Commissioners approve requests by Vern Martin

By JIM STEINBERG

A request for a new assistant district attorney and a file clerk by District Attorney Vern Martin was approved Monday by the Midland County Commissioners.

Martin told the commissioners that the additional help was needed because of greater demands placed on his office by new state legislation such as the "Speedy Trial Act," which requires a criminal suspect to be brought to trial 90 days after arrest.

Martin said his office is attempting to eliminate what he called "borderline cases" from their trial backlog, a process which takes considerable time.

It was estimated that the two additional employees would push the district attorney office's budget some $20,000 over what was allocated for

Temperature puts Midland in category

The rain is gone. The heat is back, and Monday's high of 101 degrees places Midland on the ever-growing list of cities with temperatures over 100 degrees.

Midland's 101 degrees fades slightly, though, beside Oklahoma City's high of 106 degrees, Wichita Fall's high of 107 and Fort Worth's

The forecast for today and Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal, calls for fair through Wednesday. The highs for today and Wednesday are expected to reach the 101-degree mark again. The low tonight should be in the upper 60s. Winds are expected to be southeasterly from 10 to 15 miles per hour today, becoming light and variable tonight.

The low last night was 70 degrees. The record low for last night is 61 degrees set in 1933. The record high for Monday is 103 degrees set in 1974.

man Parker Humes told the commissioners that the alliance is modeled after a similar group in Dallas which was credited by many as helping that city peacefully get through the start of a busing program involving 80,000 students.

Humes said that was more students than were involved in busing in Boston and Louisville, cities where much violence surrounded the courtordered busing of schoolchildren.

On the motion of Commissioner Wright, the following resolution was

"Whereas, Midland County Commissioners Court respects Midland Independent School District's efforts to maintain the neighborhood school concept for grade schools and applauds their efforts through the federal courts to preserve the neighborhood schools; Whereas, the federal court edict now mandates that grade school children be bused to schools out of their neighborhoods, and Midland Independent School District is trying to bring about this change with the least community disturbance possible; And whereas, the Midland Alliance is a committee of interested citizens who desire to make the transition from neighborhood schools peaceful and harmonious; now, therefore, be it resolved by the Midland County Commissioners Court that the citizens of Midland support all efforts which emphasize excellence in public education and peaceful compliance with court orders.

Commissioner Win Brown ab stained from the vote because he thought the resolution was intruding on a "social issue, not a governmental

"I think that it (the resolution) was out of our league," Brown said.

The commissioners postponed action on a proposal to set a 35 mph speed limit on Warren Road from the Rankin Highway to County Road 715 after a public hearing drawing more than 20 persons indicated the boundaries of those speed limits should be expanded to include Warren Road from Midkiff Road to CR 715 and sections of CR 120 and 140.

Residents told the commissioners that these roads were being used as a raceway by some, and that population density in the area warranted the speed reduction to 35 mph from the present 55 mph.

Also on Monday, the commissioners decided to ask representatives from the Texas County and District Retirement System to analyze the county's retirement program.

Oil company investigation to be started

By J. P. SMITH The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration will undertake a major investigation of the 15 major oil companies aimed at recouping alleged overcharges since the 1973 Arab oil embargo "possibly amounting to several billion dollars," Federal Energy Administration head John F. O'Leary said Monday.

O'Leary said efforts to enforce the FEA's complicated oil pricing regulations had been "skimped" in the past, and he strongly endorsed the findings of a 14-member task force led by Stanley Sporkin, head of enforcement at the Securities and Exchange Commission

The task force report said, "FEA's enforcement program has historically been ineffective without either the commitment or direction to the job .. (it) has floundered and moved from crisis to crisis with few real suc-

Sporkin, who has a reputation as a tough enforcer and in the corporate world, said FEA's attempts to get the largest refiners to comply with oil pricing regulations were "a failure."

FEA has a backlog of about 3,600 open cases with a potential of $1.7 billion in pricing violations. Since July, 1974, FEA has settled cases with major refiners involving $358 million

"We still haven't gotten a hold on the major refiners," Sporkin said. "This intensive major refiner audit program makes the most sense from a cost-benefit basis."

FEA officials identified the 15 integrated oil companies and others with large refinery operations as Exxon, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana

(Amoco), Shell, Texaco, Standard Oil

Co. of California (Socal), Mobil, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield, Sun, Marathon, Union, Continental Oil Co. (Conoco), Phillips, Cities Service and Getty-

Industry reaction, especially among the companies who will be targeted under FEA's investigaiton, was highly critical. A Conoco spokesman labeled the FEA's regulations as "complex, confusing and oftentimes contradictory.'

FEA's oil pricing and allocation regulations were designed during the embargo emergency four years ago and now run to over 20,000 pages, filling 8 volumes.

Asked to identify who was responsible for FEA's admitted failure to ensure that the oil companies comply with the pricing regulations O'Leary said, "I don't want to point the finger at any of my predecessors.'

John C. Sawhill, who headed FEA under President Ford, said, "We created FEA so quickly it was very difficult to generate an ongoing, strong audit program.

Sporkin's report called for a permanent investigative task force made up of auditors and attorneys, headed by "a tough enforcer and litigator ... not unlike the concept of a-special pro-

O'Leary said he hopes to name the head of the unit in one month and complete the refiner audit in the next two years. In the meantime, he said, the FEA will reassign some existing personnel to strengthen the compliance program.

Travelers flood air

A record number of people utilized the facilities at Midland Regional Air Terminal last month, setting a record for the number of passengers during the month of June.

Midland Regional Air Terminal last month, setting a record for the month

According to Col. Wilson Banks, director of the terminal, 31,882 passengers passed through the facility. Only 21,448 passengers passed through the terminal in June 1976. A new passenger record was also set in May, Banks said. He said he expects another record to be set this month. Banks estimated the number of passengers in July at 35,000-40,000.

He attributed the increase in the number of passengers to the increased service provided by the addition of one airline and the lowering of fares for certain flights by other airlines.

Wheat surplus predicted

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) - Too much dry weather in the winter and too much rain in the spring brought predictions of doom for the winter wheat crop. But the harvest is almost complete in Kansas now - and the problem is too much wheat. Elevators are full, prices are low and the wheat carryover nationally from previous years is estimated at more than 1 billion bushels. The State Crop and Livestock

Reporting Service earlier this month estimated Kansas wheat production at 381.3 million bushels, which would rank it close to the 1973 record harvest of 384.8 million bushels. The wheat in surplus stocks and this year's production are said to be enough to furnish the United States with all the wheat it needs for five years even if no more wheat is grown. U.S. wheat production this year has been estimated by the Agriculture Department at more than 2.04 billion bushels, five per cent less the 1976 record of about 2.15 billion bushels.

As of June 1, the nation's wheat reserve was more than 1.1 billion bushels, the most in 14 years. A large wheat surplus traditionally has not affected the price consumers pay for a loaf of bread because middleman costs make up most of that price. "We realize we overproduced," said Wendell White, who with his father farms 2,500 acres of dryland wheat near Goodland in western Kansas "We were encouraged by the government (in 1973) to plant more because more wheat was needed," he if we'd ignored what they were saying. Just because prices are low, he said. "We would have been better off of production, mainly because the banker still wants his payments on land, interest and machinery

Earl Hayes of Stafford, president of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers, figures much of the wheat will find its way into the federal government's loan program under which the farmer borrows $2.25 a bushel, the current loan rate, and gives the government his grain as collateral. The grain, then, can be forfeited to the government if prices don't improve.

Wheat prices have declined in the past three years, going from $5.85 a bushel early in 1974 to between $1.80 and $2 a bushel now "If the grain isn't available to the market, the price might go up a lit-tle," Hayes said. "I think that is the feeling of many of the farmers. They will take loans as long as the market is low and as they need cash."

Most people do miss the fading of the familiar - particularly so when memories are endearing. They come to the retirement center

Panel OKs Lance's transactions

By JACK NELSON The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee voiced approval of Budget Director Bert Lance's banking transactions Monday and indicated it would grant him an extension of time to sell his bank stock if current negotiations to sell it fell through

Lance told the committee he hoped his trustee. Tom Mitchell of Dalton, Ga., would complete negotiations for the sale quickly and that questions concerning his finances could be resolved "so I can get back to the business of trying to be director of the OMB (Office of Management and Budget)"

Although the committee took no formal action on the Lance matter, all 12 members present - seven Democrats and five Republicans - indicated that Lance had satisfied them as to the propriety of his banking transactions.

Lance still faces an inquiry by the Comptroller of the Currency into circumstances surrounding a $3.4 million personal loan he obtained from the First National Bank of Chicago on Jan. 7, 1977. He explained that transaction to the satisfaction of the committee Chairman Abraham A. Ribicoff (D-Conn.) said a transcript of Lance's committee testimony would be furnished to the Comptroller.

During Friday's committee hearing, at which Lance testified for two hours, several committee members said they thought the budget director had been smeared by unfair news reports on his financial affairs.

'The investigative reporters have mosphere" and added, "as I view all the questions from all the members around the dais, there isn't a thing that has developed that in any way impugns your character or your reputation or your ability." Ribicoff last Friday had stressed the seriousness of the allegations appearing in the press and had called for an immediate investigation. Several other committee members argued that any probe should be deferred until Lance had an opportunity to testify, however, and Ribicoff agreed. After Monday's hearing, Ribicoff said he saw no need for any further inquiry. Neither did the ranking minority member, Sen. Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.), who had joined Ribicoff Friday in the original call for an immediate investigation. President Carter expressed full confidence in Lance at his weekly cabinet meeting Monday. As the President recognized individual cabinet members around the conference table, he paused at Lance's chair - empty because the budget director was testifying - and said his old friend and confidant had "impeccable integrity. Lance denied under oath that he had committed any wrongdoing in any personal or official banking transactions. He specifically denied that the $3.4 million loan from the Chicago bank was a "sweetheart deal" or that interest on it had been deferred, as had been suggested by New York Times columnist William Safire. Lance said the interest rate on the loan was 0.75 per cent above the prime rate, payable quarterly, and payments were current. He also denied there was any relationship between the loan and the placing of a deposit in a non-interest bearing account in the Chicago bank by his own National Bank of Georgia.

Chowchilla suspects seek to avoid life in prison

By DAVID JOHNSTON The Los Angeles Times

OAKLAND, Calif. - Three suspects in the kidnaping of 26 Chowchilla, Calif., school children and their bus driver Monday pleaded guilty to kidnaping for ransom, but must still stand trial to determine if the mass abduction involved "bodily harm" to five of the captives.

The three waived their right to a jury trial and agreed to let Alameda County Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan rule on the other counts.

Kidnaping for ransom carries a maximum sentence of life in prison with the possibility of parole in seven years. Kidnaping with bodily harm carries a sentence of life imprisonment without possibility of parole.

As part of the negotiated settlement, 18 charges of armed robbery were dismissed. The charges were based on personal items taken from the captives July 15, 1976, as they Defense attorney Edward Merrill told reporters after the pleas were entered that "there was never any question" that the suspects "were guilty of kidnaping.

Attorneys for the suspects -Frederick Newhall Woods, 25; James Schoenfeld, 25, and his brother Richard, 24 - began plea bargaining two weeks ago after Judge Deegan ruled that the prosecution could admit into evidence items seized from the Woods' family estate south of San Francisco.

Those items include a never delivered ransom note, found in Frederick Woods' apartment. Although details of the note were not made public during the evidentiary hearings, The Los Angeles Times has learned its contents.

The note, penned by James Schoenfeld, said:

"Your bus has been kidnapped. Put 2 1-2 million dollars in each of the suit-

were forced into a buried moving van | cases, Total 5 million. Use old bills. Have ready at Oakland police station. Further instructions pending until Sunday a.m. We are Beelsabub." The reference to Bellsabub, an obvious misspelling of Beezlebub, a biblical term for Satan, lord of the insects, initially was the cause of speculation that the suspects might be part of some death cult. However, The Times learned that Beelzebub was simply a meaningless nickname given to James Schoenfeld by his best friend in a moment of silly conversation several years ago and used innocently ever since.

The note, which was to be telephoned in segments, continued:

"Sunday. Take suitcases to Oakland Airport. Have CHP plane pickup and transfer at a thousand feet above ground to Santa Cruz. Then follow Highway 17 back to Oakland. Speed should be 120 miles per hour groundspeed. Rest of the message and deliver final message Watch for lights. Red. green, blue. Red. green blue, then white Drop Return to Oakland Airport.

Jim Schoenfeld then wrote, "Call

As part of a list of things to do. Schoenfeld also wrote "occupants returned unharmed...what the police would know...vans used...color...description of captors...3-16ths steel plate with dirt...

Lester Gendron, the Madera County public defender who is representing Richard Schoenfeld, said the mass abduction started out as a movie plot.

"This kidnaping in my opinion would make a great British comedy because nothing went right." Gendron said. "This was really something that came up as a fluke that was perpetrated by three not too brilliant Gendron said the kidnaping was nearly a year in planning. More than a year before it occurred. The Times learned, the three suspects and several friends watched at least five times the Clint Eastwood movie "Dirty Harry." The plot of that film concerned the kidnaping of a school bus and the burial of a woman who had been kidnaped.

Gendron, who said the kidnaping "was Woods' idea," said "the plan was so loose and vague that you really couldn't determine what their goal was...There was absolutely no way it could have worked." Woods, Gendron said, wanted his share of the ransom money to promote a fire-fighting device he had conceived to protect California forests.

