, efcept for the fact the ministers ad been invied to lunch

Wednesday by King Carl Gustaf XVI There were, however, several interesting if inconclusive themes. One concerned a contingency plan to meet the threat of an oil glut, even a temporary one, and also U.S. plans to stockpile oil as a safeguard against another boycott

Under this plan, proposed by the economic commission, all members would agree to absorb any surplus in the market by cutting back production on a pro-rated basis. There were no objections raised when it came up, but deegates stressed this was not the same thing as an agreement.

The plan will be activated "when the time is ripe." according to Iraq's Abdul Karinm

Committee resumes Korea probe

By ROBERT L. JACKSON The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON -- The House Ethics Committee Wednesday stepped up its Korean influence investigation amid signs that Philip A. Lacovara, its special counsel, had won a power struggle with committee chairman John J. Flynt Jr. (D-Ga.).

The committee, recently criticized by Lacovara for its slow pace, agreed to a plan, proposed by Flynt Wednesday, to begin weekly meetings with an eye toward taking more testimony about alleged congressional payoffs.

Flynt took the position that he had been too busy with federal budget matters to hold more frequent Ethics Committee meetings.

Lacovara, who left last weekend on a long-planned European vacation, also survived a proposal by Rep. Olin E. Teague (D-Tex.) that he be fired for missing Wednesday's committee meeting without Flynt's approval.

Flynt told reporters after the closed-door committee session that he had never considered firing Lacovara, a former associate Watergate prosecutor.

"It was an unfortunate misunderstanding on his part." Flynt said of a critical memorandum Lacovara had sent members over Flynt's objection. "If there was any confrontation, it was a unilateral thing on his part.' Teague, the committee's ranking Democratic member, had said earlier of Lacovara's unapproved 'If anyone on my staff did that, they wouldn't have a job when they got back. I think that ought to be considered, especially when he accuses the chairman (Flynt) of delaying our investigation.' Lacovara's complaint centered on the fact that the Ethics Committee had met only 10 times this year.

The meeting Wednesday was the first in six weeks. Flynt said he had been tied up on federal appropriations bills during June but that investigators under Lacovara's direction were making "good

Lacovara had said in his memorandum that the committee's failure to meet regularly had resulted in too few subpoenas being issued. He complained that the panel had also failed to reach agreement with the Central Intelligence Agency on access to important

The committee Wednesday gave tentative approval to such an agreement. It provides for security arrangements under which the CIA would give the committee documents it possesses on Korean activities. Any dispute that arises over making these documents public would be arbitrated by President Carter, under terms of the agreement.

Flynt also told the committee he was seeking a specific document from Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell that had figured in the Justice Department's parallel criminal investigation

Flynt refused to describe the document, but other sources said it was a sworn statement given to-Justice Department attorneys by Kim Sang Keun, a high-ranking Korean intelligence official who defected to the United States last November.

To help reduce leaks of information, committee members unanimously adopted rules limiting access to evidence by both members and staff investigators who have no "demonstrable reason" to know it.

Peter Kreindler, Lacovara's law partner who attended the meeting, said Lacovara would return in late July. He said the committee had hired the law firm - not Lacovara as an individual - and that Lacovara had informed the committee by letter that he would be taking a vacation.

Proposed wage hike meets first test today

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - President Carter's proposed minimum wage compromise meets its first legislative test Thursday amid an assortment of challenges, including proposals to pay less to teenagers and eliminate automatic future increases.

But Republicans conceded that Carter has a better than even chance of winning approval for his proposal to raise the minimum from $2.30 to $2.65 an hour next year in the House Labor Standards Subcommittee, which is scheduled to act on the legislation Thursday.

'It's altogether likely that the votes are there for $2.65," said Rep. John N. Erlenborn (Ill.), ranking Republican on the subcommittee.

Democrats were also predicting approval of the rest of the bill, which, for the first time, would provide automatic annual increases pegged to average manufacturing wages. Under the Carter compromise with organized labor, the wage floor would be 52 per cent of average manufacturing pay (an estimated $2.89) in 1979 and 53 per cent ($3.15) in 1980. After that, it would remain 53 per cent in-

But Erlenborn said fights are expected over the automatic escalator and the bill's omission of a pay differential for teenagers, a longtime Republican goal that has also attracted some interest among Democrats on the subcommittee. The White House opposes such a differential, which would permit teenagers to be paid less than adults, as does

Rep. Albert H. Quie (Minn.), ranking Republican of the parent Education and Labor Committee, said he expects Carter to get his way on the legislation, although Quie predicted that a teenage differential could be added on the House floor if not before. He said support for a differential is growing.

From the Democratic side, Rep. Phillip Burton (Calif.) indicated Tuesday he may push to reach the 53 per cent level before 1980 and expand coverage to include municipal employes and migrant workers. Burton and some other Democrats are also pushing to eliminate the existing credit under which waitresses, waiters and other tipped workers are paid less than the minimum hourly wage.

Carter's surprise announcement of the compromise Tuesday caught both sides off guard. But predictable lineups began emerging Wednesday in anticipation of heavy lobbying before the measure—which has been put on a fast legislative track—hits the House floor later this month.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, with whom Labor Secretary Ray Marshall negotiated the compromise, praised Carter and pledged his sup-

Woman's untiring voice works 24 hours daily

By ROBERT L. SHAFFER

CZEVELAND (AP) - When Ohio Bell Telephone Co. workers walked off the job for a few days last year, one woman's voice worked on, handling thousands of calls 24 hours a day, answering each with the same impeccable voice:

"The number you have called ... has been changed. The new number is... Please make note of it." Or one of a score of other messages, coupled with precise, instantaneous information on the number you dialed

If you are a normal telephone user in a Bell Telephone system almost anywhere, the same voice speaks to you regularly, when you dial non-working numbers.

●BIG "O"

Now Only

Audichron Co., Atlanta, Ga., makes the recordings for telephone and other systems. The firm says the same voice talks to more people in one day than any other human in the world.

She is Jane Barbe, an Atlanta housewife, and when you talk to her on the telephone she has the same charming manner that comes through on Ohio Bell's Automated Intercept System - AIS - or the "time at the tone" message used by hundreds of telephone exchanges around the

In addition to making AIS recordings "in bits and pieces that the computer puts together," she said, she does time and temperature information recordings for other agencies, including one for television. For the AIS system put together by Western Electric, the Bell system's technical arm, Mrs. Barbe records individual numerals, one to zero, plus a series of message fragments such as "in the 614 area," "in the Canton area." and so forth These are recorded on electronic chips mounted in two 20-inch computer drums.

Martin Svensen, who watches over the AIS in the Ohio Bell equipment center in Cleveland, plugged a phone in one of the chips.

"One, one, one, one, one...," Jane's voice says over and over. He switches one." but with a dropping inflection used when the numeral is at the end of a phrase.

The heart of AIS is housed in a cabinet the size of a household refrigerator. Svensen says the memory in the system has about 600,000 telephone numbers in the northeast Ohio area which require information from the intercept

Before the system was installed six years ago - the third to go in around the country - the job was handled by operators. Now, when you call a discontinued or changed number. your call is switched automatically into AIS. It finds the number and keys sequence faster than you can say.

And it does it so smoothly, it almost sounds as though Mrs. Barbe is on the phone talking to you. The only thing missing is the Southern accent, which she doesn't let creep into recordings.

Ohio Bell public relations executive Charles Day said Mrs. Barbe's voice provides all the information a live operator could.

"If you stay on the line, a live operator will come in," he said. "but all she can do is look in the records and give you the same information that's in the AIS memory.

"You know," Day observed, "they say if the telephone companies hadn't phones there wouldn't be enough women in the country to handle all the boards

The spread of AIS - eliminating hundreds of intercept operators — can be measured by the amount of work Mrs. Barbe does at Audichron. "I'm recording messages for new installations constantly," she said.

Svensen said recordings in the AIS drum here have been revised only once since they were installed in 1971.

Mrs. Barbe and her husband have two children, David, 13, and Susan, 15. What do they think about hearing her voice so many places?

Nashville pilgrimage remains way of life tor unsung artists

By JOE EDWARDS

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — They line the interstates around Nashville, hitchhiking into town with starry eyes or back home with punctured pride. They share a goal. They want to be music stars.

Nashville, with record companies, studios and song publishing firms almost as plentiful as gas stations, attracts musicians the way Hollywood draws aspiring actresses.

They come to be discovered. But as in the Charlie Rich hit, the Nashville kingmakers are "behind closed doors. As Lisa Scott, 19, of Wichita, Kan., trudged door-to-door along the famed Music Row trying to sell a song, she compiled a list of subtle signals telling her before she lived on hot dog relish and mustard for about two weeks.

