African summit meeting concludes in deadlock

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The African summit meeting to bring peace to Angola ended in deadlock today. The three Angolan nationalist movements vowed to continue their civil war, and African diplomats predicted that the stalemate would encourage wider Soviet, American and South African participation in the conflict.

A spokesman for the Organization of African Unity announced that the chiefs of state and government heads decided to adjourn and to ask the seven-nation Angolan conciliation commission set up six months ago "to continue to follow the Angolan problem closely."

The deadlock was so complete that the meeting even failed to produce a widely-expected condemnation of the intervention in the fighting by South Africa's white-minority regime.

Premier Lopo do Nascimento of the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA) government in Luanda told reporters his forces would fight on. Jonas Savimbi of the National Union (UNITA) and Holden Roberto of the National Front (FNLA), whose battlefield alliance is supported by the United States, South Africa, Zaire and Zambia, said earlier they would also keep fighting if peace moves deadlocked.

African diplomats said the African nations' inability to deal with their gravest political challenge since black Africa emerged from its colonial era 15 years ago could have long-term damaging effects on African unity.

Ford gives Morton new assignment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford today appointed Rogers C. B. Morton as a presidential counselor on economic and domestic policy with "incidental duties of liaison with the President Ford Committee and the Republican National Committee."

The 61-year-old Morton, who is stepping down as secretary of commerce, will get a $44,600 post as presidential counselor with Cabinet rank, press secretary Ron Nessen said.

Nessen said that Morton's duties at the White House, which he will start later this week, will be mainly in areas of economic and domestic policy.

Morton will retain membership on the President's Economic Policy Board, the Energy Resources Council and the Domestic Council, which he has held since last May in connection with his duties as commerce secretary, Nessen said.

The press secretary was asked why Ford was making the appointment with only limited duties of a political nature, when Howard "Bo" Callaway, head of the President Ford Committee, had wanted someone in the White House as a coordinator to give him quick decisions on campaign matters.

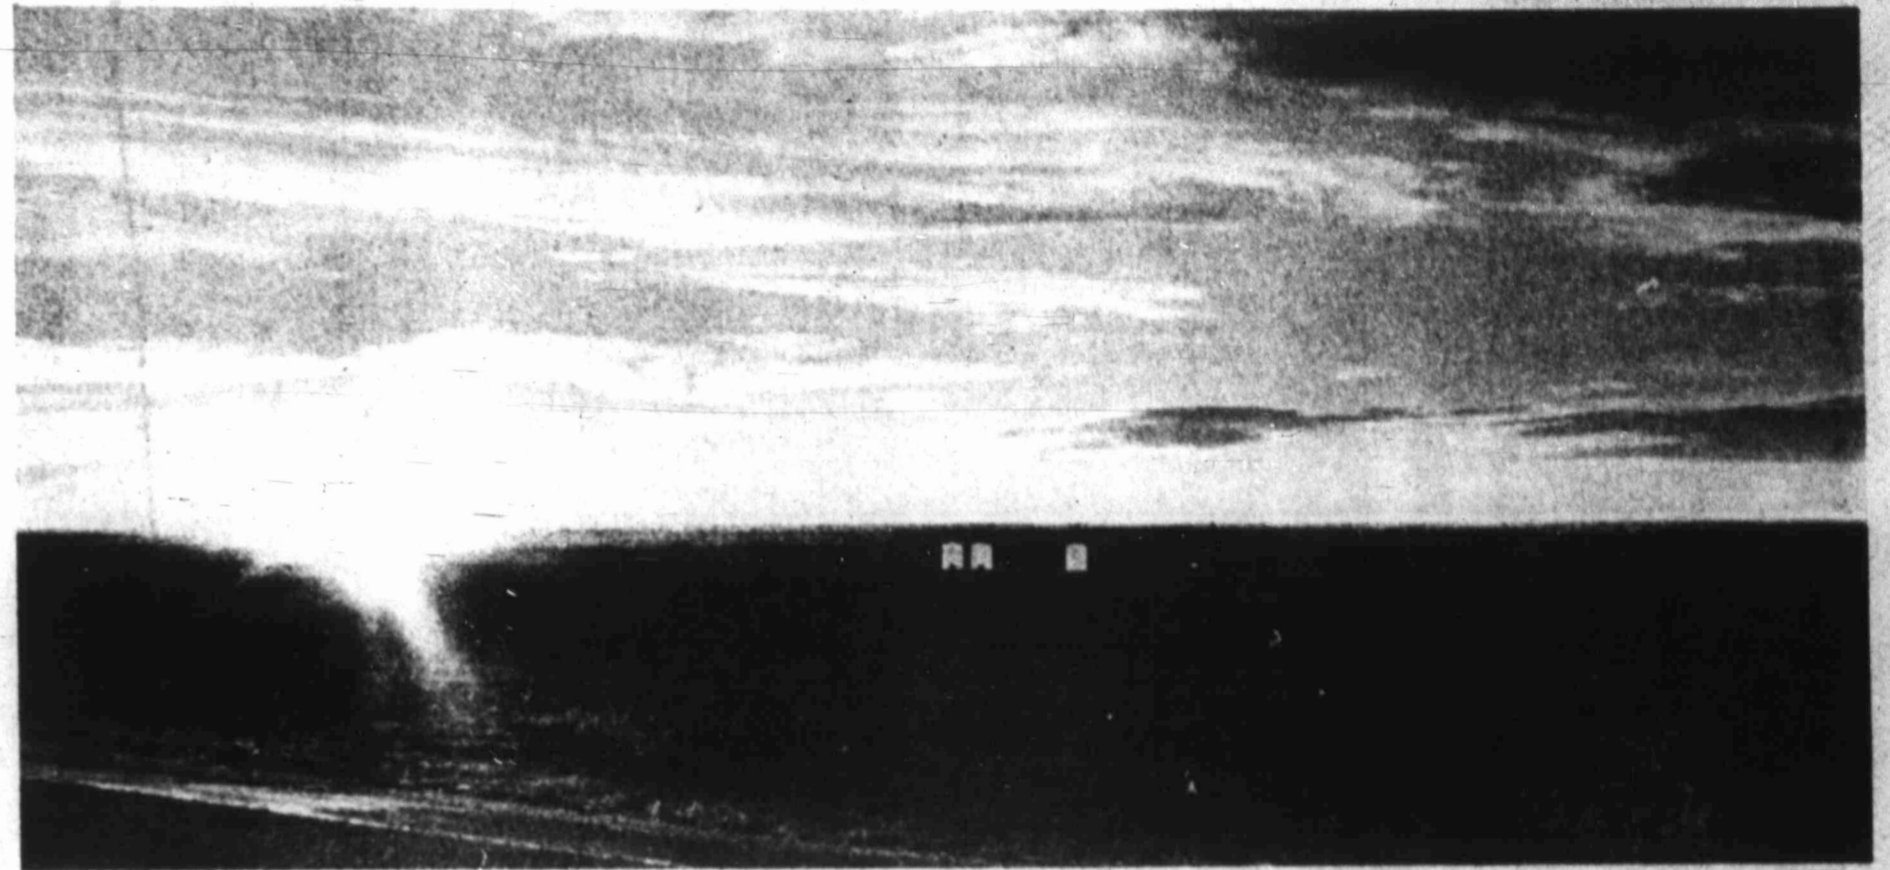

Nessen replied that the President wanted Morton's expertise as a former congressman and as a former secretary of both the Interior and Commerce departments, and he insisted that Morton's political activities be incidental.

However, Nessen said the appointment will relieve Chief of Staff Richard Cheney and presidential aide Robert Hartmann of their current responsibilities for political activities.

Nessen said Ford's election campaign "is being run by Bo Callaway, who has the full confidence and support of President Ford," and that the President feels he has done and is doing a good job.

Morton's new salary amounts to a $18,400 cut from what he received as secretary of commerce, Nessen said.

He said Morton has been assigned the suite of offices former President Richard M. Nixon used as his private working office in the Executive Office Building next to the White House.

Investigator checking evidence

By ED TODD

A state attorney general's investigator probing witness-tampering accusations against Dist. Atty. Jim Mashburn's chief investigator is in Midland today apparently gathering evidence for presentation to the Midland County Grand Jury.

The investigator, in Midland Monday and today, was in the courthouse and paid a visit to the jail where he reportedly talked to 35-year-old Janie Santos, a prisoner who swore that the district attorney's investigator, Jesse Morales, tried to alter her intended testimony a criminal trial.

Courthouse insiders were reluctant to comment on the investigation and the expected probing by Atty. Gen. John Hill's agents.

The Midland County Grand Jury in mid-December formally requested that District Judge Perry D. Pickett and Mashburn solicit an independent investigation by the attorney general into the allegations against the 41-year-old Morales.

That request came a month after Judge Pickett had dismissed, in mid-trial, the possession of heroin indictment against Andres Hernandez, 30.

Miss Santos, in sworn statements obtained by her defense attorney Randall Lundy charged that Morales twice intimidated her the week before Hernandez was to stand trial in mid-November.

Her charges that Morales threatened her and tried to sway her testimony to help win a conviction on Hernandez were attested to by two fellow women prisoners who swore they overheard the Morales-Santos exchange.

Miss Santos is in county jail awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary to serve a 10-year sentence on a conviction for possession of heroin.

Miss Santos' conviction came out of a narcotics raid last Sept. 18 at her house in Midland. Hernandez also was arrested in that raid, but denied being in possession of heroin at that time. Miss Santos did not.

Hernandez is an admitted one-time heroin addict.

Backing up Miss Santos' allegations against Morales were Lillie Thompson, 37, and Ruthie Jones, 27. Both are in jail awaiting hearings on revocation of their probated sentences. The Jones woman was convicted on forgery charges, and the Thompson woman, for possession of heroin.

