Jaworski takes formal command of Korea probe

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski took command of the House investigation into alleged South Korean influence-buying today and said no one should jump to conclusions about the case.

Jaworski urged great caution to avoid creating the impression "that this is a holocaust of some kind and then get into it and find it isn't that at all, that there has been wrongdoing, perchance, but that it's not as widespread as had been originally thought."

Jaworski talked to reporters briefly as he arrived on Capitol Hill to personally take charge of the House ethics committee's investigation.

"I don't like to see any institution of government labeled as not trustworthy or many of the individuals involved in that institution as not trustworthy until we know what the facts are," Jaworski said.

"And this jumping to conclusions really bothers me," he said.

Jaworski said the first thing he planned to do was get a briefing from the special staff conducting the House probe.

He said it is impossible to predict how soon the investigation can be completed because "we don't know what problems we may run into."

"Haste will come second," he said. "Thoroughness will come first."

"I have a feeling it's not going to be a simple task," he said. "It's one of ferreting out the facts and searching for the truth and you never know what you're going to run into, what roadblocks there may be."

Jaworski said he expects public hearings but he said some testimony may be taken by the House committee in closed session to avoid public "accusations made by innuendo."

"We want to make certain we don't in any wise do harm to anyone who may be innocent," he said.

Although Jaworski declined to say when he hoped to complete the probe, associates said he hoped the task can be completed by early next year.

The House ethics committee will receive recommendations from Jaworski and in turn recommend to the full House possible punishment for present or former congressmen.

With Congress out of town for a month-long recess, the only other scheduled activity this week is a House merchant marine subcommittee hearing set for Wednesday on the Panama Canal agreement worked out by President Carter's negotiating team.

Accidents kill two Midlanders

A 14-year-old Midland girl and a 47-year-old Midland man were killed in separate traffic accidents over the weekend.

Rhonda Carol Wishert of 4317 Roosevelt died Sunday afternoon from injuries she received when a motorcycle she was riding and a car collided at the intersection of Kansas and McDonald Streets about 6 p.m.

According to police reports, the motorcycle, driven by Mitchell Cary Whitley, 18, of Midland Mobile Park, No. 89, was northbound on McDonald Street, and a car driven by Curtis Scott Lemons, 17, of 4321 Harlowe Drive was westbound on Kansas Street when the two vehicles collided.

Whitley was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Police said investigation of the mishap is continuing.

In the second accident, H. O. Walker of 606 S. Colorado St. was killed in a one-car accident about 2 a.m. Sunday on Texas 349 south of Midland near the Upton County line.

According to a Department of Public Safety spokesman, Walker died after he was thrown from his car in the accident.

Walker's car was apparently traveling at a high rate of speed when it left the highway on the east side and skidded 888 feet. The car then returned to the highway and skidded 175 feet before leaving the road once more, the spokesman said.

The car continued to skid, this time 92 feet into a barbed wire fence. The car then slid 163 feet into a pasture before overturning one time, the spokesman said.

Walker was thrown 53 feet from the vehicle, according to reports.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine pronounced Walker dead at the scene about 8:40 a.m., shortly after the accident was discovered.

Lance gets vote of confidence

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter says he has confidence in Budget Director Bert Lance but knows Lance will quit if government investigators prove there are any improprieties in his financial dealings.

The President's statement was his first expression of personal confidence in Lance since the Treasury Department, under the authority of the comptroller of the currency, began investigating loans Carter's longtime friend obtained when he was a Georgia banker.

Carter spoke in an interview with ABC News that was broadcast Sunday night. He was questioned Wednesday, at the end of a five-day visit to his hometown of Plains, Ga. Since Wednesday, there have been reports that the comptroller has broadened his investigation.

The New York Times said Saturday that investigators for Comptroller

John Heimann are searching the records for about 20 additional loans which might have been extended to Mrs. Lance, as well as other family members and business entities.

In a story Sunday, the Times said "a potentially embarrassing agreement" between Lance and Robert Bloom, acting comptroller before Heimann took office, was rescinded the day before Carter nominated Lance to be budget director.

Under the agreement, signed Dec. 2, 1975, Lance pledged to correct a number of serious management deficiencies at his Calhoun First National Bank in Georgia, some of which violated the law, the Times said.

The newspaper said today that special Internal Revenue Service agents are investigating the handling of Lance's banking affairs by officials of the comptroller's office. The IRS would neither confirm nor deny that report, attributed to administration sources.

Specifically, the Times said, the IRS agents are investigating whether Bloom proceeded properly in giving Lance a clean bill of health in a letter to the Senate committee considering his nomination.

The agents also are reviewing how examiners supervised the Georgia banks with which Lance was associated before taking office, the paper said.

An administration official conceded Saturday that Carter was paying a political price for the investigations. "Certainly it's politically difficult for us," said the official, privy to the President's thinking. He declined to be identified.

Asked whether Lance might quit, the official added:

"I would expect he would not, and everyone would hope that he would not take any sort of action like that."

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve said Sunday it was making 195 stocks traded over the counter, including those of another Lance bank, the National Bank of Georgia, subject to its reserve requirements. Lance headed the bank before joining the administration.

Carriers said in cahoots against new competitor

DALLAS (AP) — The feud among three Texas-based airlines warmed Sunday when a report by the Justice Department surfaced, alleging that Braniff International and Texas International airlines worked together to thwart competition by Southwest Airlines.

The report claimed the two interstate carriers exchanged business secrets and ordered employees not to cooperate with the intrastate Southwest Airlines.

Cited in the report were internal company memos and grand jury testimony that had been secret.

That grand jury testimony was made in 1975, after an antitrust indictment charged that Braniff and TI conspired to restrain trade at a time when Southwest was just getting off the ground. The indictment was dismissed on procedural grounds.

A new grand jury is presently investigating the case.

Both Braniff and TI have denied any wrongdoing in the matter.

Southwest was organized in 1967, but court cases kept the airline on the ground until 1971, when a Supreme Court ruling allowed it to begin service.

Once service began, the report said, Braniff and TI mapped strategies that included close monitoring of Southwest ticketing operations. The report said the goal was to see if Southwest was violating Civil Aeronautics Board rules by carrying passengers making interstate flight connections.

The report also quotes a memo in which Jim Street, Braniff director of passenger and cargo services, told his employees, "If one of our Rocket flights incurs a delay, we will not under any circumstances refer any of our stranded or delayed passengers to Southwest."

"We will supply no information, loan no equipment nor in any way accommodate or assist Southwest Airlines."

The report also states that a TI

executive tried to influence officeholders to appoint persons sympathetic to Braniff and TI to the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

More IRA attacks feared

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army is expected to escalate its attacks on British troops in an attempt to compensate for its failure to disrupt Queen Elizabeth's visit to Northern Ireland last week.

"Operation Monarch," the massive security operation during the royal visit, bottled the guerrillas of the IRA's Provisional wing up in the Roman Catholic areas that are their strongholds and forced them to limit their attacks to those areas.

However, the British cannot maintain that kind of round-the-clock pressure for long.

Sympathy for the Provisionals among the Catholics has waned in the last year, but they still maintain a hard core of deep-rooted support. British intelligence sources admit this is all the guerrillas need to continue their hit-and-run war.

"We know that militarily we can't win this war," said one Provisional officer. "But the Brits know they can't win either, so this thing will go on until the Brits finally get exhausted and agree to get out."

"Every Brit soldier that we shoot takes the Brits that much closer to the point of exhaustion."

President says Ford foreign policy pursued

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said today his administration's foreign policy was continuing the work begun by the Ford administration in Southern Africa, the Middle East, China and Panama.

Carter, who was strongly critical of the Ford administration's foreign policy during last year's presidential campaign, told its architect, former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, that he had spoken with former President Gerald R. Ford earlier in the day.

"We've got obviously just an absolute continuum of what you and he started that we're trying to proceed with," Carter told Kissinger.

"I've always believed that foreign policy is a bipartisan enterprise," Kissinger said at the start of a luncheon meeting.

"So do I," Carter told the former secretary.

Among the topics the two were likely to discuss were meetings Carter will have next month with the foreign ministers of Israel and at least four Arab nations to build on what the administration calls "continuing momentum" toward a Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

The President and Kissinger were also likely to discuss what Carter concedes are "major differences between Arabs and Israelis."

Another probable item for discussion was the new Panama Canal agreement, which Carter and Kissinger have talked about on the telephone within the past week. The President would like support for Senate ratification from the former secretary, whom he criticized during last year's presidential campaign for being a "lone ranger" in foreign policy.

The pact faces stiff opposition. Acknowledging that the agreement "is a tough political question," Carter wrote to all members of Congress on Friday for the second time in a week saying: "I need your help." The White House made his letter public on Saturday.

At the September talks on the Middle East, the foreign minister of Lebanon might join his counterparts from Syria, Jordan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia in their parade to see the President and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. The Middle East ministers will be attending the United Nations General Assembly that month.

Still to be worked out are dates for the meetings and whether they will be in Washington or New York.

Bell fascinates youth at oldsters' gathering

CRANE — Alan Martin admiringly was running his hands over the "Freedom Bell."

"I know the man that did this," the 10-year-old lad said of the bronze bell. "He said the first one he made cracked."

So did the original, the ol' Liberty Bell.

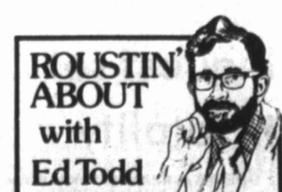

The man that "did this" — cast the bell — was P. O. "Slim" Vines, an old-time Crane cowhand, oilpatch worker and, today, sculptor.

Alan was over at the Crane County 4-H Club Exhibition Building for the old-settlers' get-together Saturday afternoon. It came on the occasion of Crane's 50th year, its Golden Jubilee.

He wasn't much out of place. Youngsters never are when old folks are around. They seem to enjoy each other.

Anyway, there was home-made ice cream to be passed out. And what kid wouldn't run a mile for a dish?

Upfront, on the stage in the exhibition building, was Vines, quite unaware that his hand-cast bell was admired so. With scraps of bronze donated by the local folks, he cast the bell for Crane and for the Bicentennial in 1976.

It was his job to put the show together for the old-timers. Vines made announcements and the such.

There was a lot of talking going on among the grown folks. The youngsters, as usual, were playing.

Most everybody knew everybody else.

Rain chance improves

Mother Nature is still toying with area residents' hopes for rain, but chances of rain in the next 24 hours look better than they have for the past few days.

The weatherman is predicting a 40 per cent chance of rain tonight and a 20 per cent chance for Tuesday.

Sunday, only a trace was recorded by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

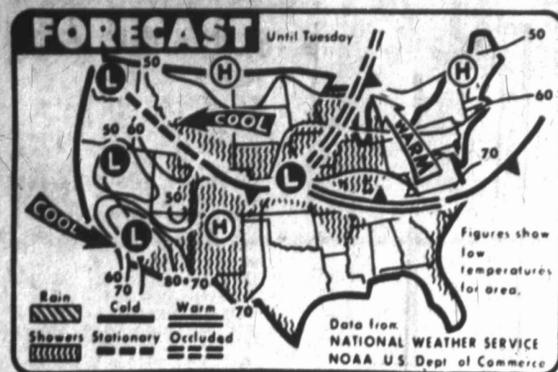

Skies are expected to be partly cloudy through Tuesday, with a low tonight in the upper 60s and a high Tuesday in the mid-90s. Winds are expected to be from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

This morning's low was 71 degrees and Sunday's high was 95 degrees.

It was almost nippy this morning at sunrise as temperatures in some areas cities were reported below 70 degrees. But a sunny warming trend was quickly noticed after sunrise in Lamesa, Andrews, Big Lake, Odessa, Stanton, Rankin and Crane.

Thunderstorms were expected to roam the state again today after widely scattered thunderstorms and (Continued on Page 2A)

Emperor sets AP man free

NICE, France (AP) — Associated Press reporter Michael Goldsmith has been released after being held for a month by Emperor Bokassa I of the Central African Empire.

Goldsmith arrived in Nice this morning for a brief reunion with his wife, Roxanne. He planned to fly to London this afternoon to see his mother, who is seriously ill.

The 55-year-old journalist declined to comment immediately on his arrest and confinement but said he was "in good health now" despite a history of heart trouble.

Goldsmith, a British citizen assigned to The AP office in Paris, went to Bangui, the capital of Bokassa's landlocked nation, on July 11 for a four-day stay. He was detained July 14, along with Washington Post reporter Jonathan Randall, after filing a story on the emperor and his plans for a coronation Dec. 4.

WARM GREETINGS were exchanged Sunday afternoon as 82 Boy Scouts and adult leaders from West Texas returned to Midland from the Scouts' National Jamboree at Moraine State Park, Pennsylvania. Their return marked the end of a three-week excursion by the Scouts, who represented the Buffalo Trails Council at the Jamboree. (Staff Photo by Bruce Partain)

Documentary to be shown

The showing of a documentary film, "The Right to Die," is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in Christ Presbyterian Church, 2801 N. Garfield St.

The presentation, open to the public, is being sponsored by the Midland Value of Life Committee. The Value of Life project here, and others like it across the state, is a joint effort of educators, scientists and religious leaders to encourage examination of new attitudes in medicine, law and ethics toward problems caused by rapid progress in life science technology, such as life sustaining equipment, and to stimulate local programs statewide to improve educational resources available in communities. The Value of Life Project is an undertaking of the Texas Conference of Churches. The Midland Value of Life project is endorsed by the Midland Association of Churches.

Cigarette ratings show low tar-nicotine trend

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cigarette manufacturers are continuing their competition to attract health-conscious smokers who can't kick the habit, the government's new rating of cigarette tar and nicotine levels shows.

Nearly one-third of the 166 brands of cigarettes tested by the Federal Trade Commission had relatively low levels of tar and nicotine, the elements of cigarettes that the government maintains can cause lung cancer and heart attacks.

The ratings, released Sunday, reconfirmed a general industry trend toward lower tar and nicotine content, according to the FTC, which based its findings on tests of cigarette samples purchased in 50 states. The ratings were the first since November 1976.

less than 15 milligrams of tar.

Tar ratings ranged between five-tenths of a milligram in filtered Carlton 70s regular to 34 milligrams in Players nonfilter hard packs. Nicotine ratings ranged from Carlton 70s regulars' five-one-hundredths of a milligram to Players regulars' 2.5 milligrams.

Carlton king menthol. Now king menthol (hard pack), Carlton king and Now king (hard pack) all followed with 1 milligram of tar and one-tenth of one per cent of nicotine.

Next on the list were Iceberg 100s menthol and Lucky 100s, both with 3 milligrams of tar and three-tenths of one per cent of nicotine.

In the last ratings both brands showed 9 milligrams of tar and six-tenths of one per cent of nicotine.

Repeating at the bottom was Players with 34 milligrams of tar and 2.5 per cent of nicotine. Just ahead of it was Domino with 33 milligrams of tar, 1.4 per cent of nicotine.

Tar is the element in cigarette smoke that produces cancer, according to the National Cancer Institute. Nicotine is a poison and, because it acts as a powerful stimulant in small doses, is a prime suspect as a cause of heart attacks, government officials say.

Rhodes to announce for Congress seat

BIG SPRING — Ahlne attorney and businessman A. L. "Dusty" Rhodes Tuesday formally announced his intention to seek the job of U.S. Representative from the 17th District.

Rhodes will conduct a series of news conferences in the district, including one at 11 a.m. in Big Spring at the Pioneer Natural Gas Co. community room.

Big Spring is in the southwest corner of the 17th district.

Incumbent Rep. Omar Burleson announced Aug. 9 that he does not plan to run again. Rhodes, however, had made public in early June his intention to seek the post.

"By making this formal announcement and by filing with the Federal Election Commission, I will be able to communicate with many hundreds of people that I've not yet been able to see," Rhodes said.

The 45-year-old trial lawyer has practiced in state, county and federal courts in the 17th District over the past 17 years.

"In my practice, I have become closely involved in the lives of thousands of people through the years," Rhodes said. "I understand people's needs, their hopes and their fears. For me, politics will always be a very personal thing. This, I believe, is my strongest asset as I begin my campaign for the Congress."

A. L. "Dusty" Rhodes

Besides his law practice, Rhodes is engaged in a number of business enterprises.

Among his business activities are serving on the board of directors of Citizens National Bank in Abilene and Connally Oil Co. of Abilene. He is chairman of the board of Gibson's of Duncanville and Hale Farm Supply in Haskell. He is president of Big Ed Oil Co. and Christi Oil Co. Inc.

Lightning hurts youth

BIG SPRING — A 14-year-old Big Spring youth was reported to be in good condition today in a Lubbock hospital following a lightning-related mishap.

Mark Stephens, son of Mrs. and Mr. Jerry Stephens of Big Spring, was paralyzed below the waist after being injured during a thunderstorm late Friday.

According to Big Spring police reports, Stephens was working on a trailer at the Western Hills Veterinary Clinic during the storm when a bolt of lightning apparently struck the trailer.

Gardendale woman killed, husband seriously burned

ANDREWS — A Gardendale woman was killed and her husband seriously burned Sunday when a tanker truck and their motorcycle collided 2.1 miles west of here.

According to a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety, Elton Campbell, 53, and his wife, Oralee, 61, were riding a motorcycle eastbound on Texas 176.

Campbell reportedly slowed the motorcycle in order to assist a church bus stopped at the road shoulder when the motorcycle and a tank truck traveling behind it collided.

The motorcycle burst into flames upon collision, troopers said, burning Campbell's legs severely. Passersby reportedly threw dirt and used fire extinguishers to keep the fire from completely engulfing Campbell.

Both Campbell and his wife were pinned beneath the truck for about 45 minutes before Andrews firemen put out the blaze.

Mrs. Campbell was pronounced dead on arrival at Permian General Hospital here while her husband was treated at Permian General, then transferred to Odessa Medical Center Hospital for further treatment Sunday, DPS officials said.

Campbell suffered third degree burns on his arms and legs. He was transferred to the Brook Army Hospital Burn Unit in San Antonio Sunday night.

about as many folks, if not more, than anyone else here.

He came to Crane on Valentine's Day in 1927.

"I was raised on a farm (around Colorado City), and I didn't like it," he said.

He started off working in a grocery store, but soon left that to help build the Texas Electric Service Co.'s plant here.

"I didn't like Texas Electric," he said, "because I had to work 12-hour shifts seven days a week."

Later, he tried postal work, but left that, too.

Finally, like most of the old-timers (the men folks, that is), he found his niche: oil field work.

He was production foreman for an independent outfit. Later, he worked in the pipeline department.

Beane left petroleum work, and not because it didn't agree with him. He just retired from regular work.

Today, he's a constable.

Reckon he'll always be working.

Many of the old-timers came to Crane or hereabouts in 1927 or earlier.

After the old Santa Rita No. 1 was brought in in 1923 in Reagan County, derricks started mushrooming.

Drillers and investors moved in. So did the hired hands.

And oil gave birth to Crane. People still talk about it.

And, at the next big jubilee, maybe Alan, who won't be so young then, will have something to talk about.

Likely, he'll recall an old-timer called "Slim" Vines. You know the fella who made that oil bell.

Inquest set in fatality

ODESSA — A coroner's inquest was expected to be held today in the death of a 13-year-old Midland youth who was found dead in a pickup truck he was cleaning Sunday night.