Miss Scott saved $200 she earned playing with her group, "The Texas Two-Steppers," to spend two weeks in Nashville. She lost six pounds while budgeting her nickels as closely as she scrutinized her lyrics.

"The more you can live without, the longer you can stay here." she said.

Some take jobs such as pumping gas while trying to establish themselves in the music business. Others play for free at saloons, hoping a recording executive is in the crowd.

"I thought there would be talent scouts at these places, but they're not," lamented Michael Spence; 30, of Murfreesboro, Tenn. Spence said he played in bars at night for tips but had made only $10 in two

"It's hard to go home and say you've failed, but I'm not the first and won't be the last."

As Spence spoke, Jimmy Elks and his bride pulled into town, bought a newspaper and scanned the classified ads for an apartment.

Elks. 44, with long gray hair, had been singing in Bradenton, Fla., for the past 21/2 years and has recorded on minor labels. Now he's determined to move up to major companies.

"I'm gonna pound the streets and beat on the doors," he said as he ate a bacon sandwich at Linebaugh's Restaurant a block from the old Grand Ole Opry house.

"I'm going to stay as long as it takes, even if I have to put up a tent in front of RCA. I'm going to be on their front step every morning, saying, 'Can I help you unlock the door?' They won't starve me out; we're here to stay."

Backyard inventors force to be reckoned with

By KEN ALLEN

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - David Gutman finally perfected his pedestrian-catching bumper. He doesn't own a car, so Gutman bolted the bumper to a kitchen table and ran headlong into the object.

"It works. It works good. It pushes in, then pushes right back out." Gutman said.

Gutman, 66, is one of thousands of backyard inventors, people with ideas for doing something and the mechanical ability to carry them out. Many of these latter-day Thomas Edisons troop to the U.S. Patent Office to register their creations as of-here 25 years ago from New York, where he had worked in a machine shop His inventions include a fire escape that dowers a person to the ground, a nail guide that prevents bat-tered thumbs and two car bumpers designed to protect pedestrians.

"I don't drive," Gutman said, explaining why he spends so much time on bumpers to protect pedestrians. "I, used to, but I'd get lost or I'd lose the car or something. So now I walk."
Gutman's inventions, like many designed in backyard workshops, are unusual in appearance. Take the car The first one, patented in 1960, was a complicated system of springs and rods that ran out and embraced the panies, no one bought the idea.

The latest bumper is simpler, consisting of two tempered steel rods that curve down and out from the bumper. The rods are connected by a crosspiece that theoretically acts as a cow-catcher." scooping the pedestrian up and onto the hood

His fire escape, which can also be used as a window washer, drops down one side at a time, with a cam arrangement preventing it from coming down out of control. Gutman tested the crude-looking prototype by descending on it from the roof his that can't be held and hammered without damage to the fingers, and Gutman put those into production himself. He said he made about $1,000 - just enough to pay the cost of getting the patent.

An official of the U.S. Patent office said that about a quarter of the patents issued go to people like Gutman, "The independent inventor is still a force to be reckoned with," said Isaac Fleischmann, director of Information of Services for the U.S. Office of Patents and Trademarks.

"There are some who do make money," he said. "They wouldn't do it if there weren't the promise of some remuneration. There is still a need for employes 1,000 engineers to investigate the 102,000 applications made each year. It takes about 18 months to get a patent, although they can be granted in as few as nine months for environmental and energysaving products.

"All an invention has to do to be patented is to meet our three criteria: It must be new. It must be an invention, that is, the inventor must know what he is doing. And the invention must have some practical use," Fleischmann said.

Yarbrough asks court to delay legislative hearing

meaningless.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Supreme Court Justice Don Yarbrough goes into federal court today in an effort to halt what he calls the "rush to judgment" being forced on him by Texas lawmakers.

U.S. 5th Circuit Court Judge Tom Gee set a 1 p.m. hearing on a motion by Yarbrough's lawyer, Waggoner Carr, to delay the scheduled Friday legislative hearing on the removal of Yarbrough from the high court.

The hearing today was expected to cover much the same ground as a prehearing session Wednesday night in which House and Senate leaders refused to dismiss or postpone the charges.

"You all want to try this case and get home and you are not giving us time to prepare our case," protested

Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls. chief presiding officer of the Friday hearing, said the postponement motion will be presented again

'This is a matter we should defer to the entire House and Senate." he said.

The Wednesday night session considered about 20 procedural motions presented by Carr and by the House and Senate leaders pushing Friday's removal hearing.

Time after time Carr claimed Wednesday night that Yarbrough was being forced to trial before both houses "with only 24 hours notice."

Rep. Robert Maloney, R-Dallas, argued the Friday session was a hearing not a trial to determine if he said trial on criminal indictments voted by a Travis County grand jury was up to the local district attorney.

In other rulings Wednesday night, Farabee quashed or overruled requests that all 181 state legislators and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby be sub-poenaed. "This is just a fishing expedition," Maloney said.

"I have the right to examine the jury that is going to decide the fate of Judge Yarbrough," Carr argued. "I need to know if there is any prejudice or bias If you deny me this you are denying me due process.

In answer to another Carr motion, Maloney turned over to him seven tape recordings that he said were duplicates of testimony to be used in the Friday hearing. The tapes contain more than three hours of conversation between Yarbrough and a former business associate, John William Rothkopf, including conversations about the alleged murder plot.

However, Farabee refused to force Rothkopf to appear as a witness because the prosecutors said they did not plan to use him as a witness.

"I have a right to face this man." Carr said. "You are denying me the right to the most important witness in this procedure."

Farabee said that Carr could cross examine Rothkopf if he was later called as a witness.

Carr says he has not had sufficient time to prepare a defense. He also is entitled to question each legislator individually to determine if he is prejudiced against his client, he said. Another of Yarbrough's lawyers the pre-hearing motions on the ground the whole Friday morning to consider an "address" resolution directing Gov. Dolph Briscoe to remove Yarthat less than 48 hours remained before the Friday trial, and the motion on discovery - getting a chance to look at the evidence against brough from office.

Speaker Bill Clayton named Rep. DeWitt Hale, D-Corpus Christi, as chairman of the committee of the whole for the House

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby named Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, as chairman of the committee of the whole of the Senate

The resolution was pre-filed only last week and could not officially be considered until after the special session convened Monday.

That's too fast, says Carr. "They're only concerned with whether they've had enough time to prepare for trial. They're giving no time at all for us to get ready," Carr said earlier Wednesday. "It's about as bad as anything I've ever been in. The judgment has already been made. The members already have expressed themselves," he said

Carr filed several motions with the House and Senate Tuesday, which, among other things, denied all charges, asked for delay, and claimed the right to question all 181 legislators about possible prejudice in the case.

A Travis County grand jury has indicted Yarbrough on charges of perjury and forgery.

The Mexican government appealed to the supreme court after State District Court Judge Calvin Ashley of Wichita Falls ruled that he had power over Mexico in the $874,000 suit.

Brannan, 80, former president of Wichita County Bar Association, sued Mexico in Ashley's court Dec. 10, seeking compensation for 218,000 acres in the state of Zacatecas.

The land was taken from Brannan in 1963 and 1967 "without proceeding or compensation," Sherrod said.

Sherrod said Mexico should encourage foreign investment. "They (Mexico) should treat us civil and not just hijack us taking our property away and saying we can't sue.'

The 1959 federal Hickenlooper Act permits suits such as Brannan's when there has been a flagrant violation of international law, such as taking of property without compensation, Sherrod argued.

Michael Schattman, a Fort Worth lawyer representing Mexico, said, "There's no question that Congress, in its rage at expropriation tried to make American courts decide such questions, but they have continued to avoid them." But, Schattman argued, "The doctrine of sovereign immunity sur-

That thread, he said, was that Brannan had sued to take over pre-Columbian artifacts thought to belong to Mexico - held as evidence in a smuggling case in San Schattman argued that Judge Ashley "abused his discretion" in refusing to dismiss the case. Chief Justice Joe Greenhill told Schattman "I hope you have more than abuse of discretion to hang your hat on."

Schattman replied "No, I think that is it,

Diplomat plans to study, teach at TCU in fall

By HENRY S. ACKERMAN

LIMA, Peru (AP) - At times in his 30-year foreign service career, Robert W. Dean wanted to get out of Latin America because "it was considered a rather calm area of the world.'

"But that's no longer the case," Ambassador Dean said shortly before he bade Peruvian and American friends good-bye in late June

Dean was about to receive eloquent praise from Peru's foreign minister for his three years of diplomacy here. And he was packing up for a midnight flight to Washington, a debriefing and a camping trip across the United States to his new home in

In an interview, Dean reflected on the foreign service, the issues and the life and on going home. "The world has shrunk," said Dean, since the time he parlayed a fellowship to study at the University of Sao Paulo (Brazil) into a World War II job in the Sao Paulo U.S. Consulate, purchasing raw materials 30 years ago.