Morales and Mashburn have declined to comment on the allegations until, at least, after the probe by the grand jury and attorney general's office.

Nitro taken from firm

Thirty pounds of 60 per cent nitroglycerine have been reported missing from the Stickney Co. warhouse on Holiday Hill Road.

Branch Stickney told police Monday the nitroglycerine was in six white plastic tubes, each weighing five pounds. He said a six-foot primer cord also was taken.

Entry to the yard where the substance was stored was gained by breaking the locks to the gates' police said.

The Stickney Co. is a casing pulling firm.

An employee of the firm said this morning that agents from the federal government's Alcohol, Tobacco and Explosives Division will come from Lubbock in the near future to conduct an investigation.

Mrs. Armstrong gets British OK

LONDON (AP) — The Foreign Office said today it has approved the nomination of Anne Armstrong as the next U.S. ambassador to Britain.

Mrs. Armstrong, 48, wife of a wealthy Texas rancher and a presidential counselor in the Richard M. Nixon administration, will succeed Elliot L. Richardson who leaves Britain Friday to become secretary of commerce.

Mrs. Armstrong will not officially become the ambassador designate until President Ford makes a formal announcement of the appointment. Now that the British government has approved the nomination, this protocol step is only a matter of time.

Arabs name resolution panel

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The Arabs have named a five-member Palestine Committee of moderates and radicals to draft a resolution for the Security Council's debate on the Arab-Israeli dispute.

A. Esmat Abdel Meguid, Egypt's delegate to the United Nations, said the committee members named Monday night were Egypt, Syria and Jordan, all of which border on Israel; Libya, the current Arab member of the Security Council; and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Egypt and Jordan were expected to exert a moderating influence on the militancy of Syria and the PLO and to act as a counter-weight to Libyan radicalism.

The Arabs' goal is to expand the council's guidelines for an Arab-Israeli peace settlement to include provision for Palestinian rights instead of the "refugee question" that the council's two previous resolutions speak of. But the Arabs were divided whether to formulate a moderate resolution in hopes of avoiding a U.S. veto or to maintain a hard line against Israel.

Meguid did not say when the draft might be completed.

Farouk Kaddoumi of the PLO told the council at the start of the debate Monday that "a serious solution to the Middle East conflict will have to begin with its root cause and heart, which is the question of Palestine."

He said the two previous council resolutions deal "neither with the Palestinian question nor with the national rights of the Palestinian people to independence and sovereignty." He demanded that the council pass an "effective resolution."

"Meanwhile," he said, "our people will continue their just struggle by all legitimate means to attain their legitimate goals."

But U.S. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan said Kaddoumi's "adamant speech ... doesn't seem to recognize the existence of Israel."

The council voted 11 to 1 at the start of its meeting to admit the PLO to the debate, carrying out an agreement made in November to get Syria to agree to extension of the U.N. peacekeeping force on the Golan Heights.

The United States cast the only dissenting vote, while Britain, Italy and France abstained. The question of seating the PLO was procedural, and the negative American vote did not constitute a veto.

City council wants more parks study

By DEBBIE PIERCE

Midland City Council Monday night placed under a microscope the $4.3 million bond issue on parks improvements as recommended by the city parks commission but took no action on the diagnosis.

The two bodies tossed the issue around for over two hours with the general consensus being that something needs to be done to improve the city's park system. However, they also agreed action would require further study.

Robert Thomson, parks director, presented the issue for the parks commission in the absence of commission chairman Bill Spruill.

"There have been no additions or improvements to our parks system since 1962 when Alamo Pool was built," Thomson said. "We feel that our present system, which has existed for the past 15 or so years, badly needs an overhaul to bring it up to the 1970s. With no improvements during this period, it's amazing that our system is as good as it is though."

Thomson explained that the first priority as stated in the city's Master Plan for parks is an effective neighborhood parks system. "The firm who made our Master Plan (Park Plan Associates of Austin) included many things necessary to improve our city's park system, but we trimmed these in an effort to conserve money," Thomson added.

The parks director said another area emphasized by the Master Plan was acquisition of land. He added, "We're probably 10 to 15 years late in this, but we especially need to acquire land in northwest Midland."

Thomson said the parks staff was mainly concerned with improvements to the parks themselves, though special interest groups saw more of a need in improved park equipment. He added that lack of money had forced the group to exclude renovation of the fencing around the city's baseball fields, so the group "might possibly need more money in the future." Besides, no allowance was made for inflation.

The bond proposal would consist of three components if approved by the council — community recreation center (to include senior citizens), improvements and expansion of existing parks and new park development. "I'm sure that if we omitted the improvements to existing parks in the issue, it would sell like hotcakes," Thomson said. "But unfortunately, it's the most important one of all."

questioned just how much use the parks received. Thomson explained that the parks were currently in use mainly by baseball enthusiasts but that they would be used more if they were updated. He cited the unattractiveness of the parks now as far as trees, grass and park equipment was concerned.

Thomson added, "The economic status of the majority of Midland's citizens isn't really conducive toward use of parks. Often, their backyards are more attractive and they are members of country clubs and so on. But our park system is so outdated that something really needs to be done."

Parks commission members had hoped the bond issue could be presented as one proposal with three parts to voters during February but the issue cannot be presented without prior council approval.

Mayor Angelo said, "Public opinion at this time is very optimistic, and citizens would be likely to vote for bond issues that maybe they shouldn't. That's why it's important they understand what they're voting for, and that's our job — to explain the issue."

Councilman Mark Martin suggested that, if the issue in its entirety failed, it could be broken down into separate parts, but Councilman Charles Tighe cited the difficulty of approaching voters a second time after an issue has failed once.

Parks commission members then urged council to come to a decision soon on the issue's presentation to voters and council agreed.

AT WIT'S END 'Smoking Bear' must be crazy

HINTS FROM HELOISE Hot apple pie anyone?

Dear Heloise:
When a fresh fruit is plentiful, especially apples, I prepare a large panful at a time to use for pies, adding the ingredients (spices, sugar, flour or cornstarch, etc.) I normally use when baking fruit pies. I mix the fruit thoroughly and line several pie pans with wax paper or foil. I fill them just as I would for a regular pie, top with more wax paper or foil, and freeze. After the fruit is frozen, remove from the pie pan, along with the wax paper and put each pie in a separate plastic bag, or wrap according to your preference for freezing food. When ready to use, just slip the filling in between two crusts and bake for a quick pie when needed. Of course, you could add the crusts before you freeze the fruit, but I find I will freeze more fruit using this method as I don't always want to take the time to make the crusts. H.N.

A good idea, but on some fruits you might need to add some ascorbic acid to prevent the fruit from turning dark. Amounts and methods are noted in any good freezer book. Your hint is on cloud nine - Just like YOU! Heloise

Dear Heloise:
Here is something I learned recently from my country extension service.

If the electricity goes off at your house, keep your deep food freezer door closed tightly. If you don't open the door at all and the freezer is full of food, the food will stay frozen for about 48 hours. If the freezer is only half full, food will stay frozen for about 24 hours. V.T.

Thanks for the tip. A good thing to remember is ease of freezer trouble. I re-checked our reader and she's right. Heloise

Dear Heloise:

LETTER OF LAUGHTER
Dear Heloise:
This hint I stole from an aunt in Scotland: Give your husband breakfast in bed whenever possible. If you take him a tray with his breakfast and the morning paper, it's actually easier on you. While he's lying there reading the paper, you can straighten up the house or send the kids off to school with less confusion. And all the while he thinks he's being treated like a king! Mrs. L. W. Pardue

I'd say he has the situation sized up pretty well. Heloise

Dear Heloise:
I don't know if this is original, but it was a help to me. I love plants and I received a Yucca plant as a gift. It soon needed transplanting but I didn't want to pay the prices asked for a large pot. So I purchased an inexpensive wastebasket in the size I needed. These come in such nice colors and they look beautiful. I don't think anyone would ever guess what it was originally. Mrs. R. P. Smith

A "pot is a pot." If you call a wastebasket a pot, then you have a planter. Pot your plants in plastic "whatevers" and please your pocketbook. Come to think of it, some of the prettiest plants I've seen are in odds-and-ends "things" made into planters. Heloise II

'Uncle in middle' about Yule checks

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: Here's a tough one for you: My sister has two children. One is in high school, and the other is in college. I always send them both nice checks for Christmas and let them buy what they want. Right after the first of the year, my sister starts asking me if I've received "thank you" notes from her kids yet. If I haven't, and I tell her the truth, I know they are going to catch what-for. And if I say they've thanked me when they haven't, that's lying, and I hate to lie. If you can solve this one, you're a genius.

UNCLE IN MIDDLE
DEAR UNCLE: I'm no genius, but the solution is obvious: Tell your sister that if she wants to know whether her kids have written their thank-you notes, to please ask THEM, not you!

DEAR ABBY: Judy and I have been married for one month, and I have already filed for divorce. This is the second marriage for both of us. The problem is Judy's 16-year-old daughter, Lynne. Lynne told her mother that if she stayed married to me, she'd go live with her father. Judy doesn't want Lynne to live with her father because he drinks. Also, Lynne threatened to get pregnant just for spite. Judy insists that she loves me. She says she doesn't want a divorce, and the solution would be for me to move out and get a separate apartment.

McAlpine, director to Lancaster Garden Center, and Mrs. Carl E. Norton, alternate director to the center.

Mrs. William B. Johnston presided. Reports were given by Mrs. Crosby, Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Gilbert.

Mrs. W. H. Nelson, civic projects chairman, presented possibilities for a club project. The club voted to contribute $25 to the Liberty Tree project at the garden center.

Voted into club membership were Mrs. C. F. Kiser and Mrs. William R. Cain Jr.

