Coming Sunday ...

How courts and police deal with juveniles who have come to their attention usually is hidden from public view because of laws keeping proceedings and records closed.

But, recently, reporter Linda Schaffrina was allowed to attend several juvenile hearings and see how decisions are made as to which cases should be handled through the courts and which should be resolved informally. The permission was given with the consent of all those involved, on the condition that names or facts that might identify individual youths not be used.

A two-part series on how the juvenile justice system operates in Midland County and how those involved view their responsibilities begins in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Even though Hollywood has yet to crown her, Norwegian actress Liv Ullmann is a movie queen. Some critics have acclaimed her as the world's greatest film actress working today. Ullmann is a unique woman. What sets her apart? You'll see in a FAMILY WEEKLY profile this Sunday.

Why does Stevie Wonder give away awards he wins?

Which is more important in tennis, brains or brawn?

What ever happened to Teresa Brewer?

The answers to these and other fascinating questions Sunday in FAMILY WEEKLY.

IMAGES OF THE PAST were uncovered this week by workers tearing down old buildings in downtown Midland to make room for a park and convention center. The aging movie posters had been left on the building, which most recently was a jewelry store, when the adjoining one was constructed. The nostalgic posters were to be destroyed with the building. (Staff Photo by Ed Todd)

'TV trial' youth guilty

By FRED BAYLES

MIAMI (AP) — The foreman of the jury which convicted a 15-year-old boy in the murder of an elderly woman said today the defense's claim that the youth was driven insane by seeing too much violence on television was ridiculous.

The convicted boy, Ronny Zamora, faces at least 25 years in prison. His attorney still contends his defense strategy which focused on "television insanity" blazed a legal frontier.

After deliberating for about two hours, the jury returned to the courtroom, with its glare of television lights, just after midnight Thursday to pronounce Zamora guilty of first-degree murder.

Today, jurors said they couldn't accept the theory that Zamora's addiction to violent TV programs drove him insane.

"This TV thing — that's ridiculous," said jury foreman John Kateb. "There were a lot of things (that made jurors sympathetic) — his childhood upbringing and all of that. I was brought up without a father. I wasn't led down the wrong path."

"The facts just did not prove he was intoxicated by television. We were pretty much in consensus," said another juror, Irvin Winer.

"It's very unfortunate that the jury is sending this very young boy to a state penitentiary where he will become a target of horrible offenses," said defense attorney Ellis Rubin.

"The appellate court should hear and consider this case because I think the issue presented will forge a new frontier in American jurisprudence," Rubin said in announcing that he will appeal the verdict.

Zamora, a slender junior high school student, appeared pale and shaken as he heard an assistant court clerk read the jury's decisions.

He was also found guilty of burglary, armed robbery and possession of a firearm during commission of a felony. Circuit Judge Paul Baker set sentencing for Nov. 7.

"She's lost her child," said Rubin as he led Yolanda Zamora, the boy's mother, from the courtroom. "It's time to go home."

The 52-year-old attorney attracted national attention by pleading Zamora innocent by reason of "involuntary television intoxication."

At one point, Rubin subpoenaed actor Telly Savalas of the television series "Kojak" to testify on the effects of TV violence. However, the subpoena was withdrawn.

Rubin said Zamora had been conditioned by television to shoot his next-door neighbor, Elinor Haggart, when the elderly woman caught him and another person ransacking her Miami Beach home.

The trial of Darrell Agrella, 14, the other person accused in the case, begins today.

Ronny Zamora

"I wonder how many murders Ronny Zamora saw before he wound up in Elinor Haggart's living room," Rubin said in his closing arguments earlier Thursday.

"If they sell deodorant and automobiles and beer in 30 seconds, imagine what 30 minutes of violence can do, repeated again and again."

His comments were recorded by television and still cameras under a one-year camera-in-the-courtroom experiment.

Mandel headed back to court for sentencing

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel was to return to a federal courtroom today to be sentenced for accepting lavish gifts in return for his once-considerable political influence.

Mandel, 57, and five codefendants, convicted of mail fraud and racketeering after a 2½-month trial last summer, were to appear before U.S. District Court Judge Robert L. Taylor.

Mandel was to have been suspended from the governorship upon sentencing. He would regain the job only if his conviction were overturned before the end of his term of office in January 1979.

With no apparent source of income, Mandel had resisted either resigning or applying for a state pension.

Acting Gov. Blair Lee recently said Mandel does not have "two nickels to rub together."

His codefendants are W. Dale Hess, Irvin Kovens, Ernest N. Corey, Jr., and brothers William A. and Harry W. Rodgers III.

Mandel moved from the governor's mansion Thursday, his second move from the executive residence in four years.

Many observers of Maryland politics believe Mandel's fall from power began the first time he moved, on July 4, 1973.

That day Mandel ended years of speculation by announcing he was leaving his wife, Barbara, after more than 30 years of marriage.

"I am in love with another woman, Mrs. Jeanne Dorsey, and I intend to marry her," said the governor flatly. But Barbara Oberfeld Mandel did not make it easy.

She retorted that she was Maryland's first lady, and that she intended to stay in the governor's mansion. The stalemate continued for six months after Mandel moved out.

The couple finally agreed on a divorce settlement, and Mandel returned to the mansion in December 1973.

At his trial, testimony revealed that Mandel, with an annual salary of $25,000 a year, borrowed heavily in order to free himself to marry Mrs. Dorsey.

After the conviction, several jurors commented that they felt sorry for Mandel. Some thought he was basically a good man who had been desperate to buy himself out of a bad marriage.

Mandel and his codefendants were indicted in December 1975. Their first

More minimum wage law changes pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is considering further changes in the minimum wage law after voting to increase the present $2.30-an-hour floor by $1.10 over the next four years.

The vote Thursday for higher wages was the second congressional victory of the day for organized labor. Earlier, the House acted to make it easier to organize workers and to punish companies that break the law to keep unions out.

Senators voted 76-14 for a plan to increase the minimum wage to $2.65 an hour on Jan. 1, 1978, to $2.90 on Jan. 1, 1979, to $3.15 an hour on Jan. 1, 1980 and to $3.40 an hour on Jan. 1, 1981.

A key supporter of the plan said a worker supporting a nonfarm family of four through a fulltime minimum wage job in 1981 would fall 5 per cent under the federal poverty level.

Continuing work on the bill today, the Senate scheduled votes on a controversial proposal for a lower minimum pay for teenagers and a plan to make bigger businesses exempt from paying the minimum wage.

A companion minimum wage bill passed by the House on Sept. 15 would increase the minimum to $2.65 Jan. 1, 1978, to $2.85 on Jan. 1, 1979 and to $3.05 on Jan. 1, 1980.

Differences in the two bills will have to be worked out in a House-Senate conference committee.

Meanwhile, business lobbyists said they would try to force changes in the Senate in the House-passed labor law legislation they say will push American workers into unions against their will.

The House vote shows the country is "heading toward a labor-controlled government similar to that of the United Kingdom," said Clarence B. Randall of the National Action Committee on Labor Law Reform.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill called the bill "labor's first victory in the labor relations area in 42 years," and business spokesmen conceded labor had won all it sought on the issue.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said after the 257-163 vote that the Democratic leadership had prevailed in Congress "in the face of the outrageous lies and distortions about the bill used by rightwing opponents ... who were backed by business interests."

Backers of the measure said it now is cheaper for anti-union companies to violate labor laws than to obey them, because there aren't penalties strong enough to outweigh the goal of keeping unions out.

The bill would call for financial penalties against labor law violators and grant reinstatement with double back pay to workers fired illegally during a union organizing effort.

The measure also calls for worker compensation in cases in which employees vote for union representation but their company unlawfully refuses to negotiate.

In addition, unions or businesses found guilty of repeated labor law violations could be barred from receiving federal contracts for up to three years.

Because, she seems to say, hands are next to the Venus in every woman. And nails can be the 10-fold enhancer.

One of the most feminine things about a woman is her hands," said Miss Suggs, who has painted nails of her own. "They are the most sensuous thing about a woman."

As for those pampered nails, well, from her standpoint, "There is just nothing more feminine," she ventured to say. "It's just like perfume; it makes you beautiful."

Susan Suggs' fascination with fingernails is not just a passing fancy. It's an enterprising affair.

In a month or so, she plans to introduce to Midland and environs Julliet's exclusive techniques of "fingernail wrapping."

It'll be for women who can afford it and who just might want the kind of slicked-up nails that manicurist Julliet prepared for the Hollywood stars back in the 1940s.

Carter pardons Cordero

Leak forces evacuation

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — Toxic chlorine gas billowed from a section of the Dow Chemical Co. plant in this east central Michigan city for nearly half an hour this morning, forcing evacuation of surrounding homes and schools.

There were no immediate reports that anyone had become ill from the gas which escaped from Dow's chlor-alkali division.

Police and sheriff's deputies evacuated a number of schools as well as homes and businesses in the gas cloud's path. Most of the evacuations were in Midland and Homer townships south of the city.

A Dow spokeswoman said it was not immediately known how the leak began. She said it took Dow emergency crews about half an hour to stop the leak.

Company safety investigators were on the scene.

The Dow complex is on the southwest side of the city of 35,176. The chlorine appeared to be blowing to the southwest — away from the city, witnesses said.

cancer, arrived here late Thursday after being released from the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Mo. He was scheduled to fly to Puerto Rico today.

President Carter reduced Cordero's sentence to 23 years Thursday to allow him to return home before his death. Originally sentenced to 25 to 75 years on charges of assault and conspiring to overthrow the government, Cordero would not have been eligible for parole until 1981.

The move was supported by the present and four past Puerto Rican governors.

Arriving at O'Hare International Airport on the first leg of his journey home, Cordero was carried off the plane in a wheelchair. A small knot of supporters draped a red, white and blue Puerto Rican nationalist flag over his shoulders as a shawl.

Grinning broadly, Cordero raised a fist no larger than a child's and pledged his support for his still-jailed companions.

Nelson W. Canals of San Juan, president of the Committee to Free Nationalist Prisoners, translated Cordero's brief remarks from Spanish. Canals said Cordero felt his release was a victory for "the people of Puerto Rico, the people of North America ... and oppressed peoples everywhere."

On March 1, 1954, Cordero and his three companions shouted "Freedom for Puerto Rico" and opened fire from the House visitors' gallery with four pistols.

Twenty to 25 shots were fired before guards could subdue the nationalists. Five representatives, who had just answered a quorum call, lay wounded.

Deregulation said impetus to boom

By JIM STEINBERG

In the face of an increasing housing shortage, "if legislation for the deregulation of natural gas is passed there will be a housing boom in Midland-Odessa that will make the present boom seem small," said acting Odessa City Manager Jack Dillard at a League of Women Voters forum on housing Thursday.

City of Midland Administrative Assistant Mike Butler told League members that the present pace of new housing construction was just keeping up with the influx of new residents into the city.

Dillard, Butler, and Carol McDavid Cohn, Abilene housing program specialist, spoke at the forum "Housing: Problems and Solutions." Among those present for the discussion were all six members of the Midland City Council.

Butler said construction was begun in 1974 at 184 residential sites, and this increased to 653 housing starts in 1975, and shot up to 1,138 housing starts in 1976.

So far during 1977, new single family dwelling construction starts have averaged 46 per month, Butler said.

Coping with this growth is "going to challenge the community as well as the city staff to come up with innovative ways to solve the housing problem," Butler said.

During the session, City Councilman Carroll M. Thomas noted that despite the boom conditions in Midland, housing is available in the $30,000 range. He said there were 57 Midland houses listed for sale at $30,000 or less in the classified section of a newspaper recently.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. added that the city has encouraged the development of mobile home residences in many areas of the city

Lack of foresight said reason for dissension

By ROBERT G. KAISER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The diplomatic hailstorm that burst over the Carter administration in the last week caught the President and his associates by surprise because they did not foresee the political consequences of their diplomatic maneuvers, according to informed sources.

In a series of interviews, administration sources said they had carefully planned the week's shifts in policy toward the Middle East — shifts that infuriated many of Israel's supporters, and gave the Soviet Union a revived role in Middle East diplomacy.

Many of these officials said that in time, the events of this week will be seen as positive developments in the search for a Middle East peace settlement. Critics of the administration sharply disagreed.

The Carter administration's decision to reinflate the Soviet role grew out of the President's strong desire to reconvene the Geneva peace conference this year, informed sources said.

The unexpected revival of apparent Soviet-American cooperation in the Mideast also grew out of — or at least coincided with — a desire to show the Soviets that the Carter administration could work cooperatively with them despite the rocky beginning in their relations earlier this year.

The President and the small band of aides who secretly executed the diplomatic surprises of the past week did not anticipate the strength of the reaction they provoked from Israel and its American friends, informed sources said. They may also have underestimated the right-wing opposition to their revival of the Soviet role in the Mideast.

The President's political aides — who might have been able to warn him of the likely reaction of American Jews to his initiatives — were cut out of the diplomatic planning, Hamilton Jordan, Carter's chief political lieutenant, learned of the Soviet-American statement from news reports last Saturday — he had no advance warning. The same was true, according to informed sources, for Mark Siegel, Jordan's aide and Carter's designated liaison with Jewish groups, and Stewart Eizenstat, the President's domestic affairs adviser, who has taken in an interest in Mideast affairs.

This was not the first time that a major foreign policy decision was held tightly within a small group at the top of the Carter administration. Indeed, this has been the rule, not the exception, since the new President took office in January.

The idea of a joint statement with the Soviets apparently took shape in the mind of Secretary of State Cyrus Vance during his tour of the Middle East in August. According to sources, he first broached it to the Soviet ambassador in Washington, Anatoly F. Dobrynin, soon after his return from that trip.

Since the early weeks of the Carter administration, the U.S. and Soviet Union — co-chairmen of the dormant Geneva Middle East peace conference — exchanged monthly "briefings" on the Mideast situation. The August session between Vance and Dobrynin was one of these.

Vance reportedly decided that his August trip marked the end of the "exploratory stage" of his Middle East diplomacy, and although it did not produce any breakthroughs, he the President and Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security advisor, are said to have agreed that the time had come to try to do something to reactivate the Geneva conference.

Carter had repeatedly said that he wanted a Geneva conference during 1977 — meeting this goal became the overriding administration objective. Not long before Vance toured the Middle East, the President repeated it in a meeting with Rep. Sidney R. Yates (D-Ill.), one of Israel's most important friends in the House of Representatives.

Carter, Yates recalls, said he wanted to convene the Geneva conference during 1977 because he would have to turn his attention to other foreign policy issues in 1978.

(Israeli and American friends of Israel this week attacked that arbitrary deadline as bad diplomacy. Noting that the December 1977 deadline was mentioned specifically in Saturday's Soviet-American statement, the Washington representative of a large Jewish organization called this "one of the crudest and the saddest things in all of this.")

The administration, it is felt, always regarded Palestinian representation at a peace conference as the key issue. The Arab states have recognized the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) as the "sole legitimate" representative of the three million Palestinians, and the Soviets have staunchly supported (and financed) the PLO.

Israel, however, refuses to deal with the PLO, noting its repeated statements that it did not recognize the legitimacy of the state of Israel. The United States has never dealt with the PLO directly, but the Carter administration took several steps to soften the U.S. position.

After their expulsion from Egypt in 1972, the Soviets have not had a surrogate in the Middle East. But they remain arms suppliers to the Arabs and sponsors of the PLO.

The Carter administration reckoned that the Soviets were weak in the region, but retained the capacity to "make mischief" — to sabotage American peacemaking efforts. Because of their closeness to the PLO, the Soviets were in an especially good position to make mischief on the question of Palestinian representation at Geneva.

Vance's idea — expressed in August — that the time might be right for a Soviet-American statement of some kind evolved slowly but steadily into last Saturday's statement. Dobrynin and the State Department pursued the notion in connection with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's planned visit to Washington on Sept. 22. The Strategic Arms Limitation Talks were to be the principal topic during that visit, but both sides also wanted to discuss the Middle East.

Students get certificates

Eleven students at Midland Memorial Hospital have received certificates denoting satisfactory completion of a six-week intensive coronary care course, Mrs. Ellen Kennedy, nursing inservice education director, said.

"We offer this course about twice a year specifically for registered and vocational nurses interested in the specialized area of coronary care," Mrs. Kennedy explained. Mrs. Jo Ann Fee, a member of the hospital's CEU nursing staff was the instructor.

Curriculum included cardiac arrhythmias, cardiac pacing, techniques of nursing and recognizing myocardial infarctions plus various problems of intensive coronary heart disease.

Completing the course were Mrs. Ann Bryant, Mrs. Linda K. Potts, Mrs. Cynthia Sauls, Mrs. Patsy Hochman, Mrs. Louise Evans, Mrs. Janet Parker, Mrs. Sharon Miller, Mrs. Gloria Thomas, Mrs. Essie Eaden, Kay Smallwood and Jimmy Tester.

Briscoe, others accused of raising false hopes

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Three lawmakers have criticized Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Speaker Bill Clayton and Comptroller Bob Bullock for raising "false hopes" among farmers and ranchers regarding taxation of land based on productivity.

Briscoe signed the bill that would have given rural Texas a tax break if a constitutional amendment also had passed. Reps. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso; John Bryant, D-Dallas; and Luther Jones, D-El Paso, said Thursday.

Despite the failure of the constitutional amendment by two votes in the House, Clayton and Bullock have said the enabling statute for assessing farm and ranch land on its productivity is constitutional any way.

"This is the worst kind of political hypocrisy and a clear sign of desperation by Clayton and Briscoe, who, having failed to deliver on their repeated promises to get a constitutional amendment allowing agricultural productivity taxation through the Legislature, are now trying to claim that no such amendment was ever needed," the lawmakers said.

They asked why an amendment was introduced at the last session if one wasn't needed, and why Clayton recently appointed two of them to a special committee charged with writing another amendment for the next session.

Statements that the law is constitutional without the amendment deceive farmers and ranchers, who will learn they have been misled when the law is tested in court, they said.

"The saddest aspect of this whole situation is that we could have had a constitutional amendment which would have made H.B. 22 legal if Clayton and Briscoe had been capable of any kind of leadership."

"All they would have had to do to get S.J.R. 1 (the constitutional amendment) passed by the Legislature was to drop their insistence that the Legislature give this same kind of special tax break to major industrial corporations like Exxon and Tenneco and the big timber and lumber companies."

"Unfortunately, because Briscoe and Clayton wouldn't compromise and accept the amendments to S.J.R. 1, which would have insured that only the family farmers and ranchers who really need this special protection received it, the Legislature failed to pass the amendment," they said.

Self sufficiency of long ago not found today

By DELLA PARRISH COMPTON
Special to The Washington Post

Uncle Ed never worried about garbage. He fed the food scraps to the chickens and hogs and he lighted the fires with newspapers or took them up to the back house. You could get an education there reading back issues. He said when it got extremely cold he used a layer of them between the quilts to keep out the cold and he also used a few for wallpaper or to seal off a crack.

He had brown-paper bags, using them to store herbs or to tote lunches in. You didn't throw away much except to the buzzards and that was done way off on the gap. Reason for that was varmints could come around and if they did you were liable not to have a chicken or hog.

I've seen him butcher and hang the hog "lights" up in the apple trees for bird treats.

He didn't have a sewer line either, he just tossed the dish water out the kitchen window and it wet the rhubarb and shrubbery and kept it going. Same way with the washpan water. It brought the prettiest flowers around the house you ever saw. I don't know what he did with his ragged breeches, but one pair went for the dog to sleep on and when he needed a string he could always rip up something old and make one.

A luxury was a grass sack. You saved every one of these to carry grain and vegetables in. The cloth ones you could bleach the print off and make pillow cases and sheets—even shorts if you knew how to sew. They made good wiping towels too. Old grease was boiled down and the salt removed and used to grease anything squeaking. Tallow was used for hand cream, and chicken and goose grease for salves. I wondered what he did with the coffee grounds and I found he put them in the soil compost. He saved the hen manure too, and fertilized his onions.

The animal manure was spread over the fields and plowed under and he had the best sweet potatoes and pumpkins around. He planted them by the cemetery so nobody would bother them and it was no curiosity to see a cucumber growing over Uncle Ezra.

A garbage truck would have been an oddity. If they had come around in the mountains every chicken would have followed behind them for a few scraps. The chicks scratched up the compost piles and kept them aired.

Rotting fruit went into vinegar and you didn't have much left when you got through with anything because the dog got even the bones and he'd bury them himself. When shoes wore out and you couldn't repair them they went in the fireplace or on a brush pile and the custom was to get rid of what you didn't want when you cleared up a new ground because it all made ashes that made good burnt beds for planting and it took one to raise tobacco.

This self sufficiency kept down employment expenses for the county too, and about the only payroll for them then was for the sheriff and tax

WOMEN'S NEWS

Not many called on a doctor. They couldn't afford one so they had to cure their own ills, and a little pine tar went a long way, plus a few homemade purges.

You could even make nails out of wooden pegs and you could make everything else for the home from utensils to bedposts. A coil of cow rope could make a bedspring and you took the wheat straw and made a mattress.

Old clothes would be plaited into rugs to keep the floor warm in winter-time. The softest place anywhere was the sheep rug, or the one on the back of the rocking chair.

Tin cans were kept for dipping containers or soap dishes and even biscuit cutters if you didn't have one. Of course, not many ate out of tin cans then because they were considered poison.

Old tires were used to ring off flower beds or make swings for kids to play on and sometimes they were cut up for shoe soles. If a bucket got a hole in it it was mended with a rag or finally honored with a houseplant growing in it.

Just a few things ever saw the holidays, for some of them were filled up with the carcasses of dead animals and logs rolled in on them. Came a washout once and there was poor old Bessie with her feet sticking out in the moonlight and she had been dead three days.

It is just nature for man to learn to solve his own problems in survival. If he doesn't he isn't interested in living. It's the challenge of it that keeps most going today but it's our style of living that has upset man's ingenuity. He can't improvise like he used to and it gets discouraging when he can't use his own knowledge to get rid of waste things. You never heard of disposable diapers then, either. A kid got the flour sacks or else, and he learned to train early because he liked to walk the back path, too. There was nothing said about garbage, nothing to stink, because a little lime took care of some odors and clotheslines the rest. If you didn't have a clothesline you used the fence or a bush to dry in the sun.

Now if there's a better living than the natural way we don't seem to have found it today. We have lost our elbow room for one thing and we all need to live out of hollering distance. That was when neighbors enjoyed seeing each other once a week, when they looked up at another's chimney smoke and knew they were home on Sunday. That's when a butterfly in the doorway told you somebody was coming or the rooster flopped his wings three times and crowed at the dog.

That's when Uncle Ed would get out of his doorway chair, spit through his fingers and welcome you in and that's when a dipper hung on an elder bush by the spring for everybody to drink by the roots of it. That's when you could lay in the shade and watch a measuring worm hang off a leaf or see a toad in the daytime, where he was hiding.

It's when a splinter could serve for a toothpick or a broom straw and a few green rushes could sweep up the yard for company. That's when thunder clouds rolled over the gap like bales of cotton and were sure to squeeze out a rain by noon. And here we worry about garbage, suffocate in our own pollution and wish times were a little more like they used to be when it was nothing to eat out of a cracked plate. It was when you could grow your own beans, tomatoes and onions and cut them all up with a chunk of fat meat and forget the word steak, because you had milk butter.

That was when a food stamp would have made anybody mad because he had a horror of welfare and pride wouldn't let you take handouts. That's when you said "Howdy" and meant it and you just lifted a latch and said come in an nobody who did that had bad intentions because he knew there might be a shotgun over the front door and you knew if somebody could bag a varmint he was capable of using it for self defense. It was when money was as valuable as diamonds and gold and nobody had much of either. It's when garbage was a barrel of pumies that didn't mash up right and a polecat got in it, but that was way back when the buzzards stayed. It was when feathers were preened for pillows and a firefly meant something.

It was a long time ago and not today.

New book tells repair methods

CORNING, N.Y. (AP) — Techniques for repairing broken glass objects and restoring books, slides, photographs, prints, tapes and films are discussed in "The Corning Flood: Museum Under Water," a recently published book.

In June, 1972, the Corning Museum of Glass was flooded. Museum officials, terming the damage "catastrophic," began four years of restoration work.

How to save on fuel costs

By VIVIAN BROWN, AP Newsfeatures

Updating heating equipment can be a big factor in fuel economy. A new burner might save 15 to 20 percent on your oil bill, a fact that might be difficult for some people to comprehend.

So says Lillian Siegel of Fairfield, Conn., who has been in the oil business for 48 years. She was explaining a notice — "a new burner can save you money" — that was appended to her oil bills.

"If an oil bill is $600 a year, a nominal amount, a new burner might save as much as $120 dollars. In addition, the equipment is modern. New burners have electronic controls and retention heads which are economical to operate." A burner is part of the boiler equipment.

It is a question of how old is old, she says. Some 40-year-old burners have motors and transformers in excellent condition, whereas newer ones might be exhausted. Much depends on the care they have been given and the quality of the equipment.

Today's motors give you 3450 RPMs that go like mad, a little noisier, but they deliver more rapidly giving more energy at lower cost.

Like other companies, she provides budget plans for the purchase of new equipment.

An oil service company should be trusted to give good advice and should be asked for an equipment check-up if bills become high.

What bothers Miss Siegel is that some customers don't trust her judgment even though "there are legions that do" who seek the advice of Lil, as she is known in the trade. In fact, when they call to ask questions she never asks whether they are customers. Some use other service companies because of business affiliations or because they owe the company money or whatever, but she has a long-time reputation for knowledgeability in the business so she willingly provides information.

Occasionally she "loses her cool," she says, when people ignore their equipment "because it isn't visible."

"If they had a pale pink boiler in the middle of the living room floor, they would keep it immaculate, but because it is out of sight they simply don't keep it clean."

"The worst form of insulation is soot. A burner should be adjusted every year and the boiler should be cleaned whenever it is sooty. A boiler must work twice as hard to deliver when the parts are dirty," she explained. It's energy dollars up the flue as far as she is concerned.

In her own oil business for 27 years — she is president of Superior Oil Co. — she has seen a lot of changes. In the beginning she "could not drive a truck" so she had to hire a man. He stayed until the first cold day.

She started the business from scratch — new customers and new trucks. One cold day she got some calls — one for 500 gallons of oil — "it had seemed stupendous at the time." Now she is into sales of millions of gallons of oil every year.

"Winter time is rough, full of emergencies," she says. "You might occasionally get a call and find that a person forgot to turn on a switch, but people are more sensible now."

DEAR ABBY

Hubby consoles woman he never met

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Ralph and I got a call at 5 a.m. from Vera, the 30-year-old woman our 19-year-old son is living with. We had never met Vera, but we threw Junior out of our house because he was over at her place all the time, anyway.

Vera was frantic because Junior hadn't been "home" for two nights. Imagine the gall! Ralph said Vera was hysterical, so he thought he should get dressed, go to her place and calm her down. Meanwhile, I went back to sleep.

Well, Ralph was gone for 18 hours and I was half-crazy worrying about him. When he came home, I noticed he had worn his best suit and shoes.

He told me he had taken Vera to dinner, and Junior never did show up. What do you call a man who leaves his wife's bed to pacify a woman he's never met because his son didn't come "home" to her? His excuse was that he wanted to see the environment his son was living in. —DISGUSTED.

DEAR DISGUSTED: How about a "C.P.E." (Concerned Pacifying Environmentalist)?

DEAR ABBY: When a friend has taken his own life, out of kindness and consideration for the family, should the whole thing be ignored as though it had never happened? I mean, should there be no flowers, letters of condolence, or mention of it at all?

Some I have spoken to about this seem to feel that this is the best way to handle suicide deaths. What is your opinion?

ANONYMOUS: When a dear one dies, his family suffers a loss, whether he has taken his own life or not.

Friends should express their sorrow and offer words of comfort to the family without reference to the circumstances.

DEAR ABBY: When some poor, ignorant, unimaginative dolt points to the work of a serious modern artist and asks, "What is THAT supposed to be?" how should the artist respond? —BEWILDERED.

DEAR BEWILDERED: The artist tells the dolt what he had in mind when he put the brush to the canvas. (If he can remember, that is.)

DEAR ABBY: You often print letters from telephone operators supposed to say, "No, I'm complaining about what they have to put up with from the public. As a member of the "public," may I get in my 2 cents' worth?

I have never called directory assistance to find out whether I should use 10 large eggs instead of 12 small ones in an angel food cake, how to spell "conscientious objector," what Pat Nixon's real first name is, or the answer to any other such questions.

When I call MR. Jones person-to-person at home, and his wife answers saying he is not in, the operator inevitably asks, "Would you like to speak to MRS. Jones?"

Why on earth would I be calling MR. Jones if I wanted to speak to his wife? And with Mrs. Jones right on the line listening, what am I supposed to say, "No, I don't want to talk to her?" So I end up not speaking to the person I called, and paying person-to-person rates for it.

I realize that not all operators are alike, but customers aren't, either. —JOHN Q. PUBLIC.

Smoke alarm manufacturers have brisk business

By TOM CRANE

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated eight million householders will shell out from $20 to $50 each this year for a residential smoke alarm, a gadget they hope they'll never need.

For some, it will be the first smoke detection device in their homes, but many will be picking up a second or third to broaden their protection in larger residences.

Fires kill about 6,500 persons in their homes each year, often during the hours of sleep. And officials across the country are avid boosters of the new tool for early detection of fires.

Just about any one of them will suggest that the purchase of a smoke alarm is the perfect way to observe National Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 9-15.

The smoke detector is not the ultimate answer to fire danger, but it seems the best to date. Concealed within a neat little container fastened to, or near, the ceiling, most often in the hallway of a bedroom area, it cannot prevent a fire. But its piercing alarm early in a fire can rouse heavy sleepers before blinding smoke and flame cut off escape.

No less than 100 companies have entered the market, manufacturing or selling smoke alarms. And makers of long-life batteries are sharing in the boom, turning out special 9-volt cells for the first alarm units and stepping up their output of the familiar transistor radiotype batteries.

Along with individual householders, government officials are seeing the wisdom of the smoke alarm. New federal housing and transfer of a federal mortgage to a new tenant require prior installation of wired-in smoke detectors. A recent survey shows 13 states mandating such protective devices in all new residential construction while 23 other states require smoke alarms only in specified types of residences under state or local regulations.

North Carolina politely "requests" but does not order newresidence smoke alarms while 13 states have no requirements for such protection, although more than 100 localities have adopted smoke detector ordinances.