Friends of the Schoenfeld brothers told The Times that the brothers had indicated they were under pressure from their parents to leave home and work and that the brothers had spoken of ways to make some fast, easy money so that they could continue their life-style without having to Another piece of evidence gathered by FBI agents and Alameda County deputy sheriffs, who did much of the key detective work, was a diary kept by James Schoenfeld.

In the diary, James Schoenfeld wrote in a code he invented, but told friends was Russian, about his interests in women and his daily activities. However, he wrote out the detailed plans for the kidnaping plot

Ed Ray, the school bus driver, was sitting in the courtroom when the pleas were offered. Later Ray, who finished his summer school bus driving last Friday, told reporters, "I feel better that they pleaded guilty. They should have a

CWA strike close

WASHINGTON (AP) -Telephone workers are prepared to launch a nationwide strike next month to back demands | for pay increases and other benefits in a new contract with the Bell System.

Glenn E. Watts, president of the Communications Workers of America (CWA), said Monday overwhelming support for a strike "makes it clear" that his 500,000 members "are ready to walk out if that becomes necessary.

Watts said the rank and file, in a secret-ballot election earlier this month, voted by a margin of 6-1 to give the union leadership authority to call a strike.

A formal strike date was left to union leaders to decide, but a walkout could come as early as nidnight Aug. 6, when current contracts expire.

"We want a settlement, not a strike." Watts said. "But the situation is very serious and it's getting very late.

The CWA is the largest union in the negotiations that began May 19. The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International union, with a combined strength of nearly 200,000 additional employes, could be expected to join a strike if one is called.

Each union bargains separately, with the CWA usually setting the pattern for settlements.

In an unprecedented action, HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. ordered a total ban on sales of phenformin, a drug he said is being used by 360,000

Monday's action marked the first use of powers Congress granted to the Department of Health, Education and Welfare 15 years ago to allow the government to get a dangerous product off the market without following usual time-consuming

Califano's order came 10 weeks after Ralph Nader's Health Research Group asked for the ban.

New energy agency an energy department will be created within the federal government to carry out President Carter's energy plan and, with it, will come another period of uncertainty for the oil and gas industry, as well as for the nation as a whole.

One thing, however, is certain it will be expensive and it will have a tremendously large staff.

A House-Senate conference committee last Friday completed work on the proposed creation of an energy department. The energy reorganization measure now goes back to both houses. where routine approval is expected. The measure then will go to the White House for the President's signature.

It is anticipated that the new department will be in operation sometime next month.

It will begin life with approximately 20,000 employes and an annual budget of $10.6 billion. Yes, you read it right - 20,000 employes and a $10.6 billion annual budget.

The Department of Energy, it is said, will be the first cabinet-level agency to be created since the Department of Transportation in 1966. This is most fortunate. The nation couldn't afford any more than this in a 10-year period

It should be noted, however, that the new department will draw in energy programs now scattered throughout the federal government and abolish three existing agencies outright.

The conference committee did. however, hand President Carter a setback by giving a five-member commission authority to set natural gas prices.

Mr. Carter had recommended doing away with the present Federal Power Commission, which has control over gas pricing and wholesale electricity rates in interstate markets.

The Senate initially had established an energy board with authority over natural gas pricing, but gave ultimate veto power to the President.

The House, however, voted to create an independent fivemember Energy Regulatory

It appears almost certain that Commission to set natural gas prices.

The Senate members of the conference committee gave in on this one, and the President is expected to do likewise

The new agency, as was expected, will be headed by White House energy adviser James R. Schlesinger, who first must be confirmed by the Senate.

You will recall that Mr. Carter last winter proposed the energy reorganization plan. He said at that time that energy pricing should be controlled by a new cabinet secretary, who would set a coordinated policy for using scarce reserves of energy, including setting natural gas prices.

But this has been changed, probably for the best

A House sunset provision abolishing the new agency after five years unless Congress gives it new life was revised, in another compromise, to provide for an extensive review of its work by 1982

These, of course, are but a few of the highlights of the overall energy reorganization measure.

Some members of the conference panel said they felt the measure does not give the new secretary enough power to enable him to do his job. Others undoubtedly think it gives him too much authority

Some of the members said that by creating the new independent commission the Congress is insuring that energy pricing decisions will remain nonpolitical. We will go along with

FEA's got a 'ripoff crisis'

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON-While the Federal Energy Administration has struggled to cope with the energy crisis, many of its staff nembers have been more interested in padding their pockets at the taxpayers' expense. For the past year, we can now reveal, the agency's gumshoes have been prowling secretly around the backrooms. They have found evidence of a massive ripoff of government funds. Several employees, according to the allegations, have padded their salaries, junketed around the country on personal business and violated government regulations.

All told, they may have taken the taxpayers for hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yet the practices, say our sources, were condoned by FEA supervisors. We have had access to the agency's investigative files. They show that timecards were often padded or forged, with some staff people regularly collecting 40 to 50 hours of overtime pay for more than a year. Consultants were paid salaries for which they did no work.

Graduate students were hired and then did their school work on government time. Some employees even resorted to petty thievery, with $300 calculators "disappearing" shortly before they left for other jobs. The scandal began in the spring of 1974, when the agency launched a haphazard effort to hire professionals who could develop and analyze energy data.

Many employees also took junkets and worked infrequent hours, claiming much of their work was done late at night in their homes. Eventually, some of their more scrupulous colleagues complained to Zausner's successor, John Christie. He fired off a series of memos laying down strict guidelines on overtime pay, working hours, and travel reinbursement.

The memos were either ignored or laughed off, despite efforts to stop the abuses. Finally, the agency's security office began a drawn-out investigation, which was speeded up when John O'Leary became the new

The investigators have developed files on about 15 different employees. The most serious allegations involve James Sweeney, a top official who is now a professor at Stanford University. Sweeney not only padded his time cards, the files allege, but charged the government for jobhunting trips to Stanford. He also allegedly used public funds for taxi rides to his home and for trips to his parents' home in Connecticut.

Sweeney told us the charges are "ludicrous." He denied every allegation, saying he had Zausner's verbal permission to claim the maximum overtime. In any event, he insisted, he usually worked more overtime hours than he was paid for, Zausner agreed with this contention. Sweeney also said he was forced to take taxis home because he couldn't wait 45 minutes for the bus.

crosscontamination can then occur. That is, a kit chen utensil used to prepare the contaminated product is then used on another food item without proper cleaning and the organism migrates - often to an area in which it can multiply to the point of becoming dangerous

The symptoms of salmonella food poisoning diarrhea, cramps, vomiting and fever - often can be mistaken for 24-hour flu. It is seldom fatal except to the very young or the elderly, however, and can be guarded against by adherence to simple rules.

According to a brochure prepared by the American Medical Association - "Foodborne Illness." which outlines the different types of food poisoning and describes ways to prevent them - here are the ways of avoiding salmonella troubles: Wash cutting boards, counter tops, knives, hands and utensils that come into contact with raw meat, eggs or poultry in hot soapy water before reusing. -Do not thaw meats or poultry at room temperature. If it is necessary to hasten the thawing of an item like a turkey, use cool, running water. Do not stuff poultry until just before cooking, use meat thermometer to protect against undercooking -Refrigerate leftovers immediately and heat them thoroughly before serving. Remember that fresh-cooked foods seldom cause illness.

-Use clean, fresh eggs and avoid cracked shells. Avoiding the poisoning caused by staphylococcus aureus is a different problem. That germ is commonly found in the nose and throst, on the hair and eruption may unknowingly contaminate food. At room temperature, the organisms multiply and Langley and Donna produce a poison, which, unlike the bacteria themselves, is not destroyed by cooking. Foods that support the organism and its toxin include ham, cream-filled pastries, custard, egg dishes, gravies, stuffing, meat and poultry Symptoms like salmonella poisoning develop within six hours after exposure. To prevent staph contamination, follow these additional guidelines: -Do not use hands to mix foods; keep hands away frm mouth, nose and hair -Persons with skin infections or infectious diseases should never handle or prepare food. Any healthy person, however, can carry the organism, so coughing or sneezing around food should be avoided. Clostridium perfringens is normally found in soil and in the gastrointestinal tracts of animals and man. Inactive form sof the bacteria - called spores - can survive cooking and develop into the active form, so foods can be contaminated before or after cooking. Within 12 hours of infection, abdominal cramps and diarrhea develop. To avoid illness from WASHINGTON - Those of us who are not entrepreneurs keep throwing out ideas from which entrepreneurs then make money. A columnist in Britain once invented a mythical organization called Rent-A-Crowd. from which one was supposed to be able to hire people to demonstrate against the bomb or abortion or whatever. Much to his amazement, and a little to his chagrin, an entrepreneur then created an actual company which offered just such a service indiscriminately to causes of the left or the right.

If I were an entrepreneur now, I would put my money into hats. Hats are coming back. For women and for men. Big hats, and little hats. In 18 months, give a week or two, we will all be wearing hats.

My evidence is only that of a journalist who must, as an editor once said to me, work mainly by osmosis: 'He absorbs his information largely through his pores." A few months ago, I began to hear all kind of people talking wistfully about hats. I found this so interesting that I asked others if they would like hats to come back. With two exceptions from crotchety men, the verdict has been unanimous. What is more, everyone has talked enthusiastically about hats, describing a hat they had once worn, or one they would now like. They make it seem as if hats have biographies.

Hats are gracious, of course, and they are attractive; and, as many people have said, they are simply fun. But they are more. There is no other article of clothing that we can use so expressively. One can look up from under it, or tip it to the back of one's head; pull the brim down, or curl it up: wear it jauntily at an angle, or push it firmly over one's eyes. It can be a come-on or a put-off, without a word having to be said.

It emphasizes the eyes, and beneath them the mouth, becoming a frame for the face, lifting our gaze to where character may best be seen, and holding our attention there. We say that moods "play" across our faces. A hat is a weapon of "play"; no tie or scarf or jewelry is so versatile.

There is no other article of clothing that we can use so expressively. One can look up from under it, or tip it to the back of one's head; pull the brim down, or curl it up; wear it jauntily at an angle, or push it firmly over one's eyes. It can be a come-on or put-off, without a word having to be said.

Why did hats go out of fashion in the past two decades? I do not believe that John Kennedy's example was as important as is often suggested. There are fashions that owe something to personal influence, but they are usually short-lived. Nehru jackets had only brief lives. But the disappearance of the hat - an item of dress that until the 1960s had been customary in our civilization - was clearly an event that had deeper roots; and its return will be a response to changes that are just as

The most common explanation of the disappearance of the hat is that it is difficult to get in and out of cars with a hat on one's head. Perhaps there is something to this - the spacious London taxi may partly account for the fact that hats are still worn there more than in other cities - but such explanations always seem to be more like excuses. Obviously, if one really wanted to wear a hat, no inconvenience would deter; and anyone can move graciously in a hat even in the most confined space. Women with the widest of hats can sit elegantly in a Volkswagen.

If we are to understand it, we need to stick to the fact that a hat is unlike any other article of dress. It is a thing of gesture, something with which we may express and even make a moment. Think of the squire in the Middle Ages, sinking to one knee before his lady, sweeping his cap with its feather to the ground in an act of surrender but not submission. Without a hat, could his gesture have been so gracious and discriminating, or half so eloquent?

But think also of the old "pols" in their brown derbies, like Al Smith, their thumbs in their vest pockets. (And if the vest can return, why cannot the hat?) As they sat in their saloons or their smoke-filled rooms. with their hats on indoors, they could make a point merely by tipping them to the backs of their heads. Simply with their hats, they could say: "No

Whenever Disraeli was under severe attack in the House of Commons, he just slumped further and further down on the front bench and pulled his hat further and further over his eyes. Any attack will be blunted if it has to be addressed to the brim of a top hat. But equally, such a gesture is preferable to a scowl on the face. The hat makes a point without words that

Franklin Roosevelt did not have only his cigarette holder and his jutting jaw. He also had a hat, and he would take it off and wave it to us. Even when he was old and sick in 1944, he drove through four boroughs of New York in pouring rain, doffed his hat and waved it. It was a much more friendly gesture than the raised arm of the Nazis or the clenched fist of the Communists, or even the arms of Richard Nixon held above his head.

When hats were still worn in movies, a man and a woman would return to one or the other's home, and the woman would swep off her hat, or the man flick his across the room, as if it was a frisbee. They were gestures, as though to say that the play was over and that they were not alone, and open, private and at home, to each other. There was gallantry and graciousness, and an eloquence that spoke more than words.

But hats are not only things of gesture, expressions of a mood or of a moment. They are ways in which we can express sides of our personalities that we do not normally express. All of us to some extent become who we are by selecting from the many other things that we could have been. But these hidden parts of our personalities are still there, and a hat is a way of expressing them exactly as they need to be expressed: in play.

Myrna Loy or Rosalind Russell were not the same women when they wore sweeping, wide-brimmed hats as when they had little pieces of nonsense perched on their heads. The first 20 minutes of "Mrs. Miniver" were occupied by her purchase of a frivolous but expensive hat, and it is the frivolity that, paradoxically, is important. The playfulness, even the exhibitionism, is a display of things we need to express.