Mrs. Gilbert presented the program on "Liberty in Arranging Flowers." She is a junior flower show judge and charter member and past president of Yucca Garden Club. She had pictures and displays of some of her award-winning arrangements.

Members brought arrangements, which were judged by Mrs. A. L. Shirey, national flower show judge.

near here for two years until Lynne was 18.

Abby, I love Judy more than any woman I've ever known, but what kind of marriage would we have, living in separate apartments? Please tell me what to do.

UNHAPPY IN VA.
DEAR UNHAPPY: Move out. But as long as you love Judy, don't push for a divorce until you are positive that you really want one. Lynne is blackmailing her mother, who can't be blamed for doing what she thinks is best for her daughter. Both the daughter and mother need counseling. I recommend it.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Q. What is the cause of gray hair in a young person?

A. The most probable cause of gray hair in a young person is heredity. At least one of the parents—probably the mother—also got gray hairs early. There also is no evidence that premature graying of the hair is caused by any dietary deficiency.

Midland fireman explains drills

James L. Roberts, assistant marshal with the Midland Fire Department, reviewed hospital procedures for fire drills during a meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, Inc., Midland Memorial Hospital, in the hospital's cafeteria.

Roberts explained the use of fire extinguishers and hoses, and stressed the importance of being aware of all fire drill procedures. He pointed out the main causes of hospital fires are smoking in bed and fires started in waste baskets.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. W. W. Henry. New members introduced were Mrs. Don Quarles and Mrs. Dale Holloman. The auxiliary has 166 active, 104 contributing and six honorary members.

During December, 147 women worked 1,518 hours. Those working extra hours were Jeri Arnold, 28; Dorothy Ferrell, 41; Jimmie Hollis, 24; and Adele Merritt, 27.

Lamesa chamber sets record budget for 1976

LAMESA — The Lamesa Chamber of Commerce its new year by adopting an all-time high budget of $44,237, authorizing changes to satisfy accreditation and appointing committee chairmen.

Chamber president Perry Roberts conducted the hour long session.

Don Bethel reported the chamber ended 1975 with a balance of $3,590.92, the highest balance ever. The proposed budget for 1976 is some $6,000 over that spent in 1975, Bethel said. Last year's expenditures totaled $38,243.59 under the budget, which called for $39,011.87. The increases in proposed expenditures will enable the chamber to obtain more equipment for use by chamber members, to expand the chamber's program of work and to allow for administrative increases.

Changes in wording necessary to comply with accreditation recommendations were approved by the board. Changes in bylaws will be submitted to a vote of the membership.

President Roberts said the community-wide meeting to plan the chamber's program of work will be at 7 p.m. Jan. 22 at Forrest Park Community Center. He said at least 75 members must attend the meeting so a bylaws election may be held.

The board then approved the appointment of the following as committee chairmen: Ron Layton, retail trade; Dorothy Haney, round-up club and area relations;

Jerry Price, sports and recreation; Ray Renner, industrial team; Olen Graves, local industry; Jerry Harris, crop development; J. P. Senter, livestock development; Johnny Montgomery Jr., livestock show; Lee Roy Colgan, demonstrations and awards; Barbara Caskey, arts and humanities; J. D. Williams, housing; R. B. Snell, education; Travis King, oil and gas; Bill Watkins, water; J. D. Dyer, highway; Bob Brown, transportation, and Stansell Clement, legislative action.

Other chairmen are Bob Capps, economic education; Philip White, health and welfare; Jack Mars, law, justice and order; Bill Howard, services; Lee Roy Olsak, West Texas Chamber liaison. Jim Norris, accreditation; Elwood Freeman, task force; John Hegi, dues reevaluation, and Don Bryant, plant and equipment.

During the orientation session, a report was made that the chamber was founded in 1919 as the Dawson County and Lamesa Chamber of Commerce. The group's main purpose then was to sponsor a county fair, and dues were $2 a year.

The chamber was incorporated in 1943 under a 50-year charter. Three years later, the city formed a board of city development and the city continues to contribute some $15,000 to the chamber's income.

Investors watching interest

By JOHN CUNIFF
NEW YORK (AP) — Probably 90 per cent of the investment community these days glances at the prime interest rate with one eye and the Dow Jones industrial average with the other. Down goes one reading, up goes the other.

Investors don't spend all their time so occupied, of course, because to a great extent the prime rate and the stock average are mere symptoms of other factors, particularly the underlying economic condition.

For investment purposes, however, the two readings condense and summarize millions upon millions of words contained in reports, analyses, forecasts, estimates, opinions and guesses. Right now, these two readings are the temperature and the blood pressure of the patient.

The prime has been falling and is likely to continue to do so. It is down to 6.75 per cent now and seems headed to 6.50. Money is more plentiful; loans are easier to obtain, and they come at lower prices.

Over the longer term, lowered borrowing costs are reflected in lower operating costs and finally in higher profits, assuming other factors remain in balance. The corporate stock outlook, therefore, is improved.

The immediate situation improves also, because stocks become relatively more attractive and fixed-income securities become less so. Money is siphoned from the bond to the stock market.

Billions of dollars that temporarily reside in credit markets are now being drawn toward the stock market, and the process might continue if interest rates drop. The process, while not automatic, happens quickly.

Today's market is much more institutionalized than markets of 15 years ago.

Smew brings thousands to Rhode Island marshland

The Washington Post

NEWPORT, R.I. — The vanguard of what is expected to be thousands of avid bird watchers has begun descending upon this graceful resort city to see the smew, a handsome black and white Siberian water fowl who migrated nearly half the earth's circumference in the wrong direction.

However, a few of the binocular-toting curious already have left the bitterly cold, windswept marshland, complaining about the weather and wondering if the smew is the only strange duck around here.

"I should have taken up stamp collecting," said Ivan Witty, a retired engineer from Northboro, Mass., as he packed up his tripod and 30-power telescope and headed home from what many bird watchers label as the sight of a lifetime.

The smew, a duck related to the large merganser species, was first sighted at Green End Pond here on Jan. 3. Since then, ornithologists have concluded it migrated from Siberia or northern Finland because of the severe winter weather this year on the European continent.

It is the first sighting ever of a smew on the Atlantic coast, and only the fourth North American sighting in Audubon Society history.

The near-zero degree weather was only partly to blame for the frustrations felt by Witty and the other bird watchers who sought the closeup look at the smew. Even more disconcerting was the bird's seemingly contemptuous disdain for his followers, as they attempted to creep within viewing range.

A chorus of groans, occasionally accompanied by blasphemies, was heard as the bird repeatedly took wing and flew indifferently away from his pursuers.

"This is one of the wariest birds I've seen," said Peter Polshek, 18, a New Yorker who drove more than three hours and got lost twice on his way to see the smew.

Friday's hunt for the smew began early in the morning at Green End Pond, an idyllic setting protected from the biting wind by stands of pine trees and close enough to the road to observe from the warmth of a car.

The Pond also turned out to be the habitat for nothing more exciting than a few mallards, two white domestic ducks and a flock of coots, a species of water fowl so common that most self-respecting bird watchers won't even put them on their life list of sighted birds.

As in all endeavors, the weak gave up the vigil early. By noon, the shrinking contingent of bird watchers had turned their attention away from the warmth of the small pond to the vast frozen panorama of Easton Pond.

"I think I see him," announced Dr. James Mansfield, a retired physician from Lincoln, Mass., swinging his binocular toward a causeway separating the big pond from the icy-gray ocean.

Mansfield said he, his wife and a friend, Elizabeth Hower, had heard about the smew on the Audubon Society's tape-recorded daily bird alert, and had abandoned plans for another vacation trip to drive hurriedly to Newport.

The abandoned trip was to have been to Salisbury Beach, N.H., where a Ivory gull, an arctic bird next rarest to the much sought after Ross' gull, had been sighted. The Ross' gull, which ornithologists say is as desirable as a smew, was spotted in Newport.

The Mansfields and Mrs. Hower also had seen the Ross' gull, or else, Mrs. Hower said, "We never would have been able to hold our heads up."

In a motorcade, the bird watchers then drove around Easton Pond in pursuit of Dr. Mansfield's sighting and began a foot-numbing trek across an ankle deep spillway and a 500-yard dike stretching into the center of the pond.

To Polshek, the effort did not seem extraordinary, as he explained he had driven all night to Delaware to sight a white-winged black tern, had traveled to South America for birding and had stood hours in the cold at Newbury Port the day after Christmas for a glimpse of the now-famous Ross gull.

Bird watchers, who call themselves birders, compile life lists of birds, Polshek explained, and the longer the life list becomes, the more challenging the sport.

Or, as Witty explained it: "I've been birding for 25 years, and this bird (the smew) gives me 431 birds on my life list. They're hard to come by when you get over 400."

When the pursuit begins to wear thin, the birders seemingly driven by their ephemeral quarry, go abroad, compiling European lists, African lists, or South American lists.

"How can I explain why we do it? All I can say is that once you begin, you can't stop," said Witty.

He conceded that he is "not as crazy as the young kids today," a generation of college-aged birders who seem as fervent in their cause as the generation of campus protesters that preceded them.

"They race around listing birds like there weren't going to be any left. They're crazier than I ever was," said Witty.

The birders — young and old — kept up their pursuit here, however, as the smew led them from the windy dike, around the big pond, across a shaky plank over a canal, back around the pond, and through waist-high bullrushes behind a service station.

Each time they came within several hundred yards of the elusive bird, it took wing with a flourish and a spray of water and returned approximately to the place where it had just left.

Gang warfare felt in Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP)—The slums in the western part of Kingston have the potential of becoming a mini-Belfast or a mini-Beirut, Jamaicans and foreign residents of the Jamaican capital say.

"The area's an armed camp, and any outsiders or anyone who crosses the line runs the risk of getting shot," one foreign resident said.