Underlining their importance is the fact that four of every five persons killed in residential fires are not burned but die of toxic fumes, and that one of six injured survivors spends from six weeks to two years receiving often painful and always costly treatment in hospitals and clinics.

The technical improvements in such smoke alarms make them independent of house wiring that may fail in a fire. They also reduce power requirements so that it operates on a single long-life 9-volt battery of the type used in a transistor radio, available at the corner store.

For persons interested in buying a detector but dismayed at the welter of models and the difference in type, authorities offer some advice:

Look first for an Underwriters Laboratories approval label or similar assurance from another recognized testing facility to show that rigid specifications and reliability requirements have been met. Then shop for price.

Special sales are frequent as a result of the keen competition between manufacturers. An ionic smoke alarm marketed by one of the pioneers in the business sold recently for $19.99, instead of its listed price of $34.99.

As to which type to buy, the advice is that it doesn't matter. If you can afford it, buy one of each type. If buying a second smoke alarm, make it the type you don't already have.

The installations of smoke alarms outside each cluster of bedrooms is advisable, and in the bedroom of anyone who smokes in bed. Additional units may be desirable at the top of a stairway or in the living room.

The states requiring smoke alarms in all new dwellings are Alaska, California, Idaho, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New York, Oregon, Utah, Virginia, Washington and Wyoming.

While smoke alarm legislation is in the discussion stage in some instances, the survey showed no general state or local laws applicable to new residential construction in Arkansas, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Mexico, South Dakota, Tennessee, Vermont and West Virginia.

Supreme Court hears argument on rights of pregnant workers

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court heard lawyers argue Wednesday whether the penalties for pregnancy imposed by two employers violated civil rights laws forbidding sex discrimination.

One of the employers, Nashville Gas Co., as a matter of policy pays sick leave to employees disabled by heart attacks, auto accidents, back trouble and other afflictions unrelated to their jobs. The Tennessee utility also credits them with across-the-board pay increases approved while they are away and lets their seniority build normally.

But when female employees take pregnancy leave, the firm, also as a matter of policy, puts them on leave without pay and strips them of job seniority.

For Nora Da. Satty, whose clerical job was eliminated by a computer while she was on pregnancy leave, these were the results: —She lost $732 in wages during the three months she was away to have a baby in early 1973.

—Her 3 1/2 years of seniority were wiped out. —She was rehired, at a temporary project, at a starting wage $10 under her previous pay of $142.80 a week.

—She applied for three permanent jobs, any one of which would have been hers had she been on sick leave, but lost each to a woman with lesser seniority.

—She was fired when the temporary project ended a month after it was started.

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Thurgood Marshall asked for the company's justification for taking away seniority from female employees who leave to have a child.

Nashville Gas rewards employees whose personal values dictate that they stay on the job rather than putting their personal lives over their employer's interests, replied attorney Charles K. Wray.

Justice William J. Brennan Jr. inquired if the utility would give its usual sick-leave advantages to an employee injured in an auto accident caused by his (or her) own gross negligence.

Marshall embroiled the hypothetical negligence to include drunkenness, "smoking reefer and injecting heroin."

Wray said that such an employee was owed the same presumption as a heart-attack victim: he'd rather be at work than in a hospital bed.

But in the case of a pregnant woman, the presumption is that she wants a child, he said.

Wray apparently astonished Marshall by citing a company "right" to return Satty to her job, giving her preference over an outsider.

"She also had a right to the job if no one in the world wanted it," Marshall remarked.

For Satty, Robert W. Weismuller Jr., argued that the company had injured his client "forever," partly by sending her to the bottom of the seniority and pay scales, without demonstrating such actions to be business necessities.

Wray, however, said the company merely had followed a "straightforward pregnancy policy" that was not a subterfuge to invade the Civil Rights Act of 1964, and that was consistent with a Supreme Court decision in a case involving General Electric Co. last December.

The Justices devoted a second hour to arguments involving Sonja Lee Berg, a Richmond, California kindergarten teacher. She was the sole breadwinner for her husband, who was studying for the ministry, as well as herself.

After she became pregnant five years ago, she sought to continue teaching right up to the onset of childbirth. Her personal physician certified that she could do this.

But the Richmond Unified School district insisted she comply with a policy requirement to take maternity leave, without drawing on her accrued sick-leave pay, starting the first day of the seventh month of pregnancy. The school board also ordered her to submit to an examination by a board physician. She refused, and won a court injunction allowing her to work until just before the baby's birth.

Berg's attorney, Mary C. Dunlap, argued Wednesday that the board never showed distrust of a non-pregnant employee by ordering an examination by its own doctor.

In contrast, school board attorney Arthur W. Walenta Jr., said school authorities had a right to seek medical information about Berg through the board's own physician.

The ninth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled for Berg, saying she was entitled to both the sick pay and legal fees, and ordered the school board to grant similar benefits in similar cases.

In like fashion, the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that Nashville Gas owed Satty sick leave pay, $9,456 in gross wages she otherwise would have earned, reinstatement with full seniority, and attorneys' fees.

Arguing for over-ruling the appellate courts, lawyers for both employers cited the GE decision, which involved a sickness and accident plan providing benefits

U.S., Japanese airlines negotiate for markets

The Washington Post

TOKYO — The battle for profitable passenger routes between U.S. and Japanese airlines went to the negotiating table Thursday with both countries' carriers in an argumentative mood.

Japan Air Lines was seeking a bigger slice of the American market. Such American giants as Pan American World Airways and Northwest Airlines were hoping to keep JAL out and preserve the status quo. U.S. charter flight companies were angling for an opening into Japan.

At stake is a 25-year-old air transport agreement, signed in the closing days of the American occupation of Japan. The Japanese government maintains the agreement is full of inequalities that favor U.S. companies.

Delegations composed of industry and government representatives sat down for a brief opening session of what is expected to be two weeks of hard bargaining.

None of the major issues has been settled — even seriously discussed, in Japan's view — during the four previous meetings in the past year.

The meetings are accompanied by high-powered public relations campaigns and bellicose statements from the two nations' airlines, each charging the others have unfair advantages in the designation en routes and the rights to carry passengers to and from third countries. "All JAL wants is equality," said Geoffrey Tudor, an official of that big airline, which is nearly half-owned by the Japanese government.

"There is no inequality," countered Reginald Jenkins, vice president of Northwest. "All they (JAL) ever want to talk about is the shellacking they claim they're getting."

"They aren't prepared to give anything in return. They want more (landing) points in the states and the rights to fly on beyond and each one would take money out of American pockets. We don't think anything justifies giving JAL more economic benefits."

JAL wants to expand its rights to fly to 12 U.S. cities — five more than they serve now. It wants access to a piece of the increasingly lucrative markets in Chicago, Seattle, Houston, Dallas-Fort Worth and Miami.

The American lines' routes to Japan are tied into 19 American markets and some of them — like Northwest's Chicago-Tokyo run — are uncontested monopolies, JAL argues.

The U.S. airlines counter that they are restricted to only three airports in Japan and that their passenger capacities are limited because wide-bodied 747s are not permitted into one of them, Osaka.

Equally crucial for Japan is the right to fly to U.S. cities and beyond to foreign countries. JAL has access to only one such route now — a New York and Europe run that hasn't been used for five years.

"The U.S. can fly here (to Japan) and then on to any other country in the world without limitation," complained Tudor of JAL. "We have no such freedom."

Paper reports irregularities in Carter transition

The Los Angeles Times
 WASHINGTON — With the flush of Jimmy Carter's victory last November came $2 million in federal funds, the most generous government allowance ever provided to smooth a President-elect's transition into the White House.

Carter and his lieutenants proclaimed that their transition would be a model of efficiency and order. "When the nation, through the news media, realizes the amount of work we've already done to prepare for the transition period," Carter said, "it will be recognized as an unprecedented effort."

And a month after his inauguration, Carter announced that $350,000 of the transition money remained unspent and would be returned to the U.S. Treasury. "I'm very pleased with the work of the transition team," he said, "I'm glad they were able to do their work in economical fashion."

Now, however, it appears Carter may have spoken too soon. The Los Angeles Times was learned that White House aides and other administration officials are trying to rectify some apparent violations of government rules in the handling of federal funds immediately before and after Carter took office.

In one instance, aides used leftover campaign money to provide post-inauguration paychecks to at least 20 persons working on White House projects unrelated to the campaign — an apparent violation of federal election law.

In another, officials in charge of Carter's transition funds set up a special payroll system for temporary employees and issued more than 300 salary checks outside normal government channels without deducting federal withholding taxes — an apparent violation of tax regulations.

To be sure, the amounts of money involved are small by government spending standards, and the apparent indiscretions occurred at a time when officials new in their jobs were confronted by the turmoil that inevitably accompanies a change of administrations.

But the two incidents indicate a sloppiness and corner-cutting that contrasts with Carter's standards of managerial efficiency and order.

Moreover, some transition expenditures examined by The Times seem at variance with Carter's personal tightfistedness — a frugality that has caused aides to call him "tight as a tick."

The transition team's practices and expenditures are now being examined by General Accounting Office auditors at the request of the House Government Operations Committee, which last year drafted the transition spending law.

The Justice Department's civil frauds section investigated some of the transition team's activities last summer and said it found "no evidence of fraud, misrepresentation or false claim." But, according to several sources, the department's criminal division is inquiring into at least one aspect of transition operations.

None of these inquiries directly touches Carter or his closest aides. But, depending on their outcome, the investigations could prove embarrassing for the administration. One already embarrassed official is Walter V. Kallaur, a former campaign aide who was financial administrator of Carter's transition team and worked briefly at the White House before taking a $47,500-a-year job as assistant administrator of the General Services Administration, the government's house-keeping agency.

While Kallaur says, "In all modesty I think we did a decent job in managing the public's funds" during the transition, he also acknowledges that "we dropped the ball" on occasion.

According to internal White House memos obtained by The Times, Kallaur was instrumental in getting the campaign committee paychecks for 20 persons, including himself, who after the inauguration worked at the White House on a personnel placement project.

Kallaur said in a recent interview that he sought at the time to have the 20 persons placed on the White House payroll, because transition funds could not legally be used to pay their salaries after the Jan. 20 inauguration.

This was refused, he said, because of "the mind set at the time" — an apparent reference to Carter's declaration that he intended to reduce the White House staff by 30 percent.

"We came up with the idea of using campaign funds — because we thought it made sense," Kallaur said. "In retrospect, it was probably stupid."

Payments to the 20 were listed as "staff payroll" by the campaign committee in a report it filed in April with the Federal Election Commission. The next committee report, filed in July, lumped together $15,911.99 in payments and classified them as "salary advances" owed to the campaign committee by the Carter transition group.

Kallaur acknowledged that the 20 persons were working on White House matters unrelated to the campaign and "should not have" been placed on the campaign payroll.

The 1976 federal election law, which spelled out the system for public financing of presidential campaigns, requires candidates to use the federal grants only "to defray qualified campaign expenses" and sets penalties of up to five years in prison and a $10,000 maximum fine for violations.

Douglas B. Huron, associate White House counsel, turned aside a reporter's questions on whether the campaign committee's payments in February and March violated election law.

"I'm not going to comment on legality," Huron said, "particularly when we have a pending request with Justice." He referred to the White House's request in May that the Justice Department's office of legal counsel give an opinion on how the money can be repaid to the campaign committee.

Huron said "it was the understanding of everyone" that the payments were "to be treated as an advance, that it was to be repaid fairly soon."

The question now, he said, is whether repayment should come from "a government source or non government source or what... it's no a situation where a payment was made that was not intended to be reimbursed. I think that's what is critical about it."

No mention of repayment, however, appeared in a pair of memos written by Kallaur in February arranging for the checks to be written by the campaign committee and sent to him for distribution. And the campaign committee, in the April report, did not record the payments under the "salary advance" category used to list small sums given to several other campaign workers.

Kallaur said that an internal campaign audit raised questions about the payments in April, and the matter was turned over to White House and Justice Department lawyers. "We gave them the factual situation and said, 'How can we possibly undo what we have done?'" he recalled. "We've been trying to get it resolved. We realize we dropped the ball there."

Several months earlier, as the transition team's financial administrator, Kallaur set up a checking account at a Washington bank to make payments and receive reimbursements for a series of fundraising trips Carter planned in behalf of the Democratic Party.

Carter's fund-raising journeys subsequently were canceled, but the checking account — created with cash transferred from GSA, the agency designated by law as "administrator" of transition funds — was used to make more than 800 payments totaling more than $300,000.

The money was used, for instance, to issue more than 300 checks totaling about $70,000 to a category of employees known as "casual labor." These were mostly college students and other temporary employees hired on an hourly basis to handle the deluge of mail received by Carter after his election.

Kallaur argues that it was impractical to follow regular government payroll procedures for these part-time employees because of the time required to process Treasury checks. "They could not wait for 10 days or seven days for a check," he said. "If they worked Thursday night, they expected to get paid on Friday."

In addition, he said, "to have GSA pay them... would entitle them to health benefits, retirement, the rest of that stuff, which is an added 10 percent overhead item."

Federal tax regulations, however, require that an employer deduct federal income taxes from paychecks unless the part-time employee signs a statement — officially, Form W-4E — certifying that he or she is exempt from withholding provisions because he or she owes no taxes for the past year and expects to owe none for the current year.

Ferret extinction feared

WASHINGTON (AP) — weasel-like predators Three years ago a pair of scurried across the black-footed ferrets earth before suddenly emerged from a prairie disappearing down burrow in South another burrow Dakota. The small Since that August 1974 dawn patrol, which lasted only a moment, the government has not sighted the animal in the wild.

The black-footed ferret is one of North America's most beautiful predators, with deep bronze fur, black feet and a black mask across its eyes that gives it a Lone Ranger appearance.

Biologists fear the animal is becoming extinct.

"If there are any left, it is questionable," says the man who made the sighting, Conrad Hillman of the federal Fish and Wildlife Service.

And there are problems with the only ferrets held in captivity.

Efforts to breed two pairs of the animals at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center in nearby Maryland have failed. One male, suffering from what is believed to be terminal cancer, is not expected to live more than nine months. And one of the females is reluctant to breed.

But biologists have not given up hope of saving the species.

"We want very much not to lose this one," says Keith Schreiner, associate director of the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Schreiner says he thinks there are still some ferrets roaming the wild.

"I am convinced that we have a small population of black-footed ferrets, and probably over a good-sized area," he says.

Even Hillman, who three years ago spotted the animal in a small dog colony tucked away in South Dakota's expanse of rolling grasslands, is "optimistic" some wild ferrets survive.

Ferrets are believed to have once ranged from southern Canada south to Texas and New Mexico. But the coming of the white man destroyed the once-vast prairie dog towns where they lived in abandoned burrows.

Now the question is how many — if any — ferrets are still around. And if some survive, whether a male and female live sufficiently close together to encounter each other during the mating season.

Schreiner says the wild population may have diminished to the point of no return.

Officials are considering artificially inseminating the reluctant female in captivity. Artificial propagation, designed to provide black-footed ferrets for release into the wild, may be the last hope for saving the small predators.

Hill nurse to take stand again

HOUSTON (AP) — A former nurse for the late Dr. John Hill was to return to the witness stand today after testifying she saw the plastic surgeon carry Marcia McKittrick to his car after performing "after hours" eye surgery on her.

Hedy Pustejovsky testified Thursday Miss McKittrick came in for cosmetic surgery the night of April 21, 1971. After the surgery, she testified, "Dr. Hill carried her out in his arms to his car."

Miss Pustejovsky testified in the $7.6 million wrongful death civil suit in which the family of Hill alleges his slaying was arranged by oil millionaire Ash Robinson, Hill's former father-in-law.

Miss McKittrick is serving a 10-year prison sentence after being convicted as an accomplice in the Hill slaying. Twice during the current trial she has testified Robinson supplied the money for the murder-for-pay slaying of Hill. She also testified she never met Hill.

The Hill family alleges in the suit that Robinson sought Hill's death as revenge for the 1969 death of his daughter, Joan Robinson Hill, the plastic surgeon's first wife. When he was shot to death in 1972, Hill was awaiting trial on charges he killed his wife through medical neglect.

No criminal charges have been filed against Robinson and he denies having anything to do with the Hill slaying.

Miss Pustejovsky, testifying outside the presence of the jury Thursday, said another of the doctor's female patients once told her Hill was "great" in bed.

Treaty said doomed if documents withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top Senate Republican says President Carter's Panama Canal treaty won't be approved unless the administration hands over secret documents on the United States' contested right to protect the waterway.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Thursday called on Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to turn over material on apparent contradictions in how the United States and Panama interpret the treaty.

Unless the documents are forthcoming, Baker said, he feels "there is no chance" the treaty will be approved by the necessary two-thirds Senate vote.

The State Department, meanwhile, said U.S. and Panamanian representatives met again Thursday to clarify each country's interpretation of the pact.

Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz, who negotiated the pact for the United States, met with Panama's ambassador, Gabriel Lewis Galindo.

A source said they discussed future priority wartime passage for American ships and the right of the United States to protect the waterway's neutrality militarily.

The points were not resolved, spokesman Kenneth Brown said, and the discussions are continuing.

In another development, the State Department backed off from a confrontation with Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who disclosed a confidential cable dealing with Panama's interpretation of the treaty.

Partly as a result of the Dole leak, Baker and several other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are applying increasing pressure to have the crucial but vaguely worded aspects of the treaty clarified.

Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., the committee chairman; Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J.; and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, all have said Panama's interpretation needs to be clarified.

Of particular concern is the question of whether the United States could intervene to protect the canal after it is turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

The cable, from a senior U.S. diplomat in Panama to Vance, quotes Panamanian negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara as saying Panamanian officials were disturbed by American officials' assertion that the agreement provides for armed U.S. intervention.

Panamanian leaders are quoted as saying this merely assures the United States that the canal would never be closed to its ships.

Pill unsafe, studies say

LONDON (AP) — Women 35 years and older who have taken birth control pills are far more likely to die of circulatory disease than women who have not, according to two British studies published today.

The studies, reported by the medical journal Lancet, surveyed 63,000 British women over a nine year period. Half in each study were current or former pill users; the other half had never taken oral contraceptives.

One survey of 46,000 women, conducted by the Royal College of General Practitioners, reported 24 deaths among women who had used the pill and five deaths among those who had not.

The other study, involving 17,000 women, reported nine deaths among pill-users and none by non-users. It was conducted by Prof. Martin Vessey of Oxford University's College of Obstetrics and Gynecologists.

The studies, both conducted under the auspices of Britain's Family Planning Association, said the death rate from circulatory diseases among pill users under 35 was 1 in 20,000. Both said the risk of circulatory-disease death among women 35 and older was greater among those who smoke or had taken the pills for five years or longer.

Dr. Ekke Kuenssberg and Dr. John Dewhurst, presidents of the institutions that conducted the studies,

Vietnamese, Cambodians reportedly fighting now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communist Vietnamese and Cambodian troops, allies in the Indochina war, are now battling over ground American troops once fought for, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The recent battalion-sized engagements are sending peasants who have already lived through years of war fleeing once more for their lives.

The sources said fighting flared in Tay Ninh and Dalat provinces late last month when Cambodian troops attacked inside Vietnam.

The Vietnamese reportedly committed elements of several divisions, along with fighterbombers, in an apparent flareup of their long-simmering border dispute.

One source said there were heavy casualties. Neither Cambodia nor Vietnam, Communist neighbors that have maintained outwardly friendly diplomatic relations, has publicly mentioned the fighting.

The two countries have been squabbling over their common border since shortly after the collapse of the South Vietnamese government in the spring of 1975.

Krueger says U.S. forces in Europe ill-equipped

DALLAS (AP) — The United States would be in a "pretty tough position" to win a major conventional war in Europe because forces there are ill-equipped, according to Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex.

The congressman told newsmen at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Thursday night there is a need to "reassess" the country's defense posture in Europe with respect to conventional weapons.

Krueger, an announced candidate for the U.S. Senate seat held by John Tower, R-Tex., said his concern was prompted by a recent series of Associated Press articles that stated America's ability to fight a major conventional war in Europe has been seriously weakened by shortages in weapons and munitions.

Although echoing a time-worn cry to trim the fat from the defense budget, Krueger said he favored the B-1 bomber, which the Carter administration opposes.

He said his call for "military accountability" of defense spending was enforced by interviews with high-ranking military leaders.

The congressman indicated congressional watchdogs should oversee a blanket reassessment of the country's ability to defend itself in the European Theater.

Krueger said his interviews showed, among other things, that the U.S. is "470,000 troops down in reserve strength from where we used to be."

He added that the European tank forces have been depleted when replacements were funneled to Israel to replace the vast number lost during the 1973 Mideast War.

While agreeing that the United States could ill afford to lose the nuclear arms race, Krueger said, "I believe it's time to get back to basics. If we learned nothing else from a military point of view in Vietnam, it was that the United States must be able to wage and win a major conventional war on the ground. And if we don't even have the basic elements in our military system complete, we cannot even hope to realize this goal."

Krueger acknowledged the difficulty in generating sufficient interest to reassess conventional military posture during peacetime but said he still plans to present his data to members of the House Armed Service Committee, the Defense Department and the Carter administration.

Government publications on nutrition criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a hearing of the federal government's role in nutrition education, first time ever, the Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker plans to spend $1 million to say two new studies, is Foreman joined in Richmond's criticism of the ways to convey effective federal agencies — some nutritional messages.

The government's nutrition publications are described as too simplistic in some cases and too complicated in others.

Two booklets are atrocious, so bad they could be replaced by a "good-looking yet informative poster," say Madison Avenue advertising experts.

The studies, by Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the Library of Congress, say 11 federal agencies operate about 30 nutrition education programs.

Publications, which account for a significant part of the $70 million cost, are among thousands of materials issued every year by the United States — one of the world's busiest printers.

One Library of Congress-VPI study found that pamphlets on infant feeding fail to address current concerns about breast feeding and new products.

In addition, federal agencies trying to spread the word about better nutrition rely on the printed word to reach consumers who do little reading, study officials say.

They also say the government distributes upper-high school and college-level pamphlets to the poorly educated.

The reports, along with comments by the advertising executives, were released Thursday by Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Agriculture Committee's consumer subcommittee.

Drug bust results in 2 arrests

JUNCTION, Tex. (AP) — U.S. Customs Service Agents arrested two men Thursday and seized a twin-engine plane, loaded with 30 gallons of Mescaline, a hallucinogen, and 1,200 pounds of marijuana, at an airstrip in this Southwest Texas town.

Customs Supervisor Al Wenzlaff said agents tracked the Piper Navajo aircraft from Corpus Christi to Mexico on Wednesday, then used air surveillance gear and three other planes to follow it when it reentered the U.S. between Brownsville and McAllen on Thursday.

The confiscated Mescaline could yield up to 10,000 doses with a street value of more than $100,000, a pharmacology expert said.

Bass defends sworn statement

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A blonde state witness in the Cullen Davis murder trial angrily defended today a sworn statement she gave investigators last year after a shooting spree at Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

"They typed up that statement at five o'clock in the morning. I was crying. Bubba was shot and crippled... what did you expect?" Beverly Bass, 19, declared.

At one point, Miss Bass told defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes: "If you are asking me if I was lying, no, sir. You're making it very difficult for me."

Haynes pointed out that Miss Bass said in her statement of Aug. 3, 1976,

"I heard a woman scream. I think I heard one shot. The man was walking in front of me."

Miss Bass testified previously she and her boyfriend heard a woman scream and other noises upon arriving at the mansion but before encountering the gunman.

"You are now telling the jury your sworn statement was not true?" Haynes asked.

"It was out of sequence," she replied.

The witness tearfully testified Thursday she used her sister's name to falsify records at a Fort Worth pregnancy clinic in 1975.

Miss Bass, glancing across the courtroom at her sister Pam, said she provided false information under oath about a "personal problem" because "I wanted to block this from my memory and I had."

With prosecutors accusing the defense of character assassination, Miss Bass, a key prosecution witness, faced her third round of grueling cross examination today in Davis' trial for the 1976 slaying of his young stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn.

"Beverly cannot understand what her personal problem has to do with the murder of a 12-year-old child," prosecutor Tolly Wilson declared outside the courtroom.

"It's straw-grasping time for the defense... and has absolutely no bearing on the facts of this case."

The blond Miss Bass was the third eye witness to name the millionaire industrialist as the gunman in black who killed two and wounded two last year at the $6 million Davis mansion.

The defendant's estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, was wounded, her lover, Stan Farr, 30, was slain and Miss Bass' boyfriend was crippled in the midnight gunfire.

In a crackling exchange Thursday with defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Miss Bass conceded she was untruthful when she said in a sworn deposition last December that she had not consulted with doctors about her "personal problem."

"It was not true," she admitted, bursting into tears and adding, "It was something I wanted to forget. And I had forgotten about it."

Midwest progress reported

NEW YORK (AP) — With Egypt reporting progress, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is sounding out Jordan today on a U.S. Israeli formula on a Middle East peace conference by Christmas.

Meanwhile, in what can be a significant move, the Palestine Liberation Organization hinted that there may be a breakthrough over Palestinian representation.

In the drive for peace talks, Vance appealed to the Arabs and Israel to modify their goals and "concentrate on those things which are essential and most important to the two sides."

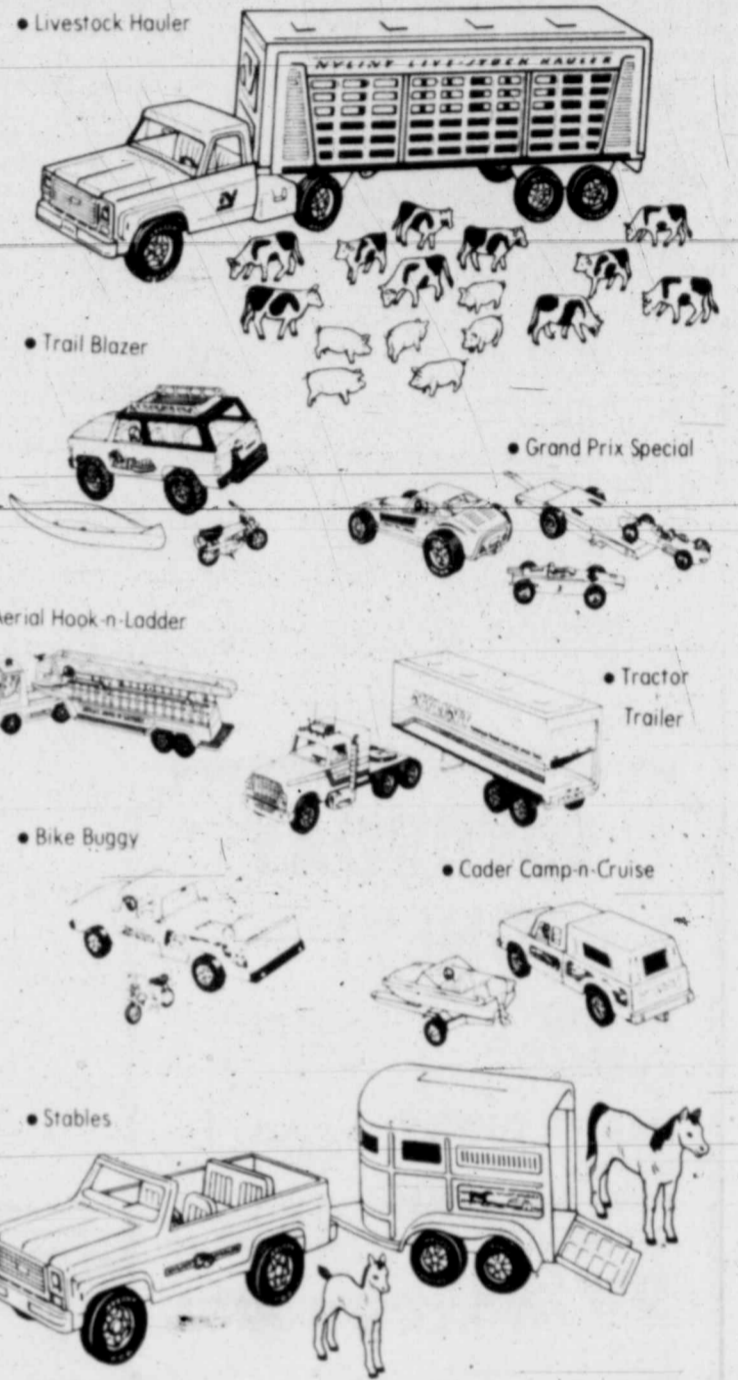

Vance's meeting with Foreign Minister Hassan Ibrahim of Jordan completes a round of talks with the three key Arab countries on the Geneva formula hammered out early Wednesday by President Carter and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan.

"Things are moving," Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said after a session late Thursday with Vance.

as a means to provide moderately priced housing to residents. He said that "while a housing problem is with us... it is not near the crisis proportions indicated by some."

Dillard said that in Odessa there is a housing vacancy rate of one-half of 1 per cent. And this low vacancy rate makes it particularly difficult for lower income people to find suitable housing.

The City of Odessa operates a rental assistance housing program under Section 8, Title II of the Housing and Community Development Act and, despite the shortage, has been able to place 400 persons in housing that meets the guidelines. The city is authorized to take 452 applicants under the $678,000 rent subsidy program, Dillard said.

By comparison, Abilene residents under the same program have not been as successful in locating suitable housing. Ms. Cohn said the housing authority is authorized to accept 250 households in the program, but that only about one-half that number are benefiting from the rent subsidy program and the rest are looking for suitable housing.

Cohn said that Abilene got in "on the ground floor" with the program, now required by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) as a condition for receiving Community Development Grants.

"It was a learning process for us as well as HUD," Ms. Cohn said.

She said the program is popular with landlords as it provides them with a dependable source of income and a tenant that tends to stay for a long period of time.

When asked if the rental assistance plan causes a "disincentive" to earn more money among the program participants, Dillard said that because the income levels of the participants are so low he doubted whether the program "motivated or demotivated" them.

When asked if there was much cheating on the rental assistance program, Dillard said: "Yes, but not a whole lot. We have four ladies who earn income in a questionable way. But the less than standard conditions they live in makes him feel they aren't 'ripping us off' too bad. He estimated the percentage of cheaters on the program to be less than one per cent."

Ms. Cohn said that even that figure was "a little high" for the percentage of those who cheat on the Abilene rent subsidy program.

Dillard said the average rental assistance for Odessa residents on the program is $92 a month. And $181 a month is the highest sum paid out under the program.

Civil rights probe sought after verdict

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — Mexican-American leaders, enraged over light verdicts returned against two former Houston policemen charged in the death of a Mexican-American prisoner, have begun seeking immediate federal intervention in the case.

