Carter ponders candidates, Lance prepares to go home

By RICHARD E. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is trying to replace a man he says is irreplaceable.

Fighting sorrow at the resignation of longtime friend Bert Lance as his budget director. Carter began the search today for a successor.

Lance, meanwhile, prepared to return home to Georgia. His mother, Annie E. Lance, said in Calhoun that she expected her son to arrive later in

"You know I've got to come back to Georgia," Lance said in an interview with radio station WSB in Atlanta.

"That's where our home is." Lance said he would not take a public job. But he said there has been 'no decision yet' about any other job. 'We'll take that as we've been taking things ... one day at a time.'

He added that he and his wife want a little rest. A spokesman for the Calhoun Chamber of Commerce said Lance was due in later today on a private flight from Washington day was Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-

One of Carter's first visitors of the W.Va., who told reporters he found the President calm, relaxed and even in what the senator called a happy mood."

"In a sense, he feels he's had a problem lifted from him," said Randolph, whose visit to the White House was to urge Carter to increase fund requests for economic development programs.

"There will be an orderly transition." the President told a news conference Wednesday when he announced Lance's resignation. "I will decide beginning after today on who a successor might be."

Among names that quickly sur-

-James T. McIntyre Jr., director of Georgia's budget office in 1972 while Carter was governor and now deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, which Lance had headed.

-Robert Strauss, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now the U.S. ambassador for trade negotiations.

-Alice Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office.

-Hale Champion, former California finance director and now an official at the Department of Health, Education and Welfare

HUD officially kayos grant bid

Midland's application for a $946,000 Community Development Block Grant for fiscal year 1977 has been formally turned down, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said today.

Notification of the denial came Wednesday in a mailgram from Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Assistant Secretary Robert C. Embry Jr. that its HAP (Housing Assistance Plan) goals a program of lower-income rental assistance despite a clear indication of need for such assistance and the availability of housing assistance funds to carry out such activities, renders the goals plainly inappropriate to meeting the housing needs and objectives identified by the Mayor Angelo said today "I regret that the office of Housing and Urban Development has decided to continue their position of arbitrarily denying Midland's application. A reading of the law clearly shows that HUD had the authority to approve the application if they so desired. I'm convinced we had a legal ap-

Embry cited the authority of section 104 (c) (2) of the block grant legislation and S 570.306 (B) (2) (II) of the block grant regulations in denying the application.

"I think we all expected it," said Councilman Carroll M. Thomas. "It is a typical reaction of a government bureaucracy not to be sympathetic to the will of the people and to force their will on the community as they interpret their needs. "I was hoping it would be different," Councilman G. Thane Akins said. "This confirms that they (HUD) are more interested in exercising their power rather than interested in the needy people of Midland."

Midland has not been the only Texas city to lose Community Development funds over the rental assistance plan this year.

Leo Garrett, director of community development, said that Freeport lost $250,000 because it did not include a rental assistance plan in its application

In accordance with regulations. Garrett said that the Midland County government will get a chance to apply for the lost city funds

Garrett said today that the county could qualify for $230,000 under the present guidelines and if a waiver is obtained from HUD in Washington, they might be able to apply for the whole $946,000.

If the county does not show a need for the funds, they may be redistributed to areas of need in Texas at the discretion of the Dallas regional HUD office.

Or if there are no needs determined sufficient in the region of Texas supervised by the Dallas office, then the funds will be "up for grabs" statewide, Garrett said.

Just over 700 Midlanders qualified for a federal rental assistance program according to revised estimates by the city planning department. And of those, 110 qualified as elderly or handicapped. the estimates showed.

Sounds of silence still enshroud 'Bubble Boy'

HOUSTON (AP) - David, the "Bubble Boy", has observed his sixth birthday still awaiting his promised miniature spacesuit.

David has been confined in a plastic isolator since birth and it is expected to be a while longer before he receives the spacesuit which would allow him to explore the outdoors.

The family helped David celebrate his birthday Wednesday with a birthday cake.

David is a victim of combined deficiency and was delivered in a germ-free area six years ago and placed immediately in a sterile "bubble unit." The disease robs the body of its germ-fighting abilities and the child has never been touched by ungloved hands.

The boy alternately spends six weeks at Texas Children's Hospital and six weeks with his parents at their ranch style

The parents have asked that their last name never be used. David's mother explains: 'Anonymity is our best hope of leading reasonably normal there had been hope David could have celebrated his birthday with the spacesuit which would have allowed him to go to the woods, the beach and other remote places he has never been. Presently portable isolator units and a specially equipped van are used in transferring David back and forth from the plastic isolators at home and the

The hospital spokesman said there were minor problems with the miniature spacesuit and it was returned to the Johnson Space Center for reworking. It is now hoped testing of the suit at the hospital can begin in October, when David is scheduled to

Baylor College of Medicine and hospital spokesmen had nothing new to add to a December report on immunological changes that eventually might mean David is outgrowing the disease.

After the spacesuit is tested at the hospital, doctors believe David will be able to spend up to four hours at a time in the rubberized garment.

Fair offers people chance to get together

BIG SPRING - The fairgrounds were just about as thick with people as downtown Big Spring is on a donothing Sunday afternoon.

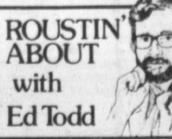

Few there were. But business would pick up. It was only midday; the youngsters were yet in school, and the grownups were either at work or milling around the house or shopping or whatever

Folks, at 50 cents a throw, wouldn't be ganging up at the main gate until near nightfall, when the midway rides and tricks would start a'wheeling and

On the Howard County fairgrounds for a' brief tour were some preschoolers, who, hand-in-hand, were winding around the fair like ants on a strange mound.

There wasn't much to see outside the 64 booths in the fair barns. Most were commercial. They had something to gain by showing off their wares or demonstrating their ser-

Booths were promoting just about everything: cotton, beef, canned goods, furniture, motorcycles, eyeglass cleaners, woodworking, jewelry, water well service, leather goods, soil-rejuvenating worms, good health and religion and so on.

To the toddlers, the fare was probably more boggling (or just a maze) than interesting.

But in the fleeting years to come. they just might learn to appreciate it all the way J. Arnold Marshall seems to. Marshall, a fair director, headed up the booth phase of the six-day fair.

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) - The White House mounted a major lobbying campaign today to try to salvage President Carter's troubled energy program in the Senate.

The President and Energy Secretary James Schlesinger sought to persuade undecided senators to side with the administration in a showdown vote scheduled for tonight on natural-gas pricing.

Carter wants to continue price controls on natural gas, but advocates of a rival plan to lift the controls claimed they would win by a narrow drum up support for the Carter plan in the Senate And President Carter was reportedly busy phoning senators to personally appeal for their support.

> One key senator on energy legislation, Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., met with Carter at the White House today and said he urged the President to "find some middle ground" on the natural gas issue.

The President was noncommittal Randolph said. But, he noted, "I think he's worried," not only about the natural gas vote but on the fate of the entire energy program in the Senate. Although Carter's plan passed the House nearly intact in August, it has been picked apart, piece by piece, since coming to the Senate.

Senate committees have thrown out completely Carter's proposal for overhauling electric utility rates and for imposing a tax on cars that get poor gas mileage, and his proposed crude oil tax appears in serious trouble.

The full Senate has already watered down the President's plan to force utilities to switch from oil and gas to coal. And most headcounts showed that he faced a probable defeat on the natural gas issue. But one congressional aide said

Shooting incidents claim 2 Midlanders

Two Midland men are dead following separate shooting incidents Wednesday night and early today. Clemente O. Lopez Jr., 22, of 1305

Cherry Lane was pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital about 9:20 p.m. Wednesday after he was shot twice at his residence, according to police reports.

Police said they received a call about 8:30 p.m. about an intoxicated person. Upon arriving at the address, they said they found Lopez lying in the front yard with a woman leaning over

The woman told the officers she had shot the man with a pistol that was found near the body, police said. The woman was later arrested at the police department.

The woman told police she had been living with Lopez, but had asked him to leave the house. He refused and reportedly told the woman he was going to kill her.

Odessa judge's travel expenses to be probed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Representatives of the attorney general's and the comptroller's offices said Wednesday they will look into the travel expenses of the chairman of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

The two agencies commented after publication of a series of copyrighted stories by the Austin American-Statesman detailing a number of sizeable expense vouchers submitted by Odessa District Court Judge Joe Connally, chairman of the board.

"We'll be going over the board's vouchers in detail," said Jim Bloom, director of claims for the comptroller's department. "We'll probably demand documentation on all these vouchers Connally has submitted." Assistant Atty. Gen. Joe Dibrell. who represents the attorney general on the private investigators board, told the American-Statesman he would ask Connally to call a special board meeting to explain his actions.

Earlier, Connally told the American-Statesman that "I send in the tickets to the comptroller and I figure they'll reimburse me for whatever they think I'm entitled to be reimbursed...I leave it to them to determine if there's anything im-

The newspaper said that Connally, 42, Ector county judge until appointed last month to the new 244th District Court, has collected more than $5,200 in state expense money over the last 22 months, more than twice as much as the only other board member to serve during the same period.

Woman found guilty by jury

ODESSA - An Ector County jury Wednesday convicted a 25-year-old Odessa woman of injury to a child in the death of her daughter.

The jury found Esther Joan Lamb guilty after deliberating about 35 minutes.

Kristy Leigh Mathias, 31 months old, died in January. Mrs. Lamb's husband, Howard N. Lamb, 30, pleaded guilty in January to murder in the beating death and was sentenced to life in prison.

The prosecution charged Mrs. Lamb was negligent in not seeking medical aid for the injured child.

"Connally routinely bills the state for double rooms and suites on overnight trips, rather than single rooms," a copyrighted story said. Regular state employes get a maximum of $30 a day to cover all travel expenses, including hotels and food. Transportation costs are extra. However, Connally and other state board and commission members are legally entitled to full reimbursement for all expenses while attending to state business. The money comes out of the general revenue fund.

"Texas taxpayers picked up the $3,201 tab for that five day meeting last July at Padre Island at which board members apparently lived very well," the American-Statesman said.

Connally spent July 13-16 in a fifthfloor suite of the Padre Island Beach Hotel that cost $86.52 a night. Then on July 17 he moved up a floor to an oceanfront suit, complete with wet bar, that cost $118 a night, the story

Connally said the hotel insisted on

The American-Statesman said that Connally stayed in the Airport Marina Hotel on a visit to Dallas in December for $32.86 a night but turned in a voucher for $70.15 for the hotel room.

During a two-day meeting in Austin he spent $89.54 on meals, which was topped a couple months later by a three-day meeting in Fort Worth where he spent $106 on meals, the newspaper said.

The American-Statesman said that Connally also assigned a field investigator of the agency to an out-ofstate investigation in Ruidoso, N.M. that had nothing to do with the board's business.

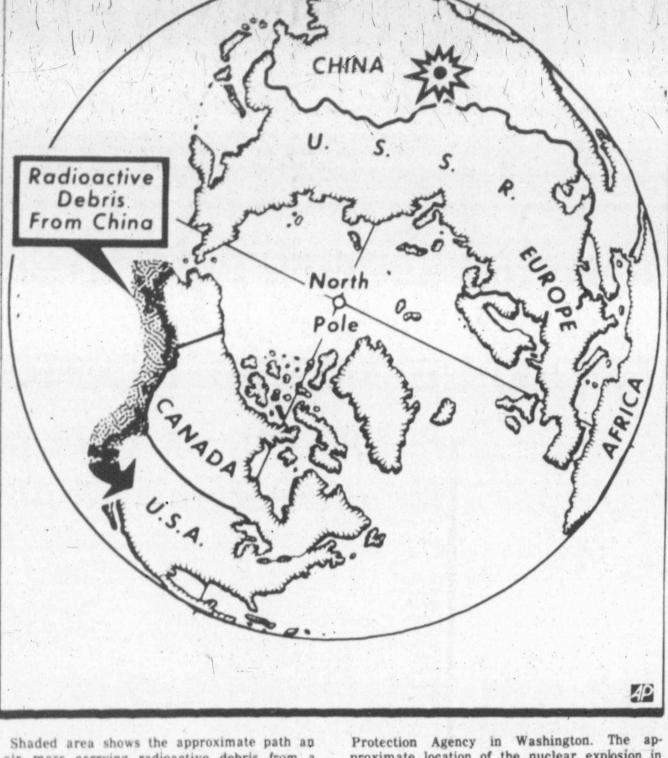

Jim Richards, now an Odessa truck salesman, drove to Ruidoso on Sept. 2, 1976, to conduct the investigation.

The newspaper said that neither Richards or Connally would disclose what the ivestigation was about.

Richards collected $94.62 for the one-day trip

In another story, the American-Statesman said that eight board employes from over the state went to Fort Worth last April to attend the funeral of one employe's brother, and then billed the state for travely mileage and expenses. James R. McWhirter, chief of the board's investigations division, said the trip was for a "staff meeting. The cost to the state was $311.70 in mileage and expenses.

The Senate approved a natural gas deregulation scheme in 1975 similiar to the one to be voted on today. The House has approved the administration plan to continue price controls on gas and to raise the ceiling from $1.45 per thousand cubic feet to about $1.75. The bill also would extend the controls to the now unregulated intrastate markets in Texas, Louisiana and other gas-producing

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee began piecing together a compromise Wednesday to allow Carter to salvage a crucial part of his energy-tax program. The compromise crude oil tax plan would rule out the President's proposal for rebates for most Americans but would provide federal aid to energy producers and finance a wide variety of transit and energy conservation programs: The test vote on gas deregulation was set on a proposal by Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to lift immediately interstate controls on newly produced onshore gas and to phase them out over a five-year period for new offshore gas. The intrastate market would remain unregulated while interstate gas from old fields would remain under federal price controls. The natural gas pricing issue is an old controversy, and the debate probably would have come up in Congress even if Carter hadn't included the subject in his energy program.

Deregulation legislation has been introduced in every session of Congress since 1954, when the Supreme Court required the Federal Power Commission to set wellhead prices for gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines

For the third year in a row, Midland challenged the HUD requirement for a rental subsidy program. During the past two years a recommendation for disapproval by the Dallas regional office was not backed up at the top levels in Washington.

Informed observers of the process have said it was the Republican administration that kept HUD from denying the grant those first two

Even more specific, however, was a memorandum written by HUD Area Director John R. McDowell to Mayor Angelo on April 27.

It said, in part, "We have repeatedly informed the City of Midland over the past two years that its Housing Assistance Plan (HAP) goals did not adequately address the known needs of rental assistance. You may be certain that we will carefully review the HAP goals included in your fiscal year 1977 application.

"In the event that the City of Midland is willing to make a serious effort to meet known housing assistance needs with its fiscal year 1977 HAP goals and proposes eligible and appropriate community development activities, we should have no problem in approving fiscal year 1977 application. If not, then we will have a clear administrative record to recommend disapproval of the application.'

It was on April 26 that the Midland City Council first voted to have the rental housing assistance plan out of the current Community Development application.

which shuts down Saturday night. "The supply of booths couldn't meet the demand." said Marshall, who acted pleased with the booth offerings.

At nights, he said, ambling folks were so thick in the barns that "you couldn't stir 'em with a stick.'

It was like a swarm of bees. About 6,000 human-types turned out for the fair's Monday night opening. The main attractions then were the Shrine Circus and, to a lesser degree, the pig show. The circus was in the Rodeo Bowl.

They turned out Tuesday night for the barrow sale, the Old Fiddlers' Contest, the midway, the booths and other exhibitions, such as the farm machinery, in generous numbers.

Last night, they set foot in the Rodeo Bowl to hear and see Texas humorist Jerry Clower joke around Tonight, there'll be some washer pitching. Friday night will feature a pet show. On Saturday, there'll be a Shorthorn show at 8 a.m., a youth horse show at 9 a.m., a steer and heifer show at 1 p.m., and in the late afternoon and night, county roping will be on the bill.

The fair's looking good.

"Oh, yeah, it's super. It's good," matter-of-factly noted Skipper Driver, the 1977 fair president.

He was hanging around the fair office with some other officials. There wasn't much a'going right then. "Really," Driver said, "the only way (to gauge the fair's success) is by comments. Apparently, he didn't have any more. But Bruce Griffith, the county's agricultural agent, offered a few comments on the fair, which accented agricultural products. 'It gives our urban and country people a chance to meet on common grounds," he said. He knows how to promote a fair. "You know," Griffith said, "if people can work together, they can sort of understand one another's problems better." Both city and country folks got together in setting up the booths and other exhibits, which Griffith termed as "excellent" in quality. In the heat of the day, not much was going on.

But about the biggest outdoor, daytime attraction was the Big Spring Fire Department's big yellow Snorkel engine.

Firemen Ronnie Caskin and Colton Wright were offering free rides in the Snorkel's platform.

Supported by a giant steel arm, elbow included, the fire-fighting platform could reach up to 75 feet above the fair grounds. 'Yeah, we've been pretty busy this morning," said Caskin. He and Wright already had given rides to about "two bus-loads" of kids. Outside the booths, that's about all that was brewing during the dayside of the fair. But come night, things would start a'turning, people would be milling around and visiting one another. After all, that's half the fun of fairgoing: seeing folks like and unlike yourself and just plain ol' visiting and, in the words of fair promoter Marshall, just "the opportunity of getting together."

WASHINGTON - Bert Lance's resignation will not end inquiries by five government agencies into his personal finances and business af fairs - and into the veracity of an official's testimony on Lance's behalf. Although it will be several months at least, before the investigations are resolved, knowledgeable officials said Wednesday that the possibility of criminal prosecution of Lance is

This is because the kind of conduct under scrutiny - such as full disclosure to stockholders of important information and extensive use of a bank's airplane for personal travel - is usually dealt with through civil, not criminal, law.

