Black leader buried; violence claims four

The Los Angeles Times

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN, South Africa - Steve Biko, the young moderate black leader who died under still-unexplained circumstances while in police custody two weeks ago, was buried here Sunday after a funeral attended by more than 5,000 blacks.

It was a day of tension between the 9.500 white residents of this one-time old English settlement and the 250,000 blacks who live in the surrounding Ciskei tribal area. The white police generally confined themselves to directing traffic and staying away from the cricket field where the peaceful funeral was held.

However, trouble flared later when police clashed with returning mourners in Mdantsane township outside East London, about 30 miles east of here. Two black policemen were stoned to death at a bus station when black activists returned and set fire to two vehicles and raided a shopping complex. Violence has also claimed the lives of two civilians.

Police said they wounded at least two civilians when they opened fire to disperse the rioters:

The four-hour funeral service was a mix of the religious and the political. Hymns were interspersed with the rousing "Nkosi Sikele Africa" (God help Africa), which has become the national anthem of the black militant movements. An Anglican requiem mass was held. Speeches praised Biko as "a true symbol of human dignity," while they denounced Prime Minister John Vorster and Minister of Police James T. Kruger as "blind advocates of white supremacy.

In a show of unity not always present among the nonwhites, all subjected under South African race laws to varying degrees of discrimination, speakers included leaders of both the Indian and mixed-race communities. The planned attendance of large black delegations from the nation's cities was mostly thwarted by a government ban on using charter buses for transportation.

But the open-air service, begun under dull skies that gradually brightened, was attended by a number of representatives of Western nations. Biko, at 30, had become South Africa's best known and respected black protest leader.

U.S. Ambassador William Bowdler, his wife and Donald McHenry, deputy U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations were present. A wreath from U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young was prominently displayed near the bier. The card read, "No nation can afford to lose its most dedicated and creative leadership.

The American presence was purposefully accented to indicate support for the Black People's Convention, the best-organized of the black militant groups in South Africa. And the one that had made Biko its honorary Ambassador Bowdler was driven to the funeral in his official black limousine with the U.S. flag flying. Earlier he and Mrs. Bowdler had been driven up the muddy road to Ginsberg township, the area to which blacks are confined, to present his condolences to Biko's wife, Ntsiki, and Biko's two small sons.

The Bowdlers joined the file of blacks entering the humble Biko home to view the body. The house is no different than the hundreds of other drab, box-like structures in Ginsberg except that Biko had been able to pay for electricity and a

A white mortician had been employed to prepare the body. Biko lay in a coffin of dark imbuia wood, dressed in a tribal gown of the colors of the black consciousness movement - orange with black trim. The coffin was embossed with the symbol of the Black People's Convention - clenched hands breaking a chain that had bound them.

From the house to the sports field for the funeral, the casket was placed on a wagon, pulled by oxen, a tradition of the Xhosa tribe to which Biko belonged.

The procession wound down Ginsberg hill and crossed a bridge over the Buffalt River that divides the white section from the black area of King William's Town.

Hlaku Kenneth Rachidi, president of the Black People's Convention, delivered the funeral oration. Biko's death, he said, was "the culmination of attacks, onslaughts and executions against our movement by those who illegally wield power over the aboriginal majority." They do so, Rachidi continued, "to uphold and entrench white supremacy and economic and political domination of the black man.

But black consciousness persists, he said. "Forward we march until we win. The best road to follow is the road that Steve Biko followed.'

From the multitude came a ringing cry of "Amandhla" (power) and an upshot of arms raised in a black power salute.

Biko was buried in the Ginsberg cemetery, next to the railroad tracks. His headstone is already inscribed. Below the death date it reads, "One Azani'." Azania is the name to be given South Africa when the black majority comes to power:

Cease-fire reached in Lebanon

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A ceasefire was taking hold in the southern Lebanese war today as Israel began pulling its armored forces back across the border.

Beirut radio said the cease-fire agreement, involving the Israeli and Lebanese governments and Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat. was tentative, and a small radical guerrilla group rejected it. But Israeli spokesmen said the cease-fire had been fully approved and taken effect.

The Israeli Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv said the truce agreement called for withdrawal of the Palestinian guerrillas from positions north of the border from which they could shell towns and settlements in northern

A spokesman for Arafat's high command said contacts were "under way to work out final details of a cease-fire that will preserve Lebanon's territorial integrity.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate leaders are trying to halt a filibuster on a bill regulating the price of natural gas in an effort to pave the way for a vote on a proposed compromise.

The natural gas issue is expected to tie up Senate floor action all week, despite the Senate efforts today to kill the filibuster by invoking debatelimiting cloture.

President Carter, who spent part of the weekend campaigning in Virginia for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Henry Howell, said at a rally in Norfolk, Va., that he might veto the natural gas bill if senators use it to remove controls from the price of natural gas.

"I hate to veto a bill that a Democratic Congress passes, but you can depend on it: I'll protect your interests when the bill comes to my desk." Carter said.

Meanwhile, hearings get under way today in both houses on the new Panama Canal treaty, giving the Carter administration its first major opportunity to try to persuade Congress to go along with the recently negotiated agreement.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd has formally asked the Senate to permit television and radio coverage of the Senate ratification debate when it gets under way next January.

It would be the first time for such coverage in the Senate chamber, although Senate committee hearings frequently have been broadcast.

Byrd told reporters over the weekend that if a vote were ready this year, it would be defeated. It might have a better chance by early next year, he said.

And the Senate Banking Committee is beginning hearings on whether federal regulation of banks should be overhauled, an outgrowth of the controversy over resigned budget director Bert Lance's personal banking transactions.

The vote of 60 senators is required to limit debate on the natural gas pricing bill, which is a major element of President Carter's energy program. If cloture is approved that would end the immediate threat of a filibuster and further debate on the bill would be limited to 100 hours.

expected to push for Senate approval for a compromise between President Carter's proposal, which would keep federal controls on natural gas, and a competing industry plan, which would lift them.

Either measure would raise heating prices for companies and individuals using natural gas.

Byrd, who filed the cloture measure along with Jackson, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker and 17 other senators, also said he sees a good chance of a compromise. He said there is still a good chance Carter will get much of his energy program enacted, despite some recent setbacks in the Senate. The filibuster has been led by a handful of liberal Democrats who Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman don't want to see any relaxation of of the Senate Energy Committee, is government price controls.

Not only did Sunday's high record of 99 degrees set in 1953. Four other records have been broken and one tied so far this month. Saturday's high temperature hit 101 degrees, breaking the record of 97 set in 1953. On Thursday the high of 100 degrees broke the record of 97 set in 1933. Wednesday's high temperature again reached 100 degrees, breaking the 1930 record of 97, and on Sept. 17 the high of 98 cracked the 96 degree record set in 1952. The record high was tied Sept. 9 with a temperature of 98 degrees. It had last reached that temperature in 1930.

Temperatures have continued to be so hot because a high pressure area over the Southwest is keeping cooler air from flowing down here, leaving Midlanders to suffer from the heat generated by the thermal low pressure area from Mexico, the weatherman said.

Pope celebrates birthday

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope Paul VI celebrated his 80th birthday today, and said the end of his life is approaching. But one of his close associates said he doubted the pontiff would abide by the retirement-at-80 rule he has set for his cardinals.

Pope Paul told a crowd of 50,000 in St. Peter's Square Sunday that his birthday "preannounces that our end in the order of temporal life is ap-

'This obliges us to great humility," the pontiff said. "We feel the fragility of being human to which we are subject as Christ was at the crucifix."

The fact that the pope has made retirement at 80 mandatory for cardinals and his increasingly frequent references to his advanced age have given rise to speculation that he might abdicate.

But Giovanni Cardinal Benelli, a close associate who is considered by many to be the pope's choice for his successor, said in a weekend in-

The collectors were drinking from cans not too awfully common in their collections: Budweiser, Coors, Miller's and such familiar brands around here.

The beer nuts nail their allegiance to the Beer Can Collectors of America party

One claiming such loyalty was Alex Schwertner of San Angelo. He owned up to starting "this mess" at Hogan Park. He's president of the newly chartered West Texas chapter of the national beer can group

Schwertner has "right under" 2,000 cans in his collection and has an additional 5,000 he's willing to trade

Outside of swap meets, he latches onto his choice cans by walking along and in bar ditches, prying into cellars and sifting through "old dumps" filled with discards from years and decades ago.

Instead of aluminum, most of the old cans were made of steel. One of the earliest was a 1934 Pabst. Back then, some beer drinkers might have been leery about drinking booze from a can. Bottles were king then. The label guaranteed the beer to be "safe, pure, wholesome."

"It ain't gonna hurt you to drink out of the can," Schwertner said in his interpretation of Pabst's label.

A beer can collector who's not so much concerned about the drinkability of beer was Richard Rowlett of Arlington. He's a teetotaler.

"I don't drink any of it," said Rowlett, who started collecting cans in 1966. "I don't know why I started. Just a wild hair, I guess."

Fellow collector Mike Ardis thought it a bit queer that a true-blue abstainer would hoard beer cans.

"How in the world do you get the cans to collect if you don't drink?" cracked Ardis, who claims Odessa as his home He drives around a yellow VW beetle that sports the bumper sticker "Beer Can Collectors of America." It's stuck on the rear window.

DEAR ABBY

Woman loves her fiance, but hates to move

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 24-year-old California woman who fell in love with a terrific eligible bachelor while vacationing in New York.

We're planning a November wedding, but every time I think of living in New York I break down in tears. I hate New York! I was born and raised in California, and all my friends and family live here.

We have to live in New York because my fiance is a physician, and his father (also a physician) is retiring and leaving him a wonderful established practice

I've asked my fiance to consider taking the California Medical Boards so he can practice there, but he says it's foolish to start all over again in California when he has a successful ready-made practice in New York. I know he's right. But as much as I love him, I know I'll be miserable in New

Please answer soon as time is running out.-TORN

DEAR TORN: If you "know" you'll be miserable in New York, you will be. And he'll be miserable, knowing that you're miserable, which will make for a miserable marriage.

Unless you go to New York determined to build a new and happy life, for your sake and his, call the wedding off and stay in California.

DEAR ABBY: I am involved with an older married man with whom I have a unique relationship. He never questions me about other men, and I never question him about his wife-although I admit, I'm curious. He pursued me, I didn't pursue him, and from the very beginning he told me he was a "happily married man." My question: Why would a "happily married man" want to have an affair? Or is the affair a sign that something is wrong with his marriage?-CURIOUS DEAR CURIOUS: It's possible for a man who is sufficiently satisfied with his marriage to seek supplementary excitement just for the fun of it. I would translate his statement into the following: "I enjoy fooling around with you, but don't get any crazy ideas about marriage, because I'm perfectly happy with things the way

DEAR ABBY: For years I have been driving four neighbor children and my daughter to school every day. I decided not to join a car pool because I figure that as long as I am driving anyway. I may as well take a car-full. Incidentally, we have a nice new car with six seat belts, and I am as dependable as a clock.

We've lived in this neighborhood for many years and I know all the parents, but I don't see them socially. Of course all the mothers know that I chauffeur their children every morning because I pick them up at their doors.

Now I don't expect a medal, but when I meet one of the mothers in the market or at PTA, not ONE mother has ever said "thank you" to me.

If parents are so thoughtless about showing their appreciation, is it any wonder their kids think the world owes them a living?

This has been on my mind for a long time. Please print this to wake up a few mothers. But don't use my name or location.—IRRITATED

DEAR IRRITATED: Names and locations are unnecessary. The guilty ones will know who they are.

Ms. Cloud lost 191/4 pounds and 331/4 inches.

I recommend the program at Pat Walker's Figure Perfection Int'l to anyone who has a appearance problem. Anvone can lose weight-the secret is learning self-discipline. While in the program at Pat Walker's, one not only leses weight and important inches but learns the secret. I have had a weight problem all my life. At the age of 6, I weighed 62 pounds and continued to be heavy through junior high. My first year in college brought a tremendous weight gain and each year added a little more.

Various diets worked but I have always put the weight back on, never quite losing all I wanted to lose. A few years ago I found a diet I could live with successfully. I lost some weight before I started Pat Walker's but the inches would not hudge

Since participating in the program I have lost a total of 281/4 inches and regained muscle tone lost from neglect and weight abuse. I now eat with pleasure—always within reason. I feel physically better, my self-image is greatly improved and the benefits derived from Pat Walker's far outweigh imagined inconvenience.

The unique thing about the program is the rapid loss of inches. The weight loss is beneficial but the inch loss is more easily reflected.

The program at Pat Walker's is not deemed a miracle. Self-discipline in one's eating habits and programming oneself to come in regularly will change one's mind's eye view from a fat person to an attractive woman.

Or she could have faced up to the stomach knots of stage fright and the chance of failure and launch a career as a professional singer. Which she did.

'I'm kind of a classic case of women wanting to think their lives have meaning. You're not that old at 45. I have always been sort of independent. I sing to keep my soul alive."

The ambition that eventually led to New York cabarets began in that room, with a microphone and some sing-along records. Then she auditioned for her friend, Eunice Denenberg.

"I sang with my back to Eunice. I couldn't look at her, I was so petrified," Mrs. Buffett said. After all, she hadn't performed in public since a charity event at Omaha Central High 12 years earlier. Mrs. Denenberg helped her get an audition at an everything from jazz to blues to Broadway hits. "One of the best things was going to New York," she says. "I was just a person singing there." They didn't know her as the wife of Warren Buffett, a successful businessman, whose assets in enterprises ranging from newspapers to candy have been estimated at more than $1 billion. She says it's no longer a big thing when people see her act out of curiosity. "When they come back again, it's not out of curiosity. I'm sure people went to see Liza Minnelli at first because she was Judy

Garland's daughter."

Besides moral support from her husband, Mrs. Buffett says she got immediate understanding from her children: Susie, 24, Howard, 22, and Peter, 19, who is studying music at Stanford University.

"I didn't want to embarrass my children. But they understood immediately that I needed to do this. I really love sharing that with them.

Being a performer, Mrs. Buffett says, is "kind of opposite of being a mother. I've spent my life taking care of other people. Now, I feel like I have to take my vitamin and do my exercises. I'm not used to the care and feeding of Susan Buffett.

Music has been a part of the Buffetts' lives for many years.

At age 11, Buffett sang "America the Beautiful" with his family on the radio for his father's successful congressional race.

During their college days, Buffett won Susie's attentions by playing the ukelele with her father, a mandolin player. "It was obvious I was not No. 1 with her. But he (Mrs. Buffett's father) became very prome. It was two against one," Buffett says.

Although Mrs. Buffett only recently stepped into the limelight, Buffett says it's not the first time he's been introduced as "Susie Buffett's husband

"She's a very solid person," he says. "People rally around her, and that's fine."

Mrs. Buffett's immediate plans include an Oct. 15 benefit for New York University, "I'll probably be scared," she says. "People are paying $1,000 to be where I'm going to sing. People at that benefit will be accustomed to being entertained by the best.

The 'Chief' retires

Melvin Little's announcent that he is taking early retirement from his position as chief of the City of Midland's Fire Department came as a complete surprise.

We, like most persons simply hadn't thought about Mel Little retiring - or of the Midland Fire Department without Chief Little at its helm.

After all, J. Melvin Little has been the chief for a quarter of a century, longer perhaps than a majority of the city's population has resided here. A great many residents haven't known any other chief.

And Chief Little has operated the department so efficiently and with so little outside display that residents have taken him and the department for granted. The department was there and the chief was there, both doing satisfactory jobs; and that's all there was to it.

It is no wonder, then, that his retirement announcement came as a shock to many persons.