I remember few more pleasurable days in my life than the morning that I once, spent with the wives of two friends as they tried on every hat in Harrod's in London; and Harrod's is a garden of hats. For two hours, I leaned against the counter as they put on and took off every piece of finery and nonsense in the place. They were as free and wild as ponies, every side of their personalities given expression, until at last they swept out with 'We're sorry, but none seem to suit

Men can use hats in the same way Out on an errand the other day, I watched an elderly man boasting of his panama which he said his daughter had bought for him in Guatemala. An elderly man in a Panama is spry. He might be spry without it, but not with such effect. Can one think of Maurice Chevalier without his boater, as he sang "Thank Heavens for Little Girls?" A boater to twirl, a Panama to tip, "do something for us," as more than one person has put it. But in the end, the need for a hat can be brought down to one consideration. It gives the time and the opportunity for courtship, not only between the sexes, although most obviously so, but in all our relationships. Even the most mundane of our relationships ought to have an element of courtship: of approach, of tentativeness, of inquiry. A hat enables us to say, "However well you know me, you don know the whole of me; and you need to take the trouble to know me today, for I may be different from yesterday." It is not so much that it makes our relationships more formal as it makes them more spacious; it gives the opportunity for hesitancy and curiosity, for reserve as well as spontaneity.

Hats are the opposite of the creed of the last decade: of letting everything "hang out." They are a request to be allowed to be sometimes private and withdrawn even in the most direct or intimate of relationships. They are a way of saying that not everything can be told at once or face-to-face, that occasionally some hesitancy is needed.

We have grown to think that, the more outspoken we are, the more truthful we are being. But this is a falsehood, and we are at last beginning to see through it. A hat may be a frame, but it is also a sanctuary, from which we can insist that, in order to reveal, it is sometimes necessary to conceal; that those who are most immediately and most insistently "open" are often those who never really are open; that, if someone wishes to know one, he or she must practice the ways of courtship, not occasionally but regularly.

So let us wear our hats, learn again how to doff them, how to sweep them from our faces, how to retreat behind them; and let hat makers return to their proper business, and reap the

Brown, Koreans end negotiations

By JOHN RODERICK

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Defense Secretary Harold Brown today ended talks with South Korean officials on the U.S. troop withdrawal plan, pledging continued military support and reassuring Seoul that the United States will not negotiate with North Korea behind its back.

A communique issued at the conclusion of two days of talks said the two sides had agreed on formation of a combined military command. It also described in general terms the planned phased pullout of 33,000 U.S. ground troops, and said the Carter administration would ask Congress to approve a new military aid program for South Korea.

Brown and his 11-member delegation then left for Tokyo to brief Japanese officials on the talks.

The communique said Brown and South Korean Defense Minister Suh Jyong-chul noted that Communist North Korea has strengthesed itself militarily in recent years and that 'the North Korean threat remains

"It is essential to maintain and strengthen the defense capabilities of the Republic of Korea, at a state of readiness sufficient to deter a renewal of hostilities on the Korea peninsula," the communique said.

It then went on to list, without specifying the cost, the elements of the proposed military aid program the transfer of U.S. military equipment, an increase in military sales credits for Seoul and continued support for "general Korean force improvement."

A senior American official has said the aid program will amount to $1.9 billion over four years. The U.S. withdrawal, a pullout of virtually all American ground troops, is expected to take four or five years.

The communique also said Brown reaffirmed that the United States would not enter any negotiations on the future of Korea with North Korea without the participation of the Republic of Korea.

This was an apparent effort to ease

South Korean fears that the United States, as it did in the case of China and Taiwan, might suddenly open a bilateral dialogue with North Korea, bypassing Seoul

The communique said the first group of 6,000 U.S. soldiers will be withdrawn by the end of 1978, and the remaining troops will be "carefully" phased out after that.

The headquarters and two brigades of the 2nd Infantry Division, the principal Army unit here, will remain in Korea until the final phase of the withdrawal, it said

The communique said both sides agreed that "compensatory measures will be implemented in advance or in parallel with the withdrawals."

Brown's talks with Suh and South Korean President Park Chung-hee were marked by repeated reassurances - including one in a letter from President Carter to Park - that the United States would honor its treaty commitment to defend

"So long as an American security commitment exists, no one should have any doubt about our intention of honoring it," Brown said at a news conference before departing for

Pensions may move from Pentagon budget

By EVANS WITT

WASHINGTON (AP) - There's an easy, almost painless way for President Carter to chop $9.7 billion out of the defense budget. He could shift the costs of retirement checks for current military pensioners out of the Pentagon budget.

But the cut would not decrease overall federal spending by one single penny. The annual tab would be moved into the government's income security account, which includes Social Security, welfare, food stamps, unemployment insurance, civil service retirement and pensions paid by the Veterans Administration.

This accounting change is one of the Carter administration's effort to make sense of the tangled way the government accounts for federal workers' pensions.

Taken together, the changes under consideration at the Defense Department and the Office of Management and Budget would make the rapidly rising costs of pensions more obvious in the budget. And they would, for the first time, make the true future costs of pensions visible by putting them into the federal spending

"Our grandchildren are going to have to shoulder a pretty heavy burden," said one official of the pension costs. "We have to start writing down what our debts are."

paign to cut billions from the defense budget, a pledge he has not thus far fulfilled. By shifting current pension costs, Carter could, after a fashion, fulfill his promise.

However, if all the changes were enacted, the Pentagon budget would increase. Estimates of the increase range from $500 million to $4.2 billion, depending on economic conditions. Administration sources say an initial decision on most of the changes is expected within a month by Defense Secretary Harold Brown for the fiscal 1979 budget.

No worker's current or future pension would be increased or decreased by these changes.

"These are really accounting and bookkeeping arrangements that have

man Parker Humes told the commissioners that the alliance is modeled after a similar group in Dallas which was credited by many as helping that city peacefully get through the start of a busing program involving 80,000 students.

Humes said that was more students than were involved in busing in Boston and Louisville, cities where much violence surrounded the courtordered busing of schoolchildren.

On the motion of Commissioner Wright, the following resolution was adopted:

"Whereas, Midland County Commissioners Court respects Midland Independent School District's efforts to maintain the neighborhood school concept for grade schools and applauds their efforts through the federal courts to preserve the neighborhood schools; Whereas, the federal court edict now mandates that grade school children be bused to schools out of their neighborhoods. and Midland Independent School District is trying to bring about this change with the least community disturbance possible; And whereas, the Midland Alliance is a committee of interested citizens who desire to make the transition from neighborhood schools peaceful and harmonious; now, therefore, be it resolved by the Midland County Commissioners Court that the citizens of Midland support all efforts which emphasize excellence in public education and peaceful compliance with court orders.

Commissioner Win Brown abstained from the vote because he thought the resolution was intruding on a "social issue, not a governmental

"I think that it (the resolution) was out of our league." Brown said.

The commissioners postponed action on a proposal to set a 35 mph speed limit on Warren Road from the Rankin Highway to County Road 715 after a public hearing drawing more than 20 persons indicated the boundaries of those speed limits should be expanded to include Warren Road from Midkiff Road to CR 715 and sections of CR 120 and 140.

Residents told the commissioners that these roads were being used as a raceway by some, and that population density in the area warranted the speed reduction to 35 mph from the present 55 mph.

Also on Monday, the commissioners decided to ask representatives from the Texas County and District Retirement System to analyze the county's retirement program

Oil company investigation to be started

By J. P. SMITH The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The Carter administration will undertake a major investigation of the 15 major oil companies aimed at recouping alleged overcharges since the 1973 Arab oil embargo "possibly amounting to several billion dollars," Federal Energy Administration head John F. O'Leary said Monday:

O'Leary said efforts to enforce the FEA's complicated oil pricing regulations had been "skimped" in the past, and he strongly endorsed the findings of a 14-member task force led by Stanley Sporkin, head of enforcement at the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The task force report said, "FEA's enforcement program has historically been ineffective without either the commitment or direction to the job .. (it) has floundered and moved from crisis to crisis with few real suc-

Sporkin, who has a reputation as a tough enforcer and in the corporate world, said FEA's attempts to get the largest refiners to comply with oil pricing regulations were "a failure."

FEA has a backlog of about 3,600 open cases with a potential of $1.7 billion in pricing violations. Since July, 1974, FEA has settled cases with major refiners involving $358 million in violations

We still haven't gotten a hold on the major refiners," Sporkin said. "This intensive major refiner audit program makes the most sense from a cost-benefit basis."

FEA officials identified the 15 integrated oil companies and others with large refinery operations as Exxon. Standard Oil Co. of Indiana (Amoco), Shell, Texaco, Standard Oil

Co. of California (Socal), Mobil, Gulf, Atlantic Richfield, Sun, Marathon, Union, Continental Oil Co. (Conoco), Phillips, Cities Service and Getty-Skelly

Industry reaction, especially among the companies who will be targeted under FEA's investigation, was highly critical. A Conoco spokesman labeled the FEA's regulations as "complex, confusing and oftentimes contradictory."

FEA's oil pricing and allocation regulations were designed during the embargo emergency four years ago and now run to over 20,000 pages, fill-

Asked to identify who was responsible for FEA's admitted failure to ensure that the oil companies comply with the pricing regulations O'Leary said, "I don't want to point the finger at any of my predecessors."

John C. Sawhill, who headed FEA under President Ford, said, "We created FEA so quickly it was very difficult to generate an ongoing, strong audit program."

Sporkin's report called for a permanent investigative task force made up of auditors and attorneys, beaded by "a tough enforcer and litigator ... not unlike the concept of a special pro-

O'Leary said he hopes to name the head of the unit in one month and complete the refiner audit in the next two years. In the meantime, he said, the FEA will reassign some existing personnel to strengthen the compliance program.

Travelers flood air terminal

Midland Regional Air Terminal last month, setting a record for the month

According to Col. Wilson Banks, director of the terminal, 31,882 passengers passed through the facility. Only 21,448 passengers passed through the terminal in June 1976.

A new passenger record was also set in May, Banks said. He said he expects another record to be set this month. Banks estimated the number of passengers in July at 35,000-40,000.

He attributed the increase in the number of passengers to the increased service provided by the addition of one airline and the lowering of fares for certain flights by other

Wheat surplus predicted

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) - Too much dry weather in the winter and too much rain in the spring brought predictions of doom for the winter wheat crop. But the harvest is almost complete in Kansas now - and the problem is too much wheat.

Elevators are full, prices are low and the wheat carryover nationally from previous years is estimated at more than 1 billion bushels.

The State Crop and Livestock Reporting Service earlier this month estimated Kansas wheat production at 381.3 million bushels, which would rank it close to the 1973 record harvest of 384.8 million bushels.

The wheat in surplus stocks and this year's production are said to be enough to furnish the United States with all the wheat it needs for five years even if no more wheat is grown. U.S. wheat production this year has been estimated by the Agriculture Department at more than 2.04 billion bushels, five per cent less the 1976 record of about 2.15 billion bushels.

As of June 1, the nation's wheat reserve was more than 1.1 billion bushels, the most in 14 years. A large wheat surplus traditionally has not affected the price consumers pay for a loaf of bread because middleman costs make up most of "We realize we overproduced," said Wendell White, who with his father farms 2,500 acres of dryland wheat near Goodland in western Kansas.

"We were encouraged by the government (in 1973) to plant more because more wheat was needed," he said. "We would have been better off if we'd ignored what they were saying.

Just because prices are low, he said, farmers can't turn off the faucet of production, mainly because the banker still wants his payments on land, interest and machinery.

Earl Hayes of Stafford, president of the Kansas Association of Wheat Growers, figures much of the wheat will find its way into the federal government's loan program under which the farmer borrows $2.25 a bushel, the current loan rate, and gives the government his grain as collateral. The grain, then, can be forfeited to the government if prices don't improve.

Wheat prices have declined in the past three years, going from $5.85 a bushel early in 1974 to between $1.80 and $2 a bushel now

"If the grain isn't available to the market, the price might go up a little," Hayes said. "I think that is the feeling of many of the farmers. They will take loans as long as the market is low and as they need cash."

Most people do miss the fading of the familiar - particularly so when memories are endearing. They come to the retirement center

to extend their zest for living, to savor the minutes, hours, days and years In his office adjoining the lobby

Trinity administrator Clyde Haden, a former schoolteacher himself, talked about the fairly exclusive retirement

"Most of the people here seem to enjoy life," Haden said of the 104 residents. Most are widows.

"But just like any place," he admitted, "we've got some 'old soreheads.' By and far, they're happy people. They enjoy each other.'

and the oldest is 96. (Actually, there are two in that upper-age.) "You see," Haden said, "people live so much longer" these days. "We actually don't have many young people in their late 60s or even in their early 70s.

Man-to-woman, the "population" here definitely is lopsided.

"We actually have very few men." he said. The ratio is about five to one.