The Department of Justice has initiated the most extensive review of existing files on Lance. But department officials indicate the prime purpose is to demonstrate that government, lawyers and investigators handled the Lance matters in an objective, unbiased manner

The department review, to be conducted by a specially appointed panel, will cover these matters:

-A report by the comptroller of the currency on Lance's banking activities, particularly questioning his frequent use of the National Bank of Georgia's private airplane.

-Whether Lance's substantial overdrafts from the Calhoun (Ga.) First National Bank constituted misapplication of funds. Because Lance did not pay interest on these overdrafts until 1974, they could be viewed as interest-free loans, and the amounts he drew were far in excess of legal limits on loans that a bank may extend to its own officers.

-The closing of a federal criminal investigation into an overdraft involved in Lance's unsuccessful bid for nomination in the 1974 Georgia governor's race. The probe was closed by John Stokes, former U.S. Attorney in Atlanta, practically on the eve of the official announcement of Lance's appointment as director of the Office of Management and Budget

-A review of House testimony by Donald Tarleton, Atlanta regional director in the comptroller's office, denying that Lance ever asked him to lift restrictions on the Calhoun bank in order to give Lance a clean record before joining the Carter Administration.

R.I.), chairman of the House Banking and Urban Affairs subcommittee on financial institutions, asked the department to scrutiize the veracity of the testimony after a lawyer in the comptroller's headquarters swore that Tarleton had told him a conflicting story.

Rep. Fernand J. St Germain (D-

Deductions of aircraft costs as business expenses is illegal if the plane is used for purely political trips. Lance's bank would be in violation of the law if it deducted his political travels from the bank's corporate tax returns. And Lance would be a violator if he erroneously claimed political trips on his personal tax returns as being business-related.

Any determination that Tarleton testified untruthfully could be a problem for Lance as well. He also strongly denied under oath that he had ever asked Tarleton to remove the restrictions, which had been imposed to halt overdrafts by Lance and his relatives.

The Justice Department's effort to demonstrate objectivity in handling the Lance matters resulted in the dropping Wednesday of one member of the three-man team named Monday to review the Lance files. A spokesman said Walter Barnes of the department's criminal division was removed because he served as deputy to another official who previously had reviewed and agreed with Stokes' decision to close the criminal investigation. A replacement for

Barnes has not been named

Despite such efforts to maintain objectivity, however, President Carter's declaration at Wednesday's press conference that allegations against Lance "have been proven false and without foundation" could complicate the task of the department in assuring the public its review is

It was learned Wednesday that the department also is reviewing the conduct of former acting Comptroller Robert Bloom, who gave the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee a laudatory letter on Lance, despite restrictions his office had placed on the Calhoun bank. The nature of the inquiry involving Bloom could not be determined

These are the other open files in the Lance affair:

-Securities and Exchange Commission. The SEC, assigned to protect investors who buy the shares of publicly traded companies, is investigating Lance and the National

The bank issued a registration statement in 1975 that failed to disclose the extensive personal borrowings by Lance from other banks, in Georgia and elsewhere. The document did not reveal that Lance borrowed money frequently from banks that did business with his own bank. The SEC could determine that this was important information needed by stockholders and potential buyers of the stock.

SEC lawyers also are inquiring into whether Lance's extensive use of the National Bank of Georgia aircraft constituted a fringe benefit that should have been publicly disclosed.

The SEC generally settles its civil fraud complaints in issues of this type with a consent decree. The person involved neither confirms nor denies the charges, but promises never to do it again. Occasionally, corporate officials have been required to repay their companies for the value of the fringe benefit they abused.

Senate tuition tax credit vote probably means little

WASHINGTON — With barely a ripple of public This time, after the Senate by voice vote made notice, the House and the Senate have voted to make room in the budget for $175 million worth of tuition room in their 1978 budget for a $250 tax credit for families saddled with college tuition costs.

But so far, at least, the votes reflect little more than a rhetorical exercise, since both houses would have to pass specific tax-cut legislation before the credit, which ultimately could cost the government $2 billion a year, could take effect.

And budget experts in both the House and Senate Tuesday gave such legislation little chance of enactment this year. In four of the past five congresses, the Senate has. approved tuition tax credits in the form of amendments to other bills, but each time they have been excised quietly in conference.

Lawsuit to stall proposed merger

DALLAS (AP) - A lawsuit filed by two Great Western United Corp. stockholders will stall the company's proposed merger with Hunt International Resource Corp.

Great Western stockholders approved the reorganizational merger Tuesday, but a federal judge restrained the merger until the class action suit filed in Delaware is settled. The dissenting stockholders claim the reorganization, which will make Hunt International the parent company of Great Western, is unfair to stockholders of certain

Under the proposed merger, common stock in Great Western United will be exchanged for common stock of Hunt International. The exchange will be two shares of Hunt International for each share of Great Western common stock.

Great Western United subsidiaries are involved in sugar processing and marketing, pizza restaurant franchises, real estate development, oil and gas exploration and commodities futures.

The end result will be an improved and simplified financial structure." Herbert Hunt told the small credits, Finance Committee Chairman Russell B. Long (D-La.) cryptically let it be known he probably would encounter difficulty finding a bill to which the measure could be attached as an amendment.

The House, in a surprise 199 to 188 vote, also has made room in its binding $459.6 billion budget for tuition credits.

But Rep. Al Ullman (D-Ore.), chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, reportedly is so firmly opposed to the plan that he has balked even at scheduling hearings on the issue, much less willingly let it go to a floor vote. His predecessor on Ways and Means, Wilbur-B, Mills, was equally adamant about it, and the perennial tuition credit bill has a long history of languishing in committee.

Opposition to the proposal generally has centered on its cost, which critics say will total $1 billion in the first four years, rising to $2 billion a year when the tax credit is raised to $500.

Moreover, opponents argue it provides a quick windfall for the upper half of the income scale, while denying tax relief to pockets of need. Other critics point out that instead of simplifying tax returns, tuition allowances - coupled with credits for such expenditures as home insulation -- only make more of a morass of the tax law

If anyone is expecting the Carter administration to champion the cause of tuition credits, they should

When the House Budget Committee held hearings last spring, officials of Treasury and Health, Educa-tion and Welfare spoke forcibly against tuition credits, and administration sources say such allowances will not be included in the tax reform pro-

Budget committee officials in both the House and Senate Tuesday interpreted the votes to include tuition credits in the budget resolutions as rhetorical expressions or "showboating. "It's a way they could vote for it without a lot of contention over it. They knew they weren't authorizing anything, and it was clear the leadership wouldn't go for it," said a Senate finance committee staff member. Nevertheless, Rep. Lawrence Coughlin (R-Pa.) sponsor of the tuition amendment to the House budget resolution, plans to continue pushing Ways and Means on the issue, his aides said.

"Ullman could not have let it go to a floor vote last year, because he knew it would pass. This (House vote) just increases the pressure on him. It enhances its chances of it passing eventually," a Couglin aide

Designer brings back kimono for jeans lovers

By KATHRYN TOLBERT

TOKYO (AP) - "Nippon jeans" is what she calls the colorful farmers' and laborers' kimono.

Old Japan is brought back for the modern world in variations on the internationally popular kimono with the dash and elegance of haute couture - and all by a 75-year-old woman who has never worn a dress.

'The kimono is for all seasons, for all kinds of people. Yet today, everyone in Japan wears Westernstyle clothes. We need to bring the kimono back," said Sueko Otsuka, president of the Institute of Kimono and Professional School of Textiles.

'Of course it's uncomfortable to wear and troublesome to put on. That's why I've made these old-style women and all layers, bands and Eastern dress."

The kimono is one export of Japan welcomed and copied throughout many parts of the world. With its squarely cut, loose fitting free form and long, graceful sleeves, the kimono is used as lounge wear or evening dress and is shown in many major fashion collections nowadays.

'I love the kimono and am sorry to see it being worn less in Japan," said one famous Paris designer on a recent trip here.

Except by a sprinkling of the elderly, the kimono is worn only on special occasions and according to strict rules of dress: a minimum of jewelry, hair pulled up away from neck, no bright prints for married sashes on in their proper order. It's an obvious problem for everyday wear. But they've gone to the other extreme and adopted Western dress almost completely, Mrs. Otsuka said in an interview with The Associated

"There needn't be such a rigid division between Eastern and Western clothes. We need more variety. It's not good to eat rice every day, but neither is it interesting to have bread every day," she said.

"I have never worn anything but kimono and I understand well its discomfort. That's why I've made something simpler. The kimono must change to keep pace with changing Japane se lifestyles. In the modern homes, long-sleeved kimonos are inconvenient.'

Known throughout Japan for her kimono school, she recently held two showings of her collection of working kimono in Tokyo. A total of 4,500 spectators attended and numerous television, magazine and newspaper intervie ws followed.

The 150 outfits were sewn over the past year by Mrs. Otsuka and her assistants, without preliminary drawings. Made from rough cotton kimono sewing, the pieces included jumpsuits, baggy pants, loose jackets and capes, with a few Roman sandals and modern headscarves.

With the exception of a discreet zipper or a row of unobtrusive buttons, the clothes followed the kimono rule of wrapping and tying only.

Ther were strapless bodices and reversible jackets, which of course the farmers did not get into, but the fact remains, says Mrs. Otsuka, that the farmers, rickshaw drivers, actors, sumo wrestlers and others of the Edo period (1603-1867) had done all

"I'm not a designer and I'm not a merchant, so I have no plans to have another presentation, although I'd like to show them in New York. I want everyone to know that we have these clothes in our history," she said.

Mrs. Otsuka, who opened her school 23 years ago after her husband died, received the first Fashion Editors Club prize in 1956 for her contribution to the modernizing of the kimono, and organized a kimono show in New York

The school, employing 30 teachers, has an enrollment of about 800 students for a three-year course. The textiles are designed, woven and printed on the school premises by students, and fashion designers often come for advice and to study.

She says she wrote the book (Grove Press) her side of the story of her links, simultaneously, with Kennedy and Giancana, and because "I was tired of being crucified by the FBI, the Kennedy cult people and the media in general.

In her "My Story," Exner is rather explicit in describing what she said was a true love affair with Kennedy and a brief affair with Sinatra. But, she insists she was not a party girl.

Careful now, Senator

How in the world can Sen. Lloyd Bentsen yet be undecided in the matter of the Panama Canal giveaway when such a vast majority of his Texas' constituents are so very much opposed to it.

But the news out of Washingtonindicates that this is the case and that the senator yet is weighing the pros and cons of the issue.

This in spite of the fact that he reportedly is receiving thousands of messages from his fellow Texans urging him to vote against the giveaway.

There is no doubt that President Carter, is stepping up his pressure tactics to gain support for his treaty, particularly on those senators who yet are uncommitted. But Senator Bentsen should be strong enough to withstand the presidential pressure

Sen. John Tower, incidentally, has made it clear that he disapproves of the treaty and will vote against it.

Sen. Bentsen, of course, isn't up for re-election next year, but it is

He has said that among other things what the folks back in Texas think will have a part in his final decision. He should not misjudge the deep feeling of many, many Texans in the matter. The opposition is strong.

The senator certainly should study the matter thoroughly. But at the same time he should remember that he is in Washington to represent the majority wishes of those who elected him.

We agree with the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in its editorial comment:

"With due respect to Sen. Bentsen's efforts to be objective. to look at all sides of the Panama Canal issue and to make an 'unpressured' decision, we submit that basically he still should. weigh most heavily the wishes of the majority of Texans, who at the moment are opposed to the Panama Canal pact."

Hopefully, the senator will decide to ride with his fellow Texans in the matter.

ART BUCHWALD Mrs. Buchwald states views on overdrafts

WASHINGTON - The worst part of the Bert Lance hearings as far as I was concerned had to do with the overdrafts of his wife, himself and their relatives at the Calhoun National Bank

Whether Mr. Lance is innocent or guilty of any of the allegations made against him, he has admitted that he and his family dealt heavily in overdrafts and wrote checks for which there were no funds at the moment to cover them.

President Carter, in defending his good friend, said he didn't see anything wrong in overdrafts and many people do it. The point then is, if the President of the United States doesn't see anything wrong in them and the head of the office of Management and Budget obviously doesn't, how can the average husband (this is a male chauvinist column, if anyone is interested) expect his wife not to engage in the same practice?

Just the other day we got a notice from the bank informing my wife that she had written $450 in checks for which there was no money in the account to cover them.

I asked her about it. "Oh," she said sweetly, having watched the hearings for three days,

'that was just an overdraft.' "You may call it an overdraft, but

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Humphrey's full employment bill

By JACK ANDERSON and LES celerated the timetable on this," one WHITTEN

WASHINGTON - The ailing Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., demonstrating why he is called the happy warrior, responded to the news that he has terminal cancer by visiting other patients in his hospital wing and offering them cheerful encouragement. He also passed around his flowers and candy to patients who didn't receive any.

Such an attitude is typical of this deared himself to his Washington colleagues. It may explain why they want to do something for Hubert and why, therefore, full employment legislation may pass Congress.

The word is spreading on Capitol Hill that the ebullient Humphrey wants eagerly to make one final, lasting contribution to the country. He wants to provide more jobs for his fellow men who are out of work. He has joined Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., in sponsoring a bill calculated to achieve full employment

It may have a slight flavor of the 1930s, with its provisions to use grants, loans, tax breaks and other fiscal devices to create more jobs. But suddenly the Humphrey-Hawkins bill

No less than Jimmy Carter is quietly preparing to throw his weight behind the bill. His top assistants have been in touch with aides of Humphrey and Hawkins. The staffs are now meeting daily, and a final agreement is expected in a few days. 'The president has personally acphrey and Hawkins.

But some White House aides believe the figure may be unrealistically low. "The president doesn't like the idea of being tied to a specific number," one presidential assistant told our associate Howie Kurtz. "He wants to make a good-faith effort to reach the goal without having his hands tied by a rigid timetable.

The bill would provide the monetary means to create more jobs. Federal funds, for example, would be awarded to private companies for needed public works projects. This would be supplemented by public service jobs and government training programs.

But if these efforts should fall short of the four percent goal, then the federal government would become the "last resort." It would provide temporary, low-paying jobs to those

The White House objects to this provision. "You can't legislate full employment." complained one Carter adviser. "You can't have a legally enforceable plan where an unemployed person can go into court and say, "Judge, I want a job.

Explained another White House official: "First we want to test the idea of large-scale public service jobs." Before the government does any more hiring, he said, the president wants to try out his planned 1.4 million welfare jobs and 200,000

Congressional backers argued, however, that the "last resort" jobs are not automatic and would be created only if the president and Congress decide they are needed.

The two sides are also negotiating over the role of the Federal Reserve Board, which controls the nation's monetary policy. Under the bill, the Fed would be required to certify to Congress whether its monetary policy will help achieve full employment. But congresssonal liberals believe that the nation's growth is being stymied by the crafty, conservative Fed chairman, Arthur Burns.

"For years, economic policy has been made in the backrooms by Arthur Burns and a few private bankers who sit on the Fed," complained one congressional expert. "This bill would take economic policy out of the backrooms and put it on the floor of

Agreed one presidential assistant: Nowhere in the Constitution does it say that bankers shall have a branch of the federal government." But he added: "While we don't mind if Congress conflicts with the Fed, it would be a major political battle for the administration to infringe on the independence of the Fed.

Some of Carter's economic advisers are also worried that the legislation will fuel inflation. "The inflation problen is very real," a White House economist told us.

Humphrey and Hawkins insist. however, that lower unemployment doesn't necessarily lead to more inflation. For each one percent reduction in the jobless rolls, they say, the government saves about $20 billion in unemployment . checks, food stamps and other benefits. "This bill will help Carter balance his budget," said a supporter.

A compromise between the two sides, nevertheless, is in the offing. And President Carter will come out fighting for a national commitment to full employment.

WHO'S NEWS - A big-time corporation lawyer, Milton Handler, is expected to direct a presidential study of the antitrust laws. He was described by Attorney General Griffin Bell as "a superstar in antitrust law." But our files whow this same Handler testified twice against the 1975 Antitrust Improvements Act. It turns out that Handler has also represented big corporations in antitrust cases.

Carter was urged to ease Lance out of White House

He bank depositors and taxpayers alike)

(Editor's Note: This column was won a public relations victory in the Senate hearings, but not because of any substantive argument on his part. He won because he cleverly evaded questions, was dishonest in his replies and revealed himself to be a folksy just-like-you-and-me fellow, but a sleazy one Well, after a list of serious charges were made against Lance, we heard from the White House, including the President, that Bert Lance would prove his innocence when he had his day in court-the Senate hearings. Jimmy Carter announced, "Bert, I'm proud of you. When the hearings began, Lance sprang from his corner, punched away at committee members, puttingthem on the defensive, cried about his 'human rights." as though he were under Idi Amin's heel. In the most calculated "down-home" fashion, this country slicker used bluster and wile in a massive exercise of rationalization. The broadcast microphones amplified the cheering from Lance fans who packed the room.

With Carter carefully boosting Lance by pious statement, Jody Powell trying to discredit Sea. Charles Percy (R-Ill.) and the White House announcing that it was getting calls and wires in Lance's favor (Nixon pulled the same stunt), the Big Word was passed that Lance passed inspection, put down his tormentors and deserves to stay. Please put the Big Word aside, and look at the record. It is clear that Bert Shamelessly wrete overdrafts.

Next, as Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) pointed out, the hearings on Lance were held because President Carter wrote an extraordinary letter to Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) asking that the committee give Lance an extension on the time Lance pledged to get his finances in order. If it weren't for Carter's letter, there would have been no hearings, hence no renewed curiosity by the press in Lance's troubled affairs. Carter is the one who broke this open, not the committee members.

Now we have an Administration which has stone-walled possibly covered up, attacked the press and senators, and gives newsmen the runaround on Carter's own huge loans from Lance.

Carter's warehouse, several years ago, got two loans from the Nitional Bank of Georgia - one for about $1 million to expand its production, and the other for $3.5 to $4 million (partner Charles Korbo wasn't precise when I talked with him) as a sort of revolving credit line. These loans were beyond the capacity of the National Bank of Georgia, so other banks were brought in.