Ector County Sheriff's Deputy James Brown said the body of Dale Wade Koonce of Star Route A was found in the cab of a pickup truck in front of his residence.

The Koonce youth had been cleaning the inside of the truck with butane and apparently asphyxiated by the fumes, Brown said.

Peace Justice Virgil Lumpee was expected to hold the inquest today. The Koonce property is divided by the Midland and Ector county line.

Bat flight breakfast scheduled Thursday

CARLSBAD, N.M. — Visitors may watch the bats return to the caverns at the annual Bat Flight Breakfast at 7:30 a.m. Thursday.

The event is sponsored by the Carlsbad Caverns Activities Association.

Serving is scheduled to start at 5:30 a.m. and will continue until 7:30 a.m. with ham, eggs, rolls, jelly, coffee and milk included on the menu. Cost is $1.50 per person.

The Tourist Promotion Committee of the Carlsbad Chamber of Commerce will meet at the park and attend the breakfast in lieu of their regular meeting in town.

While visitors view the bat colony's exit flights in the evenings by the hundreds, few visitors see the early morning flights.

The return flights are vastly different from the exit flights in that upon returning the bats dive into the entrance from great heights with their wings folded, creating an unusual sound.

The bats leave the cavern, usually together, about sunset each evening to feed on night-flying insects and begin returning in small groups after they have had their fill, with some coming in as early as midnight on some nights, and others as late as daylight.

Carter assesses himself modestly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter credits himself with improving the image of the federal government in the minds of Americans, but he concedes that his administration has yet to prove it can solve the nation's toughest problems. In a critique of his performance after six months in office, Carter concluded that progress has been made in improving the tone of government. But the President expressed discouragement over efforts to lower inflation and unemployment. And he admitted that there have been no spectacular achievements in foreign affairs. In a personal report card, Carter summed up his first months in office this way: "Specifics — too early to say. Tone, trust — pretty good. Carter had been asked to rate himself as President in an interview with ABC News, conducted in his hometown of Plains, Ga., last Wednesday and broadcast Sunday. Carter noted that there has been no major letup in inflation, and that the unemployment rate has fallen only slightly since he took office. "We have not had any major breakthroughs in foreign affairs, although we have a very coherent program that we are pursuing," he said. "We are tenacious and determined to improve the situation in Southern

Improved health care

September 17 is destined to be one of the most significant days in Midland's history.

That is the date on which Midland County voters will decide whether to create a countywide hospital district and whether to issue $10 million in bonds for improving and enlarging Midland Memorial Hospital.

It truly will be a day of decision for residents of the city and county. Hopefully, both propositions will be approved by wide margins.

Actually, approval of both propositions means more than just creating a district and providing funds for refurbishing and enlarging a hospital; it means improved health care for all residents of the county. And this is something in which all of us certainly should be interested.

Last week's action by the board of trustees of Midland Memorial Hospital in calling the election to submit the two issues to the voters was wise and sound, and the trustees are to be commended in this regard.

It isn't something which was determined overnight. It was a tough decision to make, and it came only after three years of study and intense soul-searching — at the community level.

It was determined sometime ago that the present hospital facility simply cannot meet the demands of the fast-growing community. Various alternatives then were considered over a period of months. And after long, serious deliberation, it was determined that the hospital district-bond issue proposal was the best and most feasible way of taking care of a critical situation facing the community and of providing first-rate health care for city and county residents.

Attitude-determining sessions were held with a broad cross-section of the community's population. The matter was researched thoroughly by representatives of a professional firm. The hospital district-bond issue proposal was recommended in each instance. Several suggested options were ruled out in favor of the plan which finally was adopted and which will be before the voters for a final decision.

All those persons and groups who have studied the matter are in agreement that this is the only feasible means of financing the desperately needed improvements.

Residents of the city and county through the years have been most fortunate in having a community hospital which had been erected by voluntary contributions. Additions and improvements though the years also have been funded by a limited number of interested individuals, firms and organizations. But it finally reached the point where this means of voluntary financing no longer was feasible — in the amount needed to do the job. The comparative few no longer can be depended on to carry the load alone. And neither should they be expected to bear the total burden.

Creating a hospital district and having all citizens participate in the funding of the improvement and enlargement project at hand, seemingly is the fairest, most equitable and most feasible way of taking care of Midland's hospital problem.

Mickey Cappadonna, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees, explains that the creation of the hospital district also "will help us overcome an inequity which has plagued Midland's sick for years. In the past, the bulk of the indigent care-bad debt burden has been carried by the sick people who can pay their bills. It is our philosophy that if a man can pay for his medical care he should do so, but if he cannot, he should not be turned away sick. It is also our philosophy that the entire community and not just the sick should help pay for those who cannot pay. The creation of a hospital district will make this possible." We agree wholeheartedly.

This is the top priority item facing residents of the city and county at this time. Improved hospital care, which means improved medical care for all citizens, is at stake in the upcoming election.

This is why September 17 is a most important date to remember. Think about it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. AID director criticized

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Just about every nation in real or apparent need has received substantial aid from the United States. Now the official in charge of dispensing the aid, John Gilligan, has been quoted in the papers as saying our tax money has gone for "Rolls-Royces and fighter planes and bowling alleys to keep the rulers happy."

This is raising a rumpus in the backrooms of Washington. Gilligan, director of the Agency for International Development (AID), has been accused of spouting off "half-baked, outdated clichés," of taking "a series of cheap shots," of undermining his own agency. Dismayed subordinates have been heard to suggest he should be banished to Gilligan's Island.

The whole hubbub can be summarized in a confidential exchange of letters between an indignant congressman and the outspoken Gilligan. Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., a champion of the unpopular aid program, wrote angrily: "I can only say that I was shocked and dismayed at the content of your statements as reported in the newspaper."

"Either the things you said are true and your staff has been running a woefully mismanaged program," Solarz said, "or else you were misrepresenting the program over which you were in charge." He demanded to know "where and when have we bought Rolls-Royces under the AID program? Where and when have we bought bowling alleys to keep the rulers happy?"

The congressman accused Gilligan of trying to "lead the pack in denouncing" his own foreign assistance program.

The AID director responded that he had been "speaking in the past tense," that he had been "attempting to make the point that numerous Americans believe" aid funds have been misused and that, in fact, aid money had been used to buy a helicopter for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, to construct a luxury hotel in the Dominican Republic and to bolster dictatorship.

But Gilligan insisted he merely wanted "to get across the message that the new administrator of AID was aware of these and other criticisms and intended to see that funds are used as Congress has directed."

We have kept a close watch on the distribution of aid for a quarter century. The program began from the best motives; the American people after World War II wanted to get the world going again. But all too often, Uncle Sam offered handouts to hands that were only too quick to pick his pockets.

Nor has the flow of aid, as Gilligan suggested, always been channeled to the neediest. It has often been used as a form of bribery to keep foreign potentates on our side in the world power struggle.

But the focus has changed in recent years; AID projects are now designed to help the world's impoverished people increase their agricultural productivity. "Rural development" has become the watchword.

WRITE ON: America has vital bases in Philippines

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service

All of Asia is watching carefully as to what we do about our large military bases in the Philippines and when and how we pull our military forces out of Korea.

There are many in Asia and the far Pacific who believe that the United States is giving up that part of the world and letting it go virtually by default to the Russians who keep probing here, there and everywhere for soft spots to exploit.

Our two big bases in the Philippines long have symbolized American military power in the Far East.

About one-third of the ammunition and other equipment earmarked for possible emergency use in Korea is stored at Clark Field on the outskirts of Manila and at Subic across the bay. Clark Field is the home base for cargo planes required to transport men and materials to our forces or allies.

Many of these bases have become a symbol of American credibility. Communist and near-Communist nations frequently assert that the United States will not remain in Asia and that our power is shrinking everywhere.

Typical is the statement by the Prime Minister Lee Kuan-yen of Singapore. He is openly apprehensive about the withdrawal from Korea of more than 30,000 troops over the next four or five years as announced by President Carter. He wonders aloud about American determination to back words with muscle.

Virgil Pinkley

Lee has had a number of discussions with President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines stating that American withdrawal from Philippine bases, unless new treaties can be worked out, is highly damaging to regional security and the actual removal of these bases would be "a disaster."

Japan has come to depend upon the U.S. Navy to keep sea lanes open because of the importance of Subic. Especially are they concerned about the Malacca Straits between Malaysia and Indonesia. This is Japan's principal lifeline to the Mideast oil necessary to fuel its industrial setup.

Even the Red Chinese have been making strong hints that the United States should not leave Clark and Subic.

Both installations have secret war rooms and both have vast stores of guns, ammunition and other military hardware.

Clark has been developed to a point where it can move 3,000 tons of cargo a day. Its engineers within 24 hours can establish an airfield as far away as West Africa and it can move supplies and troops with equal speed. Subic has the naval facilities to dry-dock and repair any ship in our fleet. The anchorage is one of the best protected and largest in the world.

Our relations with the Philippines in recent years have, unfortunately, deteriorated.

At one time, our former colonial possession which was turned into a commonwealth and then an independent state ahead of schedule, trusted the Americans and considered us its closest ally.

Now President Marcos, who is virtually a total dictator, is playing a game with Russia and the Red Chinese on one side pitted against us.

He has closed down many newspapers and radio stations, imposed strict censorship, sent many political prisoners to jail without trial and has imposed martial law. He and his wife's families have become among the richest in the Philippines.

When one steps out at the airport in Manila and asks which hotel chain owns that big new hotel with its terraces and splashing fountains, the reply is, "It belongs to the president."

When you go downtown to the large shopping center with its huge underground garages, the same question is asked, "Who does it belong to?" The prompt reply is, "It is owned by the president and his family."

In our negotiations to renew the bases in the Philippines, Marcos and his government are making heavy enlarged demands on the United States. The base agreement legally runs until 1991.

Despite all of the propaganda against the United States in the Philippines and the mob demonstration staged against us by students under Marcos' instructions, there is still a vast reservoir of goodwill and trust in the Philippines for the United States.

INSIDE REPORT:

A President Jimmy Carter recession in the making?

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

HUTCHINSON, Kans. — The danger of political loss attending President Carter's retreat from campaign promises in the wheat belt is that the broken promises coincide with a wheat belt recession of portentous political dimension.

The President's year-ago pledge to give wheat farmers a level of price supports "at least to equal production costs" might be passed over as standard campaign hyperbole if wheat prices were now firming and farmers contentedly purring.

Instead, a little-noticed survey by the Department of Agriculture shows that in midspring three of six major wheat states — Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma — were in "very severe" financial straits; the other three — Colorado, North Dakota and South Dakota — were in a "severe" financial situation.

This largely-overlooked report makes sinister reading: of 32,000 bank borrowers surveyed in Kansas during April, where almost all loans are linked to the wheat economy, 3,300 "cannot repay" their loans and 11,000, or 35 per cent, are either compelled to refinance their indebtedness or "dispose of their assets."

Consequently, wheat farmers are not purring contentedly. To the contrary, added to the normal political grievance spreading across the lush soils of Kansas is the special fury of a voter scorned that comes from this fact: thousands of wheat farmers and other rural voters reversed age-old Republican voting habits last November to support Jimmy Carter, apparently on the theory that a peasant farmer was a natural ally of a wheat farmer.

Evans

The degree of this crossover, with its potential of a huge voter harvest by Mr. Carter in 1980, has apparently been missed by the White House. Otherwise, the President might not have walked away so quickly from his campaign talk of a $3 price support for wheat (which he set instead at the old $2.25 level).

Likewise, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, who is perceived out here as an amiable White House messenger boy, would probably have fought harder for his farmer constituency against Mr. Carter's strong budget-balancing policies.

The switch of voters from Republican in 1972 to Carter-Mondale last November, as reported in a confidential poll by respected political pollster Robert Teeter, was "much heavier among rural than city voters. In Nebraska, a major wheat state, Teeter found the pro-Carter switch in the farm vote running 6 percentage points ahead of the pro-Carter switch in towns and cities.

Even more astonishing was Ohio. Republican farm defections to Mr. Carter in Ohio began worrying party leaders well before the election, but Teeter's 1977 county-by-county analysis shows the depth of that defection: a 19-percentage-point decline in the Republican presidential vote, as contrasted to a mere 9-point decline in the cities of Ohio.

"The surprising loss of Ohio (by Gerald Ford) can be attributed to the unique impact that Carter had in the rural areas," Teeter's unpublished poll reported. "These (voting) changes produced the unusual pattern of a Republican presidential candidate receiving a higher vote from Ohio's metropolitan areas (49 per cent) than from its rural counties (46 per cent). In 1972, Nixon ran 7 points better in the rural than the metropolitan counties of Ohio."

Likewise, Teeter found that in the "contribution ratio" (the share of the total Republican vote) in Wisconsin — a major farm state — rural counties contributed a mere 42.2 per cent. The balance came from metropolitan areas. That elevated Mr. Carter almost 10 points ahead of the 1968 performance in rural Wisconsin of Hubert Humphrey, long a farmer hero.

What this means is that the farm states saw something special in peanut farmer Jimmy Carter. Indeed, Teeter found that the only offset to the surprising strength of Mr. Carter and his running-mate, Minnesota's Walter Mondale, in 11 farm-belt states was Kansas Sen. Robert Dole. The counties in which Dole campaigned last fall showed a consistent 2-point lag in their swing to Carter-Mondale compared to counties where he did not campaign.

Some farm-belt politicians suspect that Mr. Carter has consciously ignored these pro-Carter sympathies in cutting farmers out of his shrinking pie of federal subsidies. Others blame it on simple White House ignorance of wheat-belt politics. Whichever it is, the swing back to the Republicans in the wheat belt is on in earnest, fueled by the fury of the scorned.

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Convicted Nazi war criminal Herbert Kappler, who vanished over the weekend from a military hospital in Rome, has apparently returned to West Germany, a government spokesman said today.

On learning of his disappearance, Jewish leaders in Rome called for a demonstration at the hospital later today.

The one-time Rome commander of the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police, had been under treatment at Celio hospital here for the past several months. His lawyer said he was suffering from terminal stomach cancer.

Police gave no details of the disappearance, but the state-owned radio network said it learned that Kappler was visited at the hospital early Sunday by two women carrying two large bags.

The radio said the women may have arranged the escape, taking Kappler away in a waiting automobile. The radio station conjectured that it was possible to carry the German out in a large bag "because of Kappler's light weight after so many months of cancer sufferings."

Police later found the car on a Rome street, but there were no traces of the women or Kappler, the broadcast said.

The 335 Romans were shot on Kappler's orders in the Ardeatine Caves near the catacombs in southern Rome on March 24, 1944, just 24 hours after Italian partisans attacked a column of German soldiers marching up downtown Rome's Via Rasella and killed 32 of them.

The court that sentenced the Gestapo chief to life imprisonment in 1948 found that he was following orders for the execution of 320 persons — Nazi policy called for such a 10-1 ratio of retaliation — but held him personally responsible for the 15 other deaths.

Kappler argued that the other deaths resulted from the confusion of the moment.

He served 28 years in prison, most of them at a medieval castle-prison in Gaeta, a seacoast town between Rome and Naples, before being transferred to the hospital.

country. His exact location was not known, Gruenewald said.

The former Gestapo official was serving a life term for the reprisal execution of 335 Italian civilians and was being treated for cancer at the hospital.

The Italian news agency ANSA later reported it received a telephone call claiming that the West German terrorist organization "Red Morning" had kidnaped the 70-year-old prisoner and was demanding the release of jailed German terrorists in exchange for Kappler.

"Red Morning" has claimed responsibility for the recent slaying of West German banker Jurgen Ponto.

Kappler had said he wanted to die in Germany, but Italy's highest court

Joy Baker, once an alcoholic, solves her drinking problem

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Hearing the telephone ring, Joy Baker froze. It was a morning last August in Kansas City during the final days of the Republican National Convention. Her husband, Sen. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.), had been among those most prominently mentioned as a running mate for President Ford. Forty-eight hours earlier, responding to a question from the White House as to whether there was anything potentially embarrassing in his personal or family life, Baker had told them — with his wife's blessing — that she had suffered a serious drinking problem for many years, but had since recovered.

And now, they waited. He picked up the receiver. When she heard him say, "Mr. President, I think Bob Dole will make a wonderful choice," she ran into the bathroom, locked the door, and began to sob.

"It's all my fault," she cried. "It's all my fault."

Her husband knocked on the door. "Are you all right?"

"No."

"Come out and let's talk about it."

"No."

Reporters had gathered outside the hotel suite. Baker and his two children went out to meet them.

"I just couldn't stand it," Mrs. Baker said, recalling that painful morning. "He needed me. I said to myself, 'You're a big girl, and it's all over now.' I wiped my face, unlocked the door, and went out to join him."

It was the most critical moment in Joy Baker's battle with alcohol. "If there was ever a time when I could have started drinking again, that would have been it," she said.

Joy Baker, 48, whose husband has since been elected Senate minority leader, has not had a drink for 13 months. She discussed her drinking problem during an interview in her husband's Senate office.

Her appearance has undergone a remarkable change in recent months. She has lost 30 pounds. Formerly brunette, her hair is now light blonde, worn stylishly short. The puffiness is gone from her face. "After I leave you, I'm on my way to the beauty parlor to get my hair done," she said, smiling, and lighting the first of many cigarettes.

It was a startling departure for a woman who described frequent periods when she would not even get out of bed for days at a time, except to get another drink. "I would hear my daughter say to a friend on the phone, 'I'm sorry, I'd love to go to the movies with you this afternoon, but I can't because my mother isn't feeling well,'" she said. "I wouldn't even let myself feel guilty. It didn't register. I figured she could always go the next day."

Although it was first publicly acknowledged during the convention, Mrs. Baker's alcoholism had been the subject of Washington gossip for a long time. During recent years, she avoided most receptions and parties, and stopped traveling with her husband. "We didn't go out much at all," she said. "It proved embarrassing for me, but mostly for him. After a while, I was no longer even expected."

There were some humiliating incidents. "One night we went to an embassy dinner," she said. "I expected to be eating by 8:30 p.m. Well, we didn't start until 9:30 p.m. So I just went along with the crowd and drank and drank. When I stood up later for a toast after dinner, I missed the chair on the way down — and fell into the lap of a Middle Eastern ambassador."

She cringed at the memory. "He wasn't very gracious about it at all," she said. "He threw me on the floor." "I fell into a trap," she said. "If you like to drink and it makes you feel good, you can always think up more and more excuses to have one. You start off with one reason, and then you can always add all sorts of good, logical reasons."

Like what? "It's raining today and I can't go out and play tennis, so I think I'll have a drink," she said. "That was a good one. Or airplanes. Flying was one of my very best excuses."

Most of the drinking took place when she was by herself. "Occasionally Howard and I would have a sociable drink together," she said. "But I'd always manage to slip out on 16 trips to the kitchen to stir some more into my glass. People would tell me I had a problem, and I'd say, 'Who me?'"

In September, 1969, her father, Sen. Everett M. Dirksen (R-Ill.), who had been Senate minority leader for a decade, died unexpectedly.