'You know, women outlive men.' Haden confidently claims that Trinity Towers rates up there with best of the refined retirement facilities in the state. It's on par with the best of the elegant ones in the Dallas and Houston areas, he said The turnover rate here is minimal, Haden said. Normally, there's a twoyear waiting period before a vacancy turns up. And many there are who are

Panel OKs Lance's banking transactions

WASHINGTON - The Senate Governmental Affairs Committee reports on his financial affairs. voiced approval of Budget Director Bert Lance's banking transactions Monday and indicated it would grant him an extension of time to sell his bank stock if current negotiations to sell it fell through

Lance told the committee he hoped his trustee. Tom Mitchell of Dalton. Ga., would complete negotiations for the sale quickly and that questions concerning his finances could be resolved "so I can get back to the business of trying to be director of the OMB (Office of Management and

Lance still faces an inquiry by the Comptroller of the Currency into circumstances surrounding a $3.4 million personal loan he obtained from the First National Bank of Chicago on Jan. 7, 1977. He explained that transaction to the satisfaction of

ing, at which Lance testified for two hours, several committee members said they thought the budget director had been smeared by unfair news

'The investigative reporters have become the king of the press," exclaimed Ribicoff. "Get everybody -that's the name of the game in America today. Now we have a situation," he said, looking at Lance, "where you've been smeared from one end of the country to the other, in my opinion unjustly

Ribicoff said the hearing had given Lance an opportunity "clear the at mosphere" and added, "as I view all the questions from all the members around the dais, there isn't a thing that has developed that in any way impugus your character or your reputation or your ability

Ribicoff last Friday had stressed the seriousness of the allegations appearing in the press and had called for an immediate investigation. Several other committee members argued that any probe should be deferred until Lance had an opportunity to testify, however, and Ribicoff agreed.

After Monday's hearing, Ribicoff said he saw no need for any further inquiry. Neither did the ranking minority member, Sen. Charles H. Percy (R Ill.), who had joined Ribicoff Friday in the original call for an immediate investigation.

President Carter expressed full confidence in Lance at his weekly cabinet meeting Monday. As the President recognized individual cabinet members around the conference table, he paused at Lance's chair - empty because the budget director was testifying - and said his old friend and confidant had "impeccable integrity.

Lance denied under oath that he had committed any wrongdoing in any personal or official banking tran-

He specifically denied that the $3.4 Midlander million loan from the Chicago bank was a "sweetheart deal" or that interest on it had been deferred, as hadbeen suggested by New York Times columnist William Safire.

Lance said the interest rate on the loan was 0.75 per cent above the prime rate, payable quarterly, and payments were current

He also denied there was any relationship between the loan and the placing of a deposit in a non-interest bearing account in the Chicago bank by his own National Bank of Georgia. And contrary to a Washington Post article, he said, the deposit was not $200,000, but $50,000.

Sen. Percy, a businessman and former bank director, calculated that $50,000 in such an account would be worth about $2,500 a year to a bank.

Lance's financial problems revolve around debts he has incurred in purchasing some 200,000 shares of National Bank of Georgia stock that recently has declined sharply in

He pledged at his confirmation hearing early this year to divest him self of the stock by the end of the year in order to avoid any conflict of interest between his banking interests and his duties as budget director. But after the sharp drop in stock value, he sought an extension of the deadline in hopes he could escape a financial beating in the sale.

last all week and perhaps for several weeks, with a debate-limiting cloture vote (requiring 60 votes to limit debate) planned for Friday, and several times next week if that fails. Republicans have lots of complaints

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. (AP) - Weary cleanup crews, dogged by foul weather, hard luck and rumors of more flooding, have taken 59 bodies from this flood-ravaged region as their search for victims neared the end of its first week

Heavy rain pelted the seven-county flood area Monday, bringing warnings from Civil Defense officials for people in low lying areas to seek higher ground.

The request spawned rumors that two dams in southeastern Cambria County were about to give way, and Gov. Milton J. Shapp dispatched state dam safety chief John Ellam to investigate. "He got here before the raindrops stopped but there was not enough water to cause a problem," said Civil Defense spokesman John Comey Small streams ran over their banks and there were reports of minor mud slides and more flooded basements. but the storm subsided by midafternoon without serious damage.

Home damaged in Monday fire Two units of the Midland Fire Department responded to a fire at the Mike Casey residence, 4309 Pasadena, at 10:33 p.m. Monday. Firemen used 200 gallons of water to extinguish the blaze. The bedroom received heavy damage, with smoke damage throughout the house.

AMA outlines food poisoning, its prevention shower and watermelon feast in the home of Mr. John F. Bates of

By SHERYL FITZGERALD Newsday

NEW YORK - Unsanitary food-handling procedures are the major cause of food poisoning that attacks more than a million people in the United States each year.

Salmonella are the bacteria most commonly associated with food poisoning, but there are several others -- staphylococcus aureus, clostridium perfringens and clostridium botulinum (botulism).

Salmonella organisms are usually found in raw animal products. They multiply at temperatures from 45 degrees to 114 degrees Fahrenheit. Freezing or refrigeration will retard their growth, while cooking destroys the organism altogether.

Contaminated meats don't usually carry enough salmonella to cause harm, but they are often the vehicle by which the baccillus gets into the family kitchen. When salmonella arrive in that way crosscontamination can then occur. That is, a kitchen utensil used to prepare the contaminated handling raw foodstuffs, particularly animal product is then used on another food item without proper cleaning and the organism migrates - often to an area in which it can multiply to the point of becoming dangerous.

The symptoms of salmonella food poisoning diarrhea, cramps, vomiting and fever - often can be mistaken for 24-hour flu. It is seldom fatal except to the very young or the elderly, however, and can be guarded against by adherence to simple rules.

According to a brochure prepared by the American Medical Association - "Foodborne Illness," which outlines the different types of food poisoning and describes ways to prevent them - here are the ways of avoiding salmonella troubles:

-Wash cutting boards, counter tops, knives, hands and utensils that come into contact with raw meat. eggs or poultry in hot soapy water before reusing. -Do not thaw meats or poultry at room temperature. If it is necessary to hasten the thawing of an item like a turkey, use cool, running water. Do not stuff poultry until just before cooking use meat thermometer to protect against un--Refrigerate leftovers immediately and heat them thoroughly before serving. Remember that fresh-cooked foods seldom cause illness. -Use clean, fresh eggs and avoid cracked shells. Avoiding the poisoning caused by staphylococcus aureus is a different problem'. That germ is commonly found in the nose and throst, on the hair and skin, and in skin infections. Anybody who has a skin eruption may unknowingly contaminate food. At room temperature, the organisms multiply and Langley and Donna produce a poison, which, unlike the bacteria themselves, is not destroyed by cooking. Foods that cream-filled pastries, custard, egg dishes, gravies, stuffing, meat and poultry. Symptoms like salmonella poisoning develop within six hours after exposure. To prevent staph contamination, follow these additional guidelines: -Do not use hands to mix foods; keep hands away

frm mouth, nose and hair. -Persons with skin infections or infectious diseases should never handle or prepare food. Any healthy person, however, can carry the organism, so coughing or sneezing around food should be avoided.

Clostridium perfringens is normally found in soil and in the gastrointestinal tracts of animals and man. Inactive form sof the bacteria - called spores - can survive cooking and develop into the active form, so foods can be contaminated before or aftercooking. Within 12 hours of infection, abdominal cramps and diarrhea develop. To avoid illness from C. perfringens:

by paying attention to cleanliness. Botulism, though rare, is the most serious form of food poisoning. Its major cause is improperly chapel on the campus of processed home-canned vegetables. The symptoms of botulism poisoning occur within 12 to 36 hours and include double vision, inability to swallow, speech Rouge difficulty and progressive respiratory paralysis. Spores of the botulinum organism are found in soil and water. -Use only the pressure-canner method of canning vegetables, meats or poultry since the high temperatures required to kill spores cannot be achieved any other way

Obtain reliable canning instructions and make sure that all equipment is functioning properly:

-Do not even taste foods that you suspect of contamination (unusual odors are a reliable guide.) If in doubt, boil meats, poultry, corn of spinach for 20 minutes and other vegetables for 10 before eating.

Klan revives cross burning

ATLANTA (AP) - The message is the same: racial purity. Communists have been added to blacks as targets for their anger. The Ku Klux Klan has been burning crosses again.

Disruptions of rallies in Columbis, Ohio, and President Carter's home town of Plains, Ga., made front page news across America. There have been torchlight rallies scattered from New York to California.

But is there really a resurgence?

The Klan says yes, but nobody else does. 'We're growing tremendously," said Robert Shelton, imperial wizard of the United Klans of America from his home in Tuscaloosa, Ala. "We'll be taking a more aggressive position in the coming months; you're going to see a lot more of us.'

But long-time Klan observers say the recent high visibility of "the invisible empire" far outpaces its influence.

The Klan is called "a relic of antiquity that doesn" amount to anything" by former U.S. Rep. Charles Weltner, an Atlanta Superior Court judge. Weltner was a leader in a mid1960s House investigation of the

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said the Klan, no friend of American Jews, is no longer of much consequence. The Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Leadership Conference which was founded by Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said he no longer thinks or worries about the KKK.

The FBI said it no longer counts membership in the KKK but estimated three years ago that there were about 1,200 hard-core members of various Klans

A national headcount that low is "really ridiculous," said Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a

Neither he nor other rival Klan leaders will give figures; so actual membership is unclear. But it is clear that the Klans have embarked on a new strategy - one of speaking out, going to court and going after recruits - after at least a decade in

They still advocate separation of the races and admit no blacks or Jews. But their rallies now contain more denunciations of Communists in the government and left-wingers in general than racial

So far there's little evidence of new interest in Klan membership. Outsiders say KKK ranks remain tiny. Weltner said that in the 1960s the Klan was indeed growing and had reached as many as 15,000 mem-"It could have been a very dangerous force in the community," he said. But he said exposure through the congressional hearings defused it. "It's still defused," he said

America closing old 'travel gap'

NEW YORK (AP) - The American tourist industry, which has been something of a little sister in the world travel picture, seems to be moving into its own. While it may be years before the number of tourist dollars flowing out of this country is matched by money from foreign visitors, Commerce Department officials say the flow of U.S. tourist dollars abroad is far less lopsided than a decade ago.

"In recent years, this deficit - some call it the travel gap - has begun to shrink." said David L. Edgell, director of policy analysis in the Commerce Department's U.S. Travel Service. "In 1976, it was 14 per cent less than in 1975, but still a substantial $2.65 billion." he said, in an article in a recent Commerce Department publication, "Commerce America." Edgell quotes agency predictions that, if recent trends continue, the United States will close the socalled "travel gap" by the end of the century. There are a couple of reasons for his optimism.

The United States, which didn't even open a government office to coordiate a national tourist policy until 1961 - years after most European countries had aggressive programs - is seeing a gradual slowdown in the numbers of U.S. reidents who vacation abroad. Ten years ago, about 20.56 million U.S. citizens traveled in foreign countries; five years ago, it peaked at 23.8 million; last year, about 22.9 million Americans visited foreign countries. This year, government travel specialists predict about 23.5 million U.S. residents will travel in foreign countries

By contrast, there has been a rapid growth in the numbers of visitors from other countries to the United States. The U.S. Travel Service said that in 1967, when more than 20 million Americans traveled abroad, only 9.96 million foreign visitors came to this country.

That number of visitors from abroad grew to 13.06 million by 1972 end reached 17.5 million for last year's bicentennial. This year, the agency forecasts a 5 per cent increase to 18.4 million visitors. But officials say figures for the first five months show a jump of more than 8 per cent over a year ago may indicate the agency's estimate is too conservative. One major reason for the increase in foreign visitors is simply that the economies of other countries and the amount of leisure time available for travel is growing. Then too, as the United States draws more visitors and gets publicity through such events as the bicentennial, a snowball effect can take place. Those who vacation here tend to influence their friends to do the same. If world economic conditions remain stable, the U.S. Travel Service says it expects receipts from foreign travel, which were nearly $7 billion last year to reach $20 billion in current dollars by the year

Blast hits Alaska line

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) - A blast from an explosive device of undetermined nature damaged the exterior of a section of the trans-Alaska pipeline, but the flow of oil was not affected, authorities said

State Police Lt. George Pollitt said the blast, which damaged insulation around the outside of the line, occurred about 9 p.m. Monday about 17 miles north of Fairbanks. In that area the pipeline runs about one mile north of a cafe and five miles off a state highway

Politt said FBI investigators and state police were on the scene. He said authorities had been notified by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. "that an explosive device had been detonated near the pipeline ..." He added that troopers at the scene "confirmed that some damage to the insulation had been done by what appeared to be a blast of some type.

Pollitt said troopers were bringing. pieces of the debris back to Fairbanks for analysis

An Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. official said there was no halt or slowdown in oil flow through the pipe

Texans take Seadock woes to Washington Marine Fisheries Committee today.

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mayors of nine Texas coastal towns took their campaign to rescue Seadock, a proposed deepwater superport off the Texas coast, to a congressional committee today

The mayors arrived in Washington Monday to try to persuade federal officials to soften their stand on the proposed port, which would provide deepwater unloading facilities for oil

the companies why they were pulling They were trying without success to arrange a meeting with President The $700 million proposal has been stalled since Exxon and Gulf pulled out of the consortium two weeks ago that was supposed to build it. Mobil pulled out in April.

The Texas Legislature, however, approved a bill last week that would permit construction of a state-owned deepwater terminal if the private industry efforts fail.

The oil companies said they could not reach a satisfactory arrangement with the Justice and Transportation departments, which control licensing of the project.

"We want to ask the president to intervene and tell the departments to sit down with the companies and work something out. It would be a loss for the country if the port weren't built," said Mayor Vic Vickers of Lake Jackson, Tex.

But a Department of Transportation official. Ernie Bauer, said the department had never broken off negotiations and never been told by Bauer said the difficulties occurred over interpretation of license provisions, such as one that required the companies to open the deepwater port and its connecting pipeline to any firm that wanted to use it.

"They were afraid that that would extend to all their pipelines, even if they were in Minnesota," said Bauer.