It is unfortuante, but it must be noted that the loans were negotiated when Jimmy Carter was cranking up to run for President and was seeing an awful lot of Bert Lance. In fact, Carter accompanied Lance to New York apparently to reassure the Manufacturers Hanover Bank which had made Lance a $2.6 million loan. A vested interest by Carter, at least. It also must be noted that Atty Gen. Griffin Bell owns 2,100 shares of Bert Lance's troubled bank - another vested interest. While Bell "recused" himself from investigating Lance, it is his Justice Department and every last lawyer knows that Because of Carter and Bell's involvement with Lance, there should be a special prosecutor appointed on Lance, pronto. Three congressional committees and six agencies of government are investigating Lance. He can't deal with all this and run the office of Management and Budget. and Carter and Bell are being less than honest if they say their powerful Executive Department can be fair.

Carter has done his government and the nation a great disservice in the protection of Lance. The committee has been quite fair with Lance and Carter. Sen. Ribicoff, a strong Democrat, has been dutiful and nonpartisan as committee chairman Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia has been a scrappy defender of Lance, as expected. Sens. Percy and Roth have relentlessly pushed Lance to tell the truth, and Sen. Javits punched Lance full of holes last Saturday. Sen. Sasser sounded like his name. But none of this is good for the committee or for any future relationship it might have with Lance. Lance and Carter caused this affair to become, at times, a North vs. South fight. It shouldn't be that. Nor should it be Democrat vs. Republican. Bert Lance is not the South any more than his ethics are typical of small-town bankers. There are certainly bankers in the South and in small towns who have a better sense of ethics than Bert Lance.

Since it was Lance's messy finances which got him into this trouble, he should allow them to be audited now. as Javits suggests, so that the committee will know if he is getting out of his difficulties.

Unless President Carter wants an Administration resembling 'Mediocrity, Inc.," and would like to risk becoming a holier-than-thou-butdon't-bother-my-own-boys President, he had better get bigger than his region and ease Lance out of the White House. Bert Lance is now not fit to run OMB, and speaking personally, he is not the kind of man I would want to do business with Beatings of prisoners are sometimes necessary to "educate" them, a former Houston policeman has testified in the murder trial of two other ex-officers accused of killing a man in their custody.

Glenn L. Brinkmeyer said a beating teaches respect "to keep from breaking the law.

Brinkmeyer, 25, testified Wednesday in the trial of Terry W. Den-former Houston policemen charged with the drowning of a young karate expert who was in police custody. The trial was transferred here from

Houston on a change of venue. Brinkmeyer, Denson, Orlando and two other officers were fired from the Houston police force after the body of Joe Campos Torres, 23, was recovered from a Houston bayou May 8. Torres had been arrested May 5 at a

Brinkmeyer testified after having been granted immunity from state prosecution in the case. His testimony was similar to that given earlier by Louis G. Kinney, another former policeman who also was granted immunity after being fired. Both men testified Torres was taken to an isolated area along the bayou not far from the Houston police

They said Torres was beaten and later returned to the bayou site after a supervisor at the jail had told the officers to take the prisoner to a hospital for treatment of a leg injury.

Both Brinkmeyer and Kinney admitted involvement in the alleged beating. Both said Denson pushed Torres into the bayou.

Prosecutors asked Brinkmeyer what he meant by "educating" prisoners. Brinkmeyer answered that it meant to slap a person around to teach him not to fight police.

Denson's attorney Bob Bennett asked Brinkmeyer if the alleged beating of Torres was intended "to make him understand it was not good policy to jump on an officer?" 'It's good to have a reputation that some policeman is going to come out and do something about trouble," Brinkmeyer replied

'And you say beating drunks will do that?" asked prosecutor Bert Graham.

'It might," said Brinkmeyer. "Do you feel that attitude causes the people to fear the police?'

Graham asked. 'Not fear," Brinkmeyer replied, "but respect to keep them from breaking the law. "You mean something more than the judicial process to administer the law on the streets?" Graham asked. "Sometimes, yes," the witness father.

"Do you feel this incident with Torres has helped the image of the Houston police?" Graham asked. "I didn't give it any thought,"

At Houston firefighters said they found a note saying "We demand justice for Joe C. Torres" Wednesday night after a railroad trestle near the

Plyboard plant can't completely revive Camden, 'the company town'

CAMDEN, Tex. (AP) - Back in the 1960's - and for the previous half century - this East Texas town was thriving.

One of the last company towns, Camden housed the W.T. Carter and Brother sawmill - and along with it the workers and their families. That's all gone now.

But a new business facility is expected to breathe life into Camden. Long-time residents of the area, however, say things just won't be the Construction in Camden of a $44million plywood plant will provide about 300 jobs for area folks. But unlike the half-century during which the sawmill was in operation, the employes won't be able to walk a few blocks to work or arise late because church is only a few steps away.

Some people can still remember the Carter and Brother era. The sawmill employes were totally immersed in the company. They lived in housing provided by Carter and Brother, ate in company-owned food establishments and attended church on property owned by the industry.

But the Carter enterprise was bought out by Champion International Corporation in the late 1960's. Camden began its slow death in 1968, when Champion phased out the com-

Employes were gathered in the company recreation room July 24. 1968. They were told "company towns are obsolete - a thing of the past" by Jim Girard, operations manager of what was then called U.S. Plywood-Champion Papers.

So they had to move. Many of the town's residents moved east of Corrigan, about 12 miles away. There they got free lots and minimal interest loans to build homes. Now with construction under way in Camden for a Champion Building Materials plant, workers will return to the city, if only from 8 to 5. Several key attractions of Camden the company town will be missing.

The old Moscow, Camden and San Augustine Railroad, which never actually got as far northeast as San Augustine, won't be used in the new operation. It was once the shortest SEMINOLE, Tex. (AP) Today was to have been the deadline for more than 500 Mennonite settlers around this West Texas city to leave the United States voluntarily or face deportation, but an extension has delayed their exodus.

Water heaters wasteful

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) - A waste of gas and a significant increase in home fuel bills is blamed on some water heaters by the Water Quality Association. The heaters, it is charged, are rendered inefficient because of lime deposits caused by hard water. "When a heater is encrusted by hard water scale, it's like trying to heat a kettle with a firebrick under it," says Richard Weickart, technical director of the association.

'Instead of heat going into the water, it goes up the flue, and flue temperatures may rise 150 degrees. The only cure is to clean the heater tank with chemical products designed for the purpose, or install a water softener of sufficient capacity to prevent the formation of the scale," Weickart adds.

Egypt's public position has been that the PLO must represent the Palestinians at Geneva and that the United States should take the plunge and recognize the umbrella organization of groups which, in Israeli eyes, are no better than terrorists

But after Fahmi's White House session Wednesday, National Security Council spokesman Jerrold Schecter indicated that Egypt may be more flexible on that point in private. 'Possible alternative forms of the Palestinian representation in Geneva" were the subject of the talks, Schecter said.

U.S. officials later explained that Fahmi had not expressed the Egyptian position "on the basis that Palestinian representation at Geneva has to be the PLO.

"Rather," one official said, "the focus was on how to deal with the problem. The Egyptians are fully aware that, as a practical matter, any added participant in the peace conference would have to be accepted by

Fahmi himself, speaking briefly with reporters after his White House session, acknowledged a need for some kind of compromise formula, despite Egypt's formal support of the

'We are working hard," he said 'We have constant contacts with the PLO leaders, and we will see how we can accommodate everybody.

Dayan, while asserting a hard-line Israeli policy on the PLO this week, was more open to suggestion on other avenues to compromise on the Palestinian issue. He is known to have discussed the possibility of some kind of Palestinian representation in conjunction with a unified Arab delegation or with different combinations of Arab delegations.

It is understood some of these ideas also were discussed with Fahmi Wednesday. His talks here included a meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance before his morning session at the White House, then an extended session with Vance over lunch at the State Department and into the afternoon.

One factor contributing to the Egyptian willingness to listen to proposed "alternatives" to PLO participation is the often-expressed desire, bordering on urgency, of President Anwar Sadat for a Geneva conference before the end of the year.

U.S. officials are known to be increasingly worried about the prospect of Sadat's losing his political grip if his gamble on an "American solution" to the Middle East does not soon pay off with some tangible

AP poll reveals opposition to Panama Canal treaty

By R ICHARD PYLE

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Pantima Canal treaty, backed strongly by President Carter but a center of controversy in the Senate. faces strong opposition among the American people, according to a natio nwide Associated Press public opini on poll.

The survey found 50 per cent of adults questioned oppose the treaty, under which the United States would relin quish control of the canal to Panz ma by the year 2000. Twentynine per cent favored the pact, and 21 per cent were undecided

There actually are two treaties, but they are considered indivisible. One calls for the United States to relinquish sovereignty over the Canal Zone to Panama by the year 2000. The other would always permit the United States to militarily ensure the neutrality of the canal.

The AP poll, with findings similar to those of other recent surveys, showed Carter's efforts have failed to win support for the treaty within his own party and among residents of his native South.

But with the ratification vote not scheduled until next year, Carter has several months to rain sympathy for the agreement. He has said he thinks public sentiment is turning in favor of the canal treaty, and is banking on a national "education" effort to help win the twothirds vote needed for Senate approval.

The poll, based on telephone interviews with 1,548 adults, was conducted Monday for The AP by Chilton Research Services of Radnor, Pa.

Saddened President shuts door on past, begins search

By RICHARD E. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter is trying to replace a man he says is irreplaceable.

Stunned by the resignation of longtime friend Bert Lance as his budget director, Carter began the search today for a successor.

"There will be an orderly transition," the President told a news conference Wednesday when he announced Lance's resignation. "I will decide beginning after today on who a successor might be.'

Among names that quickly surfaced were:

-James T. McIntyre Jr., director of Georgia's budget office in 1972 while Carter was governor and now deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget, which Lance had headed.

-Robert Strauss, a former chairman of the Democratic National Committee and now the U.S. ambassador for trade negotiations. -Alice Rivlin, director of the

I could find anyone to replace Bert Lance that would be, in my judgment, as competent, as strong, as decent and as close to me as a friend and adviser as he has been," the President said.

"Obviously, the government will continue," Carter declared, "and I hope to do a good job as President, and I am sure a successor will be adequate.

"But there has been a special relationship between me and Bert Lance that transcended official responsibilities or duties or even governmental service of the last six or seven years.

"So he has occupied a special place in my governmental career, in my political career, and in my personal life. I don't think there is any way anyone could replace him now.

Carter hinted that he might have an additional problem because of the controversy that finally forced Lance

Asked if the Lance affair had damaged his own credibility with the American people, the President replied: "I can't say. I'd guess to some extent "

In a letter to "My Dear Mr. President," Lance quit "because of the amount of controversy and the continuing nature of it" surrounding his personal financial affairs and his business dealings as the head of two Georgia banks.

Lance's business and banking practices have been under investigation for several weeks by the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee, Justice Department, Securities and Exchange Commission, Federal Election Commission and Internal Revenue Ser-

In three days of testimony last week before the Senate committee. Lance said he might have made some mistakes but declared that his conscience was clear of any wrongdoing.

He said the same to Carter

"It was, and is, important that my name and reputation be cleared, for me, my wife, my children, my grandchildren and those who have trust and faith in me. And I believe that this has been done." Lance wrote in his resignation.

HUD officially rejects grant

By JIM STEINBERG

Midland's application for a $946,000 Community Development Block Grant for fiscal year 1977 has been formally turned down, Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. said today.

Notification of the disapproval came from Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Assistant Secretary Robert Embry Jr. on Wednesday, Angelo said.

The reason given for the fund denial was that the city did not include a. rental assistance plan in its grant application, Angelo said.

The rejection of the city's grant was not unexpected, and it followed votes by the council, one on July 26 and one on Sept. 12, not to include the rental subsidy plan even after warnings were received from HUD that failure to do so would lead to application disapproval. The decision means the loss of $310,000 for paving and curbing. $220,000 for housing rehabilitation. $140,000 for a senior citizens center, $114,000 for park improvements, $56,000 for planning, $28,000 for administration and $23,000 for con-

For the third year in a row, Midland challenged the HUD requirement for a rental subsidy program. During the past two years a recommendation for disapproval by the Dallas regional office was not backed up at the top levels in Washington. Imformed observers of the process have said it was the Republican administration that kept HUD from denying the grant those first two years.

Whether or not this was the case, indications from HUD memos to Community Development Grant receipients this year were that a new hard line approach would be taken against applicants who did not follow

HUD guidelines. HUD Secretary Patricia Roberts Harris wrote one memorandum specifically addressing the subject of housing assistance plans which warned that this year they will receive "careful attention" to see that they meet all needs of the community. Even more specific, however, was a memorandum written by HUD Area Director John R. McDowell to Mayor Angelo on April 27.

It said, in part, "We have repeatedly informed the City of (Continued on Page 2A)

Sounds of silence still enshroud 'Bubble Boy'

HOUSTON (AP) - David, the "Bubble Boy", has observed his sixth birthday still awaiting his promised miniature spacesuit

David has been confined in a plastic isolator since birth and it is expected to be a while longer before he receives the spacesuit which would allow him to explore the outdoors.

The family helped David celebrate his birthday Wednesday with a birthday cake.

David is a victim of combined immune deficiency and was delivered in a germ-free area six years ago and placed immediately in a sterile "bubble unit." The disease robs the body of its germ-fighting abilities and the child has never been touched by ungloved hands.

The boy alternately spends six weeks at Texas Children's Hospital and six weeks with his parents at their ranch style

The parents have asked that their last name never be used David's mother explains: 'Anonymity is our best hope of leading reasonably normal

A hospital spokesman said there had been hope David could have celebrated his birthday with the spacesuit which would have allowed him to go to the woods, the beach and other remote places he has never been. Presently portable isolator units and a specially equipped van are used in transferring David back and forth from the plastic isolators at home and the

The hospital spokesman said there were minor problems with the miniature spacesuit and it was returned to the Johnson Space Center for reworking. It is now hoped testing of the suit at the hospital can begin in October, when David is scheduled to return.

Baylor College of Medicine and hospital spokesmen had nothing new to add to a December report on immunological changes that eventually might mean David is outgrowing the disease.

After the spacesuit is tested at the hospital, doctors believe David will be able to spend up to four hours at a time in the rubberized garment

Vote brewing over gas deregulation

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate is ready to choose between President Carter's plan to continue price controls on natural gas and a rival proposal to lift them.

After days of maneuvering, those on both sides of the issue agreed to schedule a showdown vote for tonight. Advocates of deregulation were predicting victory by at least a fourvote margin. Administration allies were saying the vote is too close to

If the Senate votes for deregulation of new natural gas, as it did in 1975, it would be another blow to a Carter energy program that already has been decimated by Senate floor and

The House has approved the administration plan to continue price controls on gas and to raise the ceiling from $1.45 per thousand cubic feet to about $1.75. The bill also would extend the controls to the now unregulated intrastate markets in Texas, Louisiana and other gas-producing

Meanwhile, the Senate Finance Committee began piecing together a compromise Wednesday to allow Carter to salvage a crucial part of his energy-tax program.

The compromise crude oil tax plan would rule out the President's proposal for rebates for most Americans but would provide federal aid to energy producers and finance a cluded the subject in his energy wide variety of transit and energy conservation programs.

The test vote on gas deregulation was set on a proposal by Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and James B. Pearson, R-Kan., to lift immediately interstate controls on newly produced onshore gas and to phase them out over a five-year period for new offshore gas. The intrastate market would remain unregulated while interstate gas from old fields would remain under federal price controls.

The natural gas pricing issue is an old controversy, and the debate probably would have come up in Congress even if Carter hadn't inprogram.

Deregulation legislation has been introduced in every session of Congress since 1954, when the Supreme Court required the Federal Power Commission to set wellhead prices for gas sold by producers to interstate pipelines.

Deregulation advocates say the controls have held gas prices artificially low, resulting in shortages like those that crippled parts of the industrial Northeast and Midwest last winter, while channeling most new gas into the unregulated intrastate market. Prices are much higher in

Fair offers people chance to get together

BIG SPRING - The fairgrounds were just about as thick with people as downtown Big Spring is on a donothing Sunday afternoon.

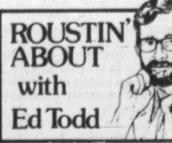

Few there were. But business would pick up. It was only midday; the youngsters were yet in school, and the grownups were either at work or milling around the house or shopping or whatever.

Folks, at 50 cents a throw, wouldn't be ganging up at the main gate until near nightfall, when the midway rides and tricks would start a'wheeling and

On the Howard County fairgrounds for a brief tour were some preschoolers, who, hand-in-hand, were winding around the fair like ants on a strange mound.

There wasn't much to see ... outside the 64 booths in the fair barns. Most were commercial. They had something to gain by showing off their wares or demonstrating their ser-

Booths were promoting just about everything: cotton, beef, canned goods, furniture, motorcycles, eyeglass cleaners, woodworking, jewelry, water well service, leather goods, soil-rejuvenating worms, good health and religion and so on.

To the toddlers, the fare was probably more boggling (or just a maze) than interesting:

But in the fleeting years to come, they just might learn to appreciate it all the way J. Arnold Marshall seems to. Marshall, a fair director, headed up the booth phase of the six-day fair.

Although autumn is fast approaching, a record high temperature of 100 degrees was set Wednesday in the Permian Basin, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The previous record high was 97 degrees set in 1930, the weather service said.

However, temperatures should cool somewhat with a high for Friday in the mid-90s, noted the weather service. The low for tonight should be in the mid-60s.

Along with the slightly cooler temperatures, the weatherman predicts a 20 per cent chance for rain in the area tonight. All area towns reported clear skies and warm temperatures early today.

Police said they received a call about 8:30 p.m. about an intoxicated person. Upon arriving at the address. they said they found Lopez lying in the front yard with a woman leaning over

The woman told the officers she had shot the man with a pistol that was found near the body, police said. The woman was later arrested at the police department.