"The far distant places aren't so distant any more And the distant problems aren't so distant. If anything, the problems of the poor, of war and peace have been more intense, more vital more urgent that in the past.'

"The whole ball of wax-it's here now in the hemisphere.' Dean referred to what he called the region's most pressing issues: Arms purchase, human rights, poverty, food, agriculture, capital, transfer of technology and raw materials pricing. At Texas Christian University in Fort Worth, where the 57- year-old at hietic envoy will be diplomat in residence beginning this fall. Dean plans to talk about such things.

With but three years more to serve before mandatory retirement, unless recalled by the President,

Dean was possibly going home for the last time. Peruvian-American relations, according to almost everyone's estimate upon Dean's departure, were better that day than on any for the previous nine, years.

When Dean arrived in April, 1974, the left-wing military regime of Gen. Juan Velasco Alvarado was locked in a tempestuous ideological and legal debate over tuna fishing rights, expropriations of American firms, and flight routes and frequencies for American air carriers. Foreign ministry officials privately lauded Dean for his discreet approach. With a new moderate military government in power since August 1975, by the time Dean left he could claim much success.

But, when asked, he gave credit to the "backstopping" of his diplomatic officers here and his superiors in Washington.

Dean and his Brazilian-American wife, Doris, left behind a large pink-walled mansion, servants, a bullet-proof limousine, and the power and prestige that comes with being No. 1 American out of some 8000 living in Peru. As one senior aide put it: An ambassador here is something of a mini-president for Americans. He's called to promote and protect huge American investments, host high-ranking American officials and ordinary citizens, defend American policies and administer millions of dollars in aide The job, says Dean, has "privileges and perks." Dean, a native of Hillsdale, Ill., who has served in Germany, Brazil (three times), Chile, Mexico, Peru and Washington, says he wants to share his exper ences with new colleagues at TCU and with Texas audiences at large.

"I'm going to have to prove I have something to offer ... primarily experience in overseas situations." "I think the image of the U.S. diplomate is changing slowly. Americans are getting to the feeling that we are in a sense on the front lines."

Dean added: "There have been ,enough unfortuate experiences ... that I am sure that our fellow citizens back home know that it's not a bed of roses, if it ever was, and probably more and more realize that there's a good big of work, blood, sweat and tears in-Dean, who served under the Nixon, Ford and

Carter administrations as ambassador, said he doesn't believe one administration's way of handling day-to-day problems abroad varies significantly. 'You run into a situat on when you either have to resolve it at the moment or build on something you have been trying to do ... or avoid a confrontation Frequently, there's not time for instructions and you're doing your job anyway.

"The days of a quasi-retirement confortable-inthe-shade diplomatic post are just about ended. They don't exist." "More and more we have to be the shirt-sleeve get-out-andmeet-the-people-and-see-the- country type. As frequently as once every three months, Dean would take off to visit rural areas of Peru, friends said, so he could get a reading on what people were thinking. But in town, his ambassadorial day began at seven in the morning and usually did not end until mid-

Crammed in between, he said, was "a lot of reading with not much time for it," meetings on specific situations, problems, programs, opportunities. Then there was a "flow of visitors from the United States: businessmen, journalists, artists, educators, interested citizens. There were Peruvian, American and diplomatic community functions that frequently meant postponing a Saturday afternoon tennis game for weeks. In candid answers to other questions about a diplomat's life, Dean replied this way: -Most Americans don't "zero-in" on the difference between a career diplomat, who rises through the civil service, and a political appointee, and Dean is glad they don't. "They're both going to face the same situation ... the same risks ... the same problems and difficulties, and hopefully have similar successes." -Despite what some may think are expensive home leaves to the United States, Dean said these were vital to diplomats.

"We no longer had the privileges or the perks that we have abroad and we recognized that these privileges and perks are the exception and that the situation at home is reality."

-There's a "lot of short-hand thinking and describing (of) the situation in Latin America and around the world."

Dean says: The trick of the desire is how to get the message across or get the information to them (Americans).

He said this was increasingly the job of diplomats going home, of the press and of Americans who

At TCU Dean plans to write, think, study and teach. He wants to hold student seminars on the issues of poverty and wealth that make the so called Third World, including countries like Peru, want to establish a "more just" international economic order.

As for the change from ambassador to private citizen, Dean says the "relative anonymity" is welcome,

HUD battles welfare proposal

By AUSTIN SCOTT and DAVIDS BRODER

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - A major battle has erupted within the Carter administration over a proposal that virtually all federal housing subsidy programs be scrapped to provide money for welfare reform

The Office of Management and Budget has suggested that the level of new subsidized housing commitments be cut from 400,000 units to 50,000 units a year. That reduction in starts plus cutbacks in ongoing programs could divert most of the $4.9 billion the Department of Housing and Urban Development currently spends to help pay for the improved federal welfare program President Carter has promised to send Congress next

HUD Secretary Patricia Harris met Wednesday with presidential assistant Hamilton Jordan and reportedly lodged a vigorous protest against the proposal.

Harris declined to discuss the matter with a reporter, but sources said HUD officials believe that the scrapping of the housing programs would mean the end of neighborhood revitalization efforts in thousands of small towns and big-cities.

The sources said HUD officials also believe that OMB's approach would be inflationary, because giving poor people money to search for their own housing will drive up housing prices.

HUD officials do not believe, the sources said. OMB's argument that "housing deprivation is caused by inadequate income, rather than by the housing industry's inability to produce enough housing, and can be overcome by raising incomes for the housing-poor

One reliable source said Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. discussed the matter with Harris, and told her he is 100 per cent behind OMB's position.

Califano's press secretary said the HEW chief had no comment because "it's an OMB matter." But it is no secret that Califano has been scouring the federal government for other programs that could be "cashed in" to meet the higher costs of a national welfare payment while still obeying Carter's injunction against additional

The OMB memo says that "for planning purposes. HEW is assuming. at a minimum." that it can add to present welfare outlays the funds now. being used for food stamps in the Agriculture Department, the workincentive program in the Labor Department and counter-cyclical jobs aid to the cities.

If the OMB suggestion on housing were adopted, it would shift more than half the current expenditures of HUD into the welfare-reform account.

The OMB memo, distributed last Thursday, gives three alternative policies for fitting housing programs to the new welfare reform program. including one that leaves existing HUD programs untouched

But the final option, which has stirred the controversy, calls for deducting housing subsidies from the welfare payments of families receiving special housing benefits. and slashing future housing commitments from 400,000 units a year to 50,000 units

A OMB official said the document 'really just asks questions and is not a firm position of this agency." But HUD officials and those few outsiders aware of the OMB memo are treating it as a major threat to the federa housing program.

The OMB memo criticizes the existing housing programs on the grounds of cost, efficiency and equity. noting that only one out of every 13 families below the poverty line currently receives any benefits from HUD subsidies.

It questions whether public subsidies add significantly to the overall housing stock and says that "most (low-income) families can obtain decent housing for less than it costs the government to obtain it on their behalf.

The OMB memo concedes that scrapping the housing programs would "significantly" reduce the benefits for those in subsidized housing, but transferring the savings to welfare reform would "be far more equitable and would leave the great majority of poverty-level households better off as a result.

HUD officials have argued in the past that housing subsidy programs prevent neighborhood deterioration and promote integration and concern for the environment, because of the restrictions placed on use of the money. There would be no such pressures operating if, as OMB's third alternative suggests, housing program money were given out in cash in the form of increased welfare benefits.

Sources said HUD officials are also concerned about the fairness of ending housing subsidies for the poor. but continuing them for middle class of mortgage tax deductions. The battle over housing subsidies vs. welfare reform will go to Carter next week, when OMB collects agency positions in a final memo for the

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) -Oklahoma musi "get off the fence" in the struggle for water rights or it will lose to surrounding states, a water study group says. Oklahoma Water Inc., a group promoting development of the state's water resources, gave the warning in a report this week on the study of a plan to transport water from Arkansas to Texas. 'Oklahoma must get off the fence and hasten the completion and adoption of a statewide comprehensive water plan, and initiate the actions required to bring such a cooperative venture about," the report said. "It's time that we initiated some actions instead of reacting to what Texas and others have already donee. "If Oklahoma fails to do this, she may be left on the sidelines while other states put waters which otherwise would legally belong to Oklahoma to work for themselves.

The issue is over water which leaves the state of Oklahoma and flows in to Arkansas and Texas.

"At first glance, there appears to be enough water for everyone," the report said.

Estimates, according to the report, are that the annual outflow from Arkansas is about 76.5 million acrefeet and after allowances for that state's needs by the year 2020, it would be reduced to 43 million acrefeet.