Last week, while hundreds of international financial leaders and foreign journalists were here for a meeting of the International Monetary Fund, gang warfare exploded in the Jones Town-Trench Town area.

At least four civilians and four policemen were killed. Twenty-two homes were burned. Hundreds fled from the area every day.

Prime Minister Michael Manley blamed "organized political gangs" seeking power. He obviously was referring to the opposition Jamaica Labor party. But informed Jamaicans and foreign observers agreed the violence might just as easily have been done by the left wing of Manley's People's National party.

"Both are guilty of intimidation and acts of political violence," said one diplomat. "The tragic civil war in Lebanon did not start very differently," a Sunday columnist wrote in the Gleaner, one of the island's leading newspapers.

Similarities to the urban violence in Lebanon and Northern Ireland are striking: armed gunmen or a rock-throwing crowd keeping firemen from putting out blazes set by gasoline bombs, political assassinations, sniper attacks and an organized campaign of intimidation.

Manley charged in a broadcast that gunmen singled out supporters of his party, surrounded their homes late at night and gave them a certain number of days to leave the area.

"This is being done for the purpose of destroying the local political organization. It becomes more significant when you realize this is being done on the eve of a new voter registration drive," he said.

Observers said the same tactic has been used against supporters of the Jamaica Labor party.

Jones Town-Trench Town is one of the poorest, most densely populated sections of Kingston. Since the 1940s, the combination of poverty and political rivalry has led to sporadic outbreaks of violence in the area, but it wasn't until about 10 years ago that the gangs switched to stones, bottles and occasional knives to the use of guns.

Lee Youth Center Chatter

By Jolee Aylesworth
Jana Williamson and Lisa McDonald

The New Year began on a good bounce with our Mighty Rebel Roundballers first district victory over the Odessa Broncos.

Way to go, Big Rebs! All ye Rebels be sure to come to the Lee gym tonight to see a Cougar Cagin' at 8 p.m. Also don't forget the Steer Stompin' Friday night when our Big Rebs put it to 'em. District play is underway, so let's come out and show our Rebel spirit.

A salute goes out to our spirited Rebelettes for showing us a great time Saturday night at the dance honoring the basketball team. Thanks go out to the Weltons, Aylesworths and Sherrods for chaperoning and to all the Rebelettes who brought goodies.

Thanks also go to the set-up crew: Anita Shipman, Jolee Aylesworth, Russell Kellner, Rusty Buchanan, Tam Sweet, Dana Nipp, Bitsy Rendall and Bill Skinner. Also, to the clean-up crew: Kathi Wolforth, Kelly Westerman, Laurie Smith, Hillori Hall, Teresa Stoltz, Greg Allen, Lisa Libby, Brian Hill, Russell Kellner, Judi Ottman, Allison Ware, Jane Hellinghausen, Kandi Murphy, Leigh Crenshaw, Judy George, Janet Adamson, Ronni Schultz, Ronda Caldwell, Carla Adams, Cindy Taylor, Anita Shipman, Tammi Sweet and Suzy Gibson. Very special thanks to Janis Sanders.

Dani Wright, Brenda Cary and Bryan Ellis for helping decorate the windows of the school.

Rebelettes: don't forget that we will Rebelette at the games tonight and Friday night. It is very important that all Rebelettes be there because the team really needs us even if nobody else does. Please be there at 7:30 sharp in uniform (forget the hats and gloves.) Remember: Ya'll need these points to be an officer, a member of the honor squad or high point Rebelette. Participation counts, too. See ya there!

SURPRISE! Junior Council will have a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Y.C. Be sure to attend and help decide on what flicks to show at the Y.C. theater. If you don't want to get stuck with "Alice in Wonderland," you best come. See ya Thursday night.

Bye bye, Lisa, Jana and Jolee. Special belated birthday greeting to Susan Gutierrez. Happy Birthdays also go to Trina Olsen on her sweet "16th", to Irene Estrada on her "17th" and to Russell Kellner on his eligible "18th." A very special birthday to your friend and mine, Robert E. Lee.

Congratulations to Jamey Bates for being named Young Texan of the Month by the Downtown Optimist Club. The Class of '76 strikes again.

More Strikes in '76

You might or might not have read that there were more than 4,400 work stoppages in the United States last year. Now, this seems like a lot of strikes to us, but authorities on collective bargaining consider labor-management communications in 1975 to have been relatively smooth. Nevertheless, the number reported represents a large number of work hours lost, hours which never can be regained. But the outlook for this year is for an even larger number of strikes. Not at all encouraging, is it? According to an Associated Press news release out of New York, the Conference Board assembled a panel on the subject, and after the panelists' deliberations, they announced: "Members unanimously foresee an increased number of strikes in 1976." The panel members explained that more contracts will expire in 1976, and thus, there will be more

"opportunity" to strike. This is sound reasoning all right, but hopefully it won't turn out that way. Strikes, it is said, don't occur simply because the opportunity is present. Strikes are unlikely to occur if nothing is to be gained or regained. The panelists, however, are of the opinion that both factors are involved this year. The experts predict that inflation will be the largest single influence on negotiations in '76. They say workers are aware of how much inflation has taken from their paychecks, and they seem intent on getting that money back, and more. The panel members agree that inflation will not be conquered this year... thus, the stage is set for an increased number of work stoppages during the coming months. It should be pointed out also that the manner in which the negotiations are settled will affect inflation for a long time to come.

ASIA MEMO: U.S. firms in Asia salute South Korea

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service
SEOUL — Charles W. Semple is bullish on South Korea. That fact is not surprising since Semple, besides owning chevrons as an Asia hand of some 25 years' experience, is also manager of the American Chamber of Commerce in the South Korean capital of Seoul. Semple came to Korea as a United Nations consultant just after the Korean War. He has seen Seoul get back on its feet as a city of two million in the 1950s and then go through a modernization explosion that has changed its skyline and seen its population multiply three times over. Aside from his own cheerleading for South Korea's progress, Semple said "American businessmen feel at home here. Don't let the so-called 'threat' from North Korea fool you. This is one of the most stable places for American businessmen in all of Asia." Some people back in the United States may have the impression that American businessmen packed up, bag and baggage, and deserted Asia after the collapse of U.S.-backed governments in Indochina. Far from pulling out, American business interests are operating at full steam in the region. They are selling an increasing amount of goods to the People's Republic of China while at the same time doing a booming business with Taiwan. The American business community in the Asia-Pacific region now numbers around 4,500. This community was represented by 100 business leaders from American Chambers of Commerce in the region who met in Seoul to talk about business stability and opportunities in Asia "after Vietnam." The upshot was a communique stressing a positive outlook for the future. Among the points stressed: — Resumption of trade, based on reciprocity, should be pursued with the new Indochina governments. — President Ford's recent trip to China was applauded, but the businessmen urged him to visit the Republic of China on Taiwan and to continue to work for expansion of U.S. trade and investment there. — Businessmen should join with local governments in Asia to deal with the population problem, one of the area's most severe challenges.

Terrorists protected

This business of protecting terrorists is bad business, indeed. And in this regard, Algeria seemingly owes an accounting. At one point the six terrorists who raided the Vienna headquarters of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries announced they planned to execute two of their hostages — Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, and Jamshid Amuzegar, the Iranian interior minister. Although they and the other hostages eventually were freed, it is difficult to believe that the Saudi Arabian and Iranian governments are entirely happy with the way the incident turned out. The terrorists were freed by Algerians and have disappeared into the depths of the underground which is supported by the most militant Arabs who say they sympathize with anyone who is fighting for a just cause — in this case the Palestinian cause. There is no indication, however, that the Saudi Arabian and Iranian governments regard the Palestinian cause or any other as a justification for the murder of innocent people in Vienna, the kidnapping of OPEC ministers, and threats to their lives, or an attempt to force them to change their foreign policies. It is incredible that Saudi Arabia, Iran or any other OPEC nations which claim to have a responsible outlook on world affairs would bow meekly to the decision of Algeria to shelter the Vienna terrorists. Algeria, of course, also belongs to OPEC. Strange, isn't it?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Svetlana is waiting her turn

By JACK ANDERSON with Les Whitten
WASHINGTON — Svetlana Stalin Peters, daughter of the late Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin, defected to the United States in April, 1967. The following year, she burned her Soviet passport as a public denial to rumors that she might return to the Soviet Union. She remains an outspoken critic of the regime her father helped to create. Yet because she was once a member of the Communist party, Mrs. Peters is still waiting to become a U.S. citizen. Most foreigners are eligible for citizenship after five years. But it takes longer for Communist party members to prove their loyalty. They must wait 10 years under strict regulations. As Stalin's dissident daughter, Mrs. Peters was a celebrated case and, therefore, could have by-passed the 10-year regulation. A source close to her, however, said she "didn't want any special favors." She has been leading a quiet life in Princeton, N.J., waiting her turn. Next year she will be eligible to apply for U.S. citizenship. She is expected to process her papers like any other alien, without fanfare, in the democratic way.

the past 19 months. Federal prosecutors are investigating charges that the 50-year-old Congressman collected kickbacks from illegal aliens in return for introducing private immigration bills to delay their deportation. The prosecutors are also checking into his finances to determine whether he has violated any campaign or tax laws. Throughout the long investigation, Helstoski has steadfastly maintained that he has done nothing wrong. But the circle is drawing tighter around him. In October, his former aide, Albert DeFalco, was convicted of masterminding a scheme to bilk illegal aliens out of $36,000 for private immigration bills. At DeFalco's trial, Helstoski said he had introduced the bills out of sympathy for the aliens and had not participated in any kickback arrangement. Just last month, Helstoski's brother Robert was convicted of 22 counts of tax fraud. Witnesses testified at the trial that money was diverted illegally from Robert's corporations into the Congressman's campaigns in 1968, 1970 and 1972. To many people in his working-class district, Helstoski is a hero. Once, he took money from his own pocket to help a needy constituent. Characteristically, he has gone on the offensive against the man who is investigating him, calling for the impeachment of U.S. Attorney Jonathan Goldstein.