He has done a tremendous job in building a fire department second to none in West Texas and beyond. Its personnel is capable, welltrained and efficient, and its equipment is the finest and most modern available. It is a department of which all Midlanders well may be proud.

Mel Little and the fire department have grown up with the city. It was a comparatively small department in a comparatively small city when he took over as chief 25 years ago. It hadn't been too many years previously when Midland had a volunteer fire department. And today, Little finds himself as chief of a 107-man department with six fire stations. plus another at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

He and his department, of course, have had some problems as they worked to keep pace with a fast-growing community. But none has been serious, and through it all Chief Little has been able to smile and to enjoy every bit of it. He has no regrets and he wouldn't have had it any other

And neither would the Tall City or its residents have had it any other way - than with Chief Little. They owe the chief and his fine department more than they can ever express.

So, after more than 40 years in the fire-fighting business (San Angelo and Midland Army Air Field prior to Midland), Melvin Little is stepping down on Oct. 15 as chief of a fire department which he has helped build and of which he is very proud, in order to get a bit of rest and relaxation and to spend more time "around the house."

It is good to know that Chief and Mrs. Little will continue to make their home in Midland

And as he prepares to leave his office, Midlanders join in saying, "Thank you, Chief, for a job well done, and all best wishes and loads of happiness to you and Mrs. Little in your retirement in the

The ultimate test

Sometimes the Internal Revenue Service designs a new tax form to make taxpayers forget about such things as tax cuts or rebates which never materialized.

And sometimes, presumably it does it out of compassion.

Whatever the reason, IRS will mail out in a few months the 1977 forms in eyepleasing pink and white and easing again, according to advance notice, the tax computing chore. It is said there will be no flipping from one side of the page to the other, reducing the chances for confusion and error.

Seems like we have heard this

Everytime Congress simplifies the tax laws, however, and everytime the IRS simplifies the forms, we seem to wind up with the same old headache in April. And it still isn't going to be pleasant even if the pink and white form passes the ultimate test next spring.

Ethics probers aim at GOPers

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - The House Ethics Committee is pulling out all stops to get the testimony of Korean payoff man Tongsun Park. The committee has even approached ex-Rep. Cornelius Gallagher, D-N.J., himself a prominent figure in the Koreagate investigation and a close friend of Park, to act as a secret intermediary

Democratic leaders would like to implicate some Republicans in the Koreagate scandal, so it can't be used against the Democrats as a campaign issue. One Democratic source suggested that Gallagher might be able to persuade Park to talk about reports that a Nixon campaign aide put the arm on him for a $100,000 contribution.

But another source insisted the committee was eager to get Park's testimony about the congressmen he paid off, regardless of their politics. We have seen no evidence that the committee is taking a partisan approach to the investigation.

It is no secret, however, that the Democrats would welcome a few more Republicans joining them in the hot water. Some Democrats are searching intently for Republicans who may have accepted gifts or favors from the South Koreans. Here are the names of those who are under

- RICHARD NIXON: There are persistent but unproven reports that the Nixon campaign received some laundered cash from South Koreans. So far as we can find out, Nixon was not directly involved in any transactions with Korean payoff men.

SPIRO AGNEW: We reported last May that the former vice president had teamed up with Tonbusiness deals. We have no evidence, however, that their joint ventures were illegal.

- SEN. JAKE GARN, R-Utah: He flew to South Korea in 1975, all expenses paid, as the guest of a foundation that allegedly is a government front. But there is no reason to believe he was aware of its government ties.

- REP. WILLIAM BROOMFIELD, R-Mich.: Press reports, quoting "a source close to Tongsun Park,' alleged that the Korean influence peddler gave Broomfield $1,000. The congressman has denied the allegation and has opened his records to both the Justice Department and House Ethics Committee. The records contain no trace of the alleged $1,000.

- REP. ALBERT QUIE, R-Minn. He joined a congressional delegation that visited South Korea in 1969 and brought back a free suit and a pair of cufflinks. He priced the booty and found the suit was worth $50, the cufflinks $3.45. But unhappily, the suit "didn't fit" so he gave it to Good Will Industries, he told us.

-SEN. TED STEVENS, R-Alaska: He also met with some Korean businessmen who gave him a check for $2,500. Like Winn, the senator returned the money.

- REP. THAD COCHRAN, R-Miss.: He acknowledged that he had been Tongsun Park's guest for dinner 'once or twice" at the Georgetown Club. Sources close to Park tell us, however, that he frequently entertained members of Congress at Park's club.

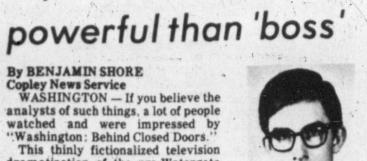

EX-REP. WILLIAM MIN-SHALL, R-Ohio: Sources close to the Koreagate investigation say he is high on the list of former congressmen under scrutiny. He was unavailable for comment.

Several Republicans also received small donations from Park, usually $500. It is unlikely that Park came to their offices, flashing his Korean CIA credentials and offering them bribes. All the congressmen we have interviewed, Republicans and Democrats alike, believed Park was a businessman. It was perfectly legal, therefore, for them to accept campaign contributions.

The House Ethics Committee, meanwhile, made a provisional approach to Gallagher to meet privately with his elusive friend, Tongsun Park.

The bedeviled Gallagher went to prison, in a headline case, for tax fraud. Now he is back in the headlines as a Koreagate figure. According to sources close to the investigation, he is eager to put the allegations behind him so he can begin a new life.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: A fundraising committee, spensored by such conservative luminaries as Sens. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., James McClure, R-Idaho, Clifford Hansen, R-Wyo., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has raised $73,295. The committee spent almost all the money on its own expenses; only $350 has been distributed to candidates. A spokesman explained that the money is going into fund-raising, rather than being distributed to candidates, because the candidates haven't formally announced yet.

The key is time, not only time in which to do things but also time in which simply to think. The fictionalized president in Washington: Behind Closed Doors' tellingly complained, just weeks after his inauguration, that he was drowning in memos. The aides who wrote those memos controlled the president's thinking. He had no time to study issues independently.

There is no easy solution. When Jimmy Carter dusts off Harry Truman's desk sign, "The Buck Stops Here," he is inviting aides to drown him in memos. For only then can he feel that he is making the final, tough decisions. In fact, the aides are making the decisions. The course that modern presidents are loath to take is greater delegation of decision-making authority to subordinates. INSIDE REPORT:

Human rights and Israel: highly explosive subject

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Even the most pro-Israel members of the House International Relations Committee scarcely believed their ears Sept. 12 when a scholarly witness praised Israel's mushrooming settlements on the West Bank as "an important contributor to the region's well-being and to the fostering of better relations" between Jew and Arab. In President Carter's view, no issue has so poisoned relations between the U.S. and Israel as Prime Minister Begin's claim to the entire West Bank of the Jordan River as "liberated" lands that belong to Israel, with an inherent Israeli right to plant set-Far from "fostering better relations" with the 700,000 Palestinian Arabs who live on the Israeli-occupied West Bank, the Jewish settlements are officially labelled by the Carter administration as "obstacles" to peace. The settlements, furthermore, are clearly "illegal" under various international conventions. So, it might be expected that members of the human rights and Mideast subcommittees of the International Affairs Committee would hear some Arab spokesmen when they conducted the Sept. 12 hearing on legal and human rights aspects of the Israeli settlements.

They did not. Nor were the Congressmen aware of an essential fact when they heard Prof. Fred Gottheil of the University of Illinois express those remarkable views about Jewish settlements. The fact: he had been picked as a witness by staff of the two subcommittees at the express request of the American-Israel Public Affairs Committee (AIPAC) AIPAC, which is run by Morris J. Amitay, is this city's most important and effective pro-Israel lobbying group. Its roots run deep into the political soil of both the House and Senate and its network of political and public relations contacts extends to every major American city.

AIPAC and other political arms of the American-Jewish community did not want any hearings at all on the politically combustible issue of West Bank settlements. Rep. Edward Derwinski of Illinois, ranking Republican on the human rights subcommittee headed by Rep. Don Fraser of Minnesota, sought to block the hearings altogether.

Calling the subject "explosive," Derwinski said public hearings might "complicate" Mr. Carter's Mideast peace plans at a delicate moment in the negotiations. Fraser and Rep. Lee Hamilton of Indiana, chairman of the Mideast subcommittee, disagreed. But the political courage implicit in their decision to move ahead with hearings filled with political boobytraps was overshadowed by extraordinary kowtowing of their staffs to the pro-Israel lobby.

Not only was AIPAC permitted to "recommend" at least one witness

(Prof. Gottheil), but the decision was made to veto all testimony from any Palestinian or Arab-Anerican witness. Considering the fact that the Sept. 12 hearing related only to the human rights and the legal issues of Jewish settlements in Arab Palestine, the refusal to take testimony from Palestinian Arabs seems surprising.

What made this especially frustrating to the largely unorganized American-Arab community was the futility of their efforts to change that committee decision. The American Arabs were denied the same chance to propose witnesses that the committee gave AIPAC. The record is slightly chilling.

A staff aide of Sen. James Abourezk, the Senate's only Arab-American, was secretly informed by a House Committee staffer in June that the hearings were being planned for September. He informed the Middle East Research Center, an Arab-American lobby. It privately requested the staff of Fraser's subcommittee to consider taking testimony from Abdeen Jabara, a prominent Detroit lawyer and leader in the Arab-American community. Some two months later near the end of August, the Middle East Research Center was told by the Fraser subcommittee staff that, regrettably. there was no place for any Arab witness recommended by the Arab-American lobby, Jabara included.

Gottheil, picked to testify by Amitay's AIPAC, was joined by Prof. Raymond Tanter of the University of Michigan, who spent five years in Israel as a visiting professor at Hebrew University and was also approved by AIPAC. Tanter's testimony, though certainly reflecting his own conviction, was virtually indistinguishable from the Israeli foreign office.

'Contrary to propaganda claims of violations of human rights," Tanter testified, "Israel's occupation (of the West Bank) has served to broaden human rights...The net effect of the occupation...is positive.' That novel reading of Israel's colonization of the West Bank and other Arab lands seized in the 1967 war brought a low-key response from Paul Quiring, an experienced Mennonite social worker who has helped West Bank Palestinians on relief projects since the 1967 war. Taking a pro-Arab position, he said: "It strikes me as odd that the construction of Israeli settlements could improve human rights conditions without the (Palestinian) people being aware of it." That is no odder than the hearing itself.

Halbouty discusses U.S.'s energy future

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the second part of an address delivered by Michel T. Halbouty last Friday at the annual meeting of the International Association of Drilling Contractors. The first part was run in the Sept. 25 issue of The Reporter-Telegram. Halbouty, a Houston independent oilman and scientist, is the 1977 recipient of the Sidney Powers Memorial Award of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. It is the highest award made by the AAPG.)

Now, let's go on to another potential energy source.

When we speak of developing and producing difficult oil we must at all times consider the vast quantities which are embedded in our deposits of oil shale. The estimated reserves are several times higher than the total oil reserves in the entire Middle East and South America combined.

Our domestic reserves of oil from shale are estimated from 600 billion to a trillion barrels. If we can develop the technology to produce this oil from shale, our oil shale deposits can form the foundation of a reconstructed and viable oil industry for the next 100 years.

This brings to my mind that, in October 1968, at the Fifth Symposium on Oil Shale sponsored by the Colorado School of Mines, I presented a paper entitle "Shale Oil - Will it Ever be a Reality?"

"At that time, which was 10 years ago, I stated '25 years ago we were told that oil from shale would be a reality in 5 years. Twenty-years ago, we were told it would be in 5 years. And for each successive 5-year period, it was still 5 years away. And today, we hear oil from shale will be a reality in the next 5 years.'

"I went on to say that environmental restraints and governmental restrictions are so sever, I am beginning to doubt that it will ever be

'Today, in the midst of the most serious domestic issue confronting the United States - which is energy the government has not yet established the framework within which a viable shale oil industry can function. It is ridiculous that I would have to repeat today what I stated 10. years ago - 'shale oil - will it ever be

"Again, I will also repeat what I stated in 1968 - 'given the proper firmly convinced that private industry can make oil from shale a reality. It is a cource of energy we need and must develop and produce as soon as possible.

"Now, let's proceed to the next source, which will provide our energy in the future.

'Coal is the world's most abundant fossil fuel. There are immense quantities in the United States. Our. total resource is estimated at 4 trillion tons, of which approximately 260 billion tons are estimated to be recoverable with current economics and technology.

"This estimated proven amount represents approximately 400 years supply based on our present rate of consumption. Converting these coal reserves into energy represents a major challenge for producers and users alike.

"Users of coal at present are mainly electric utilities, but in the future as nuclear energy satisfies much of the growth in electricty, increasing amounts of coal will be consumed by other industries.

"The primary reason coal has not expanded more rapidly is two-fold: First - by artifically controlling the price of gas, government forced the coal industry into a 20-year depression, making the name Appalachia, one of our nation's richest coal-bearing regions, synonymous with poverty, disease and despair.

Secons, government limitations on the amount of sulphur released into the atmosphere has drastically reduced production. "In the case of oil it is relatively easy to remove the sulphur before the oil is burned. For coal, however, this is not now technologically possible. Therefore, it is low sulphur coal that is more desirable.

"It is very obvious that if there is some easing of these environmental restraints the use of coal is expected to more than double in the U.S. and to increase nearly 50 per cent in the rest of the world by the end of this century. "In this connection and before proceeding to the next source of energy for tomorrow, I must unequivocally state that a general letup in fanatical environmental controls is mandatory.

"It is extremely important that a controllable and efficient compatibility be attained between industry and environmentalists. One of the greatest drawbacks that we have today is the asinine environmental restraints and unwarranted delays imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency in just getting ordinary things done.

"In my opinion, the EPA should be completely abolished or its directives changed so that it will be meaningful in its efforts to sustain, maintain and protect the environment in complete coordination with industry.

"By eliminating the useless costly and time-consuming bureaucratic procedures which have been foisted upon us in the name of environmental protection, which serve not to impose reasonable regulations as to the manner of conductin exploration, development and production activities, but instead these procedures mandate that such activities however conducted - will simply never occur.

We out to stop fooling ourselves and realize that an Environmental Impact Statement required as a prerequisite to conducting necessary and, in fact, essential energy exploration and envelopment activities serves but one function, namely, to delay or forever prevent commencement of the activities.

"It is simply a lawyer's playground in which opponents test the ability of the proponents to describe with sufficient particularity all conceivable and unlikely horror stories about the possible adverse impact of the activity on environmental factors. "But the fact of the matter is that if

all these factors are fully described the activity is finally permitted after unwarranted lengthy delays but if not the activity is continually delayed until they are fully described.

'We can no longer afford to provide such a weapon to empty-headed obstructionists and regulators who are willing - in fact eager - to do everything in their power to prevent forever the development of our oil and gas and other energy resources. 'Therefore, I repeat that, in my opinion, the EPA should be completely abolished or its directives changed so that it will be meaningful in its efforts to sustain, maintain and protect the environment in complete coordination with industry.

"The next major source of energy in the United States is nuclear which as we all know has been delayed and stymied because of the fanatical and wang-brained obstructionists - including that purveryor of demagoguery - Ralph Nader.

Between now and 1985, despite its problems, nuclear power fueled by enriched uranium remains one of this nation's best prospects for fulfilling the possible energy gap. Delays in construction, either because of legislation, politics, or fanatical environmental restraints. will necessitate increasing dependence on foreign oil or a drastic reduction in the living standard of this

Worldwide installed capacity of nuclear reactors is projected to increase nearly 10 fold between 1975 and 1990. Therefore, it is important that the search for uranium be conducted on an ever sustaining scale. In fact, the search should be accelerated.