"That's when my drinking got really bad," she said. "That was a complete and total shock. Ever since I was a tiny little girl, I never thought anything would happen to my father." She cannot explain why — or when — the drinking really began, but she said she does not believe that being a political daughter or a political wife had anything to do with it.

"I grew up in politics," she said. "I was used to it. I was two-years-old when my father was elected to the House of Representatives. I was an only child and I was never neglected, and rarely denied anything. When my father was here — in those days, Congressmen didn't move their families to Washington — no matter how busy he was, he would write to my mother and me every day of the week. Whenever my mother would come out and stay with him here, and I lived with my grandmother, my mother and father would both write me letters every day of the week. I'd come out here, or we'd all go on vacations together. No, I was never neglected."

Similarly, she said, her husband has always been equally attentive.

"He was always very helpful and so were the children," she said. "He was always worried about me. He never became angry. I have the most wonderful, understanding husband in the world. I never realized then what sacrifices my husband, my children, my mother — even my husband's staff — were all making for me. I know my husband is enjoying his role as minority leader, and he couldn't be doing that if he still had to be worrying about me."

They no longer believe, she said, that the revelation of her drinking cost him the vice presidential nomination, but she does believe that he had hurt him earlier.

"I think he might have run for President," she said, and then added: "He never asked me to do anything for his career. When he asked me to get help, it was for me — he never asked for himself. Never. I can't blame any of this on him, or the children. I just have a hair trigger. Little things that wouldn't bother anyone else would really get to me. Tiny little things. I was disagreeable if I couldn't have my own way. So I would drink. I guess I was just a weak person."

Finally, she said, several months after her father's death, she realized she had a serious problem and she had to do something about it. "I said to myself: this has gone on long enough," she said. "What are we going to do? Be a soggy drunk, or a nice person? I decided I wanted to be a nice person. I don't know if I am yet, but I'm trying."

Rabbi Emmanuel Kumin of Shreveport, La., performed the double ring service. Mrs. Shirley Hansen was the organist, and Louis Kluck was soloist.

Serving as matron of honor was Mrs. Harriet Hochman Bell of Moscow, Idaho, sister of the bride. Other attendants to the bride were Marly Sweeney and Elizabeth Shirer of New Orleans, La.; Wendy Geller of Orlando, sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Deborah Whisman Stinson of Cambridge, Mass.; Mrs. Shannon Smith and Mrs. Patricia Hochman, sister-in-law of the bride.

Mitchell Cohen of Reno, Nev., was best man. The groomsmen were Michael Hochman, brother of the bride, Dr. Bernard Kahn and Wayne Aronson of Atlanta, Ga.; Craig Pearlman, Bruce Hill and David Florman of Orlando and Gary Singer of Tampa, Fla.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a Renaissance gown of white silk organza embellished with Swiss Guipure lace. It was styled with a fitted bodice and applied with lace embroidered with seed pearls. It had a portrait neckline outlined in miniature Bobbin lace and long bishop sleeves repeating the lace applique. The controlled bell-shaped skirt featured sheer petal window insets of organza, framed in Bobbin lace. Scallops of fullness swept to the back in deep folds to form a chapel train. A matching Guipure lace caplet with seed pearls held her tiered bouffant veil of silk illusion. She carried a bouquet of Sonia roses and stephanotis.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the club.

The couple will reside at 1302 Peniston Avenue, Apartment C, in New Orleans. The bride is attending Tulane University School of Social Work and will receive a master of social work degree in December. She is program director of the academic survival program in the office of the dean of students at Tulane.

The rehearsal dinner was given in MCC by the parents of the bridegroom. A brunch was given by Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Saikin, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Schneider and Michael Klein.

Out-of-city guests attending the wedding included the bridegroom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Geller of Miami Beach, Fla., and Mrs. Rose Zucker of Orlando.

DEAR ABBY

Bachelors need day

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: We have a Mother's Day and a Father's Day, why not officially declare a day to honor bachelors?

The great historian and philosopher, Will Durant, compiled a list of the 10 men he rated as having the sharpest minds of all time. Among them were Plato, Isaac Newton, Voltaire, Immanuel Kant, Leonardo da Vinci and St. Thomas Aquinas, all of whom were bachelors!

Two of the world's greatest musicians were bachelors — Beethoven and Brahms. Oddly enough, the musician who was said to have been the greatest ladies' man of them all was Richard Wagner — a married man!

One finds outstanding bachelors in all trades and professions except politics.

Let's hear it for bachelors! — ED IN RICHMOND

DEAR ED: Why not? But two bachelors DID make it big in politics: James Buchanan, our 16th president, and Jerry Brown, California's governor.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a non-smoking guy going with a beautiful redhead whose breath smells like smoldering tires. This gal really turns me on, but her breath turns me off.

How do other guys handle this situation? Don't tell me to take up smoking so I won't notice her breath. I was a three-pack-a-day man until my brother developed lung cancer, and that cured me.

Answer soon. I want to marry this girl, but wonder how to handle this one major problem — TIMID TIM.

DEAR TIM: Try the direct approach. If that doesn't work, the ball is in your court again, and only you can decide if you want this beautiful redhead whose breath turns you off.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from STUMPED whose fiancé suddenly developed the fear of driving, so now she complains because she must do all the driving, which will limit her social life. Ha! What a wonderful helpmate she is! My condolences to the man who's stuck with her. I wonder what she would have done in my place.

Twenty-five years ago, my husband also "lost his nerve" about driving, and rather than see him risk his life every time he went out, I took over the driving for both of us.

Since he was a salesman and our living depended on his being "on the road" every day, need I tell you that that situation did to my life?

It not only wrecked my "social life," it changed my home routine. I sat in the car alone every day, Monday through Friday. I read hundreds of books, wrote hundreds of letters, and knitted scores of afghans. BUT today my husband is alive and well and his self-respect is undamaged because he was able to support his family. — HAPPY CHAUF- FEUR

Time to put lid on surplus summer produce

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

It's time to haul out the canning kettle, count up the jars and go shopping for lids. Summer's here and the gardens and fruit trees are in full gear.

Zucchini plants are producing enough squash to feed you and your neighbors, and you can't give it away because your neighbors and friends all have the same abundant problem.

Fresh peaches, nectarines and plums are appearing on market shelves again, for us to enjoy their too-brief succulent season.

Aside from the pleasures of enjoying home-canned summer fruit in December, there's something satisfying about putting up your own foodstuffs.

Recipes for some preserved foods, follow.

ZUCCHINI MIX

- 1 qt. chopped tomatoes (can be unpeeled)
- 1 qt. chopped zucchini (can substitute eggplant)
- One-half cup chopped onion
- 1 clove crushed garlic
- 2 tsps. salt
- One-half cup vinegar (or lemon juice)

Combine all ingredients. Cook at a simmer until zucchini is tender (about 15 minutes). Using a slotted spoon, transfer mixture to jars.

Add liquid from cooking to the jars, leaving one-half-inch headspace.

Wipe jar rims, seal and process in simmering water for 25 minutes.

PEACH CONSERVE

- 5 cups peeled, diced peaches (about four pounds)

- 1 cup light corn syrup
- 1 cup water
- One-half cup coarsely chopped pitted prunes
- One-half cup seedless raisins
- One-half cup sugar
- 1 medium orange, seeded and ground or finely chopped
- One-fourth cup coarsely chopped pecans

In large saucepot mix together all ingredients except pecans.

Stirring constantly, bring to hard boil over high heat.

Reduce heat; continue boiling 30 minutes, stirring occasionally until mixture thickens. Stir in nuts.

Remove from heat; ladle into hot one-half-pint jars, leaving one-eighth-inch headspace. Wipe top edge with damp towel. Seal; process in boiling water bath for five minutes. Cool, label and store. Makes four-and-one-half-pint jars.

LEMON HONEY PEACHES

- One-half cup honey
- 1 cup water
- One-fourth cup lemon juice
- 1 tsp. grated lemon rind
- 6 to 8 lbs. fresh cling peaches

Combine honey, water, juice and rind in heavy kettle. Bring to boil and keep hot.

Wash, peel and cut fruit from pit. Combine fruit with hot syrup. Cook until fruit is tender. Ladle into hot jars, leaving one-half-inch headspace. Wipe rims, seal and process in boiling water bath for 20 minutes. Makes six pints.

SALSA

- 1 lb. onions
- 5 lbs. tomatoes
- 2 lbs. hot chilis
- 3 tsps. salt
- One-half tsp. pepper
- One-third cup lemon juice or vinegar

Chop onions and chilis. Peel and chop tomatoes. Add all ingredients to tomatoes; heat to simmer; simmer 10 minutes.

Pack into hot pint jars and process in boiling water for 15 minutes. To increase or decrease hotness, raise or lower the amount of chilis in the recipe. Fresh chilis give better, hotter flavor, but pickled, canned or glass-packed chilis can be used. Makes six pints.

MINI RECIPES

Giblets from broiler-fryers need at least half an hour of simmering in water in order to have them tender.

Worms said protein-rich

MARTVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Darlene Walsh eats what she raises. Beef? Pork?

Earthworms.

Mrs. Walsh owns a worm ranch. People now use worms primarily for bait, but Mrs. Walsh hopes to start thinking of them as food.

"They're 72 per cent protein," she says.

In her own kitchen, she boils, dices worms and adds them to bread, cookies and cakes. She says they have no discernible taste of their own.

Apprenticeship can give edge

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

As the competition for jobs increases, young would-be workers are finding that apprenticeship programs can give them the edge they need in the search for employment.

The programs usually involve from two to five years of on-the-job training along with some formal classroom training. The apprenticeships are not easy to come by. There are more applicants than there are openings in almost every area.

Unions, high school guidance counselors, vocational schools, trade associations and regional state and federal employment offices are good sources of information for specific requirements and information on how to apply.

Finding out which occupations offer apprenticeship opportunities can be tricky. To help steer young people on the right road, the Labor Department has prepared a list of jobs for which apprenticeships are available and has assessed the employment outlook in each field.

Here is a rundown of some job areas in which employment is expected to grow faster than average from now through 1985 and for which you can train in an apprenticeship program:

LITHOGRAPHIC WORKERS: Job opportunities will grow due to the increased use of offset presses in place of letter presses. The best chances are for those with some post-high school training in printing technology. Apprenticeship programs usually last four or five years.

BOILERMAKING: Construction of new electric power plants and the expansion of industries, such as steel and petroleum, which use boilers are expected to boost employment. Apprenticeship lasts four years.

OPHTHALMIC LABORATORY TECHNICIANS: The rising demand for eyeglasses will help job hunters. Training may be through apprenticeship program, vocational school or on-the-job. Some states require licenses.

ASBESTOS AND INSULATION WORKERS: Increased construction and the need for energy conservation will boost employment. Most opportunities will be in metropolitan areas. Four-year apprenticeship program, with examination on completion. Applicants generally must be at least 18.

CEMENT MASONS, CONSTRUCTION ELECTRICIANS, GLAZIERS: Increased construction activity is expected to help would-be workers. Applicants for apprenticeship programs generally must be at least 19. A three-year apprenticeship is recommended for cement masons; a four-year program for electricians and glaziers.

PLUMBERS AND PIPEFITTERS: Jobs will be available due to construction in areas such as chemical and petroleum refineries and nuclear power plants which use pipework. Applicants should be at least 16; an apprenticeship, including at least 144 hours of classroom training, lasts five years.

ROOFERS: Increased construction, repairs and waterproofing will create job opportunities. Applicants should be at least 18, with a high school diploma or its equivalent. Apprenticeship program is three years, with a minimum of 1,400 hours of training and 144 hours of classroom instruction in subjects like blueprint reading, mathematics and safety.

Further information is available in the Labor Department publication, "Jobs for Which Apprenticeships are Available," and a companion guide, "Jobs Requiring Junior College or Technical Training." There is no charge for either booklet; both are available from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

A more complete listing of some 850 occupations, including information on the type of work involved, places of employment, training and qualifications needed, employment outlook, earnings and working conditions and sources of further details is offered in the Labor Department's "Occupational Outlook Handbook," published every two years. It costs $7 and is available from regional offices of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Governor says he'll remain clear of feud

By MILLER BONNER

EDINBURG, Tex. (AP) — Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe will sit on the sidelines and not enter the political battle brewing in Austin between the state's attorney general and comptroller.

Last week, Atty. Gen. John Hill was taken to the Texas Supreme Court by Comptroller Bob Bullock over Hill's reluctance to release delinquent tax rolls to the comptroller.

"I won't comment on that situation," said Briscoe Sunday before delivering the commencement speech at Pan American University. "That is strictly between the two men involved."

However, the governor did comment on the upcoming $2 increase in vehicle inspection fees.

When asked if the increase refuted the governor's oft-made statement that Texans have had no "new taxes" during his reign, Briscoe replied: "I don't think that can be considered a new tax. We considered that very carefully before the increase was made. I can't remember the exact percentage, but most of that increase goes to the businesses where the inspections are made. These people were hurt by the $2 fee so most of the money made off the increase to $4 will go to them."

The governor urged Pan American's 550 golden anniversary graduates, "not to be content with simply making do with the results of unsuccessful policies of the past. One common ingredient to success, whether we are measuring an individual or an entire civilization, is the will to succeed."

"Without the will to overcome obstacles and challenges," he continued, "no educational preparation on earth can prepare an individual for a successful life, a successful career or a success experience of an kind."

Women's caucus okays boycotts

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — A brewery and a textile firm came under fire Sunday from the Texas Women's Political Caucus, which adopted resolutions to boycott the firms as the women ended a three-day meeting in El Paso.

Most debate centered around the resolution against Coors beer, headquartered in Colorado.

But when the debate ended, the women gave quick approval to the boycott move.

They cited contributions made by President Joseph Coors to groups and individuals opposed to the Equal Rights Amendment.

The J.P. Stevens Co., a textile firm headquartered in the Carolinas, also came in for a boycott resolution. The women's group alleged that the Stevens Co. discriminated against women and blacks.

Assessments were voted by the Caucus with an eye toward building a political war chest. The group decided to gather $27,000 to be used in electing women to the Texas House in vulnerable district. Some of the money would also be donated to organizations lobbying for causes deemed worthy by the Caucus.

Amnesty criticized

ALBUQUERQUE (AP)

The 29th annual GI Forum concluded with the formal adoption of a number of resolutions, including one broadly critical of President Carter's alien amnesty proposal.

The resolution asks that aliens living in the United States for five years be given citizenship, while Carter's proposal calls for a seven year residency.

The convention also opposed a proposal that proof of citizenship be required prior to employment. Carter's proposal recommends severe penalties for employers who hire illegal aliens.

Another section of the resolution calls for mutually agreeable trade concessions for the United States and Mexico. This proposal was seen as an attempt to balance the economic impact on Mexico if the United States cuts back on the flow of aliens.

Raul Roel Martinez, secretary of the Mexican Department of Exterior, said if the government votes to stem the tide of illegal aliens into this country, it will greatly affect the economy of Mexico.

Bell trial testimony continues

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The second week of testimony begins today in the state court trial of a $29 million damage suit against Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.

The suit was filed by fired Southwestern Bell executive James Ashley and the family of T.O. Gravitt, who was the company's top Texas official when he committed suicide Oct. 17, 1974, in Dallas.

The suit alleges that Gravitt was hounded to his death and Ashley was wrongfully fired from his $55,000 a year post in San Antonio as a result of an improper internal company investigation.

Southwestern Bell, in a counter-claim in the suit, contends Ashley and Gravitt defrauded the company of about $30,000 by filing false travel and expense vouchers.

Ashley is expected to testify this week and so may Mrs. Robert Dixon of Bartlesville, Okla., who is Gravitt's remarried widow.

The suit alleges that the Bell investigation was designed to drive both Ashley and Gravitt out of the company because they considered themselves reform-minded rebels in the organization.

Kirby Sewell, senior electrical engineer for TESCO, checks construction progress at the Comanche Peak nuclear plant site.

"Today most of your electricity is made with cheap natural gas. But this gas will be gone soon."

How will we supply the electricity you'll need then?"

"About 70 percent of the electricity you use today is generated in plants that run on natural gas.

Most of it is gas we got at a low price many years ago. But those long-term contracts will expire soon.

This is why our construction budget is nearly a quarter-billion dollars this year — so we can continue building plants that can use other fuels, specifically lignite coal and nuclear.

At the Monticello plant near Mt. Pleasant, two lignite coal units are in operation now and a third unit is under construction.

The first unit of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant is scheduled to go into service in 1981 and the second unit in 1983.

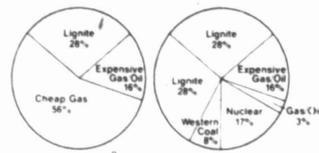

And we have five lignite coal-fired generating units in operation now, with five more under construction. Others are being planned.

By 1983, over 80 percent of your electricity will come from coal and nuclear fueled plants. This is how we intend to continue supplying you with the electricity you'll need."

Electricity. You count on it today. We're working to keep it that way.

Phone 863-4651

One reason for Texas Electric's low rates is low cost gas contracted for years ago. As the chart on the left shows, more than half the fuel we use now is cheap natural gas. But our contracts for this gas expire soon. The chart on the right shows now we will replace this gas by 1983 with more abundant fuels.

Jaworski taking formal command of Korea probe

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, holding a written guarantee of independence, is taking formal command of the House investigation into alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress.

Associates say Jaworski, returning to Washington today, hopes his staff investigation can be completed by early next year.

The House ethics committee will receive recommendations from Jaworski and in turn recommend to the full House possible punishment for present or former congressmen.

With Congress out of town for a month-long recess, the only other scheduled activity this week is a House merchant marine subcommittee hearing set for Wednesday on the Panama Canal agreement worked out by President Carter's negotiating team.

The panel, headed by Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., has called as witnesses national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Panama Canal negotiators Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz.

Some members of Congress are criticizing the agreement, which calls for Panamanian control of the canal by the year 2000. Murphy has denounced the agreement as "an apparent surrender of American-owned property in Panama to a revolutionary despot."

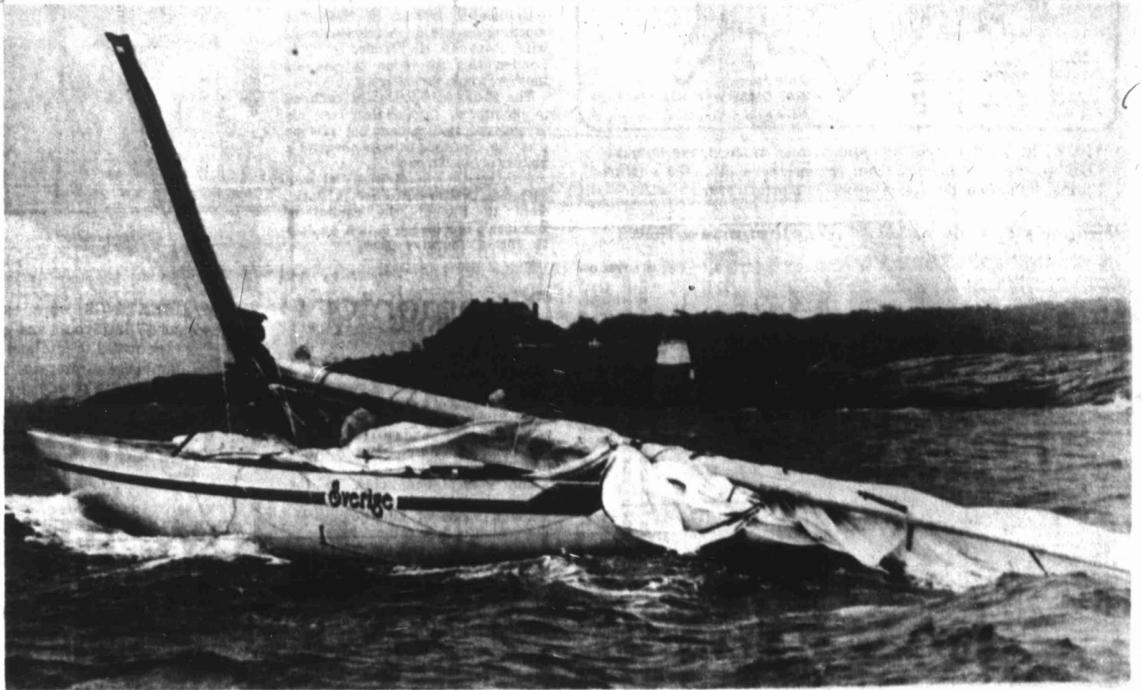

Jaworski will turn quickly to preparing a timetable for the Korean investigation and is expected to present his schedule to the ethics committee on Aug. 24.