Bauer noted that another deepwater project, proposed for the Louisiana coast by a different consortium, is moving along through negotiations. He said he did not see why the Texas proposal should be different.

Tankers would unload oil at the facility and the oil is then piped ashore. The Seadock port would be about 26 miles off Freeport, Tex.

Blast hits Alaska line

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) - A blast from an explosive device of undetermined nature damaged the exterior of a section of the trans-Alaska pipeline, but the flow of oil was not affected, authorities said.

State Police Lt. George Pollitt said the blast, which damaged insulation around the outside of the line, occurred about 9 p.m. Monday about 17 miles north of Fairbanks. In that area the pipeline runs about one mile north of a cafe and five miles off a state

Politt said FBI investigators and state police were on the scene. He said authorities had been notified by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. "that an explosive device had been detonated near the pipeline ..." He added that troopers at the scene "confirmed that some damage to the insulation had been done by what appeared to be a blast of some type.'

Pollitt said troopers were bringing pieces of the debris back to Fairbanks for analysis.

An Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. official said there was no halt or slowdown in oil flow through the pipe following the explosion.

The leading edge of Prudhoe Bay oil now in the pipeline moved only two miles through the line Monday as crews worked out some bugs at Pump Station No. 9, according to Alyeska officials.

Pump 9 was brought on line early to make up for pumping capacity lost in an explosion that destroyed Pump 8 on July 8.

Texans take Seadock woes to Washington

By ROBERT B. CULLEN

WASHINGTON (AP) - Government officials and the major oil companies tossed verbal brickbats at each other today over the apparent demise of the Sezdock deepwater port

The scene was a hearing called by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee to find out why the Exxon, Mobil and Gulf oil companies pulled out of the consortium that was to build the $700-million facility in the gulf off Freeport, Tex.

Excessive and unreasonable government regulation made the project impossible, said the oil companies. Irresponsible greed by the oil companies sabotaged it, said Rep.

Jack Brooks, D-Tex. Seadock was designed to be a facility to unload oil in deep water. accessible to the huge new supertankers. The oil would be pumped ashore though underwater pipelines. The owners would be a consortium in which Gulf, Mobil and Exxon would own a majority of the stock.

"As originally conceived, the owners of Seadock - large multinational oil companies - sought to prevent "non-owner" shippers from using the offshore buoy loading facilities. They intended to reap huge profits at very little risk. And they sought to avoid all environmental responsibility for damages caused by oil spills by hiding behind a veil of limited corporate responsibility.' Brooks said

He said that, rather than construct a deepwater port, he would prefer to see the port at Galveston, in his congressional district, enlarged to accomodate the supertankers.

A spokesman for the Department of Transportation, which regulates the offshore ports, said his department had tried to work out a suitable arrangement with the Seadock consortium and was willing to try further. He noted that the department has been negotiating successfully with another consortium for a license to build a deepwater port off the coast of Louisiana

Spokesmen for the oil companies — G.E. Uthlaut of Exxon, Robert 2,615 feet. Baldwin of Gulf, and Allen Murray of 11,683 feet, circulating and Mobil — cited a number of problems with the government that they said had caused them to pull out and allow losses of about $3 million each.

One key objection arose over the government's insistence that the corporations which own Seadock should be financially responsible for oil spill damages. The companies wanted the Seadock Corporation to be solely responsible, which would limit the liability of the parent companies.

Another major problem was the extent to which the Department of Transportation would assume 1-A Peters; drilling 11,659 feet in jurisdiction over the companies' oil pipelines in its effort to insure that Seadock was operated as a common carrier, available on a fair basis to all oil shippers and refiners. Also present at the hearings were nine mayors of Texas cities near the point at which Seadock's pipelines would come ashore. Their spokesman, Mayor Vick Vickers of Lake Jackson, Tex., said they wanted to get the companies and the government to sit down and compromise on their differences.

The mayors arrived in Washington Monday to try to persuade federal officials to soften their stand on the proposed port, which would provide deepwater unloading facilities for oil

The mayors met with Federal Energy Administration chief John O'Leary Monday and were scheduled to meet with Secretary of Transportation Brock Adams today. They were also to testify before the House Marine Fisheries Committee today.

They were trying without success to arrange a meeting with President

The $700 million proposal has been stalled since Exxon and Gulf pulled out of the consortium two weeks ago that was supposed to build it. Mobil pulled out in April.

The Texas Legislature, however,

Andector MER okayed

AUSTIN -- The Railroad Commission has ordered retention of the most efficient rate of production for the Andector (Ellenburger) field in Ector County 13,732 barrels of oil daily, or 250 barrels daily per well.

A hearing was held June 14 on a commission-called review of the reservoir performance to redetermine the most efficient rate of recovery for Andector.

All parties participating in the hearings. Phillips Petroleum Co., Amoco Production Co., Texaco, and RRC officials agreed that no waste is occuring a the current rate of production.

permit construction of a state-owned deepwater terminal if the private industry efforts fail

The oil companies said they could not reach a satisfactory arrangement with the Justice and Transportation departments, which control licensing of the project. "We want to ask the President to intervene and tell the departments to sit down with the companies and work something out. It would be a loss for the country if the port weren't built," said Mayor Vic Vickers of Lake Jackson, Tex. But a Department of Transportation official, Ernie Bauer, said the department had never broken off negotiations and never been told by the companies why they were pulling approved a bill last week that would the companies to open the deepwater port and its connecting pipeline to any firm that wanted to use it.

They were afraid that that would extend to all their pipelines, even if they were in Minnesota," said Bauer.

Bauer noted that another deepwater project, proposed for the Louisiana coast by a different consortium, is moving along through negotiations. He said he did not see why the Texas proposal should be different. Tankers would unload oil at the facility and the oil is then piped ashore. The Seadock port would be about 26 miles off Freeport, Tex.

Concern market

Renewed concern over the economic outlook depressed stock prices for the second straight session today. The noon Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 6.50 at 907.74: Losers outnumbered gainers by more than a 2-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow fell 9.18 points on Monday, abruptly ending the average's 20-point advance over the six previous sessions.

Analysts blamed the downturn on continuing concern that economic growth might slow in the months ahead. They also observed that the market's recent behavior had dimmed hopes for any sustained rally in the immediate future. Exxon was the most active

NY issue, down 1 at 5134 after a 11/2-point drop Monday on the company's weekend report of lower second quarter earnings. The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was off .31 at 54.98. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost .63 to 122.79. Volume on the Big Board reached 9.73 million shares by noontime, up from 8.14 million at the same point on Monday. Polaroid, which raised its quarterly dividend from 121/2

Klan revives depresses cross burning

ATLANTA (AP) - The message is the same: racial purity. Communists have been added to blacks as targets for their anger. The Ku Klux Klan has been burning crosses again. Disruptions of rallies in Columbis, Ohio, and President Carter's home town of Plains, Ga., made front page news across America. There have been torchlight rallies scattered from New York to

But is there really a resurgence?

The Klan says yes, but nobody else does. "We're growing tremendously," said Robert Shelton, imperial wizard of the United Klans of America from his home in Tuscaloosa, Ala. "We'll be taking a more aggressive position in the coming months; you're going to see a lot more of us.'

But long-time Klan observers say the recent high visibility of "the invisible empire" far outpaces its The Klan is called "a relic of antiquity that doesn't amount to anything" by former U.S. Rep. Charles

Weltner, an Atlanta Superior Court judge. Weltner was a leader in a mid1960s House investigation of the The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said the Klan, no friend of American Jews, is no longer of much consequence. The Rev. Joseph Lowery, head founded by Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., said he no longer thinks or worries about the KKK. The FBI said it no longer counts membership in the KKK but estimated three years ago that there were of the Southern Leadership Conference which was about 1,200 hard-core members of various Klans. A national headcount that low is "really ridiculous." said Imperial Wizard Bill Wilkinson of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, a Louisiana group.

Neither he nor other rival Klan leaders will give figures, so actual membership is unclear. But it is clear that the Klans have embarked on a new strategy - one of speaking out, going to court and going after recruits - after at least a decade in

They still advocate separation of the races and admit no blacks or Jews. But their rallies now contain more denunciations of Communists in the government and left-wingers in general than racial

So far there's little evidence of new interest in Klan membership. Outsiders say KKK ranks remain tiny. Weltner said that in the 1960s the Klan was indeed growing and had reached as many as 15,000 mem-

America closing old 'travel gap'

By KRISTIN GOFF

NEW YORK (AP) - The American tourist industry, which has been something of a little sister in the world travel picture, seems to be moving into its

While it may be years before the number of tourist dollars flowing out of this country is matched by money from foreign visitors, Commerce Department officials say the flow of U.S. tourist dollars abroad is far less lopsided than a decade ago.

"In recent years, this deficit - some call it the travel gap - has begun to shrink." said David L. Edgell, director of policy analysis in the Commerce Department's U.S. Travel Service.

"In 1976, it was 14 per cent less than in 1975, but still a substantial $2.65 billion," he said, in an article in a recent Commerce Department publication, 'Commerce America.'' Edgell quotes agency predictions that, if recent trends continue, the United States will close the socalled "travel gap" by the end of the century. There are a couple of reasons for his optimism.

The United States, which didn't even open a government office to coordiate a national tourist policy until 1961 - years after most European countries had aggressive programs - is seeing a gradual slowdown in the numbers of U.S. reidents who vacation abroad. Ten years ago, about 20.56 million U.S. citizens traveled in foreign countries; five years ago, it peaked at 23.8 million; last year, about 22.9 million Americans visited foreign countries. This year, government travel specialists predict about 23.5 million U.S. residents will travel in foreign countries.

By contrast, there has been a rapid growth in the numbers of visitors from other countries to the United States. The U.S. Travel Service said that in 1967, when more than 20 million Americans traveled abroad, only 9.96 million foreign visitors came to this That number of visitors from abroad grew to 13.06 million by 1972 end reached 17.5 million for last year's bicentennial. This year, the agency forecasts a 5 per cent increase to 18.4 million visitors. But officials say figures for the first five months show a jump of more than 8 per cent over a year ago may indicate the agency's estimate is too conservative. One major reason for the increase in foreign visitors is simply that the economies of other countries and the amount of leisure time available for travel is growing. Then too, as the United States draws more visitors and gets publicity through such events as the bicentennial, a snowball effect can take place. Those who vacation here tend to influence their friends to

If world economic conditions remain stable, the U.S. Travel Service says it expects receipts from foreign travel, which were nearly $7 billion last year to reach $20 billion in current dollars by the year

Prospects dim for would-be vets

By WILLIAM PRATER

URBANA. III. (AP) - A desire of young people to return to the land, and an awareness of yet another profession open to women, is putting the squeeze on the nation's veterinary schools.

Officials say there are six fully qualified applicants for each vet school vacancy, compared with three for each medical school opening At the University of Illinois last fall there were 500 applicants - more than double the number in 1970 for 76 vacancies in the veterinary school. Even more might have applied, but the school actively discouraged prospective students and didn't consider anyone from out of state.

'We really feel that with such a large demand by Illinois residents that we have to accept Illinois applicants first." Dean Richard Dierks said in an Dierks says this attitude prevails among officials of the nation's 22 veterinary schools, making the prospects dismal for would-be animal doctors in the 26 states with no veterinary schools.

Oddly, it is mostly the folks in wide-open cattle country who are being shut out of the profession. Between the Pacific Ocean and Iowa only California, Colorado and Washington maintain veterinary schools. Washington shares the costs with Idaho and

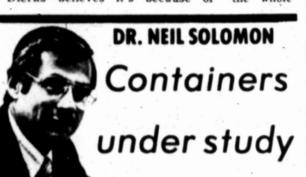

To ease a similar situation in the South, four new veterinary schools have opened in the past five years: At the University of Tennessee. Mississippi State University, University of Florida and Louisiana State University.

The vacuum in states without vet schools is drawing graduates from states like Illinois, where about half of the 1976 class moved out of state. However, officials say some of these young vets may be going through a voluntary internship and eventually will return home.

Dierks says there is an obvious need for veterinarians in every state, but the stumbling block is money

"It costs $40 million to $50 million to start up a plant from scratch, and $5 million to $8 million to maintain it each year. States without a large population base just can't afford the expense," he

Why the incredible interest in the veterinary profession? Dierks believes it's because of "the whole

But now new tests indicate that large amounts of acrylonitrile fed to animals do have certain adverse effects-including loss of weight, growths in the ear and damage to nerves.

The Food and Drug Administration feels that the amount of acrylonitrile a consumer can absorb from soft drinks over a long period of time just might present some risk. So that use of the plastic was stopped. The FDA has also proposed lowering the "migration" limit for non-beverage packages to 20 parts in one billion, and will take final action later this year on all the vegetable oil bottles and margarine tubs and other food containers. This is simply to be extra safe over the very long run, however, and in the meantime the FDA feels it is perfectly all right to go on using the bottles and containers.

$200,000 a year after expenses. Schools are adding about 2,500 veterinarians a year to a work force estimated at 30,000. Of the existing professionals, says West, about 9,300 are in small animal practices, mostly treating pets in Another 9,000 are small-town practitioners with a clientele of pets and farm animals, and 1,800 treat only farm animals. The remainder work for regulatory agencies, the military or schools.

Most colleges have eliminated pre-vet programs. Bryan says Illinois dropped its program three years ago because "too many qualified people were not getting admitted (to the College of Veterinary Medicine) ... and it caused heartaches beyond anything we could cope with.