It is a paradox that the majority of American people favor a speedup of the building of nuclear power plants and yet approval to build these plants has been held up due strictly to political and environmental factors.

In this connection we should remind ourselves that last month the nuclear age was 32 years old. Prior to 1945, many scientists had known that the fusion of the atom could produce unbelievable power but no concrete effort was made to create this power because it was felt that electricity and oil using internal combustion engines were sufficient and no other types of power were necessary.

After all, electric power and the combustion engine were only a generation old. Therefore, while oil and gas is growing scarcer and other. forms of energy remains costly and experimental, it is odd that a greater source of power - nuclear energy is the subject of such controversy that its future cannot be predicted.

The enigma of nuclear power is the determination whether it is intended to be used in a bomb or in a power plant. There are some — whom I may classify as overly zealous environmentalists - who claim that any use of nuclear power would be catastrophic to both humans and the Nuclear diplomacy has taken on a where-do-I-go-from-here status. Here lies a great energy source which can remain dormant and be of no use to anyone on this earth or it can be put to use for the benefit of mankind so as to alleviate shortages from known energy sources which we know are becoming more critical each day.

In this nuclear age it is odd and rather sad that the energy crisis is becoming the crisis of the world.

Therefore, tremendous energy can be created in this country if we begin to build many nuclear plants to supply power to replace the gradual decline of our petroleum resources.

In this connection, fast breeder reactors should be constructed as they use plutonium and uranium to produce both power and new fuel at the same time. Breeder reactors produce more fuel than they consume and stretch uranium supplies.

Since time is so important to this country to develop as much energy self-sufficiency as possible, it is inconceivable that there have been obstructions of all types - primarily by frenzied, uncompromising and impassioned environmentalist which have prevented and-or slowed down the building of even the most fundamental type of nuclear plant. Even with today's nuclear reactors uranium can supply energy comparable to all of the oil already discovered and expected to be discovered in the United States. Reprocessing used nuclear fuel and reusing or recycling the uranium and plutonium thus obtained can provide vitally needed energy supplies in the future. Any proposal or proposals to forego this energy supply raises issues about future national wellbeing and even future world stability.

Needless to say I do not agree with the restrictions places in this country upon the use of uranium or plutonium as a commercial reactor fuel

Sooner or later this country will realize that it has to have these nuclear plants if it intends to continue to grow and prosper. Whether we like it or not the atom will be the leading source of power in this nation's future

Now for the summary. We must bear in mind one indusputable fact: Low cost energy is gone forever. The United States will have to convert from petroleum to other less convenient and certainly more costly energy sources.

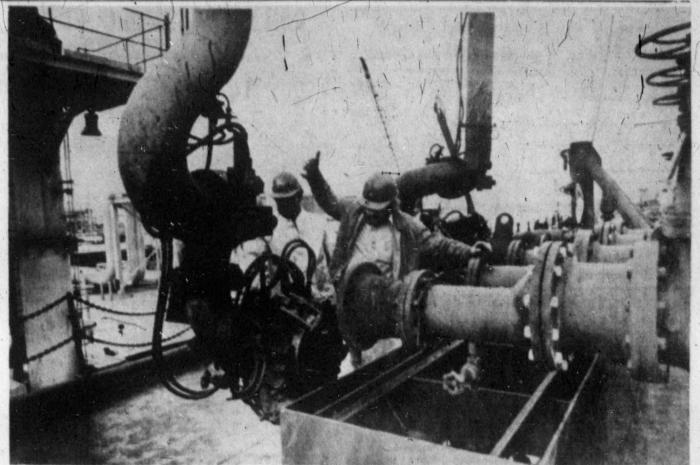

If our petroleum reserves are depleting as fast as some prognosticators say they are, development and use of a number of alternative energy sources is mandatory. No one particular resource can establish a respectable sufficiency; it will require a balanced assortment of many energy sources.

Petroleum, coal and nuclear are the only immediate sources in sufficient supplies to permit us to create enough lead time to develop and produce others.

Energy one of hottest subjects for how-to-do-it-yourself books

The Washington Post

Energy is one of the hottest subjects for how-to-do-it books. These are just a few of the best:

"The Solar Home Book," subtitled "Heating, Cooling and Designing with the Sun," has become something of an underground best-seller. It was written by Bruce Anderson, a 30-yearold with a master's degree in architecture from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

When he stopped by Washington recently, Anderson explained that he first became interested in solar energy simply because he needed a master's thesis and not much seemed to have been written on the subject. He wrote the thesis in 1972. Later he expanded it into a full-length book.

After working for a while with architect I. M. Pei, Anderson had decided that the world of big-time architecture was not for him and moved to Harrisville, N.H. There he organized Total Environmental Action, a group that has now expanded to publish a number of solarrelated brochures and a magazine called Solar Age.

A former schoolmate of Anderson's, publication of his book. Under the imprint of Cheshire Books, the paperback was illustrated and put together totally by people who had never worked n a book before.

Simultaneously, McGraw Hill published a hardbound textbook version together with Total Environmental Action called "Solar Energy, Fundamentals in Building Design," which is somewhat more professionally oriented, though with much the same content. The paperback is $7.50 and available by mail (as well as in bookstores) from Cheshire Books, Church Hill, Harrisville, N.H., 03450. The hardbound version is $21.50, available in bookshops that specialize in technical publications.

"I WOW!

MIAMI - Fifteen-year-old Ronney A. Zamora, whose attorney contends he was rendered insane by intense exposure to violence on television, goes on trial in Dade County Circuit Court today on a charge of first-degree

The trial has attracted unusual attention. One reason is the nature of the defense, which could place television itself on trial. Telly Savalas, star of the "Kojak" crime series on CBS-TV, has been subpoenaed as a witness for the defense, which claims that 'Kojak'' was one of the programs that warped Zamora's mind.

Another reason is the scheduled televising of trial excerpts for at least two hours nightly on Miami's public television station, WPBT. It will be the first extensive TV coverage of any Florida Trial since the State Supreme Court allowed cameras in courtrooms as of July 5, for a one-year experiment.

Zamora and Darrell M. Agrella now 15, were indicted together in the June shooting murder of 83-year-old Elinor Haggart, who lived next door. to the Zamora family in Miami Beach. They will be tried as adults. The indictment alleges first-degree murder, burglary, robbery and possession of a firearm while committing a felony.

Agrella, will be tried in November. He has pleaded innocent. His attorney asked for a separate trial because Zamora gave Miami Beach police a confession

Zamora's attorney, Ellis Rubin, has entered a plea of innocent by reason of insanity. Without admitting that Zamora committed the crime, Rubin, in a pretrial brief, said he would prove that the boy "was suffering from, and acted under the influence of, prolonged, intense, involuntary, subliminal television intoxication. The television "intoxicant," according to Rubin, produced a "mental disease or defect" that left Zamora unable to "appreciate the criminality of his conduct" or "conform his con-

In a pretrial deposition, Mrs. Yolanda Zamora, the defendant's mother, said that Ronney had watched television for six to seven hours per night since the family moved to Florida from the New York area on July 25,

"He was crazy over 'Kojak," Mrs. Zamora said. "He even asked his father to shave his head because he wanted my husband to look like Ko-

The defense has said that the Haggart murder resembled a "Kojak" episode, but Savalas, asked about such an episode, replied, "Nope. You've got the wrong show.

Other programs that Mrs. Zamora said her son liked were "Police Woman" and "S.W.A.T.

Rubin has been limited somewhat by Judge H. Paul Baker, who said he would not permit a "general indictment" of television. The judge ruled out any testimony that would show how television affects children in general, but he allowed testimony by experts as to how television influenced Zamora.

In that connection, the judge said Friday that Savalas must appear Oct. 5 for a determination of whether his testimony would be relevant.

Savalas, recently quoted as saying that he abhors TV violence and that Kojak "does not pull guns," is reported to have agreed to testify.

Violence on television has come under increasing fire from citizens' groups. Moreover, the issue was dramatized by at least two incidents this month.

A 14-year-old boy in Columbus, Ohio, was said by police to have shot and killed his brother, 11, while reenacting a scene from the detective movie, "Dirty Harry," the day after it was shown on television.

In Hartford City, Ind. a confessed killer testified that he and three other men discussed a televised movie about the Charles Manson murders, then killed four men in a trailer home last February

Neither case was comparable to that of Zamora, in which prolonged ed to have caused insanity. As for the crime itself, police said that Mrs. Haggart surprised two burglars and was shot with her own pistol when she threatened to call the police.

The prosecution is expected to call about 25 witnesses and the defense about a dozen, including psychiatrists and psychologists for both sides. Judge Baker has issued a gag order forbidding participants to discuss the case publicly.

South African latest winner in piano contest

The 24-year-old DeGroote, who is studying at Curtis Institute in Philadelphia, said he has had music in his house as long as he could recall.

As a part of his 90-minute, semifinal competition, DeGroote played the Chopin Polonaise-Fantaisie Op. 61 on a Borsendorfer Imperial Grand piano. The 97-key piano, made in Austria, was used by several pianists in the competition this year.

A Russian, 25-year-old Alexander Toradze, won the silver medal and the only American to reach the finals, 25year-old Jeffrey Swann of New York City, won the bronze, Toradze, whose father is a composer and mother an actress, plays out of the Moscow Conservatory.

Swann was born in Arizona, lived in Dallas and studied under Alexander Uninsky at Southern Methodist University. Although his parents reside at Euless, Tex., Swann is now studying at the Juilliard School of Music in New York.

The Van Cliburn competition this year had 198 applications but only 92were accepted and then only 76 showed up. The strenuous competition, which is held every four years, began Sept. 11.

During the last 90-minute recital, the pianists gave a performance of chamber work and a piano quintet accompanied by the Tokyo String Quartet.

Showers and thunderstorms covered much of the nation east of the Mississippi.

Most of the activity was associated with a frontal system in the Ohio valley-great lakes area. Heavy thunderstorms moved eastward over lake Erie, heading toward Cleveland and Ashtabula.

A flash flood watch was in effect early today for parts of New York state, where heavy weekend rains already provided a good soaking.

Showers and thunderstorms also were reported over widely scattered portions of the Mississippi valley, as well as from Alabama through South Carolina and over Florida.

There was isolated shower activity along the California coast just south of San Francisco, in the Lake Tahoe area, and in the northern Rockies.

Early morning temperatures around the nation ranged from 35 degrees in Houlton, Maine to 88 in Phoenix,

Halbouty discusses U.S.'s energy future

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the second part of an address delivered by Michel T. Halbouty last Friday at the annual meeting of the International Association of Drilling Contractors. The first part was run in the Sept. 25 issue of The Reporter-Telegram. Halbouty, a Houston in-dependent oilman and scientist, is the 1977 recipient of the Sidney Powers Memorial Award of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. It is the highest award made by the AAPG.)

Now, let's go on to another potential energy source.

When we speak of developing and producing difficult oil we must at all times consider the vast quantities which are embedded in our deposits of oil shale. The estimated reserves are several times higher than the total oil reserves in the entire Middle East and South America combined.

Our domestic reserves of oil from shale are estimated from 600 billion to a trillion barrels. If we can develop the technology to produce this oil from shale, our oil shale deposits can form the foundation of a reconstructed and viable oil industry for the next 100 years.

This brings to my mind that, in October 1968, at the Fifth Symposium on Oil Shale sponsored by the Colorado School of Mines, I presented a paper entitle "Shale Oil - Will it Ever be a Reality?"

"At that time, which was 10 years ago, I stated '25 years ago we were told that oil from shale would be a reality in 5 years. Twenty-years ago, we were told it would be in 5 years. And for each successive 5-year period, it was still 5 years away. And today, we hear oil from shale will be a reality in the next 5 years.'

"I went on to say that environmental restraints and governmental restrictions are so sever, I am beginning to doubt that it will ever be

"Today, in the midst of the most serious domestic issue confronting the United States - which is energy the government has not yet established the framework within which a viable shale oil industry can function. It is ridiculous that I would have to repeat today what I stated 10 years ago - 'shale oil - will it ever be

'Again, I will also repeat what I stated in 1968 - 'given the proper political economic incentives, I am firmly convinced that private industry can make oil from shale a reality. It is a cource of energy we need and must develop and produce as soon as possible.

"Now, let's proceed to the next source, which will provide our energy in the future.

"Coal is the world's most abundant fossil fuel. There are immense quantities in the United States. Our total resource is estimated at 4 trillion tons of which approximately 260 billion tons are estimated to be recoverable with current economics and technology.

"This estimated proven amount represents approximately 400 years supply based on our present rate of consumption. Converting these coal reserves into energy represents a major challenge for producers and users alike.

"Users of coal at present are mainly electric utilities, but in the future as nuclear energy satisfies much of the growth in electricty. increasing amounts of coal will be consumed by other industries. 'The primary reason coal has not expanded more rapidly is two-fold:

First - by artifically controlling the price of gas, government forced the coal industry into a 20-year depression, making the name Appalachia, one of our nation's richest coal-bearing regions, synonymous with poverty, disease and despair.

Secons, government limitations on the amount of sulphur released into the atmosphere has drastically reduced production.

"In the case of oil it is relatively easy to remove the sulphur before the oil is burned. For coal, however, this is not now technologically possible. Therefore, it is low sulphur coal that is more desirable.

"It is very obvious that if there is some easing of these environmental restraints the use of coal is expected to more than double in the U.S. and to increase nearly 50 per cent in the rest of the world by the end of this century. "In this connection and before proceeding to the next source of energy for tomorrow, I must unequivocally state that a general letup in fanatical environmental controls is mandatory.

"It is extremely important that a controllable and efficient compatibility be attained between industry and environmentalists. One of the greatest drawbacks that we have today is the asinine environmental restraints and unwarranted delays imposed by the Environmental Protection Agency in just getting ordinary things done.

"In my opinion, the EPA should be completely abolished or its directives changed so that it will be meaningful in its efforts to sustain, maintain and protect the environment in complete coordination with industry.

"By eliminating the useless costly and time-consuming bureaucratic procedures which have been foisted upon us in the name of environmental protection, which serve not to impose reasonable regulations as to the manner of conductin exploration, development and production activities, but instead these procedures mandate that such activities however conducted - will simply never occur.

"We out to stop fooling ourselves and realize that an Environmental Impact Statement required as a prerequisite to conducting necessary and, in fact, essential energy exploration and envelopment activities serves but one function, namely, to delay or forever prevent commencement of the activities.

'It is simply a lawyer's playground in which opponents test the ability of the proponents to describe with sufficient particularity all conceivable and unlikely horror stories about the possible adverse impact of the activity on env "But the fact of the matter is that if

all these factors are fully described the activity is finally permitted after unwarranted lengthy delays but if not the activity is continually delayed until they are fully described.

"We can no longer afford to provide such a weapon to empty-headed obstructionists and regulators who are willing - in fact eager - to do everything in their power to prevent forever the development of our oil and gas and other energy resources.

"Therefore, I repeat that, in my opinion, the EPA should be completely abolished or its directives changed so that it will be meaningful in its efforts to sustain, maintain and protect the environment in complete coordination with industry.

"The next major source of energy in the United States is nuclear which, as we all know has been delayed and stymied because of the fanatical and wang-brained obstructionists - in-

Austin okays tax decrease

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The Austin City Council has decided to give taxpayers a three-cent tax break, but Southern Union Gas Co. may take it

The council last week approved a record $263 million annual operating budget that will allow a three-cent decrease in the property

City Tax Assessor-Collector Jack Klitgaard said the tax cut would mean a savings of $6.75 for the owner of a home with an assessed value of $40,000. However, at the same council meeting the gross receipts tax paid by Southern Union Gas was increased from two to three per cent.