He has vowed to recommend punishment or prosecution for any wrongdoing he finds in the Korean influence-buying affair but he also has indicated in public comments that he believes the scope of the scandal has been exaggerated.

Jaworski was asked to head the investigation last month after Philip A. Lacovara quit in a dispute with the panel's chairman, Rep. John Flynt, D-Ga. The former Watergate prosecutor insisted on an unusual written guarantee of independence before accepting the post.

Jaworski said last week documents he is seeking from the Justice Department could be as crucial to the Korean investigation as White House tapes were to Watergate. The documents reportedly include one detailing cash payments Korean rice dealer Tongsun Park made to about 20 congressmen plus several other U.S. officials.

Park allegedly made his payments in an effort to buy influence and support in Congress for the Korean government, but congressmen who acknowledge taking cash say the contributions were legal at the time. No congressmen are accused of doing specific favors for Korea in return for cash or gifts.

Accidents kill two Midlanders

A 14-year-old Midland girl and a 46-year-old Midland man were killed in separate traffic accidents over the weekend.

Ronda Carol Wishert of 4317 Roosevelt died Sunday afternoon from injuries she received when a motorcycle she was riding and a car collided at the intersection of Kansas and McDonald Streets about 6 p.m.

According to police reports, the motorcycle, driven by Mitchell Cary Whitley, 18, of Midland Mobile Park, No. 89, was northbound on McDonald Street, and a car driven by Curtis Scott Lemons, 17, of 4321 Harlowe Drive was westbound on Kansas Street when the two vehicles collided.

Whitley was listed in satisfactory condition early today at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Police said investigation of the mishap is continuing.

In the second accident, H. O. Walker of 806 S. Colorado St. was killed in a one-car accident about 2 a.m. Sunday on Texas 349 south of Midland near the Upton County line.

According to a Department of Public Safety spokesman, Walker died after he was thrown from his car in the accident.

Walker's car was apparently traveling at a high rate of speed when it left the highway on the east side and skidded 888 feet. The car then returned to the highway and skidded 175 feet before leaving the road once more, the spokesman said.

The car continued to skid, this time 92 feet into a barbed wire fence. The car then slid 163 feet into a pasture before overturning one time, the spokesman said.

Walker was thrown 53 feet from the vehicle, according to reports.

Justice of the Peace Robert Pine pronounced Walker dead at the scene about 8:40 a.m., shortly after the accident was discovered.

Carriers said in cahoots against new competitor

DALLAS (AP) — The feud among three Texas-based airlines warmed Sunday when a report by the Justice Department surfaced, alleging that Braniff International and Texas International airlines worked together to thwart competition by Southwest Airlines.

The report claimed the two interstate carriers exchanged business secrets and ordered employees not to cooperate with the intrastate Southwest Airlines.

Cited in the report were internal company memos and grand jury testimony that had been secret. That grand jury testimony was made in 1975, after an antitrust indictment charged that Braniff and TI conspired to restrain trade at a time when Southwest was just getting off the ground. The indictment was dismissed on procedural grounds.

A new grand jury is presently investigating the case.

Both Braniff and TI have denied any wrongdoing in the matter.

Southwest was organized in 1967, but court cases kept the airline on the ground until 1971, when a Supreme Court ruling allowed it to begin service.

Once service began, the report said, Braniff and TI mapped strategies that included close monitoring of Southwest ticketing operations. The report said the goal was to see if Southwest was violating Civil Aeronautics Board rules by carrying passengers making interstate flight connections.

The report also quotes a memo in which Jim Street, Braniff director of passenger and cargo services, told his employees, "If one of our Rocket flights incurs a delay, we will not under any circumstances refer any of our stranded or delayed passengers to Southwest."

"We will supply no information, loan no equipment nor in any way accommodate or assist Southwest Airlines."

The report also states that a TI

executive tried to influence officeholders to appoint persons sympathetic to Braniff and TI to the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

John Heimann are searching the records for about 20 additional loans which might have been extended to Mrs. Lance, as well as other family members and business entities.

In a story Sunday, the Times said "a potentially embarrassing agreement" between Lance and Robert Bloom, acting comptroller before Heimann took office, was rescinded the day before Carter nominated Lance to be budget director.

Under the agreement, signed Dec. 2, 1975, Lance pledged to correct a number of serious management deficiencies at his Calhoun First National Bank in Georgia, some of which violated the law, the Times said.

The newspaper said today that special Internal Revenue Service agents are investigating the handling of Lance's banking affairs by officials of the comptroller's office. The IRS would neither confirm nor deny that report, attributed to administration sources.

Specifically, the Times said, the IRS agents are investigating whether begin investigating loans Carter's longtime friend obtained when he was a Georgia banker.

Carter spoke in an interview with ABC News that was broadcast Sunday night. He was questioned Wednesday, at the end of a five-day visit to his hometown of Plains, Ga. Since Wednesday, there have been reports that the comptroller has broadened his investigation.

The New York Times said Saturday that investigators for Comptroller

Bloom proceeded properly in giving Lance a clean bill of health in a letter to the Senate committee considering his nomination.

The agents also are reviewing how examiners supervised the Georgia banks with which Lance was associated before taking office, the paper said.

An administration official conceded Saturday that Carter was paying a political price for the investigations. "Certainly it's politically difficult for us," said the official, privy to the President's thinking. He declined to be identified.

Asked whether Lance might quit, the official added:

"I would expect he would not, and everyone would hope that he would not take any sort of action like that."

Meanwhile, the Federal Reserve said Sunday it was making 195 stocks traded over the counter, including those of another Lance bank, the National Bank of Georgia, subject to its reserve requirements. Lance headed the bank before joining the administration.

More IRA attacks feared

By ED BLANCHE

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Irish Republican Army is expected to escalate its attacks on British troops in an attempt to compensate for its failure to disrupt Queen Elizabeth's visit to Northern Ireland last week.

"Operation Monarch," the massive security operation during the royal visit, bottled the guerrillas of the IRA's Provisional wing up in the Roman Catholic areas that are their strongholds and forced them to limit their attacks to those areas.

However, the British cannot maintain that kind of round-the-clock pressure for long.

Sympathy for the Provisionals among the Catholics has waned in the last year, but they still maintain a hard core of deep-rooted support. British intelligence sources admit this is all the guerrillas need to continue their hit-and-run war.

"We know that militarily we can't win this war," said one Provisional officer. "But the Brits know they can't win either, so this thing will go on until the Brits finally get exhausted and agree to get out."

"Every Brit soldier that we shoot takes the Brits that much closer to the (Continued on Page 2A)

Carter to meet Israeli, Arab foreign ministers

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter will meet with the foreign ministers of Israel and at least four Arab nations next month to build on what the administration calls "continuing momentum" toward a Geneva peace conference on the Middle East.

These meetings and what the President concedes are "major differences between Arabs and Israelis" were likely to be topics for discussion at lunch today between Carter and former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Another probable item for discussion was the new Panama Canal agreement, which Carter and Kissinger have talked about on the telephone within the past week. The President would like support for Senate ratification from the former secretary, whom he criticized during last year's presidential campaign for being a "lone ranger" in foreign policy.

The pact faces stiff opposition. Acknowledging that the agreement "is a tough political question," Carter wrote to all members of Congress on Friday for the second time in a week saying: "I need your help." The White House made his letter public on Saturday.

At the September talks on the Middle East, the foreign minister of Lebanon might join his counterparts from Syria, Jordan, Egypt and Saudi Arabia in their parade to see the President and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance. The Middle East ministers will be attending the United Nations General Assembly that month.

Still to be worked out are dates for the meetings and whether they will be in Washington or New York, according to an administration official. The significance of the meetings, the official said, is that "the peace process is still going on."

"The momentum is continuing," he said.

Carter announced his meetings with the foreign ministers after receiving a first-hand report Sunday from Vance on his 13-day trip to six nations in Europe and the Middle East. Vance said the United States has pared differences between Arabs and Israelis "down to the bedrock."

After Vance's report, which lasted more than 2 1/2 hours, the White House issued a statement saying the secretary had made "some progress" on his tour, "particularly in reaffirming Security Council resolutions 242 and 338 as the basis for negotiations."

Bell fascinates youth at oldsters' gathering

CRANE — Alan Martin admiringly was running his hands over the "Freedom Bell."

"I know the man that did this," the 10-year-old lad said of the bronze bell. "He said the first one he made cracked."

So did the original, the ol' liberty bell.

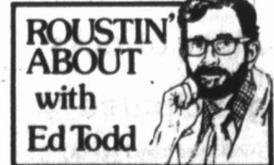

The man that "did this" — cast the bell — was P. O. "Slim" Vines, an old-time Crane cowhand, oilpatch worker and, today, sculptor.

Alan was over at the Crane County 4-H Club Exhibition Building for the old-settlers' get-together Saturday afternoon. It came on the occasion of Crane's 50th year, its Golden Jubilee.

He wasn't much out of place. Youngsters never are when old folks are around. They seem to enjoy each other.

Anyway, there was home-made ice cream to be passed out. And what kid wouldn't run a mile for a dish?

Upfront, on the stage in the exhibition building, was Vines, quite unaware that his hand-cast bell was admired so. With scraps of bronze donated by the local folks, he cast the bell for Crane and for the Bicentennial in 1976.

It was his job to put the show together for the old-timers. Vines made announcements and the such. "There was a lot of talking going on among the grown folks. The youngsters, as usual, were playing.

Most everybody knew everybody else.

Rain chance improves

Mother Nature is still toying with area residents' hopes for rain, but chances of rain in the next 24 hours look better than they have for the past few days.

The weatherman is predicting a 40 per cent chance of rain tonight and a 20 per cent chance for Tuesday.

Sunday, only a trace was recorded by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Skies are expected to be partly cloudy through Tuesday, with a low tonight in the upper 60s and a high Tuesday in the mid-90s. Winds are expected to be from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

This morning's low was 71 degrees and Sunday's high was 95 degrees.

It was almost nippy this morning at sunrise as temperatures in some areas were reported below 70 degrees. But a sunny warming trend was quickly noticed after sunrise in Lamesa, Andrews, Big Lake, Odessa, Stanton, Rankin and Crane.

Thunderstorms were expected to roam the state again today after widely scattered thunderstorms and (Continued on Page 2A)

Improved health care

September 17 is destined to be one of the most significant days in Midland's history.

That is the date on which Midland County voters will decide whether to create a countywide hospital district and whether to issue $10 million in bonds for improving and enlarging Midland Memorial Hospital.

It truly will be a day of decision for residents of the city and county. Hopefully, both propositions will be approved by wide margins.

Actually, approval of both propositions means more than just creating a district and providing funds for refurbishing and enlarging a hospital; it means improved health care for all residents of the county. And this is something in which all of us certainly should be interested.

Last week's action by the board of trustees of Midland Memorial Hospital in calling the election to submit the two issues to the voters was wise and sound, and the trustees are to be commended in this regard.

It isn't something which was determined overnight. It was a tough decision to make, and it came only after three years of study and intense soul-searching — at the community level.

It was determined sometime ago that the present hospital facility simply cannot meet the demands of the fast-growing community. Various alternatives then were considered over a period of months. And after long, serious deliberation, it was determined that the hospital district-bond issue proposal was the best and most feasible way of taking care of a critical situation facing the community and of providing first-rate health care for city and county residents.

Affiliate-determining sessions were held with a broad cross-section of the community's population. The matter was researched thoroughly by representatives of a professional firm. The hospital district-bond issue proposal was recommended in each instance. Several suggested options were ruled out in favor of the plan which finally was adopted and which will be before the voters for a final decision.

All those persons and groups who have studied the matter are in agreement that this is the only feasible means of financing the desperately needed improvements.

Residents of the city and county through the years have been most fortunate in having a community hospital which had been erected by voluntary contributions. Additions and improvements though the years also have been funded by a limited number of interested individuals, firms and organizations. But it finally reached the point where this means of voluntary financing no longer was feasible — in the amount needed to do the job. The comparative few no longer can be expected to bear the total burden.

Creating a hospital district and having all citizens participate in the funding of the improvement and enlargement project at hand, seemingly is the fairest, most equitable and most feasible way of taking care of Midland's hospital problem.

Mickey Cappadona, chairman of the hospital's board of trustees, explains that the creation of the hospital district also "will help us overcome an inequity which has plagued Midland's sick for years. In the past, the bulk of the indigent care-bad debt burden has been carried by the sick people who can pay their bills. It is our philosophy that if a man can pay for his medical care he should do so, but if he cannot, he should not be turned away sick. It is also our philosophy that the entire community and not just the sick should help pay for those who cannot pay. The creation of a hospital district will make this possible." We agree wholeheartedly.

This is the top priority item facing residents of the city and county at this time. Improved hospital care, which means improved medical care for all citizens, is at stake in the upcoming election.

This is why September 17 is a most important date to remember. Think about it.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

U.S. AID director criticized

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Just about every nation in real or apparent need has received substantial aid from the United States. Now the official in charge of dispensing the aid, John Gilligan, has been quoted in the papers as saying our tax money has gone for "Rolls-Royces and fighter planes and bowling alleys to keep the rulers happy."

This is raising a rumpus in the backrooms of Washington. Gilligan, director of the Agency for International Development (AID), has been accused of spouting off "half-baked, outdated clichés," of taking "a series of cheap shots," of undermining his own agency. Dismayed subordinates have been heard to suggest he should be banished to Gilligan's Island.

The whole hubbub can be summarized in a confidential exchange of letters between an indignant congressman and the outspoken Gilligan. Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., a champion of the unpopular aid program, wrote angrily: "I can only say that I was shocked and dismayed at the content of your statements as reported in the newspaper..."

"Either the things you said are true and your staff has been running a woefully mismanaged program," Solarz said, "or else you were misrepresenting the program over which you were in charge." He demanded to know "where and when have we bought Rolls-Royces under the AID program? Where and when have we bought bowling alleys to keep the rulers happy?"

The congressman accused Gilligan of trying to "lead the pack in denouncing" his own foreign assistance program.

The AID director responded that he had been "speaking in the past tense," that he had been "attempting to make the point that numerous Americans believe" aid funds have been misused and that, in fact, aid money had been used to buy a helicopter for Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, to construct a luxury hotel in the Dominican Republic and to bolster dictators.

But Gilligan insisted he merely wanted "to get across the message that the new administrator of AID was aware of these and other criticisms and intended to see that funds are used as Congress has directed."

We have kept a close watch on the distribution of aid for a quarter century. The program began from the best motives; the American people after World War II wanted to get the world going again. But all too often, Uncle Sam offered handouts to hands that were only too quick to pick his pockets.

Nor has the flow of aid, as Gilligan suggested, always been channeled to the neediest. It has often been used as a form of bribery to keep foreign potentates on our side in the world power struggle.

But the focus has changed in recent years; AID projects are now designed to help the world's impoverished people increase their agricultural productivity. "Rural development," has become the watchword.

America has vital bases in Philippines

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service

All of Asia is watching carefully as to what we do about our large military bases in the Philippines and when and how we pull our military forces out of Korea.

There are many in Asia and the far Pacific who believe that the United States is giving up that part of the world and letting it go virtually by default to the Russians who keep probing here, there and everywhere for soft spots to exploit.

Our two big bases in the Philippines long have symbolized American military power in the Far East.

About one-third of the ammunition and other equipment earmarked for possible emergency use in Korea is stored at Clark Field on the outskirts of Manila and at Subic across the bay. Clark Field is the home base for cargo planes required to transport men and materials to our forces or allies.

Many of these bases have become a symbol of American credibility. Communist and near-Communist nations frequently assert that the United States will not remain in Asia and that our power is shrinking everywhere.

Typical is the statement by the Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore. He is openly apprehensive about the withdrawal from Korea of more than 30,000 troops over the next four or five years as announced by President Carter. He wonders aloud about American determination to back words with muscle.

Lee has had a number of discussions with President Ferdinand E. Marcos of the Philippines stating that American withdrawal from Philippine bases, unless new treaties can be worked out, is highly damaging to regional security and the actual removal of these bases would be "a disaster."

Japan has come to depend upon the U.S. Navy to keep sea lanes open because of the importance of Subic. Especially are they concerned about the Malacca Straits between Malaysia and Indonesia. This is Japan's principal lifeline to the Mideast oil necessary to fuel its industrial setup.

Even the Red Chinese have been making strong hints that the United States should not leave Clark and Subic.

Both installations have secret war rooms and both have vast stores of guns, ammunition and other military hardware.

Clark has been developed to a point where it can move 3,000 tons of cargo a day. Its engineers within 24 hours can establish an airfield as far away as West Africa and it can move supplies and troops with equal speed. Subic has the naval facilities to dry-dock and repair any ship in our fleet. The anchorage is one of the best protected and largest in the world.

Our relations with the Philippines in recent years have, unfortunately, deteriorated.

At one time, our former colonial possession which was turned into a commonwealth and then an independent state ahead of schedule, trusted the Americans and considered us its closest ally.

Now President Marcos, who is virtually a total dictator, is playing a game with Russia and the Red Chinese on one side pitted against us.

He has closed down many newspapers and radio stations, imposed strict censorship, sent many political prisoners to jail without trial and has imposed martial law. He and his wife's families have become among the richest in the Philippines.

When one steps out at the airport in Manila and asks which hotel chain owns that big new hotel with its terraces and splashing fountains, the reply is, "It belongs to the president."

When you go downtown to the large shopping center with its huge underground garages, the same question is asked, "Who does it belong to?" The prompt reply is, "It is owned by the president and his family."

In our negotiations to renew the bases in the Philippines, Marcos and his government are making heavy enlarged demands on the United States. The base agreement legally runs until 1991.

Despite all of the propaganda against the United States in the Philippines and the mob demonstration staged against us by students under Marcos' instructions, there is still a vast reservoir of goodwill and trust in the Philippines for the United States.

INSIDE REPORT:

A President Jimmy Carter recession in the making?

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK
HUTCHINSON, Kan. — The danger of political loss attending President Carter's retreat from campaign promises in the wheat belt is that the broken promises coincide with a wheat belt recession of portentous political dimension.