The woman told police she had been living with Lopez, but had asked him to leave the house. He refused and reportedly told the woman he was going to kill her.

Lopez came to the house Wednesday night, the woman told police, while she was at a laundromat. Her 9year-old son called her, and she returned home and got a gun, police

Odessa judge's travel expenses to be probed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Representatives of the attorney general's and the comptroller's offices said Wednesday they will look into the travel expenses of the chairman of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

The two agencies commented after publication of a series of copyrighted stories by the Austin American-Statesman detailing a number of sizeable expense vouchers submitted by Odessa District Court Judge Joe Connally, chairman of the board.

"We'll be going over the board's vouchers in detail," said Jim Bloom, director of claims for the comptroller's department. "We'll probably demand documentation on all these vouchers Connally has submitted."

UNITED NATIONS - Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh. in his first speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Wednesday praised all who have joined in demanding that the United States contribute to the reconstruction of his war-torn

Trinh said Vietnam was prepared to continue negotiations with the United States for "satisfactory solutions to outstanding problems with a view toward normalizing relations." And he extended "heartfelt thanks" to individual Americans who opposed the Vietnam war - those that U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young earlier described in a speech as having waged an "internal struggle" against the Vietnam war.

At its opening session Tuesday, the 32nd General Assembly admitted Djibouti, the former French African colony, and Vietnam as the 148th and 149th U.N. members.

Speaking in Vietnamese, the frail. bespectacled foreign minister said the "bloodiest neocolonial war in history" had left millions of his compatriots killed or disabled and thousands of villages destroyed. In South Vietnam, he said part of the population had been driven from their homes and livelihood, "their minds poisoned and their human dignity destroyed

Trinh did not name the United States as the aggressor, but attributed the ills of his country to "imperialist aggression." He said "no reactionary force, however powerful can prevent people from obtaining freedom and peace.

Since the collapse of the U.S.backed southern regime two years ago, he said, "a new era has begun in our country, an era of peace and socialism" ending a "somber legacy of more than 100 years of foreign

'In the event that the City of Midland is willing to make a serious effort to meet known housing assistance needs with its fiscal year 1977 HAP goals and proposes eligible and appropriate community development activities, we should have no problem in approving fiscal year 1977 application. It was on April 26 that the Midland City Council first voted to have the rental housing assistance plan out of the current Community Development application grant.

arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department

The initial SALT agreement, signed five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers.

The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months, and under one plan the two sides would adhere to the current agreement beyond its Oct. 3 expiration date The talks scheduled for today originally were set for Sept. 7-9 in Vienna but were postponed, ostensibly to allow Vance to attend the Panama Canal treaty signing and to permit Washington and Moscow more time for preparations. Administration officials have insisted all along that the principal goal is to reach an arms agreement equitable to both sides without taking into account arbitrary deadlines. Thus, although no eleventh hour breakthrough is anticipated, officials said the two sides will exchange ideas on ways to break the deadlock. The key hangups have involved

Soviet attempts to limit the U.S. cruise missile, similar to an unmanned jet plane with a nuclear warhead, and American efforts to restrict longrange use of the Soviet Backfire Bomber For the administration, the most worrisome aspect about an informal agreement to extend the SALT I agreement seems to be that it is bound to run into demands from Congress for a say in the process.

The administration hopes to sidestep a congressional role in order to avoid a potentially divisive public debate on U.S. arms policy while negotiations are going on for future arms limitation.

AP reporter got it wrong

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Associated Press erreneously reported Wednesday that the former science chief of the CIA had told a Senate subcommittee that members of President Nixon's traveling party were drugged during a trip to an 'unfriendly' nation in 1971.

Dr. Sidney Gottlieb actually told the Senate subcommittee on health that he had been asked to determine if peculiar symptoms, including outbursts of tears at inappropriate moments, could have been caused by

At nights, he said, ambling folks were so thick in the barns that "you couldn't stir 'em with a stick." It was like a swarm of bees.

About 6,000 human-types turned out for the fair's Monday night opening. The main attractions then were the Shrine Circus and, to a lesser degree. the pig show. The circus was in the Rodeo Bowl.

They turned out Tuesday night for the barrow sale, the Old Fiddlers' Contest, the midway, the booths and other exhibitions, such as the farm machinery, in generous numbers.

Last night, they set foot in the Rodeo Bowl to hear and see Texas humorist Jerry Clower joke around Tonight, there'll be some washer

Inflation, high demand increase tobacco value

By BRIAN B. KING

WASHINGTON (AP) - Inflation and foreign demand for U.S. cigarettes pushed the value of tobacco exports to a record $952 million for the year ending June 30, but the quantity of U.S. tobacco exported dropped 1 per cent, the Foreign Agriculture

Service reports. Shipments of U.S. leaf, hurt by cheaper competition, declined for the third consecutive year.

Europe remained the largest market for U.S. tobacco, despite lower exports to the United Kingdom, the agency's tobacco trade circular said. About 112,497 tons of the 263,901 tons of leaf exported went to the Common Market.

'Prospects for the months ahead indicate a continued fall in U.S. shipments of unmanufactured tobacco," especially with the 1977 flue-cured crop estimated to be 23 per cent below last year's, the analysts

Prices of higher-quality leaf are expected to rise, too, along with larger supplies of competitors' crops. Cigarette exports, especially to Europe and the Middle East, are expected to continue to increase. analysts said. U.S. tobacco prices can only respond within narrow limits to foreign competition because of relatively high government support While leaf shipments rose in value and fell in volume, expects of cigarettes and other tobacci products during the 1976-77 marketing year set records for both value and volume. Total value was about $576.6 million, with the 62.8 million parcels of cigarettes accounting for $548.5 million, more than double the 1970-74 average. Iran and the Belgium-Luxembourg market accounted for 35 per cent of the exports. The value of all tobacco exports was $1.53 billion, a 10 per cent increase.

Product exports rose 20 per cent in value while leaf exports rose only 7 per cent, which corresponds to the inflation rate in the United States during that period.

The value of imported tobacco rose at the same time to $332 million from $284 million a year earlier, an 8 per cent increase, but the volume fell 6 per cent to 133,228 tons. Brazil and Italy increased their shares of the U.S. market, the report said, as traditional suppliers like Hungary, Greece and Turkey fell back. The volume of imports is expected to rise this year, it said. Shipments of leaf to Japan, the report also noted, fell for the first time in this decade - a 19 per cent drop in a year. But demand from Thailand and other Asian nations meant an overall increase to that region of the world.

Exports of both flue-cured and burley tobacco slipped, but secondranked burley was still well above the average for the 1970s.

Exports of flue-cured, the major variety, were sharply lower in trade with both Japan and the British Isles, while declines in burley exports to the Philippines offset increases elsewhere for that type.

Under no circumstances. U.S. officials were told, would Israel modify its long-standing refusal to accept the Palestine Liberation Organization as a participant in a Geneva conference.

Egypt's public position has been that the PLO must represent the Palestinians at Geneva and that the United States should take the plunge and recognize the umbrella organization of groups which, in Israeli eyes, are no better thanterrorists

But after Fahmi's White House session Wednesday, National Security Council spokesman Jerrold Schecter indicated that Egypt may be more flexible on that point in private. 'Possible alternative forms of the Palestinian representation in Geneva" were the subject of the talks, Schecter said.

U.S. officials later explained that Fahmi had not expressed the Egyptian position "on the basis that Palestinian representation at Geneva has to be the PLO.'

'Rather," one official said, "the focus was on how to deal with the problem. The Egyptians are fully aware that, as a practical matter, any added participant in the peace conference would have to be accepted by

Fahmi himself, speaking briefly with reporters after his White House session, acknowledged a need for some kind of compromise formula, despite Egypt's formal support of the

Dayan, while asserting a hard-line Israeli policy on the PLO this week, was more open to suggestion on other avenues to compromise on the Palestinian issue.

He is known to have discussed the possibility of some kind of Palestinian representation in conjunction with a unified Arab delegation or with different combinations of Arab delegations.

It is understood some of these ideas also were discussed with Fahmi Wednesday. His talks here included a meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance before his morning session at the White House, then an extended session with Vance over lunch at the State Department and into the af-

One factor contributing to the Egyptian willingness to listen to proposed "alternatives" to PLO participation is the often-expressed desire, bordering on urgency, of President Anwar Sadat for a Geneva conference before the end of the year.

U.S. officials are known to be increasingly worried about the prospect of Sadat's losing his political grip if his gamble on an "American solution" to the Middle East does not soon pay off with some tangible

Odessa judge's travel expenses to be probed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Representatives of the attorney general's and the comptroller's offices said Wednesday they will look into the travel expenses of the chairman of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies

The two agencies commented after publication of a series of copyrighted stories by the Austin American-Statesman detailing a number of sizeable expense vouchers submitted by Odessa District Court Judge Joe Connally, chairman of the board.

"We'll be going over the board's vouchers in detail," said Jim Bloom. director of claims for the comptroller's department. "We'll probably demand documentation on all these vouchers Connally has submitted

Assistant Atty, Gen. Joe Dibrell, who represents the attorney general on the private investigators board, told the American-Statesman he would ask Connally to call a special board meeting to explain his actions

Earlier, Connally told the American-Statesman that "I send in the tickets to the comptroller and I figure they'll reimburse me for whatever they think I'm entitled to be reimbursed...I leave it to them to determine if there's anything im-

The newspaper said that Connally, 42. Ector county judge until appointed last month to the new 244th District Court, has collected more than $5,200 in state expense money over the last 22 months, more than twice as much as the only other board member to serve during the same period.

Woman found guilty by jury

ODESSA - An Ector County jury Wednesday convicted a 25-year-old Odessa woman of injury to a child in the death of her daughter:

The jury found Esther Joan Lamb guilty after deliberating about 35

Kristy Leigh Mathias, 31 months old, died in January Mrs. Lamb's husband, Howard N. Lamb, 30. pleaded guilty in January to murder in the beating death and was seetenced to life in prison.

The prosecution sharged Mrs. Lamb was negliged in not seeking medical aid for the injured child.

"Connally routinely bills the state for double rooms and suites on overnight trips, rather than single rooms." a copyrighted story said.

Regular state employes get a max imum of $30 a day to cover all travel expenses, including hotels and food. Transportation costs are extra-

However, Connally and other state board and commission members are legally entitled to full reimbursement for all expenses while attending to state business. The money comes out of the general revenue fund.

Texas taxpayers picked up the $3,201 tab for that five day meeting last July at Padre Island at which board members apparently lived very well," the American-Statesman said

Connally spent July 13-16 in a fifthfloor suite of the Padre Island Beach Hotel that cost $86.52 a night. Then on July 17 he moved up a floor to an oceanfront suit, complete with wet bar, that cost $118 a night, the story

Connally said the hotel insisted on the move.

The American-Statesman said that Connally stayed in the Airport Marina Hotel on a visit to Dallas in December for $32.86 a night but turned in a voucher for $70.15 for the hotel room.

During a two-day meeting in Austin he spent $89.54 on meals, which was topped a couple months later by a three-day meeting in Fort World, where he spent $100 on meals, the newspaper said.

The American Statesman said that Connally also assigned a field investigator of the agency to an out-ofstate investigation in Ruidoso, N.M. that had nothing to do with the board's business

Jim Richards, now an Odessa truck salesman, drove to Ruidoso on Sept. 2. 1976, to conduct the investigation The newspaper said that neither

Vietnam minister gives U.S., Russia resuming first speech at U.N.

The Los Angeles Times

UNITED NATIONS - Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh in his first speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Wednesday praised all who have joined in demanding that the United States contribute to the reconstruction of his war-torn

Trinh said Vietnam was prepared to continue negotiations with the United States for "satisfactory solutions to outstanding problems with a view toward normalizing relations." And he extended "heartfelt thanks" to individual Americans who opposed the Vietnam war - those that U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young earlier described in a speech as having waged an "internal struggle" against the Vietnam war

At its opening session Tuesday, the 32nd General Assembly admitted Djibouti, the former French African colony, and Vietnam as the 148th and 149th U.N. members.

Speaking in Vietnamese, the frail bespectacled foreign minister said the "bloodiest neocolonial war in history" had left millions of his compatriots killed or disabled and thousands of villages destroyed. In South Vietnam, he said part of the population had been driven from their homes and livelihood, "their minds poisoned and their human dignity destroyed.

Trinh did not name the United States as the aggressor, but attributed the ills of his country to 'imperialist aggression." He said 'no reactionary force, however powerful can prevent people from obtaining freedom and peace.

Since the collapse of the U.S. backed southern regime two years ago, he said, "a new era has begun in our country, an era of peace and socialism" ending a "somber legacy of more than 100 years of foreign

arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department.

The initial SALT agreement, signed five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched intercontinental ballistic missiles of the two superpowers. The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months, and under one plan the two sides would adhere to the current agreement beyond its Oct.

3 expiration date. The talks scheduled for today originally were set for Sept. 7-9 in Vienna but were postponed, ostensibly to allow Vance to attend the Panama Canal treaty signing and to permit Washington and Moscow more lime for preparations. Administration officials have in sisted all along that the principal goal is to reach an arms agreement equitable to both sides without taking into account arbitrary deadlines.

Thus, although no eleventh hour breakthrough is anticipated, officials said the two sides will exchange ideas on ways to break the deadlock.

The key hangups have involved Soviet attempts to limit the U.S. cruise missile, similar to an unmanned jet plane with a nuclear warhead, and American efforts to restrict longrange use of the Soviet Backfire Bomber For the administration, the most worrisome aspect about an informal agreement to extend the SALT I agreement seems to be that it is bound to run into demands from Congress for a say in the process. The administration hopes to sidestep a congressional role in order to avoid a potentially divisive public debate on U.S. arms policy while negotiations are going on for future arms limitation.

"The supply of booths couldn't meet the demand" said Marshall, who acted pleased with the booth offerings.

At nights, he said, ambling folks were so thick in the barns that "you couldn't stir 'em with a stick."

It was like a swarm of bees About 6,000 human-types turned out for the fair's Monday night opening. The main attractions then were the Shrine Circus and, to a lesser degree, the pig show. The circus was in the Radea Bawl.

They turned out Tuesday night for the barrow sale, the Old Fiddlers' Contest, the midway, the booths and other exhibitions, such as the farm machinery in generous numbers.

The fair's looking good.
"Oh, yeah, it's super. It's good." matter-of-factly noted Skipper Driver, the 1977 fair president.

He was hanging around the fair office with some other officials. There wasn't much a going right then.
"Really," Driver said, "the only way (to gauge the fair's success) is by comments. Apparently, he didn't have any more. But Bruce Griffith, the county's agricultural agent, offered a few comments on the fair, which accented agricultural products.

It gives our urban and country people a chance to meet on common grounds." he said.

He knows how to promote a fair "You know." Griffith said, "if people can work together, they can sort of understand one another's problems better.

U.S. tobacco prices can only respond within narrow limits to foreign competition because of relatively high government support

Inflation, high demand increase tobacco value

WASHINGTON (AP) - Inflation and foreign demand for U.S. cigarettes pushed the value of tobacco exports to a record $952 million for the year ending June 30, but the quantity of U.S. tobacco exported dropped 1 per cent, the Foreign Agriculture Service reports.

Shipments of U.S. leaf, hurt by cheaper competition, declined for the third consecutive year Europe remained the largest market for U.S. tobacco, despite lower exports to the United Kingdom, the agency's tobacco trade circular said. About 112,497 tons of the 263,901 tons of leaf exported went to the Common Market.

Prospects for the months ahead indicate a continued fall in U.S. shipments of unmanufactured tobacco," especially with the 1977 flue-cured crop estimated to be 23 per cent below last year's, the analysts

Prices of higher-quality leaf are expected to rise, too, along with larger supplies of competitors' crops. Cigarette exports, especially to Europe and the Middle East, are expected to continue to increase.

While leaf shipments rose in value and fell in volume, exports of cigarettes and other tobacco products records for both value and volume. Total value was about $576.6 million. with the 62.8 million parcels of cigarettes accounting for $548.5 million, more than double the 1970-74 average. Iran and the Belgium-Luxembourg market accounted for 35 per cent of the exports. The value of all tobacco exports was $1.53 billion, a 10 per cent increase.

Product exports rose 20 per cent in value while leaf exports rose only ? per cent, which corresponds to the

during that period. The value of imported tobacco rose at the same time to $332 million from $284 million a year earlier, an 8 per cent increase, but the volume fell 6 per cent to 133, 228 tons. Brazil and Italy increased their shares of the U.S. market, the report said, as traditional suppliers like Hungary, Greece and Turkey fell back. The volume of imports is expected to rise this year, it said. Shipments of leaf to Japan, the report also noted, fell for the first time in this decade - a 19 per cent drop in a year. But demand from Thailand and other Asian nations meant an overall increase to that region of the world. Exports of both flue-cured and burley tobacco slipped, but secondranked burley was still well above the | first women in average for the 1970s. Exports of flue-cured, the major variety, were sharply lower in trade with both Japan and the British Isles, while declines in burley exports to the Philippines offset increases elsewhere for that type

Odessa judge's travel expenses to be probed

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Representatives of the attorney general's and the comptroller's offices said Wednesday they will look into the travel expenses of the chairman of the Texas Board of Private Investigators and Private Security Agencies.

The two agencies commented after publication of a series of copyrighted stories by the Austin American-Statesman detailing a number of sizeable expense vouchers submitted by Odessa District Court Judge Joe

Connally, chairman of the board. "We'll be going over the board's vouchers in detail," said Jim Bloom, director of claims for the comptroller's department. "We'll probably demand documentation on all these vouchers Connally has submitted."