It was estimated the increased cost to the consumer would be $5.60 annually if the gas company recoups its increased taxes by raising rates.

Oil group's meeting set

TULSA, Okla. - The National Stripper Well Association will hold its 1977 Annual Meeting at the Dallas Hilton Oct. 24, association president Ralfe D. Reber of Wichita, Kan., reports.

The association's meeting, held concurrently with the annual meeting of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, is scheduled for 8:30 a. m.

"First attention will be given the particular problems of the stripper well division of the domestic industry." Reber said, "and to those policies considered necessary in order to encourage maximum recovery of oil from proven stripper reservoirs."

cluding that purveryor of demagoguery - Ralph Nader. Between now and 1985, despite its problems, nuclear power fueled by enriched uranium remains one of this nation's best prospects for fulfilling the possible energy gap.

Delays in construction, either because of legislation, politics, or fanatical environmental restraints, will necessitate increasing dependence on foreign oil or a drastic reduction in the living standard of this

Worldwide installed capacity of nuclear reactors is projected to increase nearly 10 fold between 1975 and 1990. Therefore, it is important that the search for uranium be conducted on an ever sustaining scale. In fact, the search should be accelerated.

It is a paradox that the majority of American people favor a speedup of the building of nuclear power plants and yet approval to build these plants has been held up due strictly to political and environmental factors.

In this connection we should remind ourselves that last month the nuclear age was 32 years old. Prior to 1945, many scientists had known that the fusion of the atom could produce unbelievable power but no concrete effort was made to create this power because it was felt that electricity and oil using internal combustion engines were sufficient and no other types of power were necessary.

After all, electric power and the combustion engine were only a generation old. Therefore, while oil and gas is growing scarcer and other forms of energy remains costly and experimental, it is odd that a greater source of power - nuclear energy is the subject of such controversy that its future cannot be predicted.

The enigma of nuclear power is the determination whether it is intended to be used in a bomb or in a power plant. There are some - whom I may classify as overly zealous environmentalists - who claim that any use of nuclear power would be catastrophic to both humans and the

Nuclear diplomacy has taken on a where-do-I-go-from-here status. Here lies a great energy source which can remain dormant and be of no use to anyone on this earth or it can be put to use for the benefit of mankind so as to alleviate shortages from known energy sources which we know are becoming more critical each day.

In this nuclear age it is odd and rather sad that the energy crisis is becoming the crisis of the world.

Therefore, tremendous energy can be created in this country if we begin to build many nuclear plants to supply power to replace the gradual decline of our petroleum resources.

In this connection, fast breeder reactors should be constructed as they use plutonium and uranium to produce both power and new fuel at the same time. Breeder reactors produce more fuel than they consume and stretch uranium supplies.

Since time is so important to this country to develop as much energy self-sufficiency as possible, it is inconceivable that there have been obstructions of all types - primarily by frenzied, uncompromising and impassioned environmentalist which have prevented and-or slowed down the building of even the most fundamental type of nuclear plant.

Even with today's nuclear reactors uranium can supply energy comparable to all of the oil already discovered and expected to be discovered in the United States.

Reprocessing used nuclear fuel and reusing or recycling the uranium and plutonium thus obtained can provide vitally needed energy supplies in the future. Any proposal or proposals to forego this energy supply raises issues about future national wellbeing and even future world stability.

Needless to say I do not agree with the restrictions places in this country upon the use of uranium or plutonium as a commercial reactor fuel.

Sooner or later this country will realize that it has to have these nuclear plants if it intends to continue to grow and prosper. Whether we like it or not the atom will be the leading source of power in this nation's future

Now for the summary. We must bear in mind one indusputable fact: Low cost energy is gone forever. The United States will have to convert from petroleum to other less convenient and certainly more costly energy sources.

If our petroleum reserves are depleting as fast as some prognosticators say they are, development and use of a number of alternative energy sources is mandatory. No one particular resource can establish a respectable sufficiency; it will require a balanced assortment of many energy sources.

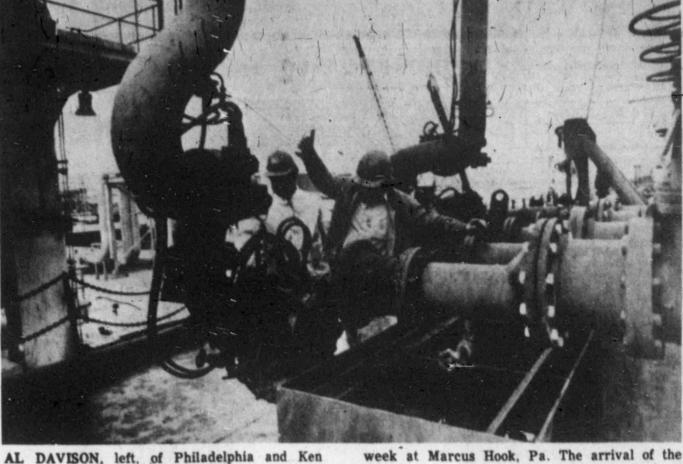

Petroleum, coal and nuclear are the only immediate sources in sufficient supplies to permit us to create enough lead time to develop and produce

Energy one of hottest subjects for how-to-do-it-yourself books

The Washington Post

Energy is one of the hottest subjects for how-to-do-it books. These are just a few of the best:

"The Solar Home Book," subtitled 'Heating, Cooling and Designing with the Sun," has become something of an underground best-seller. It was written by Bruce Anderson, a 30-yearold with a master's degree in architecture from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

When he stopped by Washington recently, Anderson explained that he first became interested in solar energy simply because he needed a master's thesis and not much seemed to have been written on the subject. He wrote the thesis in 1972. Later he expanded it into a full-length book.

After working for a while with architect I. M. Pei, Anderson had decided that the world of big-time architecture was not for him and moved to Harrisville, N.H. There he organized Total Environmental Action, a group that has now expanded to publish a number of solarrelated brochures and magazine called Solar Age.

A former schoolmate of Anderson's. Michael Riordan, financed the publication of his book. Under the imprint of Cheshire Books, the paperback was illustrated and put together totally by people who had never worked n a book before.

Simultaneously, McGraw Hill Energy, Fundamentals in Building just after the price of Design," which is somewhat more gasoline had doubled. professionally oriented, though with much the same content. The paper- examination of the world back is $7.50 and available by mail (as energy situation today well as in bookstores) from Cheshire and what it will be in the Books, Church Hill, Harrisville, N.H., year 2020, a date chosen 03450. The hardbound version is three years ago at a of the conventional $21.50, available in bookshops that meeting in Detroit for the

'Now in houses with a south aspect, warnings which have the sun's rays penetrate into the porticoes in winter, but in summer the path of the sun is right over our heads creasing insistence this and above the roof so that there is year: if a major energy shade. If, then, this is the best arrangement, we should build the south side loftier to ge; winter sun and the north side lower to keep out the cold winds. To put it shortly, the house in which the owner can find a pleasant retreat at all seasons and can store his belongings safely is presumably at once the pleasantest and the most beautiful.

From there the books go on to take up "direct solar heating," by which they mean using ordinary means such as orienting windows properly, to collect solar heat; "soft technology" such as water walls and roof ponds, and then into "indirect" solar systems such as solar collectors.

The paperback has a section on doing it yourself: solar water heating, energy conservation and heating an existing house. The more technical book goes further with diagrams, tables, and more detailed explanations.

Total Environmental Action has also gone on to produce a third money-maker that may be the most useful of all for the ordinary homeowner who hasn't yet decided that the sky's the limit.

The third version is "The Fuel Savers: A Kit of Solar Ideas for Existing Homes," by Anderson with Dan Scully, Don Prowler and Douglas Mahone. The 60-page offset brochure was prepared for a communityaction program in northwest New Jersey, NORWESCAP. It is available by mail for $3.75 including postage from TEA Inc., Church Hill, Harrisville, N.H., 03450.

The brochure is well organized into easily understood sections, first presenting the idea, then variations on it. Applicability, advantages, disadvantages, costs, and finally cost-effectiveness evaluation are all considered.

The ideas seem sound and not too hard to carry out, to wit: "It can't be said too often: the best solar collector is a simple window that is insulated at night." And it goes on to suggest specific effective methods, such as shutters.

"Architecture and Energy," by Cooper Union architecture professor Richard G. Stein ($12.95, Anchor Press-Doubleday) is a sophisticated, thoroughly sensible discussion of the whole question. It takes up specifics such as lighting and solar versus electrical heating, and reports on systems used around the world to capture natural heat. "Low-cost, Energy-efficient Shelter for the Owwner and Builder," edited by Eugene Eccli (Rodale Press, $10.95). In clear language, with easy to understand sketches and a few pleasant pictures, it discusses ways that people can build their own homes

Eccli writes about how to get a loan in the first place, deciding whether to build or buy an older house, innovative designs such as circular houses (still the most inside for the least outside perimeter), insulation, greenhouses, solar heat, recycling materials and so on Eccli is a design engineer and an energy consultant as well as a research associate with the Institute of Policy Studies in Washington. His 408-page book covers the widest territory of any book here. Anyone crazy enough to think about building his own house would be sane to pick up this book first.

"Energy Book No. 1," edited by John Prenis ($4, published by Running Press, one of the best sources for practical design and how-to-do-it books) is sort of a Whole Earth Catalog format with quick and simple and sometimes novel ideas on alternate energy sources.

One easy solution to heating your swimming pool: float a plastic sheet on the water (no bubbles, they allow aid to condense and cut off the heat transfer), when direct sun is on the pool and, obviously, when you aren't

IMF meets this week; ioblessness on agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Problems Committee issued a communique of continuing high unemployment throughout the world and the dangers of a new recession are expected to dominate discussions during the weeklong annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World

President Carter was scheduled to address the conference in the afternoon following opening speeches today by IMF Managing Director H. Johannes Witteveen and World Bank, President Robert S. McNamara.

Finance ministers and central bankers from most of the IMF's 131 member nations, including the world's major industrial powers and a handful of communist countries, are attending the meetings.

Even before the official opening of the meeting, IMF officials and delegates from key nations, including the United States, called for a shift in economic policies by some nations to counter the recent worldwide slowdown in economic activity.

New York-London $236 round trip fare to begin

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

This week's introduction of a bargain-basement, $236 round trip air fare between New York and London gives consumers almost a dozen basic fares to choose from and makes the job of figuring out which one is best even more difficult

The first Laker Airways Skytrain flight is scheduled to depart tonight from New York's Kennedy Airport with a maximum of 345 passengers. Similar flights will leave daily from now on

The difference between the bottom $236, no meals, movies or beverages included - and the top -$1,312, for firstclass luxury - is $1,076. The most expensive New York-London round trip fare is more than 51/2 times or 456 per cent higher than the cheapest.

The Laker fare is a standby arrangement. You go to a special travel center, take a number and wait for the tickets to go on sale six hours before departure time. When you're coming back, you do the same thing in tour fares ($382 and $424) and $626 regular economy fares. And, if you're between 12 and 22, there are $473

Six other airlines recently instituted similar standby fares, on regular flights with a few more frills for $256. After that there are $280 budget fares. $350 APEX or advance purchase ex-($467 and $541), two group inclusive cost: $400, or a saving of only $13.

In addition to the basic fare plans. there are several types of charters. both for individuals and members of a group. Prices generally start at about

Note: Some fares increase during the summer and include a sarcharge, usually $15 each way, if you travel on

Picking a specific fare is partly a matter of deciding how much inconvenience you're willing to put up with. What happens if you don't get a flight and have to spend a night in New York? How can you make hotel reservations? Do you have to be home on a particular day?

It also is a matter of where you live. The standby and budget fares apply only between New York and London. There are through-fare arrangements across the Atlantic available from many American cities, however. Such a fare is often cheaper than flying to New York for one of the standby or budget fares.

Suppose you live in Chicago, for example. An off-season, APEX roundtrip ticket to London, costs $413. If you wanted to take the Skytrain, you would have to fly to New York cursion fares, two excursion fares round-trip economy fare $164. Total BRIDGE

Swanson selected a spade opening lead mostly because the other suits were so hopeless. Declarer played low from dummy, and Blair's six drove out the ten. South continued by leading a diamond to the king, and Blair followed suit with the three.

Blair didn't refuse the trick; he just followed suit. The idea was to convince South that Blair didn't have the ace of diamonds and wasn't even aware that such a card existed.

South was a well known expert: but the bigger they are, the harder they fall. Convinced that West had the ace of diamonds, declarer returned a diamond from dummy and tried a finesse, losing to the jack.

FULL ADVANTAGE Swanson took full advantage of this unexpected entry by returning the queen of spades. Now the defenders got three spades and two diamonds, defeating an "unbeatable contract."

If Blair had taken the ace of diamonds at the second trick, South would have played the queen of diamonds next to keep West (the 'dangeros opponent) out of the lead. Blair's actual play convinced South that he couldn't keep West out of the

How will we supply the electricity you'll need then?"

"About 70 percent of the electricity you use today is generated in plants that run on natural gas.

Most of it is gas we got at a low price many years ago. But those long-term contracts will expire soon.

This is why our construction budget is nearly a quarter-billion dollars this year - so we can continue building plants that can use other fuels, specifically lignite coal and nuclear.

One reason for Texas Electric's low rates is low cost gas contracted for years ago. As the chart on the left shows, more than half the fuel we use now is cheap natural gas. But our contracts for this gas expire soon The chart on the right shows how we will replace this gas by 1983 with more abundant fuels.

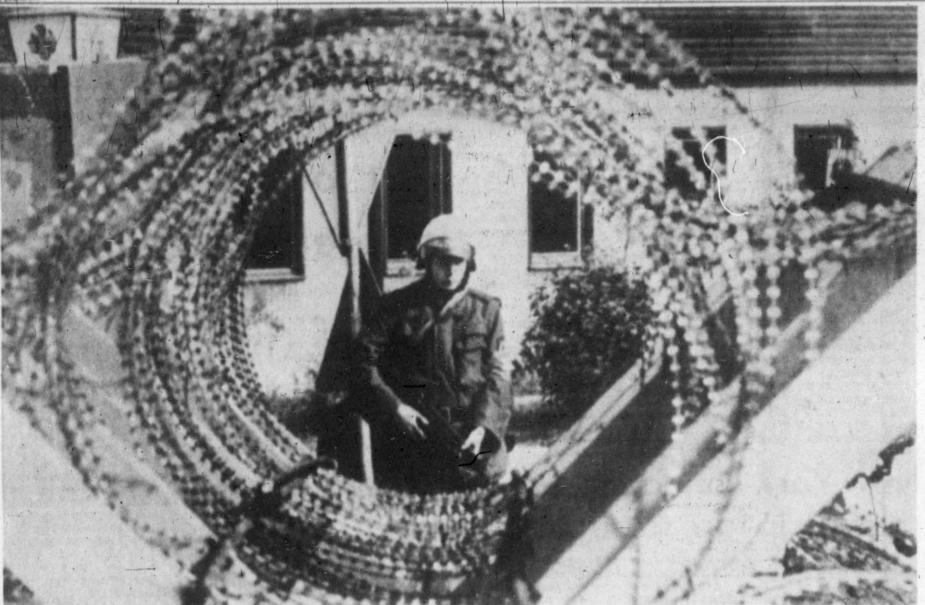

The first unit of the Comanche Peak nuclear plant is scheduled to go into service in 1981 and the second unit in 1983. And we have five

Financial 'ignorance' not unique

By BARRY SIEGEL The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - When Max and Martha Robinson bought a $27,000 two-bedroom home in February, 1976, their $800 gross monthly income did not really qualify them for a loan. They did not, in fact, even have the full down payment.