The President's year-ago pledge to give wheat farmers a level of price supports "at least to equal production costs" might be pushed over as standard campaign hyperbole if wheat prices were now falling and farmers contending to survive.

Instead, a little-voiced survey by the Department of Agriculture shows that in mid-1977 three of six major wheat states — Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma — were in "very severe" financial straits; the other three — Colorado, North Dakota and South Dakota — were in a "severe" financial situation.

This largely overlooked report makes sinister reading: of 32,000 bank borrowers surveyed in Kansas during April, where almost all loans are linked to the wheat economy, 3,200 "passed their" loans and 1,200, or 37 percent, are either "contingent" or "in default."

Consequently, wheat farmers are not putting out much. To the contrary, added to the normal political grievances spreading across the lush soils of Kansas is the special fury of a voter scorned that comes from this fact: thousands of wheat families and other rural voters reversed age-old Republican voting habits last November to support Jimmy Carter, apparently on the theory that a peanut farmer was a natural ally of a wheat farmer.

The degree of this crossover, with its potential of a huge voter harvest by Mr. Carter in 1980, has apparently been missed by the White House. Otherwise, the President might not have walked away so quickly from his campaign talk of a $3 price support for wheat (which he set instead at the old $2.25 level).

Likewise, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland, who is perceived out here as an amiable White House messenger boy, would probably have fought harder for his farmer constituency against Mr. Carter's strong budget-balancing policies.

The switch of voters from Republican in 1972 to Carter-Mondale last November, as reported in a confidential poll by respected political pollster Robert Teeter, was much heavier among rural than city voters. In Nebraska, a major wheat state, Teeter found the pro-Carter switch in the farm vote running 8 percentage points ahead of the pro-Carter switch in towns and cities.

Even more astonishing was Ohio. Republican farm defections to Mr. Carter in Ohio began worrying party leaders well before the election, but Teeter's 1977 county-by-county analysis shows the depth of that defection: a 19-percentage-point decline in the Republican presidential vote, as contrasted to a mere 9-point decline in the cities of Ohio.

"The surprising loss of Ohio (by Gerald Ford) can be attributed to the unique impact that Carter had in the rural areas," Teeter's unpublished poll reported. "These (voting) changes produced the unusual pattern of a Republican presidential candidate receiving a higher vote from Ohio's metropolitan areas (40 per cent) than from its rural counties (46 per cent). In 1972, Nixon ran 7 points better in the rural than the metropolitan counties of Ohio."

Likewise, Teeter found that in the "contribution ratio" (the share of the total Republican vote) in Wisconsin — a major farm state — rural counties contributed a mere 42.2 per cent. The balance came from metropolitan areas. That elevated Mr. Carter almost 10 points ahead of the 1968 performer in rural Wisconsin of Hubert Humphrey, long a farmer hero.

What this means is that the farm

states saw something special in peanut farmer Jimmy Carter. Indeed, Teeter found that the only offset to the surprising strength of Mr. Carter and his running-mate, Minnesota's Walter Mondale, in 11 farm-belt states was Kansas Sen. Robert Dole. The counties in which Dole campaigned last fall showed a consistent 2-point lag in their swing to Carter-Mondale compared to counties where he did not campaign.

Some farm-belt politicians suspect that Mr. Carter has consciously ignored these pro-Carter sympathies in cutting farmers out of his shrinking pie of federal subsidies. Others blame it on simple White House ignorance of wheat-belt politics. Whichever it is, the swing back to the Republicans in the wheat belt is on, in earnest, fueled by the fury of the scorned.

Occupied territories may receive services

By DIAL TORGERSON
The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM — Israel Sunday moved toward providing residents of occupied territories many of the same social services now provided only within Israel — a step critics termed a move toward annexation.

Prime Minister Menahem Begin brought the plan up at the regular meeting of his cabinet, which approved it and passed it to a ministerial committee for implementation. A spokesman said the move was being taken "for humanitarian reasons."

Of the 1.3 million residents of the occupied territories — the lands taken from Arab nations in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war — all are Arabs except for some 7,000 Israeli settlers. The Begin plan would give the Arabs of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip much the same services enjoyed by Israelis. A spokesman asked the cabinet spokesman if the move was a step toward annexation of the occupied territories by Israel.

"The Israeli people cannot annex Israel," he said. The day after his Likud Party emerged victorious in the May 17 national elections, Begin termed the former Arab areas "liberated" and said Israel could not annex what was already Eretz Israel — the biblical name for "the land of Israel."

Begin's government caused an international furor when it legalized three squatters' settlements on the West Bank immediately after Begin's return from meetings in Washington with President Jimmy Carter. The United States considers Israeli settlement in the former Arab territories a violation of international law and a bar to peace.

The Likud coalition's platform calls for introducing Israeli law in the occupied territories. Jordanian law now applies in the formerly Jordanian West Bank and Egyptian law in the formerly Egyptian Gaza strip on the Mediterranean.

Israeli law will not be introduced in the territories, the cabinet spokesman said. The existing Arab laws will continue in force.

But the Arab residents will now come under the policy guided by the principle that they are entitled to the same services enjoyed by residents of the state of Israel, the spokesman said.

This is short of the privileges granted citizens of Israel. But residents of the occupied territories will get many benefits they now lack: government hospitals, social security, maternity grants, work injury compensation, probably some form of unemployment insurance and a bar against child labor.

Citizens of Israel get additional benefits — including the privilege of serving in the armed services — which will not go to residents of "liberated" territories under the plan.

Meanwhile it was announced here earlier Sunday that Prime Minister Begin will make an official visit to Romania late this month.

Romania is the only Eastern European country with which Israel has relations. The government there earlier invited Begin's predecessor, Yitzhak Rabin to visit Romania. The Foreign Office said Begin was extended the same invitation and accepted.

ROME (AP) — Herbert Kappler, a former Nazi official serving a life term for the mass murder of civilians in German-occupied Rome, is missing from a military hospital, police said. Italian television said he had escaped.

Kappler, 70, had been under treatment at Celio hospital in Rome for cancer for the past several months.

As a commander of the Gestapo, the Nazi secret police, Kappler was accused of ordering the death of 335 Roman civilians in a reprisal execution on March 24, 1944. He was sentenced to life imprisonment after the war.

Last December, Italy's highest court blocked a decision by a military court to set Kappler free.

Kappler had served 28 years in prison, most of them at a medieval castle-prison in Gaeta, a seacoast town between Rome and Naples.

Flood victims skeptical of volunteer assistance

By BILL PETERSON
The Washington Post

JOHNSTOWN, Pa. — There was more than a little skepticism in this flood ravaged city when it heard 200 more bureaucrats were coming. After three weeks of digging mud and filling out government forms, even one more "expert" from Washington was more than most people could stomach.

It almost made it worse that these particular bureaucrats were from Action, the national volunteer agency. "We've been up to our necks in volunteer experts. Everyone wants to tell us what to do," said Mayor Herbert Pfuhr Jr. "There've been some experts that I'd like to throw in jail."

No one here is against volunteers. Hundreds of them have come to this city since the July 29 flood killed at least 72 persons. Amish, Mennonite and Salvation Army workers have spent weeks here. So have other religious groups. They've worked quietly, not seeking or receiving recognition.

The federal government is also no stranger here. Scores of disaster workers from a host of agencies, which expect to spend a total of $170 million on recovery efforts, have been here for weeks. But they were paid. Volunteers turning in their white shirts for a weekend in the mud was another matter.

"I don't know if they're doing this as a public relations gimmick, or if they're sincere," said one local official, who asked not to be named. "I tell you, if they came here just for P.R., they're going to have to shovel a lot of — to get it."

When the five bus loads of people from Action arrived Saturday, they were greeted by one network television crew and the president of the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown. The group appeared uneasy, slumping it in their hiking boots, Addidas sneakers and pre-faded blue jeans. When one woman was asked if she was worried about getting her costume of Frye boots, bright yellow rain slicker and tight new jeans dirty, she said knowingly. "It's the only thing I ever wore when I lived in San Francisco."

Mary King, the deputy director of Action, was embarrassed by the scene. "We didn't want it this way at all," she said, adjusting the Pam Am bag on her shoulder. "We didn't want any publicity at all."

The pomp ended quickly. Then King, Action director Sam Brown, and most of the other heavies in the group were chartered off in their air conditioned buses to a Solomon Run, a housing project badly damaged by the flood.

They began work at 1:05 p.m. and ended at 5 p.m. During that time, they shoveled mud, carried ried garbage, swept floors, scrubbed walls and refrigerators, spread lime and sweated. They cleaned several floors of apartments in the housing project and emptied three basement rooms, filled with mud since the flood.

The group included secretaries, former Peace Corps volunteers, VISTA workers and most of the top of Action's organizational chart. Marjorie Tabankin, who heads VISTA, was there. So was John Lewis, who oversees all domestic poverty programs. Alison Teal, Brown's girlfriend, Don Green, Brown's right hand man, and a host of other top level bureaucrats.

At midafternoon, George Wakji, the agency public relations chief, was puffing on the sidelines, complaining of his age (48). Nobody had been pressured to come, he insisted. Everyone volunteered for the weekend.

Agreements end threat of telephone strikes

By The Associated Press

Agreements reached in weekend bargaining sessions around the country ended or averted strikes against local telephone companies.

Mail ratification was expected to be completed by mid-September.

The Communications Workers of America reached a national contract with the Bell Telephone Company on Aug. 6 calling for 31 per cent in wage increases over three years. The contracts settled this weekend covered local issues.

Sales personnel, line workers, clerks, operators, repair workers and installers were involved in the local contracts.

Strikes had begun at midnight Saturday in New York State, Indiana, Michigan and parts of Georgia when negotiators agreed on terms.

Western Electric Co., the Bell System's equipment manufacturer, settled with 20,000 CWA employees on Sunday. Some Georgia members had begun to picket when word of the settlement reached them.

Michigan Bell settled with 20,000 CWA workers after a seven-hour strike. Robert Salton, Bell bargaining team chairman, asserted that the state and national contracts would cost the company about $125 million in Michigan over three years.

Illinois Bell reached agreement with the CWA and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers on contracts covering 25,000 workers.

The CWA and New England Telephone Co. settled a pact involving 26,000 workers in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

Connecticut workers reached tentative agreement with the Southern New England Telephone Company, keeping 9,100 workers on the job.

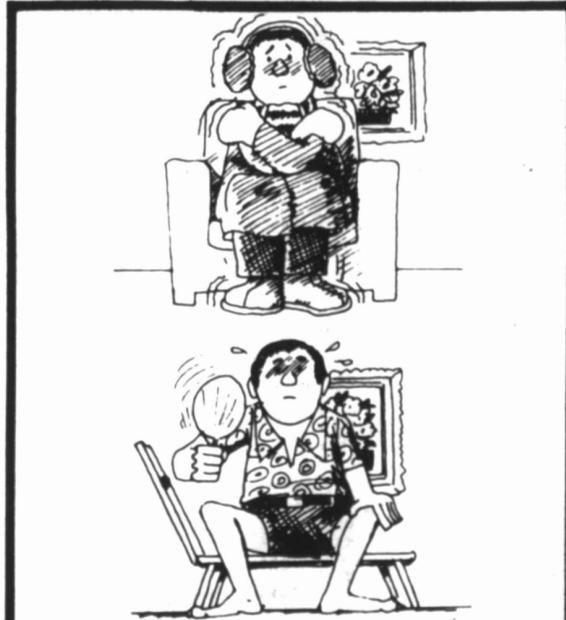

The CWA agreed on a local contract with Indiana Bell early Sunday, ending a four-hour walkout by 8,200 workers across the state.

In Seattle, Pacific Northwest Bell made an 11th-hour settlement with 11,000 workers.

In Denver, negotiators for CWA's Mountain Bell Bargaining Unit and the telephone company reached tentative agreement on the pact Saturday. It covers local issues affecting 23,000 Rocky Mountain area telephone workers.

'Son of Sam' coverage evokes some questions about press' role

By JACK EGAN
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — While the most massive police manhunt in New York history ended with the arrest late Wednesday of the man authorities say is the "Son of Sam," the controversy over the drumbeat of news coverage surrounding the case is now coming to a head.

Falling into the usually felloe news period of the August dog days, word of the arrest of 24-year-old David Berkowitz as the suspected 44-cal. killer who terrorized New York City for more than a year dominated headlines not only here but around the world.

London's sensational tabloids gave the story larger headlines than Queen Elizabeth's controversial visit to violence-wracked Northern Ireland. Even the Vatican's ultra-conservative daily had a page-one report about "Figlio di Sam."

In New York City, newsstands reported the greatest demands for papers since the assassination of President Kennedy in 1963. Enlarged press runs of the city's three dailies were snapped up.

The New York Post Thursday sold more than 1 million copies — about 600,000 more than usual — with editions that blared the one-word headline "caught" in 2 1/2 inch crimson type over a picture of Berkowitz.

The Daily News, the country's largest circulation daily, increased its 1.9 million press run by 400,000 copies only to find this was inadequate. And copies of The New York Times which increased its run by about 50,000, also quickly disappeared.

On television, the local and network newscasts blanketed the story. ABC took up nearly 19 minutes of its half-hour show Thursday night with "Son of Sam" stories. And Barbara Walters anchored her portion of the program from New York police headquarters.

But amidst the public's apparently insatiable desire for news about Berkowitz and what makes him tick, some serious questions are being asked.

Did the press, particularly the city's two tabloid newspapers, the News and the Post, in competing for sensational new angles on the story egg on the killer and needlessly heighten the atmosphere of fear that pervaded the city prior to the suspect's capture? Or did the stories help to smoke him out?

And now that suspect Berkowitz is in custody, the question has been raised as to whether the unprecedented volume of publicity makes a fair trial possible.

Probably the most pointed criticism of the press coverage in the case voiced so far is in the current issue of the New Yorker magazine. It's "Talk of the Town" section opens with a comment on the "Son of Sam" case that charges "just about everything done by the press here — especially by the Post and the News — has made a bad situation worse for the residents of New York."

It goes on to say that "by transforming a person who has killed or wounded 13 people into a seemingly omnipotent monster stalking the city, the press has created the kind of public and official hysteria that may cause the death of innocent suspects and will make a fair trial of an accused killer nearly impossible."

The comment was written prior to Berkowitz's arrest. But New Yorker editor William Shawn said Friday the magazine stands by the piece, adding that the coverage since the suspect's apprehension has "been somewhat worse." Shawn said the press has been "retroactively romanticizing the criminal, in this case a man who is probably insane," and this "has an effect on the future because it stirs up other people who are deranged."

Daily News columnist Jimmy Breslin, who wrote a number of columns on "Son of Sam" and was a recipient of a widely publicized letter from the killer in June that the News published, was singled out in the New Yorker for criticism.

Breslin, responding in a column in Thursday's News, disclosed that the New York police wanted the letter released to the public to induce the killer to perhaps write again and reveal more clues to his identity.

And Breslin said he also consulted with top police officials and a criminal psychiatrist recommended by them before carefully framing a response to the letter in a published column.

"I was quite outraged by the New Yorker piece," Daily News editor Michael J. O'Neill said in an interview. "In the case of the 'Son of Sam' I would not argue that everything we did was exactly the way I would have liked it. Nevertheless, the fact is that we very carefully consulted with the authorities almost at every step along the way on whether reporting certain facts and certain parts of the investigation would help or hurt the work of the police. And I'm not aware of a single instance in which we went ahead and published anything that the police had advised us would be harmful either in terms of the police investigation or in terms of creating public anxieties."

In fact, it has been disclosed that the News learned that police had obtained a set of latent fingerprints from a letter allegedly sent by "Son of Sam" but, at the request of the police, did not print this information because police wanted to use the prints to sort out possible suspects. The Times learned about the same information later and also voluntarily withheld it from publication. Both newspapers were praised by Police Commissioner Michael J. Codd for their restraint.

As to accounts that the Daily News and most other news organizations have published or aired based on what Berkowitz allegedly told police during his interrogation, O'Neill said he "personally had a very detailed conversation with a key authority to reassure myself that if we carried a story saying this fellow had confessed, that printing that fact would not in any way interfere with the process of justice."

vention in Albuquerque, N.M., over the weekend. At right is Hector P. Garcia, GI Forum founder. (AP Laserphoto)

Work out best play for second trick

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

There are two ways to play a suit: you can furrow your brow until you work out the right play; or you can go at it slapdash, with a convincing excuse in reserve if your attempt fails.

Put yourself in the South seat and imagine that you can't see the East-West cards. Assume that West's lead is from a four-card suit.

You need two diamond tricks to make your contract. Distribute the five missing diamonds whichever way you like: there is still a right way to play the suit. Work it out for yourself before you read on.

RIGHT START

Take the ace of diamonds and then lead a low diamond from dummy.

If West has all five diamonds, your ten will force out the queen. Later you will lead from your own hand toward the jack.

If East has all the diamonds, he must play the queen to stop you from winning a second trick at once. Then you can easily develop a trick with the ten or jack.

Much the same is true if the diamonds break 4-1. It would be fatal to lose dummy's jack to a singleton honor.

Did you work it out correctly? The right play may win more points, but the imaginative excuse wins more admiration.

DAILY QUESTION
Dealer, at your right, bids one diamond. You hold: S-K76; H-AK4; D-10643 C-AQJ. What do you say?
ANSWER: Bid 1 NT. This shows the same value as the opening bid of 1 NT. You are supposed to have a sure stopper in the opponent's suit as well, but the notrump overall will probably cause less trouble for you than any other action.

Mexico making attempt to recover economically

By LEONARD GREENWOOD
The Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY — Slowly, with sacrifice still to come, Mexico is laying the foundations for a recovery from last year's economic disaster, when declining production and foreign sales, soaring inflation and foreign debts forced the government to devalue the peso by almost 50 per cent.

Eight months after President Jose Lopez Portillo came to power with a rigid austerity program, there are signs that the worst is over. Inflation has been slowed to a fourth of what it was, the foreign trade deficit has been slashed and Lopez Portillo has pulled off the difficult task of clamping a 10 per cent ceiling on wage increases.

"Mexico is passing through a crisis and making a great effort to overcome it," Finance Secretary Julio Rodolfo Muctezuma Cid recently told a meeting of London bankers and financiers. "I'd like to say we're coming out of it, but I can't."

The secretary of natural resources and industrial development, Jose Andres de Oteyza, said after a recent meeting with the president that it would be at least another two years before the economy recovers.

Oteyza said that the investment capital that left Mexico during last year's crisis was not coming back as quickly as expected, industry was recovering slowly and the economy would grow only 2 per cent this year, for the second year in succession.

Mexican and foreign private bankers and economists agree with that sober analysis. They point out that with Mexico's population growing at the rate of 3.5 per cent a year there will be negative economic growth per capita, thus more unemployment in a country where there are no welfare programs for the unemployed.

In the future, Mexico's economy will be dominated by oil, and word of rich new strikes is already influencing the thinking of both government planners and foreign investors.

Since Lopez Portillo came to office in January, proved reserves have risen to 16 billion barrels from 3.5 billion barrels. There are technical reports by foreign experts that Mexico's reserves might even be as high as 100 billion barrels.