"When compared with the proof about six million acre-feet per year, the issue seems hardly worth a squabble. Closer scrutiny of the report, however, reveals additional facts and leads to several questions."

Most Texans vote for 'double dipping as military practice

WASHINGTON-Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes June 30 and July 1, the days preceding the current July 4th recess.

DOUBLE DIPPING. Adopted, 219 for and 174 against, an amendment permitting retired military personnel to draw their military pensions at the same time they hold civilian jobs with the federal government. The legality of drawing both a military pension and a civilian pay check (called "double dipping") was reaffirmed by this amendment. The amendment was attached to the defense appropriations bill (HR 7933), later passed and sent to the Senate

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif., sponsor of the amendment, said that the proposed abolition of double-dipping

ROLL CALL REPORT

would "have a devastating effect on the quality and quantity of people willing to dedicate their lives to a military career." He added, "People are still the most important element of defense, and any denigration in this area will directly affect our national security."

Rep. Robert Giaimo, D-Conn, an oponent, said: "We are paying $9 billion a year...in military pensions" and that the proposal to outlaw double dipping "says that if you are getting a military pension from the government, and if you go to work for that same government, you do not draw both you pay and your pension.

Members voting "yea" favored the continuance of double-dipping.

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), Charles Wilson (D-2), Ray Roberts (D-4), Jim Mattox (D-5), Bill Archer (R-7), Jack Brooks (D-8), W. R. Poage (D-11), James Wright (D-12), John Young (D-14), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Richard White (D-16), Omar Burleson (D-17), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Robert Krueger (D-21), Bob Gammage (D-22), Abraham Kasen (D-23) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "yea."

Reps James Collins (R-3), Bob Eckhardt (D-8), Barbara Jordan (D-18) Barbara Jordan (D-18) and George Rahon (D-19) voted "nay."

Reps. Olin Teague (D-6), Jake Pickle (D-10) and Jack Hightower (D-13 did not vote.

DEFENSE BUDGET. Adopted, 288 for and 119 against, an amendment to permit military guard and reserve units to continue to utilize "dual-service technicians." The amendment eliminated from the defense appropriations bill a proposed phasing out of the practice. It was attached to HR 7933, the fiscal 1978 defense ap propriations bill later passed and set to the Senate.

So-called dual service technicians are federal civil service employes (such as mechanics or bookkeepers) who also belong to a national guard or reserve unit, and who perform their civilian job also for their military unit. They are paid separately for their civilian and military duties. There are an estimated 65,000 dual-service technicians.

Authors of the defense appropria ions bill opposed this hiring of civilian technicians be reserve and guard units, saying only active-duty military personnel should be employed in these jobs. This would have $350 million annually and Siminate strike-prone unionized civilian workers from involvement in a war effort.

Supporters of the amendment did-ot speak in its behalf. One opponent, sportation aid that than predicted."

NEUTRON BOMB. Voted, 43 for and 42 against, to appropriate money for beginning production of neutron warheads for U.S. missiles. The approval is subject to President Carter signaling a go-ahead for production and complying with congressional reporting requirements.

The amendment was attached to HR 7553, an appropriations bill still pending when the Senate began its Juy 4th recess. It blunted an effort to eliminate neutron warhead money for the bill.

The neutron bomb is an "enhancedradiation" weapon which kills primarily be radiation. Because it has less heat and blast than present nuclear warheads it is said to do less damage to natural and man-made enviornments

Virtually all support for the amendment, and thus for the bomb, was expressed as classified information during a rare closed session of the

One opponent, Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, said: "Let us make no mistake. This is a nuclear warhead. The fact that it manages to reduce blast and thermal impact while maintaining the same level of lethal neutron radiation hardly qualifies it as a 'clean' weapon, except, I guess, to those among us nowadays for whom the words 'kilotons' and 'migatons' seem to have lost their terrible meaning."

It was pro ed to HR 7553, an appropriations bill awaiting final Senate action.

Saleswoman, prospects think big

EDITOR'S NOTE — So you think prices of homes are out of sight? How does $1 million grab you? There's a real estate firm that doesn't bat an eyelash at numbers like that — and in fact won't consider handling a cottage priced below $250,000. It's out in Beverly Hills, naturally, and not doing badly at all.

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) - Elaine Young, a glamorous real estate agent with a show business pedigree, was selling a house to a star couple when the clients balked: For $1 million, the house had just

"I got up all my courage," she recalls, "and I said. "Well, what do you want for a million dollars?" The couple laughed — and bought the house. "They said they would add another bathroom.

Although Ms. Young admits that line won't work on many clients, the attitude is symptomatic of a celebrity real estate market gone mad

"I was showing a house to someone famous for $700,000 and they were so excited because everything they'd seen was either $895,000 or $1 million," Ms. Young says. "The world must think we're crazy."

Crazy or not, it's a living. Elaine Young, daughter of a movie executive, exwife of actor Gig Young and a member of the prestigious Mike Silverman Agency, last year sold $8 million to $9 million worth of property herself. The agency's gross came closer to $30 million.

Most of it was sold to movie. TV and recording stars and executives. All of the house hunters had special requirements and were willing to pay top dollar to get what they wanted.

Cher Bono needed lots of closets. O.J. Simpson wanted a tennis court. Tom Jones opted for a moody atmosphere

"One common denominator is they all want privacy," Ms. Young says. "Everybody is so worried about burglaries and kidnapings. Everybody wants privacy and a swimming pool.

A house without a pool is unthinkable in the Beverly Hills, Bel-Air, Holmby Hills area where the stars seek a roof over their heads. But there's more. "Projection rooms are very big in Southern California," says Ms. Young. "But Numero Uno is tennis courts. People are so tennis happy. They'll pay $100,000 more than a house is worth to get a tennis court

For rock stars, a recording studio on the premises

a must. For those with families, multiple bathrooms are preferred.

"Everybody wants two bathrooms off the master bedroom now," sighs Ms. Young. "God forbid the husband and wife should wash their teeth in the same

A show business couple that have bought in Bel Air and are now hunting a Malibu beach house are Marty Richards and Mary Lea Johnson, movie producers who head the Producer Circle Co. She is a member of the Johnson & Johnson drug family.

They also maintain a New York apartment and a New Jersey estate. Prices in the Bel-Air-Beverly Hills enclave are "astronomical," they say.

"This is probably the highest priced real estate in the country with the exception of a very small part of Palm Beach," Richards said

They bought a Bel-Air house last year for $600,000. It's worth $700,000 now. Twenty years ago, the previous owner paid $167,000 for the house, originally built by Al Jolson.

Agency owner Silverman, who bills himself as "realtor to the stars," has spent 25 years perfecting a style of real estate salesmanship as soft as sable and

A celebrity arriving to look at a $2 million house is welcomed with a chilled glass of expensive wine or perhaps a cocktail. Soft music in the background. Money is rarely discussed.

Do his clients worry about cost? "If they do, they conceal it nicely," he says.

Ms. Young's largest sale to date was a $2 million house sold to producer Dino DiLaurentis. Now she's shooting for three. "I just listed a house in Holmby Hills for $3 million," she says, "and I know it will

What do you get for $3 million?

"It has two or three acres, a tennis court and it's just very gracious," says Ms. Young. "The address is a status symbol. Holmby Hills is so exclusive that pretty soon there will be nothing there under $1 million. It also has the highest taxes.

The yearly tax on Cher Bono's recently sold home was $24,000, she notes.

Finding prospective buyers for these mini-palaces is a special talent closely akin to being a gossip monger,

"You have to know who's passed away, who's getting a divorce," says Ms. Young. "I read the trade papers and the gossip columns.

"I am friendly with the chauffeurs because there is no better source of information and gossip - who's looking for a house and who's doing what to whom. They know everything....

"Then there are the maids. The maids in every house adore me. I get a phone call from a maid saying, 'So and so is having a fight. Be prepared; their house may be on the market.' Sometimes I know that someone is getting a divorce before he Frequently, Ms. Young will re-sell a house several times as the owners move on to other mansions. "I've sold one house six times," she says. The residents included Cher and Barbra Streisand. "People move around and change houses like people change clothes. I don't know if it's boredom, money or new relationships." Not every transaction is a triumph, of course. A while ago she found the perfect house for singer Tom Jones. Jones and his wife made a down payment and flew to Europe.

"Three days before they were to move in, the owner died," Ms. Young recalls. They arrived and found a wake going on in the house with a casket sitting in the living room. Jones thought those were bad vibes and the deal was off.

"Stars," says Ms. Young, "are very superstitious.

TOKYO - North Korea wants to open a dialogue with the United States and "will keep knocking at the door," President Kim Il Sung said in a television interview broadcast Wednesday.