Assistant Atty. Gen. Joe Dibrell, who represents the attorney general on the private investigators board. told the American-Statesman he would ask Connally to call a special board meeting to explain his actions. Earlier, Connally told the American-Statesman that "I send in the tickets to the comptroller and I figure they'll reimburse me for whatever they think I'm entitled to be reimbursed...I leave it to them to determine if there's anything im-

The newspaper said that Connally, 42, Ector county judge until appointed last month to the new 244th District Court, has collected more than $5,200 in state expense money over the last 22 months, more than twice as much as the only other board member to serve during the same period.

Woman found guilty by jury

ODESSA - An Ector County jury Wednesday convicted a 25-year-old Odessa woman of injury to a child in the death of her daughter. The jury found Esther Joan Lamb guilty after deliberating about 35

Kristy Leigh Mathias, 31 months old, died in January. Mrs. Lamb's husband, Howard N. Lamb. 30. pleaded guilty in January to murder in the beating death and was sentenced to life in prison.

The prosecution charged Mrs. Lamb was negligent in not seeking medical aid for the injured child.

"Connally routinely bills the state for double rooms and suites on overnight trips, rather than single rooms," a copyrighted story said.

Regular state employes get a maximum of $30 a day to cover all travel expenses, including hotels and food. Transportation costs are extra.

However, Connally and other state board and commission members are legally entitled to full reimbursement for all expenses while attending to state business. The money comes out of the general revenue fund.

'Texas taxpayers picked up the $3,201 tab for that five day meeting last July at Padre Island at which board members apparently lived very well," the American-Statesman said.

Connally spent July 13-16 in a fifthfloor suite of the Padre Island Beach Hotel that cost $86.52 a night. Then on July 17 he moved up a floor to an oceanfront suit, complete with wet bar, that cost $118 a night, the story

Connally said the hotel insisted on the move. The American-Statesman said that Connally stayed in the Airport Marina Hotel on a visit to Dallas in December for $32.86 a night but turned in a voucher for $70.15 for the hotel room.

During a two-day meeting in Austin he spent $89.54 on meals, which was topped a couple months later by a three-day meeting in Fort Worth where he spent $106 on meals, the newspaper said. The American-Statesman said that Connally also assigned a field investigator of the agency to an out-ofstate investigation in Ruidoso, N.M. that had nothing to do with the board's

Jim Richards, now an Odessa truck salesman, drove to Ruidoso on Sept. 2, 1976, to conduct the investigation.

The newspaper said that neither Richards or Connally would disclose what the ivestigation was about. Richards collected $94.62 for the one-day trip. In another story, the American-Statesman said that eight board employes from over the state went to Fort Worth last April to attend the funeral of one employe's brother, and then billed the state for travel mileage and expenses.

James R. McWhirter, chief of the board's investigations division, said the trip was for a "staff meeting." The cost to the state was $311.70 in mileage and expenses.

Vietnam minister gives U.S., Ru first speech at U.N.

The Los Angeles Times

UNITED NATIONS - Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh, in his first speech to the U.N. General Assembly, Wednesday praised all who have joined in demanding that the United States contribute to the reconstruction of his war-torn

Trinh said Vietnam was prepared to continue negotiations with the United States for "satisfactory solutions to outstanding problems with a view toward normalizing relations." And he extended "heartfelt thanks" to individual Americans who opposed the Vietnam war - those that U.S. Ambassador Andrew Young earlier described in a speech as having waged an "internal struggle" against the Vietnam-war.

At its opening session Tuesday, the 32nd General Assembly admitted Djibouti, the former French African colony, and Vietnam as the 148th and 149th U.N. members.

Speaking in Vietnamese, the frail, bespectacled foreign minister said the "bloodiest neocolonial war in history" had left millions of his compatriots killed or disabled and thousands of villages destroyed. In South Vietnam, he said part of the population had been driven from their homes and livelihood, "their minds poisoned and their human dignity destroyed.

Trinh did not name the United States as the aggressor, but attributed the ills of his country to "imperialist aggression." He said "no reactionary force, however powerful can prevent people from obtaining freedom and peace.' Since the collapse of the U.S.backed southern regime two years ago, he said, "a new era has begun in our country, an era of peace and socialism" ending a "somber legacy of more than 100 years of foreign

U.S., Russia arms talks

WASHINGTON (AP) - The United States and the Soviet Union are resuming arms talks, apparently prepared to concede that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty now in effect will expire in 11 days without a new agreement to replace

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who held two negotiating sessions this past spring, headed the delegations for today's talks at the State Department. The initial SALT agreement, signed intercontinental ballistic missiles of five years ago, imposed limits on land-based and submarine-launched the two superpowers. The current talks have been deadlocked for 18 months, and under one plan the two sides would adhere to the current agreement beyond its Oct. 3 expiration date. The talks scheduled for today originally were set for Sept. 7-9 in Vienna but were postponed, ostensibly to allow Vance to attend the Panama Canal treaty signing and to permit Washington and Moscow more time for preparations. Administration officials have insisted all along that the principal goal is to reach an arms agreement equitable to both sides without taking into account arbitrary deadlines. Thus, although no eleventh hour breakthrough is anticipated, officials said the two sides will exchange ideas on ways to break the deadlock.

The key hangups have involved Soviet attempts to limit the U.S. cruise missile, similar to an unmanned jet plane with a nuclear warhead, and American efforts to restrict longrange use of the Soviet Backfire Bomber. For the administration, the most worrisome aspect about an informal agreement to extend the SALT I agreement seems to be that it is bound to run into demands from Congress for a say in the process. The administration hopes to sidestep a congressional role in order to avoid a potentially divisive public debate on U.S. arms policy while negotiations are going on for future arms limitation.

About 6,000 human-types turned out for the fair's Monday night opening. The main attractions then were the Shrine Circus and, to a lesser degree, the pig show. The circus was in the Rodeo Bowl.

They turned out Tuesday night for the barrow sale, the Old Fiddlers' Contest, the midway, the booths and other exhibitions, such as the farm machinery, in generous numbers.

Last night, they set foot in the Rodeo Bowl to hear and see Texas humorist Jerry Clower joke around Tonight, there'll be some washer pitching. Friday night will feature a pet show. On Saturday, there'll be a Shorthorn show at 8 a.m., a youth horse show at 9 a.m., a steer and heifer show at 1 p.m., and in the late afternoon and night, county roping will be on the bill.

The fair's looking good. "Oh, yeah, it's super. It's good," matter-of-factly noted Skipper Driver, the 1977 fair president.

He was hanging around the fair office with some other officials. There wasn't much a'going right then.

"Really," Driver said, "the only way (to gauge the fair's success) is by comments. Apparently, he didn't have any more. But Bruce Griffith, the county's agricultural agent, offered a few comments on the fair, which accented agricultural products. 'It gives our urban and country people a chance to meet on common grounds," he said. He knows how to promote a fair. "You know," Griffith said, "if people can work together, they can sort of understand one another's problems better." Both city and country folks got together in setting up the booths and other exhibits, which Griffith termed as "excellent" in quality.

Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan led the Middle East procession to Washington earlier this week and all but closed the door on one passage around the dilemma. Under no circumstances, U.S. officials were told, would Israel modify its long-standing refusal to accept the Palestine Liberation Organization as a participant in a Geneva conference.

Egypt's public position has been that the PLO must represent the Palestinians at Geneva and that the United States should take the plunge and recognize the umbrella organization of groups which, in Israeli eyes, are no better than terrorists

But after Fahmi's White House session Wednesday, National Security Council spokesman Jerrold Schecter indicated that Egypt may be more flexible on that point in private. "Possible alternative forms of the Palestinian representation in Geneva" were the subject of the talks, Schecter said.

U.S. officials later explained that Fahmi had not expressed the Egyptian position "on the basis that Palestinian representation at Geneva has to be the PLO.'

"Rather," one official said, "the focus was on how to deal with the problem. The Egyptians are fully aware that, as a practical matter, any added participant in the peace conference would have to be accepted by

Fahmi himself, speaking briefly with reporters after his White House session, acknowledged a need for some kind of compromise formula, despite Egypt's formal support of the

PLO.

'We are working hard," he said "We have constant contacts with the PLO leaders, and we will see how we can accommodate everybody.'

Dayan, while asserting a hard-line Israeli policy on the PLO this week, was more open to suggestion on other avenues to compromise on the Palestinian issue.

He is known to have discussed the possibility of some kind of Palestinian representation in conjunction with a unified Arab delegation or with different combinations of Arab delegations.

It is understood some of these ideas also were discussed with Fahmi Wednesday. His talks here included a meeting with Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance before his morning session at the White House, then an extended session with Vance over lunch at the State Department and into the af-

One factor contributing to the Egyptian willingness to listen to proposed "alternatives" to PLO participation is the often-expressed desire, bordering on urgency, of President Anwar Sadat for a Geneva conference before the end of the year.

U.S. officials are known to be in creasingly worried about the prospect of Sadat's losing his political grip if his gamble on an "American solution" to the Middle East does not soon pay off with some tangible result. Sadat remains a major asset of U.S. policy toward the Arab world, second only to Saudi Arabia as an influence for moderation and against the Soviet

Ex-policeman says beatings 'educate' prisoners

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) -Beatings of prisoners are sometimes necessary to "educate" them, a former Houston policeman has testified in the murder trial of two other ex-officers accused of killing a man in their custody

Glenn L. Brinkmeyer said a beating teaches respect "to keep from

Brinkmeyer, 25, testified Wednesday in the trial of Terry W. Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, former Houston policemen charged with the drowning of a young karate expert who was in police custody.

The trial was transferred here from

Houston on a change of venue. Brinkmeyer, Denson, Orlando and two other officers were fired from the Houston police force after the body of Joe Campos Torres, 23, was recovered from a Houston bayou May bar disturbance.

Brinkmeyer testified after having been granted immunity from state prosecution in the case. His testimony was similar to that given earlier by Louis G. Kinney, another former policeman who also was granted immunity after being fired.

Both men testified Torres was taken to an isolated area along the bayou not far from the Houston police headquarters after he was arrested.

They said Torres was beaten and later returned to the bayou site after a supervisor at the jail had told the officers to take the prisoner to a hospital for treatment of a leg injury. Both Brinkmeyer and Kinney admitted involvement in the alleged beating. Both said Denson pushed Torres into the bayou.

Prosecutors asked Brinkmeyer what he meant by "educating" prisoners. Brinkmeyer answered that it meant to slap a person around to teach him not to fight police.

Denson's attorney Bob Bennett asked Brinkmeyer if the alleged beating of Torres was intended "to make him understand it was not good policy to jump on an officer?"

"It's good to have a reputation that some policeman is going to come out and do something about trouble," Brinkmeyer replied.

'And you say beating drunks will do that?" asked prosecutor Bert 'It might," said Brinkmeyer. 'Do you feel that attitude causes the people to fear the police?' Graham asked. 'Not fear." Brinkmeyer replied, 'but respect to keep them from breaking the law. 'You mean something more than the judicial process to administer the law on the streets?" Graham asked. "Sometimes, yes," the witness

"Do you feel this incident with Torres has helped the image of the Houston police?" Graham asked. "I didn't give it any thought,"

Brinkmeyer replied. At Houston firefighters said they found a note saying "We demand justice for Joe C. Torres" Wednesday night after a railroad trestle near the more than an hour. District Fire Chief J. R. Bruner said the note was found on the ground at one end of the 30-foot tall trestle. He said the messsage about Torres was followed with "P.S. More to come" and was signed "Chicanos."

Houston Ship Channel burned for

A fireboat was brought in to extingush the fire on the trestle on the line owned by Galveston, Houston & Henderson Railroad.

Investigators said it appeared a flammable liquid had been poured on the trestle.

Some Houston Mexican-American groups have protested the change of venue to Huntsville and have urged the Justice Department to intervene through federal prosecution of the case. The group contended Huntsville, as headquarters for the Texas Department of Corrections, is a community which greatly supports police agencies.

CAMDEN, Tex. (AP) - Back in the 1960's - and for the previous half century - this East Texas town was thriving.

One of the last company towns, Camden housed the W.T. Carter and Brother sawmill - and along with it the workers and their families. That's all gone now

Construction in Camden of a $44million plywood plant will provide about 300 jobs for area folks. But unlike the half-century during which the sawmill was in operation, the employes won't be able to walk a few blocks to work or arise late because church is only a few steps away.

Some people can still remember the Carter and Brother era. The sawmill employes were totally immersed in the company. They lived in housing provided by Carter and Brother, ate in company-owned food establishments and attended church on property owned by the industry.

But the Carter enterprise was bought out by Champion International Corporation in the late 1960's. Camden began its slow death in 1968. when Champion phased out the com-

The old Moscow, Camden and San Augustine Railroad, which never actually got as far northeast as San Augustine, won't be used in the new operation. It was once the shortest chartered passenger line in the United States, all of six miles long.

Another Camden attraction was the four-yoke ox team that served the company, traipsing through areas that non-living equipment couldn't reach. The last iron horse retired in 1962; the eight oxen logged their last miles in the early 60's.

Commons committee report seals doom of Concorde jet

LONDON (AP) - A House of Commons committee has driven another nail into the Concorde's coffin. reporting there's no possibility of selling the supersonic airliner at a profit.

The report issued Wednesday by the influential Public Accounts Committee said there "appears to be no practical possibility of (Concorde) production beyond the 16 aircraft being authorized" by the British and French governments.

"Concorde Doomed," said a headline in the London Evening News.

The two governments announced last November they would stop production when the initial fleet was completed in mid-1978, and British cabinet ministers have indicated that decision will stand unless the needle-nosed jet can be sold at a price covering manufacturing costs.

The committee said this was impossible. It was told that British Airways paid about $37.5 million for each of its five Concordes although one plane cost nearly $90 million to build, not counting the $2 billion Britain and France spent in 20 years of research and development.

"Current manufacturing costs exceed the escalated sale price ... by so large an amount," the committee concluded, "that even with a substantial new order, considerable losses would result if the rundown on production were reversed.

British Airways and Air France launched supersonic passenger service on the London-Bahrain and Paris-Rio de Janeiro routes in January, 1976, and four months later began trial runs from London and Paris to Washington, D.C.

Despite the artificially low price they paid for the plane, the airlines lost an estimated $54 million in the first year of the service. But they claim they can get out of the red if U.S. courts overturn the ban on the .300-mile-per-hour aircraft at New York's John F. Kennedy International Airport.

Besides the nine Concordes in service, five more are being built and two more are authorized. Iran has an option to buy two of the jets, China has three options and Singapore Airlines is considering leasing

Palestinians claim attack on gunboats

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The Palestinian guerrillas claimed today "that their coastal guns fired during the night on Israeli gunboats that for six days have been trying to blockade the Palestinian-held port of Tyre, on the south Lebanese coast.

"Long-range coastal guns opened up on enemy gunboats for the first time after midnight," a Palestinian spokesman said. "The Israeli navy has been trying to blockade Tyre for the last six days.

Palestinian officials said the gunboats were not hit and did not return the fire. But they said the firing apparently forced them out beyond the range of the shore guns. Tyre, 12 miles north of the Israeli border, is Lebanon's fourth largest city. It was left under the control of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine last year after Syria's military intervention halted the civil war between right-wing Christians and an alliance of Palestinians and leftist Lebanese Moslems.

A spokesman for the Popular Front claimed at least four Israeli gunboats sailed "dangerously close" to the Tyre coast, prompting the Palestinian

Palestinian guns drove off another gunboat formation that approached the coastal town of Nakoura, several hundred yards north of the frontier, the spokesman said. Lebanese provincial authorities and the Palestinians both reported that Israel moved more troops and tanks across the border deeper into southeast Lebanon. Spokesmen for both factions said at least 24 Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers crossed the frontier and moved into the Christian villages of Khoura and Deir Mimas.

Deir Mimas is about a mile from the border and north of Kfar Kila, where Israeli forces set up tank and artillery positions on hilltops Tuesday, according to the Lebanese government. Israeli military spokesmen would not make a flat denial of the report on the Downtown Lions Club in the Midland Hilton. Mrs. Martin, founder and volunteer director of VAN, told of its beginning, of its expanded free services and of the increase in the number of handicapped persons which it aids.

'We are serving more people, offering more opportunities and doing more to help our blind and otherwise handicapped citizens than at any time since we launched the program," Mrs. Martin said.

She explained that the organization furnishes various items for the handicapped, including canes, magnifying glasses, cassettes, record players, wheelchairs, pocket Braillers and others, as well as teaching basic Braille.

She said that the women who help VAN volunteer their time in maintaining the office, cutting patterns, purchasing materials, visiting with and selling the varied items made by those with whom VAN works.

Mrs. Martin said that Mrs. Fern Thurston, VAN's sighted persons in nursing homes and shut-ins, chatting with them and offering projects. When the projects are completed (place mats, towelettes, aprons, pillows and other items) the persons making them are paid for their work and the items are sold at cost, so that the organization might use the funds to purchase more material for other projects. It truly is a revolving fund, used over and over again, she said.

"This gives handicapped persons something worthwhile to do as well as furnishing them with some money to help preserve their feeling of independence," Mrs. Martin said.

She expressed appreciation to the Lions Club for its support of the program.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By KIM WOOD SHERI BAILEY and DINAH BOYD

Say HOWDY, HOWDY HOWDY! Only four weeks of school have passed and Midland High is already involved in Howdy Week. Seniors, Junior, and Sophomores have worn nametags and participated in a warm "howdy" to welcome fellow Bulldogs. Friday night, the Youth Center will be full of dancers. From 9 a.m. till midnight the Traveling Disco will play for our annual Howdy Dance. The theme this year is "What you always wanted to be costume." The price is 1.50 per person. Come on out. Everyone will have a good time.