Tom Rogers, named Illinois Star Farmer of 1977 by the Future Farmers of America, has enrolled in animal science.

'You keep your grades up, cross your fingers and hope for the best," he says. "If I can't get in, I'll still have a useful degree, and I can go back and farm.' One state without a veterinary school is Wisconsin, where dairy farms are a major industry.

Albert Beaver, academic planner for the University of Wisconsin, says that about 400 Wisconsin students are enrolled in some type of preprogram. Their only hope to become veterinarians is to win one of 17 spaces available to Wisconsin residents each year through a reciprocal agreement with the University of Minnesota. 'Students get counseled out' of enrolling, he says.

State officials are considering several options to improve the situation, Beaver says, including paying Minnesota up to $12,000 per student to increase Wisconsin's allotment in the vet school from 17 to 35.

Climber explains what drives him

By WILLIAM SCHIFFMANN

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Towering snow-draped spires of granite act like magnets for the adventurous - drawing men to risk their lives in a duel with tempest and terror to scale the icy tips of the Photographer and author Galen Rowell is such a man. His part in the arduous - and unsuccessful -1975 attempt to climb K2, the world's second tallest peak, has given him rare insight into what makes a man trek to the ends of the earth in pursuit of a costly and often painful sport. "In climbing I seem to reach a mental and physical state that's very satisfying," he said after a moment's thought. "It's something I haven't found in any other way.

Climbing is a combination of distance running and chess, said Rowell, a meld of physical and mental effort leaving body and mind at peace.

Rowell's book on the K2 expedition, "In the Throne Room of the Mountain Gods," was released this spring by the Sierra Club. It details the formation and progress of the band which tried to climb the forbidding 28,250-foot giant of the Karakorum Range - a dizzying effort to surmount a peak a mere 500 feet lower than fabled Everest.

But the book is more than a how-to collection of tips. It digs deeply into the personalities of the climbers - including a woman - and provides a glimpse of the hardships suffered and dedication needed to make such a climb. The mountain got its name in 1856 when Capt. T.G.

Montgomerie sighted the cluster of peaks and named them K1, K2, K3, and so on - K for the Karakorum Range.

There are about 14 peaks that share with K2 the appelation "great mountain" - cliffs that soar over 26,000 feet. They usually are "significantly harder" to climb than lower peaks, Rowell said.

Split between China, Albania getting wider

The Los Angeles Times

ATHENS - China reportedly has been asked to withdraw its advisers and technicians from Albania in the latest chapter of the growing split between the two most steadfastly anti-Soviet Communist states.

The news, which came from "Eastern European diplomats" in Belgrade - usually a convenient label for official Yugoslav information - was denied by the Albanian Embassy there, as could be expected. However, it fit closely into the developing pattern of deteriorating relations between the Communist giant and the tiny Adriatic nation.

Murmurs of discontent between the two countries have been current for some time. They took on urgency with the emergence of a basically conservative Chinese leadership that replaced Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Albania's leader, Enver Hoxha, who shares a record for Communist longevity in power with President Tito in neighboring Yugoslavia, has never deviated from the stern Stalinist line, which was abandoned first by Tito and then by the Russians and their European satellites in the 1950s.

As the split developed between China and Russia, Hoxha sided with the Chinese. The reason was partly ideological, but also practical: Albanians have always said that Hoxha hated Tito because he was so near, they appreciated the Russians because they were a bit father off, but they positively loved the Chinese because they were so far away.

In the struggle that followed Mao's death in China, the Albanians obviously hoped that Mao's widow and her radical colleagues, now referred to as "the Gang of Four," would win out. When they lost, the scene was set for the break between China and Albania.

The first open sign of a break came in a leading article in the Albanian party organ Zeri I Popullit two weeks ago. Without mentioning China by name', it denounced Peking for dealing with the capitalist enemy the United States - in order to gain victory over its Communist rivals, the Soviet Union. The article was translated and distributed around the world. It was the first such attack by the Albanians on China, the country that came to the rescue economically when the Albanians severed their links with post-Stalin Russia.

Relations between Albania and the Soviet Union cooled after Nikita S. Khruschev gained power and established policies seeking coexistence with the West.

According to Hoxha's memoirs, he last saw Khrushchev in Moscow in November, 1960, and had a blistering argument with him. Hoxha accused the Russians of interfering with Albanian affairs and trying to undermine the loyalty of the army.

At one point, Khruschev reportedly shouted, "Comrade, Hoxha, you have poured a bucket of dung over me and you will have to wash it off.

Hoxha would not back off and called the Kremlin leader a traitor to Communist ideology. The split became final in December, 1961, and Albania was barred from the Warsaw Pact in 1962.

China is believed to account for about two-thirds of Albania's trade and has provided aid and advisers since the Soviets pulled out. But the amount of aid has been dwindling

Since Albania is virtually sealed off, little information is available on the number of Chinese still there. The estimates vary from 700 to 2,000, mostly working in army factories, in textile mills and on public works projects. The number was considerably larger in the past when the Chinese were involved in more public works for the Albanians, such as providing the laborers for road building.

There have been recent reports from the Far East that the Albanians were suddenly withdrawing their personnel and students from China.

The growing animosity between Albania and China brings up the question where the Albanians could turn for help if their Oriental benefactors disappear. It is a difficult question to answer because the Albanian leaders are convinced that they are the only true Stalinists left, hence there is nowhere to turn in the Communist world.

One answer could be improved relations with Albania's neighbors. despite a long record of Balkan animosities and antagonisms. One step was taken recently when Albania agreed to open a direct air link with

The Albanians have not yet agreed to a Greek initiative to form a sort of informal Balkan club spanning ideologies and in which these traditionally warring countries would cooperate in economic, touristic and other areas. But given the present tendencies, diplomats here would not rule out their eventual participation.

'Fugitive' from medical averages tells of Mexican Laetrile clinic

By PATT MORRISON The Los Angeles Times

As a child, John Davis used to pray every night for just two things: that the St. Louis Cardinals would win the pennant, and that he would never, ever get leprosy

It took a while, but his prayers were answered

In 1926, when he was 13, the Cards clinched the pennant. And still, to this day, Davis has never contracted leprosy But he will say, with dark and retrospective humor, that it was, perhaps due only to an oversight that he forgot to include in his prayers the worst catastrophe of them all, because now, at the age of 63. John Davis has cancer

John Davis is not his real name. But he wants his story to be known, hoping that someone will profit by it. "I think maybe this (story) is God's will," he reasons, "that I'm the one who's been chosen to help people through the knowledge of what I've been

It is a story of death and medicine, of stubbornness and hope. It is also a story of the highly controversial drug Laetrile, and of the people who

He has always been a working man. and still is, despite the encroaching limitations of the illnesses that have afflicted him for the last quarter cen-

"It has never gotten me down." insists Davis — not the emphysema, the diabetes, the high blood pressure or the peritonitis, or the rare blood disease that causes his body to retain too much iron, so that he once had to be "bled" of a pint a week for almost a year.

A medical museum, his doctor called him - a fugitive from the law of averages. But within the last three years, the averages have begun catching up to Davis. It started in 1974, with bladder cancer, and reappeared two years later as cancer of the colon. Both were removed and, for almost a year, the cancer seemed to have been contain-Then three months ago, during a routine physical exam by one of Davis' four doctors, a small, ominous lump was found in his neck. Cancer again, this time of the lung and lymph glands. This time, inoperable.

"When I asked, 'What is the treatment?' the doctor said there would be Davis explained. "He said he'd follow my progress and when the condition manifests itself to the point where I'm experiencing pain, then he'd start giving me drugs to make it

Such meekness comes not easily to a man like Davis, who has prided himself on his feisty Scot temperament, but, he said helplessly, he had only Hobson's choice - no choice at

And then it occurred to Davis -

The thought came to him neatly packaged, a bottle of 50 Laetrile capsules mailed from an East Coast friend, a man 15 years Davis' senior and "healthy as a damn horse.

But Davis is a self-proclaimed member of the Establishment, forthright and conventional. Three months ago, he would just as soon have used cocaine as Laetrile, the controversial substance largely derived from apricot pits. It is still illegal in most states and is adjudged by the American Medical Assn. -Establishment incarnate — as worse than useless against cancer.

But now Davis had been written off by the medical Establishment he had sworn by for years. Laetrile was about all he had left.

His doctor informed him, with "sneers and smirks," recounted Davis, that "this Laetrile is turning the world crazy; it's turning the asylum over to the inmates.'

'And that," said Davis, "is all the help he could give me. He had heard of "this Laetrile" before, as "just another old wives" But the bottle of Laetrile pills was right there in front of him, on his own kitchen table; the police were not pursuing him for having them, and the logic of desperation prevailed.

"What the hell?" he argued to himself. "What have I got to lose" He began taking the tablets daily and six weeks later, when the supply ran out, he believed he "felt better timism had returned. His mind was made up

"I don't believe Laetrile will necessarily cure it, but it will supposedly make you more com-fortable." Davis recently analyzed his reaction. "I think I will lick it. I've licked everything else

So late last month, Davis took a leave from his job, $1,000 from his bank account and went to Tijuana, Mexico, to the internationally reviled, internationally revered cancer clinic of Dr. Ernesto Contreras, there to stake his life on the healing power of the amber-colored extract of apricot

Tijuana is less a city than a multitude of small worlds in bizarre conjunction each trying hard to ignore the existence of its neighbors.

There is the world of the border merchant made wealthy by tourist dollars, and the world of ragged boys who beg for the gringo nickels. There is the world of the officious government bureaucrat, and the world of the traffickers in dope and the smugglers of human beings.

And there is the disinfectantscented world of the clinics - Centro Medico del Mar and Clinica Cydel - a world created by cancer and maintained by Laetrile, a world that has set whirling around it small satellites - minor industries of restaurants, merchants, drug stores, of motels and transportation.

If what one Laetrile opponent says is true, that Laetrile has simply created "a lot of skunky people getting rich on both sides of the border,' the people who make them rich - the patients - are not loud in their objec-

Along the U.S. side of the border, several motels offer discounts to the clinic's cancer victims. At the front desks, clerks ask delicately if the new guest is a clinic "client.

One motel operates a daily shuttle bus, hauling its patient-guests to the clinic. On their return, they can cook their prescribed Laetrile diet meals in a special kitchen at the motel. The American taxi drivers, who must stop their cabs at the border, are sympathetic and encouraging, used to ferrying patients to the border. "I seen people come here, could barely get in the cab," one confided. "Few weeks later, they feel terrific. Look it too. Same's you'll do. Say, don't letthem Mexican cabbies charge you more'n four bucks to take you to the Laetrile also indirectly supports others, too, who gather daily in front of the Contreras' clinic, the Central Medico del Mar.

It supports the shoeless boys who plead, "Please to wash your car, Senora?" "Lady, lady, you buy my flowers?"

It provides a livelihood for the Mexican taxi drivers, their faces cloaked in dark glasses like South American army colonels, who gather to gossip and to wait for fares.

It feeds the families of the tired women who sell brightly dyed handbags, spurious turquoise, long chains of near-silver hanging from plastic

The temptation is to liken the hawkers to feeders on carrion, who depend, even prey on what the imagination portrays as an endless and pitiful parade of the afflicted making their way to the clinic. But resist the comparison. It is not true

There are the defiantly brave from Maine, from Nebraska, from Australia making believe that this is something of a holiday. They sport gaudy sombreros and huaraches. learn hilariously mispronounced Spanish and buy pinatas and handbags for the folks back home.

There are, as well, a few desperately sick, too ill to heed anything.

But almost all the patients - and they number as many as 200 a day, each here for three weeks of daily treatment - display an aggressive. startling cheerfulness. Ill they may be, even dying, but 'Somebody calls me pitiful," warned one strapping Canadian man, "and I punch him in the mouth. The patients and their relatives - almost no one comes here alone - circulate about the two-story clinic, smiling, smiling, smiling.

They think about the reassuring stories they have heard - of the Texas woman who came in on a stretcher and who now strolls about Tijuana; of the South Carolina couple, the husband had been written off for dead, now on their second honeymoon

Surely, they tell themselves, if it can happen to her, if it can happen to him, it can happen to me. The Centro Medico del Mar sits on what must be one of the most inviting sites in an otherwise grimy city that often horrifies first-time visitors. It is near the beaches, the bullring, the high-priced restaurants, surrounded by new stucco housing developments in soft-washed pastel colors.

So, after a taxi trip through the alien jumble of Tijuana, the newcomer is reassured by the clinic and by the row of Impalas and Caprices and Monarchs parked in front. The cars bear license plates from Colorado, Kansas, Florida, Canada, Montana, California.

On an outside wall of the clinic is a mural: a full-color, muscular and near-naked man grappling with a crab, the symbol of cancer.

Once that lugubrious point is made, it is made no more. The inside of the clinic is cheerful and serene.

A newcomer like Davis is not left long unattended. The other patients, the ones who have been here long enough to know their way around, will see to that.

"Why, we're all friends here, dear," chirped an Illinois woman, linking arms with a newcomer. "We all show each other the ropes. You'll

They do catch on, but until they do, the clinic is for them a study in bizarre extremes, something between a supermarket and a shrine.