But oil cannot be developed overnight, and for Mexicans at all levels there are at least another two painful years ahead.

Meanwhile, businessmen are struggling to survive. Those who do will have to accept lower profits.

"There's a saying in Mexico that a business that does not permit the owner to stay in bed until noon is no business at all," a Mexican businessman said. "But those days are gone forever."

For the workers — even if he can keep his job — inflation continues to erode his earnings. Wage increases of 10 per cent simply cannot keep pace with inflation, which some economists say might reach 27 per cent by Christmas.

In many respects, the full dimensions of the crisis have become clear only in the past few months.

Devaluation came at the end of last August when the peso, which for 22 years had been valued at 12.5 to the dollar, fell overnight to 20. Later it plunged further, reaching its lowest point of 28 in November. Along the border it changed hands at 40.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Endometrial cancer test recommended

Dear Dr. Solomon: In your column a couple of weeks ago, you wrote about some women being more likely to get endometrial cancer than others. I clipped the column because I wanted to save it, but I've looked all over and can't find it. Could you tell me just which women run a special risk and what kind of checkups they should have. —Natalie F.

Dear Natalie: The endometrium, as you know, is the mucous membrane that lines the uterus. To find out if there is any sign of cancer or a precancerous condition, the best thing to do is get a sample of the tissue and examine it under a microscope. Unfortunately, the Pap test, which is excellent for detecting cancer of the cervix (the neck or opening of the uterus) is not accurate for endometrial cancer.

There are, however, other ways of checking, such as aspiration curettage. This procedure involves inserting a tube up into the uterus. A tiny bit of tissue is then scraped from the lining of the uterus, sucked out with a syringe and sent to the laboratory to be studied under the microscope. Dr. Saul Gusberg, the head of Obstetric and Gynecology at the Mount Sinai School of Medicine in New York and a leading authority in this field, recommends the test regularly once a year for every woman who is at high risk.

Factors that may increase a woman's risk of getting endometrial cancer include obesity, infertility, diabetes, late menopause, estrogen therapy during or after menopause, and, of course, age—endometrial cancer occurs mostly in women over fifty.

Dr. Gusberg says that a major factor in endometrial cancer is excessive hormone stimulation, and that it is becoming the most common uterine cancer in industrialized countries. He emphasizes the fact that aspiration curettage does not require an anesthetic or hospitalization—it can be done right in a doctor's office. And eventually it could, he believes, be used to monitor the condition of all women after menopause.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I enjoy, and often learn from, your medical columns. But I must comment on something you wrote recently about the rhythm method of contraception. You said: "It is also very hard to forecast the precise date of ovulation, as cycles are often irregular." With newer methods, cycle irregularity is no problem: I am referring to the Ovulation Method, whereby ovulation is predicted by cervical mucus.—Dr. Paul Marx, The Human Life Center, Collegeville, Minn.

Dear Dr. Marx: Thank you for your comments.

To J.P., Boston: Your daughter could have picked up measles (Rubeola) anytime during the infected period, which begins two to four days before the rash appears and continues during the acute stages of the disease. The virus disappears from the nose and the throat by the time the rash has cleared.

Government planning steps to protect solar system buyers

By STUART DIAMOND
Newsday

You buy a solar heating system. You leave for a brief vacation. When you return, you find that the sun's heat has vaporized the black paint on your rooftop collector. The paint is now coating the inside of the glass cover over it, so the sun can't get through. Scrap one system.

Maybe your system as a plastic cover instead, which has melted onto the hot metal collector plate underneath it. Scrap another system.

Such problems have occurred with equipment sold by some of the many companies — of varying competence — that are flooding the solar energy market. But federal officials are about to put a stop to it. In the first national solar testing program, 11 states — including 10 in the Northeast — will set standards for solar hot water heaters that are part of a massive federal grant program. The program, administered by the states, will parcel out 10,000 grants of $400 each to individuals who buy their own systems and apply for the federal funds. Applications are due in January and the awards will be made in March.

By Jan. 1, the areas involved will get a list of approved equipment firms. These firms must be used by those who apply for the $400 solar hot water grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, unless a special exception is granted. Moreover, the list will be available to anyone who wants to find out which solar heating systems have passed the tests of efficiency, reliability, maintenance and general homeowner protection.

"Some of the stuff being installed today is garbage, and the way it gets installed is poor," said Richard Thorsen, head of the mechanical and aerospace engineering department of the Polytechnic Institute of New York, which is administering the new testing program for the federal agency. "That's why this process of certification is critical."

Thorsen, who oversees the testing program said his staff has located 175 firms and nearly 1,000 distributors of solar hot water equipment in the New England and Middle Atlantic states. These firms, if they want to be certified, must send the engineering specifications of their systems to the institute by Monday. The collectors will be tested by one of 15 approved laboratories around the country. Once approved, such collectors could be used either for solar hot water or space heating, he said. All of the firms distribute their products nationally, so the test results will have wide application. Thorsen added.

Widespread interest has been sparked in solar heating systems following the 1973 Arab oil embargo and the shortage of natural gas early this year. Each week, federal agencies receive thousands of inquiries from residents across the country. While this new interest has resulted in many trouble-free systems that can supply more than half of a home's heating and hot water needs, the technology does have engineering features that can cause problems for the uninitiated.

For example, when the pumps are not operating — as during a power failure or while the family is away — the temperatures in the collectors can reach 350 to 400 degrees, said David Moore, a solar testing expert for HUD. Such temperatures could ruin the collector piping and covers; melt solder, causing leaky pipes; and boil the water in the collector, creating steam that could blow a hole in the system unless there is a proper relief valve. Solar heating systems must be designed so these problems do not occur, he said.

The agency has now drawn up standards for solar heating systems in homes that have federal mortgage insurance. In a year, the standards will probably be mandatory for most solar heating systems in this country, Moore said. In the meantime, he said, buyers should ask the following questions:

—Has the collector been tested for "stagnation" in the hot sun, at temperatures of 350 to 400 degrees?

—What certification does the vendor have? What experience with solar equipment?

—What provisions are there to separate the antifreeze used in the solar collector from the water to be heated in the domestic water tank?

—Does the vendor offer a convenient maintenance program, with a short response time and convenient parts supply?

—What kind of warranty is offered? Will the vendor stand behind the product, and to what extent? Who pays if something goes wrong?

"As with any unusual product, try to get a feel for it," Moore said. "Locate other solar customers and talk to them."

The states participating in the $4.6 million federal solar grants program are New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Florida.

Import bank may help finance Mexico line

TIJUANA, Mex. (AP) — The U.S. Export-Import Bank may loan Mexico up to $400 million of the $1.2 billion it needs to build a pipeline to carry natural gas from Mexico to the United States, according to the U.S. Ambassador to Mexico.

The bank was created by Congress to stimulate the sale of manufactured goods abroad. It may agree to finance the project along with similar banks in Japan and West Germany. Patrick Lucey told the San Diego Evening Tribune in an interview published this weekend.

The loan could mean construction of the pipeline could begin by the end of the year.

Bank officials were in Mexico City last week to meet with the government-owned oil monopoly Pemex and discuss terms of the arrangement, Lucey said.

The U.S. bank has been talking about providing $300 million to $400 million of the needed funds.

Loans from the U.S. and foreign banks likely would be made on condition that some construction materials would be bought from the countries making the loans, Lucey said.

The ambassador called the proposed Mexican pipeline "a bargain at $1.2 billion — it's almost as long as the Alaska pipeline, and that cost $9 billion."

The pipeline would bring billions of cubic feet of natural gas each day to many parts of the United States to supplement dwindling gas supplies here.

The pipeline would bring the gas from new fields in southeastern Mexico to Texas, where it would connect with U.S. pipelines.

Retirements, directors, promotions announced

NEW YORK CITY — Maurice F. Granville, chairman of the board of directors of Texaco Inc., has announced retirements, new directors and promotions.

Wilford R. Young, vice chairman, retired August 1.

Laurie W. Folmar, director and senior vice president in charge of Eastern Hemisphere activities, will retire Jan. 1.

Young and Folmar will continue as members of the board until the expiration of their present terms in April 1978.

Three senior vice presidents, Alfred C. DeCrane Jr., James W. Kinner and Richard B. Palmer, were elected directors. DeCrane also is general counsel of the company.

Granville also announced the election of two new vice presidents, the reorganization of Texaco's Eastern Hemisphere operations and of its public relations, advertising, personnel and corporate services, all effective Aug. 1.

Functions of the Producing Department-Eastern Hemisphere has been divided into two departments, each headed by an officer.

Robert C. Shields, who was vice president in charge of the company's Latin American producing operation, was named head of the Producing-Eastern Hemisphere Department.

Robert R. McCall, who was moved from general manager of the old department, to vice president in charge of Producing-Eastern Hemisphere Operations Department. He now has responsibility for Texaco's other Eastern Hemisphere operations, including the North Sea and Nigeria.

Robert M. Bischoff has been elected vice president in charge of the company's Latin American Producing operations with headquarters in Coral Gables, Florida, succeeding Shields.

Texaco's public relations, advertising, personnel and corporate services were consolidated into two departments.

William S. Barrack Jr., formerly vice president in charge of Producing Department-Eastern Hemisphere, has responsibility for the new Personnel and Corporate Services Department.

Paul B. Hicks Jr., who had been vice president and general manager for public relations and personnel, now has similar responsibilities for the new Public Relations and Advertising Department.

Conoco has safest year

HOUSTON — For the first time in company history, Continental Oil Co. has gone a full year without a single lost-time accident in any of its seven domestic refineries.

The year-long record represents a total of more than 4.4 million manhours of safety on the job, the company said. Approximately 2,140 are employed at the seven plants.

Conoco's refining department was recognized by the National Safety Council for the most outstanding safety record in 1976 among major petroleum companies. The department won first place in its petroleum manufacturing division of the NSC's annual safety contest with the lowest injury frequency rate (1.38 per million manhours). Conoco has a rate of 0.75 for 1977.

By comparison, the average for all petroleum manufacturing operations in the NSC records last year was 8.5 injuries per million manhours.

Currently, Conoco's Billings, Mont., plant has the longest individual refinery record for the company — 5½ consecutive years without a lost-time accident. Santo Maria, Calif., is next with 4½ years while Lake Charles, La., and Paramount, Calif., have completed two years. The refineries at Denver, Ponca City, Okla., and Wrenshall, Minn., have completed one year.

Program gets check

ODESSA — Charles Perry, president of Perry Gas Companies, presented a check 1,000 last week to the aviation management program at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin.

Dr. John Richardson, chairman of management and coordinator of the Aviation Management Program, said he plans to use the money to promote activities of the program.

"We will take some field trips, attend some continuing education conferences, and maybe use part of it to help defray costs of the aviation newsletter," Richardson said.

Test yields oil, water

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-13-18 University, south stepout to the Wolfcamp oil sector of the War-Wink, South field of Ward County, recovered 65 feet of oil and 4,312 feet of gas-cut salt water on a drillstem test.

Tool was open 2½ hours on the test taken from 5,972-5,180 feet.

The test, bottomed at 6,180 feet, was laying down test tools.

An earlier test from 5,037-5,522 feet, flowed gas at the rate of 25,000 cubic feet per day and recovered 188 feet of free oil and 1,109 feet of oil- and gas-cut salt water, plus 2.5 cubic feet of gas in the sampler.

Slotted to 12,800 feet, it spots 923 feet from north and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 12, block 18, ULS, 7½ miles northwest of Poyte.

Sophisticated alarm system on supertanker

By JOHN GETZE
The Los Angeles Times

ABOARD THE ARCO JUNEAU — The sea is dark green and littered with whitecaps. Less than 24 hours out of Valdez, Alaska, loaded with the first crude oil to come out of the Alaska pipeline, when the ship's collision-avoidance system alarm goes off.

Despite the relatively calm weather and the captain's assurances that the trip will be routine, the high-pitched, steady whine of the alarm sends shivers down one's spine.

Third mate Jim Kus, a young man from Maine, looks briefly at the computer-controlled screen, then picks up a pair of binoculars and scans the choppy water ahead of the tanker.

"It (whatever rang the alarm) was about a mile or so off the port bow," he says. "Probably just a wave."

The Juneau, one of three ships built by Atlantic Richfield Co. for hauling North Slope crude from Valdez to Arco's West Coast refineries, lumbered through the water like a reclining 80-story building. The weight of its 100,000-ton cargo causes the ship to ride 51 feet deep in the water.

Although there are larger crude carriers, the Juneau, which is almost as long as three football fields, certainly can be described as a super-tanker. At a cruising speed of 17 knots, less than 20 mph, the Juneau needs more than a mile and a half to come to a stop, even with its 26,000-horsepower engines on full reverse.

The tanker normally operates with a crew of 28, but on this first voyage from Valdez to Cherry Point, Wash., there are two additional seamen and an extra second officer. The ship's master is Capt. Emery A. McGowan.

two radar screens one close range, the other long range; and the ship's collision-avoidance system — a radar-fed device that sounds an alarm whenever a radar "target" appears headed in the Juneau's direction.

Such alarm systems are required if the tanker plans to put in at the port of Valdez. The Coast Guard has made them mandatory for this newest of oil tanker runs.

After two days at sea, the alarm went off again when an American President Lines container ship drew near.

The vessel was first spotted on the Juneau's radar and minutes later it could be seen on the computer-controlled screen, then picks up a pair of binoculars and scans the choppy water ahead of the tanker.

aboard the Arco Juneau. The officers and crew wear a wide variety of slacks, jeans, shirts and jackets. There are no women, but Arco does employ two women on the Juneau's two sister ships.

There is no alcoholic beverages sold on the Juneau, so the crew and the newsmen must be content to play cards or watch movies on cassette television. They are well paid and have no place to spend their money for weeks or months at a time.

Seamen can earn $20,000-a-year, the captain up to $50,000.

They get about five months' vacation a year. On board, most work from 12 to 16 hours a day. The crew's quarters are sparse, comfortable rooms, one for each man. Officers' quarters are nicer and usually include a comfortable chair for reading and a private bath. Crewmen share bathrooms with their immediate neighbor. Smoking is permitted in two lounges, one for the crew and one for the officers, and on the bridge. Large red signs warn against smoking on deck.

One of the more surprising aspects of life aboard the Juneau is the quality of food. Members of the crew say that steaks, chops, leg of lamb, biscuits, turkey are standard fare.

The collision-avoidance system again earns its way as the Juneau nears the end of its 1,230-mile trip. The Straits of Juan de Fuca, near the southern tip of Vancouver Island, are crowded with small fishing vessels. At midnight in dense fog, the system's computer control screen becomes the captain's eyes.

Amoco Oil announces new catalyst process

CHICAGO, Ill. — Amoco Oil Co. has announced it has developed new process and catalyst technology that will allow gasoline sulfur levels to be reduced to meet possible federal regulations without the added expense of octane upgrading.

Amoco said the proprietary process, which is ready for commercialization, can desulfurize catalytically-cracked naphas — the major contributors to gasoline pool sulfur levels — with minimal octane loss.

Termed "selective ultrafining," the process is similar to conventional naphtha desulfurization but uses a new proprietary catalyst, the company said.

Amoco described the catalyst formulation as "involving non-noble metals on an inexpensive support material."

By selectively removing sulfur, the process typically results in 90 per cent desulfurization with zero to one unit loss in clear motor octane and zero to three units to one unit loss in clear motor octane and zero to three units loss in clear research octane.

Conventional desulfurization of cracked naphtha to the same sulfur level would result in losses of up to five motor and 10 research octanes, according to Amoco scientists.

The company said it has worked with a well-known catalyst manufacturer to produce pilot batches of the catalyst and has quantified the effects of feedstock composition and process variables on catalyst requirements and cycle lengths in a large-scale pilot plant demonstration. Typical cycle lengths will be in excess of one year, Amoco pointed out.

West Texas pools spread

Wells have been completed as extensions to fields in Midland and Andrews counties.

Odessa Natural Corp., Odessa, No. 1-A Scharbauer, reentry project, has been recompleted as a current second Wolfcamp well and 3½-mile north extension to that pay in the Hallanan field of Midland County.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 6.28 barrels of 44-gravity oil per day, no water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,245-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 10,061-10,068 feet, after acidizing with 1,500 gallons.

A former Strawn oiler in the field, it has 5½-inch casing set at 10,650 feet, total depth, and it is plugged back to 10,550 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 38, block 41, T-1-S, T&P survey, eight miles northeast of Odessa.

ANDREWS EXTENDER
Texaco Inc. No. 3-S State of Texas, has been completed as a location northeast and northwest extension to the Block 12 (Yates) gas field of Andrews County.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 590,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 2,842-2,920 feet, following treatment with 1,000 gallons of acid, and after being fractured with 20,000 gallons and 28,000 pounds.

Location is 680 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 16, block 12, ULS, 11 miles west of Andrews.

Foreign policy more realistic than previously

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compared with the free-wheeling, evangelical approach of its early days, the Carter administration now is pursuing a foreign policy that seems much more inclined toward pragmatism and an appreciation of hard political realities.

In those first few weeks, the Soviet Union and other countries were chastised publicly for their human rights performance. West Germany and Brazil were exhorted not to go through with a deal that would give Brazil the ability to make atomic weapons. And Carter promised to do something about the "almost unrestricted" arms sales policy of preceding administrations.

Nowadays, hardly a week goes by without Carter reassuring the Soviets he does not intend to single them out for criticism on the human rights issue. In fact, there has been almost no criticism at all of the Soviets lately.

Carter appears to have accepted the reality that Brazil and West Germany are determined to go through with their nuclear transaction no matter what he says. He has reassured both long-time allies that the United States does not intend to interfere with their prerogatives as sovereign nations.

Carter's goal of cutting back arms transfers overseas does not seem to be as easy to achieve as he once thought. Recently he has been talking about adding Somalia, Sudan and Chad to the list of arms sales recipients. A $200 million sale of equipment is being proposed for Egypt and the administration also wants to sell Iran a $1.2 billion airborne radar system despite strong objections from Congress.

Much of Carter's human rights campaign apparently is aimed at pleasing domestic constituencies. Carter has been under attack from blacks and liberal Democrats in general for his fiscal conservatism but he has tried to maintain their support through his foreign policy initiatives.

This includes a much more activist American approach in promoting a transition to black rule in southern Africa through establishment of a one-man, one-vote system.

There are multiparty democracies in only two of Africa's 49 nations but Carter's expressions of concern about authoritarian rule in Africa have been directed almost exclusively at the white-ruled areas.

Thus Carter probably is the most popular American president ever from the point of view of black Africa even though black Africa's human rights record is regarded as one of the worst anywhere.

Southern Africa excepted, the administration generally has shied away from publicly identifying nations which engage in human rights abuses. This apparently reflects the pragmatic judgment that quiet diplomacy works better than public condemnation. Without announcement, the administration has suspended deliveries of police equipment to a dozen countries which repress dissidents.

On the question of economic aid to countries which violate human rights, the administration apparently has decided that aid cutoffs would be unwise. It is coming around to the conclusion that human rights include not only political but basic economic rights as well.

There is the assumption that people desperately in need should not be penalized for the misdeeds of those who govern them.

Early next month, the United States and Cuba will exchange diplomatic "interest sections," marking the first bilateral ties in more than 16 years.