The Midland Youth Center Junior Council chose its special committees last week. The chairmen of these committees are: Record Selection-Sarah Woods; Refreshments-Liz Montgomery; Poster and Decoration-Blanch Overton; Special Activities-Pam Forest; Phone Committe-Landa Bass, and Set-up and Clean-up-Clint Hyer. Congratulations and we're expecting great things from

The younger set, the 100 Club, elected officers at its Sept. 15 meeting. Rod Steele is the president; Renee Ramsey, vice-president, and Angela Tompkins, executive secretary. Other secretaries are Elizabeth Mashbunr, Starr Boldrick, Becky Wilson and Susan Wade

The girls volleyball team was defeated in an exciting 3-game upset to Permian last Tuesday night. The team will play Big Spring today. GOOD LUCK

obacco can be addiction

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is tobacco a real drug addiction, do you think, or just a kind of bad hibit? One of the guys in the office swore he was having withdrawal symptoms after trying to quit.-Keith R.

Dear Keith: There is some controversy about this. but certainly some cases involving tobacco are instances of addiction or drug dependence. There is a remarkable case of tobacco chewing, in fact, reported in a recent issue of the Mayo Clinic Proceedings, which illustrates this perfectly.

The compulsive tobacco chewer was sucessful 53year-old businessman who came to the clinic last year because his habit was ruining him occupationally and socially. He had been a heavy smoker during the early part of his life but had taken up cheweing tobacco 10 years previously because the smoking interfered with his favorite sport-flying.

His current consumption was five or six 2.25 ounce packages of chewing tobacco daily. His work, his social life, and recreational activities had by now become secondary to the tobacco, which he needed every two hours or so. On one occasion when he was out of tobacco, he drove 50 miles to get some. At night, he would awake from sleep every two or three hours with an intense craving for tobacco. When he tried to give up the tobacco, he had a number of withdrawal symptoms-headache, anxiety, nausea, vomiting, irritability, blurred vision. The patient took part in the daily treatment program for alcoholics and other drug addicts, which included individual and group psychotherapy, and he withdrew from his habit in seven days. Three months after he left the hospital, he was married-and off the tobacco cud. Dr. Robert M. Morse and the two other doctors who reported on the case point out that the man certainly met the strict conditions for addiction set up by the World Health Organization: an overpowering desire to take the drug and get it by any means, a tendency to increase the dose, psychic and physical dependence on the drug and detrimental effect of the drug on the individual. Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that babies can't really recognize their parents until they are eight or nine months old? A friend of mine says that is a scientific fact, but my little boy could tell right from the start when I was standing by the crib or when a stranger was-I am absolutely positive he knew it was me. Don't you agree that babies can tell right off?-Evy

Dear Evy: There used to be a theory that babies could not tell the difference between their parents and strangers until they were older-eight or nine months, as your friend has said. But more recent tests have shown that even tiny infants can distinguish who their mother and father are—as your little boy did.

will be after some precious lastminute momentum here Friday when they take on winless El Faso Irvin.

It's been a difficult week for the Rebels, who have been battling a flu bug while trying to regroup after last week's 21-14 defeat to Plainview.

"A few people have been out early in the week with the flu," Coach Jim Acree explained. "I just hope it's one of those 24 hour things and not something more serious. I guess we'll just have to keep our fingers

One of the players who has been up is middle guard Chuck Owen, who was seen quite a bit of action in the Rebels first two games.

The Rebels got out of the Plainview game with really nothing more than their pride hurt. According to Acree, there were no injuries of any consequence, and everyone will be ready to play Friday. The Lee mentor was especially pleased with how well linebackers Lee Medley and Brent Bates came out of the game. Both were seeing there first action since coming off knee Acree followed his plan to let the two see only limited action until they're fit enough for full-time duty, and he will do the same thing against Irvin, he said.

'Both of them will be in there for a set number of plays, and then we'll rest them," he explained. "Hopefully they'll be ready to go full tilt against Odessa the following week."

Lee's opponent Friday, Irvin, has had a difficult time of it in their first two non-district games, losing to Pecos and Las Cruces Mayfield. In fact, the Rockets have yet to score a touchdown this year. Their only

They may have gotten over their injuries, but there's not much they can do about their size. They don't have any. There are midgets who weigh more than some of the Rockets' front line. Their offensive front just barely averages 170 poumds a man, which could be why they haven't been Eddie Alvara, who is regarded as a better than average passer. But according to Shaw, he'll be ready to go Friday, and that means they'll be putting it up quite a bit.

"There's no doubt we're gonna be throwing the football quite a bit against Lee," Shaw explained. 'Alvara can throw it, and if our massive front line can give him time, we'll be tough.

Bavasi's resignation reportedly resulted from some comments made by Bavasi about Manager Alvin Dark and overheard by Kroc's wife, Joan.

A NUMBER of coaches of women's basketball teams have filed affidavits in an effort to get a federal judge to reverse a ruling on how high school girls should play basketball in Oklahoma. One of the affidavits came from Kathy Rush, coach of the U.S. women's basketball team at the 1976 Olympics, who said, "little or no consideration " was given to girls who played halfcourt basketball when the Olympics team was picked.

Under Oklahoma rules, high school girls play a six-member, half-court game. Three of the players on each team are forwards and can shoot baskets, and the other three are guards, who try to prevent the other team from scoring. None of the players may cross the center line of the court. An Oklahoma City high school girl brought the federal court suit against the rules, arguing that her position as a guard would preclude her from any chances at a college athletic scholarship. The affidavits had been filed with

Battered area powers face bounce-back weekend

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

After five area powers came up on the short end of the score last week. Friday's schedule appears to be somewhat more attractive even though all loops are still involved in non-conference action.

The María Shorthorns, one of the powers that fell last week to upstart Alpine, will get another severe test Friday when they travel to Crane.

Marfa climbed into the top 10 the week before losing to Alpine with a big victory over AA Ozona, but now the Shorthorns are back in the pack. wanting to improve over the hurt suffered after the celebration.

down and A&M wound up running away with a 38-9 decision.

It set the stage for an Aggie trichampionship but even that was a dreadful letdown. Until a final game upset at the hands of Arkansas, the Aggies had squatters' rights on the national title.

So two points may look good, provided you know whether it's better to give or receive.

Syracuse Chiefs to join Blue Jays

Syracuse Chiefs, the International League farm club of the New York Yankees for the past 11 years, will become a farm club of the expansion Toronto Blue Jays next season.

General manager Tex Simone said the Chiefs' board of directors voted unanimously Wednesday to terminate a contract with the Yankees and sign on with the Blue Jays.

Simone said the American League Blue Jays and the Chiefs had signed a two-year "player development" contract. He would not disclose details of the agreement, saying only 'it will help.

The Stanton Buffaloes, another power that took it on the chin last week with a 20-13 loss to unhearlded McCamey, will be on the rebound on / foreign soil against the Roscoe Plowboys. They will have to do it, however, without the services of tailback Marvin Jones, who has rushed for 395 yards and eight touchdowns this year. Jones is out with a knee injury and will miss at least two

THE LAMESA Golden Tornadoes will journey back home after two long weeks on the road, and they will be searching for that first victory of the season. Lamesa scored its first touchdown of the season last week in a 21-7 loss to Pecos, and the Tors hope to break out the offense this week against Hobbs, N. M.

The Reagan County Owis is another team that is seeking that first victory of the season, but they will have a tough time even with the home field advantage since they face unbeaten

The Badgers, however, held Stanton's Marvin Jones to 97 yards last week, and 45 of those yards came on a TD romp on the first play of the game. Still, it would be considered another major upset if the Badgers pulled off another win this week.

The Rankin Red Devils draw the open date, and need the time to regroup after losing 23-0 to Jal, N. M., last week. That loss ended Rankin's 11-game regular season winning streak.

Crane, Marfa tangle Friday

Acosta finds there is justice, after all

Two years ago I agonized over a colunn I wrote about a sophomore quarterback at McCamey. It was one of the hardest stories I ever had to tell. Today's effort deals with the same subject, but this time it is a pleasure. Last Friday night in McCamey, my whole outlook on high school athletics was uplifted. There is justice in this world. and I'm happy to tell about it.

For a brief moment, come back with me to the Crane-McCamey game of two years ago. Mc-Camey's starting quarterback went down with an injury in a game that had a great bearing on the District 7-AA championship. The Badgers had to reach down and call on sophomore Bobby Acosta to save the game.

ACOSTA WAS doing quite well. and appeared to be leading the Badgers to the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter. The Badgers got to the 10-yard line of Crane when tragedy struck. Acosta was hit on a roll out and the ball went straight up in the air, and Crane's Neal Jeffery picked off the mid-air fumble and raced 90 yards for a touchdown and a Crane victory.

Acosta naturally blamed himself for that loss even though he was hit hard enough to push a nail through a 10-inch board. I really felt bad about that gamenot because McCamey lost and Crane won, but because one kid had to suffer so much pain for something that he couldn't

But justice has come full circle. and as a senior Acosta doesn't have to hang his head. He stuck with football and he has been rewarded

LAST FRIDAY Bobby Acosta engineered one of the most stunning upsets this year in high school football when he helped lead his Badgers to a 20-13 victory over highly touted Stanton.

Acosta rushed for 61 yards in that upset, scored twice, completed two of five passes for 26 yards and was so perfect on his option pitchouts to Lenny Luna and Bobby Valdez that Stanton defenders were helpless in stopping the outside game.

One of his scores came on a 20yard touchdown run that covered about 60 yards. He broke four tackles and when he lunged across the goal, he was pulling a Stanton defender with him. It was just sheer determination that got him six points and a 14-7 lead over Stanton in the second period.

"WE'VE ALWAYS known that Bobby is one of the best option quarterbacks," said McCamey

Coach Ronnie Page after the game. "Really, the only thing our team has needed is confidence. You know what happened to us two years ago and again last year when we won only one game. A thing like this sure can't hurt our Acosta, however, was not the only reason that McCamey upset Stanton. Luna rushed for 90 yards and one touchdown while Valdez added another 82 yards. Defensive ends Don Trowbridge and David Martinez played like there was no tomorrow. Trowbridge is listed at 148 pounds on the McCamey roster and Martinez at 162, but that has to be wrong. They both have hearts that big.

So the credit should be spread around for McCamey. There were a lot of good efforts, and it's just good to know that justice has a way of winning out in the end.

THINGS PICKED up last week in the picking game as we seem to be getting a better line on the teams. I missed only eight of 31

Permian Playhouse's opening production fragile, charming

ODESSA - "Carousel," that most fragile of tertainment, "Carousel" is less successful - there is Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical hits from the 1940s and '50s, is the season-opening attraction at Permian Playhouse, Odessa's community theater.

The production is big and generally first-rate. Obviously, playgoers in the area agree because the show, originally scheduled to close this weekend, is being held over for performances through Oct. 1. That means you still have a half-dozen chances to see it. Seat reservations are available through the PPH

'Carousel" is a charmer, but fragile it is, lacking the robustness of, say, "Oklahoma!" or the happy vigor of "The Sound of Music." Still, that is not to suggest "Carousel" is less lyrical, because it contains some of the lovliest songs you can imagine -'You'll Never Walk Alone," for example, or "What's the Use of Wonderin" or the blockbuster, "If I Loved You." And of course, there is the rousing "June Is Bustin' Out All Over" and the light-hearted "A Real Nice Clambake" to give you something to hum or a static quality about it that keeps it from ever quite achieving what it obviously wants to do. Perhaps that is why "Carousel" is not done all that often in community theater circles, or elsewhere.

But, where "Oklahoma!" and "South Pacific" and Sound of Music" succeed so magnificently as en-

It would be hard to improve on Bob Welborn's performance as the swaggering carnival barker. Billy Bigelow, Daphne Pemberton's performance as the gentle Julie Jordan, or those of many other members of the cast. The trouble seems to be in the parts they have to play, which are all too often twodimensional, and in the show itself which just may try a bit too hard to bowl us over with its tenderness

The show's first act is a long one and tends to bog down with an assortment of scenes and numbers The second act is shorter, faster-moving, but not necessarily the more believable or convincing.

Permian Playhouse director C. L. Holloway has director Jane Ann Crum's costumes are good.

Chaves areas gain discoveries

Chaves County, N.M., gained two new gas discoveries and two pool extenders. A deep prospector site was staked in Roosevelt and Lea County drew two undesignated projects, while a stepout to gas production is slated in Eddy.

Tom L. Ingram, Roswell, No. 1 Jubilee has been finaled as a Pennsylvanian gas strike in Chaves, 18 miles west of Caprock, for a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 912,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through perforations at 8,380-8,387 feet.

A reentered project, it originally was drilled by DeKalb and Los Nietos as No. 1 J. P. White, and plugged and abandoned in 1952 at 9,135 feet. It has 51/2-inch casing set at 8,937 feet Location is 1.980 feet from north and intercity squabbling SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - Internal squabbling between the cities of Corpus Christi and San Antonio has surfaced as part of continuing efforts by several municipalities to reach a

Corp. over a contract dispute. Corpus Christi City Manager Marvin Townsend says San Antonio has caused negotiations to bog down by not taking a leadership role in the settlement with Coastal States Gas talks. But San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell says her city "went out on a limb" in the matter "when others wer hanging around, afraid of political repercussions. The cities filed suit against Coastal for breach of contract because they said the company was not able to deliver gas in the quantity or at the rates spelled out in a contract.

The settlement proposal calls for a reorganization and relocation of Coastal subsidiary Lo-Vaca Gathering Co.

"San Antonio simply is not accepting its leadership role at all." Townsend said. "The problem is there is no leadership at all. So negotiations have fallen to a couple of Houston lawyers and they are technicians, not policy makers.

Mrs. Cockrell said San Antonio is the entity that nudged other cities to action in the matter.

Townsend also accused San Antonio of ignoring other cities involved. "Sometimes they attended meetings and sometimes they didn't," he said. They have been acting semiindependent, when in fact there are a whole lot of customers.

Garza gets explorer

Hilliard Oil & Gas. Inc., Midland. will drill an 8,300-foot wildcat- in Garza County, five miles east of Post. It is No. 1 Kirkpatrick.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 68, block $, GH&H survey, eight miles north of Ellen-burger production in the Rocker "A" field. Ground elevation is 2,442 feet.

Another issue between the two cities is the location of the reorganized gas company that's a part of the settlement proposal.

San Antonio has attached a condition that the new headquarters be located in San Antonio.

But Townsend said the proposed agreement lists Corpus Christi and San Antonio as alternate sites for the new company headquarters.

Alaska oil ends trip

MARCUS HOOK, Pa. (AP) - The first tanker loaded with crude oil from Alaska's North Slope reached the East Coast today, ending a 7,800-mile journey from Prudhoe Bay to the BP Oil Co. refinery here.

The "Overseas Valdez," carrying 261,000 barrels of crude oil, was moored to a dock shortly after 8 a.m. Officials estimated it would take about 15 hours to unload the cargo. "This is the culmination of the biggest single project man has ever said Michael Pappas, BP refinery manager.

"It started out at the other end of the world and here it is in the middle of a giant megalopolis," he added.

The Standard Oil Company of Ohio brought the oil here to test its properties during conversion to heating oil, gasoline and other petroleum products, Pappas said.

A second tanker, the "Gulfprince," will bring an additional 235,000 barrels. However, very little North Slope oil is expected to be refined on the East Coast because most of Standard Oil's Alaska crude will be sold or exchanged at West Coast and

Gulf of Mexico ports. The crude oil that arrived today traveled 800 miles by pipeline to the Alaskan port of Valdez. The oil was then carried by a supertanker to a Standard Oil terminal west of the Panama Canal and loaded onto the two smaller vessels, the "Overseas Valdez" and the "Gulfprince, which sailed through the canal and up the Originally drilled by Morris R. Antweil, it was plugged and abandoned in June 1974. Top of the Tubb was picked at 6,553 feet, under unreported elevation.

Location is 1,980 feet from south and west lines of section 23-20s-38e

Amoco Production Co. has scheduled No. 1-EP StateCommunitized as a 1/2-mile south stepout to production in the Burton Flat (Morrow) gas field of Eddy.

It is slated to 11,500 feet, and spots 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 21-20s-28e, 11 miles northeast of Carlsbad

Atlantic Richfield Co. intends to plug back to an unreported depth for tests of the Wolfcamp as a wildcat at No. 1 Dunagan Unit, former Pennsylvanian pay opener in the Mi Vida field of Ward County, nine miles northwest of Barstow.

A recently opened gas area in Southwest Reeves County gained its second well and a %-mile north extension with completion of Chevron USA: Inc., No. 1-22 Reeves-State, nine miles south of Orla

It gauged a 24-hour potential of 2.9 million cubic feet of dry gas through perforations at 2,693-2,736 feet, after aciding the section with 1,000 gallons and fracturing with 5,000 gallons and 5,000 pounds

Drilled to 2,890 feet, it has 51/2-inch casing set on the bottom, and is plugged back to 2,848 feet. Location is 1.320 feet from south and west lines of section 22, block 45, PSL

The discovery, Chevron No. 2 Reeves-State, finaled Sept. 19 for 230,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through Delaware sand perforations at 1,678-2,744 feet.

Crystal City confronted anew with gas cutoff

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) - Lawyers for Crystal City, which faces loss of natural gas service Friday morning. say they will go to the Texas Supreme Court again to prevent the action after a state appeals court here ruled against the South Texas town.

The 8th Texas Court of Civil Abpeals on Wednesday said lower courts must stop interfering with the court's earlier ruling that Lo-Vaca Gathering Co. has the "right and duty" to stop delivering gas to Crystal City. After the ruling, Lo-Vaca said it will shut off natural gas supplies to Crystal City at 9 a. m. Friday. A court spokesman here said the ruling is not subject to appeal but that Crystal City could file another original action with the Texas

Supreme Court, an action that would, in effect, amount to an appeal. Crystal City has not paid for its gas supplies since January 1975 while contesting an interim rate under which gas prices jumped from 36 cents to about $2 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Mayor Francisco Benavides of Crystal City was notified of the shutdown time in a letter signed by William E. Greehey, Lo-Vaca president Attempts to contact Benavides Wednesday night were unsuccessful.