Terry Denson, 27, and Stephen Orlando, 21, originally indicted for murder, awaited sentencing today after their conviction Thursday on criminal negligent homicide — a misdemeanor — in the drowning of Joe Campos Torres, 23.

The jury listened to characters witnesses Thursday and then deliberated for several hours on the punishment phase before recessing until today. They reported to the judge several times they were deadlocked but were urged to reach a decision.

The verdict was one of the lightest the jury could have returned. Criminal negligent homicide is punishable by up to one year in prison and a fine of up to $2,000.

The two were accused of beating and pushing Campos-Torres off a 16-foot embankment into the murky waters of Buffalo Bayou in the pre-dawn hours of May 6.

Testimony showed he was beaten by a group of police officers following his arrest for drunkenness before he ended up in the bayou. Campos Torres' body was found two days later.

Houston Police Chief Harry Caldwell said justice prevailed over demagoguery in the case.

"The Mexican-American community is angry," said Ruben Bonilla, state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens, who added that the Justice Department should immediately prosecute the case under civil rights statutes.

How courts and police deal with juveniles who have come to their attention usually is hidden from public view because of laws keeping proceedings and records closed.

But, recently, reporter Linda Schaffrina was allowed to attend several juvenile hearings and see how decisions are made as to which cases should be handled through the courts and which should be resolved informally. The permission was given with the consent of all those involved, on the condition that names or facts that might identify individual youths not be used.

'TV trial' youth guilty

By FRED BAYLES

MIAMI (AP) — Ronny Zamora faces at least 25 years in prison for killing an 83-year-old woman. But the 15-year-old boy's attorney still contends his defense of "television insanity" based on a frontier in American law.

After two hours of deliberation, the jury of nine men and three women returned to the courtroom and to the glare of television lights late Thursday, just before midnight, to pronounce Zamora guilty of first-degree murder.

A minimum sentence of 25 years in jail was established at the outset when the prosecution said it would not seek the death penalty.

"It's very unfortunate that the jury is sending this very young boy to a state penitentiary where he will become a target of horrible offenses," said defense attorney Ellis Rubin.

"The appellate court should hear and consider this case because I think the issue presented will forge a new frontier in American jurisprudence," Rubin said in announcing that he will appeal the verdict.

Zamora, a slender junior high school student, appeared pale and shaken as he heard an assistant court clerk read the jury's decisions.

He was also found guilty of burglary, armed robbery and possession of a firearm during commission of a felony. Circuit Judge

Paul Baker set sentencing for Nov. 7. "She's lost her child," said Rubin as he led Yolanda Zamora, the boy's mother, from the courtroom. "It's time to go home."

The 52-year-old attorney attracted national attention by pleading Zamora innocent by reason of "involuntary television intoxication."

At one point, Rubin subpoenaed actor Telly Savalas of the television series "Kojak" to testify on the effects of TV violence. However, the subpoena was withdrawn.

Rubin said Zamora had been conditioned by television to shoot his next-door neighbor, Elinor Haggart, when the elderly woman caught him and another person ransacking her Miami Beach home.

The trial of Darrell Agrella, 14, the other person accused in the case, begins today.

"I wonder how many murders Ronny Zamora saw before he wound up in Elinor Haggart's living room," Rubin said in his closing arguments earlier Thursday. "If they sell deodorant and automobiles and beer in 30 seconds, imagine what 30 minutes of violence can do, repeated again and again and again."

His comments were recorded by television and still cameras under a one-year camera-in-the-courtroom experiment being conducted by the Florida Supreme Court. Major portions of the trial had been broadcast in South Florida over the past two weeks.

Ronny Zamora

Asst. State Atty. Tom Headley, the chief prosecutor in the case, dismissed the premise of Zamora's defense.

The prosecution said Zamora executed the woman with her own gun when she insisted on going to the police.

"I don't feel it was a terribly important question of law raised by the defense," said Headley. He said the verdict "certainly establishes, at least in this community, that people won't allow crime to be excused by television violence."

Mandel sentencing today

BALTIMORE (AP) — Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel was to return to a federal courtroom today to be sentenced for accepting lavish gifts in return for his once-considerable political influence.

Mandel, 57, and five codefendants, convicted of mail fraud and racketeering after a 2½-month trial last summer, were to appear before U.S. District Court Judge Robert L. Taylor.

Mandel was to have been suspended from the governorship upon sentencing. He would regain the job only if his conviction were overturned before the end of his term of office in January 1979.

With no apparent source of income, Mandel had resisted either resigning or applying for a state pension.

Acting Gov. Blair Lee recently said Mandel does not have "two nickels to rub together."

His codefendants are W. Dale Hess, Irvin Kovens, Ernest N. Corey, Jr., and brothers William A. and Harry W. Rodgers III.

Mandel moved from the governor's mansion Thursday, his second move from the executive residence in four years.

Many observers of Maryland politics believe Mandel's fall from power began the first time he moved, on July 4, 1973.

That day Mandel ended years of speculation by announcing he was leaving his wife, Barbara, after more than 30 years of marriage.

"I am in love with another woman, Mrs. Jeanne Dorsey, and I intend to marry her," said the governor flatly.

But Barbara Oberfeld-Mandel did not make it easy.

She retorted that she was Maryland's first lady, and that she intended to stay in the governor's mansion. The stalemate continued for six months after Mandel moved out.

The couple finally agreed on a divorce settlement, and Mandel returned to the mansion in December 1973.

At his trial, testimony revealed that Mandel, with an annual salary of $25,000 a year, borrowed heavily in order to free himself to marry Mrs. Dorsey.

After the conviction, several jurors commented that they felt sorry for Mandel. Some thought he was basically a good man who had been desperate to buy himself out of a bad marriage.

Citizen's award goes to Odessa CPA Bill Elms

ODESSA — Bill G. Elms, who has been serving Odessa "with dignity and understanding and hard work," Thursday night was presented with the outstanding citizen's award.

The presentation came before 550 people attending the Odessa Chamber of Commerce's annual banquet in the Ector County Coliseum.

Elms, 42, a former chamber board chairman, is a certified public accountant and a 25-year resident of Odessa.

He is a former Jaycee, a one-time (1966-74) Ector County commissioner and is active in civic, cultural and service organizations.

Odessa attorney W. O. Shafer emceed the event.

The chamber's outgoing board chairman, Bill Pettit, recounted the chamber's accomplishments in the past year.

Not all of the chamber's objectives in the past year were realized, Pettit said.

"If you accomplish all of your goals, you've set your goals too low," he said.

"Odessa is in the midst of the greatest prosperity that this community has ever seen," Pettit said.

"We must make things happen," he added.

Bill G. Elms

chairman, George Haley, paid a tribute to Pettit.

"We salute you for a job well done and extend our thanks," Haley said.

Theme of the Thursday night program was "Progress with People Working Together."

More minimum wage law changes pondered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate is considering further changes in the minimum wage law after voting to increase the present $2.30-an-hour floor by $1.10 over the next four years.

The vote Thursday for higher wages was the second congressional victory of the day for organized labor. Earlier, the House acted to make it easier to organize workers and to punish companies that break the law to keep unions out.

Senators voted 76-14 for a plan to increase the minimum wage to $2.65 an hour on Jan. 1, 1978, to $2.90 on Jan. 1, 1979, to $3.15 an hour on Jan. 1, 1980 and to $3.40 an hour on Jan. 1, 1981.

A key supporter of the plan said a worker supporting a nonfarm family of four through a fulltime minimum wage job in 1981 would fall 5 per cent under the federal poverty level.

Continuing work on the bill today, the Senate scheduled votes on a controversial proposal for a lower minimum pay for teenagers and a plan to make bigger businesses exempt from paying the minimum wage.

A companion minimum wage bill passed by the House on Sept. 15 would increase the minimum to $2.65 Jan. 1, 1978, to $2.85 on Jan. 1, 1979 and to $3.05 on Jan. 1, 1980.

Differences in the two bills will have to be worked out in a House-Senate conference committee.

Meanwhile, business lobbyists said they would try to force changes in the Senate in the House-passed labor law legislation they say will push American workers into unions against their will.

The House vote shows the country is heading toward a labor-controlled government similar to that of the United Kingdom," said Clarence B. Randall of the National Action Committee on Labor Law Reform.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill called the bill "labor's first victory in the labor relations area in 42 years," and business spokesmen conceded labor had won all it sought on the issue.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said after the 257-163 vote that the Democratic leadership had prevailed in Congress "in the face of the outrageous lies and distortions about the bill used by rightwing opponents ... who were backed by business interests."

Backers of the measure said it now is cheaper for anti-union companies to violate labor laws than to obey them, because there aren't penalties strong enough to outweigh the goal of keeping unions out.

The bill would call for financial penalties against labor law violators and grant reinstatement with double back pay to workers fired illegally during a union organizing effort.

The measure also calls for worker compensation in cases in which employees vote for union representation but their company unlawfully refuses to negotiate.

In addition, unions or businesses found guilty of repeated labor law violations could be barred from receiving federal contracts for up to three years.

She plans on having Midland at fingertips

Susan Suggs more than fancies those long, painted, parlor-kept fingernails.

She simply adores what they can do for her ... and to womanhood, as she views it from the fingertip.

Why? Because, she seems to say, hands are next to the Venus in every woman. And nails can be the 10-fold enhancer. "One of the most feminine things about a woman is her hands," said Miss Suggs, who has painted nails of her own. "They are the most sensuous thing about a woman."

As for those pampered nails, well, from her standpoint, "There is just nothing more feminine," she ventured to say. "It's just like perfume; it makes you beautiful."

Susan Suggs' fascination with fingernails is not just a passing fancy. It's an enterprising affair.

In a month or so, she plans to introduce to Midland and environs Juliet's exclusive techniques of "fingernail wrapping."

It'll be for women who can afford it and who just might want the kind of slicked-up nails that manicurist Juliet prepared for the Hollywood stars back in the 1940s.

"She (the late Juliet) is the one who did all of the stars in Hollywood of the '40s" and earlier, she said. Greta Garbo was one of Juliet's regulars. And high-stepping and glittering performers such as Cher and Barbra Streisand get their long nails styled by the Juliet method.

Now, thanks to Juliet and to her followers, women whose names aren't

Deregulation said impetus to boom

Dillard, Butler, and Carol McDavid Cohn, Abilene housing program specialist, spoke at the forum "Housing: Problems and Solutions." Among those present for the discussion were all six members of the Midland City Council.

Butler said construction was begun in 1974 at 184 residential sites, and this increased to 653 housing starts in 1975, and shot up to 1,138 housing starts in 1976.

So far during 1977, new single family dwelling construction starts have averaged 46 per month, Butler said.

Coping with this growth is "going to challenge the community as well as the city staff to come up with innovative ways to solve the housing problem," Butler said.

During the session, City Councilman Carroll M. Thomas noted that despite the boom conditions in Midland, housing is available in the $30,000 range. He said there were 57 Midland houses listed for sale at $30,000 or less in the classified section of a newspaper recently.

Mayor Ernest Angelo Jr. added that the city has encouraged the development of mobile home residences in many areas of the city

Hill nurse to take stand again

HOUSTON (AP) — A former nurse for the late Dr. John Hill was to return to the witness stand today after testifying she saw the plastic surgeon carry Marcia McKittrick to his car after performing "after hours" eye surgery on her.

Hedy Pustejovsky testified Thursday Miss McKittrick came in for cosmetic surgery the night of April 21, 1971. After the surgery, she testified, "Dr. Hill carried her out in his arms to his car."

Miss Pustejovsky testified in the $7.6 million wrongful death civil suit in which the family of Hill alleges his slaying was arranged by oil millionaire Ash Robinson, Hill's former father-in-law.

Miss McKittrick is serving a 10-year prison sentence after being convicted as an accomplice in the Hill slaying. Twice during the current trial she has testified Robinson supplied the money for the murder-for-pay slaying of Hill. She also testified she never met Hill.

The Hill family alleges in the suit that Robinson sought Hill's death as revenge for the 1969 death of his daughter, Joan Robinson Hill, the plastic surgeon's first wife. When he was shot to death in 1972, Hill was awaiting trial on charges he killed his wife through medical neglect.

No criminal charges have been filed against Robinson and he denies having anything to do with the Hill slaying.

Miss Pustejovsky, testifying outside the presence of the jury Thursday, said another of the doctor's female patients once told her Hill was "great" in bed.

Treaty said doomed if documents withheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The top Senate Republican says President Carter's Panama Canal treaty won't be approved unless the administration hands over secret documents on the United States' contested right to protect the waterway.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Thursday called on Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to turn over material on apparent contradictions in how the United States and Panama interpret the treaty.

Unless the documents are forthcoming, Baker said, he feels "there is no chance" the treaty will be approved by the necessary two-thirds Senate vote.

The State Department, meanwhile, said U.S. and Panamanian representatives met again Thursday to clarify each country's interpretation of the pact.

Ellsworth Bunker and Sol Linowitz, who negotiated the pact for the United States, met with Panama's ambassador, Gabriel Lewis Galindo.

A source said they discussed future priority wartime passage for American ships and the right of the United States to protect the waterway's neutrality militarily.

The points were not resolved, spokesman Kenneth Brown said, and the discussions are continuing.

In another development, the State Department backed off from a confrontation with Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., who disclosed a confidential cable dealing with Panama's interpretation of the treaty.

Partly as a result of the Dole leak, Baker and several other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee are applying increasing pressure to have the crucial but vaguely worded aspects of the treaty clarified.

Sen. John Sparkman, D-Ala., the committee chairman; Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J.; and Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, all have said Panama's interpretation needs to be clarified.

Of particular concern is the question of whether the United States could intervene to protect the canal after it is turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

The cable, from a senior U.S. diplomat in Panama to Vance, quotes Panamanian negotiator Carlos Lopez Guevara as saying Panamanian officials were disturbed by American officials' assertion that the agreement provides for armed U.S. intervention.

Panamanian leaders are quoted as saying this merely assures the United States that the canal would never be closed to its ships.

Pill unsafe, studies say

LONDON (AP) — Women 35 years and older who have taken birth control pills are far more likely to die of circulatory disease than women who have not, according to two British studies published today.

The studies, reported by the medical journal Lancet, surveyed 63,000 British women over a nine year period. Half in each study were current or former pill users; the other half had never taken oral contraceptives.

One survey of 46,000 women, conducted by the Royal College of General Practitioners, reported 24 deaths among women who had used the pill and five deaths among those who had not.

The other study, involving 17,000 women, reported nine deaths among pill-users and none by non-users. It was conducted by Prof. Martin Vessey of Oxford University's College of Obstetrics and Gynecologists.

The studies, both conducted under the auspices of Britain's Family Planning Association, said the death rate from circulatory diseases among pill users under 35 was 1 in 20,000.

Both said the risk of circulatory-disease death among women 35 and older was greater among those who smoke or had taken the pills for five years or longer.

Dr. Ekje Kuenssberg and Dr. John Dewhurst, presidents of the institutions that conducted the studies,

Vietnamese, Cambodians reportedly fighting now

WASHINGTON (AP) — Communist Vietnamese and Cambodian troops, allies in the Indochina war, are now battling over ground American troops once fought for, U.S. intelligence sources say.

The recent battalion-sized engagements are sending peasants who have already lived through years of war fleeing once more for their lives.

The sources said fighting flared in Tay Ninh and Dalat provinces late last month when Cambodian troops attacked inside Vietnam.

The Vietnamese reportedly committed elements of several divisions, along with fighterbombers, in an apparent flareup of their long-simmering border dispute.

One source said there were heavy casualties. Neither Cambodia nor Vietnam, Communist neighbors that have maintained outwardly friendly diplomatic relations, has publicly mentioned the fighting.

The two countries have been squabbling over their common border since shortly after the collapse of the South Vietnamese government in the spring of 1975.

issued a statement strongly urging women over 35 to reconsider using oral contraceptives.

But they said "there is no evidence to justify any changes in pill use" for women under 30.

They advised women between 30 and 34 to "with their doctors, think again" about taking the pill.

Less than two months after North Vietnam completed its conquest of the South, Hanoi's forces reportedly grabbed several small islands that Cambodia also claimed in the Gulf of Thailand.

In that action, the Vietnamese were said to have used American-built light bombers and naval vessels captured from Saigon's defeated troops.

Although the long Indochina war has been over for more than two years, Hanoi still maintains its army at wartime strength, with most of its 24 or 25 divisions kept in the conquered South.

While a few have returned North, sources have said, most have been kept in the South for security reasons and to help in the economic reconstruction.

U.S. intelligence sources have received reports of persistent hit-and-run warfare waged against the victors by holdout South Vietnamese soldiers and other resisters.

U.S. analysts say it is only a matter of time before the Vietnamese army eliminates the bands, but these analysts believe the problem will be around for years to come.

Krueger says U.S. forces in Europe ill-equipped

DALLAS (AP) — The United States would be in a "pretty tough position" to win a major conventional war in Europe because forces there are ill-equipped, according to Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex.

The congressman told newsmen at Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport Thursday night there is a need to "reassess" the country's defense posture in Europe with respect to conventional weapons.

Krueger, an announced candidate for the U.S. Senate seat held by John Tower, R-Tex., said his concern was prompted by a recent series of Associated Press articles that stated America's ability to fight a major conventional war in Europe has been seriously weakened by shortages in weapons and munitions.

Although echoing a time-worn cry to trim the fat from the defense budget, Krueger said he favored the B-1 bomber, which the Carter administration opposes.

He said his call for "military accountability" of defense spending was enforced by interviews with high-ranking military leaders.

The congressman indicated congressional watchdogs should oversee a blanket reassessment of the country's ability to defend itself in the European Theater.

Krueger said his interviews showed, among other things, that the U.S. is "470,000 troops down in reserve strength from where we used to be." He added that the European tank forces have been depleted when replacements were funneled to Israel to replace the vast number lost during the 1973 Mideast War.

While agreeing that the United States could ill afford to lose the nuclear arms race, Krueger said, "I believe it's time to get back to basics. If we learned nothing else from a military point of view in Vietnam, it was that the United States must be able to wage and win a major conventional war on the ground. And if we don't even have the basic elements in our military system complete, we cannot even hope to realize this goal."

Krueger acknowledged the difficulty in generating sufficient interest to reassess conventional military posture during peacetime but said he still plans to present his data to members of the House Armed Service Committee, the Defense Department and the Carter administration.

Government publications on nutrition criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — At a hearing of the federal government's role in nutrition education, Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carol Tucker said two new studies, in a somewhat amateurish and misses its target.

The government's nutrition publications are described as too simplistic in some cases and too complicated in others.

Two booklets are atrocious, so bad they could be replaced by a "good-looking yet informative poster," say Madison Avenue advertising experts.

The studies, by Virginia Polytechnic Institute and the Library of Congress, say 11 federal agencies operate about 30 nutrition education programs.

Publications, which account for a significant part of the $70-million cost, are among thousands of materials issued every year by the United States — one of the world's busiest printers.

One Library of Congress-VPI study found that pamphlets on infant feeding fail to address current concerns about breast feeding and new products.

In addition, federal agencies trying to spread the word about better nutrition rely on the printed word to reach consumers who do little reading, study officials say.

They also say the government distributes upper-high school and college-level pamphlets to the poorly educated.

of which she heads. She said that for the first time ever, the Agriculture Department plans to spend $1 million in 1978 to find the best ways to convey effective nutritional messages.

Drug bust results in 2 arrests

JUNCTION, Tex. (AP) — U.S. Customs Service Agents arrested two men Thursday and seized a twin-engine plane, loaded with 30 gallons of mescaline, a hallucinogen, and 1,200 pounds of marijuana, at an airstrip in this Southwest Texas town.

Customs Supervisor Al Wenzlaff said agents tracked the Piper Navajo aircraft from Corpus Christi to Mexico on Wednesday, then used air surveillance gear and three other planes to follow it when it reentered the U.S. between Brownsville and McAllen on Thursday.

The confiscated mescaline could yield up to 10,000 doses with a street value of more than $100,000, a pharmacology expert said.

as a means to provide moderately priced housing to residents. He said that "while a housing problem is with us... it is not near the crisis proportions indicated by some."

Dillard said that in Odessa there is a housing vacancy rate of one-half of 1 per cent. And this low vacancy rate makes it particularly difficult for lower-income people to find suitable housing.

The City of Odessa operates a rental assistance housing program under Section 8, Title II of the Housing and Community Development Act and, despite the shortage, has been able to place 400 persons in housing that meets the guidelines. The city is authorized to take 432 applicants under the $676,000 rent subsidy program, Dillard said.

By comparison, Abilene residents under the same program have not been as successful in locating suitable housing. Ms. Cohn said the housing authority is authorized to accept 250 households in the program, but that only about one-half that number are benefiting from the rent subsidy program and the rest are looking for suitable housing.

Cohn said that Abilene got in "on the ground floor" with the program, now required by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) as a condition for receiving

Bass admits using false name

By MIKE COCHRAN

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — A tearful young state witness testified in the Cullen Davis murder trial that she used her sister's name to falsify a Fort Worth pregnancy clinic record in 1975.

Beverly Bass, 19, glancing across the courtroom at her sister Pam, said she previously lied under oath about a "personal problem" because, "I wanted to block this from my memory and I had."

stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn. "Beverly cannot understand what her personal problem has to do with the murder of a 12-year-old child," prosecutor Tolly Wilson declared outside the courtroom.

"It's straw-grasping time for the defense... and has absolutely no bearing on the facts of this case."

The blond Miss Bass was the third eye witness to name the millionaire industrialist as the gunman in black who killed two and wounded two last year at the $6 million Davis mansion.

The defendant's estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, was wounded, her lover, Stan Farr, 30, was slain and Miss Bass' boyfriend was crippled in the midnight gunfire.

with defense lawyer Richard "Racehorse" Haynes. Miss Bass conceded she was untruthful when she said in a sworn deposition — last December that she had not consulted with doctors about her "personal problem."

"It was not true," she admitted, bursting into tears and adding, "It was something I wanted to forget. And I had forgotten about it."

"Is it not true," Haynes asked, "that you preferred one more time to forget the episode of August 1975 until the noon recess when you learned the records had been subpoenaed?"

"No sir," she snapped. Haynes' reference was to records obtained this week from Pregnancy Control Inc. of Fort Worth. Defense lawyers indicated the questioning was designed to show that Miss Bass and Mrs. Davis, who accompanied her to the clinic, were close friends and that Miss Bass was obligated to the blonde socialite.

Miss Bass, contradicting previous testimony by Mrs. Davis, said Mrs. Davis loaned her money to resolve the "problem" and that she intended to pay her back.

Challenging the relevance of the loan and the "problem" to the murder case, Wilson, outside the courtroom, said, "I can't see why anyone would believe she would attempt to pin a murder rap on somebody for a $150 loan... but they're using this to beat her down, and beat her down, and beat her down."

Midwest progress reported

NEW YORK (AP) — With Egypt reporting progress, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is sounding out Jordan today on a U.S. Israeli formula on a Middle East peace conference by Christmas.

Meanwhile, in what can be a significant move, the Palestine Liberation Organization hinted that there may be a breakthrough over Palestinian representation.

In the drive for peace talks, Vance appealed to the Arabs and Israel to modify their goals and "concentrate on those things which are essential and most important to the two sides."

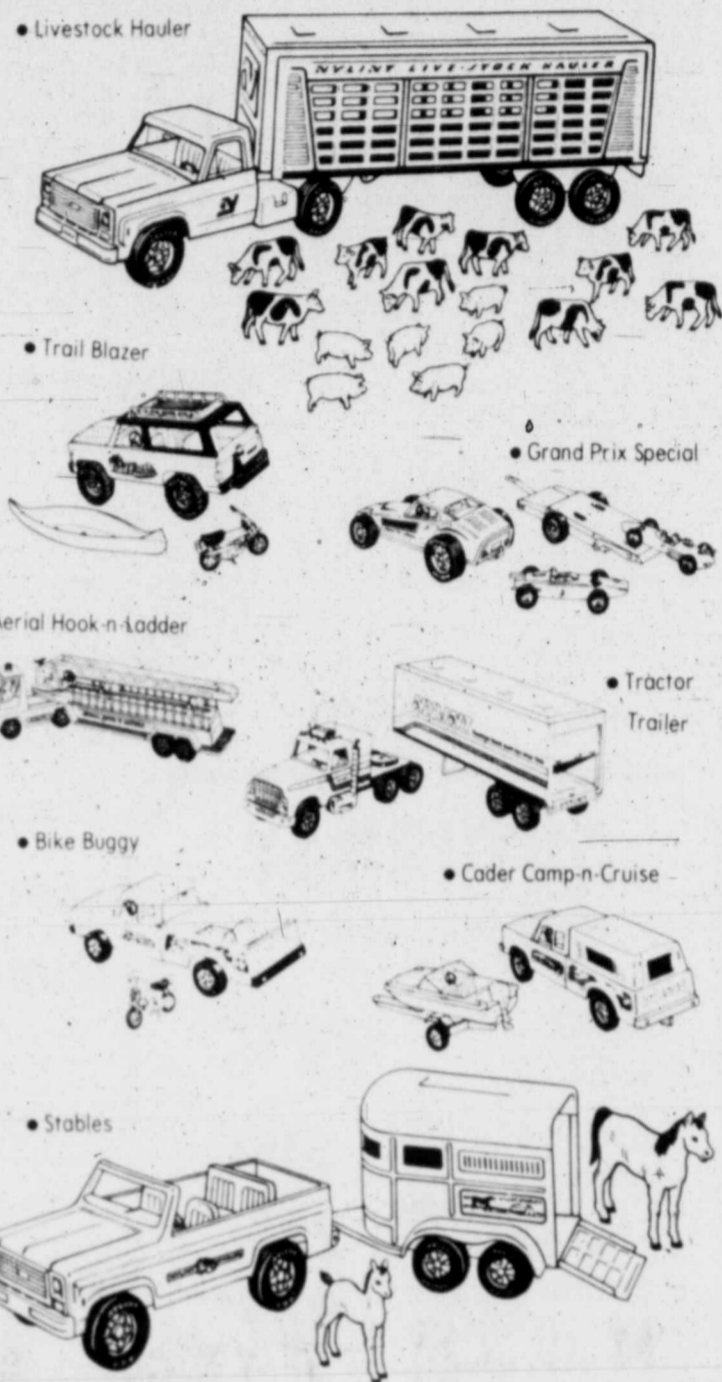

Vance's meeting with Foreign Minister Hassan Ibrahim of Jordan completes a round of talks with the three key Arab countries on the Geneva formula hammered out early Wednesday by President Carter and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Davan.

"Things are moving," Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy said after a session late Thursday with Vance.

Wine feud agreement reached

By CARL CANNON
The Los Angeles Times

The tangled affairs of the Charles Krug Winery moved a long way toward becoming unsnarled when the long-feuding Mondavi brothers announced an agreement on the $48 million property.

After more than a decade of personal and legal battling culminating in a bidding contest among a host of major U.S. corporations, the brothers decided to keep Krug within the family.

Under the agreement in principle, Robert Mondavi and his sister, Mrs. Helen Ventura, will sell their interest in Krug, one of the nation's largest wineries, to their brother Peter and a second sister, Mrs. Mary Westbrook.

Resolution of the agreement, which was announced in San Francisco, is subject to a number of contingencies, including a favorable tax ruling, approval of the Napa County Superior Court and completion of financial arrangements by Peter. Final execution of a definitive agreement is expected to take several months.

The fought-over family winery has been under the direction of a three-member board of directors since the Napa court last September. The board will continue to operate the St. Helena winery until final resolution of the dispute.

The feud between the two brothers flared publicly in 1965 when the brothers came to blows. The break led Robert to leave home and build his own winery in Oakville.

The feud had even led the two to insist on different pronunciations of their surname. Peter keeping the anglicized Mon-day-vy adopted by his father on arrival in this country, and Robert sticking to the original Italian pronunciation of Mon-dah-vy.

The dispute has been before the Napa court since 1972 when Robert filed suit charging Peter with mismanagement of Krug in which he — Robert — still held a 24 per cent interest.

Trial of the suit and a cross-complaint filed by Peter against Robert and his partner, Rainier Companies Inc. of Seattle, Wash., ended last August when Napa Superior Court Judge Robert Carter ordered the Krug Winery sold because of irreconcilable differences between the major stockholders, principally Peter and Robert.

The order set off a bidding contest with such firms as Coca-Cola, PepsiCo, Hiram Walker, Quaker Oats and Anheuser-Busch reportedly interested in acquiring Krug.

It has been widely speculated that Robert Mondavi was anxious to sell his interest in Krug to obtain funds for purchasing Rainier's interest in the Robert Mondavi Winery. An attorney for Robert, however, said that "there are no such negotiations at this time."

Both brothers had told The Los Angeles Times in April that their long feud was at an end and they were sincerely endeavoring to reach a meeting of the minds for the purchase of Krug. The stumbling block, according to sources in the industry, was Peter's difficulty in acquiring enough capital to buy out his brother.

Western senators reassured

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met for the first time Thursday with a coalition of western senators and satisfied them that the federal government has no intention of taking over state rights to water.

"We are very much relieved," said Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., after the session, also attended by Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus. Laxalt said Carter told the group he has no intention of intruding into state affairs.

"Much has been accomplished at this meeting," Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., declared.

The senators said the President, whose aides are working on an administration water policy, has set no specific deadline for completing it. But they indicated Carter hoped to have most of the information for it gathered by late November.

Some members of the bi-partisan group urged Carter to wait at least a year to do anything about dissatisfaction with a law limiting ownership of land using federal irrigation water to 320 acres for a farmer and his wife.

The 1902 law, which has never been enforced, originally was designed as an incentive to homesteaders, Hayakawa said. He noted that its enforcement would severely restrict the large farm operations that technology has fostered in the West.

A federal court of appeals recently upheld the law. Carter declared in an interview afterward that the law is bad and should be changed. But he said that in the meantime he has no choice but to enforce it.

"We are advising that nothing be done for at least a year," said Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont. "That would give the people time to approach Congress for a solution."

Melcher said the land limit is "not just a matter for the courts but for Congress."

As for water, Melcher said Carter is moving too fast. "He hasn't talked to the people of the West sufficiently," the senator declared.

"We hope the President will come out with a statement that will be a comprehensive study ... in concert with the people of the West," Melcher said. He added that information should be supplied for the policy by western governors and legislatures.

Laxalt said there was no indication that Carter would let his disagreements with him over the Panama Canal treaty interfere with matters of specific interest to the West. Laxalt is opposed to the treaty, which Carter wants the Senate to ratify.