But somehow the figures were juggled, the deal went through and the young couple moved into their new house. Max-was 31, Martha 26

"I knew we couldn't afford it," Martha says in retrospect. "But my dad and the broker talked us into it. They said it would be a good investment. The broker handled the financing and we just signed the papers. We don't even have a copy of those papers to-

For a time, they managed. Out of a take-home monthly salary of $600, they paid $266 in house payments, $100 for food, $45 for utilities and $50 to maintain two cars.

Still, they had no formal budget. had never seen one and had never considered one.

Max, a high school graduate and Vietnam war veteran who now does assorted errands for a major corporation, is the son of an Oklahoma mechanic turned Baptist minister. Martha, an eighth-grade dropout, was raised on a Kentucky farm and in small towns by her father, also a mechanic

She handles the couple's finances and does most of their talking.

But they did. Last spring, they watched their mortgage company nail a notice of sale to the front door of their

What happened to Max and Martha Robinson is a story of unexamined dreams and financial ignorance, and being taken advantage of by the easy credit and misleading offers that make everything seem possible.

Their story is particularly vivid, but it is not unique. Officers at the nonprofit Consumer Credit Counselors of Los Angeles encounter similar tales daily, as they provide free counseling, education and repayment plans for some 200 families a month who are in financial difficulty.

Those 200 families may be only the tip of an iceberg. Nationwide, personal bankruptcy cases are up 25 per cent since 1974; installment debt rose 10 per cent in 1976 and is rising at a rate of 12 per cent this year; and according to financial counselors, 6 percent of all American families are in 'serious financial trouble" because of credit misuse.

The credit-grantors, such as department stores, banks and finance companies, don't like this trend any more than the consumers do, so they willingly provide most of CCC's financ-

The typical CCC couple is in their mid30s with two children, $800 a month take-home pay and an average indebtedness of $10,000

Most are people such as Jerry and Ellen Parker, who married while in their early 20s, on credit quickly bought a $150 stereo, $600 color TV, $300 air conditioner, $600 washerdryer, and $500 encyclopedia set before being hit with hundreds of dollars in major medical bills, four babies and a pile of threatening notices from collection agencies. Also typical are Dave and Sharon

Morris, who had a steady income he as an auto shop service manager, she as a salesclerk - but used credit cards as some use liquor when they were depressed

After two babies and several major medical expenses, the Morrises found themselves with $13,079 in bills from department stores and finance companies, monthly credit payments of $605, monthly living expenses of $580 and monthly take-home pay of only $932. The IRS audited their 1975 tax return simply because they could not believe the $1,500 claimed for interest payments alone

In interviews with several such CCC debtor families, it emerged that the general overspending was almost always aggravated by two basic problems: ignorance about financial management, and unplanned, overwhelming major medical expenses. The medical expenses were usually linked to having babies

To solve the first problem, CCC president Stan Benson argues for increased consumer education classes in high school. To solve the second problem, Benson suggests "national health insurance of some sort. I think it is inevitable...Major medical expenses are the biggest reason for personal bankruptcy in California.

The need for improved education and medical coverage is nowhere better illustrated than in the case of Max and Martha Robinson. Their names are changed, but their story is true:

The Robinsons married in February, 1967, when he was 22 and she was 20. In the next two years, the couple leased a series of small apartments and houses in the Los Angeles area, for monthly rents ranging from $80 to $125. After being laid off from one factory job, Max found steady work with his current employer. His take-home pay to start was $120 every two weeks.

By December, 1972, the couple had two sons and Max was taking home $300 every two weeks, so they bought a $21,500 home in a lower-middleclass suburban area northeast of Los Angeles. Their monthly house payments totaled $188, including taxes and insurance

Looking back at those days, Martha shakes her head. "We didn't know," she says, "when we were well off."

The Robinsons thought they wanted to get a divorce in December, 1975, so they sold their home for $31,950.

After deducting the realtor's commission, the couple earned a profit of $9,163. All but $2,000 promptly went to pay accumulated bills

The real estate salesman assured Max at the time of the sale that he could keep his low-interest VA loan and use it toward the purchase of another house. Instead, the purchaser ended up assuming Max's $21,000 VA loan, leaving Max with $24,000 to borrow out of the VA maximum of $45,000.

So when the Robinsons reconciled and decided to buy their current $27,000 house, the salesman had to arrange a more costly second trust deed to cover the balance. Such second trust deeds are illegal with VA loans during the first year and a half but the Robinsons did not know this. They signed the papers in February 1976.

Two days after their new home cleared escrow, Martha went to the doctor and learned she was pregnant. The Robinsons nevertheless continued with their original plan, using the $2,000 in cash left over from the sale of their first house to remodel the kitchen of their new home. They exhausted those savings before the remodeling was completed. 'Then," says Martha, "things just started happening. Her obstetrician began charging $25 a month, plus another $11 for prenatal vitamins and iron pills. Then Martha almost miscarried and spent three days in the hospital, using all but $40 of the maternity benefits they were entitled to under the group health insurance plan at Max's company.

Their doctor agreed to deliver the baby at their house, eliminating hospital costs, but demanded his $500 payment before the baby was born. So the Robinsons had to send him $50 out of every paycheck and then come up with a lump sum of $200 in September.

During this period, an uninsured relative crashed the Robinsons' truck into a railroad car. That cost $750 in repairs and the Robinsons lost their auto insurance because they could no longer afford to pay the premiums. They also had to stop paying $40 a month to Sears.

When their baby was 6 weeks old, he required major surgery and visits to the doctor every other day. Insurance covered the first $2,000, but left the Robinsons with a bill of $700. There followed in the next few months: Stitches in the middle son's hand, $70; skull X-rays for the older son, $80; a tetanus shot for Martha, $35; a suspected kidney stone exam for Max, $135; and general dental bills,

"We started getting letters from creditors saving they were going to sue us and attach Max's wages," says Martha. "Mainly from all the medical

So the Robinsons made their most serious miscalculation. They decided to concentrate on the unsecured medical bills instead of the house payments, because they were afraid of being shut out from medical treat-

In June, 1976, they stopped making their house payments.

'We figured we could always take out a loan and catch up on the house later," says Martha. "Except that we needed a cosigner for the loan, and we didn't have one

When they asked for an extension on their home loan, they were threatened with foreclosure, so in August they put their house on the market. The only offer they received was for $25,000, which would have meant taking a loss on the original investment. They declined

They received their first default notice in September 1976, and a final foreclosure notice of sale in

At about the same time, however, they received another letter from one of the several local firms that are sometimes called foreclosure counselors. Such firms study publications that list all default notices filed every day, then contact the defaulting families and offer high-cost aid.

As the Robinsons understood the deal offered them, they were to pay double their normal monthly payments to the foreclosure counseling firm, until they were caught up. The firm, as the Robinsons understood it, would in turn advance to the mortgage holder all payments and late charges that the Robinsons owed on their house - a total of $2,700.

Proposals aimed at removal of unfit judge

'The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior ..."
—Article III, Section one, U.S. Con-

By PHILIP HAGER The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The lawyer arose in U.S. District Court one day in Utah and began to present his case to the judge. He was somewhat taken aback when he heard the judge begin to hiss.

"Like a snake, he was going 'ssssss' all the time I was speaking," the astounded attorney recounted later. "I never ever have been before a judge of this kind . Such reports of bizarre judicial performance strike some legal observers as falling considerably short of the 'good behavior' standard imposed on federal judges by the Constitution. And critics of the courts say instances, of "bad behavior" - ranging from erratic conduct to conflict of interest and physical or mental impairment ranging from senility to alcholism too often go uncorrected on the federal bench.

The problem, they contend, is that there is no way to get rid of errant or impaired federal judges, short of the laborious process of impeachment a process that hasn't been used on a judge in 40 years and has worked successfully only four times in U.S. history

At present, there is no single body to receive and investigate complaints about federal judges. On occasion, fellow judges will act informally when a judge steps out of line, as was the case recently in one Western state where a drunken judge was persuaded to remove himself from the bench temporarily to undergo treatment. But now, some influential legal officials and organizations - including Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell, the American Bar Assn. and the U.S. Judicial Conference - are uniting behind congressional proposals to provide a new method, short of impeachment, of dealing with unfit The proposals, if enacted, would establish far-reaching disciplinary procedures throughout the federal udicial system, now comprised of over 600 judges including those of semi-retired, "senior" status. "We're not out to 'get' any judges," says Sen. Dennis DeConcini (D-Ariz.), the son of a judge and himself a former prosecutor. "We think our proposals would be a good thing for the judiciary ... it would held their image and would not take anything away from their constitutional authority. Skeptics, including some judges, doubt the wisdom of the proposals. They see them as too vaguely defined, likely to produce a new bureaucracy. very probably unconstititional and, worst of all, not really needed.

'This is not a situation where we've had judges of galloping incompetence or senility or addictions to drugs or alcohol that have created some overwhelming problem in the federal courts," says federal appeals judge Shirley M. Hufstedler of Los Angeles. 'That's not to say there have been no instances - but they've been dealt with, by the judges themselves, and without establishing a whole new system.

'The old wheeze, 'if it ain't busted, don't fix it,' applies here," she says. "You may end up busting more than you fix.'

Basically, proposals now pending in Senate and House committees would establish a Judicial Tenure Act, creating a commission of federal judges to examine complaints of bad conduct or impairment of judges. Investigations would be confidential, to protect against ill-founded accusations. The commission could order retirement for judges it finds physically or mentally disabled or could censure or remove judges found to have misused their authority or neglected their duties. Commission orders would be subject to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Ironically, while similar ideas have remained under study by Congress for 10 years, the states - led by California - have moved ahead in recent years to establish their own judicial performance commissions. By recent count, 44 states, along with the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, employ judicial tenure and removal commissions. 'They're fully accepted now among the states," says Jack E. Frankel, executive officer of California's Commission on Judicial Performance. 'Here at least, we've avoided a big bureaucracy. We have a permanent staff of two, some part-time ingestigators and an annual budget of $90,000. Formed in 1961, the California commission now handles well over 200 complaints a year - about one of four found to warrant serious investigation. In 15 years, five judges have been censured and four removed as a result of commission inquiry. In addition, 67 judges have resigned or retired after the commission had begun to investigate them. Any judge in the state is subject to commission inquiry — the most notable case thus far being Supreme Court Justice Marshall F. McComb. 83, whose involuntary retirement was ordered by a special judicial panel earlier this year.

But are judicial tenure commissions, such as those employed by California and other states, workable - or necessary - for the federal judiciary?

Proponents concede they can't say how many judges there are whose conduct or impairments might warrant their removal - and, indeed, that that is part of the problem.

They say they know there have been instances of drunkeness, sensility, instability or improper conduct falling short of an indictable offense. And they quote Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who once noted publicly that "there are more than a few" judges who couldn't physically handle their jobs. But because impeachment is the only available recourse - and that's largely unworkable - judges of questionable fitness are seldom challenged and so the actual number of unfit judges remains unknown, proponents of a new system contend.

Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.), testifying in behalf of the Judicial Tenure Act earlier this month, recalled that in two centures only the most flagrant cases of judicial misconduct had been examined in congressional impeachment proceedings. "While I am among the first to appreciate the overall quality of the federal bench," he said, "it seems unreasonable to assert that only four federal judges in our history have misbehaved or been disabled," he said:

Rarely are judges accused by name. ("The judiciary is very powerful," remarks one senator, "and all these judges know senators,"). One exception was U.S. Dist. Court Judge Willis Ritter of Utah, who was described in Senate hearings as "a disgrace to the federal judiciary" by Sen. E. J. (Jake) Garn (R-Utah).

Garn related complaints he had received ("at least one per week") concerning Ritter - including the attorney's flabbergasted report that he had been hissed by Ritter. The senator noted that Ritter's decisions were being reversed by higher courts an astronomical 82 per cent of the time and went on to list a series of rulings and incidents he said "create sincere questions" of Ritter's competence.

(Judges seldom respond publicly to criticism. Ritter could not be reached last week for comment on allegations by Garn and others).

Part of the problem, in the view of advocates of new removal procedures, is caused by the federal judicial retirement system.

Federal judges are appointed for life - as a means of insuring their independence - and receive a salary for life unless they resign to take another job. They are eligible to retire at 65, with 15 years service, or 70, with 10 years service, at current salary.

But most judges (now over 150 of them) elect to go on "senior" status instead of full retirement. These judges continue to receive pay - and raises - along with use of staff and offices, and in return handle a reduced caseload.

Their critics concede that many senior judges perform valuable service - most notably, the late Justice Tom Clark, who handled a heavy workload until he died at 77. But they contend that at least some do not "Let's face it," says one well-placed federal court official, "A lot of these guys hang on because they like being a judge. It's 'Judge This' and 'Judge That,' with everyone holding doors for them and letting them tee off first. Why leave the bench when you don't have to?"

Advocates of a new method to rid the bench of errant or disabled judges acknowledge that pushing legislation through Congress will be a tough task.

But they believe that with the institutional support they are receiving. along with the new public scrutiny of public officials conduct that has emerged recently, their chances now are better than ever. Nonetheless, even some supporters of the new proposals express reservations, or outright opposition, to some of the proposals' key elements. The ABA, for example, would not include the Supreme Court within the jurisdiction of the proposed commission because that would result in federal judges from lower courts passing judgement on justices of the highest court in the land. And the U.S. Judicial Conference, a group of judges representing the federal judiciary, while agreeing that the proposed commission should be able to order retirement of judges, maintains that judges still should be "removed" - as opposed to retired only by impeachment. Other legal authorities are troubled by the problem of defining just what "bad conduct" would subject judges to censure or removal. One proposal defines bad conduct as ".....conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute.

That phrase, Prof. John P. MacKenzie of the New York University Law School testified earlier this month, "....is simply too vague and open-ended to be a standard of 'bad behavior' if that standard is to offer any constitutional or other protection for the judge."

Perhaps the greatest obstacle for the proposals is the fear that they might undermine the constitutionally mandated independence of the federal iudiciary.

Black leader buried; two policemen killed

By JACK FOISIE The Los Angeles Times

KING WILLIAM'S TOWN, South Africa - Steve Biko, the young moderate black leader who died under still-unexplained circumstances while in police custody two weeks ago, was buried here Sunday after a funeral attended by more than 5,000 blacks.

It was a day of tension between the 9,500 white residents of this one-time old English settlement and the 250,000 blacks who live in the surrounding Ciskei tribal area. The white police generally confined themselves to directing traffic and staying away from the cricket field where the peaceful funeral was held.

However, trouble flared later when police clashed with returning mourners in Mdantsane township outside East London, about 30 miles east of here. Two black policemen were stoned to death at a bus station when black activists returned and set fire to two vehicles and raided a shopping

Police said they wounded at least two civilians when they opened fire to disperse the rioters.

The four-hour funeral service was a mix of the religious and the political. Hymns were interspersed with the rousing "Nkosi Sikele Africa" (God help Africa), which has become the national anthem of the black militant movements. An Anglican requiem mass was held. Speeches praised Biko as "a true symbol of human dignity." while they denounced Prime Minister John Vorster and Minister of Police of white supremacy.

In a show of unity not always present among the nonwhites, all subjected under South African race laws to varying degrees of discrimination, speakers included leaders of both the Indian and mixed-race communities. The planned attendance of large

Filibuster halt sought

By TOM RAUM

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate leaders are trying to halt a filibuster on a bill regulating the price of natural gas in an effort to pave the way for a vote on a proposed com-

The natural gas issue is expected to tie up Senate floor action all week, despite the Senate efforts today to kill the filibuster by invoking debatelimiting cloture.