There are scattered about, pinned to the walls, bright and cheery sampler-type mottos, aphorisms about life and hope and love. There is, too, the susurrus of adding machines, counting up the cost for a book of six tickets, six days worth of Laetrile shots and fortifying enzyme treatments for somewhere around

There is in the downstaris waiting room an awesome mural, in bright Biblical colors and in flat, unmodulated civic art-style, of the Good Samaritan aiding the fallen wayfarer. There are, too, interminable, frustrating queues, patients waiting for appointments, waiting to pay, waiting for the by-the-numbers treat-

But these patients have waited even longer in doctors' offices before. They have paid even higher medical bills before.

The people are Davis' sort of people, many of them — most of them older, Establishmentarian, churchgoing. The women are in marcelled gray hair and pastel pantsuits, in rhinestone-rimmed eyeglasses and grandmother pins. The men are in leisure suits, in knit shirts whose pockets are adorned with tiny embroidered alligators or crossed golf clubs, in clip-on sunglasses and Masonic pins.

A few patients are obviously wealthy. Palm Beach women and boardroom men whose bearing and attire practically shout brand names: Vuitton, Cartier, Porthault, Hermes.

But the clients for the most part are Middle American, and Middle America is not impoverished. Even in Mexico, the treatments and the threeweek stay cost money.

A Chicago dental lab owner borrowed money from relatives and dipped into his savings to bring his wife here. A Kansas woman has a second mortgage on her home. A recently retired man turned to his wife at the cashier's window and, waving a fan of $100 travelers' checks, remarked wryly, 'Well, Mother, here's our cruise.'

He joined the ranks of the waiting. Some of these people have rejected orthodox cancer therapies, others have exhausted them The clinic staff professes to be properly wary of what patients have been ed to expect from "the treatment." what they have been told in articles in women's magazines, what they have seen in the weekly tabloid press, what they have noticed in health store treatises.

The forms patients must sign to receive Laetrile treatment are cautious, warning, in part: "I am aware of possible toxic effects of some of the therapies and at no time have the doctors made any promise of cure or guarantee of satisfactory results....I have confidence in them and know that they will do their best to try to help me. That is all I expect from them."

By ROBERT SHOGAN The Los Angles Times

WASHINGTON - "The Republican Party has always had plenty of money. The Democratic Party has always been broke." Addressing Democratic fund raisers last April, Jimmy Carter was just reminding them of a fact of political life. But it is a fact that the President, with one eye on the 1980 campaign, is determined to change.

At Carter's direction his debtridden party has embarked on an ambitious and potentially controversial program to raise $20 million during the next four years. Principal targets for the drive are businessmen, a traditionally Republican constituency, most of whose members have particularly shunned the Democrats during the past decade. "Let's call it a very high class affirmative active program," wisecracked Mark Siegel, former executive director of the Democratic National Committee, and now a deputy to Hamilton Jordan, Carter's top political strategist

If the fund raising scheme succeeds, it could not only alter the dismal Democratic financial condition, but also tip the party's ideological balance some distance to the right, where the President

But the appeal to business could cause criticism. The plan risks raising the hackles of party liberals already suspicious of the self-styled populist-farmer-businessman who has inherited the mantle of FDR, Truman, Kennedy and Johnson. Yankee brass tells Billy to shape up

NEW YORK (AP) - Billy Martin's managerial fate with the New York Yankees rests on how he stacks up against team President Gabe Paul's

Seven Commandments. In an air-clearing session Monday night in Yankees owner George Steinbrenner's office. Steinbrenner provided for the media the gospel on good managing according to Paul:

—The team's won-loss record. -Does the manager work hard

-Is he emotionally equiped to lead the men under him? -Is he organized?

-Does he understand human nature? —Is he honorable?

Paul said a manager has to meet all seven criteria to keep his seat in the dugout, but refused to comment on whether Martin had sinned

"I'm not discussing it," Paul said, adding that he's constantly assessing Martin's job performance

Paul's opinion on managerial ability becomes particularly important because Steinbrenner charged him with the sole discretion whether to fire or keep Martin

Stanton cager in strange role

By TERRY WILLIAMSON R-T Sports Writer

DALLAS - Stanton's Tim Glynn, who virtually ruled District 5-A basketball opponents at a height of 6foot-2, has found himself in the valley of the giants here this week as the North-South High School All-Star game nears its 33rd annual showdown Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Dallas Civic Center Arena.

Glynn poured in an average of 25 points a game while playing for the Buffs in his senior year, but he doesn't figure to match that total here Wednesday when the state's top college prospects knock heads in the show game for the Texas High School Coaches Association

"I was kind of a stud in Stanton," Glynn revealed Monday during a dinner break before an afternoon workout session. "I played underneath at Stanton, and did pretty much as I wanted. But here I just can't jump with this crew. This is a different game altogether.'

Actually Glynn may be better than he gives himself credit for He got sick during the first workout and lost a lot of his strength.

We had waffles before the first workout, and I kinda lost them," Glynn said. "I think I'm all right now.

Salvino wins pin title

HOUSTON (AP) - Carmen Salvino of Chicago won his 16th career Professional Bowler's Association title Monday night as he defeated Tommy Hudson by five pins to take the $6,000 first prize in the $60,000 Houston Open.

Hudson entered the final game with a 50-pin lead over the 43-year-old Salvino. But Salvino took advantage of two open frames by Hudson to record a 221-196 victory and pick up an additional 30 bonus pins.

Hudson needed only a spare in the 10th frame to record his fourth triumph this year and seventh of his five-year career. Hudson left the 1-2-4-7 pins on his first ball and got only the 24-7 on his spare attempt.

but that first day wasn't much fun." North cage coach Kenneth Cleveland of Dimmitt said, "Tim may be a little behind the rest of the squad at this point since he was sick, but I expect him to help us Wednesday night. "I know one thing," Glynn said. 'There is a lot of talent here, and I think we will win. Everyone is working hard." The way Cleveland and South coach Boyce Honea of Milby see the North-

South matchup is a game between leapers and shooters Cleveland's Yankees own the leapers while the Rebels have the shooters. 'We expect to get guard play in order to win." Cleveland said Monday. "The wingmen (forwards) can shoot pretty good, but our strength comes from the guards. Mike Johnson of Borger, Danielche Johnson of Tyler Lee and Robert Culley of Center are the top guards. At forward Arlington's Ralph Me-Pherson, who averaged 24.2 points a game and stands at 6-7, is one of the bright spots for the North McPherson is headed for Texas Tech this fall. Vernon Smith, who is 6-6 and headed for Texas A&M, will also be at forward with Glynn filling in a relief

Culley is the biggest scorer on either team with a 30.6 average.

Honea's offense will revolve around Notre Dame bound Gilbert Salinas, one of the top 10 recruiting prospects in the nation this spring. Salinas will be at the high post with his 21 point scoring average, a mark achieved at San Antonio Burbank.

We will try to get the ball to Salinas and let him use his height to pass to the open man. He has got to be the best passer ever to hit the basketball court," Honea said. "It sure doesn't hurt that he is a good shooter too.

Salinas will have 6-7 Charles Moore as a target at the low post and 6-5 Chuck O'Neall at a forward. The screens and rolls will come from guards Russell Coffey of Kountze, a 30 point per game average, and Randy Richards of Sharpstown.

As far as the North is concerned, Salinas seems to be the man to stop. The game may ride on how well the North can handle the man with the most fame in the game.

said after the Yankees' game with the Kansas City Royals had been rained out. "It's totally his decision. But there's nothing imminent in the matter. Based on the reasons Steinbrenner called the press to his office, Martin could be found failing in a couple of the criteria. "I want to clear the air," Steinbrenner said. "I'm not out to get Billy Martin. That's a lot of crap. It's a copout. And it's not even a new copout. Steinbrenner was annoyed with Martin's comments which followed weekend rumors that Martin was going to be fired from his fourth managerial job in eight years. "Sure I'm displeased with the remarks. They're just not factual," Steinbrenner said. "Certain things have been said that just aren't so." The Yankee owner referred specifically to Martin's account of a locker room shouting match between the two during spring training and the reasons for the argument. He also disputed Martin's contention that Steinbrenner called and apologized after the incident. Steinbrenner said he could see history repeating itself in Martin's anti-management position, a stance that led to his downfall at Minnesota, Detroit and Texas. "His statements have been misleading," the owner said. "He's saying 'They're making a martyr out of me.' Well, look at the history. It's happened three times before.

'I'm tired with all his self-serving statements. I don't want to be part of making a martyr out of Billy Martin. He's got the best material in the American League. The manager's job is to motivate and make his players perform.

And the Yankees, champions on paper, haven't been performing to their capabilities, finding themselves today in third place in the AL East.

"I thought it was beautiful when (Cincinnati Manager) Sparky Anderson blamed his team's failures on the manager," Steinbrenner said "How the team performs is the only yardstick you have."

CHARLESTON, W.V. - For the second straight day, Midland's Vicki Vasicek went down to defeat in the Girls 16 National Clay Court Tennis Championships being held here at the Charleston Tennis Club. The Tall City lass was beaten by Tinley Stewart of Ft. Lewis, Wash., 6-1, 6-3, in the first round of consolation singles play.

Vasicek was knocked out of championship singles contention Sunday, when Kathy Denton of Nashville, Tenn., beat here in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3.

Rain fell on the city most of the day Monday, and all championship singles matches were postponed until Vasicek, the 16-year-old state semifinalist from Midland High, will team up with Mara Santori of Mayaguez, Puerto Rico today in doubles competition. Their first round opponents will be Judy Blank of New Hyde Park, N.Y., and Ellen Newfield of Jackson Heights, N.Y.

Bellard not making any predictions in SWC

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

DALLAS - In 1975, the Texas A&M Aggies lost the Southwest Conference championship on the last weekend of the season, and in 1976, the Ags were virtually out of it after the first two conference games. The question being asked in 1977 is what will A&M do for an encore?

Many think that the Aggies have the material to win the whole thing this fall, and end up in the Cotton Bowl on Jan. 1. Emory Bellard, head coach of the Aggies, who is here this week for the Texas coaches convention, is saying yes and no in the same breath. The Aggies return the same offensive team that led the SWC in rushing offense and scoring. Senior lefty David Walker returns at quarterback after a bang up year in 1976, along with sophomore halfback Curtis Dickey and gorilla fullback George Woodard. It's what they call fire power. A&M's artillery corps could hardly lay down a more effective barrage on a fall Saturday afternoon.

The defense may be the trouble area where some key people were lost, most namely All-America linebacker Alfred Jackson.

"I think we will have a good football team that will compete for the title," Bellard says. "But there are others that will have good teams. We have confidence in our unit, but we just don't know at what point we will become a good defensive team, and that's what worries us at the spring training when former Andrews star Gerald Galloway broke a leg. The sophomore tackle figured heavily into the plans of Bellard. "Gerald had a good spring, and he has the potential to be a fine athlete."

THE AGGIES got a bad break in Bellard said. "But I don't think he can

Walker returning at quarterback. Walker was cast as a starter as a 16year-old freshman, and took a bad rap as a sophomore when he failed to lead the Aggies to the title in a game against Arkansas in 1975. He was just short of great in the Wishbone in 1976, and Bellard says that maturity has

The only trouble here is that the Aggles will have to rely on a freshman quarterback as a backup to Walker. Either Mike Mosley, who is starting for the South in the All-Star game here, David Beal or Reagan County's Jennings Teel will earn that honor. Mosley has the edge at this point, but Bellard like Teel, who is big and fast and capable of running the Aggie Wishbone.

'I certainly hope that Walker doesn't get hurt because that would force us to groom one of the freshman for the job," Bellard stated candidly. "I think Walker found out what kind of pressure there is while starting as a BELLARD ALSO feels that Dickey and Woodard can be better than a year ago, and that could spell plenty of trouble for Aggie opponents.

"Neither is the type of athlete to rest on past performances." Bellard noted, "Dickey had a groin problem last year and never did run what I would call loose. He did this spring, and he's going to be better, and we have him for three more seasons."

Woodard, only, a junior, will be around for another SWC session after this year. Annually at this time, the guessing game starts on what weight this monster fullback will report at. Bellard has just quit worrying about

"I've seen him play well at 245 pounds, and I've seen him play well at 260," Bellard mused: "I know he will be bigger than 245 when he reports. I've just quit worrying about it because he will be ready to play when we line up. We'll just run the dog out of him when he reports and give him the football. Don't worry about ol'

BELLARD ALSO says that former Midland High linebacker James Zachery will see a lot of action this fall. Zachery is not listed as a starter, but Bellard says that the linebacking corps is inexperienced, and the job is there for the taking. Zachery is only a

'James is the only scholarship player that we have that is in the Corps at A&M," Bellard noted. "He is a unique individual and he can handle that type of situation. I'm sure he has to place some personal priorities to do this, but I have never tried to keep any of my players from being in the Corps. The Corps is what built A&M."

A&M also has field goal kicker supreme Tony Franklin returning, and Bellard says that his only problem with Tony will be trying to get him to work on extra points and short field goals. "He likes to toe those long ones," Bellard said.

One writer asked Bellard when the decision comes to try for the field goal or punt with Franklin there waiting on the bench. Bellard calmly replied, 'About two years from now. He can toe it up any time he wants to."

THE AGGIES also seem to be tough for about two years, at least. That is if they don't find another way to blow it

Last year against Texas Tech, the Aggies fell 21 points behind in the first quarter and never caught up. That game still sticks in the craw of Bellard. "W're going to have a cussing match with Tech in Lubbock this year," said Bellard. "Wenty-one points is hard to catch up to."