The North Korean leader called President Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. ground forces from South Korea "a very good thing" that removes a major obstacle to reunification of the Korean peninsula. Although he criticized Carter's intention to leave U.S. Air Force units in South Korea and the continuing American support for the Seoul government, his comments were moderate in tone.

The interview was aired in prime time by Japan's semi-governmental broadcasting corporation. North Korean sources in Tokyo later emphasized the friendly nature of Kim's remarks about the United States. If Secretary of State Cyrus Vance was authorized to visit Pyongyang, the North Korean capital during his coming trip to Peking, he would be welcome, the sources said.

The Japanese television crew interviewed Kim at length June 3 during a two-week visit to a country that commentator Akira Ogata described as "unknown and mysterious to many Japanese." The 40-minute program included street scenes in Pyongyang, views of a tractor factory and shots of a rally where a crowd of 200,000 thunderously chanted a demand that the United States get out of South Korea.

Kim appeared to be in good health and in a relaxed, expansive mood. He chain-smoked cigars, toyed with horn-rimmed glasses and frequently ended his gravel-voiced responses by beaming directly at the camera.

Neither the United States nor Japan has diplomatic relations with North Korea. Japan, however which has trade relations with Pyongyang and has 300,000 North Korean residents, maintains intermittent contact. The North Korean president's message seemed aimed more at Washington

North Korea proposed a dialogue to the United States "quite a long time ago," Kim noted. He said that although there had been no response. he stood ready to meet with American diplomats at any time.

Kissinger accused North Korea of trying to drive a wedge between Washington and Seoul.

In Wednesday's interview, Kim complained that Carter's pledge on troop withdrawal differs from practice. American Air Force units are part of the foreign force stationed south of the demilitarized zone and should also be removed, he said. The timing of the troop pullout over four to five years left him uncertain whether Carter intends to complete the plan within his four-year term of office. Kim added.

Repression of human rights to South Korea is an obstacle to reunification he said, yet Carter had not criticized the present government and is still giving aid.

"We hope and expect to reunify Korea peacefully," Kim said.

CIA's deputy

By DON OBERDORFER The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The ranking career official of the Central Intelligence Agency, Deputy Director E. Henry Knoche, has resigned amid indications that a major shakeup is in

CIA Director Stansfield Turner, through a spokesman, reported that Knoche had submitted his resignation to President Carter on July 5, effective Aug. 1. Turner gave no explanation for Knoche's action but denied a press report that the two top officials of the CIA clandestine operations branch as well as 20 of their suborwas no desire on our part dinates are under pressure to resign.

... And have a ball!

Agency sources said Turner Wednesday assured his senior staff including operations director William Wells and his deputy, Ted Shackley, that there is no truth to reports that he has decided to replace them.

A statement to CIA employes by the retiring deputy director, however. said "more change looms on the horizon." Calling it a most difficult decision. Knoche said he is stepping aside to facilitate Turner's task "as he prepares to make decisions about new organizational forms and the kind of new leadership that he will need to carry out his future plans."

President Carter is reported to be weighing a major reorganization of the U.S. intelligence community which would give Turner budgetary and operational control over the National Security Agency, the highly secret eavesdropping organization, and the National Reconnaissance Office, which operates spy satellites.

Although Turner and his predecessors as director of the CIA have in theory been heads of the entire intelligence community, the NSA and NRO have in practice been under the control of the secretary of defense. The Pentagon is contesting Turner's plans to bring these major units under his wing

There is no indication that Carter has made a decision in the CIA-Pentagon struggle, which has been described as one of the most important to U.S. intelligence since the CIA was established in 1947. A Turner victory in his drive would probably trigger major reshuffles at the top.

Knoche, who is 52 years old and a 24-year veteran of the CIA, was acting director between the resignation of George Bush and the swearing in of Turner as his successor early this

At a February news conference, Carter called Knoche "very compentent." He was reportedly among those considered for the CIA top post before the selection of Turner, who was a classmate of Carter's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

Reports which could not be confirmed Wednesday said there were policy differences between Turner and Knoche. However, a CIA spokessas said Knoche had not been forced to resign and suggested that Turner had been surprised by the career official's decision to set for early retirement. decision to ask for early retirement.

In another development, Carter was reported to be reconsidering a commitment given by Turner to keep Congress informed of any possible wrongdoing by intelligence agencies. Turner had pledged during his confirmation hearing to notify the Senate: Intelligence Committee of all charge of abuses which are submitted to the President's Intelligence Oversight

Carter, Schmidt meet; differences minimized

WASHINGTON President Carter and visiting West Germany Chancellor Helmut Schmidt muted their differences Wednesday on human rights and other issues in the first of two days of talks. Both sides reported they are in agreement on strategy in the 35-nation Belgrade conference which is preparing a review of the 1975

Helsinki accords.

West Germany had been concerned that the Carter administration's aggressive pursuit of its human rights campaign might lead to a confrontation with the Soviet Union in Belgrade, endangering the flow of Germans allowed to return from Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union. Before Schmidt left Bonn for his current visit to Canada and the States, his top aides expressed alarm that American policy might "prove counterproductive" in dealing with the Russians. A determination to agree was evident from the opening ceremony on the south lawn of the White House where Schmidt was greeted by a 19gun salute, full military honors and Carter's assertion that "there are no differences between us." Lauding Schmidt as 'one of the world's foremost leaders" and was "a high degree of "my good friend," Carter satisfaction" in the discussions, as is the about progress in the nature of Helmut Sch-Belgrade conference on Schmidt, although he openly favored former President Ford in the 1976 presidential election, said the friendship between the two countries "has never been closer than

In the information relayed to newsmen, the only overt hint of West Germany's strong preference for quieter East-West diplomacy was in Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's report on his talks last month with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev, who is strongly critical of overall Carter Genscher, a German spokesman said, stressed the importance of personal contact between Brezhnev and Carter to improve U.S.-Soviet understanding. Schmidt and Carter were said have expressed their agreement. A recent Carter overture to Brezhnev to meet for a general discussion reportedly was rebuffed, however, with Brezhnev expressing a preference to meet only if that could cap an agreement. notably on a new nuclear strategic arms accord.

Prison to be temporarily segregated

SAN QUENTIN - Prison authorities said Wednesday they would temporarily segregate black and white inmates here in an effort to cool a "serious situation of racial hostility" that erupted Tuesday, leaving three men dead and four seriously injured.

"We have always tried to avoid any kind of segregated housing," said Philip B. Guthrie, a spokesman for the state Department of Corrections in Sacramento. "We're doing it now, for a temporary period, as a matter of operational necessity.

"We have a serious situation of racial hostility, of racial tension between blacks and whites. It will be a long time before we get this straightened out."

Guthrie also said some inmate leaders probably would be moved to other prisons in the state system. Meanwhile, inmates were being confined to their cells Wednesday and an intensive search was under way for weapons. No visitors were being allowed.

Officials at the prison said "Nazi-type inmate groups" were responsible for Tuesday's outbreak, which began during the morning when a white supremacist gang known as Satan's Few attacked black inmates with prison-made knives, killing one

OPEC still calls tune

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries have had some trouble getting together on how much to charge for their oil. Since the OPEC ministers were meeting in private in Vienna, we can only guess at how the arguments went - how they wrestled with the pros and cons of adding another 5 per cent to a price already creating worldwide economic problems at more than $13 a barrel

A price increase could boomerang. Poorer countries now facing staggering debts for oil imports would take another blow. heightening resentment in the Third World toward the Arabdominated cartel. An increase also would aggravate problems of inflation and recession in the industrialized countries, where Saudi Arabia, Iran and others in OPEC are investing heavily.

On the other hand, a price increase would allow OPEC members to cut production without losing any money - thus stretching out their reserves of petroleum and pushing back the time when their bonanza will run dry. The weight of opinion in OPEC seems to be against an increase - for now - but any comfort we can take in that is more than offset by other things the Vienna meeting tells us.

The oil cartel is not breaking up, nor is it likely to as long as the world must beat a path to its door for energy. A handful of OPEC ministers is making decisions crucial to the economic health of our country, and perhaps to the survival of some others. They are making those decisions to suit their own political and economic

The energy program President Carter proposed in April to reduce our dependency on OPEC oil and restore some control over our own fate - is still running the congressional gauntlet. We can hope that an effective combination of incentives for fuel conservation and new energy production will emerge. As matters now stand, OPEC is still in the driver's seat.

On the higher plane of satellites, lasers and optical scanners the revolution is truly mind boggling. Before it is over the revolution will affect profoundly the lives and habits of Americans.

Recognizing the onrush of electronic technology, the Nixon administration established the Office of Telecommunications Policy in 1970. Its purpose was to keep abreast of the progress of electronic technology and help the administration formulate policy on a broad range of subjects ranging from cable television to electronic mail.

Unfortunately, the office did engage in a few political jousts in the last few years. But on the whole it has been a valuable resource to both the administration and Congress.