"I think he tried very hard not to let disagreements affect our agreements or disagreements about other matters," Hayakawa said.

Trustees to arrive

HOUSTON (AP) — Three trustees appointed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were to arrive here Oct. 24 to investigate and reorganize the Houston branches of the NAACP.

Control of the 11 NAACP branches has been in contention since last February when the Rev. C. Anderson Davis and national board members clashed over the authority of the Metropolitan Council which oversees local NAACP activities and is headed by Davis.

The NAACP board of directors voted Sept. 12 to strip Davis of all elective or appointive power in the civil rights group for the next five years.

The board directed Davis to turn over all books, records and office keys of the local NAACP operation. It also asked for the charters of all Houston branches by Oct. 2 so four new charters for reorganized branches could be issued.

THE PANAMA CANAL GIVEAWAY!

Threatened with "another Vietnam" in our Panama Canal Zone, the Carter Administration has caved in to the threats and demands of Panama's Marxist dictator, President Omar Torrijos, and has negotiated a treaty which not only gives away our canal, but actually pays the virtually bankrupt Panamanian Government to take it from us.

DID YOU KNOW...

...that like most leftist countries, Panama is broke. Interest on loans will make up 39% of Panama's entire government budget this year.

...that Panama, with its turbulent, unstable history of over 50 different governments since it was founded in 1903, owes over $2,700,000,000 (Two Billion, Seven Hundred Million Dollars) to U.S. banks and their foreign branches, which have been loaning money to keep Torrijos' Communist government afloat for the last 10 years.

And that the only way these banks will probably ever be repaid these large sums of money is for the U.S. Government to give Panama an extra $50,000,000 a year for the use of our own canal.

...that Sol Linowitz who was one of the two chief negotiators who worked out the new giveaway treaty with the Panamanians was a member of the Board of Directors of the Marine Midland Bank, Inc., in New York City, which is one of the banks that loaned large sums of money to Panama.

...that not only will the giveaway treaty with Panama cost us $50,000,000 a year in extra payments to the Government of Panama, but Torrijos has already made it clear that he intends to sharply increase the toll charged on goods passing through the Canal.

...that according to the respected organization, Freedom House, Panama has the worst record on Human Rights in all of Latin America. You've heard the liberals and the Carter Administration severely criticize countries like Chile and Haiti for their poor Human Rights records — but you've never heard even one peep about the miserable Human Rights record of the Torrijos dictatorship in Panama!

...that over one-third of all cargo shipped through the Canal is energy related, and that much of our Alaska oil will probably be shipped from the West Coast to the east through the Canal.

We American taxpayers will not only be soaked for the additional $50,000,000 plus a year our Government will be paying to the Panamanian Government, but we'll also be forced to pay higher prices for all goods shipped through the Canal — and all of it going to Panama's pro-Communist dictatorship.

...that it cost ten times as much to sail a ship around the tip of South America as it does to sail it through the Panama Canal at the present toll rates.

The present or any future dictator of Panama could easily double, triple, or even quadruple the toll rates — just like the oil sheiks raised the price of oil 400% in one year — and we'd have no choice but pay it.

And that would sharply increase the price of most things you buy, just like the increase in oil prices did. 70% of all shipping which uses the canal either begins or ends on U.S. soil.

...that American Control of the Panama Canal is absolutely vital to our national defense. Except for our 14 "super-carriers" our entire Navy fleet can and does easily travel through the Panama Canal.

This gives our Navy great flexibility. Without the Canal, the U.S. would have to build a much larger "two-ocean" Navy, duplicating many bases and ships. We taxpayers would again be soaked for the cost of more ships, more bases, and the building of more harbors.

In 1803, we bought the land that now makes up the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and parts of Montana, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma from the French for $15 million. If the French threatened us with a guerilla war today, should we give them back this land — and even pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it back?

In 1867, we bought Alaska from the Russian Czar for $7.2 million. Should we give Alaska back to the Soviet Union today, and pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it off our hands?

In 1917, we bought the Virgin Islands from Denmark so a naval base could be built to protect the Panama Canal from German attack during World War I. Should we give the Virgin Islands back to the Danes today, and pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it back?

And, in 1903 we bought the Panama Canal and the American Canal zone through a treaty signed with the newly independent Republic of Panama, and the treaty guaranteed large annual payments to them. Panama now directly or indirectly receives approximately $250,000,000 from the U.S. in wages, payments and salaries for the operation of the Canal. In the 1903 Treaty, Panama ceded to the United States the entire Canal Zone "in perpetuity" and pledged to treat the Canal Zone as "if it were sovereign" territory of the United States.

Do YOU think we should give it back to them, and pay them $50,000,000 a year in the bargain?

The Conservative Caucus says NO! We say, "KEEP OUR CANAL!"

Lawyers working for governments do many things

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Frederick G. Dutton performs lots of odd jobs for his $200,000-a-year legal retainer from the government of Saudi Arabia — including finding doctors to treat members of the royal family and buying chairs for King Khalid. He even gives legal advice.

While Dutton's fee is on the high side, the variety of work ranging from pure legal representation to more personal services is typical of the almost 70 American lawyers and law firms who have registered with the Justice Department as agents of foreign governments or businesses.

These lawyers collected $3.5 million during the latest six-month reporting period, according to documents submitted to the Justice Department and compiled by the New York Law Journal.

Dutton is not the only lawyer to move out of his usual orbit on behalf of foreign clients. Clark Clifford's high-powered and high-priced law firm, which generally stays out of police matters, investigated for Algeria a Nevada traffic accident in which one Algerian student was killed and another injured.

Other Washington firms that generally deal with U.S. government agencies handled real estate transactions for their clients — including the construction of the new residence for the Japanese ambassador.

Beyond that, many lawyers hired by foreign governments said they try to explain U.S. policy to their clients.

In the 1960s, the high fliers were lawyers representing sugar-producing nations angling for a larger share of the nation's sugar imports, especially when trade with Cuba ended and its quota was thrown up for grabs. Indeed, the wide-open lobbying of the sugar lobby brought about stiffer reporting requirements in 1966.

Now, however, the fight to win American landing rights for the Concorde; Saudi Arabian and Algerian gas and oil interests, and interests of Japan are producing most of the foreign business for American law firms.

Three firms, for example, have made more than $1 million in less than two years from the Concorde fight — and that figure excludes the legal costs of the court suits, which do not have to be listed.

The New York firm of Rogers & Wells, with former Secretary of State William P. Rogers as senior partner, has been paid $646,654 in the past two years for representing Air France. In Washington, Hydemann, Mason & Goodell — the firm of former Sen. Charles P. Goodell — has been paid $336,949 in the last two years for representing the French government.

Algeria has paid more than $4 million since 1971 to three American law firms, including $1.7 million to Clark Clifford's firm, and the Saudis have paid more than $300,000 to two firms including Hogan & Hartson with which former Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman J. William Fulbright is associated.

While not paying the highest fees, the Japanese have hired the most law firms (15) including one, Vorys, Slaters, Seymour & Pease, that was paid $3,000 for a study on the effects of withdrawing U.S. ground forces from Korea.

Moreover, the Justice Department filings revealed that former Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, once known for his pro-environment positions, received a $30,000 retainer to get American support for a pipeline to carry natural gas across Canada from Alaska to the lower 48 states. He apparently succeeded; President Carter and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau announced it would be built.

His $200-an-hour fee was the highest reported. The top Wall Street law firm of Millbank, Tweed, Hadley and McCloy, for example, reported its fees as $100 to $150 an hour for work done by partners and $45 to $85 an hour if it is done by associates.

The Washington firm of Danzansky, Dickey, Tydings, Quinlan & Gordon listed its fees as $70 to $150 per hour, depending on the qualifications of the attorney, whereas Winston & Strawn and Hydemann, Mason & Goodell charge $80 an hour.

The Justice Department files provide one of the few authentic peeks at how the nation's largest law firms earn their money.

Under the Foreign Agents Registration Act, lawyers along with other representatives here of foreign governments must list their income and expenses on behalf of foreign governments; report what they do to earn that money, and tell what government officials they deal with on behalf of their foreign clients.

This kind of information is as closely guarded as state secrets by law offices in most situations.

Take Clark Clifford, for example. The hottest item of gossip among Washington lawyers recently is how much he got paid by Bert Lance, but that's a secret few people know for sure — maybe only Clifford, his accountant and Lance.

It's no secret, though, how much Clifford's firm — Clifford, Glass, McIlwain & Finney — were paid by two foreign clients, the government of Algeria and the Australian Meat Board. It's all listed clearly in the Justice Department files.

Since 1971, Clifford's firm has been paid $1,725,000 by the Algerian government. Its contract calls for a $150,000-a-year retainer.

Not all the big money comes from well-known foreign clients. Myron Solter, for instance, is a Washington lawyer who was paid $142,000 from November to March for representing a range of Asian business and trade groups before American agencies setting tariffs on such imports as mushrooms, bikes, handbags, television sets and footwear.

Millbank, Tweed, Hadley & McCloy received $185,000 from 18 foreign clients, including the government of Zaire ($64,498) and Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corp. ($59,538) in the six months ending last July. In the previous six months, the firm took in $191,623 from foreign clients.

Explorer sites staked in Schleicher, Fisher

Sites for exploratory tests have been staked in Fisher and Schleicher counties, while Irion, Stonewall and Nolan pools drew steepout locations.

MDH Oil & Gas Co. of Cross Plains will drill a 7,200-foot venture, No. 1 Davenport, in Fisher, 3/4 mile north of the Claytonville, Northwest (Strawn) oil pool.

Drill site is 1,700 feet from south and 467 feet from east lines of section 127, block 3, H&T survey, 4 1/2 miles north of Claytonville townsite. SCHLEICHER PROBE

Arvin Norwood Drilling Co. of Midland filed permit application for No. 1-A Jamama, a 6,600-foot Schleicher County prospect, to be drilled 3 1/2 miles south and slightly west of the W.J.B. (Canyon) gas field.

It spots 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 2, block A, HE&WT survey, 10 miles south of Eldorado. It also is 78 mile northeast of a 5,771-foot failure and four miles southwest of the Venado (Wolfcamp) gas area.

STONEWALL PROJECTS The Desana Corp., operating from Midland, plans to drill two steepouts to the Flat Top 147 (lower Swastika) field of Stonewall.

Both are in section 147, block 1, BBB&C survey, about six miles south of Old Glory, and are slated for a bottom depth of 3,600 feet. No. 3-147 Flat Top, a north and west offset to production is 1,262 feet from north and 1,530 feet from west lines.

No. 4-147 Flat Top, a southeast steepout, is 2,802 feet from north and 2,009 feet from west lines of the section.

NOLAN TEST Frank W. Burger, Abilene, accounted for a 1,650-foot north steepout to the JMR (Strawn reef) pool of Nolan, three miles south of Sweetwater. It is No. 2, J.W. Byrd.

Drill site is 2,120 feet from south and 1,320 feet from west lines of section 70, block 22, T&P survey, and the projected depth is 6,150 feet.

Also, Irion County drew site for a steepout site in the Dove Creek multipay field, 14 miles south of Merton. Texas Oil & Gas Corp., operating from Midland, plans No. 2 Winterbotham, a 3,000-foot southwest steepout to the lone Cisco oil well in the pool.

It is slated to 7,000 feet, and spots 1,320 feet from most southerly south line and 660 feet from most westerly east lines of section 31, GC&SF survey, abstract 128.

The test also spots 2 1/2 miles northwest of Canyon "D" production and 4 1/2 miles northwest of Canyon "C" oil production.

Extenders complete

Two extensions to the Heart of Texas (Marble Falls) oil field have been completed by Ellis & Young of Abilene, in northeast McCulloch County, about three miles west of Mercury.

No. 6 John G. Jones was completed on the pump for 10 barrels of 26-gravity oil and 40 barrels of water on 24-hour potential test.

It finished through perforations at 908-912 feet, after treating the pay section with 2,000 gallons of acid.

Well site is 990 feet from south and east lines of Carl Junker survey 817.

No. 5 John G. Jones completed for a 24-hour pumping potential of 15 barrels of 26-gravity oil and 35 barrels of water, through perforations at 897-903 feet. The section had been acidized with 5,000 gallons.

It is 1,100 feet from south and 1,400 feet from east lines of the same survey.

The new wells are the fifth and six producers finalized in the field.

Carter eyeing Mexico for petroleum imports

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Lured by soaring oil prices, prodded by the International Monetary Fund, and threatened by international lenders, Mexico has edged its way into the ranks of the energy exporters and into what President Carter hopes will be a growing role as a supplier to the United States.

Expectations about potential imports from Mexico have risen dramatically since 1974 when the Central Intelligence Agency classified — bullish estimates of Mexican oil finds "Top Secret," and Mexico's president then, Luis Echeverria, was, as a senior State Department official said, "confronting the U.S. in every Third World forum possible."

It is a different story now. Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger and others say the United States will be importing 2 billion cubic feet of natural gas a day from Mexico by 1980, and a major share of the 1 million barrels of oil a day Mexico hopes to be exporting by then.

Mexico's exports are now 200,000 barrels a day and could rise by the 1980s to 2 million barrels a day, they say. Elsewhere U.S. energy officials admit the United States may enter into a direct purchase agreement with Petroleos Mexicanos (Pemex), the state oil company, to buy oil for Carter's 1-billion-barrel strategic petroleum reserve. CIA analysts in the meantime mull over projections that Mexico could export up to 4.5 million barrels a day — most of it aimed at the U.S. market.

U.S. Ambassador to Mexico Patrick Lucey is equally optimistic. "Mexico in the near future will be a very significant factor in the world energy market," he says.

The key to rising expectations about Mexican oil and natural gas exports is signs that newly elected Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo is reversing the direction of his predecessor's energy and economic policies — to say nothing of his strident rhetoric. These changes, in part, have been dictated by Portillo's efforts to meet the conditions of an agreement his government negotiated with the International Monetary Fund last year to improve Mexico's credit-worthiness and reduce the country's mounting balance-of-payments deficit.

U.S. officials admit there is a link between Mexico's new aggressiveness to develop energy exports under Portillo and economic realities, typified by the IMF agreement.

The Mexican government recognized they could improve their credit-worthiness through oil and gas exports," says Cecil Thompson, who was assistant administrator for international affairs of the former Federal Energy Administration. Yesterday, the FEA and the Federal Power Commission were folded into the new Department of Energy.

Asked if the United States pressured Mexico into exporting oil and natural gas, another official said, "If there is a conspiracy to get them to develop their oil and gas, it is a conspiracy of the market saying we're not going to invest our money unless you improve your economic situation."

Over the past year and a half, the international banking community — including U.S. banks such as Chase Manhattan, Bank of America, and First National City Bank of New York — became increasingly concerned about Mexico's ability to service its mounting foreign debt. Last year it was above $25 billion — almost the highest of all the developing countries — $13 billion of which was held by U.S. banks.

Because of a deteriorating trade balance, lagging domestic economic growth, and a 30 per cent inflation rate, Mexico devalued its peso, unbinding it from the dollar for the first time in 23 years.

At the urging of the United States, the banks, and the Treasury Department, Mexico entered into a stabilization agreement with the IMF last fall. In return for emergency credits, Mexico agreed to strict limits on wages, increases in its money supply, and a $3 billion ceiling on new borrowing this year. One expert called it "a classic, fiscally conservative, balance-of-payments document." In short, an austerity program.

Lopez Portillo, the first finance minister to become president in Mexico's history, had a major hand in negotiating the IMF agreement, and was quick to change Mexico's energy posture and court foreign investment. Weeks after his inauguration he upgraded Mexico's official proven oil reserves from 6.3 billion to 11 billion barrels, and launched an ambitious $15.5 billion oil development plan.

Earlier this year, Pemex began intensive negotiations with a group of six American natural gas pipeline companies led by Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. and Tenco, Inc., to sell 2 billion cubic feet of gas a day from the massive Reforma Field in Chiapas and Tabasco, two states along Mexico's eastern coast. The companies signed a letter of intent Aug. 4, and have since filed an import license request with the Federal Power Commission. Other companies have begun talks to buy gas piped 300 miles north from new fields discovered in Baja California along Mexico's Pacific coast.

The gas will account for about 3 per cent of total U.S. consumption when it starts flowing at full capacity upon completion of the 850-mile, $1.5 billion pipeline in 1979.

To expedite the project, the Export-Import Bank has sent Congress two proposals to give Pemex $400 million in credits and cash to finance U.S. purchases for the pipeline construction, and an additional $338 million to buy $500 million in oil development equipment from U.S. suppliers.

One sticking point so far is the price. Pemex and the companies are going to ask the FPC to approve a price tied to the energy equivalent of imported heating oil — now about $2.60 per thousand cubic feet. This is well above the $1.75 Carter asked for in his natural energy plan. More important, it is more than the $2.16 per thousand cubic feet America pays for Canadian imported gas.

One thing that is certain is that the price Mexico intends to ask for its energy resources will be at the world market level, now set by the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The gas price Pemex is asking for, for example, is near the price Algeria and Indonesia, both OPEC members, are asking for liquefied natural gas, and the United States is already buying oil from Mexico, as it did recently for the strategic petroleum reserve at OPEC prices.

U.S. officials point out that Mexico has learned to benefit from OPEC's pricing policy without joining the organization. Thus far Mexico has shown little interest in entering OPEC, in part because it would lose trade advantages with the United States. The larger question in Mexico's future as an exporter — barring a return to Echeverria's policies — is the size of Mexico's oil reserves. One axiom in international oil circles is that official reserve figures are political and economic — as well as geological — statements.

Pemex's head, Diaz Serrano, said last March that Mexico's total energy resources are well above the 60-billion-barrel figure used by some government officials as "probable reserves." If Mexico has that much oil, it would be on a par with Kuwait and Iran, OPEC's second largest producers.

Most international specialists are skeptical about projections above the 40-billion-barrel mark. One investment banker whose firm has long experience in Latin America says, "The numbers being bandied about are put out to appease the international financial community — they are floating them to get financing."

Beleaguered program gets infusion of hope

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter's beleaguered energy program received an infusion of new hope Thursday from Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

After caucusing with other committee Democrats, Long suggested the panel cease its apparently hopeless wrangling over several key tax provisions of Carter's energy plan: a 4-cents-a-gallon tax on crude oil, a punitive levy on the purchase of gas-guzzling cars and a system of taxes and rebates aimed at pressuring industrial users of oil and natural gas to switch to coal.

Instead, Long urged, the committee should finish work on the rest of the program's tax elements and send the bill to the Senate floor in that unfinished form.

Assuming the full Senate endorsed such a measure or something close to it, Long and other senior members of his committee then could go to a conference with their House counterparts and have broad latitude, as Long put it, to "write the bill in the conference."

The compromise version of the energy tax measure worked out by the conference committee would be submitted to each house for approval. Long's unorthodox gambit was seen by Administration officials as their best chance to restore momentum to the President's energy program, which has been slowed to a crawl by recent Senate setbacks.

"We would rather have the taxes" voted by the committee, Laurence L. Woodworth, assistant Treasury secretary, told reporters during a break in the committee session. "But in the absence of the taxes, we would rather see a bill reported by the committee" than have the measure bottled up while the members seek fruitlessly to reach agreement on the controversial tax items, Woodworth said.

The committee members were so split over the Administration's proposed tax on industrial users of oil and natural gas, Long said, that "just that one tax could keep us from arriving at a bill until after Christmas."

Woodworth expressed optimism that the Administration would succeed in winning congressional approval for the key elements of its energy plan. He noted that prospects for the Carter program looked bleak early this summer in the House, but the House ultimately approved a majority of Carter's proposals.

Nevertheless, Woodworth conceded that the problems he and other White House lobbyists could expect in coming days in the Senate would be far more difficult than those they faced in the House. "It wasn't a cakewalk in the House," Woodworth said, "but it's much tougher here."

Committee seeks big import cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Finance Committee, dead set against all of President Carter's energy taxes, is looking for ways to spend enough money to cut oil imports sharply over the next eight years.

That goal, of reducing dependence on foreign oil from the current daily rate of about nine million barrels to six million barrels a day by 1985, is the same set by Carter in his energy program.

But the committee has rejected each of the four taxes Carter proposed as the heart of the conservation effort.

Sen. Russell B. Long, chairman of the committee, wants approval for a series of spending incentives for conservation and production without voting the taxes to pay for them.

If the full Senate goes along with Long's strategy, a Senate-House conference committee would work out a final compromise energy plan, including taxes, that would allow the Senate, House and Carter all to claim victory.

MEANWHILE, A House-Senate conference committee is going to have the job of working out final details of a plan to overhaul the nation's utility rate structure.

The full Senate, completing work on non-tax aspects of the President's energy plan, rejected an administration proposal Thursday for cheaper electricity during non-peak hours.

Voting 86-7 for a watered-down version of Carter's plan to reform electric rates, senators deleted his proposal to make utilities offer bargain rates at night and other nonpeak times. The President also wanted to prohibit utilities from selling power to large industries at bargain rates.

The Senate bill would offer lower electric rates to senior citizens and give the government the right to intervene in state electric rate-making cases, but only to make recommendations on conservation.

After a confusing all-day Finance Committee session Thursday, Long said his panel expects to complete work on the energy tax bill within one or two weeks. And he hinted that he might offer a new tax proposal that would break the impasse in his committee.

Hijackers miss almost $2 million worth of packaged diamonds in five-day ordeal

By BILL HAZLETT
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Japanese Red Army terrorists missed nearly $2 million in diamonds when they hijacked a Japan Air Lines plane and held 156 hostages for five days, a returning hostage said Wednesday.

Walter J. Karabian, former California assemblyman, said the parcels containing the diamonds were in plain view throughout the entire hijacking ordeal.

"Those diamonds were in plain packages right on top of the seat where the stewardess generally sits," Karabian said during a Los Angeles International Airport news conference after his return.

"I don't think to this moment the hijackers are aware that they had almost $2 million worth of diamonds sitting right there across from their command center."

When the hijacking episode ended on the fifth day, Karabian said, one of the stewardesses casually picked up the packages and walked off the plane with them.

The packages contained a $1,850,000 shipment of diamonds from Bombay to Bangkok, Karabian said.

Karabian, 39, who described himself as "a little strung out and exhausted," relived the hijacking experience that ended Saturday during a wide-ranging press conference.

He said the five hijackers who commandeered the DC-8 airliner after it took off from Bombay for Bangkok last Wednesday "allowed no latitude to their prisoners."

"We were going to do things their way, or we were going to get killed," Karabian said.

"They were well-organized and mean. They clubbed several of the passengers" to emphasize their demands "It was the scariest, most terrifying thing I've ever encountered."

Karabian, in an effort to correct earlier reports, said that John Gabriel, 61, Montebello banker and industrialist, was not singled out for execution by the terrorists because he was supposedly a friend of President Carter.

"They made him their first intended target because he was a banker, and they thought he must be wealthy," Karabian said.

"And in their twisted reasoning, if he was a wealthy banker, he had to be Jewish, and they were extremely critical of the Jews, Zionism, and everything related to the United States."

"In fact, as Americans, it became clear that we were at the bottom of the list of those to be spared. They hated the Americans, and they ranted and raved about American imperialism propping up the corrupt government of Japan, about President Carter's human rights statements... about Zionism... about anything."

Karabian said that Gabriel, who was taken off the plane in Los Angeles in a wheelchair, became the target of terrorist torture after the former Democratic assemblyman persuaded the masked hijackers to let Karabians end a telex to United States officials including President Carter.

Tractor caravan to make long trek to Texas city

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (AP) — An American Agriculture tractor caravan is to converge on Amarillo, Tex., Oct. 14, to demonstrate the militant farm organization's solidarity — and to show that farmers mean business when they say they will strike for better economic conditions.

Dor Self, a spokesman for the organization formed about three weeks ago in this southeastern Colorado farm community, said the movement wants between 13,000 and 15,000 farmers on hand for a rally at the Amarillo Fairgrounds.

Farmers from the Lamar, Springfield and Walsh areas in Colorado will drive tractors to the meeting, and the movement's 30 branch offices across the nation will be urged to send representatives, he said.

Amarillo is about 165 miles away, "about like going from here to Pueblo," Self said.

He was one of more than 50 farmers who drove tractors from Springfield to Pueblo two weeks ago to a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland. A similar caravan is scheduled for Denver Oct. 22 when President Carter is to stop over for several hours en route to California.

"We've gotten clearance from the Texas Highway Patrol and the City of Amarillo to do it," he said.

"We're just trying to get a big group together to show that we can get a mass movement going."

Self said the rally should eliminate "any remaining skeptics that feel farmers and ranchers cannot unite."

A program is scheduled to begin at the Fairgrounds Coliseum at 2 p.m. on Oct. 14, Self said. He said a schedule of speakers would be released later.

Self was critical of remarks made by the president of the American Farm Bureau Wednesday in Wichita, Kan.

Allan Grant said he believes the farmers' strike proposal would have "little effect," and if demands for parity prices for farm products were met, the U. S. would "price itself out of foreign markets."

Strikers set vote

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Longshoremen agreed today to hold an election, complete with voting machines and federal supervision, on whether to continue a runaway strike which has virtually shut down the nation's No. 2 port.

Labor, corporate leaders stage economic meetings

By ART PINE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At irregular intervals over the past 8 1/2 months, a small club of 16 of the nation's top corporate and labor leaders has been meeting here secretly to try to hammer out private "understandings" on a wide spectrum of key economic issues.

The sessions, held in a rented room at Washington's Hay-Adams hotel, across Lafayette Park from the White House, often are attended by high Carter administration economic officials. The three sides spend most of the afternoon and early evening together and then quietly adjourn. There are no public announcements of what they accomplish.

There's nothing sinister about these sessions. On the contrary, for all its attempts to keep a low profile, the Labor-Management Group, as the informal panel is known, is a key element in the Carter administration's long-range anti-inflation policy.

In a lengthy anti-inflation statement last April 15, the President hinted he would count on the panel to develop what the White House could not put together on its own — a long-term program for gradual restraint of wage and price increases.

Although the group has made progress on some specific issues involving health and illegal alien legislation, it has yet to come to grips with any serious plan to deal with wage and price restraint.

Moreover, many insiders familiar with the panel's negotiations say it's highly unlikely any such proposal will emerge in the foreseeable future. "There hasn't been a great deal happening here," says one key official involved in the group's deliberations. "And I think it's safe to say that whatever finally emerges is going to take some time. Months certainly, and maybe even years."

The holdup is important because, in one sense at least, the outside-the-government Labor-Management Group may be the administration's only real hope for mounting a meaningful long-range fight against inflation.

Although the White House has revived the long-dormant Council on Wage and Price Stability, the official administration inflation-watchdog agency is expected to confine its efforts to averting potential trouble spots in key industries.

The Labor-Management panel's effort goes more to the heart of what the White House is trying to accomplish. Even before last January's inauguration, top Carter economic advisers seriously harbored notions of trying to establish a sort of European-style "social contract" with business and labor in which the private sector would agree voluntarily to abide by a set of government-drafted wage-price guidelines. Partly because of administration bumbling, the guidelines plan has collapsed. But the social compact idea is still alive.

To be sure, the notion of setting up a tripartite business-labor government panel to work out economic problems privately would not be unique to the current administration. Such panels have existed for years, under both Democrats and Republicans.

In the Nixon administration for example, a quasi-official group comprising many of the same members of the present panel was able to hammer out important agreements on inflation-cutting practices in a number of key industries. In the Ford administration, business and labor members even agreed on a joint proposal to boost the investment tax credit for corporations.

"But this time the atmosphere is different," says one observer close to the present panel's deliberations. For one thing, both the business and labor members openly distrust the Carter administration, and are wary of committing themselves to considering long-term anti-inflation plans, insiders report.

For another, both sides are adamantly against any form of wage-price restraints, voluntary or mandatory — and that includes guidelines or any other measures designed to inhibit wage or price increases.

(The White House found that out last spring when it naively suggested that companies and unions notify the administration in advance of coming wage or price boosts. The resulting storm was so strong that policy makers were forced to back down within days after their trial balloon was launched.)

Finally, although the administration still hopes the Labor-Management Group will come up with its own solution for the nation's inflation problem, the panel's members are looking to the government to suggest something — and here the administration has done virtually nothing.

"The ball has been in the government's court since last April," grumbles John T. Dunlop, the crusty Harvard University economist (and former Ford administration labor secretary) who established the group several months ago and later cajoled panel members into serving as an unofficial White House advisory arm.

But Carter administration officials concede they've had little themselves to throw on the table. "The government's not too clear itself what we should propose," says one senior policy maker close to the negotiations. "We really have had no specific proposals to discuss."

Consequently, the labor and management representatives on the panel have gone ahead on their own, dealing with narrower issues with far fewer implications than the broad questions of industrial pricing and collective bargaining that the administration wants to talk about.

The results here have been mixed. Earlier this year, the panel came up with its own energy program, but the proposal was virtually ignored by the White House. Later, the group agreed to pledge its cooperation on a tough crackdown on illegal aliens, but the administration spurned its key proposals.

In the meantime, panel members have worked quietly away on their own agenda of individual proposals that require no government approval to carry out — including suggestions involving medical care costs, transportation, food and investment in new plant and equipment.

Although the sessions with government officials have been uniformly cordial, the White House annoyed the panel almost from the start by misstating its goals for winding inflation down.

Pie-throwing service offered

By JAMES ROBINS

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — What heights chutzpah? Rachel Borden, creator of the Chutzpah Phone Service, says the pie's the limit.

The Philadelphia housewife who last year began making phone calls for $5 now hand-delivers chutzpah pies to the face of your choice for $25 and up.

"I've thrown several at exboyfriends, you know, like when girls want them thrown at their exboyfriends. I do the throwing. I do everything. I love it," said the 30-year-old mother of two.

"People can pick their flavor, but everybody so far has picked chocolate cream pie. I've thrown about eight. The worst thing that happened to me was when a guy threw one back at me," she said.

Chutzpah is a Yiddish word for gall, and Mrs. Borden showed she had it when she began the phone service last February. For $5, she'll chastize your mother-in-law, prod your boss for a raise or play cupid.

About 2 1/2 months ago, Mrs. Borden added chutzpah-grams to her repertoire, written messages, also hand-delivered for $25 and up, depending on delivery technicalities.

"About four weeks ago I delivered one at Veterans Stadium. I hopped over the fence in the middle of the seventh inning. The message was for Mike Schmidt, but he wasn't playing, so I gave it to Richie Hebner instead.