President Carter, who spent part of the weekend campaigning in Virginia for Democratic gubernatorial candidate Henry Howell, said at a rally in Norfolk, Va., that he might veto the natural gas bill if senators use it to remove controls from the price of natural gas.

"I hate to veto a bill that a Democratic Congress passes, but you can depend on it: I'll protect your interests when the bill comes to my desk," Carter said.

Meanwhile, hearings get under way today in both houses on the new Panama Canal treaty, giving the Carter administration its first major opportunity to try to persuade Congress to go along with the recently negotiated agreement.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd has formally asked the Senate to permit television and radio coverage of the Senate ratification debate when it gets under way next January.

It would be the first time for such coverage in the Senate chamber, although Senate committee hearings frequently have been broadcast.

Byrd told reporters over the weekend that if a vote were ready this year, it would be defeated. It might have a better chance by early next year, he said.

And the Senate Banking Committee is beginning hearings on whether federal regulation of banks should be overhauled, an outgrowth of the controversy over resigned budget director Bert Lance's personal banking transactions.

The vote of 60 senators is required to limit debate on the natural gas pricing bill, which is a major element of President Carter's energy program. If cloture is approved that would end the immediate threat of a filibuster and further debate on the bill would be limited to 100 hours.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, is expected to push for Senate approval for a compromise between President Carter's proposal, which would keep federal controls on natural gas, and a competing industry plan, which would

Either measure would raise heating prices for companies and individuals using natural gas.

Byrd, who filed the cloture measure along with Jackson, Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker and 17 other senators, also said he sees a good chance of a compromise. He said there is still a good chance Carter will get much of his energy program enacted, despite some recent setbacks in the Senate.

The filibuster has been led by a handful of liberal Democrats who don't want to see any relaxation of government price controls.

Bible-in-school battle back in appeals court ruled against the Florida law which required the teaching of "the practice of every Christian virtue. The court ruled that Bible readings

during a morning inspirational period in the Orange County schools were unconstitutional and threw out a policy allowing Bible distribution in Eight families with various religious affiliations have been fighting the school board since 1970.

They contend the reading and distribution of the King James' Bible and other school board policies could offend Jewish, Catholic and some Protestant students. The families say the policies violate constitutional guarantees of separation of church and state and due process of law.

A lower court judge had said such a prohibition against the Bible would permit "governmental hostility to religion.

"Our contention is that a student should be at liberty to choose whatever he wants to read and that neither the Bible nor any other religious book should be on a taboo list." said school board attorney William Rowland.

Rowland said the board also wanted the right to make religious material available to students who wanted it at a centrally located place in schools.

The current board policy requires schools to open with "the opportunity for individual prayer and Bible reading or an inspirational or meditation presented by groups or organizations or an individual."

Midland temperature records tumble again

Not only did Sunday's high temperature reach a record-breaking 102 degrees, the weatherman said it hasn't ever been this hot so late in the season. Up until Sunday, the temperature had climbed only to 101 degrees on Sept. 26, 1953.

Sunday's high temperature beat the record of 99 degrees set in 1953. Four other records have been broken and one tied so far this month. Saturday's high temperature hit 101 degrees, breaking the record of 97 set in 1953. On Thursday the high of 100 degrees broke the record of 97 set in 1933.

Arafat's Al Fatah and other units of the Palestine Liberation Organization have an estimated 5,000.

Informed sources said a force of 1,470 officers and soldiers of the reorganized Lebanese army has been formed to move into southern Lebanon to act as a buffer between the guerrillas and the right-wing Christian militiamen who have been battling them there.

Meanwhile, Israeli armored forces began withdrawing from south Lebanon, Reporters and photographers on the Israeli side were invited to watch the withdrawal although the Israeli government previously denied that it had any ground forces in Lebanon.

Israeli tanks, armored personnel carriers, a halftrack and several jeeps roared through a gate in the border fence near the Israeli town of Metulla early today. Some 40 reporters and photographers were on hand, "to cover the return of a force whose entry was heavily denied," one reporter commented. A few minutes after the withdrawal started, a barrage of the Palestinians Katyusha rockets hit two Israeli towns, Qiryat Shmonah, five miles south of the border, and Safad, 17 miles farther south. The Israeli military command, said eight persons were wounded.

Wednesday's high temperature again reached 100 degrees, breaking the 1930 record of 97, and on Sept. 17 the high of 98 cracked the 96 degree record set in 1952. The record high was tied Sept. 9 with a temperature of 98 degrees. It had last reached that temperature in 1930.

Temperatures have continued to be so hot because a high pressure area over the Southwest is keeping cooler air from flowing down here, leaving Midlanders to suffer from the heat generated by the thermal low pressure area from Mexico, the weatherman said. Fair skies and hot afternoons through Tuesday have been predicted by the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Air Terminal. The high temperature Tuesday should be near 100 degrees with southwesterly winds becoming light and variable tonight.

This morning seemed cooler than it has been to some Midlanders with the overnight low temperature having fallen to 59 degrees.

Area towns repported clear skies and somewhat chilly temperatures this morning. Rankin's overnight low dropped to 38 degrees.

A weak stationary front lies across portions of North Texas this morning. but don't expect it to cool off the unseasonably warm temperatures.

At 4 a.m., the front was from near Sherman to north of Abilene to south of Midland. Generally dry air covered the western third of the state and the region north of the front.

Thunderstorms developed Sunday night in portions of North Central Texas and gusty winds inflicted minor sign damage in the town of Terrell due east of Dallas, the Associated

Top lobbyists also largest contributors

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Top contributors to Texas political campaigns are often top spenders for lobbying during legislative sessions, according to a study made by the Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau.

'Special interest groups and individuals wined and dined legislators to the tune of $400,000 during the legislature," the Harte-Hanks Bureau story said after an extensive study of lobby expense accounts.

"Reported campaign contributions from special interests, totaling more than $1-million in 1976, and reported expenditures proved what many have long suspected - lining up a sympathetic legislative audience is a very expensive business," said the twopart series.

The study showed that 743 registered lobbies reported spending $508,173 for "influencing legislation."

"The top 15 spenders, representing mostly industrial or trade organizations with statewide membership, put up more than one-third of all money reported spent," the series

The top contributor to successful 1976 political campaign and the No. 2. lobby spender was the Texas Trial Lawyers Association. The Texas Association of Realtors and the political arms of the Texas Dentists Association and the Texas AFL-CIO also were substantial political contributors and lobby spenders.

Most of the top 15 spenders got at least half of the bills they supported through the legislature and signed by the governor," the stories said.

No one has been convicted for breaking the state lobby law because no one has ever been prosecuted.

The secretary of state's office, which administers the Texas Lobby Control Act, relies chiefly on voluntary compliance. When the 1957 lobby law was rewritten in 1973 the secretary of state was not given any police or investigatory powers over lobbyists.

Under the 1973 law, which was amended in 1975, lobbyists are required to register and file monthly expenditure reports during legislative

IMF meets this week; joblessness on agenda WASHINGTON (AP) - Problems Committee issued a communique of continuing high unemployment

throughout the world and the dangers of a new recession are expected to dominate discussions during the industrial countries. weeklong annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World

President Carter was scheduled to address the conference in the afternoon following opening speeches today by IMF Managing Director H. Johannes Witteveen and World Bank President Robert S. McNamara.

Finance ministers and central bankers from most of the IMF's 131 member nations, including the world's major industrial powers and a handful of communist countries, are attending the meetings.

Even before the official opening of the meeting, IMF officials and delegates from key nations, including the United States, called for a shift in economic policies by some nations to counter the recent worldwide

slowdown in economic activity. The IMF's policy-making Interim

It likewise confessed worry that the persistence of high unemployment for the industrial countries as a group remained close to the recession peak in the latter part of 1975.

The chairman of the committee, British Finance Minister Denis Healey, said many delegates felt there was a "serious risk" that growth of the world economy might stop altogether, which could bring on a new recession

To counter this threat, the committee urged that countries with strong economies "should make every effort to ensure adequate growth of domestic demand compatible with containing inflation. ..

In other words, nations such as the United States, Germany and Japan should make sure their economies are growing at a pace that will promote imports of goods from nations with weaker economies

New York-London $236 round trip fare to begin

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

This week's introduction of a bargain-basement, $236 round trip air fare between New York and London gives consumers almost a dozen basic fares to choose from and makes the job of figuring out which one is best even more difficult.

The first Laker Airways Skytrain flight is scheduled to depart tonight from New York's Kennedy Airport with a maximum of 345 passengers. Similar flights will leave daily from now on.

The difference between the bottom $236, no meals, movies or beverages included - and the top -$1,312, for firstclass luxury' - is $1,076. The most expensive New York-London round trip fare is more than 51/2 times or 456 per cent higher than the cheapest

The Laker are is a standby arrangement. You go to a special travel center, take a number and wait for the tickets to go on sale six hours before departure time. When you're' coming back, you do the same thing in

Six other airlines recently instituted similar standby fares, on regular flights with a few more frills for $256. After that there are $280 budget fares, $350 APEX or advance purchase extour fares ($382 and $424) and $626 regular economy fares. And, if you're between 12 and 22, there are $473 youth fares

In addition to the basic fare plans, there are several types of charters, both for individuals and members of a group. Prices generally start at about

Note: Some fares increase during the summer and include a surcharge, usually $15 each way, if you travel on

Picking a specific fare is partly a matter of deciding how much inconvenience you're willing to put up with. What happens if you don't get a flight and have to spend a night in New York? How can you make hotel reservations? Do you have to be home on a particular day? It also is a matter of where you live.

The standby and budget fares apply only between New York and London. There are through-fare arrangements across the Atlantic available from many American cities, however. Such a fare is often cheaper than flying to New York for one of the standby or budget fares.

Suppose you live in Chicago, for example. An off-season, APEX roundtrip ticket to London, costs $413. If you wanted to take the Skytrain, you would have to fly to New York round-trip economy fare $164. Total your friend has the blues Dear Dr. Solomon: ing diabetic. The most ($467 and $541), two group inclusive cost: $400, or a saving of only $13.

Swanson selected a spade opening lead mostly because the other suits were so hopeless. Declarer played low from dummy, and Blair's six drove out the ten. South continued by leading a diamond to the king, and Blair followed suit with the three.

Blair didn't refuse the trick; he just followed suit. The idea was to convince South that Blair didn't have the ace of diamonds and wasn't even aware that such a card existed.

South was a well known expert; but the bigger they are, the harder they fall. Convinced that West had the ace of diamonds, declarer returned a diamond from dummy and tried a finesse, losing to the jack.

FULL ADVANTAGE Swanson took full advantage of this unexpected entry by returning the queen of spades. Now the defenders got three spades and two diamonds, defeating an "unbeatable contract." If Blair had taken the ace of diamonds at the second trick, South would have played the queen of diamonds next to keep West (the dangeros opponent) out of the lead. Blair's actual play convinced South that he couldn't keep West out of the

DAILY QUESTION Your partner and the next player pass, and you are next holding: S-K743; H-Q108; D-K65; C-A106. What do you say? ANSWER: Pass. You would be willing to bid a 12-point hand in third position, but only if you could thereby indicate a good opening lead. In this case you will be satisfied with any suit your partner may lead if he becomes the opening leader.

His juvenile diabetes was diagnosed when he was 14, but he has been running cross-country-and more recently marathons-ever since his sophomore year in

> In an article appearing in the Physician and Sportsmedicine, Dr. Powers notes that the biggest problem facing a diabetic is maintaining an adequate blood sugar level during strenuous exercise. For relatively short distances, Dr. Powers feels that a candy bar before starting off may do, but if he intends to run 10 miles or more, he carries a plastic squeeze bottle containing a sugar solution. When he begins to feel a bit weak, he sips a few ounces of the sugar solution. The weak feeling of hypoglycemia (low blood sugar), he says, is very different from normal exhaustion. And the advantage of the slow, steady intake of sugar is that it keeps the blood sugar at just the right level throughout the race. Dr. Powers goes through five squeeze bottles during the 26-mile marathon. Each one holds about 10 teaspoons of sugar, a pinch of salt, some orange or lime flavoring and eight ounces of water. With this solution, he has been able to complete eight of the 10 marathons he has entered. His best time is 2:42.31. On the day of the race, incidentally, Dr. Powers starts off with his usual dose of insulin and the same light breakfast he has on ordinary days.

ANSWER TO PREVIOUS PUZZLE

Market Proposals aimed declines at removal NEW YORK (AP) — The stock of unfit judge the influence of interest-rate worries and news of another large U.S. trade

"The judges, both of the Supreme and inferior courts, shall hold their offices during good behavior ..." -Article III, Section one, U.S. Constitution. By PHILIP HAGER The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The lawyer arose in U.S. District Court one day in Utah and began to present his case to the judge. He was somewhat taken aback when he heard the judge begin to hiss. "Like a snake, he was going 'ssssss' all the time I was speaking," the as-never ever have been before a judge of this kind . Such reports of bizarre judicial performance strike some legal observers as falling considerably short of the 'good behavior' standard imposed on federal judges by the Constitution.

And critics of the courts say instances of "bad behavior" - ranging from erratic conduct to conflict of interest and physical or mental impairment ranging from senility to alcholism too often go uncorrected on the federal bench The problem, they contend, is that there is no way to get rid of errant or impaired federal judges, short of the laborious process of impeachment a process that hasn't been used on a judge in 40 years and has worked successfully only four times in U.S. history.

At present, there is no single body to receive and investigate complaints about federal judges. On occasion, fellow judges will act informally when a judge steps out of line, as was the case recently in one Western state where a drunken judge was persuaded to remove himself from the bench temporarily to undergo treatment. But now, some influential legal officials and organizations - including Atty. Gen. Griffin B. Bell, the American Bar Assn. and the U.S. Judicial Conference - are uniting behind congressional proposals to provide a new method, short of im-AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Top con-peachment, of dealing with unfit The proposals, if enacted, would

"We're not out to 'get' any judges, legislature," the Harte-Hanks Bureau says Sen. Dennis DeConcini (Dstory said after an extensive study of Ariz.), the son of a judge and himself a former prosecutor. "We think our "Reported campaign contributions proposals would be a good thing for

Skeptics, including some judges, They see them as too vaguely defined, likely to produce a new bureaucracy, The study showed that 743 very probably unconstitutional and, registered lobbies reported spending worst of all, not really needed.

"This is not a situation where we've "The top 15 spenders, representing had judges of galloping incompetence whelming problem in the federal courts," says federal appeals judge Shirley M. Hufstedler of Los Angeles. "That's not to say there have been no with, by the judges themselves, and without establishing a whole new system.

"The old wheeze, "if it ain't busted, don't fix it,' applies here," she says. 'You may end up busting more than you fix.

Basically, proposals now pending in Senate and House committees would establish a Judicial Tenure Act. creating a commission of federal judges to examine complaints of bad conduct or impairment of judges. Investigations would be confidential, to protect against ill-founded accusations. The commission could order retirement for judges it finds physically or mentally disabled or could censure or remove judges found to have misused their authority or neglected their duties. Commission orders would be subject to appeal to the Supreme Court.

Ironically, while similar ideas have remained under study by Congress for 10 years, the states - led by California - have moved ahead in recent years to establish their own judicial performance commissions. By recent count, 44 states, along with the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, employ judicial tenure and removal commissions.

"They're fully accepted now among the states," says Jack E. Frankel, executive officer of California's Commission on Judicial Performance. 'Here at least, we've avoided a big bureaucracy. We have a permanent staff of two, some part-time ingestigators and an annual budget of $90,000.