With less fanfare, he got the House to pass a special resolution barring him from surrendering any documents under congressional control. The resolution also exempts him from appearing before the grand jury while the House is in session. But the pressure has begun to take its toll on the gruff, likeable Helstoski. He shows up less frequently for House rollcalls, and he has missed many votes in the House Ways and Means Committee. Footnote: Because of a court-imposed "gag order," neither Helstoski nor Goldstein would discuss the grand jury investigation with us. We have determined, however, that Helstoski refused to answer several questions before the grand jury, pleading the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination. BUTZ' BUNGLES: Inside the Agriculture Department, there has been muttering in the back rooms over Secretary Earl Butz' failure to discipline his top aides, who were responsible for the grain and other scandals. The confidential minutes of a management council meeting tell bluntly of "rather extensive comments to the effect that if the Department is really serious, action should be taken against those at the highest levels who broke the law..." The meeting was attended by officials of one of the Agriculture Department's major divisions. They heard gripes that in the shipment of bad grain abroad "the Department did not pursue prosecution even though there appeared to be a clear violation of the law."

NICK THIMMESCH Six million to fight Italian Reds is small stuff

WASHINGTON — What a silly fuss over the report that the U.S. government might have given $6 million to non-Communist Italian political parties. Since the Soviet Union provides like support for the Communist Party of Italy, to match or exceed their amount is fair game, even in the era of detente. Now the choir boys like Sen. Frank Church (D-Ida.) can wring their hands and moan over how the United States should not interfere in the political process of foreign nations, but the truth is that if we do not help democratic elements in such countries, the ultimate victors are the Communists who have a habit of winning an election and making it the last authentic one to be held. One important difference, in this era of detente, between the Soviet Union and the United States is that the Soviets can press their international interests at will, while the United States flaunts its "secrets," and tries to prove to the world that we are a nation of imperialistic conspirators. And if the world refuses to believe it, they can ask the U.S. Congress and get confirmation. Do you hear that, Rep. Wayne Hays (D-Ohio) and Sen. Church? In Italy, for example, the Soviets easily have the best of it. The Soviet Union can fund the Italian Communist Party by setting up monopolistic export-import enterprises, the profits of which go to the Italian Communist Party. They can also funnel funds to their favorite party, even at a time when Italian election laws are more stringent. This political assistance is estimated to run between $3 and $4 million a year, and the Italian Communists are hard put to account for at least $2 million a year in contributions. Now CIA Director William Colby stated on NBC's "Today" show that "we have not spent a nickel in Italy in the past few months, to be specific about it," and added that "I cannot discuss what our plans, what our thoughts might be for the future." What Colby didn't reveal was how much money the United States has given non-Communist parties in Italy at an earlier time, and for the next election campaign — which could be later this year. For 30 years, it has been U.S. policy to keep Italy democratic, and, sorry folks, but that takes money. Congress is not innocent to this fact of life, and the congressional committees constantly briefed by Colby are especially aware of what is going on. The New York Times story that the United States has funneled $6 million to these political parties since Dec. 8 is not accurate; nor is it a "scoop" since it was leaked to The Times from the Congress. The Communist press excepted, most Italian papers reacted to the news by saying, in effect, what else is new? The American money previously spent on Italy's democratic parties was not used to have opponents stuffed down sewers or taken to their final resting place. The money was spent to help publicize the candidates — American style, I guess — something the Communist press does constantly and effectively. Briefly, the dominant Christian Democratic party in Italy has been in power so long that it has become venerable and not effective. In 1972, its vote declined to 37 per cent and the Communists went up to 27 per cent. In the recent regional elections, the Communists polled 35 per cent. Italian life has changed considerably since Italy joined NATO and stood up to communism back in the late Forties. Divorce is now permitted, the Catholic Church has largely withdrawn from politics, and liberalized abortion is even discussed. Italy's industrialized areas are far more potent politically than in 1948, and the Communists know how to get their votes. So the ruling Christian Democrats catch hell for Italian economic problems, the Socialists are squeezed because they are part of the government, and the Communists are not blamed because they are excluded from government, and have been for many years. Thus, they attack, attack, attack, and never have to take responsibility. This gives the Communists a great advantage, and to offset it, the United States tries to revitalize the Christian Democrats and other non-Communist parties. If the Communists ever won in Italy and formed a government, they would try earnestly to govern efficiently, but there's strong possibility that they would rule out future elections. And the Communist government would hardly make it possible for Italy to remain in NATO. Indeed, NATO already weakened by the Turkish defection (caused by U.S. Reps. Ben Rosenthal (D-N.Y.) and John Brajemas (D-Ind.), is vulnerable to further shrinkage if Portugal and Spain go against Western interests. A feckless Western Europe would then stand with a patsy Uncle Sam and allow the Soviets to intimidate this once strong and free Western civilization. That's why it's worth it to spend $6 million in Italy, and with inflation I don't know why we don't spend $12 million.

Mansfield reveals cuts in intelligence units

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield says U.S. intelligence agencies have undergone sizable cuts in manpower, but are receiving as much government money as ever.

Mansfield, D-Mont., said in an interview Monday that the total number of persons working for the CIA and other intelligence agencies has dropped from 142,000 in 1969 to 80,000 today. Despite the 43 per cent cut in manpower, "there's been little or no constriction of funds" appropriated to the agencies by Congress, he said.

Meanwhile, it was learned that former CIA Director Richard M. Helms is retaining a top trial lawyer to defend him against possible charges stemming from a 1971 break-in. Three sources with ties to the intelligence community said Helms is in the process of retaining the firm headed by Edward Bennett Williams, who successfully defended former Treasury Secretary John Connally against bribery charges.

The Justice Department is considering bringing a civil rights charge against Helms for his role in the break-in at a Fairfax City, Va., photo studio run jointly by a former CIA employe and a former official in the Castro government, according to department spokesmen. Helms headed the agency at the time of the break-in.

Officials said no decision has been made whether to prosecute Helms or any other individual linked to the break-in, but a decision is expected soon since the statute of limitations expires in February.

Neither Williams nor Helms, now ambassador to Iran, could be reached for comment.

Mansfield said the 1969 figure of 142,000 "very likely" represented the peak of intelligence manpower in the United States. He declined to say where he got the figures but insisted they were "accurate" and that he would "take full responsibility for them."

He refused to break the figures down among the various intelligence agencies and said he did not know in what areas of operation the personnel cuts had been made.

Until now the most widely accepted figure for U.S. intelligence manpower was contained in a 1974 book by two former intelligence officials which said 10 agencies had a total of 153,250 employes.

HEW reports on U.S. health

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's first report on the status of the nation's health notes some improvements in U.S. medical care but says that American health also could be improved by better personal habits.

The report by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare indicated that excessive use of alcohol and tobacco and the lack of exercise and proper diet contribute heavily to heart disease, cancer and respiratory disease.

Death and disability from those factors "are preventable primarily by changes in individual behavior," said Dr. Theodore Cooper, HEW assistant secretary for health. "The data suggests that much improvement in health status could come from individual action."

The report also said improved medical care of children and young adults is resulting in a larger number of older people who suffer more frequently from chronic diseases.

The three-volume report released Monday attempts for the first time, under congressional mandate, to take the nation's temperature and list its health pluses and minuses.

Infant mortality, frequently considered to be a yardstick of general health conditions, has dropped about 4 per cent a year since 1964 after a decade of little change, the report said.

The 1974 rate of 16.5 infant deaths per 1,000 live births ranked the United States 15th in the world. Just 24 years earlier the U.S. infant mortality rate was 47 per 1,000.

"The period 1-14 years of age now has the lowest over-all death rate of any period throughout the span of life," the report said. It said 73 per cent of babies born in 1973 could expect to reach age 65 compared with only 41 per cent born in 1900.

Only 43 children died in 1973 from tuberculosis, diphtheria, polio and measles, compared with 2,729 in 1950. Similarly, child deaths from influenza and pneumonia averaged about 14,000 annually in the 1930s but had dropped off to 1,345 in 1973, the report said.

Death rates in accidents involving children, however, have remained just about constant at 12,500 a year. Roughly half result from motor vehicle mishaps.

The report said young adults aged 15-24 died less frequently now from TB, heart disease, flu and pneumonia but, since 1950, the toll from accidents, suicides and homicides has increased rapidly.

In 1973 there were more than 77,500 deaths from those causes among adults aged 15-44, and the toll among younger people aged 15-24 increased one-third from car accidents and more than doubled from murder and suicide since 1950.

Among older adults aged 45-64, the report said, death rates from stroke, arteriosclerosis, kidney disease and gastric ulcers have all shown marked reductions but the cancer death rates increased from 269 per 100,000 persons in 1950 to 292 in 1973.

Reagan says he made mistake

By DAVE RILEY
Associated Press Writer

Ronald Reagan says he made a mistake in explaining his controversial plan to cut $90 billion in federal programs, and one of his campaign managers says he thinks the former California governor is sorry he ever mentioned a specific figure.

Reagan, campaigning in Bloomington, Ill., in his quest for the Republican presidential nomination, said Monday his plan had been misinterpreted as eliminating such programs as welfare and Medicaid.

Meanwhile, President Ford announced his plans to open his 1976 campaign with a Feb. 7 trip to New Hampshire.

Reagan, in a speech in Chicago last September, said some federal programs should be transferred to the states and that this would mean a $90-billion cut in federal spending. He has been asked repeatedly to explain this proposal during recent campaign appearances, especially about how the states would finance the programs.