'In view of these circumstances and in view of the fact this company does not have and has not had a contract with the City of Crystal City since April 21, 1978, the company has no alternative but to suspend service on September 23. ## Market steadies itself

NEW YORK (AP) - The stock market ran into more selling in early trading today, but seemed to steady as the session progressed.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 4 points in early trading, had cut its loss to .96 at 840.00 by noontime. Losers held a 3-2 advantage over losers among New York Stock Exchangelisted issues. The Dow tumbled 10.82 points Wednesday to a new 21-month low, bringing the average's loss from its bull-market high on Sept. 21 of last year to more than 173 points. Analysts blamed Wednesday's selloff on concern that the business community had lost its closest ally in the Carter administration with Lance's resignation. But they noted that some buyers moved in at midmorning, attracted by the depressed prices of many issues.

Sony was the most active NYSE stock, unchanged at 8%. A 150,000-share block traded at 81/4

The Big Board's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was unchanged at 52.08. On the American Stock Exchange. the market value index fell .24 to 117.10.

NYSE volume slowed to 7.47 million shares by noontime, against 9.88 million at the same point Wednesday. Brokers said trading activity was reduced by the observance of Yom Kippur, the Jewish holiday day of atonement.

Midland Youth Center chatter

By KIM WOOD SHERI BAILEY and DINAH BOYD

Say HOWDY, HOWDY HOWDY! Only four weeks of school have passed and Midland High is already involved in Howdy Week. Seniors, Junior, and Sophomores have worn nametags and participated in a warm "howdy" to welcome fellow Bulldogs. Friday night, the Youth Center will be full of dancers. From 9 a.m. till midnight the Traveling Disco will play for our annual Howdy Dance. The theme this year is "What you always wanted to be costume." The price is 1.50 per person. Come on out. Everyone will have a good time.

The Midland Youth Center Junior Council chose its special committees last week. The chairmen of these committees are: Record Selection-Sarah Woods: Refreshments-Liz Montgomery; Poster and Decoration-Blanch Overton; Special Activities-Pam Forest; Phone Committe-Landa Bass, and Set-up and Clean-up-Clint Hyer. Congratulations and we're expecting great things from

Permian boys golf team met the Bulldogs Tuesday. David Brimberry, Mike Mahon, Richard Minnix, Jeff Lutke and Mike Young beat the Panthers 11-4. CONGRATULATIONS! That will show the Panthers who is the best.

ATTENTION ALL JUNIOR COUCIL MEMBERS: All health cards and membership cards must be taken care of by next week in order to remain on the Junior Council.

CABINET MEMBERS AND REPRESEN-TATIVES REMEMBER TO ATTEND THE STU-DENT COUCIL MEETINS ON TUESDAY MORN-INGS AT 7:30. We need your help and attendance.

The Band is having a car wash Saturday at the Gulf station on the corner of Wall and "O". It is from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are $2 each and are being sold by the band members. So get your car washed

DR. NEIL SOLOMON obacco can be addiction

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is tobacco a real drug addiction, do you think, or just a kind of bad hibit? One of the guys in the office swore he was having withdrawal symptoms after trying to quit.-Keith R.

Dear Keith: There is some controversy about this, but certainly some cases involving tobacco are instances of addiction or drug dependence. There is a remarkable case of tobacco chewing, in fact, reported in a recent issue of the Mayo Clinic Proceedings, which illustrates this perfectly. The compulsive tobacco chewer was sucessful 53-year-old businessman who came to the clinic last year because his habit was ruining him occupationally and socially. He had been a heavy smoker during the early part of his life but had taken up cheweing tobacco 10 years previously because the smoking interfered with his favorite sport-flying.

His current consumption was five or six 2.25 ounce packages of chewing tobacco daily. His work, his social life, and recreational activities had by now become secondary to the tobacco, which he needed every two hours or so. On one occasion when he was out of tobacco, he drove 50 miles to get some. At night, he would awake from sleep every two or three hours with an intense craving for tobacco. When he tried to give up the tobacco, he had a number of withdrawal symptoms-headache, anxiety, nausea, vomiting, irritability, blurred vision. The patient took part in the daily treatment program for alcoholics and other drug addicts, which included individual and group psychotherapy, and he withdrew from his habit in seven days. Three months after he left the hospital, he was married-and off the tobacco cud. Dr. Robert M. Morse and the two other doctors who reported on the case point out that the man certainly met the strict conditions for addiction set up by the World Health Organization: an overpowering desire to take the drug and get it by any means, a tendency to increase the dose, psychic and physical dependence on the drug and detrimental effect of the drug on the individual. Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it true that babies can't really recognize their parents until they are eight or nine months old? A friend of mine says that is a scientific fact, but my little boy could tell right from the start when I was standing by the crib or when a stranger was-I am absolutely positive he knew it was me. Don't you agree that babies can tell right off?-Evy

Dear Evy: There used to be a theory that babies could not tell the difference between their parents and strangers until they were older-eight or nine months, as your friend has said. But more recent tests have shown that even tiny infants can distinguish who their mother and father are-as your little boy did.

Dinner guest needn't upset one living alone

If you live alone your home is your castle. You do what you want, when you want. But occasionally you invite a guest over for the evening; someone you want to impress. An intimate dinner for two can be a breeze. Chicken breasts with a peach on the side, a crisp green salad and Cottage Fries make a tasty meal. Add a carafe of wine, lower the lights...and you'll make beautiful music together.

CHICAGO-Living alone can be a lark. Your time is your own and your seclusion sacred. You can flutter, clutter, do what you will. Your home is your castle, your Shangra La, a Walden to wallow in, in ecstacy, and that is as it should be.

It is not surprising, therefore, that the merest thought of company can be cause for concern. Maybe you've got a great date dawning, or a co-worker coming to call. Perhaps a college classmate or a raucous relative. Whoever the person, whatever the reason, your portals are about to be crossed, you privacy permeated. It is not uncommon to panic, and that is not as it should be.

A frozen potato company comes to the rescue with guidance to help savor the company coming as much as you savor the taste of french fries.

Given enough notice of the approaching (and sometimes enencroaching) appearance of a guest, you can clean your hourse from top to bottom, inside and out. With much less notice, but a therefore increased incentive, you can clean quickly, where it will show (as for the rest, they'll never know).

QUICK & CLEVER CLEANING CLUES

Storage cubes, covered baskets, skirted tables and floor-brushing bedspreads are best bets for concealing clutter. Make judicious use of them, then vacuum or dust the now cleared surfaces.

Run to the supermarket or the incinerator for carboard boxes. Load with your litter and excuse them with "These are donations for the rummage sale.

Hang coathooks just inside the front door so you won't have to open a closet.

Replace all lightbulbs with those of lower wattage. Candlelight lends a warm and cozy touch and the resulting shadows shield many a sin. Pull shower curtains across the tub; store miscellaneous paraphanelia behind them.

Bar your guest from given areas. Say you can't cook with someone in your kitchen, claim your bedroom reeks of fresh paint.

Give your guest something to focus on, drawing attention from what you'd prefer to keep hidden: A dying asparagus fern to doctor, a puzzle to puzzle over, a window to unstick, a jar lid to loosen.

The environment is now inviting and half your battle is won. Now your major concern is what to do after your guest has been greeted. One of the nicest things to do is serve food, and with the help of Ore-Ida the major concern becomes minor. These resourceful recipes, coupled with a sensational salad (anyone could do it) and a dazzling dessert (from the bakery), can make fancy feeding simple fare.

Raisin sauces dress up dinner desserts

A truly spectacular dessert is something dinner guests will always remember. When you want to dress up a dessert, make raisins a part of the recipe. Raisins are a perfect dessert ingredient because everyone loves their sweet, chewy taste.

Nest time you're entertaining friends, try serving crepes, ice cream or pound cake topped with an elegant raisin sauce. Raisin sauces are simple to prepare and can be made hours ahead of time, without spending hours in the kitchen.

Applejack Raisin Sauce is a sweet combination of two fruit favorites. A splash of rum or apple brandy adds spice to the already pleasing flavor.

Just as adults enjoy a sweet dessert sauce after dinner, children enjoy the sweet taste of chewy raisins as a snack. They provide a quick energy boost while satisfying in-between meal hunger. As you begin packing lunch boxes for a new school year, be sure to include convenient individual raisin packs, a nutritious treat that tastes good any time of the day. APPLEJACK RAISIN SAUCE

Smaller cities, like Big Apple, now facing increasing problems

By LEE MITGANG AP Urban Affairs Writer

In big cities, they say you can't fight city hall:

But in more and more small cities and towns, it's the city halls themselves that are finding they are unequipped to fight increasingly complex economic and social problems that are threatening their once-tranquil way of life.

Officials of those small towns and medium-sized cities complain that the larger cities are getting all the attention - and money - while their struggles are going largely unnoticed.

In recent months:

-Robert Marko, a citizen of Ambia. Ind., population 259, blanketed Washington with letters pleading that his town is being forced by the federal government to undertake a sewage treatment system that its mostly poor and elderly citizens can't possibly afford.

Four small towns, led by Worcester, Vt., sued the federal Economic Development Administration because they claimed they were being excluded from aid under the $4 billion public works job program. The four towns won a $535,000 settlement in federal court.

-Jerald Peters, part-time mayor of Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., says he faces the prospect of managing a town with unemployment problems as serious as the worst of American slums. The city's immediate job crisis, he says, is largely due to the Carter administration's decision to close down nearby Kincheloe Air Force Base, the area's most important employer, in September

'We expect a 40 per cent unemployment rate after the closing. The prospects have been very, very bad." says Peters, whose only hope is to persuade the Michigan state government to make use of part of the vacated Air Force facility.

For 20 years, census figures have shown a mass migration from big cities to smaller towns. City residents have hoped to find the country picket fences, the homey smiles and the friendly hellos - or at least an escape from crime, high taxes, dirt and other urban hassles.

But, economic or social changes that larger cities usually can absorb or adjust to have often proved cataclysmic to smaller towns: a factory shutting down, a new shopping mall opening nearby, or a federal grant lost because the city manager didn't know about it

Some small cities are growing too fast and don't have the know-how to plan for it. Others are shrinking, losing population and jobs, and gaining older and poorer people requiring higher levels of government spending to sustain them. Still others have mayors and managers that lose federal and state aid because they don't have the expertise to comply with complex and often expensive grant regulations.

In the past year, the National League of Cities surveyed smaller cities to find out their most serious problems. The responses, in order, were: inability to meet requirements of federal applications and programs; budget problems; water storage and treatment; growth and land use planning; housing; law enforcement; stagnant tax base; lack of communication between city and citizens: sewage treatment, and state laws that infringe on city interests.

Some, like Lynn, Mass., are showing all the symptoms of larger. declining central cities.

With a declining population, a decaying downtown area and a property tax rate that has tripled since 1970, "We're going to have some financial failures before this is all over and Lynn is definitely a prime candidate." says one Massachusetts state official who asked not to be factories. It now has two factories and about 100 empty loft buildings scarring its downtown. The rest of those factories were forced out of business by foreign competition.

"Small towns that were just potato fields are turning into central cities. The range of responsibilities for officials of these cities is much greater than it was," says Dr. George Sternlieb of Rutgers University, an expert in the problems of small cities.

Sternlieb says the smaller cities located in big metropolitan areas generally are the worst off.

'The age of the shopping center is killing those towns. There has been a decline in their economic function. On prairie maintains its market role as a retail center." he salvs.

Plainfield, N.J., illustrates his point. Tepper's, a 100-year old local department store, went out of business a few months ago. In general, the city's downtown has had trouble luring shoppers for years. Most people prefer to shop on a nearby highway packed with convenience

Many Midwestern prairie towns are suffering the urban ill known as redlining, an affliction normally associated with big-city slums. Redlining is when banks and other lenders refuse to invest money in an area they think is declining, thereby

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter decided sometime Tuesday that it was time to stop playing cat and mouse with the future of Bert

So Carter scheduled a long-delayed news conference, a decision that touched off a rapid series of developments that reached a climax Wednesday with his announcement that Lance, his friend, confidant and sometime banker, was resigning as director of the Office of Management and Budget

Although many predecessors were names-without-faces so far as most Americans were concerned, Lance was much more. He was close to Carter. A lot of folks thought about him as "deputy president.

Jody Powell, the White House press secretary, in annoucing the news conference, quoted his boss as saying. 'Why don't we just go ahead and have one? I'm tired of moving the thing

When Powell was asked if these were Carter's exact words, he reported the President was "more vivid than that.

It was one sign of the emotional atmosphere around the White House when Carter decided to meet the press after holding off for a week, ticket on Lance's windshield. because he wasn't ready with any firm answers about Lance's fate.

The decision to hold the news conference was closely followed by hurry-up meetings climaxed by the Lance resignation. Powell was asked afterwards if Carter had set out, in this fashion, to send Lance the message that it was time to make some basic decisions.

'Obviously, that was a possibility,'

A few days earlier, Powell had said of a forced Lance resignation, "Certainly that would not be an easy thing for the President to do.

So there was at least an outward impression that Carter, unwilling to fire his friend to rid himself of a potential political liability, forced the issue in a way that prodded Lance into taking the initiative.

Once the news conference was scheduled, the next step involved a supposedly casual tennis match on the White House courts. It was the Powell announced the decision to hold the news conference at about 2 p.m. Tuesday. At 5 p.m., the President, Lance, top presidential aide Hamilton Jordan and speechwriter Jim Fallows began a round of tennis on the White House courts. The game ended at 6:30 p.m.

Jordan and Fallows departed. Carter and Lance sat, alone, on chairs near the secluded tennis court.

There, with the sun beginning to set, Lance told his longtime friend, the President, that it would be best if he left the Office of Management and Budget and returned to Georgia. However, he said he wanted to talk with his wife and his attorney.

Lance was back at the White House by 6:30 a.m. Wednesday for another talk with Carter

During the day, Carter went about his scheduled appointments - the daily national security briefing, a talk about a range of government issues but not Bert Lance - with a group of Republican senators, and a meeting with Egyptian Foreign Minister

Lance went to his Georgetown home for lunch with his wife, LaBelle. After lunch, the Lances came out to drive to the White House for one more talk with Carter. There was a parking

Carter had planned to begin his nationally broadcast news conference at 3 p.m. But at 2:10 p.m., after the talk with the Lances, the President and Powell decided to delay the news conference until 5 p.m. Lance wanted time to consult with his attorney, Clark Clifford, about the resignation letter being prepared.

After the meeting with Carter, Lance kissed his wife goodbye. She drove home and he stayed behind in the Old Executive Office Building complex next to the White House.

Carter used the extra two hours to leave the White House west wing, where his office is situated, and return to the White House mansion, where the family quarters and formal rooms are located

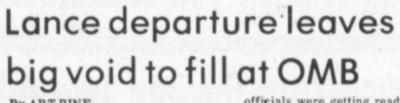

Then the President dropped by a briefing for state officials on the Panama Canal treaty. He gave no hint about the climax to the Lance case that was imminent.

Shortly before 5 p.m., the President walked across the private street between the White House and the Old Executive Office Building and took an elevator to the fourth floor. At seven seconds after 5 p.m., he entered the auditorium where his news conferences are held and said:

"I would like to read first a letter that I have just received from Bert

Poultry producers offer to pay to settle lawsuits

By JERRY KNIGHT The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Three dozen of the nation's biggest poultry producers have offered to pay more than $20 million — in cash and chickens — to settle antitrust lawsuits charging they conspired to raise the price of poultry.

The proposed settlements have been filed in recent weeks in federal court in Atlanta but the court has yet to accept the offers.

to accept the offers.

The payments would end without public trials — class action lawsuits accusing most of the nation's major chicken raisers of fixing the prices of broilers fryers and chicken parts.

All the major defendants in the case have settled out of court except for two giant Eastern Shore poultry producers — Perdue, Inc., and Perdue Farms of Salisbury, and Kane-Miller of Terrytown, N.Y., which controls Bayshore Foods and Bayshore Farms of Easton. With the other cases settled in Atlanta, the plaintiffs sued Perdue and Kane-Miller in federal court in Baltimore last week.

The class action lawsuits were filed by supermarkets, chicken wholesalers, restuarants, hotels and 19 states after the U.S. Justice Department in 1973 accused the National Broiler Marketing Association, a trade group, of pricefixing.

The federal case has been delayed by legal appeals now before the U.S. Supreme Court, in which the chicken producers claim that as farmers they while the government's case has been focusing on the legal issues, attorneys for the chicken buyers have quietly negotiated a series of settlements.

None of the poultry producers who have offered to settle the lawsuits has admitted any antitrust law violation or price fixing. The private settlements do not affect the government case, Justice Department lawyers

The proposed settlements began with an offer of $450,000 from the Pillsbury Comany and Cargill Inc. and climaxed in July with a $7.5 million settlement involving 15 chicken raisers.

The out-of-court negotiations have ended claims against all but a handful of the chicken raisers. One, Ralston-Purina Inc. of St. Louis, apparently is still negotiating with the plaintiff's attorneys, who are headed by Washington antitrust specialists David L. Shapiro and Joel Kleinman.

Because the cases are class actions, filed on behalf of all wholesale buyers of chickens, the settlements will have to be approved by the court.

Littlying a technique that price

Utilizing a technique that price fixing lawyers say is unusual, but not unique, many of the settlements provide for payments both in cash and in poultry products. The plaintiffs are to get a check for part of the settlement, plus a check that can be redeemed in chickens from the suppliers.

Consumers will not share directly in the settlements, but some of the supermarkets reportedly intend to pass part of their take on to shoppers.

The settlement agreements provide that after attorney fees, 50 per cent of the proceeds would go to supermarkets, 25 per cent to chicken wholesalers, 9.7 per cent to state and local governments — which purchased chicken for schools and institutions — and the remainder to fast food outlets, restaurants and hotels.

The Justice Department case and the class action lawsuits accuse the chicken producers of what one lawyer described as "a classic price-fixing scheme" to limit the supply and boost the price of young chickens. lifesty

In 1971, the year the conspiracy allegedly started, members of the National Broiler Marketing Association sold $600 million worth of chickens or roughly half the total sales in the United States.