Formed in 1961, the California commission now handles well over 200 complaints a year - about one of four found to warrant serious investigation. In 15 years, five judges have been censured and four removed as a result of commission inquiry. In addition, 67 judges have resigned or retired after the commission had begun to investigate them.

Any judge in the state is subject to commission inquiry - the most notable case thus far being Supreme, Court Justice Marshall F. McComb. 83. whose involuntary/retirement was ordered by a special judicial panel earlier this year.

But are judicial tenure commissions, such as those employed by California and other states, workable - or necessary - for the federal judiciary?

Proponents concede they can't say how many judges there are whose conduct or impairments might warrant their removal - and, indeed, that that is part of the problem.

They say they know there have been instances of drunkeness, sensility, instability or improper conduct falling short of an indictable offense. And they quote Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who once noted publicly that "there are more than a few" judges who couldn't physically handle their jobs. But because impeachment is the only available recourse - and that's largely unworkable - judges of questionable fitness are seldom challenged and so the actual number of unfit judges remains unknown, proponents of a new system contend.

Sen. Sam Nunn (D-Ga.), testifying in behalf of the Judicial Tenure Act earlier this month, recalled that in two centures only the most flagrant cases of judicial misconduct had been examined in congressional impeachment proceedings. "While I am among the first to appreciate the overall quality of the federal bench," he said, "it seems unreasonable to assert that only four federal judges in our history have misbehaved or been disabled," he said.

Rarely are judges accused by name. ("The judiciary is very powerful," remarks one senator, "and all these judges know senators,"). One exception was U.S. Dist. Court Judge Willis Ritter of Utah, who was described in Senate hearings as "a disgrace to the federal judiciary" by Sen. E. J. (Jake) Garn (R-Utah)

Garn related complaints he had received ("at least one per week") concerning Ritter - including the attorney's flabbergasted report that he had been hissed by Ritter. The senator noted that Ritter's decisions were being reversed by higher courts an astronomical 82 per cent of the time and went on to list a series of rulings and incidents he said "create sincere questions" of Ritter's competence.

(Judges seldom respond publicly to criticism. Ritter could not be reached last week for comment on allegations by Garn and others). Part of the problem, in the view of advocates of new removal procedures, is caused by the federal judicial retirement system.

Federal judges are appointed for life - as a means of insuring their independence - and receive a salary for life unless they resign to take another job. They are eligible to retire at 65, with 15 years service, or 70, with 10 years service, at current salary.

But most judges (now over 150 of them) elect to go on "senior" status instead of full retirement. These judges continue to receive pay - and raises - along with use of staff and offices, and in return handle a reduced caseload.

Their critics concede that many senior judges perform valuable service - most notably, the late Justice Tom Clark, who handled a heavy workload until he died at 77. But they contend that at least some do not. "Let's face it," says one well-placed federal court official, "A lot of these guys hang on because they like being a judge. It's 'Judge This' and 'Judge That,' with everyone holding doors for them and letting them tee off first. Why leave the bench when you don't have to?'

Advocates of a new method to rid the bench of errant or disabled judges acknowledge that pushing legislation through Congress will be a tough task.

But they believe that with the institutional support they are receiving, along with the new public scrutiny of public officials conduct that has emerged recently, their chances now are better than ever. Nonetheless, even some supporters of the new proposals express reservations, or outright opposition, to some of the proposals' key elements.

The ABA, for example, would not include the Supreme Court within the jurisdiction of the proposed commission because that would result in federal judges from lower courts passing judgement on justices of the highest court in the land.

And the U.S. Judicial Conference, a group of judges representing the federal judiciary, while agreeing that the proposed commission should be able to order retirement of judges, maintains that judges still should be "removed" - as opposed to retired only by impeachment.

Other legal authorities are troubled by the problem of defining just what "bad conduct" would subject judges to censure or removal.

One proposal defines bad conduct as ".....conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice that brings the judicial office into disrepute."

That phrase, Prof. John P. MacKenzie of the New York University Law School testified earlier this month, "...is simply too vague and open-ended to be a standard of 'bad behavior' if that standard is to offer any constitutional or other protection for the judge."

Perhaps the greatest obstacle for the proposals is the fear that they might undermine the constitutionally mandated independence of the federal iudiciary.

Genealogy much more than tracing family tree

(This is the first of a six-part series on tracing the roots of your family.)

One of the difficult aspects of genealogy - at least for me - is trying to explain why a grown man should spend countless hours in a musty library or chasing around the country copying inscriptions from tombstones in overgrown cemeteries.

That sort of avocation, they think, is reserved for matronly ladies who want to join patriotic societies.

There are, of course, many who search their family trees for that reason alone. But genealogy is much more. It is a human history of our nation's growth and a puzzle infinitely more challenging than the crossword. in the Sunday New York Times.

SOLVING A MYSTERY

If you enjoy solving a mystery or are fascinated by the early history of our country, then genealogy may be the hobby for you.

But where do you start? The best place is right at home.

The first thing you should do is write down all you know about your family, starting with yourself and your parents and working backward to your grandparents, great grandparents and so on.

You should include dates of births, marriages, deaths, places of residence and other information, such as occupation or military service. USING THE FAMILY

When you get stuck, figure out who in your family might know the answer. In fact, you should try to interview or write your older relatives as a first order of business. If you're lucky, you may find out much of what you want to know about a particular branch of your family.

For instance, early in my research I visited a great -aunt who supposedly had kept some family records. I didn't really expect the treasure I found. Among the things she had: my greatgreat-great-grandfather's family Bible - complete with vital statistics for three generations - which had made its way from Massachusetts to a homestead in South Dakota nearly 100 years ago; a family photo album with pictures that predated the Civil War and which contained pictures of four of my great-great-greatgrandparents; and old newspaper clippings, letters and notes which provided additional information and when interviewing or writing your relatives for information: First, try to make your questions specific.

INTERVIEW POINTER There are things to keep in mind

Secondly, you should treat family traditions with a certain amount of healthy skepticism. These stories often embellished from generation to generation - are great clues for further research, but they shouldn't be accepted until they can be documented.

FAMILY TRADITION

There are some traditions that seem to pop up in nearly every family. If you encounter one of these, don't disregard it - but be careful how you use it. Here are some:

variably you will come across the belief that the founders of a particular family in this country were "three borthers, who came here at an early

A common variation is that "one remained in New England, one went south and one went west." This tradition reflects the desire of an individual to believe that everyone with the same last name is somehow related.

The "three brothers" theory neatly explains why there are families with that name throughout the country whose relationships can't be established. Most genealogists disregard this theory unless there is evidence.

- "We're Related to Nobility." This tradition also is common but often not true. Variations include a lost dukedom, riches or a castle in some foreign land.

Unscrupulous promoters have played upon the desire for wealth or status by convincing people to contribute toward a fund seeking to restore a lost fortune or property to its "rightful heirs" — usually everybody with the same last name as some rich or famous person.

FAMOUS PEOPLE - Association With Famous People. You often will hear of some ancestor's association with famous people or events. Stories like these may have some foundation, but they often are impossible to document. However, if the facts seem to fit you'll want to continue researching the tradition.

There are some other common problems with family traditions you should watch for. Some examples:

An incident often will be credited to one side of the family when in fact it happened to another side.

MISTAKES ON NATIONAL ORIGIN Mistakes about national origin also can confuse a family's history. Your great-grandmother may have denied a particular nationality because it was "the thing to do" in her day. Consequently, your grandmother might pass on to you what she believes to be the truth; in reality. though, great-grandmother "withheld evidence.

Don't be surprised if, while you're interviewing Aunt Bessie, she has displayed a remarkable memory about the family tree, complete with names, dates and places. But suddenly - when you ask her about a particular ancestor, she can't remember a thing.

That's a sure sign you've found a family "blacksheep" - we all have them! - someone whom nobody wants to talk about.

Above all, when you're interviewing your relatives about their family recollections, be sure to take accurate

After you've gathered all you can from your relatives and ransacked the attic for clues, then it's time to organize what you've learned up to this point.

Next: Keeping your records.

Davis murder trial goes into sixth week

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) - The Cullen Davis murder trial entered its sixth week today with prosecutors slowly but surely chipping away at a defense conspiracy theory.

"The only conspiracy in this case is in the minds of the defense," prosecutor Tim Curry snapped before summoning Police Detective Greg Miller as the state's 12th witness.

"This is a classic example of a society drug caper that went awry,' countered Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, the crafty thunderbolt of the high priced defense team.

The state contends Davis, 44, a millionaire Fort Worth industrialist, was the "man in black" who killed two and wounded two in a shooting spree last year at his $6 million

He is on trial for his life in the Aug. 2, 1976, slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, Andrea.

The once carefree Davis is accused also of wounding his estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, and killing her live-in lover-bearded, 6-9 Stan Farr, 30. Gus Gavrel, 22, who arrived at the mansion that night with a date, was left partially paralyzed by a bullet that remains lodged in his spine. His girlfriend, Beverly Bass, 19, the third eyewitness to the shootings, escaped unharmed and is expected to testify for the state within the next few days. It has been nearly five weeks since Mrs. Davis, a striking blond socialite, took the stand and identified her husband as the mid-night intruder who shot her in the chest and gunned down Farr.

Gavrel, hobbling into the courtroom on crutches, likewise pointed to Davis as the assailant who, without word or warning, shot him down on a walkway outside the mansion. Although Miss Bass has not yet appeared, a Fort Worth policeman testified outside the presence of the jury that the young woman told him it was Davis who shot Gavrel.

District Court Judge George Dowlen, an affable, easy-going and widely respected bachelor jurist, must decide if he will permit the officer to repeat his testimony for the

With millions of dollars and the palatial mansion at stake, the defense contends the three survivors had ample motive for a conspiracy against Davis. The dark-haired defendant is reputedly the richest person ever to stand trial for murder in this country. The defense intends to show that Farr and the surviving trio were involved in a narcotics deal that backfired violently and, as part of a cover-up, they seized on Davis as the assailant. Sounding a little like Perry Mason, Haynes said the identity of the real killer will be revealed during the trial proceedings. Prosecutors label the theory a "contrived defense."

The most lurid testimony came during the 13 days Mrs. Davis was on the stand and under withering crossexamination by Haynes, considered by some, including himself, to be Texas' top criminal trial lawyer. In a relentless attempt at impeachment, Haynes by innuendo accused the jets set blond of converting the mansion into a sin-mill rife with drugs, booze and sexual hijinks. Mrs. Davis conceded she "probably" is addicted to a prescription pain-killer called Percodan and that she shared her bedroom with at least two lovers after for divorce. But she stuck by her basic story, angrily complaining outside the courtoom that "their only defense is to destroy me...there are treating this like a smutty divorce when in reality it's a murder.'

separating from Davis and suing him

The state has produced four witnesses who have corrobarated her testimony that immediately after the shootings she identified Davis as the gunman dressed in black and wearing a woman's black wig.

A police detective also testified that investigators found a plastic garbage bag in the master bedroom, presumbly the one Mrs. Davis and Gavrel said the assailant used to cover his hands and conceal his pistol. 10:00 a m. Friday for Saturday

Rookie Tony Dorsett joins the pros with two TDs

By BOB DILLON R-T Sports Writer

IRVING - Tony Dorsett has finally arrived.

The gifted running back rookie scored two touchdowns and rushed for 67 yards in a rewarding performance in 98-degree temperatures in Texas Stadium during the Dallas Cowboys' 41-21 victory over the New York Giants Sunday.

"This game was more satisfying than the exhibition win against Baltimore, because I scored twice,' said an elated Dorsett following Sunday's smashing victory.

"The first touchdown was just a trap and I took it up the middle. The, second one was more rewarding, because I was able to put a move on the defensive back in the middle and then got around the corner into the end zone."

Dorsett went on to say that it felt great to be able to spike the ball. "I've wanted to spike the ball a long time, but I couldn't in college, cause it's illegal. I think the more I play the better I'll get, but Preston Pearson is a great running back and I've learned a lot from him. I think this game will be a bigger confidence builder for me than the one against the Colts." (Dorsett gained 99 yards in the Baltimore game).

ALL OF the Cowboys agreed that the heat was unbearable at times. Cliff Harris felt that because the Giants were in the sun all day; it hurt them. "We are playing good defense now, but still need to keep working, said Harris.

Tackle Ralph Neely echoed the statements by Harris. "It was the hottest game I've ever been in (106clegrees on the playing surface). When I was a junior at Oklahoma, we played USC in the Coliseum and it was 108, but I don't think I was as hot hen as I was today. Now I can say I've played in the hottest and coldest

ROGER STAUBACH was pleased with the offense and his performance. Dallas wound up with a total offense of 444 yards with Roger hitting 18 of 29 passes for 235 yards and one touch-

"Last year, we had a couple of games early in the season where we went over 500 yards, but then fell into a rut and I hope we don't do that again this year.

Staubach had to leave the game twice, because of the intense heat. 'Well, I left the first time because I started to get some leg cramps, but then I got put back in when New York started to come back.

"Coach Landry has a lot of confidence in Danny White who fills in well, " added Staubach. "I was pleased with the timing this week on passes. "There was one where I led Preston Pearson a little too far and one where I overthrew Robert Newhouse; which isn't hard to do, but overall, it was OK." Staubach felt that poor field position in the first half really hurt the Giants. Bob Bruenig agreed with Roger. "I thought the high point was the way that we controlled the game early. That really broke their backs. We've all got the right attitude and I'm already anxious for the next game, "quipped Bruenig.

THERE WERE calls on roughing the passer during the game on Harvey Martin. "They (New York), the whole offensive line, was holding and they were telling me they were going to cut me and get my knees. On one call, the quarterback just fell funny. He crumbled and made the official think I got him with my arm. On the next play, Gordon Gravelle grabbed my face mask, but I got a hand on the quarterback anyway, " added

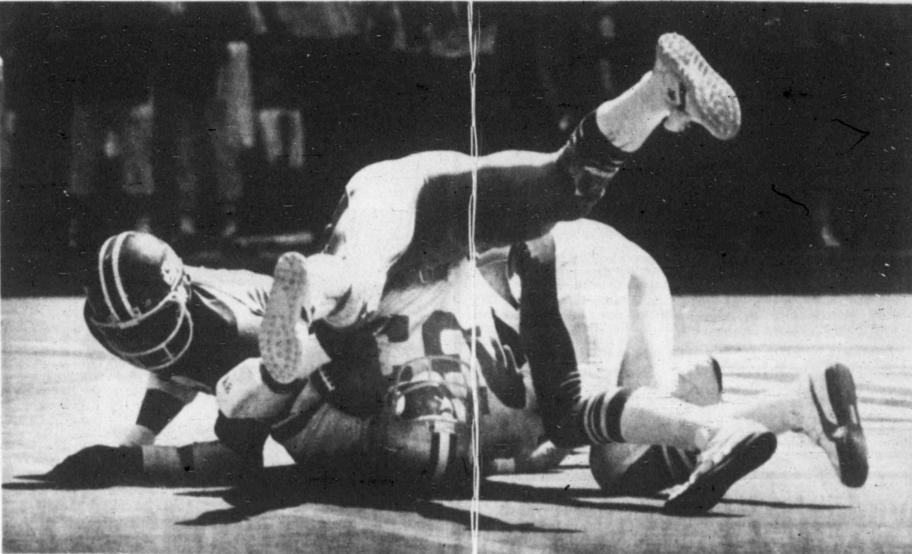

D.D. Lewis, on his pass interception early in the game said: "I was supposed to take away the sideline and did not have any traffic ... so I cheated a bit toward the middle. The receiver had our defense beat, but the quarterback tossed it late and it left me time to get in there and pick it off. I just drifted in and then I saw Bob Tucker coming across." LEWIS HAD tonsilitis Saturday and wasn't feeling too good before the game, but it didn't seem to hurt his performance any.