Asked about it Monday, Reagan said, "I guess I made a mistake in the speech that I made in Chicago back in September.... This now seems to have been interpreted that I'm talking about whacking $90 billion out, shutting off the federal government and throwing this burden back on the people. No. What I proposed was a systematic transfer of both responsibilities and the resources for these programs to state and local governments."

Michael J. Ward, communications director for Illinois Citizens for Reagan, said he thought the former governor was trying to back away from the $90-billion figure.

"What he was trying to emphasize was the concept," Ward said. "I think he's sorry he even alluded to the $90-billion figure at all. He simply feels there are some programs and actions that are better suited to the state level. It's not necessarily the $90-billion figure at all. Many people focused on the figure rather than the idea of shifting these programs down to the state level."

Elsewhere, there were these political developments on Monday:

—A Louis Harris poll showed Alabama Gov. George Wallace finishing second in a field of announced and potential Democratic candidates. In a survey of 1,475 prospective voters made six weeks ago, Wallace finished second to non-candidate Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, DMass., when both were listed in a field of 24 Democrats.

But when Wallace was pitted on a one-to-one basis with individual candidates he finished behind such contenders as former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia. Carter received only 2 per cent of the vote in the fullfield poll.

—Presidential press secretary Ron Nessen said Ford has accepted an invitation to speak to the annual dinner of the Nashua, N.H., Chamber of Commerce. He indicated Ford would make visits to other New Hampshire towns that day and perhaps the next day.

New Hampshire holds the first primary of the year on Feb. 24. Reagan already has campaigned there, touring the state by bus last week, and is to return there Thursday.

Beyond Feb. 7, Nessen said, Ford has no further plans to campaign in New Hampshire before the primary balloting. He said he had no information on which other primary states the President will visit.

But Nessen earlier had said Ford was considering one or two campaign trips to each of the earliest primary states, including Florida, Illinois and North Carolina.

—The Christian Science Monitor said it polled 153 Republican state chairmen and found them to be more concerned about Reagan's weaknesses than those of Ford. The newspaper said it received 92 responses and 90 per cent of the answers focused on a "Reagan problem."

The GOP leaders' worried that Reagan had "simplistic approaches," "no depth in federal government administration," "no experience in foreign affairs."

—The newest entry in the Democratic race, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, entered West Virginia's primary race, also filing as a candidate for re-election to a fourth Senate term from that state. Byrd said he has not decided whether to enter the primaries of other states. He added: "I'm not closing the door on running in any."

—In Boston, a group supporting U.N. Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan as a Democratic presidential candidate asked that Moynihan's name be restored to the Massachusetts primary ballot. Moynihan had his name removed from the ballot earlier.

—Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford remained in a Salem, Mass., hospital Monday, canceling a four-day swing through New Hampshire. Sanford entered the hospital Sunday with chest pains. A spokesman said the hospital reported finding no signs of a heart attack.

—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, officially a noncandidate, said in a University of Southern California speech that the United States should end its involvement in Angola. Humphrey said Angola is not yet another Vietnam but that the United States is involved in "the type of civil war which could lead to an incredibly protracted and destructive conflict."

—Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., said in Dayton, Ohio, that the nomination of Reagan could cause "the demise of the Republican party." McCloskey said at the University of Dayton that Reagan insisted while serving as governor that the California GOP allow only conservatives into the party. "Mostly the party has been destroyed because Reagan has required almost a litmus test (to prove) you are a conservative," McCloskey said.

Dole feels string of Reagan wins might force Ford to abandon race

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Sen. Robert Dole, a former Republican Party chairman, said Monday that if former California Gov. Ronald Reagan scores a string of early primary victories President Ford might have to abandon his vow to carry his fight for the nomination as far as the GOP convention.

Dole, a member of the Ford campaign advisory committee, suggested that the President's supporters would start deserting him if Reagan scored such victories.

"If he doesn't take a look at his hole card, everybody else will be looking at theirs," Dole told a group of reporters.

In a New Year's eve interview, Ford said he would "be in the ballgame right down to the convention" and added, "anyone who forecasts that I am going to quit in midstream just does not know Jerry Ford."

Dole also volunteered some complimentary remarks about Reagan's knowledge of government and became the latest of several of Ford's old GOP colleagues in Congress to emphasize the seriousness of Reagan's chance of winning the nomination.

Asked how Ford's former Republican colleagues on the Hill feel about the Ford-Reagan race, Rep. John J. Rhodes (R-Ariz.), House minority leader, said, "Most of them have allegiance to Ford, but feel as I do, that it's a horse race and will go right down to the convention."

A "great majority" of Republican delegates in Arizona would support Reagan today, Rhodes said.

Dole and other Ford supporters here also have expressed concern over the lack of enthusiasm for the President. Even Howard (Bo)

Callaway, Ford's campaign director, has said "support is soft" for Ford, although he says the same is true for Reagan.

"It's not that I'm not enthusiastic," Dole said, "I'm realistic."

When a reporter suggested he seemed less than enthusiastic, Dole smiled and said, "I've got a cold this week."

Farmers are particularly unhappy about Ford because of farm prices, Dole said, and added, "I just talked in Kansas to hundreds of farmers and saw only one who defended the President."

Dole said that although he thinks Ford would be a better nominee for the Republican Party, Reagan would be a strong candidate if nominated. The former California governor, he said, could not be tagged with the "extremist" label that hurt Sen. Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz.), the 1964 GOP nominee.

Grand jury meeting

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Travis County Grand Jury has heard testimony from seven persons on the use of Texas Senate employes by educational television station KLRN.

The state paid more than $15,000 in salaries for four employes of KLRN in the early 1970s.

The grand jury has indicted Secretary of the Senate Charles Schnabel on two counts of theft and one of official misconduct.

The four persons on the Senate payroll who worked for KLRN reportedly were referred to the station by Schnabel.

Three of those, Anna Belle Kritzer of Amarillo, Arlene Mead of Dallas and Ann Leifeste of Houston, testified before the grand jury Monday.

The fourth employe, Daniel Kruger, now a San Antonio lawyer, did not testify.

Also testifying were three officers at the station: Robert Schenkan, president and general manager; Dr. Harvey Herbst, manager; and Billy Arhos, program director.

The seventh witness was John Ford, an Austin insurance salesman, who was on the Senate payroll at a time when he worked as a newscaster for radio station KUT at the University of Texas.

High Court to rule on drinking age

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court agreed Monday to decide whether a state can forbid beer-drinking by males until they are 21 while letting females start drinking beer at 18.

Set for argument this spring and a decision by June was the case of a 20-year-old student at Oklahoma State University who wants to buy beer and a Stillwater, Okla., store proprietor who wants to sell beer to him.

Curtis Craig, the student, and Carolyn Whitener, owner of the "Honk and Holler" drive-in store, charge that the law amounts to unconstitutional sex discrimination.

If the justices strike the law down, they might be forced to declare that sex distinctions require extraordinary justification to pass muster under the Constitution's equal protection clause.

Previous high court sex bias rulings, to the chagrin of women's rights groups, have been based on whether a particular difference in treatment of the sex had a "rational basis." Many women contend that the state should demonstrate a "compelling" interest in a challenged sex distinction.

In the Oklahoma case the state cites trial evidence that males are more likely to drink beer, drive more often when they have consumed beer and get arrested far more often on drunkenness charges.

According to a three-judge federal court in Oklahoma City, this evidence was enough to provide the rational basis the state needed to prove.

Last year the high court ruled, 8 to 1, that Utah's law setting 21 as the age of majority for men and 18 for women was unconstitutional because it was based on "old notions" of the role of women and men in society — in that case the idea that males needed child support payments longer than females so they could prepare to become the family breadwinners.

The Oklahoma court specifically disavowed reliance on "old notions" that women mature faster than men. Instead, the judges said, the data on drinking patterns showed that the state was promoting the general welfare in a reasonable manner.

Under the law all persons under 21 are forbidden to drink intoxicating beverages but the different age levels are set for the purchase and consumption of beer with 3.2 per cent alcohol, which is about half the alcoholic content of most commercially sold beer.

In other action: Without calling for oral argument, the court unanimously affirmed a lower federal court decision that struck down New York's 1974 fair

Two, three centers now here

Midland's three post offices, which had been sold out of two and three-cent stamps for the past several days, today were restocked with the postage stamps, Harry Griggs of the U.S. Postal Service said today.

He said the postal system's on-hand supply of the stamps dwindled rapidly after the 13-cent stamp on Dec. 31 replaced the 10-cent stamp as the basic postage on first-class letters.

"We have received a sufficient supply of two- and three-cent stamps," Griggs said.

He said postal patrons may buy the freshly stocked stamps at the downtown main post office adjoining the Federal Building and at the Village and Graves stations.

The post offices also have supplies of 10-cent stamps to go along with the in-demand three-cent stamps.

Griggs, postal information officer, said customers are using the two-cent stamps to go on the old seven-cent postal cards. They now sell for nine-cents.

The Midland postal branches, he said, have not yet received the 11-cent Freedom-of-the-Press stamp.

That stamp is used on first-class letters weighing more than one ounce. The postal service charges 11 cents per additional ounce on first-class mailings.

"We have had them on order for quite some time," Griggs said of the 11-cent stamps. "We have bunches of the stamps on order."

ENTERTAINMENT

Among them Andrews, Alpine, San Angelo and Abilene.

Primarily a show for youngsters but nevertheless one having broad appeal as family entertainment, "Yankee Doodle" zips through 150 years of American history in 85 minutes—beginning with Paul Revere's famous midnight ride in 1776 and concluding with Charles Lindbergh's equally-famous solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927.

The revue is from the pen of Aurdand Harris of New York, one of the foremost playwrights in children's theater. It had its premiere production at UT in the fall of 1974. The upcoming production is being directed by Dr. Coleman A. Jennings, member of the university drama department faculty and current president of the Children's Theater Association of America.