This is part of the administration's policy of seeking normal diplomatic relations with all countries, regardless of ideology. But there has been no break-through on most of the substantive issues which have divided the countries for so long, and no exchange of ambassadors is in prospect.

There was much talk in the early days of the administration about a normalization of relations with Vietnam but that possibility seems remote now. Several meetings were held with the Vietnamese in Paris on that subject but there have been none since early June and none is scheduled.

Carter is maintaining a campaign pledge to withdraw U.S. ground troops from Korea over a five-year period. But as a concession to the Koreans, the Japanese and security-minded America he has decided to keep all but a third of these troops in Korea until the final year of his timetable.

Another test of the debate between change vs. continuity comes up next week when Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance visits China for talks on closer political ties.

Last fall, Carter accused the Ford administration of "trittering away" an opportunity for normalizing relations with Peking. But most officials believe that caution will prevail on the Vance visit and that the existing policy of limited accommodation with China will remain intact for some time to come.

Officer slain; man in custody

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Police said a 29-year-old Mexican national is in custody in connection with the early morning shooting death of a San Antonio police officer.

The officer, Eloy F. Gonzales, 29, died at a hospital shortly after he was gunned down in front of a lounge on the city's west side about 2:30 a.m.

Police said Gonzales, a four-year department veteran, was on patrol when two women flagged him down. A witness said the officer got out of his car and was talking with the women when a man appeared suddenly and began shouting at the officer. The witness told police the man produced a revolver and fired three quick shots, hitting Gonzales at least once.

The witness said he and a friend ran to Gonzales' side and used the officer's radio to give police the location of the shooting.

Police said a man fitting the gunman's description was arrested about two blocks away. They said a .38-caliber revolver was recovered.

Government planning steps to protect solar system buyers

By STUART DIAMOND
Newspaper

You buy a solar heating system. You leave for a brief vacation. When you return, you find that the sun's heat has vaporized the black paint on your rooftop collector. The paint is now coating the inside of the glass cover over it, so the sun can't get through. Scrap one system.

Maybe your system is a plastic cover instead, which has melted onto the hot metal collector plate underneath it. Scrap another system.

Such problems have occurred with equipment sold by some of the many companies — of varying competence — that are flooding the solar energy market. But federal officials are about to put a stop to it. In the first national solar testing program, 11 states — including 10 in the Northeast — will set standards for solar hot water heaters that are part of a massive federal grant program. The program, administered by the states, will parcel out 10,000 grants of $400 each to individuals who buy their own systems and apply for the federal funds. Applications are due in January and the awards will be made in March.

By Jan. 1, the areas involved will get a list of approved equipment firms. These firms must be used by those who apply for the $400 solar hot water grants from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, unless a special exception is granted. Moreover, the list will be available to anyone who wants to find out which solar heating systems have passed the tests of efficiency, reliability, maintenance and general homeowner protection.

"Some of the stuff being installed today is garbage, and the way it gets installed is poor," said Richard Thorsen, head of the mechanical and aerospace engineering department of the Polytechnic Institute of New York, which is administering the new testing program for the federal agency. "That's why this process of certification is critical."

Thorsen, who oversees the testing program said his staff has located 175 firms and nearly 1,000 distributors of solar hot water equipment in the New England and Middle Atlantic states. These firms, if they want to be certified, must send the engineering specifications of their systems to the institute by Monday. The collectors will be tested by one of 15 approved laboratories around the country. Once approved, such collectors could be used either for solar hot water or space heating, he said. All of the firms distribute their products nationally, so the test results will have wide application. Thorsen added.

Widespread interest has been sparked in solar heating systems following the 1973 Arab oil embargo and the shortage of natural gas early this year. Each week, federal agencies receive thousands of inquiries from residents across the country. While this new interest has resulted in many trouble-free systems that can supply more than half of a home's heating and hot water needs, the technology does have engineering features that can cause problems for the uninitiated.

For example, when the pumps are not operating — as during a power failure or while the family is away — the temperatures in the collectors can reach 350 to 400 degrees, said David Moore, a solar testing expert for HUD. Such temperatures could ruin the collector piping and covers; melt solder, causing leaky pipes; and boil the water in the collector, creating steam that could blow a hole in the system unless there is a proper relief valve. Solar heating systems must be designed so these problems do not occur, he said.

The agency has now drawn up standards for solar heating systems in homes that have federal mortgage insurance. In a year, the standards will probably be mandatory for most solar heating systems in this country, Moore said. In the meantime, he said, buyers should ask the following questions:

—Has the collector been tested for "stagnation" in the hot sun, at temperatures of 350 to 400 degrees? —What certification does the vendor have? What experience with solar equipment? —What provisions are there to separate the antifreeze used in the solar collector from the water that is heated in the domestic water tank? —Does the vendor offer a convenient maintenance program, with a short response time and convenient parts supply? —What kind of warranty is offered? Will the vendor stand behind the product, and to what extent? Who pays if something goes wrong? —As with any unusual product, try to get a feel for it," Moore said. "Locate other solar customers and talk to them."

The states participating in the $4.8 million federal solar grants program are New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and Florida.

Import bank may help finance Mexico line

TIJUANA, Mex. (AP) — The U.S. Export-Import Bank may loan Mexico up to $400 million of the $1.2 billion it needs to build a pipeline to carry natural gas from Mexico to the United States, according to the U.S. Ambassador to Mexico. The bank was created by Congress to stimulate the sale of manufactured goods abroad. It may agree to finance the project along with similar banks in Japan and West German, Patrick Lucey told the San Diego Evening Tribune in an interview published this weekend.

The loan could mean construction of the pipeline could begin by the end of the year.

Bank officials were in Mexico City last week to meet with the government-owned oil monopoly Pemex and discuss terms of the arrangement, Lucey said.

The U.S. bank has been talking about providing $300 million to $400 million of the needed funds.

Loans from the U.S. and foreign banks likely would be made on condition that some construction materials would be bought from the countries making the loans, Lucey said.

The ambassador called the proposed Mexican pipeline "a bargain at $1.2 billion — it's almost as long as the Alaska pipeline, and that cost $9 billion."

The pipeline would bring billions of cubic feet of natural gas each day to many parts of the United States to supplement dwindling gas supplies here.

The pipeline would bring the gas from new fields in southeastern Mexico to Texas, where it would connect with U.S. pipelines.

Oil strike potentials

American Trading & Production Corp., completed No. 1 W. L. Ellwood Estate as a Mississippi discovery in Mitchell County, 18 miles south of Colorado City.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 37 barrels of oil and 33 barrels of water, producing through perforations at 7,400-7,414 feet. The section had been fractured with 13,000 gallons, plus 8,000 pounds.

Drilled to 7,560 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing was set at total depth.

Location is 1,650 feet from northeast and 660 feet from northwest lines of section 27, block 16, SPRR survey, six miles east of the Ellwood, North (Yates) gas field.

Mesa finals Oiler in Lea

Mesa Petroleum Co., Midland, has completed No. 1 Houston as a fifth Wolfcamp oiler and 3/4-mile northwest extension to that pay on the east side of the Shoe Bar, North field of Lea County, N.M.

It had a daily flowing potential of 330 barrels of 39.2-gravity oil with gas-oil ratio of 1,564-1, flowing through a 32-64-inch choke and perforations at 10,509-10,560 feet. The pay had been treated with 3,000 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 11,518 feet, where 5 1/2-inch casing is seated.

Well site is 510 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 18-16s-36e, four miles southwest of Lovington.

Well burns in Mitchell

A well fire in West Central Mitchell County, 23 miles southeast of Big Spring continued burning early Monday morning, and Coots Matthews, representative of Red Adair Co., firefighting expert of Houston, was moving in equipment to attempt to put out the blaze.

The well is Mabee Petroleum Corp.'s No. 17 Bell in the Iatan, East (Howard) field. It blew out late Friday when the drillpipe hit a gas and water pocket. Gas volume is estimated at 500,000 cubic feet per day.

There were no injuries. Most of the equipment around the rig was retrieved said a Mabee spokesman, however the derrick and substructure is in danger of collapsing.

Program gets check

ODESSA — Charles Perry, president of Perry Gas Companies, presented a check 1,000 last week to the aviation management program at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Dr. John Richardson, chairman of management and coordinator of the Aviation Management Program, said he plans to use the money to promote activities of the program.

"We will take some field trips, attend some continuing education conferences, and maybe use part of it to help defray costs of the aviation newsletter," Richardson said.

South Plains tests slated

A wildcat site has been scheduled in Southeast Hockley County, and an outpost is planned in a Kent oil field.

A 12,000-foot searcher was set in Hockley County, 412 mile southeast of the Ropes, West (reef) field. It is Amerada Hess Corp., Midland, No. 1 G. K. Ward.

Project is located 4,300 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 13, block 1, PSL survey, five southwest of Ropesville.

Dyco Petroleum Corp. has filed application for No. 1 McLawry, a 134 mile northwest outpost in the Boomerang, South (Strawn lime) field of Kent County.

Location is 2,320 feet from north and 650 feet from west lines of section 15, block 95, H&TC survey, five miles northeast of Clairmont.

Planned depth is 6,200 feet.

Terrell well completes

Napeco, Inc., Houston, No. 1 Rashap, Terrell County explorer, 2 1/4 miles southeast of the one-way Allison, South (Pennsylvanian detrital) gas field, has been completed from the Pennsylvanian.

The calculated, absolute open flow potential was for 2.2 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 10,488-10,507 feet.

During four-point tests, it flowed condensate along with gas, however condensate amount was unreported on the absolute open flow.

The new well is 660 feet from south and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 5, block 176, TMR survey, 12 miles southeast of Sheffield.

The Allison, South opener, Hytech Energy Corp. No. 1 Frank Rashap Jr., finished in May 1975 for 1,000 million cubic feet of gas daily, through perforations at 10,336-10,427 feet.

New office announced

The Exxon Exploration Department has announced plans to establish a district office in Oklahoma City, B. D. Holland, division manager of the company's Southwestern Division in Midland, said.

J. W. Henderson will be district manager of the new Exxon office which will open effective September 1.

Amoco Oil announces new catalyst process

CHICAGO, Ill. — Amoco Oil Co. has announced it has developed new process and catalyst technology that will allow gasoline sulfur levels to be reduced to meet possible federal regulations without the added expense of octane upgrading.

Amoco said the proprietary process, which is ready for commercialization, can desulfurize catalytically-cracked naphthas — the major contributors to gasoline pool sulfur levels — with minimal octane loss.

Termed "selective ultrafining," the process is similar to conventional naphtha desulfurization but uses a new proprietary catalyst, the company said.

Amoco described the catalyst formulation as "involving non-noble metals on an inexpensive support material."

By selectively removing sulfur, the process typically results in 90 per cent desulfurization with zero to one unit loss in clear motor octane and zero to three units to one unit loss in clear motor octane and zero to three units loss in clear research octane.

Conventional desulfurization of cracked naphtha to the same sulfur level would result in losses of up to five motor and 10 research octanes, according to Amoco scientists.

The company said it has worked with a well-known catalyst manufacturer to produce pilot batches of the catalyst and has quantified the effects of feedstock composition and process variables on catalyst requirements and cycle lengths in a large-scale pilot plant demonstration. Typical cycle lengths will be in excess of one year, Amoco pointed out.

West Texas pools spread

Wells have been completed as extensions to fields in Midland and Andrews counties.

Odessa Natural Corp., Odessa, No. 1-A Scharbauer, reentry project, has been recompleted as a current second Wolfcamp well and 3/4-mile north extension to that pay in the Hallanan field of Midland County.

It gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 6.28 barrels of 44-gravity oil per day, no water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 2,245-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 10,061-10,068 feet, after acidizing with 1,500 gallons.

A former Strawn oiler in the field, it has 5 1/2-inch casing set at 10,650 feet, total depth, and it is plugged back to 10,550 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 38, block 41, T-1-S, T&P survey, eight miles northeast of Odessa.

ANDREWS EXTENDER — Texaco Inc. No. 3-S State of Texas, has been completed as a location northeast and northwest extension to the Block 12 (Yates) gas field of Andrews County.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 590,000 cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 2,842-2,920 feet, following treatment with 1,000 gallons of acid, and after being fractured with 20,000 gallons and 38,000 pounds.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 16, block 12, ULS, 11 miles west of Andrews.

Test yields oil, water

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-13-18 University, south stepout to the Wolfcamp oil sector of the War-Wink, South field of Ward County, recovered 65 feet of oil and 4,312 feet of gas-cut salt water on a drillstem test.

Tool was open 2 1/4 hours on the test taken from 5,972-6,180 feet.

The test, bottomed at 6,180 feet, was laying down test tools.

An earlier test from 5,037-5,522 feet, flowed gas at the rate of 25,000 cubic feet per day and recovered 188 feet of free oil and 1,109 feet of oil- and gas-cut salt water, plus 2.5 cubic feet of gas in the sampler.

Slated to 13,800 feet, it spots 933 feet from north and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 13, block 18, ULS, 7 1/2 miles northwest of Pyote.

Foreign policy more realistic than previously

By GEORGE GEDDA.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Compared with the free-wheeling, evangelical approach of its early days, the Carter administration now is pursuing a foreign policy that seems much more inclined toward pragmatism and an appreciation of hard political realities.

In those first few weeks, the Soviet Union and other countries were chastised publicly for their human rights performance. West Germany and Brazil were exhorted not to go through with a deal that would give Brazil the ability to make atomic weapons. And Carter promised to do something about the "almost unrestricted" arms sales policy of preceding administrations.

Nowadays, hardly a week goes by without Carter reassuring the Soviets he does not intend to single them out for criticism on the human rights issue. In fact, there has been almost no criticism at all of the Soviets lately.

Carter appears to have accepted the reality that Brazil and West Germany are determined to go through with their nuclear transaction no matter what he says. He has reassured both long-time allies that the United States does not intend to interfere with their prerogatives as sovereign nations.

Carter's goal of cutting back arms transfers overseas does not seem to be as easy to achieve as he once thought. Recently he has been talking about adding Somalia, Sudan and Chad to the list of arms sales recipients. A $200 million sale of equipment is being proposed for Egypt and the administration also wants to sell Iran a $1.2 billion airborne radar system despite strong objections from Congress.

Much of Carter's human rights campaign apparently is aimed at pleasing domestic constituencies. Carter has been under attack from blacks and liberal Democrats in general for his fiscal conservatism but he has tried to maintain their support through his foreign policy initiatives.

This includes a much more activist American approach in promoting a transition to black rule in southern Africa through establishment of a one-man, one-vote system.

There are multiparty democracies in only two of Africa's 49 nations but Carter's expressions of concern about authoritarian rule in Africa have been directed almost exclusively at the white-ruled areas.

Thus Carter probably is the most popular American president ever from the point of view of black Africa even though black Africa's human rights record is regarded as one of the worst anywhere.

Southern Africa excepted, the administration generally has shied away from publicly identifying nations which engage in human rights abuses. This apparently reflects the pragmatic judgment that quiet diplomacy works better than public condemnation. Without announcement, the administration has suspended deliveries of police equipment to a dozen countries which repress dissidents.

On the question of economic aid to countries which violate human rights, the administration apparently has decided that aid cutoffs would be unwise. It is coming around to the conclusion that human rights include not only political but basic economic rights as well.

There is the assumption that people desperately in need should not be penalized for the misdeeds of those who govern them.

Early next month, the United States and Cuba will exchange diplomatic "interest sections," marking the first bilateral ties in more than 16 years.

This is part of the administration's policy of seeking normal diplomatic relations with all countries, regardless of ideology. But there has been no break-through on most of the substantive issues which have divided the countries for so long, and no exchange of ambassadors is in prospect.

There was much talk in the early days of the administration about a normalization of relations with Vietnam but that possibility seems remote now. Several meetings were held with the Vietnamese in Paris on that subject but there have been none since early June and none is scheduled.

Carter is maintaining a campaign pledge to withdraw U.S. ground troops from Korea over a five-year period. But as a concession to the Koreans, the Japanese and security-minded America he has decided to keep all but a third of these troops in Korea until the final year of his timetable.

Another test of the debate between change vs. continuity comes up next week when Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance visits China for talks on closer political ties.

Last fall, Carter accused the Ford administration of "frittering away" an opportunity for normalizing relations with Peking. But most officials believe that caution will prevail on the Vance visit and that the existing policy of limited accommodation with China will remain intact for some time to come.

Officer slain; man in custody

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Police said a 29-year-old Mexican national is in custody in connection with the early morning shooting death of a San Antonio police officer.

The officer, Eloy F. Gonzales, 29, died at a hospital shortly after he was gunned down in front of a lounge on the city's west side about 2:30 a.m.

Police said Gonzales, a four-year department veteran, was on patrol when two women flagged him down. A witness said the officer got out of his car and was talking with the women when a man appeared suddenly and began shouting at the officer. The witness told police the man produced a revolver and fired three quick shots, hitting Gonzales at least once.

The witness said he and a friend ran to Gonzales' side and used the officer's radio to give police the location of the shooting.

Police said a man fitting the gunman's description was arrested about two blocks away. They said a .38-caliber revolver was recovered.

Midland, Snyder capture regional titles

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Midland's Senior Division team has seen a lot of country in the last four years, but they are going to see a lot more after nailing down the Regional Miss Softball America title at Lancaster Park Sunday afternoon.

Midland shook off a 3-1 loss to Hobbs, N. M., Sunday in the first game of a doubleheader championship playoff, and came back with a 9-6 title clinching victory in the double elimination tournament to earn a trip to Richmond, Va., for the national tournament in two weeks.

In the Major Division, Snyder won its first national berth with an undefeated regional slate after scoring eight runs in the fifth inning to down another Hobbs entry, 8-5.

THE HOBBS seniors came into the championship contest needing two straight victories to earn the national berth since they had previously lost a 6-1 decision to Midland earlier in the tournament.

Hobbs made a run at the title as Darla Garvin tossed a five-hitter at Midland in the first game. Garvin did not lose her shutout until the seventh inning when the locals finally scored on a grounder by D. K. Kittle.

Hobbs scored all three runs in the first two innings off losing pitcher

Mary Alice Sanchez, who allowed only seven hits in the game.

But when the chips were down in the championship finale, the Midland bats were much more effective, and the result is a fifth trip to the nationals.

IN THE second game, Midland came from behind twice to nail down the championship while Kathy Moore went the distance on the mound, giving up six runs and seven hits. Some erratic fielding by Midland accounted for most of the Hobbs six runs, but the bats offset the difference.

Julie Ochsner, who had her problems in the field, staked Midland to a 1-0 lead in the first inning with a run scoring double, but Hobbs took a 2-1 lead in the third frame on a key single by Kym Varner and a drag bunt by Michelle Risinger.

Midland rallied for a 3-2 lead in the bottom of the third inning when Ochsner and Moore plated runs with key hits.

Midland increased its lead to 5-2 in the fourth inning on a run scoring grounder by C. A. Haskins and an RBI single by Barbara Walker.

HOBBS MADE its final championship threat in the fifth inning with a four-run rally, which produced a brief 6-5 lead. Midland committed four errors to aid the Hobbs cause, and Garvin added a two-run single for the major damage.

But Midland's All-Stars were not to be denied on this day as Moore scored on a Sanchez bunt to tie the game.