Benny Barnes was excited about the running of both Pearson and Dorsett. "We have the two best running backs anywhere. Where else can a guy like Preston or Dorsett wait on the bench?"

New York's Brad Van Pelt, who was injured in the second period was bothered by the heat. "It was hot out

Games group picks Los Angeles

- After more than four decades of dogged effort, the city of Los Angeles may once again be host to the Summer Olympic Games.

In what was considered a close 59-35 vote Sunday, the U.S. Olympic Committee selected Los Angeles over representative before the International Oylmpic Committee, which will choose the city to stage the 1984 Summer Olympic Games.

Los Angeles is virtually assured the Games because no other city has made a bid. The deadline for receiving bids is Oct. 31. The IOC will make its selection next May in Los Angeles, which held the Games the last time they were in the United States in 1932, stressed "Spartan approach" throughout the competition and in its final presentation before the USOC executive board.

Cameron Oklahoma,

Washburn 36-35.

Louisiana 20-6.

The city emphasized that almost all of the needed facilities such as the Memorial Colisium, used in 1932, and the Rose Bowl were already in place and only a $33.5 million capital outlay. would be necessary for the others.

Cowboys breeze by Giants, 41-21

DALLAS (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have reaped the first, dividends from Tony Dorsett, their off-season venture into the big-play marketplace. But Dorsett was unsatisfied with Sunday's twotouchdown performance.

"I'm not really happy about the way I played. It was not an exceptional performance," said the heralded rookie, who scampered 11 and 34 yards for his first two pro touchdowns in a 41-21 thrashing of the New York

"I missed an audible and I didn't think my blocking was up to par," added Dorsett, college football's alltime rushing leader. "But those things come with playing time.'

THE COWBOYS didn't have a running back break for more than 28 yards last season and had that fact in mind when they obtained the Heisman Trophy winner. In the fourth period, Dorsett raced wilted by near 100-degree heat for the touchdown that enabled Dallas to pull away from the rallying Giants. He earlier had sliced through the heart of the New York defense for an

34 yards through a New York defense

11-yard touchdown in the second period to give Dallas a 28-0 bulge. 'There was a big hole there, Dorsett said of his first National Football League touchdown. "I could've driven my car through it. Anyone could have scored that touchdown. 'Those touchdowns are all fine and well," he added. "But I have a long way to go." Dorsett compiled 62 yards on seven carries and caught three passes for 36 yards in a backup role behind Preston Pearson. "I thought Tony ran well and caught the ball well," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry. "He'll get better with each game he plays.'

"IT'S MY first time to play in this heat. I was fatigued," added Dorsett, who was hustled into the shower by Cowboy trainers who feared he might become ill

New York linebacker Frank Marion left the game suffering from heat prostration in the sultry, humid weather, while Cowboy trainers said they used more than 400 pounds of ice. Fourteen fans were treated for heat exhaustion.

"In the second half, the heat got to both sides," said Landry. "Neither team had any energy left...it'll take a couple of days now for our players to regain their strengh. 'It was brutal," said Giants Coach

John McVay. "It was hot, a very hot game, and we got into a hole because of the turnovers." Dallas' defense, which pounced on two key fumbles and swiped three passes to help build a 31-7 halftime

In the case of National Football League defense vs. offense, we have a clear example of a hung jury after Sunday's games.

Among the exhibits for the defense are Los Angeles' 20-0 shutout over Philadelphia, and Denver's defensive unit, still unscored upon this season after the Broncos joited Buffalo 26-6.

For the offense, there is Dallas' 41-21 demolition of the New York Giants and Cincinnati's 42-20 rout of Seattle. In Sunday's other games, Baltimore downed the New York Jets 20-12. Washington topped Atlanta 10-6, St. Louis edged Chicago 16-13, Houston defeated Green Bay 16-10, Detroit held off New Orleans 2319, San Diego ripped Kansas City 23-7, Miami whipped San Francisco 19-15 and Oakland defeated Pittsburgh 16-7.

In Saturday night's game, Minnesota edged Tampa Bay 93. New England plays at Cleveland tonight, completing the second week of the NFL season.

Chargers 23, Chiefs 7 The first witness for the defense will be Leroy Jones, who plays tackle for the San Diego Chargers. Since he stands 6 feet 8 and weighs 274 pounds, it is suggested that you pay attention.

Jones was minding his business in Kansas City Sunday when Mike Livingston faded back to pass. Livingston was hit, the ball squirted loose and pass settled in Jones' arms at the Chiefs' 17-yard line. The event was so unsettling that when Jones started running, he took off in the wrong direction.

With his teammates waving and yelling. Jones realized the error after about 10 yards. He reversed his field and churned back into the Chiefs' end zone for a touchdown, breaking a couple of tackles as he hit paydirt. Asked about his adventure, Jones had a simple answer. "I was just trying to get my blocking set up," he explained. "All great backs do that, you know.

Broncos 26, Bills 6 The next witness for the defense will be Buffalo running back O.J. Simpson, who carried 15 times for a mere 54 yards against Denver. Asked if a sprained ankle had affected his play, Simpson said, "What affected my play was their linebackers. The Denver defense is unscored upon and quarterback Craig Morton. who passed for one TD and ran for another against the Bills, made sure the credit went to the right parties. "The defense is responsible for our two wins," he said.

Oilers 16, Packers 10 Next, the defense calls Houston cornerback Willie Alexander, who intercepted a pass and went 95 yards ball, catch it first and then run." Lynn Dickey, who had moved the Packers to the Oiler nine before the fatal pass, blamed himself.

"I blew it," he moaned. "I had the game in my hand, but I just blew it."

Next, the offense calls Jim Hart, who completed 16 of 24 passes for 215 yards and had a streak of 12 straight completions, including a 10-yard TD pitch to J.V. Cain.

Jim Bakken supplied St. Louis' decisive points with field goals of 49. 36 and 41 yards as the Cards' attack rolled for 348 yards.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - While unable to come to financial terms with

While Tom Seaver and Tommy John were attaining personal goals, the Philadelphia Phillies moved to within one step of their team goalthe National League East pennant.

Both Seaver and John won their 20th games Sunday, Seaver in a 4-0 triumph over Atlanta and John by beating Houston 5-4.

Philadelphia, meanwhile, clinched a tie for the Eastern Division title with an 8-5 victory over Montreal. The Phillies, who lead Pittsburgh by 61/2 games, can take the Eastern pennant with a win in Chicago today.

"Everybody pitched in and did a good job, that's how we got here." said a happy Danny Ozark, the Phillies manager. "I think the utility guys did the job at the beginning of the season. Our bench strength really helped us.

'I don't think anybody did anything extraordinary. Everybody did what I expected of them.

Ozark likes the Phillies' chances against Los Angeles in the plavoffs.

I think our bullpen is stronger and pitching is so important in a short he said. "And we have the offense to win it, too.

Pittsburgh shut out Chicago 4-0 and San Diego belted San Francisco 9-2. The St. Louis Cardinals doubleheader with New York was rained out.

Reds 4, Braves 0 Seaver, 20-6, hurled a three-hitter and was helped by George Foster's 51st home run, his 10th against Atlanta this season.

Dodgers 5, Astros 4 John, 20-6, has won 14 of his last 16 decisions to become the first Dodgers left-hander to win 20 since Claude Osteen in 1972. He needed relief help from Lance Rautzhan in the ninth to

Los Angeles' Dusty Baker had a two-run homer and Steve Yeager added a solo shot.

Pirates 4, Cubs 0 John Candelaria raised his record to 19-5 and Al Oliver slammed his 21st home run for Pittsburgh. Candelaria received relief aid from Rich Gossage, who pitched the final 11-3

Padres 9, Giants 2 George Hendrick hit two home runs and drove in four runs for San Diego and Gene Tenace had four hits, including three doubles. Rookie Bob Owchinko, 9-11, scattered eight hits cher Ken Brett in a fight during eighth inning. Brett tackles Otis when he scored on a wild pitch. (AP Laserphoto)

Blalock triumphs

ALAMO, Calif. (AP) few days ago, Jane Blalock thought she might be headed for trouble. Instead, she's apparently headed for her first official $100,000 season on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour

The 32-year-old Miss Blalock had won at least one tournament every year since 1971. She already had two victories in 1977, but the last came in May and since then her golf game had provided little but frustration.

Blalock's final-round two-under total of 71 gave her a 72hole score of 282, 0 under par.

Garland jolts Orioles

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver quoted a New York Yankees coach after the Orioles' latest loss.

"As Yogi Berra once said, 'It's not over until it's over." offered Weaver.

The Orioles lost to the Cleveland Indians 9-4 Sunday, dropping to third place.

The loss probably hurt even more since Wayne Garland, 1219, got the victory. Garland, a 20game winner for the Orioles last season, signed with Cleveland as a free agent during the off-

"This was probably one of the most satisfying wins of the year for me because they're in the pennant race," he said, "But I don't think I have to go out there and prove anything to Baltimore. They know what I can do."

The Orioles jumped on Garland in the first inning as rookie Eddie Murray blasted a three-run homer, his 25th of the season.

Red Sox 12, Tigers 5 Home runs by Carlton Fisk, Carl Yastrzemski and Butch Hobson helped power Boston over Detroit and keep the Red Sox in the American League East race. Reggie Cleveland, 11-8, went all the way for the win despite giving up 18 hits, in-cluding a homer by Ben Oglivie.

Yankees 15-2, Blue Jays 0-0 New York blasted 20 hits in their first-game massacre of Toronto, then rode the combined five-hit pitching of Ed Figueroa and Sparky Lyle to the nightcap

The sweep gave the Yankees a three-game bulge over secondplace Boston in the AL East.

In the opener, Ron Guidry, 16-6, allowed just seven hits, walked only one and struck out 10 for his fifth shutout of the season as he received home run support from Reggie Jackson, Dave Kingman, Lou Piniella and Cliff Johnson, who hit two.

Royals 6-6, Angels 3-2 A throwing error by Nolan Ryan led to Kansas City's winning four-run rally in the nightcap after the first game was marked by a bench and bullpenclearing fight with Angels pitcher Ken Brett being ejected. The sweep gave Kansas City an eightgame winning streak and 24

California's Bobby Bonds hit a two-run homer in the first game. his 37th of the season, tying the club record set by Leon Wagner in 1962. Bonds is attempting to become the first player in baseball history to hit 40 home runs and steal 40 bases in the same season. He has 40 stolen bases and six games remaining to get the three home runs he needs.

Rangers 5-8, A's 4-6

Keith Smith's home run to lead off the 14th inning boosted Texas to its first-game victory while Kurt Bevacqua drove in three runs with a double and a single to power the Rangers to their win in the nightcap. The sweep gave the Rangers five straight victories and 10 in their last 11 games.

Mitchell Page and Wayne Gross homered for Oakland in the second game while Gross also had a roundtripper in the opener. Texas got home runs from John Ellis and Juan Beniquez in the first game.

Brewers 8-4, Twins 6-8

Von Joshua rapped out four hits and Cecil Cooper knocked in three runs to lift Milwaukee to its first-game victory.

Intimidation spelled Franklin Before the Texas Tech-Texas A&M game in Lubbock Saturday night, both teams talked of "intimidation" and as it turned out, it was not without justifiable grounds. Only trouble was, the most intimidating figure on the field, as it turned out, was only casually mentioned and when his name did come up, no trace of intimidation was inferred Fullback George Woodard, the 283-pound fullback, described as everything from a tank to a gorilla in strength, was feared by opposing linemen and King Kong alike. The Red Raiders were concerned with halfback Curtis Dickey's blistering speed and quarterback David Walker's versatility. A&M faithful fretted over Tech quarterback Rodney Allison and the possible lingering effects of what he did to A&M last year at College

Station. Tech Coach Steve Sloan even threatened the Aggies with Mark Julian (5-9, 185) as his answer to Woodard

AS IT turned out, Woodard, slowed

by a groin injury was just a big pussy cat. When A&M got down on the Tech goal in the second period, he couldn't punch it over even from inches away. Dickey, Walker, Allison, while he lasted, and Julian wrought some damage, but were hardly intimidating.

Everywhere there was talk of intimidation but the only reference to Tony Franklin was that with his long range kicking ability, he might become a factor in a close game. No one accused Tony of being a potentially intimidating force.

Franklin in a few quick appearances in the final half made a shambles of the game. He tied it at 17 less than two minutes into the fourth quarter with what for him was a 48-yard chip shot field goal.

TECH UNTIL this point had maintained reasonably good field position, but the field goal, Franklin's second of the game, seemed to make Tech aware of the hovering menace he presented whenever the Aggies strayed outside their own 40.

His subsequent booming, no-return kickoffs into the end zone kept Tech in abysmal field position and led to field goals of 25, 51 and 39 yards and Roderick Reed's return of an interception made the game look more one-sided than it actually was.

His domination of the game brings with it the realization that the menace of soccer from outside, where its popularity is exhibiting fantastic growth in some areas, is not as great as it is from within

If Kruschev had been the czar of soccer, he might have warned, "We'll bury your football."

THE SIDE-WINDING kicker is taking over the game as more and more soccer-style kickers find football a French Riviera, an escape from the spartan fields of Leeds or Manchester United.

And why not? They can score more points with one swing of the leg than in a long soccer season and it sure beats all that running.

Anyone who ignores the value of a field goal these days is in trouble. It cost Woody Hayes a possible victory over Oklahoma earlier in the day. His Buckeyes outscored Oklahoma four touchdowns to three, but he wound up a 29-28 loser when the Sooners toed three field goals.

BUT EVEN those weren't as costly as the field goal opportunity Woody shunned in the second quarter when the Bucks were trailing 20-14 and were faced with a fourth down and two at the 12. Hayes elected to go for the first down instead of the "sure" three and wound up with a cinch zero.

Lost in the wake of Franklin's kicking was the fact that Tech set a new Jones Stadium attendance record. Bill Adams set a Tech field goal record with a 57-yarder that hit the crossbar and bounded over on the last play of the first half to give Tech a 10-7 lead.

But when it comes to talk of "intimidation", after Saturday night most of the 55,008 who witnessed it will agree, it's Tony Franklin's middle name.

McMurry ups mark to 3-1

By The Associated Press

Although they've yet to play a conference game, the McMurry State Indians have fellow Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association members a bit scared. The Indians raised their season record to 3-1 Saturday and all three victors have been shutout efforts

Saturday's whitewash victim was Arkansas-Monticello and the McMurry offense pitched in with 23 points.

In other TIAA action Tarleton State dropped a 42-22 decision to Northwestern Oklahoma, Trinity was trounced 40-6 by Texas Lutheran, and Sul Ross bombed Lousiana Baptist 46-14.

McMurry's win was paced by quarterback Brett Lang who picked up 57 yards on 12 carries and threw a 39-yard touchdown pass for a touchdown.

Texas Tech Coach Steve Sloan has a suggestion for Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler: Don't let his team watch Texas A&M placekicker Tony Franklin warm up before Saturday's big showdown at Ann Arbor, Mich. 'That guy is an intimidating force," said Sloan after Franklin kicked

Then they had to pass and we had the game under control. In the second half, the heat got to both sides. Neither team had any energy left and when you get tired, you start making mental mistakes and that was the reason for so many penalties." THE KEY play in the second half was our third down pass which we failed to complete...then they returned the punt for a score and this gave them the momentum they needed to come back."

Landry went on to say that it will take a couple of days for his team to regain .its strength, but wasn't worried about them bouncing back.