"It was a get-well message from a fan who paid me $100 to deliver it. Richie Hebner was really sweet about it. He was such a pussycat," she said of the 6-foot-1, 200-pound Philadelphia Phillies first baseman.

The phone service began at the urging of Mrs. Borden's husband, Gene, who suggested that since she liked talking on the phone so much she might as well make money doing it.

Mrs. Borden said she has made about $8,000 to date, including $2,000 for selling rights to use the name Chutzpah Phone Service to a Dallas housewife and a New York City attorney.

'Moral right' (?)

Does President Carter have the "moral right" to veto a natural gas pricing bill which includes deregulation?

This is an interesting point, indeed, brought up by U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., at a press conference held Wednesday in his Washington office.

Mr. Carter, as you know, previously had threatened to veto the deregulation measure which the Senate passed Tuesday if it reaches his desk.

The Senate-passed measure, Texas' senior senator said, is a "good, solid compromise" which does not deserve to be vetoed.

"It does not deserve to be vetoed, particularly by a president who was carried into office in a close election in a large measure by virtue of the support generated by a now abandoned commitment to work ... to deregulate new natural gas prices," Tower said.

Continuing, the senator said that while "the president has a right under the law to veto it, the question is does he have a moral right to veto it when he won in a large measure only because he made a commitment to support deregulation?"

Frankly, we do not think that Mr. Carter has the moral right to veto the measure and it is hoped that his better judgment will prevail and that he will not use his veto power if the bill gets to his desk.

Tower went on to say that the president's plan to extend federal price controls to the intrastate natural gas market which was passed by the House is "totally unacceptable."

The senator said that he could support a phased-deregulation measure if federal price controls are removed within five years, but that anything over that would be too long.

It is noteworthy, too, that Tower praised Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who sponsored the deregulation proposal. He said that Bentsen merits credit for doing an "outstanding job" in getting the bill passed.

Senator Bentsen certainly does deserve plenty of credit for his effective, tireless efforts in this regard, as most Texans will agree.

Tower added, however, that he, in his role as chairman of the Republican Policy Committee, Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and Minority Whip Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, were "all essential" in getting the deregulation bill passed in the Senate.

In fact, we would join with many, many others in expressing a sincere vote of thanks to the 30 senators who defied President Carter in voting for the deregulation measure proposed by Sen. Bentsen and Sen. James Pearson, R-Kan.

Nader's new target

Yes, it's Ralph Nader again... with a brand new target.

His latest venture — a consumer group of sports fans — hints that the consumer advocate may be running out of worlds to conquer. And this is encouraging in itself, if it means he's through.

Not that the fans don't deserve a voice in this age of hefty public subsidies of professional sports, but it is unlikely that the historically voluble fan needs the Nader group.

The concern of the Fight to Advance the Nation's Sports — or FANS — will range from player personnel to ticket prices to the nutritional quality of food at concession stands.

Yes, it very well could be that Nader is about out of business.

Nader has speculated over the economic impact of a boycott mounted against a team by his organization in response to an unpopular trade or other grievance.

But the sports fan already has learned — as have team owners — of the clout he enjoys through his trips to the ticket window.

Nader has proposed a dues schedule of $9 a year, wondering for publication "whether consumers of spectator sports are willing to pay ... the price of an average football ticket in order to protect their rights and interests."

The fan might be willing enough, but it is doubtful if he will believe it necessary. His voice already penetrates to the business offices very well, thank you.

But it will be interesting to see just how far Mr. Nader and his associates can return the "ball" after receiving it near the goal line.

Careful now, Ralph, those big boys have been known to play pretty rough!

WEEDS IN THE CROPS

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Tuning in on Seoul's 'calls'

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The supersecret National Security Agency intercepted some fascinating communications between the South Korean government in Seoul and its embassy in Washington, outlining grandiose plans to influence Congress.

The incriminating transcripts are being reviewed by the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is conducting a secret inquiry into the government's strange failure to do anything about it.

Copies of the transcripts were distributed over the years to key Washington authorities, including officials of both the Justice Department and the White House. Yet for years, the Korean lobbying effort was ignored by officials who could have intervened.

The intercepted messages do not criminally implicate any specific congressmen and do not mention Korean payoff man Tongsun Park by name. But Park's name was mentioned in classified State Department cables, which we obtained in early 1974.

Our investigation established that Park was engaged in political lobbying and that he had developed a close, curious relationship with then-Rep. Richard Hanna, D-Calif. — a story we broke on April 1, 1974. The Justice Department has now indicted Park and named Hanna as an unindicted co-conspirator.

The 1974 cables showed that the State Department gave special treatment to Tongsun Park during his travels in the Middle East, probably because he was in the company of the congressman.

In a classified cable to U.S. embassies in the Middle East, the department requested "each post except Cairo" to ensconce Park in a single room next to or near room reserved for Rep. Hanna. In Cairo, telegraphed State, "Mr. Park requests a suite on the (Nile) river side of the Hilton."

Not until the following year did the Justice Department begin to investigate the South Korean effort to compromise Congress, although the evidence had been gathering dust in its files for years. Then it took a private letter from Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., to then-Attorney General Edward Levi to get action. The congressman sent Levi a summary of testimony his House international organizations subcommittee had developed.

Finally, on July 17, 1975, we were able to break the explosive story that "the Justice Department is quietly investigating charges that the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, modeled after our own embattled spy agency, has set up illegal front groups to manipulate U.S. public opinion and has even tried to 'buy off' U.S. congressmen."

CHARLEY REESE SAYS: Define foreign policy and receive lollipops

By CHARLEY REESE
Sunbelt Syndicate

I will give three lollipops and two pieces of bubble gum to anyone who can define in coherent terms the foreign policy of the U.S. Government.

I might help by posing a few questions. For example, are you afraid of Paraguay? How about Albania? The point is the only nation on the earth which is a military threat to us is the Soviet Union.

Presumably, most of our $110 billion defense budget is aimed at the Soviet Union. The Red Chinese hate our guts but they have made such a shambles of their economy that as long as we stay out of walking distance, they're no threat.

If then the Soviet Union poses a military threat, if we spend many billions stationing an Army in Europe presumably to fight off a Soviet invasion, and if Soviet officials are telling the truth when they say repeatedly they intend to destroy our system of government, then why, pray tell:

Has the West extended $40 billion in credit and loans to the Soviet Union and its Communist vassal states?

Why did the U.S. government encourage 80 U.S. firms to participate in the construction of the Kama River truck plant 600 miles east of Moscow? This will be the largest single industrial complex in the world, capable of producing 150,000 three-axle trucks and 250,000 diesel engines annually. That's more than the combined productive capacity of all similar U.S. firms combined.

Why has the State Department approved the sale of 70 modern computer systems to the Soviets?

Why, from mid-1972 to mid-1974, when Americans were suffering from paying interest rates of 9 to 12 per cent, did the U.S. Export-Import Bank make available to the Soviet Union $469 million in long term 6 per cent loans so they could buy machinery, foundries and factory equipment?

All of this, mind you, while American steel companies are being forced to lay off American workers because of capital shortages, low profits, and competition from foreign manufacturers subsidized by their governments.

Why is the U.S. playing kissy-face with Fidel Castro, a psychopathic murderer and a tyrant?

Why is the State Department panting to resume normal relations with Vietnam?

Why is the State Department eager to give up the Panama Canal to a leftist dictator who just signed a buddy-deal with the Russians?

Why is—the State Department pursuing policies in Africa which will result in the destruction of pro-American governments in Rhodesia and South Africa by Marxist-oriented and Soviet-financed guerrillas?

Why is President Carter talking about abandoning Taiwan, a free, pro-Western nation of 17 million people to please Red China, a slave-state run by tyrants who seek our destruction?

Why is President Carter determined, despite advice from the military and our allies, to withdraw American troops from South Korea?

You don't have to be a member of the Council on Foreign Relations to understand that if you lend the Soviet government $40 billion, that's $40 billion of its own money it doesn't have to divert from its military budget to prop up its feeble socialist economy.

We plain Americans had better wake up before the liberal meatheads in the State Department and the greedy businessmen and bankers sell us into slavery.

Now if I and the Russians are both wrong, and the Soviet Union means us no harm, then let's cut the defense budget, dismantle the missiles, and bring the boys home from Europe.

Mark Russell says

October marks the 20th anniversary of the first orbital satellite, Sputnik. The Russians frightened us into putting a man on the moon and an astronaut in the Senate.

Twenty years later, we can see the benefits of the Space Age to mankind. Namely, that promoters can charge $200 a ticket to a closed-circuit flight carried by satellite.

The Space Age gave us "Star Wars" and the Hollywood rumor that R2D2 was having an affair with a parking meter.

Let's not forget what we owe Bert Lance. Before he came along most people thought OMB was a foreign car.

Break in labor ranks seen after visit by Russians

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Leadership of the United Auto Workers (UAW) honored four visiting "trade unionists" from the Soviet Union not long after turning away a leading Soviet dissident, pointing up a deep ideological cleavage in the American labor movement.

On Sept. 28, four members of Soviet "trade unions" lunched with UAW brass at Solidarity House, the union's headquarters in Detroit. About two weeks earlier, UAW leaders could not find time to see Ukrainian dissident Leonid Plyushch. A respected mathematician expelled from the Soviet Union in 1976 after four years' imprisonment, Plyushch now lives in Paris and was making an American tour.

The UAW's position is directly opposite to AFL-CIO George Meany's and complicates the auto union's possible return to the AFL-CIO. The Carter administration authorized visas for Communist trade unionists over the objections of Meany, who considers Soviet labor leaders as mere government stooges. Meany has championed exiles from Communist oppression, and AFL-CIO officials helped Plyushch with his itinerary.

The four visiting Russians, labelled as ordinary workers but obviously handpicked by the KGB, began their U.S. trip in Chicago Sept. 23 singing the praises of life in the Soviet Union. "We work very hard and are very well paid," declared coalminer Andrei Gatsenko, adding that miners make more than doctors and can retire with half pay at age 50.

AFL-CIO headquarters naturally was not informed of the itinerary which had been arranged by an outfit called Trade Unions for Action and Democracy (TUAD) — formed in 1970 in close collaboration with the U.S. Communist party. The visiting Russians were met in Chicago by UAW regional officials and visited Steelworkers Local 1033 (which is in the satrapy of Steelworkers maverick leader Ed Sadlowski).

Sadlowski's lieutenants arranged for the Soviets to lay a wreath at a plaque commemorating the 1937 massacre in Chicago of Republic Steel Co. employees seeking to organize a union. To anti-Communists at AFL-CIO headquarters, identification of KGB puppets with bona fide trade union martyrs borders on sacrilege. From Chicago, the Russians went to Detroit, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and New York — meeting such anti-Meany unionists as the mine workers and meatcutters.

Emil Mazey, UAW secretary-treasurer, told us his union long has favored visits from Soviet trade unionists because "the only way you can relax the cold war is to establish relations between people." As for the Detroit visit of the dissident Plyushch, Mazey told us, "I wasn't able to meet him" for lack of time. However, he was distinctly unenthusiastic about Ukrainian nationalists (separating the Ukraine from Russia would be like "trying to unscramble an egg") and suggested a solution was for them to "leave the country."

UAW reunion with the AFL-CIO while Emil Mazey and George Meany still hold high positions has always generated skepticism. Their conflicting views on visitors from Russia shows why.

BLUMENTHAL AND BUSINESS

Rising fears by big businessmen that the departure of Bert Lance has cost them their only important entree in the Carter administration reached an embarrassing climax in the White House Sept. 23, with Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal listening.

Those fears were stated bluntly by duPont's Irving Shapiro, one of ten business leaders meeting that day with President Carter. Acknowledging Blumenthal's presence, and also that of Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps, Shapiro told Mr. Carter that American business is afraid it will no longer find a "sympathetic" ear in Washington.

Normally, the Secretary of the Treasury is the President's chief emissary to the business world. Thus, Shapiro's clear implication: Blumenthal, an expert on foreign trade and finance, is not regarded as being all that knowledgeable about the special problems of business executives (though he was the highly successful head of the Bendix Corp.).

The lament over Lance's departure was reported in a press briefing by Shapiro and General Electric's Reginald Jones. Not reported was the feeling of every business leader there that the incident conveyed this message to the Secretary of the Treasury with the President sitting in: Sorry, Mr. President, but we feel we cannot count on Mike Blumenthal to get our problems across to you.

Mr. Carter is trying to show the country he wants to work more closely with business. Although the executives wanted the Sept. 23 session (their first with the President himself) kept private, Mr. Carter gave it full publicity.

When the President walked into the meeting, he astonished the barons of business by saying that all of them were undoubtedly "more qualified" to be President than he.

Wine feud agreement reached

By CARL CANNON
The Los Angeles Times

The tangled affairs of the Charles Krug Winery moved a long way toward becoming unsnarled when the long-feuding Mondavi brothers announced an agreement on the $48 million property.

After more than a decade of personal and legal battling culminating in a bidding contest among a host of major U.S. corporations, the brothers decided to keep Krug within the family.

Under the agreement in principle, Robert Mondavi and his sister, Mrs. Helen Ventura, will sell their interest in Krug, one of the nation's largest wineries, to their brother Peter and a second sister, Mrs. Mary Westbrook.

Resolution of the agreement, which was announced in San Francisco, is subject to a number of contingencies, including a favorable tax ruling, approval of the Napa County Superior Court and completion of financial arrangements by Peter. Final execution of a definitive agreement is expected to take several months.

The fought-over family winery has been under the direction of a three-member board of directors appointed by the Napa court last September. The board will continue to operate the St. Helena winery until final resolution of the dispute.

The feud between the two brothers flared publicly in 1965 when the brothers came to blows. The break led Robert to leave home and build his own winery in Oakville.

The feud had even led the two to insist on different pronunciations of their surname, Peter keeping the anglicized Mon-day-vy adopted by his father on arrival in this country, and Robert sticking to the original Italian pronunciation of Mon-dah-vy.

The dispute has been before the Napa court since 1972 when Robert filed suit charging Peter with mismanagement of Krug in which he — Robert — still held a 24 per cent interest.

Trial of the suit and a cross-complaint filed by Peter against Robert and his partner, Rainier Companies Inc. of Seattle, Wash., ended last August when Napa Superior Court Judge Robert Carter ordered the Krug Winery sold because of irreconcilable differences between the major stockholders, principally Peter and Robert.

The order set off a bidding contest with such firms as Coca-Cola, PepsiCo, Hiram Walker, Quaker Oats and Anheuser-Busch reportedly interested in acquiring Krug.

It has been widely speculated that Robert Mondavi was anxious to sell his interest in Krug to obtain funds for purchasing Rainier's interest in the Robert Mondavi Winery. An attorney for Robert, however, said that "there are no such negotiations at this time."

Both brothers had told The Los Angeles Times in April that their long feud was at an end and they were sincerely endeavoring to reach a meeting of the minds for the purchase of Krug. The stumbling block, according to sources in the industry, was Peter's difficulty in acquiring enough capital to buy out his brother.

Western senators reassured

By RICHARDE MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met for the first time Thursday with a coalition of western senators and satisfied them that the federal government has no intention of taking over state rights to water.

"We are very much relieved," said Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., after the session, also attended by Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus. Laxalt said Carter told the group he has no intention of intruding into state affairs.

"Much has been accomplished at this meeting," Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., declared.

The senators said the President, whose aides are working on an administration water policy, has set no specific deadline for completing it. But they indicated Carter hoped to have most of the information for it gathered by late November.

Some members of the bi-partisan group urged Carter to wait at least a year to do anything about dissatisfaction with a law limiting ownership of land using federal irrigation water to 320 acres for a farmer and his wife.

The 1902 law, which has never been enforced, originally was designed as an incentive to homesteaders, Hayakawa said. He noted that its enforcement would severely restrict the large farm operations that technology has fostered in the West.

A federal court of appeals recently upheld the law. Carter declared in an interview afterward that the law is bad and should be changed. But he said that in the meantime he has no choice but to enforce it.

"We are advising that nothing be done for at least a year," said Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont. "That would give the people time to approach Congress for a solution."

Melcher said the land limit is "not just a matter for the courts but for Congress."

As for water, Melcher said Carter is moving too fast. "He hasn't talked to the people of the West sufficiently," the senator declared.

"We hope the President will come out with a statement that will be a comprehensive study ... in concert with the people of the West," Melcher said. He added that information should be supplied for the policy by western governors and legislatures.

Laxalt said there was no indication that Carter would let his disagreements with him over the Panama Canal treaty interfere with matters of specific interest to the West. Laxalt is opposed to the treaty, which Carter wants the Senate to ratify.

"I think he tried very hard not to let disagreements affect our agreements or disagreements about other matters," Hayakawa said.

Trustees to arrive

HOUSTON (AP) — Three trustees appointed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People were to arrive here Oct. 24 to investigate and reorganize the Houston branches of the NAACP.

Control of the 11 NAACP branches has been in contention since last February when the Rev. C. Anderson Davis and national board members clashed over the authority of the Metropolitan Council which oversees local NAACP activities and is headed by Davis.

The NAACP board of directors voted Sept. 12 to strip Davis of all elective or appointive power in the civil rights group for the next five years.

The board directed Davis to turn over all books, records and office keys of the local NAACP operation. It also asked for the charters of all Houston branches by Oct. 2 so four new charters for reorganized branches could be issued.

THE PANAMA CANAL GIVEAWAY!

Threatened with "another Vietnam" in our Panama Canal Zone, the Carter Administration has caved in to the threats and demands of Panama's Marxist dictator, President Omar Torrijos, and has negotiated a treaty which not only gives away our canal, but actually pays the virtually bankrupt Panamanian Government to take it from us.

DID YOU KNOW...

...that like most leftist countries, Panama is broke. Interest on loans will make up 39% of Panama's entire government budget this year.

...that Panama, with its turbulent, unstable history of over 50 different governments since it was founded in 1903, owes over $2,700,000,000 (Two Billion, Seven Hundred Million Dollars) to U.S. banks and their foreign branches, which have been loaning money to keep Torrijos' Communist government afloat for the last 10 years.

And that the only way these banks will probably ever be repaid these large sums of money is for the U.S. Government to give Panama an extra $50,000,000 a year for the use of our own canal.

...that Sol Linowitz who was one of the two chief negotiators who worked out the new giveaway treaty with the Panamanians was a member of the Board of Directors of the Marine Midland Bank, Inc., in New York City, which is one of the banks that loaned large sums of money to Panama.

...that not only will the giveaway treaty with Panama cost us $50,000,000 a year in extra payments to the Government of Panama, but Torrijos has already made it clear that he intends to sharply increase the toll charged on goods passing through the Canal.

...that according to the respected organization, Freedom House, Panama has the worst record on Human Rights in all of Latin America. You've heard the liberals and the Carter Administration severely criticize countries like Chile and Haiti for their poor Human Rights records—but you've never heard even one peep about the miserable Human Rights record of the Torrijos dictatorship in Panama!

...that over one-third of all cargo shipped through the Canal is energy related, and that much of our Alaska oil will probably be shipped from the West Coast to the east through the Canal.

We American taxpayers will not only be soaked for the additional $50,000,000 plus a year our Government will be paying to the Panamanian Government, but we'll also be forced to pay higher prices for all goods shipped through the Canal—and all of it going to Panama's pro-Communist dictatorship.

...that it cost ten times as much to sail a ship around the tip of South America as it does to sail it through the Panama Canal at the present toll rates.

The present or any future dictator of Panama could easily double, triple, or even quadruple the toll rates—just like the oil sheiks raised the price of oil 400% in one year—and we'd have no choice but pay it.

And that would sharply increase the price of most things you buy, just like the increase in oil prices did. 70% of all shipping which uses the canal either begins or ends on U.S. soil.

...that American Control of the Panama Canal is absolutely vital to our national defense. Except for our 14 "supercarriers" our entire Navy fleet can and does easily travel through the Panama Canal.

This gives our Navy great flexibility. Without the Canal, the U.S. would have to build a much larger "two-ocean" Navy, duplicating many bases and ships. We taxpayers would again be soaked for the cost of more ships, more bases, and the building of more harbors.

In 1803, we bought the land that now makes up the States of Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and parts of Montana, Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma from the French for $15 million. If the French threatened us with a guerilla war today, should we give them back this land -- and even pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it back?

In 1867, we bought Alaska from the Russian Czar for $7.2 million. Should we give Alaska back to the Soviet Union today, and pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it off our hands?

In 1917, we bought the Virgin Islands from Denmark so a naval base could be built to protect the Panama Canal from German attack during World War 1. Should we give the Virgin Islands back to the Danes today, and pay them $50,000,000 a year to take it back?

And, in 1903 we bought the Panama Canal and the American Canal zone through a treaty signed with the newly independent Republic of Panama, and the treaty guaranteed large annual payments to them. Panama now directly or indirectly receives approximately $250,000,000 from the U.S. in wages, payments and salaries for the operation of the Canal. In the 1903 Treaty, Panama ceded to the United States the entire Canal Zone "in perpetuity" and pledged to treat the Canal Zone as "if it were sovereign" territory of the United States.

Do YOU think we should give it back to them, and pay them $50,000,000 a year in the bargain?

The Conservative Caucus says NO! We say, "KEEP OUR CANAL!"

House reverses organized labor's 'losing streak'

By HELEN DEWAR
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — In a dramatic reversal of organized labor's losing streak on Capitol Hill, the House overwhelmingly approved the administration's labor law revision package Thursday and the Senate Thursday night voted by a large margin to increase the minimum wage by nearly 50 percent by 1981.

The labor law legislation — designed to make it easier to organize unions and win contracts by speeding up procedures and penalizing employers for violating them — was approved 257 to 163 after pro-labor forces made a few minor concessions to thwart crippling amendments backed by industry groups.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where its chances of enactment next year, once considered dim, have brightened considerably in light of labor's surprisingly strong showing in the House.

Within hours after labor's victory in the House, the Senate approved a $3.40 wage floor by 1981, which labor favors over a House-passed bill that would stop at $3.05 in 1980. The vote was 76 to 14.

Both bills would increase the current minimum wage of $2.30 to $2.65 next year, with the Senate bill providing $2.90 in 1979 and $3.15 in 1980, instead of the House-approved levels of $2.85 and $3.05 in those years.

The Senate action on the wage bill represented a substantial recovery for labor, which failed to win House acceptance last month for an automatic escalator formula pegged to average manufacturing wages. The Senate proposal drops the escalator but provides wage rates equivalent to what it would have provided through 1981.

The Senate also voted 81 to 7 to reduce from 50 to 30 per cent the amount that employers can deduct from minimum wages paid to workers who receive tips. The House left the so-called tip credit at 50 per cent.

Debate on the wage bill is scheduled to continue Friday, when the Senate is to vote on whether to provide a lower wage floor for teenagers, a business-backed proposal that lost by a one-vote margin in the House.

House passage of the labor law revision bill followed several congressional rebuffs to labor earlier this year, including defeat of a construction site picketing bill and modification of its minimum wage proposal, spawning conjecture that unions were losing clout in Congress. But labor lost little on the revision package, which House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D-Mass.) characterized as "the first piece of pro-labor legislation we've passed since the Wagner Act (National Labor Relations Act) in the 1930s."

Labor's victory was underscored by a denunciation of the House action by Clarence B. Randall, coordinator of the National Action Committee on Labor Law Reform, an umbrella group for business lobbyists. "This is the most outrageous demonstration of unchecked union power ever witnessed on Capitol Hill," said Randall. "This legislative initiative on the part of the unions clearly demonstrates that this nation is heading toward a labor-controlled government, similar to that of the United Kingdom."

Said Harold P. Coxson of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "If the House thinks it has satisfied both labor and management by accepting a few cosmetic changes agreed to in advance by the unions, it is wrong. The bill gives labor virtually everything it wanted..."

The bill, the result of a compromise between the White House and the AFL-CIO that eliminated from the start such controversial labor proposals as repeal of state right-to-work laws — would:

—Set deadlines of from 25 to 75 days for holding union certification elections, which now, without any timetables written into the law, average about 45 days but can drag on for months.

—Require double back pay for employees illegally dismissed for trying to form a union and retroactive compensation for wage and benefit increases lost while an employer unlawfully delays negotiations for an initial contract with a union.

—Permit the secretary of labor to ban a company from receiving federal contracts for up to three years for illegally refusing to deal with a union.

—Authorize unions to hold meetings on company property and time if management officials hold "captive audience" meetings to argue their case against unionizing — and give employers the same right to equal time in union halls.

—Expand the National Labor Relations Board from five to seven members and generally expedite their procedures, which unions contend are sometimes so slow-moving that they, in effect, deny worker's legally established rights to organize and bargain.

In a move that could curb wildcat strikes, it also voted to expand the NLRB's powers to get court injunctions against unauthorized walkouts and so-called "stranger pickets," such as those whose appearance closed down many coal mines this summer, but refused to allow employers to seek such injunctions.

SS politicking wins support of Democrats

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The House Ways and Means Committee gave formal approval Thursday to the big Social Security financing bill, 23 to 14, but only after some last-minute politicking by Chairman Al Ullman (D-Ore.) and Joe D. Waggoner Jr. (D-La.) won over a handful of reluctant Southern Democrats.

All the committee Republicans voted against the bill, which will face opposition on the floor because of the sizable payroll tax increases it would impose over the next 10 years.

The politicking involved agreement to seek a rule from the Rules Committee barring most floor amendments, but including among the limited number to be offered one strongly favored by several Southern Democrats.

Ullman, counting noses late Wednesday for Thursday's formal vote on reporting the bill, had concluded that the committee might reject the legislation if all dozen Republicans voted against the bill and were joined by five or six unhappy Democrats.

Waggoner, one of those unhappy with parts of the bill, came up with the solution: assure some of the hesitant Southerners that they would have an opportunity to offer a floor amendment to strip out a provision that would allow the Social Security trust funds to borrow from the Treasury when they ran low. This authority is seen by some as a first step toward income-tax financing for Social Security.

Although Ullman was the original sponsor of this provision and the administration wants it, he gave in and on that basis Waggoner, J. J. Pickle (D-Tex.) and Omar Burleson (D-Tex.), according to committee sources, agreed to vote for the bill. Edgar L. Jenkins (D-Ga.) also swung over, sources said, partly because a vote on the anti-borrowing was assured and partly because he received assurances the rule to be sought by the committee would allow him to offer an amendment on payroll tax rates and wage bases.

With these votes added to those of Northern Democrats, Ullman then obtained the 23-to-14 endorsement of the bill.

Joseph L. Fisher (D-Va.) opposed the bill because it would bring government workers under Social Security in 1982 — and his district is full of government workers who don't like the idea.

The committee then voted to ask the Rules Committee to allow votes on only eight amendments including the anti-borrowing amendment, a Fisher amendment to strike out government worker coverage, and several GOP amendments to delay tax increases and reduce wage base levels — when the bill reaches the floor. Republicans say they don't like the Committee bill because of too-quick tax increases and too-high wage-base levels, which they claim will fall most heavily on middle-income workers.

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Joseph A. Califano Jr. said he was pleased the committee has reported the bill to help save the Social Security system from financial difficulties, although he believed the administration's proposals were "more balanced."

Soviet parliament names diplomatic deputy to post

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet parliament today elected Vasily V. Kuznetsov, an experienced diplomatic troubleshooter, to the post of first deputy to President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

The post is a new one in the Soviet Union. But the appointment apparently did not mean that Kuznetsov, who is 76 and has relatively little top-level political experience, is meant to be the 70-year-old Brezhnev's successor.

The Soviet Union's top ideologist, Mikhail A. Suslov, proposed Kuznetsov's appointment at a parliament session after the adoption of a new national constitution that creates the new post.

"For almost 20 years, (Kuznetsov) has worked in the ministry of foreign affairs," Suslov said, "and he knows well questions of the internal life of the country and foreign policy of the Soviet state."

The bemedaled Kuznetsov gave an acceptance speech pledging to "dedicate all my strength, knowledge and experience to fulfilling with honor the high trust given to me."

Kuznetsov is the first deputy to Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Diplomatic sources believe he will leave the foreign ministry to devote full time to new assignments.

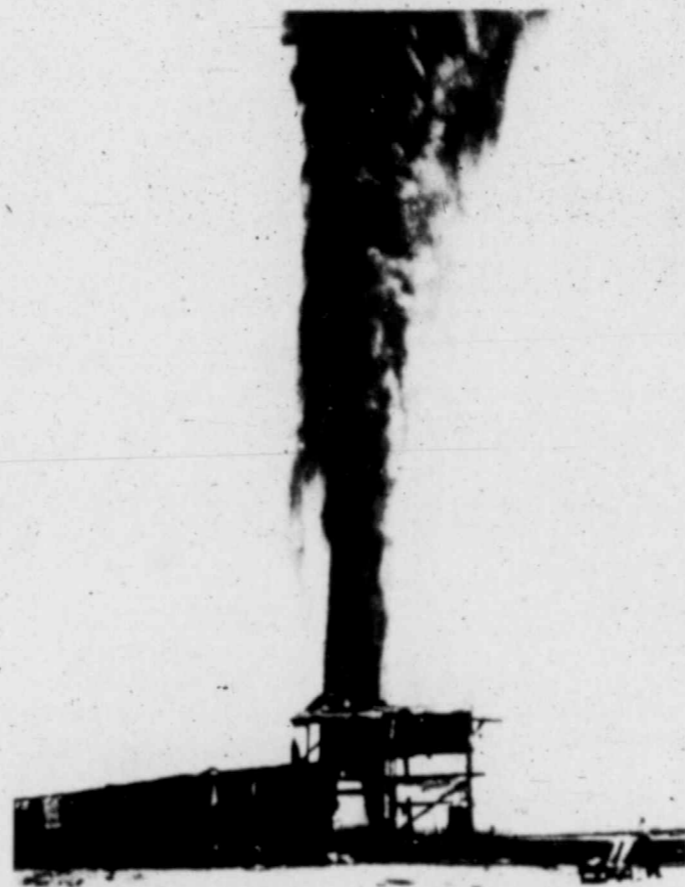

The work includes the ceremonial greeting of new ambassadors, the conduct of international diplomatic negotiations and work with the parliament.

The parliament's unanimous adoption of the constitution, after 18 years of work and four months of public discussion, touched off a 3½-minute standing ovation, rhythmic clapping, cheers and shouting of slogans by the 1,500 deputies, led by Brezhnev.

The 9,000-word document, designed as a crowning achievement of Brezhnev's leadership, replaces the 1936 Stalin constitution and is the Soviet Union's fourth political charter.