Debra Ledbetter delivered what proved to be the game winning hit to plate Sanchez, and Gena Keneipp added the insurance with a two-run single off losing pitcher Dawn Morgan.

In the Major Division contest, the runs came in spurts, but Snyder's eight run fifth inning was the best.

HOBBS TOOK a 5-0 lead in the third inning on three hits and three Snyder errors. Karen Widman drove in a run for Hobbs with a single, but that was the only damage done to Snyder winner Connie Weber. Weber, who pitched a no-hitter earlier in the tournament, went the distance for the win.

Snyder won the game in the fifth when eight runs scored on a combination of eight walks, a hit batter and a two-run single by Martha McAnally.

Following the regional tournament, Snyder and Midland were issued Lone Star flags to fly at the National Miss Softball America tournament in Richmond. The nationals are slated for Aug. 25 through Aug. 28.

Houston Wheels wheel to title

By BOB DILLON

Houston's Wheels rallied for a pair of runs in the top of the seventh inning Sunday to down Abbey Inn of Austin, 17-15, in the finals of the Men's Class A Regional Slow Pitch Softball Tournament at Hogan Park.

With the victory, Wheels advances into the National Slow Pitch Tourney to be held in September in Richmond, Va.

Wheels went through the tough tournament unbeaten and the key to the championship was a big 8-3 victory over pretourney favorite Houston Roznouskys in a game of unbeaten powers Sunday morning.

Roznouskys then was knocked completely out of the tourney when Abbey Inn took a 13-6 victory for a spot in the finals against the Wheels.

Abbey Inn had lost to Roznouskys, 12-11, Saturday night, but got the revenge it wanted Sunday morning.

The Wheels-Abbey Inn championship game was no disappointment to the crowd as the two classy outfits went after each other.

HOUSTON'S WHEELS started off like gangbusters, scoring six runs in the top of the first inning, but Abbey Inn stormed right back with five of its own in the bottom of the inning.

Wheels used six singles to rack up six runs with Bob Morrison and Mike Smith coming through with two-run singles.

Larry Jackson singled and Jim Court doubled to get the Austin entry off and running in the bottom of the first. Mickey Wertz scored Jackson on a sacrifice fly, but it was Buster White's two-run homer that brought the Austin team back to within striking distance.

Wertz ripped a solo homer in the second to tie the game and then the two teams settled down with no more scoring until the top of the fifth.

Sam Pitcock homered and Paul Felming tripled and scored on a grounder to short by Kim Bradshaw to give Wheels an 8-6 lead over Abbey Inn.

ABBEY INN exploded for five runs for an 11-8 lead in the bottom of the fifth with the big blows being home runs by Wertz and Joe Read. Court also added a three-bagger during the uprising.

Houston came right back with seven big runs and a 15-11 advantage. Harrison polled a three-run homer and Pitcock delivered a two-run single to highlight the rally.

Not to be outdone, Austin scored four runs in the bottom of the sixth to tie the game, 15-15. Four singles and an error opened the gates for Abbey Inn.

The Wheels won it in the seventh when Wayne Hoover led off with a single. Jimmy Fleming forced him at second, but a two-base error by second baseman Kevin Moore, gave Houston the break it needed.

Pinch-hitter Don Ruggles scored Fleming on a sacrifice fly and Pitcock followed with a run-producing single for the final tally.

WITH ONE out, Abbey Inn's Larry Jackson legged out an infield hit, but Court flew out to center and Wertz forced Jackson at second and the game was over.

Midland Schlumberger was eliminated by San Antonio Bun, 26-13 Saturday night after it had beaten Dallas Begger's Club, 17-8.

San Marcos, which wound up fourth in the tourney, was eliminated by Abbey Inn, 15-11.

Roznousky wound up third and of course, Abbey Inn runnerup and Houston Wheels the champions.

Wheels placed Marvin Doherty, Bill Sattler, Harrison and Mark Harding on the all-tourney team while Abbey Inn players named were Wertz, David Pleasants and Terry Youm.

Other players chosen were Rusty Bartel and Larry Caldwell of Roznouskys; Cliff Adare of San Marcos; Wayne Hedgecock of San Antonio; Bun-N-Barrell and Roy Turner of the Austin River City Rockets.

TURNER was the leading hitter in the two-day tourney with a robust .824 average, going 14 for 17 which included six homers.

Joe Read of Abbey Inn was presented a wrist watch from the Schlitz Brewing Company for being a named Top Defensive Player and the Most Valuable Player Award went to Houston Wheel's Paul Fleming. Fleming received a big trophy and wrist watch for his efforts.

Kirkland's run nails Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — After spending his entire rookie year on the sidelines with the Baltimore Colts last season, thrills come in small packages for quarterback Mike Kirkland.

"Heck, I was just glad to score a touchdown, much less the winning touchdown," the former Arkansas standout said Sunday after his 14-yard run in the fourth quarter vaulted the Colts to a 14-7 National Football League exhibition victory over Houston.

Just to get into the game before the home folks (Kirkland is from nearby Pasadena) would have been enough. But Kirkland finished with six of eight pass completions for 101 yards, kept his cool on the TD run and was awarded the game ball.

"I needed something like this today to get going," said Kirkland, who scored his first touchdown since the opening game his senior year at the University of Arkansas. "I didn't play a single down last year in exhibition or the regular season."

"I was just trying to stay on the ground and throw when I had to," Kirkland was trying to throw but had to stay on the ground on the play that resulted in his game-winning touchdown.

Kirkland retreated to pass, then ducked under a tackle attempt by linebacker Robert Brazile and sprinted to the left end zone flag with 13:52 left in the game for a 14-7 margin.

The Oilers, who have now lost 10 of their last 11 preseason games, struck first in the first quarter on a four-yard TD pass from Dan Pastorini to Ken Burrough, who snagged the ball in the corner of the end zone.

The play stood although the Colts argued vehemently that Burrough was out of bounds when he caught the ball. Houston's defense set up the score when middle linebacker Gregg Bingham tipped a pass by Baltimore's Bert Jones and Ted Washington intercepted.

Baltimore, the defending AFC Eastern Conference champs, tied it 41 seconds before halftime when running back Doug McCauley piled one yard to complete a 69-yard drive. The drive was keyed by pass completions of 26 and 28 yards from Jones to Freddie Scott.

"We improved in every department this week except penalties and I guess you can say we improved on that too because we got more of them," Houston Oiler Coach "Bum"

Phillips said. The Oilers drew 137 yards on 16 infractions.

The game also featured a crowd-pleasing punting duel between brothers David Lee of Baltimore and Danny Lee of Houston. The young Lee, trying to make the Oiler roster, averaged 45.9 yards on seven punts and had boots of 62 and 57 yards called back by penalties.

David Lee, a 13-year veteran, averaged 38.9 on eight punts, including two kicks of 50 and 52 yards.

"I was relaxed today," said Danny Lee, who had a bad start last week against Oakland. "I didn't try to kill the ball."

Houston now is 0-2 in preseason play and Baltimore is 1-1.

Elsewhere during the second full weekend of NFL preseason activity, Seattle edged Dallas 23-17 in overtime, Buffalo defeated Detroit 17-10, Cincinnati pummeled Tampa Bay 45-0, the Saints topped the New York Giants 23-7, Kansas City edged Pittsburgh 23-21, Miami beat Washington 27-15, Denver beat St. Louis 15-7, the New York Jets took Atlanta 17-2, Chicago beat Oakland 20-13, San Diego scored a 32-13 verdict over San Francisco, Minnesota squeaked by Cleveland 34-33, New England destroyed Green Bay 38-3 and Los Angeles topped Philadelphia 20-3.

O. J. Simpson ran for 55 yards and two touchdowns in just 19 minutes of action as the Bills defeated Detroit, Simpson, who was bothered by blurred vision and missed the Bills preseason opener last week, ran for 15 and one-yard scores.

Both Cincinnati and Tampa Bay appeared in midseason form. Ken Anderson completed 14 of 17 passes for 177 yards in the first half.

As has been their habit of late, the Midlanders jumped out fast against the Sox, scoring a run in the first on an RBI double by designated hitter Duane Gustavson.

In the third, catcher Steve Haug led off the inning with a single, and after Kurt Seibert sacrificed him down to second, Pagel cleared the bases with

Wadkins downs Mr. Nice Guy

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Lanny Wadkins feels like both hero and villain.

Wadkins, a seven-year pro who has never reached the level of greatness predicted for him, won the 59th PGA National Championship Sunday with a victory over Gene Littler on the third hole of the sudden death playoff.

"I feel like a villain in a lot of ways," said the 27-year-old Wadkins in pulling off the biggest comeback of the tour this year when he made up six strokes in the final round. "They just don't come any finer than Gene. He's everybody's Mr. Nice Guy."

"AT THIS point in his career, it would have meant a lot. I've had a rough three years, but Gene has been through worse than me."

The 47-year-old Littler, leader from the beginning, had a five-stroke lead going into the final nine holes but bogeyed five of the first six and then had pars on the last three to drop into a tie with Wadkins, who birdied No. 18 to finish his round at six-under 282.

"I made a lot of bad decisions both starting out and coming in," said Littler, whose nickname is "the Machine" for his near-perfect swing. "I misclubbed at least a half dozen times."

"I made several bad decisions and they turned out wrong. I made bad shots and they went wrong. That's how you get bogey."

WHILE WADKINS waited on the 18th green, Littler and Jack Nicklaus, playing one threesome apart, were locked into a duel which many thought would produce the winner on the sunlit, 6,806-yard, par-72 Pebble Beach Golf Links.

Littler, winner in Houston by three strokes over Wadkins, made the turn for home at 10 strokes under par, taking bogeys at Nos. 3 and 5 but making birdies on 4, 6 and 7. Nicklaus and Wadkins made the turn at six under.

Amarillo falls to Cubs again

AMARILLO — The Midland Cubs open an important five-game series with El Paso tonight, still clutching on to first place in the Texas League Western Division after their 7-4 decision over the Amarillo Gold Sox here Sunday afternoon.

The victory gave the Tall City nine a sweep of this five game series with the Sox, and it also marked the Cubs ninth victory in their last ten games, which has seen them move from four games out of first place, to one game up. El Paso pounded San Antonio Sunday to stay right on Midland's tails.

Karl Pagel, the Cubs' powerful cleanup hitter who has been in the midst of a home run famine in the past three or four weeks, unleashed his long ball ability again Sunday with a two-run homer in the third to spark the Cubs to victory.

As has been their habit of late, the Midlanders jumped out fast against the Sox, scoring a run in the first on an RBI double by designated hitter Duane Gustavson.

In the third, catcher Steve Haug led off the inning with a single, and after Kurt Seibert sacrificed him down to second, Pagel cleared the bases with

6-12 Division
Point System: 1. Al and Reece Roudreaux, 75; 2. Ronnie and David Hicks, 57; 3. John and Pepper Berry, 51.

Handicap: 1. Paul Haskins and Kent Carpenter, 142; 2. Bill and Russell Owen, 149; 3. Jack and Bryan Stan-nickel, 158.

Littler then bogeyed No. 10, parred No. 11 and bogeyed Nos. 12 through 15.

"The three-putt on 12 started it off," said Littler. "And then I bogeyed 14, which really took the edge off."

WHILE THIS was taking place, Nicklaus parred No. 10 through 16 before catching a bad break on No. 17 when his tee shot on the 209-yard, par-three hole caught the crown of the green and kicked right. He bogeyed the hole to go five under.

"Gene wanted to give it to me," said Nicklaus, "but I couldn't take it."

Meanwhile, Wadkins followed the 45 minutes of drama from the 18th green.

"I really thought I had a chance when Jack made the bogey on 17," he said. "I thought that if Gene bogeyed 17 and then had a par on 18 I would win it outright."

Littler, however, parred the final three holes to set up the first sudden-death playoff ever in a major tournament.

On the first extra hole, a 382-yard, par four, Wadkins said he used the wrong club and missed the green. He saved par with a 20-foot putt, while Littler had a tap-in for his par.

BOTH BIRDIED the 502-yard, par-five second hole, each missing an eagle putt with balls rimming the cup.

On the 388-yard, par-four third, Littler hit his second shot short and to the left while Wadkins went over the green. Littler then chipped out of the grass badly and missed the 20-foot putt to the right.

Wadkins chipped to within five feet, sank the putt and leaped with joy.

To Wadkins, the victory meant many things in addition to the $45,000 first prize. He becomes a member of the Ryder Cup and World Cup teams and is exempt from qualifying on the tour for the next 10 years and for the PGA Championship for a lifetime.

his out of the park drive to put the Cubs up, 3-0. They added one more in that frame to make it 4-0.

Andy Muhlstock picked up his tenth victory of the season for the Cubs, as the righthander went 6 innings before getting relief help from George Riley. Riley got credit for the save. Mike Lemay, the Amarillo starter, was tagged with the loss, his sixth in nine decisions.

Pro football

SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Zorn, the Seattle Seahawks' quarterback, described it as a lovely game. Dallas Coach Tom Landry thought it was a joke.

"It was lovely," said Zorn after directing his team 71 yards in three plays for a touchdown in sudden death overtime that gave the Seahawks a 23-17 National Football League exhibition victory over the Cowboys Saturday night.

"I've never been in a sudden death before. That's a new experience," said Zorn. "So far, I like it."

So did 58,789 fans in the Kingdome as they watched Don Testerman crash into the end zone from two yards out for winning touchdown only 1:15 into overtime.

Zorn passed 37 yards to Sherman Smith and 32 yards to tight end Ron Howard to set up Testerman's run.

The victory boosted Seattle's preseason record to 2-0. Dallas dropped to 1-1.

The Seahawks had a chance to win the game in regulation time, but the Cowboys' towering defensive end Ed "Too Tall" Jones blocked John Leybold's 27-yard field goal attempt with 58 seconds remaining. It was the third blocked field goal attempt of the game for the 6-foot-9 Jones.

Landry was disappointed with his club's performance, but had praise for Zorn.

"We played a lousy game," said Landry. "I thought it was a comedy of errors. We had no chance of winning. I'm disappointed in our defense, especially our pass defense."

"Seattle went off pretty bad. They played extremely well. Zorn was exceptional. We tried to contain him with our defensive backs, but he was still escaping to the outside."

The Cowboys were penalized 13 times for 110 yards. One of Dallas' two fumbles led to a Seattle field goal and one of the two interceptions thrown by Cowboys led to a Seahawk touchdown.

Seattle Coach Jack Patera said the nicest thing

Cowboys play comedy of errors about the game was "winning. The thing we did best on defense was keep them out of the end zone. They moved the ball on us, but we showed some poise."

Dallas took a 17-10 lead late in the third period when safety Cliff Harris intercepted a Zorn pass and returned it 18 yards for a TD. But Seattle tied the game midway in the fourth quarter on reserve quarterback Steve Myer's 38-yard touchdown pass to Steve Largent following an interception.

Backup quarterback Danny White, who relieved Dallas starter Roger Staubach in the second half, found Preston Pearson with a 23-yard TD pass on Dallas' first possession of the second half for a 10-3 lead. Seattle tied the game three minutes later on Zorn's 37-yard scoring pass to former Dallas wide receiver Duke Ferguson on a fourth down play.

Ferguson came to Seattle last May in the controversial 4-for-1 trade with Dallas in which the Cowboys received Seattle's draft rights to Heisman Trophy winner Tony Dorsett.

Dallas took a 3-0 first period lead on Efran Herrera's 21-yard field goal. Seattle tied the score at halftime on Leybold's 46-yard field goal in the second period following a fumble recovery.

Manuel Orantes rips Connors

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Spain's Manuel Orantes enjoys not having any pressure when he plays Jimmy Connors.

"If I lose to Jimmy, everyone expects it, so the pressure is on him," said Orantes, who needed only 72 minutes to win his third U.S. Open Clay Court championship at the Indianapolis Racquet Club on Sunday.

Orantes said he was surprised with the ease of his nationally televised 6-1, 6-3 victory over Connors who is the top-ranked player in the United States and rates alongside Bjorn Borg of Sweden as the world's best.

"He made a lot of mistakes, which is unusual for him," said Orantes, the world's sixth-rated player, whose last victory over Connors came in the finals of the U.S. Open in 1975.

The play of Orantes, who earned $17,500 for the victory, failed to impress Connors.

"He just kept the ball in play and didn't do anything exciting," said Connors, who won here in 1974 and 1976. "He doesn't have an overpowering game, but he had good movement."

"He didn't hit many winners," Connors added. "I may have been a step slow. I think I was kind of jerking around in my movement. I just didn't have much feel for the ball."

Connors, who went home with $8,750, said the tournament was important for his conditioning.

"I feel better today than I did yesterday," he said. "But I'm going to take a week off and then play in Boston before the (U.S.) open at Forest Hills. By then, I'll be roaring."

Orantes, who won here in 1973 and 1975, wasn't ready to talk about a rest.

"I'm leaving right away for Toronto to play in the Canadian Open," said the 28-year-old champion. "I just started to practice on July 4 after having my arm in a cast for a month following surgery to correct a pinched nerve."

In men's doubles, Australians Cliff Letcher and Dick Crealy lost more than the championship when they were defeated by Chileans Jaime Fillol and Patricio Cornejo 5-7, 7-5, 6-3.

Tournament director Stan Malles; withheld their winnings of $1,625 apiece because the team was almost an hour late for the championship match. He added that a letter would be sent to the International Professional Tennis Council asking that action be taken against them.

"Keep your money. It's the last time I'll be here," snapped an angry Crealy.

Studies show renewed interest in longevity among Russian scientists

By DAN FISHER
The Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Already boasting many of the oldest people in the world, the Soviet Union is showing new interest in the scientific possibilities of even more dramatic longevity.

"I don't want to cause a sensation, but I want to tell you something that may shock you," Dr. L. Sukharevsky, director of the Public Institute of Juvinology, told a Russian interviewer recently. "Scientists believe that the human being can live not just 100 years, but 400 years and even more."

"Why not?" concurred L.V. Komarov, a biologist at the Institute of General Genetics and vice chairman of a newly formed National Committee on the Artificial Prolongation of Human Life.

Komarov has experimentally doubled the life of houseflies by feeding them magnetized sugar. And experiments on human volunteers involving various biochemical approaches to prolonging life are in the design stage, he said in an interview.

What do Russians think of the prospects of living so long?
"How much vodka can I drink in 340 years?" asked a 60-year-old man, laughing. (About 8,500 gallons at the rate of a little more than a half pint a day.)

"I wouldn't be so nervous if I knew I would live for another 300 years," added an 81-year-old woman.

One middle-aged Muscovite liked the idea because "then I wouldn't have to be in such a hurry all the time."

But the first reaction of another younger woman was "How will we feed everyone if we all live so long?"

Russia's aged generally continue to play an active role in their society for longer than is common in the United States, which undoubtedly accounts for some of the Soviet fascination with longevity.

That fascination even shows up in the way Russians state their age. When asked how old he is, a 39-year-old will reply: "I am in my 40th year."

The Soviet media heap recognition on the old. A documentary film on the family of 143-year-old Medjid Agaev currently is being shot in the southern republic of Azerbaijan, according to the government newspaper, Izvestia.

There is frequent mention of the fact that there are about 19,000 people in the Soviet Union (total population: 254 million) who are 100 years old or older.