Nevertheless, President Carter is planning to eliminate the Office of Telecommunications Policy.

Mr. Carter should give the matter second thought. If he retains the Office of Telecommunications Policy, Mr. Carter will not be creating a new bureaucracy - it's already there.

The names of these and other Russians who are confronting the Soviet system are making almost daily headlines in the West.

We hardly expected to see or hear them during a recent trip to the Soviet Union and Poland. But it was a cultural shock nevertheless to spend some nine days in Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev without encountering any signs of protest at all.

No samisdat, or underground newspaper, was slipped to us. There was no graffiti on the walls.

Otherwise irreverent taxidrivers stuck to the economics of survival. And no protester approached this newspaperman walking along Karl Marx Prospect with an American flag in his lapel containing a plea to free political prisoners.

Quite the contrary. The lasting impression this American got in the Soviet Union was one of a deep and unabashed patriotism

It is an impression heightened by the times. The Soviet Union is preparing for the 60th anniversary of its revolution on Nov. 7.

Political slogans are everywhere red and white splashes on buildings, on bridges spanning highways, on "znachki" worn on suit jacket lapels and on the front pages of the daily newspapers.

Soviet flags flutter in profusion from all buildings and the streets are full of soldiers in uniform. Russia is scrubbing up, sandblasting monuments, refurbishing gilt and repaying squares in anticipation of the big political blowout this fall.

To a Westerner seeing the Soviet Union for the first time, the overall impression is one of drabness, crowding and a low level of amenities But Soviet citizens seem happy. They embrace on meeting, smile and endless lines daily to buy food and other things and undeniably have a good time in the evening

How the Russian people can afford their needs, to say nothing of their pleasures, is difficult to understand. A pair of everyday shoes at the GUM department store costs from $30 to $50. Vodka is $9 a bottle.

Or if the Russian citizen yearns for an automobile he will have to wait up to five years for his Fiat, Moskva, Volga or Zhiguili (a Soviet Fiat).

The average salary of a working Russian is 140 rubles a month, about $192. The range is from 70 to 500 rubles, despite socialism's claim of economic egalitarianism

To the average Westerner, the routines of life are appalling. The government permits 12 to 14 square meters of housing space per person. or something on the order of 500 square feet for four.

The four persons living in this space are not necessarily related. How to get away from it all once a year becomes a problem If a Soviet citizen can afford a vacation abroad, he usually has to take it in one of the satellite nations where the ruble can be exchanged for foreign currency, such as in East Germany, Poland or Romania One favorite spot, we were told by a Soviet citizen, is Cuba because it has sunshine - about which Russians get very emotional. A typical three-week vacation in Cuba costs 950 rubles per Because of limited space and the lack of refrigeration, the Soviet housewife usually has to shop daily, often even to the extent of going out early in the morning to get the ingredients for breakfast. The rigors of shopping are incredible. Whether the store is the massive state-run GUM or some neighborhood shop, commodities are comin one substore, meat in another, cheese in a third, potatoes in a fourth

Supermarkets are beginning to appear in the Soviet Union, we were told, but they are still few and far The average citizen of the United cumstances might be tempted to join the ranks of the Solzhenitsyns or Scharanskys. Yet, on the basis of rubbing elbows with Soviet citizens for awhile, we don't believe that the Soviet leadership has to fear an uprising on the States thrust into these cir-streets However, there is some evidence that the Politburo might have second thoughts about other problems.

The Soviet Union consists of 15 republics inhabited by peoples who speak 27 languages. Russians themselves are a bare majority of the population, and their numbers are declining in proportion to the others. Even a stranger with limited language capability senses as he travels that there is a negative attitude toward Moscow in the provinces. For example, one person pointed out voluntarily that none of the last three rulers of the Soviet Union has been a Russian.

And rulers since Catherine the Great have maintained that Russia must be ruled by an iron hand in a velvet glove because of the disparity of its peoples.

The present hand lacks the glove. but it seems to have a firm grip.

NICK THIMMESCH The musings of busy Dr. Henry Kissinger revealed

WASHINGTON - Henry A Kissinger has been out of power six months now, doesn't seem restless, makes a lot of money, and still broods over the way the world turns. Removed from the pit where public officials alternately hunker down or receive extravagant plaudits. Kissinger is able to occasionally express candid views in public, and even stronger ones privately. He doesn't have to worry much these days about hostile senators, leftliberals or Reaganites. Kissinger is essentially a hard-liner, a man who believes in the respect paid to willful strength, and the sensibility of the balance of power. So some call him a pessimist, though he describes himself as a

He is not happy with the trendy thinking on "Eurocommunism" which assumes that the entry of, or dominance by. Communists in Western European governments won't be so bad, really. This school of thought holds that communism in Western Europe will "infect" Eastern Europe's Communist states to the detriment of the Soviet Union

In other words, by losing, we eventually win. Kissinger can ruefully compare this with the Carthaginians who thought that by letting the Romans conquer them, they would cause the Romans to disintegrate. It was indeed a long wait.

And if communism dominates in France or Italy, the U.S. will not only have a long wait but it will have to live with a weakened NATO and perhaps the collapse of the Common Market which kept Europe unified to these many years.

Lack of will and decline of authority in the West combine to make the shrinking free world a weak sister. the way Kissinger sees it. The Soviets readily sense this and dutifully note how the U.S. withdraws from South Korea and the Indian Ocean.

By showing weakness and also injecting the Human Rights issue into Soviet internal affairs, the U.S. suffers a consequent deterioration in relations with the U.S.S.R. The best relations, Kissinger would argue, are when the Soviets respect our power and acquiesce privately to our demands.

On the question of Soviet Jewish emigration, for example, Nixon-Kissinger, by firmly negotiating in private, got the Soviets to increase the number of emigrees from 400 in 1971. to 38,000 in 1973. Once the Senate. through the insistence of Henry Al Jackson, went public on the issue through the foreign trade bill the Soviets toughened The result: far less emigration and far more trouble

To talk tough on Human Rights is easier than to show strength. Kissinger feels that by pulling land forces out of Korea, the U.S. risks not only losing more respect from the Soviets and other Communist regimes but belief in the U.S. by other non-Communist nations in the Far East, especially Japan.

American withdrawal from Southeast Asia did not improve the region. Kissinger can muse that if the U.S. had cruelly evacuated the populations of Phnom Penh and Saigon, as the Communists have, we would undoubtedly be condemned as barbarians.

But few voices of protest are raised about the millions of Indochinese killed or put in concentration camps by Communist regimes. And where are the moralistic anti-war figures. Kissinger could ask, now that the Communists systematically execute more people in months than were accidentally killed in ten years of war in Indochina?

All this still occupies Kissinger's thoughts as he meets occasionally with his successor, Cyrus Vance, or other State Department officials. Whether he influences them is another matter. Certainly they don't share his harsh thoughts about Cuba. whom he believes should have been stopped by the U.S. in Africa a long

His days still run to 12 hours, and he has a fair-sized staff, including bodyguards, in his suite of offices in downtown Washington. Kissinger recently renewed his one-year teaching contract with Georgetown University. His book, commitments to NBC, and speaking engagements keep him public enough

By remaining a public figure, Kissinger also draws threats on his life and letters and phone calls from kooks. This week, a woman pounded on Kissinger's door at 5:30 in the morning to report hearing voices from outer space.

Small matter. What makes Kissinger brood is the realization that Watergate, the assault on President Ford from the Right, and the decline of Western strength have undone much of what he and the exile in San Clementes thought they had accomplished.

can become appealing dish By MARIE BIANCO Newsday

The history of the leafy green salad is ancient as the Roman Empire. Derived from the Latin "salata," meaning salted, the Roman housewife dressed her wild greens with oil, vinegar and a liberal dose of salt.

'Rabbit food'

By the time of Queen Elizabeth's reign in the 16th century, Britons had accepted the salad as something healthful. Consequently, greens appeared at almost every meal, sometimes doubling as the centerpiece.

In 1699, John Evelyn published his discourse on salads and proposed the unorthodox theory that some vegetables should never be cooked but, rather, eaten raw dressed with "acetuous juice." To Evelyn, salad ingredients should "fall into their places like the notes in music, in which there should be nothing harsh or grating."

Today's salad combinations are endless. A simple salad, a combination of two or more greens tossed with a vinaigrette (oil and vinegar) dressing, may be rendered more complex by adding tomatoes, cucumber, green pepper, carrot and red onion. A more exotic arugula and endive mixture, tart and peppery, can stand by itself as a separate course. And a salad of tender, young fresh spinach, combined with sliced raw mushrooms, hard-cooked egg and chunks of crispy bacon is gaining in popularity. Served as an appetizer, along with the entree and dessert, salads are versatile. But it's the preparation of the greens that makes the difference between 'rabbit food'' and an appealing dish.