The class action lawsuits charge the growers worked through their Jackson, Miss.-based association to:

"Exchange information about past, present and future prices for broilers, establish and disseminate a minimum price for broilers, sell broilers at or above that minimum price, withhold broiler parts from the market in order to increase their price, exchange information about past, present and future production of broilers, to establish and disseminate broiler production guidelines, to reduce the number of broilers available for marketing in accordance with such guidelines and sell surplus broilers to customers in foreign custom countries."

The Justice Department's case has put those charges aside temporarily to answer a critical legal issue — the poultrymen's contention that they are exempt from antitrust laws.

As a government lawyer explained

"Farmers acting together can do certain things that if done by others would be violations of the antitrust laws." The exemption was written into the laws to protect farmer cooperatives. The Justice Department contends poultrymen are not farmers.

Try Chinese-style sauerkraut

Two thousand years ago, when Emperor Shih Huang-Li was building the Great Wall of China, the workmen survived on a diet of rice, and cabbage pickled with wine. The cabbage dish was much admired by invaders and explorers and, in time, wended its way to Germany. The hearty Germans named it "sauerkraut", which means sour cabbage, and altered the way it was produced, fermenting it with salt for better results. Today, sauerkraut is produced with both art and science, using mechanical devices to core and shred the cabbage and laboratory exactness to control the flavoring process. The kraut that results is uniformly excellent, crisp, firm and zesty and an excellent source of Vitamins B and C. Celebrating its origins are a trio of

In Cantonese Spareribs and Kraut, the tangy juice of the sauerkraut is combined with crushed pineapple and spices: most of this is used to make a basting liquid for racks of pork spareris. When the ribs are crackling and browned, the remaining pineapple wauce is stirred into the kraut with slices of apple and green pepper for an unusual skillet dish.

Another example of the Eastern mood is Oriental Kraut, a blen of sauerkraut, rice and flavorings similar to barbecue sauce. It also tastes god with spareribs, pork chops or even a pan-fried slice of ham. Both recipes celebrate sauerkraut's roots in the Inscrutable East. You'll want to try them for now for a real change of pace. CANTONESE SPARERIBS AND

Saute kraut and onion in oil in large skillet 5 minutes. Add remaining pineapple sauce, apple and green pepper. Cover and cook over low heat 5 minutes. Serve with spareribs. ORIENTAL KRAUT

Bobby sox and an Afro

"People are just as current in Dallas when it comes to hairstyles as anywhere else in the world. But with clothing, it's more evolutionary than revolutionary." —The Dallas Morning News

Sue Striking, gossip-gathering gadabout for the Dallas Mews (so named when the Big D was a one-horse town), stationed herself at the busy downtown intersection of Akard and Commerce and got ready. Her stylish, one-way dark glasses—an incognito—were in place. Her livelihood, pen and pad, she had in hand. She struck as comfortable a stance as fashion allowed and considered her question; why was it the Big D was as contemporary as a peanut-farming president on hair, but strictly 1922 in dress?

strictly 1922 in dress?

A woman in her late twenties approached, swinging her hips for all they were worth. She was clad in hot pants and sported an Afro.

they were worth. She was clad in ho pants and sported an Afro. "Excuse me," said Striking. "Yes?" "I certainly like your Afro.

"I certainly like your Afro. Definitely up-to-date and very 'with it' in particular circles." Striking was of course as right as she could be; an Afro on a white woman was easily the most radically chic thing since charity.

"Is that a proposition?" said the young woman.

"That is a preposition." Striking said, though it isn't that, either.

"I don't swing that way," said the young woman.
"I believe everybody knows how you swing," Striking observed.

"What do you want?"
"To know why you're 'hip' on hair

"To know why you're 'hip' on hair and wearing pants that went out with Vietnam?"

"When did that happen?"
"What?"

"The war end."
"Oh, couple of years ago, at least."

"First I've heard."
"Well, it WAS rather quiet. But it was in most of the papers."

"I missed it completely."
"So you still wear hot pants because you didn't know the war was over.

Right?"
"Partially right. There is another "Partially right. There is another reason."

"What's that?"

"Same reason I give the hips the treatment."
"Oh, yes, of course," Sue Striking said. "Really can't beat hot pants for that."

"You can say that again," the

"You can say that again," the young woman said with conviction, walking on.
"Slattern" muttered Striking.

"Slattern," muttered Striking.
Next to come her way was a thin, 50ish woman wearing a sweat shirt, mid-calf-length skirt and bobby sox.
Her hair was the Dorothy Hamili short-and-sassy look, as current as Dorsett in a Cowboy jersey. She looked, as far as Striking was concerned, ridiculous.

"Pardon me," she said.

"Yes?" The woman had a husky, somewhat disconcerting voice. "Is that the Dorothy Hamill shortand-sassy look you have there?"

"It better be," said the woman sternly. "I shelled out $32.50 for it." "Good heavens, where do you go?"

"Jacques," where else?"
"I go to Betty's Beauty Parlor," Striking said.

"Never heard of it."
"It's in Fort Worth."
"Never heard of it."

"It's a city. About 30 miles west of

"Very interesting, I'm sure."
"May I ask you a question?"
Striking said, rhetorically.

"You already have, dear, and you didn't ask before," said the 50-ish, husky-voiced woman.
"Yes, well, tell me, why, oh why, are you wearing bobby sox, that skirt and that, that..." Words failed Sue Striking.

"Sweat shirt. It's called a sweat shirt."

"I just couldn't say it."

"I understand."
"Well I don't. Why are you wearing those things?"

."Very simple," said the woman.
"This is my girl garb. Unless my eyes deceive me, I have 15 or 20 years on you. In the buff, that is. But with bobby sox, et al, the gap vanishes.
Poof. Get it?"

"I don't think so," Striking said, at the same time concluding the woman was nuttier than a fruitcake. "What about the Dorothy Hamill short-andsassy look on top?"

"That's one question too many," the woman said, smiling. "You're nosy, dear, and no mistake."

This experience unnerved Striking a little. She was of half a mind to give it up when a young woman in a 1947 suit with padded shoulders and a Farrah Fawcett-Majors coiffure came along. Striking decided to brave it once more.

"Excuse me, may I ask you a question?" she said. "I don't see why not," said the 1947 woman.

woman.
"Is that the Farrah Fawcett-Majors look you have there?"

"It better be. I spent $32.50 for it."
"I'll bet you go to Jacques," said
Striking, figuring she was one-up this

"Never heard of him. I go to Betty's Beauty Parlor. It's in Fort Worth."
"Tell me," said Striking, ignoring that, "what in this wide world are you doing in that suit?"

"My boyfriend likes me in it," said the woman straightforwardly. "But it's thirty years out of date,"

Striking protested.
"Do you have a boyfriend?"

"I have a husband."
"Swell. Was he a boyfriend first?"

"I suppose so."
"Did you wear what you wanted to wear, or what he liked you in?"

"I see your point."

"Good for you."
"Your boyfriend likes Farrah Fawcett-Majors, too, I guess?"
"Have you met the man who doesn't?"

"I see your point."
"You're very clever. Any more questions?"
"Just one. If your boyfriend marries you, will you get out of that

"As fast as I can," the woman said, and winking, she walked away.

Columbus no hero back home

CHICAGO (AP) — It is perhaps one of life's small ironies that Christopher Columbus is heralded in this hemisphere to a much greater degree than on the continent of his origin.

Neither in Italy, the famous seaman's birthplace, nor in Spain, the country that financed — and profited from — his voyages, is there a major city or town that bears his name, says the World Book Encyclopedia.

But on this side of the world, the Republic of Colombia carries his name, and so do numerous towns, rivers, streets and public buildings. For many Latin American people October 12th is a day of celebrations to honor their Spanish heritage, while in America it is celebrated on the second Monday in October.

Americans have been celebrating Columbus' arrival on these shores since 1792, when New York City honored the 300th anniversary of the event. In 1920, Columbus Day was declared a permanent federal holiday. And Americans have been celebrating annually since then with parades and banquets.

Bad roads hike driving costs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energyconscious motorists are learning that bad roads increase their driving costs.

The average U.S. motorist pays an extra $108 a year in fuel, tire wear and front-end repairs because of rough roads, says The Road Information Program (TRIP).

Three-fourths of that is wasted gasoline caused by stops and slow-downs for potholes and rough, broken

Tours show another Honolulu

By HOLLY KURTZ

HONOLULU (AP) — You'll see the usual sights like the capitol and Waikiki Beach in a ride on the tour bus with Andrew Lind. The same ticket buys passes through parts of Honolulu less popular with tourists.

Lind, a retired college professor, s ays he doesn't regard himself as a tour conductor, but his bus trips are standing room only.

The 75-year-old Lind taught sociology at the University of Hawaii for 50 years. He conducts his "Bociological tour of Honolulu" at ward an air-conditioned bus.

"A sociological tour means those who do go have a deeper interest in the community," said Lind. "The tourist might be intrigued by the interracial character of the city and he or she may get further insight into what that involves."

The bus snakes through Honolulu's back streets and seamy alleys and crawls up the narrow mountain roads with Lind pointing out sights in a changing city. Wealthy and poor neighborhoods are side-byside and high-rise buildings sprout in areas that were cane fields not long ago.

The passengers are usually a mix of tou rists and local residents. Lind said many who sign up are retired school teachers who have never been off the beaten track. He said the journey is an outgrowth of his teaching days when he led students on the same Social changes are noted frequently by the tourmaster. As the bus passes a country club, Lind tells passengers it used to be for whites only.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter may not know it but he has a go-ahead from the Humane Society of the United States to kill as quickly as possible the mice that inhabit the presidential offices.

Three White House sources reported that special devices that trap rather than kill mice have been installed near Carter's private office because, they claimed, conventional mousetraps are frowned upon by humane societies.

Nothing could be further from the truth, it seems. Said Charles Herman. spokesman for the national society:

Intervention by humane societies, although an ill-founded rumor in the case of Carter's mice, has occurred periodically in recent White House

When squirrels began chewing up President Dwight D. Eisenhower's backyard putting green, some animal lovers were outraged by Ike's strenuous efforts to have them trapped and carted off to distant federal forests.

Eyebrows were raised anew by a campaign to rid stately White House trees of squalling, untidy starlings. The gimmick in this case was to capture a starling, truss him head down by his feet and record his shrieks of terror, which then were broadcast from loudspeakers placed in the trees.

In the intervening years, technology has advanced to the point where a more effective anti-starling method has been developed. To wit: a groundskeeper walks among the trees at the roosting hour banging two sticks together.

New microscope The Washington Post produces high magnification.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A million books stored on a single sheet of paper? A movie of uranium atoms in motion? Both are possible with the new electron microscope which can magnify an object (or reduce it) 20 million times

The best optical microscopes, limited by the wavelengths of light, magnify no more than 2,000 times and the implications of the new microscope are enormous, says National Geographic.

The microscope will enable biologists to spot normal cells changing into cancerous cells and to identify genes that cause hereditary

Perhaps the most unexpected benefit of the electron microscope is demagnifying, says Geographic.

Court rules on immunity

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Court of Appeals ruled here Wednesday that, under certain circumstances. federal prosecutors can be sued by private citizens for alleged misconduct in the courtroom.

The 2-1 decision came in a case involving a crusading prosecutor assigned to ferreting out antiwar figures and investigating their activities. In one such case in Florida, it is alleged, he lied to a judge who had posed a single question to him.

The ruling, the second in a week by the appellate court here concerning the rights of private citizens to sue government officials, strikes down a longstanding legal doctrine that gave prosecutors immunity from lawsuit for their action and prosecuting criminal offenses.

Such an immunity had been deemed required, according to numerous legal observers and the dissenting judge Wednesday, to protect prosecutors from harassing lawsuits brought by their investigative targets.

Wednesday's ruling came in a case involving Guy Goodwin, the circuit-riding prosecutor who headed a Justice Department unit created by the Nixon administration to prosecute crimes by "revolutionary terrorists" in the late 1960s and early 1970s.

Although grand juries across the country directed by Goodwin returned scores of indictments against antiwar activists, only a handful of defendants ever

'I feel modern married state is the best literature has slighted the that life can offer. ... I lib? single woman, the tough- think quite naturally minded woman," says Ms. Frank, a top Hollywood screenwriter who turned to the novel for her 1970s story of women alone.

'There are books about weepers and wailers. I wanted to write a book about women who have a strong grasp on life.'

"Fear of Flying is fine," she says, "But what about the women who are doers and shakers?"

"Single," published this month with a first printing of 50,000, tells of four lone women playing out personal crises against the backdrop of a California seaside singles apartment complex.

'If you cast a wide net over any place where people live, you'd turn up an odd bunch of fish, Ms. Frank, declares.

Her women, she concedes, are not everyday girls-nextdoor. They are: -Nell, a successful doctor whose cool detachment makes her love affairs temporary.

-Stella, a slovenly alcoholic poet who curses her benefactors while proclaiming her own brilliance.

-Hortense, a tough, black schoolteacher whose acid tongue burns her pupils, friends and two-timing boyfriend.

-Eunice, a sexually promiscuous movie studio secretary who retains a childlike optimism through affairs, abortions and abandonments.

There are traces of Ms. Frank in her characters. "Like Hortense, I'm naturally acerbic,"she says, then grins: "Like Stella, I'm full of myself.

The traveling exhibit will be touring the nation's major shopping malls over the next year to teach youngsters about fire prevention.

Its purpose is to show children how to make their homes safer from fires and what to do if a fire should occur, according to Trudy Daly, fire safety education director for the Hartford Insurance Co., sponsor of the program. "Fire claims the lives of more than 4,000 children each year and causes injury to 150,000 more young people," she points out. "Many of these tragedies could have been prevented by the children themselves — if they had been taught to respect and prevent fire and how to escape from fire with minimal harm.

Friendly animal characters, created by famous children's book illustrator Steven Kellog. present the "how-tos" in a novel way on colorful storyboard panels, which form the 16 by 12 foot 'house."

Each room of the house is represented by a different color, with safety lessons geared to that room shown on the walls.

"A great many American families will benefit directly from a personal exploration of the house," says Ms. Daly. "Since the exhibit puts fire safety into a fun, easy-to-understand context, we feel children will want to learn prevention techniques and will apply the lessons they take home with them.

The Hartford House exhibit was created to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the Junior Fire Marshal program. This public service effort to educate children about fire safety, carried out through the nation's school system for the past three decades, currently has two million youngsters, kindergarten through third grade, enrolled. With materials specially developed for their use. teachers give in-class lessons on various aspects of fire safety, from fire prevention techniques in the kitchen to how to conduct home

His biggest problem is in the ignorance and neglect of horses demonstrated by some owners.

"The work I do is seasonal but it shouldn't be," he explained. "Many people don't have much to do with their horses in the winter besides throwing them some hay."

He said horses' hooves need constant care and horse owners should not rely totally on the farrier for that.

This phase-out of so-called gas guzzlers is provided for in S 2057, the energy conservation part of President Carter's national energy policy, later passed and sent to confernece with the House.

Defeat of this amendment left intact a provision of S 2057 under which utilities - if so requested by a customer - can arrange for the financing and installation of insulation in a residence. The amendment sought to leave those two functions to the home-construction industry. # Antagonists square off for 'battle of Toxaphene'

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency and the powerful agriculture and chemical industries have squared off for a major showdown over whether toxaphene, the nation's most heavily used pesticide, should be pulled off the market for causing cancer in test

The sheer size of the toxaphene business — more than 100 million pounds are produced annually, and huge amounts are spread on crops and livestock in virtually every agricultural region in the U.S. — has propelled the clash into the "super-bowl" category in the increasingly controversial area of federal pesticide control.

"Toxaphene," said an official of The American Farm Bureau, which is trying to rally some 2.5 million farm families to support the pesticide, "is the focus of the whole argument over the EPA's pesticide program, because it's just about everywhere."

Toxaphene accounts for nearly onefifth of all the pesticides used in the country, the farm bureau official said. Without it, he and other farmindustry spokesmen claim, the nation's farmers would be cut off to fight off hordes of marauding insects.

On the other side EPA officials and supporting environmental organizations have charged that toxaphene's cancer-producing properties are so potent that in one test laboratory mice in every case developed tumors when they received substantial doses of the pesticide.

There is additional concern among some congressional and environmental observers, as well as some agency officials, that he toxaphene fight may show whether EPA can stand up to increasing pressure from the well organized agriculture and chemical industry

Since May, when the EPA listed toxaphene on its Rebuttable Presumption Against Registration—or RPAR—list of pesticides the agency wishes to remove from the market, an unusally high number of formal responses have poured in. Of the more than 350 on file at EPA most are clearly unfavorable—including agricultural-state congressment.

Farmers' concerns have focused on the fact that with other major pesticides such as DDT, aldrin and dieldrin off the market for similar safety reasons there is a dwindling about 40 letters from predominantly

"EPA keeps banning these chemicals and telling us to use substitutes," said Edwin A, Jones, a 28-year-old corporate farm operator from Pahokee, Fla. who wrote the agency opposing the removal of toxaphene. "Well, we've just about run out of economical substitutes."

Farm Chemicals, an industry trade publication, last month devoted seven pages to warning its readers of the dangers of the RPAR system, with much of the article devoted to the toxaphene battle.

"Toxaphene users have a lot at stake," the magazine noted, adding that major users of the pesticide such as the cotton industry are worried about disasterous insect infestiations if the compound is taken away from

Under the present timetable, EPA could pull toxaphene off the market in about a year, with provisions for the industry to appeal to the agency and then to the courts afterwards. EPA, however, is seriously behind schedule on its RPAR program, and agency officials expect the toxaphene struggle could drag on for some time.

A major challenge to the listing took place last week when the Hercules Corp., the biggest toxaphene producer, weighed in with a 120-page rebuttal of EPA's RPAR listing for the pesticide.