Scenes of action in "Yankee Doodle" are marked by surprise, suspense, patriotism and humor. Dr. Jennings points out. Among many theatrical "doodles" in the show are a soft-shoe number by explorers Lewis and Clark and the acting out of the invention of the ice cream cone.

The musical has been accepted for the touring program of Texas Commission on the Arts and Humanities and additional funding has been provided by a grant of private gift funds from the office of the President of UT-Austin, and by monetary gifts from interested individuals. On tour, the show will be performed in the various cities under sponsorship of local Bicentennial groups, service organizations, school districts and Junior Leagues.

Austin performances of "Yankee Doodle" are scheduled Feb. 6-8, and the tour will begin Feb. 10 in the Houston-Galveston area. Dates for the West Texas segment of tour are: April 1, San Angelo; April 5, Alpine; April 8, Andrews, and April 10, Abilene.

Bell to ask info charge

HOUSTON (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co says it plans to ask city council to approve a directory assistance charge but Mayor Fred Hofheinz says he will oppose it.

Roy H. Moore, Southwestern Bell district manager, said Monday the company will ask the council for an $11.7 million rate increase if the council fails to approve a directory assistance charge. He said the directory assistance charge proposal will be submitted this month.

Western Texas College exhibits Midlander's art

Paintings and prints by Midland artist Marian Ford are featured during January in the fine arts gallery at Western Texas College here.

Included in the exhibition are almost two dozen works, both representational and non-objective in style. The collection of prints on display shows the techniques of embossing, silk screen and lithography, techniques for which the artist is noted.

Mrs. Ford, a former president of the Midland Arts Association, has had solo exhibitions of her work in Midland, Odessa and elsewhere in this area and she has exhibited in annual invitational shows of the Texas Fine Arts Association and has been a participant in official Texas Arts and Crafts Fairs. She exhibited in a Dallas show of the National Organization of Women Artists and has been represented in Texas Fine Arts Association traveling shows. She has also had works included in shows at Museum of the Southwest and Midland College.

Nudist camp manager prude about dress

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — "Some people say we are immodest," says the 73-year-old woman manager of a nudist colony in the Santa Cruz hills. "I say the way some people dress is immodest."

"Many girls and women wear clothes in public that are too skimpy and too tight," said Ethel Plant. "I wouldn't think of going downtown without wearing hose."

Mrs. Plant, who's been managing the Lupin Lodge nudist camp for 26 years, said she is ready for those who might consider her a prude because of her old-fashioned notions about how people should dress.

"I may be old-fashioned, but I don't think people should appear in public in clothes designed to attract attention," she said. "When everybody's nude, everybody's the same and you can't very well be showing off your body."

Lupin Lodge is a private resort on 119 acres south of here that caters to families who flock there for vacations and weekends.

She said she and her late husband, Ray, became supporters of nudism after reading about it during World War II.

"We liked the freedom of being without clothes, especially in the water. There's nothing worse than a wet bathing suit. Did you ever notice, the swimming pool is the only place people will sit around in wet clothes?"

Mrs. Plant and her husband became joint managers of Lupin Lodge in 1950. She said that after her husband died in 1963 she welcomed the chance to stay on.

"I meet so many interesting people, many more than I would any other place," she said. "Some are the most farout people I know and some are the most prudish people."

"I become confident to many of our members. People tell me things they say they wouldn't tell anyone else."

Mrs. Plant runs the resort with a staff of six — all of them nude — who do the gardening and cooking, but of course don't have to bother much with laundry.

"Everybody has to be a nudist here," she said. "The only non-nudists are the man who reads the meter and the fellow who delivers the bread."

She said most of her customers are young couples with small children who can join for a yearly family fee of $135. Individual memberships cost $100.

"It's mostly younger people who come here," she said. "Older people aren't apt to do something so unconventional."

Kissinger says he never doubted legality of wiretaps on his aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says he never questioned the legality of wiretaps directed against his closest aides in 1969 and that instead he relied on the assurances of former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell and late FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover.

Kissinger said the wiretaps on the telephones of his aides were personally ordered by President Richard M. Nixon to stop news leaks about the war in Indochina and strategic arms talks.

Kissinger's account of his role in the wiretap program appeared in answers to written questions posed by lawyers for Morton Halperin, once an aide to Kissinger on the White House National Security Council.

Halperin is suing Kissinger and other government officials for civil damages in connection with the wiretap which Halperin contends was illegal. Kissinger's written responses to the questions were filed Monday in U.S. District Court.

"It never occurred to me upon learning that a tap had been placed upon Mr. Halperin's telephone, to question the legality of that tap or the program authorized by the President," Kissinger is quoted in the court papers.

Federal courts have held that national security wiretaps, set in place without a judge's order, may be used only to protect the government against overthrow and for certain intelligence purposes.

In his written interrogatories, Kissinger said he attended a White House meeting around April 25, 1969, with Mitchell and Hoover, when Nixon ordered the taps on Halperin and others. Eventually, the telephones of 17 reporters and government officials were tapped, according to previous court testimony.

Kissinger said those to be tapped, including Halperin, were chosen after Kissinger and Hoover suggested names of some NSC staff members with access to information which had appeared in newspaper stories. "It was my understanding that President Nixon directed surveillance of the persons then suggested by Director Hoover," Kissinger said.

Kissinger, in 1969 Nixon's top national security adviser, acknowledged that the taps were put in place after a May 1969 story about U.S. bombing in Cambodia appeared in the New York Times.

Kissinger said he called Hoover to complain about the leak almost immediately after the New York Times story appeared, but said he did not ask that Halperin's home be wiretapped.

Nixon is scheduled to give a deposition Thursday at his home in San Clemente, Calif., in the same case.

King dissolves Thai parliament

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The king of Thailand, acting on the advice of Premier Kukrit Pramoj, dissolved the Thai parliament Monday on grounds that it contained too many political parties and could not govern effectively.

A royal decree by King Bhumibol Adulyadej ordered general elections for the National Assembly to be held April 4. In the intervening period Kukrit's government was to continue in office but would not decide any major policy issues.

Ecuador junta censors news

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Ecuador's new military junta has undercut civilian opponents with a ban on publication of anything that attacks the constituted order or honor and dignity of members of the government.

The three-man junta issued the broad censorship decree Monday night after leaders of most political parties formed a Civic Unity Front and demanded the "return of power to the people."

They protested the junta's declaration that military rule would continue for two more years with a communique that several newspapers printed before censorship was imposed.

The Front includes the Conservative, Socialist and Social Christian parties and several minor parties.

Although political activity is not banned in Ecuador, civilian politicians have been virtually closed out of the government since the military coup led by Gen. Guillermo Rodriguez Lara in February, 1972.

Bentsen turns 'bad ear' to query on No. 2 spot

DALLAS (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., bringing his quest for the presidency to his home state this week, has denied reports that he actually is looking toward the No. 2 spot on the Democratic ticket.

(presidential nomination) race."

Arriving in Dallas to attend a fund-raising dinner in honor of Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Bentsen denied charges by U.S. Rep. Alan Steelman of Dallas, seeking the Republican nomination for senator, that Bentsen is "in the clutches of big business" because he supported the Trinity River barge canal and legislation to provide financial assistance to New York City.

Bentsen also said he supports U.S. aid to the non-Marxist faction in Angola and covert funding of non-Communist Italian political parties.

"We're going to have to continue to support Democratic societies when you see money being put in by the other side," he said.

He added that Cuba "has absolutely destroyed any chance of improving relations with us" as a result of its involvement in the Angolan civil war.

Bentsen told state Capitol reporters Monday he did not think his dual campaign for the Senate and the presidential nomination would conflict.

Ex-Carrillo employe testifies about Zertuche General Store

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Senators have heard again the oft-told tale of how Judge O. P. Carrillo allegedly concocted a fictitious store to enable him to do business with local governments in Duval County.

The suspended district judge's impeachment trial continues today.

Cleofas Gonzalez testified Monday that he first heard of the Zertuche General Store from the judge, who then was Duval County attorney.

He said Carrillo and his brother, Ramiro, approached him in 1967 or 1968 with a box of blank invoices in the name of the Zertuche store. Gonzalez at that time worked in the Carrillo brothers' Farm and Ranch Store in Benavides and allegedly was on the county payroll at the same time.

Numerous items were sold by the Farm and Ranch Store to the county, he said, despite the law against public officials dealing with the governments that employ them. The mechanism was the Zertuche store, Gonzalez said, until 1971.

Billings to governmental bodies were in the name of the Zertuche store, Gonzalez said he would deposit the checks that were received in the Zertuche bank account. He then would write checks on that account and deposit them into the Farm and Ranch Store account, Gonzalez said.

After 1971, the year Carrillo became district judge, the intermediary became Benavides Hardware and Implement Co., an actual firm, Gonzalez testified.

He said he never made any payments for rent, payroll, utilities or other expenses for the Zertuche store.

"The Zertuche store operated on a very low overhead," observed prosecutor Terry Doyle. "Yes, sir," Gonzalez replied. "Zero?"

"Yes, sir." When the Senate reconvened the trial Monday, each senator had on his desk a foot-high stack of the transcript and evidence in the 29-day hearing on Carrillo's case before the Texas Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Texas may cut rules to match federal level

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Some provisions of the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) brucellosis regulations may be stripped as the state program is matched to federal guidelines, the TACH chairman says.

"We've been criticized in the past for going beyond the minimum (federal) standards," said Norman Moser on Monday, shortly after the commission postponed a hearing on revised state brucellosis guidelines.

The commission delayed a scheduled Feb. 5 hearing until March 30 because of a required 30-day delay between posting of regulations and a hearing on such regulations.

During discussion in an hour and a half meeting, the commissioners decided also that they needed more time to debate what changes are needed.

"That's the whole problem," Assistant Atty. Gen. Robert Gauss told the commission. "What does meet the minimum standards?"