Whether Bellard likes it or not, the Aggies have a lot to catch up to in order to prove what looks like Fool me once, shame on me; fool me twice...

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Once upon a time, there lived an upand-coming young television executive. His name was Bobby Wussler. Ever since he was a young boy, Bobby had known what he wanted to be when he grew up. So did his parents. I mean, how many other seven-year-olds walk around the house in business suits with an El Producto sticking out of the corner of their mouth, and shouting obscenities like "mid-season replacement," and
"50-share?"

Little Bobby studied very hard in school, and after graduating from college cum laude, he hired on with one of the televisiom biggies, CBS.

Now Bobby had to start out at the bottom, you understand — as a mailroom clerk. But being exceptionally bright, it didn't take him long to impress the people upstairs, and move right up the ladder, one step at a time.

Before he knew it, CBS made Bobby a vice-president of sports at the network, and told him to keep up the good work. Naturally, the first thing Bobby did after he was promoted was change his name to Robert, because no big-time TV executive is called Bobby.

Some years passed after that, and Bobby, er I mean Robert was still vice-president. The promotions had ceased, and there was talk that the mailroom was looking for has-been vice-presidents. Robert was worried. But then, a fellow by the name of George Liddy came to him and had this great idea for "winner-take-all" tennis challenge matches between some of the best players in the world. At least they would ADVERTISE them as winner-take-all. In reality, there would be an agreed-upon split beforehand. But the public didn't have to know that. You know how gullible they are.

THEY SHOOK on it (And signed some papers. TV executives always sign papers. It's part of their image), and the ball started rolling — or bouncing. The first winner-take-all match pitted Jimmy Connors against Rod Laver. Jimbo won that one, and received $100,000 for his day's work. Laver, the loser who the public thought was getting absolutely nothing, pocketed a nothing check for $60,000.

Liddy bowed out as promoter after that first match, but Bill Riordon. Connors' manager at the time, knew a good thing when he saw it, and stepped in as his replacement.

Riordan was never one to think small, and the purses — as well as the TV rights — for the next two challenge matches, which pitted Jimbo against first, Manuel Orantes, and then. John Newcombe, skyrocketed. CBS, which had paid just $60,000 for the broadcast rights to $650,000 for each of the next two "Heavyweight Championship" matches.

AFTER THE third match, the CBS heads had seen enough. If Wussler could help fool the entire American sporting public like this, they thought, he damn well deserved another promotion. Let's see if he can fool the entire public — not just those interested in sports, they said. So they made him president of the network. Good bye mailroom.

The challenge matches continued, and they almost got away with this con job—except for the undercover work of two New York City newspapermen. Two months ago, John Kennedy, a realtor from Staten Island, N.Y., who writes a free-lance column on the side for the Staten Island Register, was hanging around the courthouse — as he often does, and happened upon some court papers in a suit filed by Riordan against Connors in United States District Court in New York City

It seems that Riordan had been seeking 15 per cent commission from all of the revenues from five contracts he had negotiated for Connors. Connors filed a counter-suit asking, among other things, for a full accounting of all of the revenue from his challenge match with Orantes. Included among the papers was an agreement signed by both Connors and Riordan, which set forth the terms and conditions for Connors' 1976 and 1977 challenge matches, and it was quite obvious from the agreement, that they weren't winner-take-all.

Kennedy wrote the truth of the matter in his column the next day, and at the same time, Neil Amdur, a friend of mine who is a sports writer for the New York Times, learned independently from a source at the network, about the actual financial terms of the last winner-take-all match between Connors and Ille Nastase. Suddenly, the secret wasn't a secret any longer.

THE OBVIOUS question I keep asking myself about this whole mess is why? Why in the hell did CBS and the promoters feel the need to sell this whole scam to us as "winner-takeall," if it indeed, really wasn't? What was the reason behind it all? How many more viewers do they think actually tuned in at home because they thought one guy was going to go home broke?

It's almost as if the only reason they did it was to see if they could actually get away with something so ridiculous. It didn't make anybody any the more richer. It just made millions of Americans look very gullible—and very stupid, myself includ-

In this month's issue of World Tennis. Wussler was quoted as saying, "I don't think it makes one bit of difference to the viewer whether it's winner-take-all or the purse is split like a prize fight. I think the public just wants to see the top players in a meaningul match."

Whether or not you think those socalled "Heavyweight Championship" matches were meaningful is up to your own discretion I guess. I thought they were absolutely worthless. As far as I'm concerned, a "meaningful" match is when two players battle through four, five or six rounds of good, hard tennis, and then meet each other in the final of a tournament.

That's meaningful.

But you're right Bobby, er I mean Robert. It doesn't make one damn bit of difference to the viewer whether it's winner-take-all or not. But it does make a difference when they're told it is, and in fact, it isn't. Then it makes a lot of difference. Because then, you're lying to the public, and that's a no-no in our society.

"It's gypping the public," said Harold Solomon, one of the pro circuit's leading performers. "I guess you could look at it as a form of consumer fraud. I don't know what the legal ramifications are, but I think it's bad for tennis."

Right you are, Harold talking anymore than a mouthpiece does when he fights. Few questions were asked. Ali just didn't allow enough openings as he alternately praised and put down Shavers, philosophised and harrangued in a news-conference style which has become as much of a reflex as a hook off of a jab.

Ali will get a reported $3 million plus expenses for the defense against the explosive-hitting Shavers, who will supposedly earn $300,000. "I'm not gonna call him anything," said Ali, who likes to hang a tag on opponents, such as "The Bear" for Sonny Liston, "The Gorilla" for Joe Frazier and "The Mummy" for George Foreman. "I'm gonna take this fight seriously."

But Ali, sitting with a few people about 15 minutes before the news conference began, was already talking about his asking price for fighting the winner of the Nov. 5 Ken Norton-Jimmy Young fight in Las Vegas—$12 million.

"They'll have to meet my price." said the highest-priced athlete in history. "I've already beaten them both and I can't add to my greatness as a fighter.

But although he won title defenses gainst Young and Norton, Ali realizes fully the lucrative financial aspects stemming from the controversy surrounding both fights.

There's no doubt he realizes the ability of both.

"I have no reason to take a risky fight if they don't pay me right," said Ali, who never has understimated his drawing power. "The winner of that fight (Norton-Young) will make $2 million against me.

"I'll fight as long as I can make $5 million fighting guys like you." he said looking at a definite non-fighter. "If they (Norton-Young) don't fight me, they won't make $12 million the rest of their lives."

But the possible "gold mine" fight against Norton or Young hasn't blinded the champion from the task of selling the Shavers fight which will be televised live by NBC, with no blackout of the New York metropolitan area.

inks new pact By The Associated Press O.J. Simpson may not be looking forward to

Patriot coach

O.J. Simpson may not be looking forward to another winter in Buffalo, but Chuck Fairbanks is ready for another in Foxboro, Mass...and another, and another....

Fairbanks had three years remaining on his original eight-year contract with the New England Patriots and signed a new long-term contract with the National Football League team Monday.

Club President William H. Sullivan announced the agreement Monday, saying the contract calls for a pay raise and retains Fairbanks as general manager. No other details were announced. "I haven't got my New England accent down yet, but if I stick around longer, maybe I'll get it down, said Fairbanks.

The 44-year-old Fairbanks joined the Patroits in 1973 after six seasons at the University of Oklahoma. He has piloted New England to a four-year record of 26-30. Last season the club had its best record ever, 11-3, and advanced to the playoffs for the first time in 13 years.

In Buffalo, meanwhile, Simpson made it clear to the Bills that he is upset over the team's trade of center Mike Montler and the inability of the club to strengthen itself.

"It's frustrating. There's no straighter way to say it. I've always worked hard and always played hard.

But you can only do so much, 'Simpson said.

"We're rebuilding all over again. If we still had Earl Edwards, Pat Toomay, Ahmad Rashad,
J.D.Hill and Mike Montler, I think we'd be a caliber team," said Simpson.

The Bills continued housecleaning by placing former All-Pro cornerback Robert James on waivers at his request.

James, who missed the past two seasons, failed the team physical this season. Meanwhile. Buffalo announced that offensive tackle Donnie Green, who lost his starting job to Joe Devlin late last year, had walked out of training camp for unknown reasons.

Cincinnati Bengals Coach Bill Johnson said twotime Heisman Trophy winner Archie Griffin would see more action this season.

"Maybe we made a mistake the first half of the season. Had he played the entire season, I'm sure he would have gained 1,000 yards," said Johnson, referring to the celebrated running back.

Griffin, the former Ohio State star, gained 625 yards as a part-time performer and turned in a 77-yard touchdown run against Kansas City, the longest of the season in the American Football Conference.

New Orleans Coach Hank Stram announced he was not going to trade his next No. 1 draft choice—not even to get an All-Pro defensive back. Stram said he wouldn't swap a first-round draft choice for Mel Blount, the Pittsburgh star who has filed a $5 million slander suit against Steelers' Coach Chuck Noll. Blount claims he was damaged by court testimony

Blount claims he was damaged by court testimony in which Noll said Blount sometimes could be considered part of the "criminal element" of the NFL.

"I'm sure a player of his caliber would be worth a second-round draft pick," Stram said "But I wouldn't be too suprised if Blount winds up with the Steelers despite all that's happened."

'Bird' placed on disabled list

DETROIT (AP) — Mark Fidrych, the Detroit Tigers's ailing pitching star, has been placed on the 21-day disabled list to give his sore right arm time to heal.

The Tigers made the announcement Monday after "The Bird" tested his right arm in the bullpen and said it still hurt every time he took a pitch.

"The hurt is still there. What more can I say?"
Fidrych said after lobbing about 10 throws to bullpen
Coach Jim Hegan.

"Same pain, same location, same everything. It hurt every time I threw. And I was just tossing the ball soft. If I had corked up, it would have killed me." Team physicians last week diagnosed Fidrych's condition as tendinitis. The Tigers said the 21-day disability status was retroactive to July 20, putting Fidrych out of action at least until Aug. 9.

"The way I look at it, it was just time for my arm to go," Fidrych said. "Maybe I didn't get enough rest and maybe my arm was a little tired, but I don't, think so. I just think my time had come."

The Tigers are 11½ games out of first place in the American League East with a 44-52 record. However, they moved into fourth place Monday night, one per centage point ahead of Cleveland.

Tigers Manager Ralph Houk said. "Even if we hadn't placed him on the disabled list, there was no way we could expect him to come back and pitch much before Aug. 10.

RAILROAD COMMISSION OF TEXAS GAS UTILITIES DIVISION Re: Application of Lo-Vaca Gathering

Company and Coastal States Gas Producing Company For a Review and Revision of Prices and Rates Docket No. 500 In Their Existing Agreements STATEMENT OF INTENT BY LO-VACA GATHERING

COMPANY AND COASTAL STATES GAS PRODUCING COMPANY TO CHANGE RATES TO THE HONORABLE RAILROAD COMMISSION

Lo-Vaca Gathering Company ("Lo-Vaca") and Coastal States Gas Producing Company ("Coastal"), pursuant to the requirements of Section 43(a) of the Public Utility Regulatory Act (1446c, T.R.C.S), files this statement of intent to change rates, effective September 1, 1977, the rates they are charging all customers on the Lo-Vaca system for the purchase of natural gas to a uniform rate applicable to each customer on the system, which rate consists of 100% of Lo-Vaca's weighted average cost of gas plus 16.70 cents per Mcf. The cost of gas is to be adjusted each month in accordance with Lo-Vaca's billing procedure, which is Lo-Vaca Exhibit KLH #515, filed with the Railroad Commission of Texas ("Commission") in Gas Utilities Docket No. 500 on June 13, 1977.

The present rate charged by Lo-Vaca for the sale of natural gas to nearly all Texas customers is 100% of Lo-Vaca's weighted average cost of gas (determined in accordance with the billing procedure set forth in Lo-Vaca Exhibit WKA #17 in Gas Utilities Docket No. 500) plus 5

The new rate is anticipated to increase Lo-Vaca's revenues by $60,196,106 in calendar year 1978. This is an increase of 5.61% over total revenues which would have been received if the present rate were continued in effect for that year.

Americans shine in Deaf Olympics

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) American athletes have wrapped up a second consecutive team title at the World Games for the Deaf, winning a record 105 medals-38 gold-to outclass the Soviet Union

The Russians, who were first beaten by the Americans at the 1973 Deaf Olympics, had to settle for second place again with 27 gold medals, 15 silver and 22 bronze going into today's final events, where they can pick up a couple of more bronze.

The Americans finished the 10-day. 32-nation competition Monday by winning three more gold medals in track and field

Twenty of the titles were won by two American teenagers who are candidates for the 1980 Olympics in Moscow.

Jeffrey Float, 17, of Sacramento, Calif., and Laura Barber, 14, of Allison Park, Pa., each won eight individual races and swam two relays in a record-setting spree at Dinamo outdoor pool.

The U.S. basketball team won the gold medal by whipping six opponents and maintaining America's undefeated record dating back to 1957 when the sport was added to the Deaf Olympics agenda.

U.S. Coach Bob Getchell, athletic director at Hofstra University, said careful selection and preparation of the team made the difference in the team standings. "Our team | was probably better prepared than the other entries," he said. 'Many of our athletes benefitted from a three-week training camp just won in 1973 at Malmo, Sweden. 'That competition for the team championship against the Soviets went right down to the final day. But here we had it wrapped up two days before our final events," Getchell