The new constitution strengthens the role of the Communist party in the Soviet Union and stresses the obligations of citizens to serve the state.

It guarantees such rights as housing, work and education. It also provides for certain rights of free press, speech and assembly, but those rights are subordinated to the interests of the state.

Pioneers Of The Oil Industry helped to build West Texas, our state and our nation -- from Wildcat to pipeline and skyline and from "coal oil" to petro-chemical marvels.

Now there's an opportunity to proffer to them a well-deserved tribute for their courage, their risks, their hardships and their sacrifices — including, on occasion, life itself. At the same time it is an ideal opportunity to present YOUR story, your own company's history or record of contribution to our country's progress and related energy needs, which become more critical from month to month.

Hijackers miss almost $2 million worth of packaged diamonds in five-day ordeal

By BILL HAZLETT
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Japanese Red Army terrorists missed nearly $2 million in diamonds when they hijacked a Japan Air Lines plane and held 156 hostages for five days, a returning hostage said Wednesday.

Walter J. Karabian, former California assemblyman, said the parcels containing the diamonds were in plain view throughout the entire hijacking ordeal.

"Those diamonds were in plain packages right on top of the seat where the stewardess generally sits," Karabian said during a Los Angeles International Airport news conference after his return.

"I don't think to this moment the hijackers are aware that they had almost $2 million worth of diamonds sitting right there across from their command center."

When the hijacking episode ended on the fifth day, Karabian said, one of the stewardesses casually picked up the packages and walked off the plane with them.

The packages contained a $1,850,000 shipment of diamonds from Bombay to Bangkok, Karabian said.

Karabian, 39, who described himself as "a little strung out and exhausted," relived the hijacking experience that ended Saturday during a wide-ranging press conference.

He said the five hijackers who commandeered the DC-8 airliner after it took off from Bombay for Bangkok last Wednesday "allowed no latitude to their prisoners."

"We were going to do things their way, or we were going to get killed," Karabian said.

"They were well-organized and mean. They clubbed several of the passengers" to emphasize their demands. "It was the scariest, most terrifying thing I've ever encountered."

Karabian, in an effort to correct earlier reports, said that John Gabriel, 61, Montebello banker and industrialist, was not singled out for execution by the terrorists because he was supposedly a friend of President Carter.

"They made him their first intended target because he was a banker, and they thought he must be wealthy," Karabian said.

"And in their twisted reasoning, if he was a wealthy banker, he had to be Jewish, and they were extremely critical of the Jews, Zionism, and everything related to the United States."

"In fact, as Americans, it became clear that we were at the bottom of the list of those to be spared. They hated the Americans, and they ranted and raved about American imperialism propping up the corrupt government of Japan, about President Carter's human rights statements... about Zionism... about anything."

Karabian said that Gabriel, who was taken off the plane in Los Angeles in a wheelchair, became the target of terrorist torture after the former Democratic assemblyman persuaded the masked hijackers to let Karabians end a telex to United States officials including President Carter.

Tractor caravan to make long trek to Texas city

SPRINGFIELD, Colo. (AP) — An American Agriculture tractor caravan is to converge on Amarillo, Tex., Oct. 14, to demonstrate the militant farm organization's solidarity — and to show that farmers mean business when they say they will strike for better economic conditions.

Dor Self, a spokesman for the organization formed about three weeks ago in this southeastern Colorado farm community, said the movement wants between 13,000 and 15,000 farmers on hand for a rally at the Amarillo Fairgrounds.

Farmers from the Lamar, Springfield and Walsh areas in Colorado will drive tractors to the meeting, and the movement's 30-branch offices across the nation will be urged to send representatives, he said.

Amarillo is about 165 miles away, "about like going from here to Pueblo," Self said.

He was one of more than 50 farmers who drove tractors from Springfield to Pueblo two weeks ago to a meeting with Agriculture Secretary Robert Bergland. A similar caravan is scheduled for Denver Oct. 22 when President Carter is to stop over for several hours en route to California.

"We've gotten clearance from the Texas Highway Patrol and the City of Amarillo to do it," he said.

"We're just trying to get a big group together to show that we can get a mass movement going."

Self said the rally should eliminate "any remaining skeptics that feel farmers and ranchers cannot unite."

A program is scheduled to begin at the Fairgrounds Coliseum at 2 p.m. on Oct. 14, Self said. He said a schedule of speakers would be released later.

Self was critical of remarks made by the president of the American Farm Bureau Wednesday in Wichita, Kan.

Allan Grant said he believes the farmers' strike proposal would have "little effect," and if demands for parity prices for farm products were met, the U. S. would "price itself out of foreign markets."

Yanks' stopper, starter humbles Royals

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, led by their stopper and their starter, won the game they had to win, evening their American League playoff series with the Kansas City Royals at one victory apiece.

The stopper was Ron Guidry, who overpowered the Royals with a tidy three-hitter. The starter was Cliff Johnson, who ignited the Yankees' dormant bats with a home run and a run-scoring double.

The efforts of the slender Guidry and the massive Johnson propelled the Yankees to a 6-2 triumph Thursday night and turned the best-of-five AL pennant series into a two-out-of-three affair.

The first of those three games at Kansas City's Royals Stadium is tonight, with righthander Dennis Leonard, Kansas City's 20-game winner, against Mike Torrez, 17-13, this season.

Guidry, the ragin' Cajun from Carencro, La., almost didn't make the Yankees in spring training, only going north with the team because New York didn't have any other left-handed relievers. At one point in spring training, Yankee manager Billy Martin joked to the 27-year-old: "If there's anybody in the American League you can get out, tell me and I'll let you pitch to him."

Once the season started and Guidry was forced into the starting rotation, the lanky lefthander was getting everybody in the AL out.

"That's the way he's pitched all year," said Martin after Guidry's masterful performance kept the Yankees from the edge of extinction. "He's one great pitcher. He kept us in the picture all season."

Guidry, 16-7 this year and a winner of 11 of his last 14 decisions, said his spring swoon didn't affect his confidence. "I just hoped I wasn't gonna be judged by the spring I had. I knew I could pitch up here.

"I didn't feel any pressure all season. I really don't know what pressure is."

Guidry, forced into the Yankees' starting rotation because of injuries to veterans Catfish Hunter, Don Gullett and Ed Figueroa, was coveted by the Royals, and two years ago he was all but on his way to Kansas City.

But Kansas City Manager Whitey Herzog said that Birdie Tebbets, the Yankees' chief scout, vetoed the deal.

Herzog would have loved to have Guidry wearing Kansas City blue rather than the Yankee pinstripes Thursday night.

"He pitched a great ball game. He had great stuff, a great breaking ball," said Herzog, whose club was limited to Frank White's single in the third, Freddie Patek's double in the sixth and George Brett's single in the ninth. "He's a really good pitcher."

Although the Royals never went after the 6-foot-4, 225-pound Johnson, they would have preferred if he played for somebody besides the Yankees.

Called "The Monster" by Martin, Johnson creates excitement at the plate, swinging from the heels on every pitch. The only thing that keeps his body from toppling over is the contact of bat and ball.

With the Yankees trailing 1-0 in the fifth, Johnson hit a towering pop behind home plate which catcher Darrell Porter misplayed, giving the Yankees designated hitter a second life. "I feel I should have caught that ball," Porter said.

Several pitches later, Johnson hit the ball in the opposite direction, more than 130 feet to straightaway center field. Not only did he have to battle one of starter Andy Hassler's fastballs, Johnson had to squint through tearing eyes that were irritated by the wind.

"When I left the on-deck circle and got to the batter's box, my eyes started watering and they wouldn't stop," said Johnson, who smashed 12 homers in 56 games with the Yankees this season. "Just because I hit the home run, it doesn't mean they didn't water."

Johnson, acquired from Houston on June 15 for minor league pitcher Randy Stein and lots of cash, also laced a tie-breaking double in the sixth inning, prompting a standing ovation from the crowd of 56,230 — largest in Yankee Stadium this year — when he went to bat in the eighth inning.

It was a warm feeling," said Johnson. "These people in New York are about to spoil me."

The sixth inning was crucial for the Yankees. It took a controversial play in the top of the sixth to really snap the Yankees alive in the bottom of the sixth.

With the Yankees ahead 2-1, Kansas City's Freddie Patek led off the sixth with a double off the wall in right-center field. Designated hitter Hal McRae followed with a walk. Then Brett, hitless in seven previous at-bats, grounded a ball to third baseman Graig Nettles, who fired to second baseman Willie Randolph for a forceout. But McRae's rolling tackle knocked Randolph to the ground. While the two players were entangled, Patek raced home with the tying run.

"That was no slide, it was a clip," said Martin, who protested, unsuccessfully to second base umpire Marty Springstead that McRae's action should be ruled interference. "I didn't think it was very professional. Second basemen can get their careers ruined that way."

"The last time a guy did that to me when I was playing, I threw the ball in his mouth. Mr. McRae did a nice thing and woke us all up."

Phillies' center field is double duty headache

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies Manager Danny Ozark was expected to have a double-barreled center field headache today for the third game of the best-of-five National League championship series against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Phillies and Dodgers are 1-1 after splitting the first two games in Los Angeles. The action resumed today at the Phillies' Veterans Stadium before a sellout crowd of more than 60,000.

two games, with two runs scored, a home run and one run batted in, injured the toe when he crashed into the center field wall in the second game trying to grab a drive by Reggie Smith that went for a triple. At first he complained of a shoulder problem. But later the toe began to throb. He apparently kicked the wall.

"It hurts," said McBride, who had trouble walking let alone running.

PHILLIES' TRAINER Don Seger tried to brush off the McBride injury, saying, "He'll play. We'll hit it with a hammer and it'll be okay."

But McBride didn't look like he was ready to chase down drives to the outfield.

Meanwhile, Seger said he felt that Maddox might be able to play, if there was no fluid on the knee injured in the final game of the regular season Sunday when he fouled off a pitch.

Seger said Maddox has had continual treatment in an ice machine, a pressure device which circulates cold water at an adjustable pressure. Maddox has spent several hours with the knee in the machine since Sunday.

Despite the trainer's optimism and a tentative okay from the team doctor, Philip Marone, Ozark said, "I would think he couldn't play. At best I would use him only as a pinch hitter."

BUT OZARK may have had to take a chance with Maddox if McBride couldn't make it.

However, if these cases ran true to form, both Maddox and McBride were expected to be in the lineup against Dodgers' starter Burt Hooton, 12-7.

Hooton, 0-2 against the East Division champions this season, nonetheless, had a 2.40 earned run average against the Phils. He throws a knuckle curve that has bothered the Phillies.

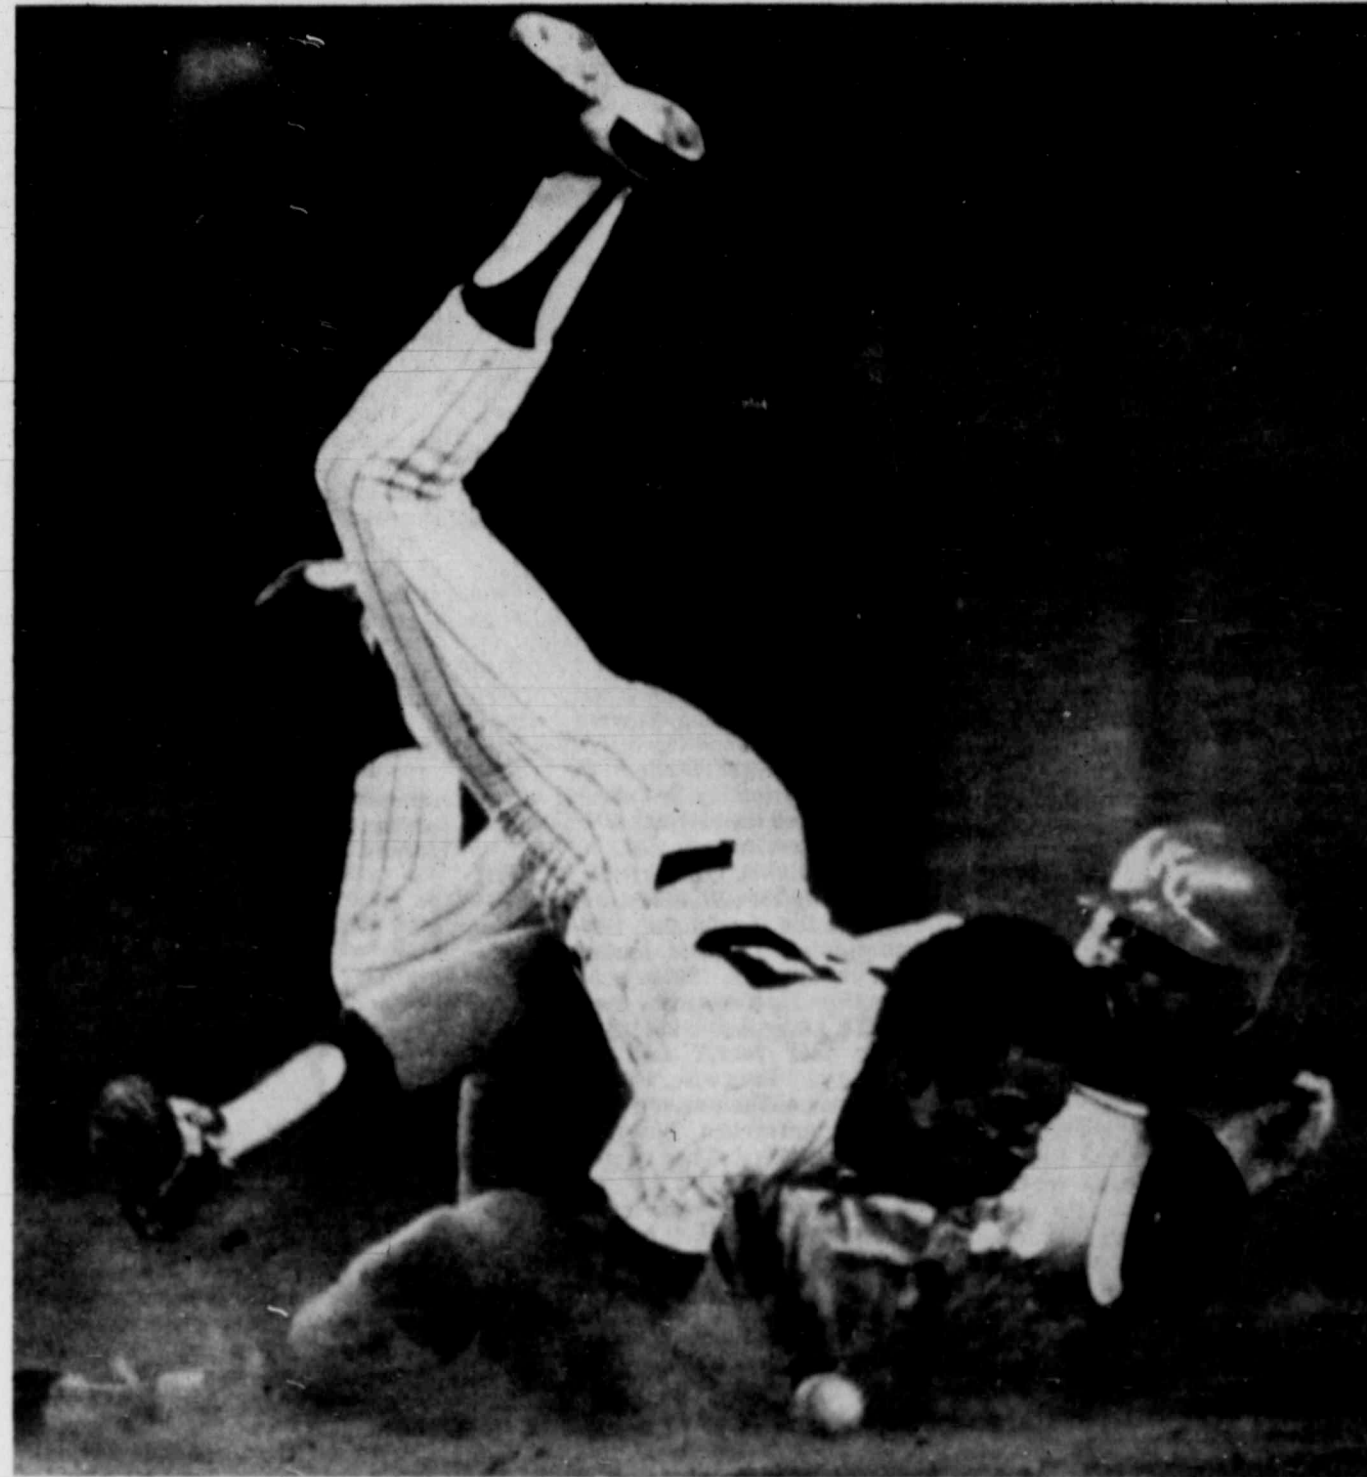

In addition to McBride, Hooton had to check Richie Hebner, hitting .400 in the series, and Greg Luzinski with a .286 mark, one homer, two RBI and two runs scored. Slugging Mike Schmidt had just one hit in seven at-bats.

OZARK STARTED Larry Christenson, 19-6, who won 15 of his last 16 starts, but had had trouble finishing because of a blister on his pitching hand that breaks and bleeds after six or seven innings. The blister is particularly aggravated by the slider pitch.

Christenson, 0-2 with a 12.00 ERA against Los Angeles in the regular season, faced such tough hitters as Ron Cey, .429 in the first two games; Dusty Baker, .286 with a grand slam homer that won game two; Steve Garvey, .429, and Dave Lopes, .333. Cey hit a grand slam in game one, won by the Phillies 7-5. The Dodgers took the second game 7-1.

THE WEST Division champion Dodgers were 2-4 in Philadelphia in regular season play, but then not many teams beat the Phillies at home, where Ozark's team was a remarkable 60-21 in the drive to the East title.

Hooton tried to put the home advantage in perspective, commenting, "The only thing that is different is that we'll bat first and they'll bat second, and we'll wear gray and they'll wear their pinstripes."

Willie Randolph, New York Yankee second baseman, is aggressively upset by sliding Hal McRae of the Kansas City Royals in sixth inning of American League playoff game in New York Thursday. (AP Laserphoto)

OZARK HAS had to go the first two games without his secretary of defense in center field, angular Garry Maddox, who hit .293 during the regular season and ran down everything hit inside the stadium. Bake McBride moved from right to center and Jay Johnstone and Jerry Martin platooned in right in the games at Dodger Stadium.

But now, not only was Maddox questionable for the third game, but McBride was limping with an injured big toe on his left foot. The toe was X-rayed Thursday night, but the results were inconclusive. The X-ray technicians want to take a better look.

MADDOX TOOK batting practice Thursday and ran at full speed in the outfield, but Ozark still wasn't satisfied that it was worth the gamble to play his regular center fielder.

"We can win this thing without Garry Maddox," Ozark said at a partial team workout Thursday. "I'm more interested in Maddox being ready for the World Series."

BROWNS STEP lightly

By BRUCE LOWITT

Pity the poor Cleveland Browns. After surviving collisions with the Cincinnati Bengals and New England Patriots, they ran into the Pittsburgh Steelers. And now they're confronted by the Oakland Raiders.

That's like surviving artillery and a minefield, crashing into a cement wall and landing in the path of an onrushing locomotive.

Raiders 27, Browns 19

Calling Oakland a juggernaut is understating the case. The Raiders are capable of doing almost anything to anybody on a football field. The Browns have got to be just plain exhausted, mentally and physically.

Colts 28, Dolphins 14

Baltimore has looked strangely unimpressive thus far while Miami has built its record with victories over nobodies. Both teams will be high for this meeting, but the Colts have the manpower to get higher.

Jets 23, Bills 13

New York's young defense is beginning to put things together. The only thing the Bills have been able to put together is the league's longest current losing streak.

Falcons 20, 49ers 12

The 49ers have shown virtually nothing up to now. Atlanta will show them the same sound defense they showed the equally inept Giants, with the same results.

Eagles 17, Giants 10

All a team has to do to beat the Giants is rush the quarterback. Philadelphia will take the cue from Atlanta.

Rams 31, Bears 16

With the Jets, Namath was 0-7 under ABC's lights. He may not be as electrifying with Los Angeles as he was with New York, but at least he's a winner again. Chicago's going nowhere against the Battering Rams.

Bengals 24, Packers 10

Cincinnati, which thought it had a breather and got strangled last Sunday by San Diego, finally will get its act together. Green Bay can stop the other guys only for a while.

Steelers 27, Oilers 6

Playing the Steelers is like walking down a dark street with $20 bills hanging out of your pockets. It's an invitation to a mugging. The Oilers will RSVP.

Vikings 26, Lions 14

Minnesota may never look back the rest of the season after this game—unless the Lions or Bears can put hot streaks and upsets on the board. And Detroit simply doesn't win the big ones.

Chargers 17, Saints 16

Or it could be the other way around. We happen to think the defense San Diego showed last Sunday is a touch more real than the offense New Orleans showed.

Cowboys 34, Cardinals 17

Before the season began, we'd have guessed this game would be a wild shoot-out. But it seems Dallas now has all the bullets.

Broncos 20, Chiefs 10

It's Denver's last time to live it up this season before the Broncos get busted by Oakland next Sunday.

Patriots 30, Seahawks 13

There's nothing like a so-so expansion team to make a sick contender well again...

Redskins 23, Bucs 3

...and nothing like a crummy one to make a so-so team feel great.

Minnesota may never look back the rest of the season after this game—unless the Lions or Bears can put hot streaks and upsets on the board. And Detroit simply doesn't win the big ones.

Chargers 17, Saints 16

Or it could be the other way around. We happen to think the defense San Diego showed last Sunday is a touch more real than the offense New Orleans showed.

Cowboys 34, Cardinals 17

Before the season began, we'd have guessed this game would be a wild shoot-out. But it seems Dallas now has all the bullets.

Broncos 20, Chiefs 10

It's Denver's last time to live it up this season before the Broncos get busted by Oakland next Sunday.

Patriots 30, Seahawks 13

There's nothing like a so-so expansion team to make a sick contender well again...

Redskins 23, Bucs 3

...and nothing like a crummy one to make a so-so team feel great.

It took six generations of Beams to be satisfied that this is the best way to make 90-proof sour mash whiskey.

With 182 years of experience, you'd think we could make this whiskey faster than we do. We could, but we won't. We make 101-month-old Beam's Sour Mash Whiskey to be enjoyed, not guzzled.

Once we start aging Beam's Sour Mash for 101 months, there isn't much to do. Mostly, we take it easy while this slow, careful, uncompromising process turns out the Sour Mash Whiskey we've been looking for.

We're not sure why slow-aging a minimum of 101 months is the secret of this whiskey. All we know is that at 90-Proof it yields a Sour Mash of truly exceptional taste.

Something else we discovered. By charcoal-filtering after aging instead of before (like some whiskeys), we assured even more mellow smoothness.

The result is a Sour Mash Whiskey that is about as close to perfection as anybody's going to get.

Enjoy it without hurrying. Savor it the same way we make it. Slowly and leisurely.

Beam family members, Jerry and Booker, check a barrel of Beam Sour Mash Whiskey as it ages 101 long, slow months.

Texas, Sooner clash old hat

By The Associated Press

It's getting to be old hat. Every time Texas plays Oklahoma, it seems that both teams are undefeated, ranked high in the national poll and ready to tear each other's throats out.

The "Battle of Big D" will be no different this Saturday, when the Longhorns meet the Sooners in a showdown of college football superpowers.

"They have more talent than they've ever had," says Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer, talking about the fifth-ranked Longhorns. "They have a bigplay offense. They have more speed than any Texas team—or for that matter—any team we've played."

Despite a high-powered Texas offense that has produced the biggest point production in the country, Oklahoma is a three-point favorite in the traditional game at Dallas. But obviously the Sooners will have to corral that blazing Longhorn speed if they hope to wear the bronze Cowboy Hat trophy that annually goes to the winner.

"Texas really throws you off balance," said Switzer, whose team is ranked No. 2 in the country. "They have a lot of different formations and certainly aren't like Texas teams of the past."

The Oklahoma-Texas rivalry, which started in 1900, has been a series of dramatic power changes. Texas took charge at the start, then Oklahoma took command under the brilliant administration of Bud Wilkinson in the 1950s before Darrell Royal, a Wilkinson pupil, turned the series around again in Texas' favor in the 1960s.

This is the 20th time in the distinguished series that both teams have gone into the game unbeaten. The Longhorns spoiled the Sooners' undefeated season 17 times in the past, while Oklahoma has turned the trick on Texas seven times.

Royal retired last season after posting a 12-7-1 record against the Sooners. Now, as athletic director at Texas, he'll be watching Saturday's game from the press box instead of worrying on the field.

In Royal's place will be Fred Akers, an old acquaintance of Switzer's. "I've always respected Fred and the kind of job he does, and I hope nothing comes between us," said Switzer, who played football with Akers at Arkansas. "I will work at keeping our friendship that way—and I hope winning and losing doesn't influence that."

Switzer has helped improve Oklahoma's record against Texas with three victories and last year's 6-6 tie. The series now stands at 42-26-3 in the Longhorns' favor.

In another big game involving two of the nation's Top Ten teams, top-ranked Southern Cal entertains No. 7 Alabama in the Los Angeles Coliseum and neither coach knows what to expect.

"One of the problems of a young team like ours is you can be great one week and lousy the next," said Southern Cal Coach John Robinson, whose team is 4-0 this season and has won its last 15 games. "But it's exciting as heck for us to play Alabama."

"Maybe we can do it, maybe we can't do it and maybe even we'll be terrible," says Alabama's Bear Bryant. "But I'm glad we're going to play them."

Alabama, a 31-24 loser to Nebraska three weeks ago, brings a 3-1 record into the nationally televised game.

Michigan, the nation's No. 3 team, plays a traditional game with Michigan State, although the fierce rivalry has been more competitive in past years. The Wolverines are coming off an impressive 41-3 victory over Southwest Conference power Texas A&M while Michigan State is on a downcurve as the result of NCAA probationary measures.

Purdue Coach Jim Young says he will live or die with the pass when his team meets No. 4 Ohio State.

"You have to go with your strength," says Young, meeting his old college tutor, Woody Hayes, for the first time.

Young was a defensive back on Hayes' first national championship team at Ohio State in 1954.

In other games involving Top Ten teams, Oklahoma State will play No. 6 Colorado; No. 9 Nebraska meets Kansas State and Utah State visits No. 10 Penn State.

Elsewhere, it's No. 13 Brigham Young at Oregon State; No. 14 California at Washington; No. 15 Pitt at No. 20 Florida; Mississippi State at No. 16 Kentucky; No. 17 Texas Tech at Arizona; No. 18 LSU at Vanderbilt and Illinois at No. 19 Wisconsin.

Cowboys face St. Louis terror

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

The Dallas Cowboys have this thing about winning in St. Louis. They can't.

It's been four years now since the Cowboys have been able to beat the Cardinals on their home turf, and Sunday they'll be trying to dissolve that chain of disappointments and keep their 1977 record unblemished.

The Pokes enter Sunday's nationally televised contest a six-point favorite. A sellout crowd of 51,392 is expected for the 3 p.m. (CDT) kickoff in Busch Stadium.

Dallas holds a 16-13-1 advantage in the series with the Cardinals, but they have not been able to beat their NFC East rival in Busch since 1973 when they prevailed, 30-3. Since then, St. Louis has won three straight at home—31-28 in '74, 31-17 in '75 and 31-28 a year ago. The Cards however, have had even more difficulties. They've never beaten the Cowboys in Texas Stadium, and their last win over Dallas came way back in 1970 in the Cotton Bowl.

"It's an intense rivalry," said Cowboy coach Tom Landry. "And in a situation like that, the home field advantage plays a very important role."

If Dallas were ever in a position to rock the boat, now's the time. The Cowboys' record speaks for itself. They are the only unbeaten team in the National Football Conference right now, and appear to be getting better with every passing week.

Not so with the Cards. They have lost two of their first three games and a loss Sunday could be a crushing blow to their playoff hopes.

Defensively, they're probably even better than last year, but St. Louis has been having their problems offensively. Injuries have crippled them. All-Pro running back Terry Metcalf has been playing with a broken hand, and the little speedster who has spearheaded the Cards running game the last several years, has carried the ball just 19 times in his team's first three games.

Old reliable, quarterback Bill Hart is healthy though. In last week's 24-14 loss to the Washington Redskins, he completed 17 of 31 passes for 258 yards. But the 'Skins scored three times on big plays to ice the win.

"St. Louis is playing better defense than last year," said a cautious Landry. "Otherwise, I see very little difference. Their offense hasn't really gotten untracked, but the weapons are still there. They're going to explode sooner or later."

Landry would prefer later. Eral Allen, the Cowboys' special assistant who heads the team's Research and Development program and who scouted St. Louis last week, concurs with Landry's comments. "It's always a tough game against St. Louis, and this is not going to be any exception. Metcalf does have a broken hand, but he's been returning kickoffs and punts so it can't be hurting him that much.

"They average almost seven years of professional experience per man and are carrying just four rookies on their entire club. So we know what to expect."

With the season not even a quarter of the way over, Landry was not ready to say exactly how important this game is.

"I don't know how critical they are right now," he explained. "The season is young yet, and we just want to play well. We're improving each week. I see a lot of things going better. "But championships are won in the second half of the season. As long as we're in striking distance after seven games, I'll be satisfied."

From the looks of things, the Cowboys will be. It's the rest of the NFC East that may not.

COWBOY YARNS: The Cowboys will be wearing their blue jerseys in the St. Louis game. They've worn them in the last three losses to the Cards. Dallas got out of the Tampa game without any serious injuries. Left guard Herb Scott, who missed last Sunday's contest because of a pulled hamstring muscle, will be back in the lineup against St. Louis. Robert Newhouse (offense), Thomas Henderson (defense) and Benny Barnes (special teams) were awarded game balls after the Tampa Bay win. Landry was asked if he would settle for a split in the St. Louis-Washington games the next two weeks: "Yes, if the alternative is losing both of them."

Hale Irwin favored in World Match Play

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — It's not always great golf on the wet fairways and amid the dripping trees of Wentworth's "Burma Road" course. But Hale Irwin is a strong favorite to win the World Match Play title for the third time in four years.

"It's that kind of weather and it's that kind of golf course," Irwin said as he prepared to face Australia's Graham March today in the semifinals.

"With all the slop and the junk, you're not going to hit a lot of great shots. First you have a muddy lie, and then one in the wet grass. Is the ball going to fly or isn't it?"