Tossed salads should be put together with a light hand, using ingredients that are crisp, clean and colorful. Greens should be purchased as fresh as possible and chosen for a variety of colors, flavors and shapes. Leaves should be carefully torn, rather than cut with a knife, and never coated with dressing until just minutes before serving.

Store clean salad greens in the refrigerator in a covered container. Remove any wilted leaves, wash thoroughly and pat dry with a soft paper towel. A out damaging them and is quick, easy and neat. The greens must be dry, so that the dressing will not be diluted and each leaf can be coated evenly with oil

Deanna Dunagan... 'Pecos Bill' author

Pickwick Players slate Pecos Bill

On July 14, 15, and 16, the Pickwick Players of the Midland Community Theatre will be presenting "Pecos BNI" which was written by Deanna Dunagan of Monahans, Texas Deanna is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Dunagan who live at 1107 South Dwight in Monahans. Both parents are well known to the Permian Basin as they have lived here most of their lives. They both graduated from Midland High School, and Mr. Dunagan went on to become the owner of the Permian Coca-Cola Bottling Plant as well as the President of KMID-TV.

"Deanna", said Mrs. Dunagan, "has been interested in drama ever since she was a little girl. At family gatherings, she would get all the cousins together and put on plays to entertain the adults." It seems only natural that Deanna would make a profession from her acting talents.

She went to Monahans High School and was involved heavily there in drama and music. After graduating, she attended the University of Texas in Austin and received her Bachelor of Art in Music. From there she went on to graduate school with Trinity University at the Dallas Theatre Center. Itwas during her studies at DTC that Deanna wrote "Pecos Bill". While there, she also had the lead roles in such productions as "Star Spangled Girl", "Marat

Ms. Dunagan is presently at the Asolo Theatre in Sarasota, Florida, and is one of their top leading ladies. She became an Equity actress three years ago, and has received nothing but praise from all the critics. Her list of credits at Asolo include: Maggie in "A Cat on A Hot Tin Roof", Abby in "Desire Under the Elms", and leads in "Ruling Class" and 'My Best to Your Wife". Deanna has even made several television commercials in Florida.

Although this production of "Pecos Bill" will be the first "home" presentation of Ms. Dunagan's script, Deanna is by no means unknown to area audiences. She played Tuptim in the MCT production of "The

Ohio inn capitalizes on trade of history's elite

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) - For people who have a thing about eating where history's elite ate and sleeping where some of history's noted figures slept, the Golden Lamb Inn offers opportunity for both.

Those who indulge in such achistory's elite had to say when they stayed at Ohio's oldest inn, which opened in 1803.

Take the English novelist Charles Dickens for example. The stage coach ride to this Southwestern Ohio community may have been bumpy for he had little good to say in his "American Notes" about the Golden Lamb.

dine soon after with the boarders in the house, and have nothing to drink but tea and coffee." Dickens wrote. "As they are both very bad and the water is worse. I ask for brandy; but it is a temperance hotel and spirits were not to be had for love or money.

Dickens was not the only famous guest at the inn. A local newspaper, which has been in business nearly as long as the inn, gathered a good deal of its biggest news by having a reporter hang around the inn and wait for the arrival of William Henry Harrison, in 1840; Martin Van Buren, in 1842. Rutherford B. Hayes, in 1867 and Ulysses S. Grant, in 1883.

William Howard Taft came here in 1898, Warren Harding arrived in 1914 and according to the proprietors. James Garfield and William McKinley liked the establishment so well they came several times.

Service, admits present manager

Jackson Reynolds, was not the only reason for such a distinguished clientele. "You must remember that in the early 1800s, we were a major city." said Reynolds. "Lebanon was an important stop on the carriage route which led around the mountains." After people began using the water canals, the town simply stopped growing. The man who had a great deal to do with the growth of the canal system, DeWitt Clinton, was also a guest at the Golden Lamb.

In the 100 years starting in 1825, the town grew at a snail's pace, and the only hint of revitalization came when the railroad was introduced in the late

The town currently has about 9,000 population and prides itself on its rural appearance.

The Shakers, a religious group with strict moral standards, once lived in the area and may have been responsible for the town's temperance pledge. Even though their physical presence is missing, the inn keeps a few rooms as showplaces of Shaker furniture and crafts and Shaker pegboards decorate many of the dining areas.

Continuing the traditional concept of inns, the Golden Lamb offers more than just a place to eat.

There are 19 guest rcoms available. all with antique furniture of one kind or another.

All the rooms are named for one of the inn's noted guests, although all of the guests did not necessarily stay in the rooms that are named for them.

The most spectacularly decorated room is the "Charles Dickens" room, which features a wood frame bed with an enormous headboard.

The room is rarely used and is open

Those who use the inn for sleeping are advised to keep their rooms clos-ed to keep out those who are trying to walk off their lunch or dinner.

Several of the rooms have their own particular history, such as the room where Henry Clay's sister died/ or the room where a noted lawyer of the period, Clement Vallandigham, died after shooting himself accidentally while demonstrating a move he planned to make in court.

Reynolds reports rooms are usually available on weekdays, but are a scarce commodity on weekends, when the inn is as crowded as it was back in the 1800s when the stage came

Since the spring, imports have been accounting for one of every five new cars sold in the country. In March they hit 188,000 to top a four-year old singlemonth record. In April, they jumped to 206,000 Amazed U.S. auto men said it couldn't happen again. Then in May, sales rose to 220,000. That was 2,500 more cars than sold by Ford, the nation's No. 2 auto

U.S. and foreign car executives say the tremendous demand for imports - mostly small, inexpensive and fuelstingy models from Japan - is a temporary, brief hysterical reaction to President

Carter's call for energy conservation. Noting the same thing happened immediately after the Arab oil embargo started in the fall of 1973, industry analysts pointed to the imports' sales in June. when volume fell to 198,000 units, still a record for the

But all that doesn't explain why sales of small, lowpriced and fuel-stingy domestic cars remain off from ast year, or why big cars continue to sell like hot-

Vrazo, who is single and works for the city, said he bought his Toyota for two main reasons: low price and quality: "I was determined to get a small, economical car, but I didn't want an American one," said Vrazo, whose father works for General Motors. "I came to the conclusion that foreign cars are better made." Detroit concedes the Japanese have a price edge. But they bristle at surveys showing people believe foreign cars are built better. "Price is the imports; only real advantage," said a Ford market analyst. "There is just no way we can come within $250 car for car with the Japanese. The Europeans can't come within $500 of them.

Why? Japanese labor costs are lower than here. On top of that, the Japanese boast of a better technology. and workers who are more productive than their American counterparts.

But U.S. executives claim Japan is circumventing U.S. laws against "dumping" - selling a product here for less than at home - even though the Treasury Department exonerated the two largest importers, Toyota and Datsun, in a broad dumping

Imports are strongest on the two coasts, where they account for up to a third of the new car market. They are weakest in the Midwest, the home of the domestic industry. In Michigan, imports account for less than 6 per cent of the market, the national low. Some industry executives attribute that pattern to the fact that shipping charges for imports are lowest on the coasts and highest in the Midwest. 'Everything ultimately comes down to price," the Ford analyst said. "In the 1960s, when the VW was cheap and sales were 60,000 a month, everyone said it was the best car around. No one talked about price, that it was hundreds of dollars less than anything we made. "Then the price shot up $1,000 and sales fell apart. There went another myth about import quality."

But while Ford decries the myth of import aperiority, it plans to exploit that myth this summer when it debuts its Fiesta minicar - an imported carbuilt by Ford in Germany. Richard L. Mugg, a vice president for VW of America, says there's no myth. "We design a small car from scratch. We pay a lot of attention to detail. Detroit's small car tends to be a big car made. Mugg believes people who want an inexpensive small car buy a Japanese model; those who want a well built small car and don't care as much about

Production of opium in northern Lebanon new worry for west

ISTANBUL, Turkey - U.S. and Turkish narcotics officials are becoming increasingly concerned about a new opium-producing region in northern Lebanon

Officials here say that 2,500 acres of opium poppies are under cultivation in the Bekaa Valley, an inland plain east of the Lebanese Mountains.

The valley, traditionally a source of illicit hashish, is a .awless region where tribal rule, a supreme and where the Lebanque police rarely interfere.

During the breakdown of law and order brought on by the two-year Lebanese civil war, fields of opium poppies were planted. Because the poppies had not traditionally been grown in the region, expert Turkish farmers who have long grown it were brought in as advisers.

The new opium production is causing intense concern in both the Turkish and U.S. agencies that attempt to control production of and traffic in narcotics. But the lack of any sort of authority in Northern Lebanon has made it nearly impossible to curb production.