"None of the guys are playing fantastic golf, and you can't wonder."

But Irwin had no need for apologies. He had an eagle and nine birdies in thrashing Hugh Baiocchi of South Africa 8 and 7 over a scheduled 36 holes Thursday on the 6,969-yard layout.

The British have come to regard Irwin as a ruthless matchplay competitor. He won this title in 1974 and 1975 and was runner-up to David Graham of Australia last year. This time, the bookies, legal here, now make him the 7-2 favorite to win the first prize of $52,500.

Halfway through the marathon tournament—four days of 36-hole a day matches—Irwin said: "I don't consider myself ruthless. And I can't say I'm anxious to play in a lot of match-play events. But this is the only tournament of its kind. You need to challenge yourself sometimes, and this is a different way of doing it."

Of the five Americans who set out in the field of 16, only two were left in contention—Irwin and Ray Floyd, who edged Lanny Wadkins 1-up Thursday in a tense match.

In the semifinals today, Floyd was matched against Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, who in a pair of 36-hole matches thus far had not three-putted a single hole. Ballesteros made 11 birdies Thursday in upsetting Tom Watson, the Masters and British Open champion, 5 and 4.

Marsh, Irwin's next opponent, won 3 and 2 over the other Spanish hope, Manuel Piñero.

Watson was far from his best. After being five down at the 20th hole, he cut Ballesteros' lead to three by the 28th. But the Spaniard canned a 25-foot putt for a winning par at the next hole, then birdied the 30th and was five up again. Watson could not wriggle out of that.

"It was just one of those bad days," Watson said. "I don't like to play badly and lose, but that is what I did, simply."

Thursday's four quarter-finals losers departed Wentworth with prizes of $10,500.

The day's form pointed to a likely Irwin-Ballesteros final Saturday. But each faced another grueling 36-hole match before that.

"The closer you get to the final, the less you feel those weary legs," Irwin said.

Sims is doubtful

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Billy Sims, Oklahoma's second leading rusher through the early part of this season, is still a doubtful starter for Saturday's Oklahoma-Texas college football clash in Dallas.

But Coach Barry Switzer said Thursday that the halfback has been making some progress.

"Sims ran better today, but he is still not well," Switzer said. "I doubt he will play. Right now I would say he wouldn't. If he doesn't run at full speed tomorrow he won't even make the trip down."

Switzer said he was pleased with the Sooners Thursday practice. "We had a pretty good practice. We worked hard on the kicking game. It will be pretty important."

Sophomore Barry Joyner, who was a red-shirt candidate, will join the traveling squad to Dallas, said J.C. Watts, who has been rumored to be another red-shirt candidate, will not make the trip. Watts had been practicing as a backup to quarterback Thomas Lott.

Johnson backs Anderson

CINCINNATI (AP) —

Coach Bill Johnson of the Cincinnati Bengals has no plans to play musical quarterbacks.

"Ken Anderson is our quarterback," said Johnson, quashing speculation that John Reaves might start Sunday at Green Bay.

Anderson's, once-brilliant play has soured in the past month, resulting in rare criticism of the 28-year-old quarterback. He has taken the brunt of second-guessing after the Bengals dropped two of their first three starts.

Cincinnati managed only a field goal in each of the upsets at the hands of Cleveland and San Diego.

But Johnson isn't Anderson for the Bengals hitting the panic button, sluggish start.

"All my life, I've felt Anderson, whose 57.8 this way. I don't think a career completion guy has to go out and average is the best complete for his job among active National everyday," he said. Football League quarterback Johnson said "it is not terbacks, said it is simply fair" to pin all blame on a matter of relaxing.

Football

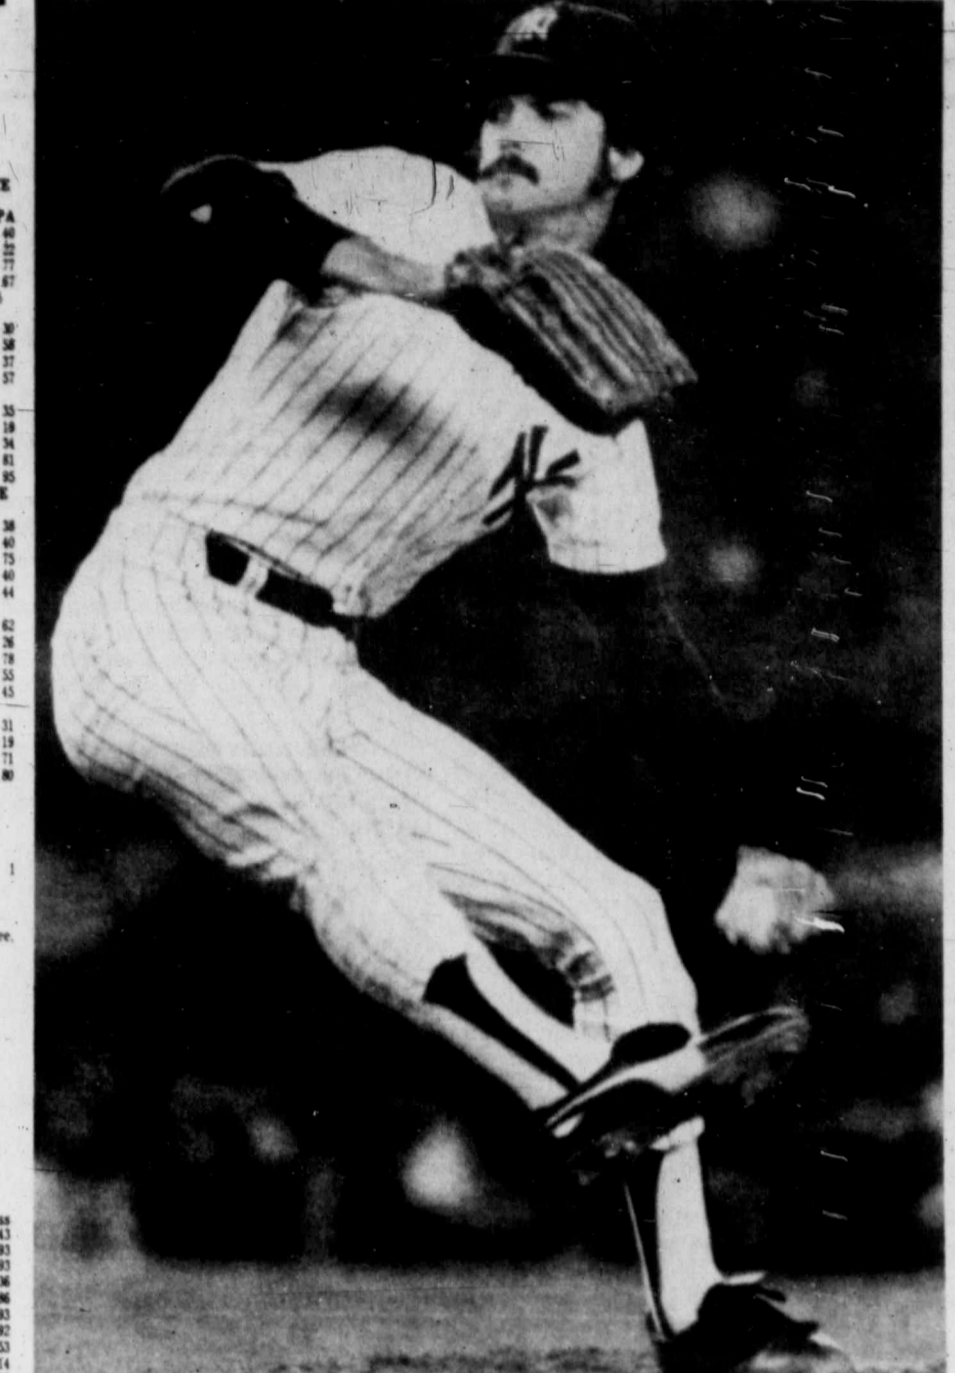

NEW YORK — The National Football League has suspended an official for two games because of a mechanical error he made in last Sunday's Buffalo-Baltimore contest.
 The league office said that Gerry Hart, an umpire with the NFL for 10 years, was suspended for a goof that cost Buffalo the last six seconds to get off a final play. The Bills lost the game 17-11.
 The suspension following a complaint by the Bills and a review of video tapes and film, will cost Hart $1,000, or $525 a game.
GENERAL
KANSAS CITY, Nev. — A mistrial was declared in the trial of a former brother security guard accused of murdering a woman. The jury was unable to reach a verdict on the charge of first-degree murder. The case is set for a new trial in September.
Carson District Court Judge Frank Gregory abruptly called a halt to the proceedings when he learned that Nevada's brother owner, Joe Conforte, had been arrested on charges of murdering a woman.
Shawanna, 31, was gunned down in front of Conforte's Mustang Ranch, brother on May 22, 1976.
 Shawanna, the seventh-ranked world heavyweight at his death, fought many big names in boxing but never for a title. He was being managed by Conforte's wife, Sally, at the time of his death. There reportedly had been a falling out between Conforte and the fighter.

Losers highlight SWC schedule

By The Associated Press
 While fifth-ranked Texas tangles with second-ranked Oklahoma Saturday in the Cotton Bowl, there will be two Southwest Conference clashes that rank second to none on the competitive scale.
 Winless Texas Christian is at Rice and the two teams produced a 26-23 thriller last year won by the Owls and their All-American quarterback Tommy Kramer.
 And what about last year's Baylor-Southern Methodist encounter? Baylor beat the Mustangs 27-20 in a wild battle that produced over 600 yards of offense.
 SMU again visits Baylor Stadium and offensive fireworks are expected.
 "Baylor has a fine team with a great secondary," said SMU Coach Ron Meyer. "Our exhibition season is over and we are 2-2 and 500. We've solidified our personnel and our program. We feel good about our progress."
 Meyer added "Baylor has the best 1-3 team in the country."
 TCU coach F.A. Dry visualizes a passing blitz in Houston when the Horned Frogs take on the Owls.
 "Rice is a passing team and this will be different from what we've played the last two weeks," said Dry. "Arkansas and Southern California both rely heavily on the run, we'll really have to emphasize pass defense."
 Against Arkansas, Dry played 23 freshmen.
 "We are playing a lot of youngsters, but in every game they gain confidence in themselves," said Dry. "The more game experience they get, the more poise they will get."
 Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — Irishman Christy O'Connor will defend his World Senior Professional Golf Championship Sunday in a 36-hole match against Julius Boros, a twotime winner of the U.S. Open.
 A victory would make the 52-year-old O'Connor only the third player to win two straight titles in the British-American series for professional golfer: 50 years old or older.
 Sam Snead, a five-time winner, put together two victories in a row twice—in 1964-65 and in 1972-73. Paul Runyan did it in 1961-62.
 "This will be the second appearance for both O'Connor, who made his debut with a 3 and 2 victory in Ireland last year over Pete Cooper, and Boros, a 4 and 3 loser in the 1971 final to Australian Kel Nagle.

Scalpers love ABC football ban

DALLAS (AP) — The ticket scalpers of Texas and Oklahoma would like to take this moment to thank ABC-TV for not televising the annual Texas-OU classic.
 With no live television in the Dallas area this year, the scalping business is booming for Saturday's game in the Cotton Bowl between the Sooners, ranked No. 2 in the nation, and the fifth-ranked Longhorns.
 Expert scalpers, whose business was legalized by the Texas Legislature in 1975, predict desperate fans will pay as much as $200 for one of precious 72,000 seats to the perennially sold-out game.
 "They're going higher than last year because there's no live TV," observed one man who said he'd been selling the tickets for several years.
 "There is a remote chance that some are going for $200 and the $15 range is for your choice seats."
 "But I would say the average price for a ticket is from $75 to $90 or $100."
 Tickets for the 72nd renewal of the bitter rivalry have been exhausted since June 6. The game has been sold out for the last 33 years.
 "There is no public sale of Texas-OU tickets — they are sold for the regular price of $12 only for lucky season ticket holders and students."
 "Our season ticket holders have first crack at the Oklahoma game," said Greg Hager, director of events for the University of Texas athletic department. "We begin taking season ticket applications in early summer and normally we get more applications than we can fill. This year we returned about 1,300 applications, most of them for two or more tickets."
 "This is the 33rd straight year the game has been sold out, and I can't say next year's game will be sold out by June 1," added Hager. "This is one game we never have to worry about selling out."
 Autumn in Dallas is usually marked by the classified ads either offering tickets for exorbitant prices or piteously begging to pay top dollar for them.
 "I would say this year the tickets are as high as I've ever seen them," said Tom Smith, who has sold 17 of his 25 tickets since Monday, the 25th going for "about $125."
 "They're going from about $65-$85 in the end zone and $200 on the fifty," he added. "But I don't know of any who have bought the $200 tickets yet."
 Jeweler Paul Morgan says he is desperate, but not $150 desperate.
 "I've been trying to get two groups of four tickets together for my customers," he said. "I've been offering to buy them for $75 a ticket, but so far no one has been willing to sell. Callers have asked anywhere from $100 to $150."
 Meanwhile, State Fair spokesmen warned that it's important to know your scalper. Tickets bought from students are worthless without an accompanying student ID card — with a picture.

Whitworth, Rankin return praises

CROSBY, Tex. (AP) — Kathy Whitworth was among the favorites in the $50,000 Ladies Professional Golfers Association championship tournament today but she picks another player as the one to beat.
 Miss Whitworth, the all-time money winner, says Judy Rankin will win the tournament which is returning to the Houston area after a three-year lapse.
 However, Mrs. Rankin suffered a back spasm Thursday and had an appointment with a Houston doctor to determine if she can play in the tournament.
 Mrs. Rankin, who has won more than $100,000 this season and is first on the money list, was still Miss Whitworth's favorite.
 "I've seen her when she was ailing and she still played great," she said. "She's a gutsy, little gal and rarely puts the ball out of play."
 Other favorites include Debbi Austin, a multiple winner this season, Mary Mills, Pam Higgins, Laura Baugh, Jan Stephenson, Kathy Cornelius and Amy Alcott.
 Jo Anne Garner and Jane Bialock, runners-up in the money race to Mrs. Rankin, are not entered in this tournament.
 Miss Alcott thinks she has a good chance to take top money.
 "I'm winless this year," admitted the three-year pro from California, "but I've finished in the top 10 in my last 10 tournaments and I'm due for a win."
 Miss Whitworth has won more than $600,000 in her career. From 1965 to 1973, she won the money title eight times.
 She said she had cut back on her schedule.
 "That's why I'm glad I'm not the top money winner," she said. "When you're on top, it's just too tough and there's too much pressure. You can't afford to miss a week. I don't push it like I used to. I take some time off in the summer."
 Eighty-three pros and five amateurs will compete in the 54-hole event at the Newport Yacht & Country Club.

Trojans to test Alabama

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Southern California Coach John Robinson and Alabama Coach Bear Bryant say they don't know what to expect when the top-ranked Trojans and seventh-ranked Crimson Tide collide on Saturday, but both are eager for the meeting.
 "One of the problems of a young team like ours is you can be great one week and lousy the next," said Robinson, whose team is 4-0 this season and has won its last 15 games. "But it's exciting as heck for us to play Alabama."
 "Maybe we can do it, maybe we can't do it and maybe even we'll be terrible," said Bryant. "But I'm glad we're going to play them."
 Alabama, a 31-24 loser to Nebraska three weeks ago, brings a 3-1 mark into the nationally televised game that begins at 3:50 p.m. EDT.
 "Coach Robinson obviously has a great team," Bryant said. "Heck, they beat Washington State 41-7 and that's the team that beat Nebraska and everyone knows Nebraska beat us."
 Bryant lists what he considers USC's outstanding strengths.
 "Southern Cal is supposed to have the greatest runner they've had since O. J. Simpson in a youngster named (Charles) White, they've got a couple of other real fine runners, the best quarterback they've had in years and one pass receiver who has caught passes in something like 28 straight games," Bryant said.
 The Trojans, boasting a balanced air and ground attack and a defense that has allowed just 27 points, have looked good this season.
 White, the sophomore starter at tailback, has gained 552 yards on 45 carries and scored four touchdowns in the Trojans' four victories, while his junior understudy, Dwight Ford, has picked up 244 yards on just 23 carries and also scored four times.
 USC quarterback Rob Hertel has completed 39 of 68 passes for 621 yards and five touchdowns, and split end Randy Simmrin — who owns the streak Bryant was referring to — has caught 16 passes for 352 yards and three scores.
 Although Southern Cal is favored, Robinson said Alabama has the talent to beat anyone.
 "I have tremendous respect for Alabama's ability now," the Trojan coach said. "In particular, they have great offensive talent and great offensive imagination."
 Robinson said the Crimson Tide wishbone, run by junior quarterback Jeff Rattledge, particularly worries him since the Trojans haven't faced that offense since 1975.

Rebels take on San Angelo in rebound game

By PAUL DOMOWITZ
R-T Sports Writer

SAN ANGELO — If it's really true that football is so very much like life, then the manner in which the Lee football team lost to Odessa last Friday should really be looked upon as a blessing.

We're always talking about how when it comes time for us to die we hope it happens fast, and that's exactly how death came to the Rebels a week ago — fast.

Like some sort of massive heart attack that strikes without warning, Neal Gray's 90-yard touchdown pass to Cal Adams on the last play of the game to give the Bronchos a 13-7 victory shut off all life in the Rebel body in seconds. There was no time for resuscitation. No time for treatment.

But there is no permanence to football. Death lasts little more than a day, and then the victim recovers, a little dazed and a little scarred, but alive nonetheless.

The Rebels have had a week, to recuperate since then, and tonight they take their scarred, dazed bodies into Bobcat Stadium here for an 8 p.m. contest with favored San Angelo Central. Lee coach Jim Acree is praying death doesn't strike again so soon, quick or otherwise.

"We just have to put what happened last week behind us," Acree said, "and get ready for tonight. We can't fix what happened in the past but we can do something about the future."

A year ago, the Rebels also lost their district opener to Odessa, and then bounced back to annihilate San Angelo a week later, 38-13. But a year ago, Lee had district championship hopes as motivation. Now, for reasons which have already taken up too much space in this newspaper, they don't. And only time will tell if that makes any difference.

Lee has been plagued by an inconsistent offense throughout their first three non-district games, and that problem again hurt last week. They managed just 126 yards in total offense against Odessa, with only six of it coming through the air.

"Our offense is just not where we had hoped it would be at this point in the season," complained Acree. "Our defense has been doing a real good job but we've got to get some offense. We can't expect our defense to spend all night out there on the field."

The Rebels do have a capable running game led by fullback Jeff McCowan, who is averaging 6.5 yards a crack, Marvin Iglehart (6.0) and John Marks (5.0), but they have not been able to sustain long drives. Penalties, fumbles and mental mistakes have all taken their toll on them.

Another bad break was the loss of offensive guard Stan Carter, who broke his hand in the El Paso Burges game two weeks ago and is out indefinitely.

San Angelo has been bitten by the injury bug also. They will be without wingback Carl Brainard tonight, who

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Coach Tom Nissalke had little praise for his Rockets following after their latest exhibition victory.

"The game was really sloppy," said Nissalke of Houston's 113-107 National Basketball Association triumph over the San Antonio Spurs Thursday night.

"We had numerous offensive breakdowns, but we've got two weeks to get ready for the season and that's plenty of time."

Calvin Murphy tallied 30 points for the Rockets and Rudy Tomjanovich added 28 more as Houston took its fourth straight exhibition victory.

Larry Kenon led the Spurs with 23 points and Billy Paultz added 20 as San Antonio's exhibition record dropped to 1-3.

wrenched his knee last week against Cooper. Brainard had been averaging 8.3 yards a carry before his injury, and his 87-yard punt return for a touchdown in the Cougar contest spelled the difference in the 13-12 win.

But the Bobcats have more than a one-man offense, and Brainard's absence will certainly hurt the Bobcats, but it won't cripple them. Fullback Horace Taylor is averaging seven yards a carry and halfback Glen Payne, 5.4.

Quarterback Danny Abbott threw only two passes against Cooper, but Bobcat coach Smitty Hill expects that situation to be rectified against Lee.

"We went into the game thinking we'd throw more last week," he said. "We usually throw maybe 15 or 17 times a game. But the way the game went, we were always backed up against the wall in our own end, and when we did start moving our running game was getting us yardage so we didn't have to throw it."

Lee's Stonewall Brigade takes first grid win

By BOB DILLON

Thursday night.

After coming close in two games, but drawing four blanks in their first four outings, Coaches Ernie Johnson and Tim Whalen's crew put it together in taking the win over the Bobcats.

"We probably should have shut them out, but a win is a win," commented Johnson after the game. Ernie was referring to San Angelo's two touchdowns which were gifts.

Lee broke open a scoreless deadlock in the second period by punching over a pair of scores for a 14-0 advantage.

Bill McPherson gave Lee its first break of the game by pouncing on a Bobcat fumble at the San Angelo 28 and in just five plays, Lee scored.

Fullback Craig Ellis, who ran well all evening long, picked up nine yards and four plays later, broke on a 16-yard TD run to put the Brigade in front, 6-0. McPherson booted the first of three extra points to make it 7-0 with 11:28 left in the first half.

Mark Bradshaw picked up another Angelo fumble in the second period at the Lee 48 and the Brigade marched 52 yards in 11 plays to score again. Ellis broke on an 18-yard run and capped the drive by barging over from the two with 5:06 left in the period. Mc-

Pherson's PAT made it 14-0.

San Angelo cranked up and when 41 yards after a Lee fumble, William Sanders keyed the drive with some short runs and the Bobcats scored on a pass from the 10-yard line. A pass for the two-pointer failed, however, making it 14-6 in favor of Lee at the intermission.

San Angelo made it interesting in the third period by closing the gap to 14-12 on a 17-yard run by Sanders, but Bradshaw stopped Sanders short of the goal line in the try for the two-pointer.

Tackle Doug Crawford picked off a Bobcat pass in the final periods to give Lee another break at the San Angelo 34.

On the very next play, McPherson fired a TD pass to flanker Joe Windsor to make it 20-12. McPherson's PAT for a 21-12 advantage.

Standouts for Lee on defense were Bradshaw, Stuart Carter, who also went both ways, Ellis, Tom Williams, Steve Waldron, Crawford, Billy Gilliland, McPherson, Richard Doland and Larry Leebetter.

Lee takes a 1-4 record into next week's game with the Abilene Cooper JV in Abilene on Saturday afternoon. San Angelo, meanwhile, is now 2-3 on the year with the loss.

Bulldogs toss off chains as Steers come to town

By BOB DILLON

The Midland High Bulldogs have been chained long enough.

Tonight, the Purple Pack hopes to pick up their initial victory of the football season when they take on Coach Don Robbins' Big Spring Steers in Memorial Stadium.

Kickoff is set for 8 p.m. in Memorial Stadium in a District 5-4A confrontation.

Midland takes a 0-3-1 record into the game while the Steers stand 1-2-1 on the year. Both lost 5-4A openers last weekend with the Pack losing to Odessa Permian, 24-6 and the Steers to Abilene, 30-14.

Coach Jerry Hookins' crew played well against state-ranked Permian last week on defense, but was unable to generate much offense against the Panthers.

BIG SPRING, meanwhile, did manage to score twice on the Warbirds, but were worn down by the Key City team in its opener.

Midland's Wing-T offense has yet to get untracked, much to the puzzlement of several experts along with Hopkins and his staff to boot.

"We didn't have real good workouts this week and I'm hoping this is a good sign," said Hopkins. Sound strange? Not really. You see, when Midland had super workouts before prior games, they didn't play well.

Robbins is highly impressed with Midland's size in the interior line. "They (Midland) are a lot bigger than us and have a lot more depth too," said Robbins.

Hopkins will make several changes in tonight's game with the Steers, inserting David Grimes at a tight end slot and Phillip Wickman, a 205-pound senior, at the quick tackle position.

ON DEFENSE, Hopkins will play Todd Liberty, a 190-pound junior at the left linebacker slot along with Tony McCarthy, a 230-pound senior at tackle. Craig Heineman, 155-pound junior, will start at the safety slot in another change.

The Steers run out of a Pro Set which features a strong passing game when spilt end Kenneth Coffey is healthy. "He (Coffey) got an eye closed by a swinging elbow in the Abilene game early and couldn't see very well and had to leave the game," said Robbins. "He's got great hands and fair speed. Speed is something that we, as a team, don't have much of this year," commented Robbins.

Ricky Myers, a 178-pound junior, backs up senior Mike Abreo. Myers hit 11 of 42 passes last year as a sophomore, good for 105 yards and one touchdown and that came in loop play.

MIDLAND HAS a fine pass catcher too, in senior David Isby who has eight receptions for 184 yards this season for an average of 23 yards per catch.

The leading rusher for the Pack is a gifted junior halfback — Walter Bryson, who has gained 206 yards in 44 carries for a 4.6 average.

Next comes Alvin Price, who has picked up 128 yards in 39 steps.

Sophomore Tracy Gann, handles the punting chores and owns a 35-yard average per boot.

Joining Price and Bryson in the backfield for Midland tonight will be quarterback Doug Atnipp and fullback Brentley Jackson. Jackson was injured in the Permian game, but will start tonight.

"A victory tonight could turn us around and get us started, so we must win against Big Spring in order to do that," said Hopkins.

Western Carolina says infractions were minor

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Sources at Western Carolina University say that loans of cars and money by coaches to players that led to a year's NCAA probation of the school's basketball program were minor infractions.

University officials, who asked that their names not be used, said the money loans totaled less than $200, and many of the violations involved small items like a $4 loan for a haircut or use of a basketball office WATS line.

The car loans were often only technical violations too, a source said, adding that in one instance a player was loaned a car to drive a game film to the airport in Asheville for exchange with another school.

The violations took place in the 1975-76 and 1976-77 seasons. The Catamounts were 8-16 last year. Basketball Coach Fred Conley resigned in June after 2½ years in the job and now coaches at a Florida high school.

NCAA infractions committee chairman Arthur R. Reynolds said the penalties against WCU were "minimal...although certain findings in this case demonstrate a significant disregard for the association's governing legislation on the part of the individuals involved."

Under the terms of the NCAA probation, WCU will be allowed to take part in the Southern Conference tournament, but not in any postseason play after that. The Catamounts are also ineligible for any NCAA-controlled television programs, which does not affect any of the school's plans.

WCU chancellor H.F. Robinson said in a prepared statement, "I deeply regret the actions of those individuals responsible for bringing about this action of the NCAA. Western Carolina University has taken steps to correct the situation, and we have cooperated fully with the NCAA."

Athletic Director Bob Waters said school officials were "disappointed" with the probation ruling, but said the infractions, "though violations according to the letter of the law, were not of a serious nature."

Yankees' golden arms worthless

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The three golden arms of the New York Yankees — $6.1 million worth of useless bone and sinew.

There is Catfish Hunter, price tag $3.5 million, idled by a groin ailment, his future in serious doubt. And Don Gullett, $1.9 million, injury-prone, sidelined by a sore left shoulder. And Ken Holtzman, a $150,000-a-year commodity, rusting away and gathering cobwebs for reasons mysterious and unexplained.

Neatly packaged, they are a trio with a total of 18 championship playoff games, 11 World Series contests, 10 times in the All-Star game.

SHOULD THE Yankees fail to win the American League title or ultimately the World Series, they can lay the blame on an injury jinx, and the bizarre handling of a recognized talent.

Everybody knows what happened to Gullett and the Catfish, but what's the true story on Holtzman?

Holtzman, a winner with Oakland's world champions in 1972, 1973 and 1974, came to the Yankees June 15, 1976 as the center of a 10-player trade with Baltimore. He was signed to a five-year contract at $150,000 a year and was pointed for stardom.

"I was happy to come to the Yankees," Holtzman said. "It had a reputation of being a fine organization. That's why I asked for a long-term contract."

HOLTZMAN HAD a moderate 14-11 record in 1976. The Yankees won the AL pennant, then lost four straight games to the Cincinnati Reds in the World Series. Despite his sparkling credentials, including two no-hit games while with the Chicago Cub, the rangy left-hander watched all the games from the bullpen — never tapped for service.

"I never needed him," said Manager Billy Martin.

"They know where I am," said Holtzman, proud but frustrated. He collected his big paycheck and silently suffered. "I am human like everybody else," he said.

Then came the winter of 1977.

"I got a letter from Gabe Paul (Yankees' president)," Holtzman said. "He told me to forget about the slight in the 1976 series. He said for me to get ready in the spring. The club had plans for me."

HOLTZMAN GOT a few early starts and then went back into deep freeze. Going into the playoffs, he had pitched only 5 1-3 innings since July 15, none since Sept. 10.

Meanwhile Hunter, the righthander for whom owner George Steinbrenner hocked the joint in December, 1974, turned up with an assortment of ailments, went 9-9 and made his last appearance nearly a month ago. Gullett, the young free agent pickup from the Cincinnati Reds, went on the disabled list, returned and got hurt again.

THIS PUT a tremendous strain on the Yankees pitching staff. But Holtzman, with his 4-1 record in three World Series, was allowed to sit and sulk.

Why?

"I gave him a chance — he wasn't pitching well," said Martin.

Steinbrenner and Paul were non-committal. "The manager's decision," both said.

"When Paul told me he was going to use me, he wasn't telling the truth," said Holtzman. "I went to Paul 10 or 11 times and suggested for the good of the club as well as me he should trade me. I got no answer, just double talk. I even offered to adjust my contract."

HOLTZMAN ADMITTED he is as perplexed as anybody about his weird treatment.

"A factory owner buys a $5 million piece of machinery but the foreman refuses to use it," the pitcher said. "What does the owner do, get rid of the machine or fire the foreman?"

Who is the foreman in this analogy — Billy Martin? "Not Billy," said Holtzman. "Gabe Paul."

Tacoma turns down Seattle bid

SEATTLE (AP) — On paper, it seemed to make sense — the Tacoma Mariners of the Pacific Coast League becoming an affiliate of the parent Seattle Mariners of the American League.

Trouble was, Tacoma's baseball fans didn't want any part in a marriage of the Triple A team and the major league club, just 20 miles up the road.

So, next season, the Tacoma players will be wearing pinstriped uniforms and everyone will be calling them the Yankees.

"These people in Tacoma are very provincial," explained Stan Naccarato, the Tacoma club's general manager. "They don't want to be a step-child to Seattle. They're friendly toward Seattle's major league club, but they don't want it forced down their throats."

"We'd definitely be second-rate in Tacoma as a new story. When we play at home, we're No. 1 on the sports page. With all of the overshadowing with a parent team that close, it would be difficult to build interest in the local product."