U.S. and Turkish officials have asked Syrian authorities to step in. The Syrians have 30,000 soldiers in Lebanon now, the major part of the four-nation Arab peace-keeping force. The Syrians reportedly are relactant to intervene in the situation. saying that their job is to keep the peace, not to get involved in local law enforcement activities.

It was not known here whether the Bekaa Valley opium has already reached Western markets, but three weeks ago, five Lebanese were arrested in Italy with more than 2 pounds of heroin in their possession.

Although the opium poppy was not traditionally grown in Lebanon, the country has been a center of illicit opium trade. In addition, it has had a number of refineries transforming the poppy juice into opium or herion.

Lebanon is best known for its highquality hashish, a potent drug that is refined from marijuana also grown in the Bekaa In the past hashish production was under the protection of the local feudal boss, Sabri Hamadi, who also was speaker of the Lebanese parliament.

In 1974, this led to a major diplomatic incident when thenpresident Suleiman Franjieh included Hamadi in his official delegation to U.N. headquarters in New York.

WASHINGTON - The average American's cholesterol level has dropped by 5 per cent to 10 per cent since the early 1960s and this may have helped cause a sharp drop in deaths from heart and blood vessel diseases, officials of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute said Wednesday

Cholesterol is a fatty, waxy substance in the blood that tends to clog arteries and cause heart and blood vessel ailments. In the last 30 years there has been a vast amount of publicity about the dangers of over-eating high fat and high cholesterol foods. and there have been profound changes in the average American diet.

'What we think we are seeing now are the effects of great changes in the life styles of men and women who have been reading and listening." Dr. Robert I. Levy, director of the heart institute, said in an interview

"We can't prove to be sure yet that diet and other changes - like 25 per cent less smoking among middle-aged men - have contributed to the dramatic decrease we are seeing in cardiovascular deaths," he

"But it's looking very much as though this is the case, and this is very encouraging." Levy said that "there is no doubt today" that a high blood cholesterol level is "a major risk factor" for heart disease. although it may take several years to prove beyond doubt whether lowering cholesterol levels can reduce heart attack deaths.

Also important, he said, has been a national anti-high blood pressure drive that began in 1972. Persons with high blood pressure have a high ncidence of strokes and heart attacks.

Since 1972 screening campaigns have found early, previously un-noticed high blood pressure in 8 million persons. There has been a 50 per cent increase in patients under treatment. with most of them now on drugs or diets to keep their blood pressure

Health officials first began noticing the drop in heart and stroke deaths about two years ago. In 1973 there were 1,062,000 deaths from heart and blood vessel disorders. Last year, with a larger and older population, there were 975,000 such deaths. On a per capita basis, there were 15 per cent fewer such deaths than in 1960. Levy said. He called the drop in the average adult's cholesterol level a surprise that has been noted only in recent months with analysis of data on 70,000 persons under observation at 12 lipid (blood fat) research clinics launched in 1971 and 1972 by the heart institute, which is part of the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md. Levy and colleagues told a news conference that the cholesterol drop may be largely confined to persons with higher education and high-pay obs. Men and women ofhigher status tend to have lower cholesterol levels than other Americans, except for low-pay workers who perform heavy exercise. Many doctors say exercise may also reduce cholesterol and cut heart attack risk.

The figures on the cholesterol decline are also based so far only on observation of whites.

The reasons for this increase may be attributed, he says, to there being more people living alone, more women working and an increase in disposable income.

'The minimum wage rises are forcing restaurant prices up. therefore encouraging people to trade down to cheaper eating outlets," he explains.

Kreul says that people are shedding their guilt complexes about eating

"In the past, many had feelings of guilt when they spent hard-earned cash to go out and eat. Eating out was a luxury they enjoyed only once in a while. Now there are more people working and the cost can be justified. More wives are working and don't have time to cook at home."

"And," he says, "this trend toward buying food prepared away from home is hurting supermarkets' income. Grocery stores are selling no more than they were about five years

'There also have been quite a few changes in fast food menus," Kreul says. "Fast food outlets are doing more experimenting with additional features such as salad bars and fish items to supplement menus!" More emphasis is being placed on self-service. with more drive-up windows being added by fast-food operators, he points out. Kreul also says that quick service restaurants, in addition to expanding menus, are expanding sit-down space inside. "And they are placing more emphasis on quality," he adds. A recent survey by a research firm. he says, shows that what people want most of all in fast-food service is quality and cleanliness:

There is a move to the fast food type in the military, too, according to Kreul.

"The military has found that their recruits have grown up on fast foods and their food in the service has to reflect this type menu and service.' he says. "The military is picking the brains of the industry to find out how to cope with the problem.'

Bumper wheat, corn harvests seen for 1977

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the weather cooperates, farmers are on their way to another huge corn crop this fall which could help cool food prices through

The Agriculture Department announced Tuesday that, based on July 1 surveys, the 1977 corn harvest may be a record 6.33 billion bushels, 2 per cent above last fall's crop of 6.22 billion bushels, the existing

Wheat production was estimated at more than 2.04 billion bushels, down 5 per cent from the 1976 record of about 2.15 billion bushels, but still far more than is needed in the coming year. Agriculture Secretary BXOB Bergland told reporters that the corn estimate, the first of the season by USDA, was "not all that much different than the market has been predicting."

Bergland, as he has before, said that the huge wheat crop means the government will have to decide soon on production controls for 1978. The wheat reserve on June 1 was more than 1.1 billion bushels, the most in 14 years.

The next USDA crop report will be on August 11 and will include updated estimates for corn and wheat. Bergland said, "We're going to attach a lot of importance to next month's report before deciding on what to do about 1978 wheat curbs.'

wheat set aside" program for taking cropland out of production for next year. One problem is that farmers will plant winter wheat this fall and Bergland wants to announce the acreage program by late

One problem Bergland faces is that Congress has not yet completed action on a general farm bill. The legislation includes the authority Bergland says he needs to make wheat program decisions. The Senate has passed its farm bill, but the House has yet to act. The department's Crop Reporting Board said that the July corn estimate of 6.33 billion bushels includes grain for producing meat, poultry and milk. Along with wheat and other commodities, corn also is a major export item. The report did not included 1977 production estimates for soybeans, cotton and some other important crops. Those will be announced next month. Meanwhile, based on July 1 indications, the estimates included:

-Oats, 707.1 million bushels, up 26 per cent from

-Barley, 396 million bushels, up 5 per cent. -Flue-cured tobacco, 1,152 million pounds, down

-Summer potatoes, 22.3 million hundredweight, down 2 per cent. Most potatoes come from the fall harvest, however, and it will not be estimated until

-Apples, 6.8 billion pounds, up 7 per cent from the freezed damaged 1976 harvest.

-Peaches, 3 billion pounds, down fractionally from last year. Officials commenting on the 1977 corn estimate pointed out that drought last year depleted soil moisture reserves in many areas, including parts of the Midwestern corn belt. They said timely rains will be needed in July. August, and September to assure a bumper crop.

Also, parts of the Southeast, including Georgia and Virginia, have been hit hard by dry weather, along with the far West.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON Serum hepatitis vaccine needed

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has just been through a long bout of hepatitis-it took about seven or eight months before he was really back on his feet. And now people in the office where I work tell me there is actually a vaccine he should have had. Is this true?-Wilma H.

Dear Wilma: I think your offices is a bit ahead of the game. There is a great deal of encouraging work being done, but no vaccine is yet available for general use.

A vaccine against serum hepatitis—hepatitis B—has been deveolped at the University of Tours in France by Dr. Philippe Maupas. He reports that it has been tried out on more than 100 volunteers and has produced immunity in 93 per cent of hospital staff members and 50 per cent of other group drawn from pa-

Dr. Maupas considers the vaccine safe and effective. It should, he says, be used where the risk of hepatitis B is high-in hospitals, laboratories, surgical units and dialysis centers. Here in the United States, the Food and DrugAdministration is studying the French vaccine for possible use in this country. One problem is that it employs much more formaldehyde to inactivate the disease agent than is allowed by American standards. We have three vaccines under development, too. One has been tried out on a small group of volunteers at the University of California, San Diego, with good results. Two others are being tested on laboratory animals at the National Institution of riers of the hepatitis B virus would be good candidates for vaccination once his vaccine is more widely available. He also wants to try it out in parts of Africa where there is known to be a high correlation between serum hepatitis and liver cancer. So it could be, as a recent issue of Medical World News puts it, that hepatitis vaccines might one day be the world's first cancer vaccines.

Hepatitis can spread through intimate contact, through food and water contaminated by the feces of infected persons, or through infected needles or blood transfusions. Good hygieneis an essential preventive measure if you are around anyone who has hepatitis. Gamma globulin injections give temporary protection against infectious hepatitis, but they are not effective against serum