The Tacoma club's board of directors said thanks but no thanks to the Mariners and a couple of other teams and last week signed a one-year working agreement with the New York Yankees.

"Christmas came pretty early to us in Tacoma," Naccarato said. "The Yankees are the most sought-after franchise in baseball. They love 'em, they hate 'em, but everybody knows that name. I haven't talked to one soul who hasn't been totally turned on by the Yankees."

Tacoma and Seattle did investigate a possible working agreement.

"They just felt with us that close it might hurt their season ticket sales, their advertising and so on," said Lou Gorman, the Mariners' director of operations. "Tacoma had been one of our top considerations, but we understood it could be a handicap."

Seattle, which had no Triple A farm team this season, subsequently signed an agreement with San Jose of the PCL.

The agreement with New York signaled the end of Tacoma's six-year major league affiliation with the Minnesota Twins and the Yankees' 11-year relationship with Syracuse of the International League.

"They haven't had a winner in 18 years in Triple A in Minnesota," Naccarato said.

"That doesn't provide much to look forward to for our fans. But I can't say enough good things about Minnesota."

"Some say Calvin Griffith (the Twins' president and chairman of the board) is cheap. I say he's conservative, and there's a difference. We just decided to talk (with other major league clubs)."

The major hurdle in agreeing on the Tacoma-New York contract was the unusually high cost of workmen's compensation in Washington state. Minnesota paid more than $19,000 in industrial insurance premiums with Tacoma last season, but will pay about $1,300 to operate a Triple A team in Toledo, Ohio, next season, Naccarato said.

The Tacoma-New York agreement calls for Tacoma to pay 25 per cent of the industrial insurance costs, not to exceed $5,000.

Players take shot at agents

TORONTO (AP) — A group of sports players' associations may have a plan to drive fly-by-night sports agents out of professional sports.

Ed Garvey, executive-director of the National Football League Players' Association, said Thursday that association directors representing athletes in the NFL, the National Hockey League, the National Basketball Association and major league baseball will meet soon to try to agree on such a plan.

Garvey said the plan would require an accused agent to defend himself before the American Arbitration Association, a group that already adjudicates similar disputes in other fields.

"The plan could make an agent more accountable for his actions. The agent would be suspended from an agent directory published and controlled by the players' associations if an independent tribunal upheld a complaint against him."

"It could be assumed that if you appeared in this directory you were an agent in good standing," Garvey said. "If not, it could be assumed somewhere down the line a business practice you employed was found questionable."

"We're not in a position to make the law, but by instituting a directory of reputable agents, you give the player some insight into what and who he is dealing with. If a name is not in this directory, you are, in effect, doing the job of a regulatory body."

The associations also are considering a standard contract, to which all players and agents would be asked to agree.

The plan has been prompted by several agent-player conflicts over the past few years. Garvey, together with NHLPA executive-director Alan Eagleson, NBAPA executive-director Larry Fleisher and Marvin Miller, executive-director of the major league players, agree that some way is needed to regulate agents.

Garvey and Eagleson are concerned about possible repetitions of an incident involving agent Richard Sorkin of New York. Sorkin, who represented several hockey and basketball players, pleaded guilty last month to seven counts of grand larceny. Sorkin had misappropriated money the players had entrusted to him.

Miller said some baseball clubs try to get players to hire lawyers or agents with whom the club managements get along well.

"It has been the case that clubs have been making direct payment to agents," Miller said. "I have run into situations, unwholesome practices, where the club insists a player drop an agent in favor of another."

"It's a conflict-of-interest situation. An agent is being paid by the club while supposedly working for the player's better interests."

GARVEY, in recent correspondence with Eagleson, Fleisher and Miller, said he was proceeding to set up a sports representative association. Garvey already has sent more than 300 questionnaires to agents and lawyers for various athletes.

Ninth grade games have site change

The Austin White-Austin Orange ninth grade football game has been switched to Memorial Stadium at 10 a. m. Saturday, according to Sam Cox, Midland athletic director.

Cox also said that the Edison Gold-Edison Purple matchup would also be played at Memorial Stadium Oct. 15 at 10 a. m.

Colorado fears Terry Miller

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — "Terry Miller is the finest running back in the nation. His combination of speed, power and elusiveness is unmatched anywhere else. I don't think you stop a back like that. You just try to contain him, keep him from breaking any big ones."

Colorado Coach Bill Mallory typically heaps compliments on his upcoming opponent, being careful not to provide any locker room incentives for the opposition. Sometimes he exaggerates, but in this case he's perfectly serious.

Miller, Oklahoma State's standout running back, is the nation's leading rusher, averaging 159 yards a game. He has cragged the 100-yard barrier in 12 straight games, and he stands third on the all-time Big Eight rushing list with a good shot at becoming the career leader.

Mallory is still upset that the Colorado Springs Mitchell High School star got away. "It's a damn shame he isn't playing here for us," says Mallory.

Miller returns to his native state Saturday when his Cowboys invade Folsom Field for a Big Eight game with unbeaten Colorado.

OSU has struggled to a 2-2 record in its non-conference games, losing 25-17 to Florida State last week when quarterbacks Harold Bailey and Jimmy Derrick went down with injuries. Bailly suffered a shoulder separation and Derrick torn cartilage in his knee.

Coach Jim Stanley says junior Randy Stephenson will start at quarterback against the Buffaloes. "Randy didn't play badly while he was in there against Florida State, especially when you consider what little time he had to prepare," said Stanley.

Stanley says the Cowboys played well enough offensively to beat Florida State, "except we ran out of quarterbacks too quick. Defensively, it was a poor exhibition. We had leads of 10-0 and 17-3 but we didn't polish them off."

The sixth-ranked Buffaloes have displayed superb balance in rolling to a 4-0 record. CU is first in the conference in total offense, averaging 470 yards a game, and second in defense. The Buffs are among the nation's leaders both in scoring offense, with a 35.5 average, and scoring defense at 7-0.

"Colorado is probably the most physical team we'll meet all year," says Stanley. "They're great on defense and probably better on offense than they were a year ago."

Jeff Knappie is the conference's top passer, hitting on 53 per cent of his throws for 722 yards and three touchdowns. Tight end Bob Niziolek is the No. 1 receiver in the Big Eight with 13 receptions for 186 yards. Fullback James Mayberry, although bothered by tender ribs, is averaging 88 yards a game. Tailback Howard Ballage ran for 128 yards in CU's 31-0 victory over Army last week.

The Buffaloes' defense is led by senior linebackers Brian Cabral and Tom Perry and a line that includes 6-foot-3, 255-pound tackle Ruben Vaughan.

Reynolds rejoins Los Angeles Rams

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Middle linebacker Jack Reynolds has rejoined the Los Angeles Rams after a three-month holdout. But he won't be activated by the National Football League club until late October, and he has lost his starting job to Jim Youngblood.

The seven-year veteran, who was on the National Conference Pro Bowl team each of the last three years, signed a contract Thursday for an unspecified number of years. Terms were not disclosed.

Because Reynolds missed training camp and the first three regular season games, he won't count on the Rams' 43-man roster until later this month. A Rams' spokesman said that in planning for the rest of the season, Reynolds was added for depth.

Coach Chuck Knox said that Youngblood, switching from left linebacker to the middle, has improved in every game.

Rain threatens playoff contest

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The National Weather Service says there's a good chance that rain will fall in Royals Stadium tonight, possibly washing out the third game of the American League Championship series.

But ticket holders for that third game or any other game rained out during the playoff series in Kansas City need not worry that their tickets will also be washed away.

According to the Royals ticket office, playoff tickets are numbered in sequence and persons holding tickets for the game Friday night will have seats reserved for the game even if it is postponed until Saturday.

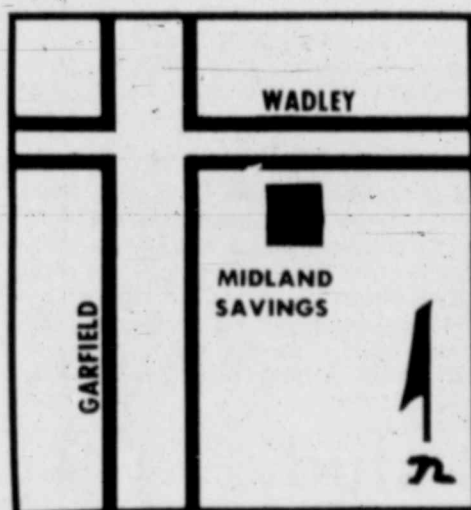

The Royals-New York Yankees series is tied at one win apiece; three victories are needed to take the series. All three remaining games are slated for Royals Stadium.

Egyptian doctors begin to lose 'export' appeal

By DON A. SCHANCHE
The Los Angeles Times

CAIRO — Well-trained physicians and surgeons who staff hospitals, clinics and medical schools throughout the Middle East and Africa have long been one of Egypt's most popular exports. Some have earned international renown in the United States and Europe. But the Egyptian export lately has begun to lose its appeal.

Two of many small symptoms of a growing malaise have the Egyptian medical profession worried:

—Nigeria, not noted for especially high medical standards, not long ago sent home a young Egyptian woman physician because after six months on the job she was found to be incompetent.

—Libya has begun replacing Egyptian doctors, upon whom it once relied almost exclusively for health care, with Yugoslavs and other Eastern Europeans. Part of the reason is political. But medical sources in Cairo said some young physicians were sent home because they were too poorly trained for their jobs.

"We have a crisis in standards and quality among our new doctors," said Dr. Ahmad Safwat, a leading physician of the older generation and secretary of the Egyptian Doctors Syndicate (medical association).

The reason for the crisis is worth pondering by other nations that seek to solve national health problems by simply increasing the number of doctors in training.

In the 1960s, Egypt decided on the ambitious goal of providing one doctor for every 1,000 Egyptians and set about achieving it by more than tripling medical school enrollments.

Today the nation's eight medical schools are bursting at the seams with almost 40,000 would-be doctors. (For comparison, there are about 60,000 students in approximately 120 medical schools in the United States.)

With graduating classes of more than 4,000 a year, Egypt's medical profession of 25,000 — 5,000 of whom work abroad — will double by 1982, according to the doctor association. Most of them will be poorly trained, if not incompetent. And under even the best of circumstances, about a third of the new doctors will be unemployed because there are not enough professional openings in Egypt or abroad to absorb them.

"Don't enter medical school," warned a recent headline of a leading Cairo newspaper, prodded by the doctor association into publicizing the crisis. "On your graduation, you will find 7,000 doctors without jobs... Medicine is a career without a future."

"Egypt has serious public health problems, but it is insane to believe that training more doctors in overburdened schools will solve them," said Dr. Haadi Salem of Beverly Hills, Calif., an internationally respected chest and heart surgeon. Like many of the best in Egyptian medicine, he left Cairo to study and practice abroad. "Poor sanitation causes most of the country's disease. What Egypt needs for preventive medicine is more plumbers, not doctors."

Typical of the harried students in the six-year course (one year of pre-medical studies, four years of intensive medical training and one year of student internship) is Mohammed Abdel Hamil, a bright 20-year-old in his third year at the once proud Cairo University school of medicine. The school since 1878 has been famous for supplying doctors of distinction to other African and Middle Eastern countries. Today, with its deteriorating buildings and adjoining century-old Kasr el Aini Hospital, the school is attempting to teach almost 10,000 young men and women in facilities meant for at most a tenth of that number.

"The biggest lecture hall holds 800, but my class is 1,900," complained Hamid, expressing doubt that he will ever get the training to perform professionally once he graduates. "Maybe 1,300 or 1,400 crowd into the room, fighting for chairs, renting extra chairs from the custodians, bringing their own beach chairs or sitting on the floor. It is so noisy, even the best lecturer becomes discouraged. You're squeezed in so tight you can't make notes, and there's so much bedlam you can't concentrate."

Another third-year student, Mohammed Rakhawi, also, 20, said that much of the laboratory equipment is broken and what remains must be shared by masses of students.

"In the dissection laboratory 40 students share one cadaver, and only the few who are close around the body can see well enough to learn," he said. "Some students go to the cemeteries and buy bodies to take home and dissect. It is illegal and very dangerous, but they do it because there is no other way."

"There are always at least 10 students around any one piece of equipment, and the result is that no one gets accurate results," said Fatin Amin Hassanein, a 22-year-old fifth-year woman student who will begin her internship as a practicing doctor next spring.

Dr. Aadi Shihata, a 25-year-old Kasr el Aini intern who graduated from Cairo University medical school last spring, said, "And what do I get after all of this? A salary of 38 pounds (about $55) a month, which after taxes and insurance is actually 32 pounds (about $46). To gain practice is hard."

Firm to market health care kit

By SHERYL FITZGERALD
Newsday

It had to happen. This fall, an Illinois electrical company called Marshall Electronics will be marketing the ultimate do-it-yourself kit: The "physician's black bag" for use at home.

The company says that the Family Black Bag Home Health Kit (Model No. 40) is designed for those who live in areas where quick trips to a doctor's office might not be feasible, or for midnight examination of unexpected symptoms.

Although some doctors warn that there can be dangers in the use of such equipment, the manufacturers of the kit say that after studying the accompanying manual, anybody should be able to recognize certain basic symptoms, find them with the kit's equipment and describe them to a physician by telephone.

Devised by Dr. Keith W. Schnert, the author of "How To Be Your Own Doctor—Sometimes" (Grosset and Dunlop), and distributed by the Health Activation Network, a non-profit health education organization, the home health kit includes the following equipment:

OTOSCOPE — Used to examine the ear and ear canal.

STETHOSCOPE — For listening to heart sounds, checking blood pressures and making certain other tests.

SPHYGMOMANOMETER — A blood pressure cuff, which consists of a rubber bulb or pump, an inflatable cuff and a precision gauge for measuring pressure.

THERMOMETER — For measuring fever.

HANDBOOK — A Family Medical Handbook, written by Schnert, which describes common illnesses and injuries and gives instructions for coping with everyday health problems and the more common emergencies.

FORMS — For keeping a "Family Health Record" of laboratory tests, prescribed drugs, allergies, immunizations, hospitalizations, illnesses and dental data for everyone in the family.

With the otoscope, the kit retails for $69. A model without the ear-examining apparatus retails for $49.

The kit is a "breakthrough in modern health care," Schnert said. Not only will it help users learn to be observant in describing and handling common illnesses and emergencies, he said, but it will also help them to accept more responsibility for their health, increase their knowledge of basic health problems, and help them learn to use health care resources more economically.

Although Schnert insisted that the kit was in no way meant to replace the care of a physician, or serve as a total self-diagnosis tool, he said that it did have some practical applications for the layman. For example, he said, the ability to monitor one's own blood pressure can be useful in helping hypertensive patients report more efficiently the effectiveness of medications that the doctor may have prescribed.

Bypass study casts doubts

Newsday

In the past 10 years, the fastest-spreading type of surgery in the United States has been the coronary bypass. It is also one of the costliest. This year, an estimated 70,000 patients will undergo the operation at an average cost of $12,500 each — a total cost approaching $1 billion.

A recent study by a team of Veterans Administration doctors has cast doubt on the operation's long-term results. The study concludes that the operation is no more effective in lengthening the lives of victims of chronic stable angina than is routine treatment with medication.

Unlike patients with unstable angina, who cannot predict the onset of chest pains, patients with chronic stable angina know that their pains will follow such ordinary exertion as climbing stairs. A sizable percentage opt for surgery because they cannot work comfortably in their jobs.

Even before the VA study, however, the operation had been considered a controversial procedure because cardiologists have not been able to agree on whether the surgery prevents heart attacks and prolongs life or merely improves the quality of life by relieving pain.

During a bypass, surgeons take a vein from the patient's leg and use it to detour blood around an obstructed coronary artery, or arteries. The bypass graft reroutes the blood around that portion of the coronary artery affected by the angina. It has become clogged or narrowed with fatty deposits. The deposits block the critical supply of blood to the heart muscle itself.

The VA study, reported in the Sept. 22 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, reviewed the cases of 596 heart patients treated at 13 VA hospitals between 1970 and 1974. About half of them had undergone the bypass operation.

Short trump suit calls for caution

By ALFRFED SHEINWOLD

It's hard to keep control when you hold only seven trumps and the opponents have six, but you must sometimes take this risk. In such hands it is often useful to leave a trump in dummy instead of drawing all the trumps.

East dealer North-South vulnerable NORTH ♠ K 8 3 ♥ Q 10 7 6 2 ♦ K 6 ♣ 10 8 4

WEST EAST ♠ J 10 7 6 ♠ 9 4 ♥ 8 5 4 ♥ K J 9 3 ♦ 8 3 ♦ 9 7 4 ♣ J 9 6 3 ♣ A K Q 5

SOUTH SOUTH ♠ A Q 5 2 ♥ A ♦ A Q J 10 5 2 ♣ 7 2

East South West North 1 ♠ Dble. Pass 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass 2 ♠ Pass 3 ♣ All Pass Opening lead — ♣ 3

Philadelphia expert Judy Kay had a safe diamond suit but feared she could not win eleven tricks at diamonds. She decided to try for ten tricks at spades despite the trump shortness.

Mrs. Kay ruffed the third club and led the king and ace of trumps. This left a small trump in dummy and the queen in her hand, with two trumps still out.

If declarer tried to draw the last two trumps with her queen, West would eventually get a trick with his last trump and another with his last club. Instead, South ran her diamonds.

RUFFS DIAMONDS

West ruffed the third diamond but could not defeat the contract. If he returned a club, dummy could ruff—and this was South's reason for leaving a trump in dummy. South could then get back to her hand with the ace of hearts to draw the last trump and run the rest of the diamonds.

It would do West no good to discard hearts instead of ruffing. Mrs. Kay would just continue to run her diamonds, and wasn't particular about which ten tricks she took.

Perhaps the moral of this hand is: Stay away from 4-3 trump suits unless you play the cards extremely well.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with 1 NT, and the next player doubles. You hold: SK83 HQ10762 DK6 C1081. What do you say?

ANSWER: Redouble. You cannot be sure of making game since you have only 8 points and partner may have only 16, but you expect to punish the opponents at any contract. The doubler must have all the missing points, and his partner must have a worthless hand.

Kappler case: have war criminals 'suffered enough' for actions?

By JOHN DORNBERG Copley News Service

MUNICH — Can a country be expected to prosecute its war criminals, especially when the crimes were committed against other nations and peoples and took place more than 30 years ago?

That question has been raised in West Germany in the wake of the strange case of former SS Col. Herbert Kappler, the World War II Gestapo chief of Rome.

Kappler, 70, was sentenced to life imprisonment by an Italian military court in 1948 for the wartime execution of 335 civilians. Eighteen months ago he was transferred from Rome's Gaeta Prison to a military hospital, no longer under guard, because he was suffering from terminal cancer.

His extradition, but West German law prohibits turning over one of its own nationals.

The matter might become a footnote of history and nothing more were it not for the apparent equanimity in West Germany where leading officials, including Chancellor Helmut Schmidt himself, have on previous occasions asked the Italians to release Kappler on "humanitarian grounds" so that he can die in Germany.

The prevailing German attitude is that "he has suffered enough."

That attitude is one of several reasons why the prosecution of other Nazi criminals—most of them now around Kappler's age—is becoming increasingly difficult today.

Though more than three decades—an entire generation—have passed since the war, those prosecutions still go on all over West Germany. Hardly a day passes in which West German newspapers do not publish small items about one case or another somewhere.

But progressively, it seems, these cases are becoming judicial farces and travesties on justice. Men and women responsible for the deaths of thousands are getting off with sentences so light—equal to a few minutes in prison for each murder—that the victims are being mocked.

More often than not, the sentences are being suspended because the defendants, now in their 60s and 70s and hiding behind doctors' certificates, are judged too old, too ill, too senile or too frail for jailing.

In contravention to the usual German judicial practice in which years of pretrial confinement without conviction is the rule rather than the exception, most of the Nazi defendants still awaiting trial are free on bail or a mere promise not to flee the country.

The trials themselves drag on for years and, because of the German penchant for legalistic overkill, tend to bog down in the fine points of law while ignoring the issues.

Worst of all, because the cases are tried according to the regular German penal code with all its rules of evidence, the key prosecution witnesses—usually survivors of the Nazi holocaust—are being subjected to badgering by aggressive defense lawyers.

Thus, earlier last month, a Hamburg court sentenced a 64-year-old former SS lieutenant to four years for "complicity" in the 1942 murder of 320 Jews in Riga, then suspended the sentence because of his age.

The 69-year-old former Nazi security chief of Warsaw was sentenced to 10 years by a Munich court for using 11 Catholic priests as human guinea pigs and killing them with intravenous injections of infected matter. But he is out on bail pending appeal.

In the biggest case currently being heard, five women and nine men, all former SS guards, are accused of exterminating 240,000 persons at Majdenak concentration camp in Poland. One of the Jewish and Polish defendants is Hermine Braunsteiner-Ryan, 58.

What all the cases show is that prosecution of Nazi criminals, as one Bonn official once put it, is like looking into a mirror and knowing the reflection will be an ugly one. "The West Germans second year and expected are trying to turn their faces away."

It has been called a scandal because of the manner in which some of the 30 defense lawyers have been insulting the Jewish and Polish witnesses.

That trial, in reflection will be an ugly one. "The West Germans second year and expected are trying to turn their faces away."

A 70-year-old former Dachau concentration camp doctor was sentenced to 10 years by a Munich court for using 11 Catholic priests as human guinea pigs and killing them with intravenous injections of infected matter. But he is out on bail pending appeal.

Labor stalls redwoods bill sponsored by union 'friend'

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The plan to expand Redwood National Park by 48,000 acres will not be enacted this year, Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.), sponsor of the House measure, said this week. Ironically, it was big labor that stalled the bill and stymied Burton, a long-time champion of labor causes in the House. AFL-CIO spokesman Al Zack confirmed that the union's chief lobbyist, Andrew Biemiller, went directly to House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. (D-Mass.) last week to keep the bill from reaching the House floor for a vote.

"Andy Biemiller told Burton, 'You may be our good friend, fella, but we don't agree with you on this issue,'" Zack said. The AFL-CIO opposes the redwoods bill because it would cost some carpenters' jobs, Zack said.

"I don't think there's any possibility for passage this year in the House," Burton said. He confirmed that O'Neill had essentially stopped the bill by declining to ask the Rules Committee to take it up before adjournment next month. Environmentalists said Wednesday they will push for Senate passage before adjournment so that the state of California can have continued legal standing to hold up issuance of tree-cutting permits on land scheduled for the park. If no action is taken this session by either house of Congress, however, the state may not be able to sustain its cutting ban in court, said John Amodio of the Emerald Creek Committee, an environmentalist group devoted to preserving and expanding the park.

"It's not life or death in terms of the entire park, but in terms of meaningful protection, Congress may be abandoning that prospect," Amodio said. "It is important that Sen. (Alan) Cranston (D-Calif.) redouble his efforts."

Cranston has sponsored the Carter administration's redwoods bill, similar to Burton's, in the Senate. California's other Senator, Republican S.I. Hayakawa, opposes it.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.), chairman of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee, has told Cranston to move the bill through the committee as quickly as possible, a Cranston aide said.

Hearings in the committee's interior subcommittee, chaired by Sen. James Abourezk (D-S.D.), ended Wednesday after a two-week delay. The subcommittee is expected to vote favorably on the bill next week.

Alcoholic father needs outside aid

By JULES LOH

Dear Doctor: I am a 13-year-old girl with a big problem. My dad is a drunk. He doesn't work because of his drinking so he borrows money from anyone he can, including my grandmother. To make things worse, he was doing a small job for grandmother and told her some materials were $10 but actually they were under $2. Grandmother doesn't have much money. I would like to pay her back, but I can't. What should I do? — J.T., Rock Island, Ill.

Dear J.T.: You didn't mention if mother is living with you. If she does, have her contact a local ALANON office.

If not, ask grandmother to help. I know how you feel, but you are not responsible for your father's actions. Do your best to keep your home as pleasant as possible. Dad's alcoholism can be cured, but he must seek outside help. Encourage him to seek that help.

Dear Doctor: You can call this what you want, but I call it a big mess. I am a freshman and all the sophomore girls that I know have a crush on me. Whenever I walk with a girl my age, the older girls come around and bug me. At night they call me and talk for over a half an hour. What should I do? — P.O.W., Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear P.O.W.: You have a problem lots of boys would love to have. While it lasts, enjoy it. The time may come when a date or a telephone call would be most welcome!

Dear Doctor: I know paper money is destroyed when it gets too old. Our family was discussing the length of time that paper money stays in circulation. My dad says that dollar bills last about five years, but I think he is wrong. Something made of paper could never last that long, could it? — Ronnie, Seattle, Wash.

Dear Ronnie: Your question took me to a large bank looking for answers and a few samples, and surprisingly, I got both.

"Paper" money actually consists of 75 per cent cotton and 25 per cent linen. The average life of a one dollar bill is 18 months. During that time the bill is folded and unfolded more than 4,000 times.

In case you were wondering, my sample was a newly-minted 1977 penny. Who said that bankers don't have hearts?

RHINEBECK, N.Y. (AP) — America's oldest inn is just where it deserves to be, in the lush lap of the Hudson Valley.

Anyone who has seen the Hudson Valley knows it was designed by poet — mountain slopes easing a burden of foliage down to the wet lips of the river. Anyone who has seen the valley in October knows it is what God had in mind when he decided upon autumn.

The inn, the Beekman Arms, sits in the middle of this antique town, presiding over it like a grandame, which is fitting since it was the inn that gave birth to the town.

With autumn's golden glory all around, and inside the sturdy old inn great oak beams and wide plank floors and stone walls a yard thick and fireplaces everywhere, the traveler feels that here, at last, is not only the oldest inn in the land but surely the most comfortable.

"No, it isn't," said the innkeeper.

Earl Bebo.

"The beds are either too hard or too soft. The rooms are not large. The temperature is either too hot or too cold. Most of the furniture is Early Attic, few genuine antiques.

"No, it isn't the most comfortable place to stay but if you want a room you had better give us at least seven weeks notice."

Such is the appeal of the Beekman Arms, est. 1700.

"There's something about this place, a warmth, a benevolence, that has nothing to do with us," Bebo said.

"Our bartenders and waitresses and chambermaids are not polished professionals. Service isn't always the best. But in our dining room and tap room there is an atmosphere of friendliness you just don't find in others. I can't explain it."

I can't explain it.

When you stand under those low ceilings in the Beekman Arms you're standing where George Washington stood, and Aaron Burr and Lafayette and Benedict Arnold and Alexander Hamilton, and where even before those old herbes and devils were born post riders between New York and Albany stopped to warm their bones and rinse their throats.

You're standing where somebody named Charles back in 1894 signed the guest register on behalf of himself "and eight Indians."

You're standing where William Jennings Bryan used to hold forth from an upstairs window, where Horace Greeley put up on weekends, in the country, where Franklin D. Roosevelt wound up every political campaign with an election eve blast.

Those kind of ghosts don't frequent the Marriott.

Earl Bebo knows that. He was a Marriott executive in Boston before he decided, last February, that moving from a 433-room hotel to an 18-room inn was a step up.

"The systems are the same, how to order efficiently, deal with suppliers. But I have a special obligation to this place, and not just to its architecture. So there are differences in running it. "For instance, a corporate hotelman would find our dining room turnover appalling. People tend to linger over dinner here, two hours, three, four. Well, that's what makes this place this place. I'm not just the custodian of an inn, but of a tradition."

Complain now, say eateries

NEW YORK (AP) — If a customer has a complaint about a meal or service in a restaurant, it should be voiced on the spot, according to an American Express survey of eating establishments.

The owners and their employees said they respected customers who let their criticisms be known more than the ones who leave unhappy, vowing never to return.

Former Midlander gets honor

LUBBOCK — Former Midlander Wendell Mayes Jr. has been named to the Texas Tech University Mass Communications Department Hall of Fame.

The Austin radio station executive will be inducted formally into the Hall of Fame in ceremonies at a Texas Tech Mass Communications Week luncheon Feb. 16. Dr. Billy I. Ross, department chairman, said.

Mayes heads the broadcasting company which owns KCRS and KWMJ radio stations in Midland. He is a 1949 Texas Tech graduate. He was chairman of the Mass Communications Advisory Committee at Texas Tech from 1971 to 1974 and now is an ex-officio member of that group.

The broadcaster also is associated with radio stations in Austin, Victoria and Synder and cable television companies in Houston, Snyder, Corsicana and Pauls Valley, Okla.

He is president and a director of the Texas Broadcast Education Foundation; trustee of the Television and Radio Political Action Committee and member of The University of Texas Communications Advisory Council.

Her husband, Allen, 34, was on a business trip in California at the time, police said.

Police would give few details of the killing and no indication of the motive.

The Rosenthals were married Sept. 16 and moved into the house eight days later. Even their closest neighbors said they did not know them.

They discounted persistent rumors that Mrs. Rosenthal's death had ethnic overtones.

Police Chief Kostanos said that "although rumors and stories are abundant, the investigation has revealed nothing to indicate any anti-Semitic, ethnic or racial overtones."

Police said the Rosenthals were of the Lutheran faith. No particular religious affiliation predominates in the neighborhood.

Dave Laughlin, 30, occupant of the home sprayed with the message "You are next" said, "We're concerned, that's all."

"You can't get excited," he said. "The police are doing a pretty decent job, a super job."

Kastanos said, "Really there's not much that you can do to assure people they're safe after something like this, but we've no indication that anyone else is really in danger — despite the signs."

Newlywed's stabbing followed by warnings

NEW HOPE, Minn. (AP) — "You Are Next," "Maybe You" were the ominous messages in black spray paint on two houses in the middle-class suburban neighborhood where a young newlywed was stabbed to death.

Susan Rosenthal, 29, was found dead of multiple stab wounds — perhaps as many as 13 — in the kitchen of her one-story home on a quiet dead-end street, authorities said.

The warning, "There Are More" was painted on the kitchen wall. The writing matched the signs on the outside of two neighboring houses, police said.

Prior to the killing Tuesday, nobody could remember so much as a burglary occurring in their peaceful block of $60,000 to $70,000 homes in this Minneapolis suburb.

On Wednesday, dozens of children gathered at the Rosenthal house trying to get a peek inside. Sight-seers cruised by regularly. Some parents kept children indoors and many neighbors were double-locking doors.

The first neighbors knew of the killing was when one saw two policemen running, pistols drawn, from the Rosenthal house.

Mrs. Rosenthal's body was discovered by a sister who was concerned because she had not shown up at the downtown office where she