Dist. Court Judge John Boyd of Castro County ordered last Thursday that the state meet federal guidelines. The agriculture department had threatened to quarantine Texas cattle from interstate shipment.

West opens the king of hearts, and East signals mild encouragement with the four. South refuses the trick, and West continues with the jack of hearts. East completes his high-low by playing the three, and South holds up once more. West then leads the queen of hearts to South's ace.

Both defenders know where the missing nine of hearts is, but South doesn't know.

COUNTS POINTS South tries the diamond finesse next, losing to the king. By this time East should know that South has both black aces. With only 12 or 13 points South would have passed North's invitational bid of two trump.

If East now cashes the last heart, South will have to try to guess the location of the queen of clubs. With luck, South may guess right.

U If East returns a low diamond without cashing the last heart, South will assume that West has the missing mine of hearts. And then South will take the club finesse through West, losing to East's queen. Only then is it proper for East to produce the nine of hearts. "Look what I just found," he may remark, and this will amuse everybody but North and South.

ANSWER: Pass. Partner has 15 high-card points at most, for with 16 points he would have opened with 1 NT. The combined total is only 22 points at most, so game should be out of the question.

Chaps fall to Western Texas

Midland High's Billy Shock (12) and Big Spring's Rob Aldridge (22) go after a loose ball during a District 5-4A game Friday night in the MHS gym. Big Spring won the contest, 62-61, in overtime. The Bulldogs will try to rebound tonight against Abilene High.

BYTED BATTLES

For a while it seemed as though Midland College might cheat the odds and upset ceiling-scraping Western Texas College, but it wasn't to be. The Chaparrals hovered within range of a major upheaval until a long dry spell midway through the final half that enabled the defending national junior college champions to turn a scare into a 79-69 victory at MC gym Monday night.

After battling the Westerners on even terms through the first half and well into the second, the Chaps trailed 51-47 with 10:19 left in the game.

That's when a disastrous six-minute chill virtually immobilized the MC offense and WTC caught fire. The invaders reeled off four straight baskets in a minute and a half to lead 59-47 before Midland ended a three minute drought as Tommy Parks scored and then Sim Nickerson converted from the free throw line to make it 59-51.

WTC THEN strung together six of a 10-straight free throw run and added a basket by 6-6 Tyrone Clopton to take it out of reach, 67-51, with 4:25 to go.

"If we had had just a little more patience and penetrated a little deeper in that last half, we might have stayed with them," Coach Chester Story said after the game.

In the first half Midland led as often as it was behind until the Westerners spurred just before the buzzer to take a 35-31 intermission lead. Parks scored 13 first-half points for MC and Rick Daniel had 10, but in the second half they managed just 13 between them.

Actually, Parks, a six-footer from Fort Worth, didn't get too many shots in the second half.

"In the first half, Tommy was scoring off the fast break," said Story, "In the second half, they took the fast break away from us, primarily by putting the ball in the hole."

THE WESTERNERS made 14 of 26 field shots in the final 20 minutes while MC was 15 for 38.

The big edge came at the free throw line where WTC was 16 of 19. Midland was deadily enough, but didn't get that many chances, sinking eight of nine.

The win boosted WTC to 4-1 in Western Junior College Conference and 12-2 for the season while Chaps slipped to 2-3 and 11-5. It also left the Chaps 0-3 in conference at home and they won't get another opportunity to rectify that situation until next Monday against league-leading South Plains.

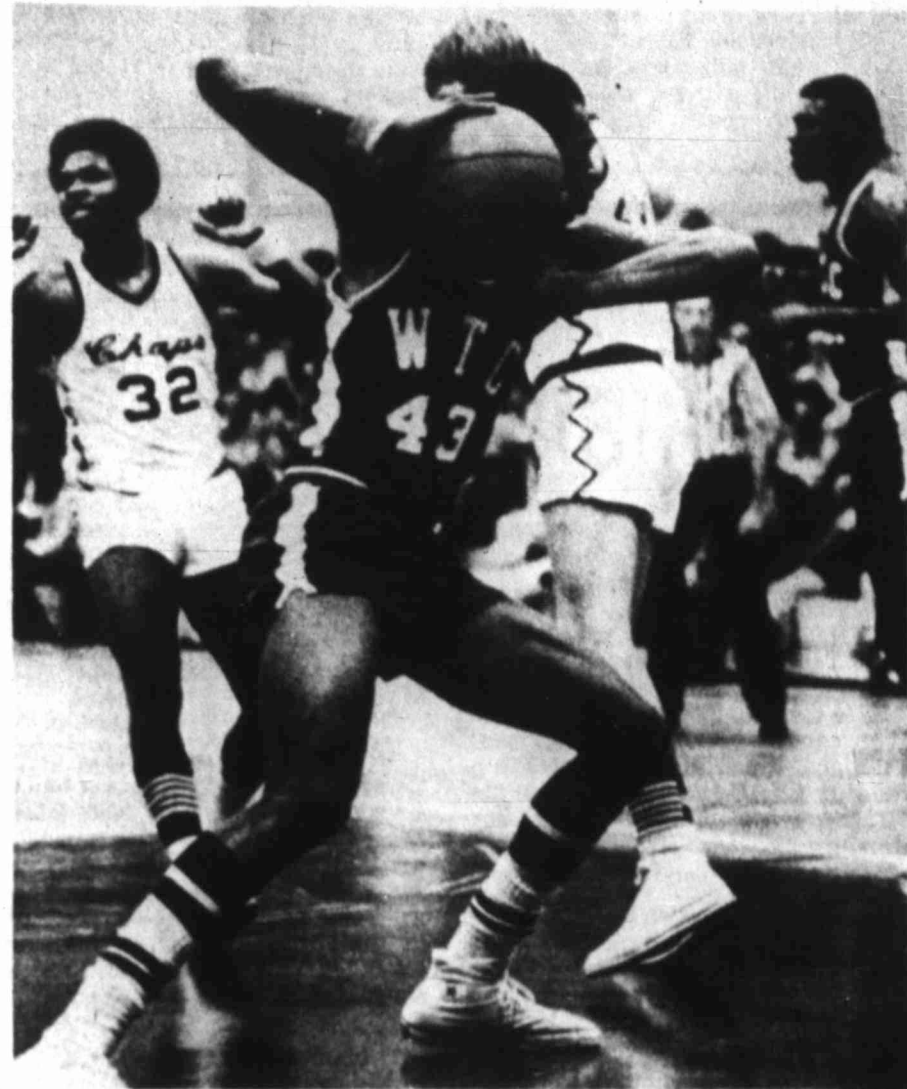

Parks led Midland with 19 points and Daniel had 16 while 6-8 Dan Vanderzee had 24 and Jeff Jackson 10. Six-three Lawrence Butler led WTC with 20, 18 of those coming in the first half as Daniel held the Glasgow, Mo., sharpshooter to a pair of free throws in the second half.

However, 6-8 Daryl Smith, Clopton and 6-8 Larry Orton plus 6-3 Allen Corder took up the slack. Smith scored 13 of his 15 points in the second half, Clopton was four of five from the field and Orton was three of four. Corder hurt the Chaps at the free throw line with six straight plus a field goal.

"They brought their zone out away from the basket and forced us deeper," Story explained. "So we were taking shots from a little further out than we normally do. We adjusted and went inside later in the game which is when Dan (Vanderzee) was most effective."

Smith with 12 and Clopton with 11 were the game's leading rebounders. Vanderzee and Parks each had six for MC.

The Chaparrals return to action tonight against Wayland College JV at 8 p.m. in the MC gym and then they get to Clarendon for a league game Thursday.

Houston extracts revenge

By The Associated Press

Houston avenged the worst basketball defeat in the school's history Monday night with a comeback that would make a Hollywood fiction writer blush.

The Cougars, 92-47 losers to Arkansas last Tuesday in their Southwest Conference debut, rallied from a 20-point second half deficit. To add extra spice, the hero was freshman George Walker.

From 45-point losers to 72-71 victors in just a week, Houston Coach Guy Lewis may wonder if it was worth waiting all those years to get into the SWC.

With a 51-31 lead and 13:22 left to play, Arkansas Coach Eddie Sutton ordered his Razorbacks into a four-corner delay game. Houston scored 13 unanswered points in one stretch as Walker hit four free throws in the clutch with the Cougars pressing the Hogs all over the court.

LEWIS SAID "At halftime I couldn't get mad at the players because they were playing their hearts out. This is the first time we've used the press this season.

"This is one of our greatest wins of all time. The kids did a good job of turning it around. We knew we could win when we got the momentum."

Sutton said "I felt we played solid basketball for the first 20 minutes but seemed to relax in the second half. Houston didn't fold. We went into the control game because we knew Houston's man to man wasn't that strong. The big difference was the nickel and dime points that our defense gave up along with foul trouble."

Houston is now 2-1 while Arkansas is 1-2.

TEXAS TECH remained unbeaten in SWC play with a 3-0 record, whipping Rice 83-59 in Lubbock. Southern Methodist got in on the revenge thing, crushing Texas Christian 108-84 just a week after TCU had downed the Mustangs 79-75.

In the only other game Monday night, Baylor stayed in excellent shape in the league race with an 82-77 victory over Texas. The Bears are 3-1 in the SWC and tied with SMU for third place.

Texas A&M (1-0) was idle.

Tech Coach Gerald Myers praised his tough defense, saying "We take pride in our defense. We don't like to see our opponents score. Rice is a young team and you can pressure the Owls. We got some outstanding play from Grady Newton and Geoff Huston."

Newton and Huston each scored 16 points.

SMU BLISTERED TCU with its zone press and Coach Sonny Allen said of his go-go Mustangs "If we keep this up, we're going to win a lot of games. When we are running like we were tonight, it's beautiful basketball. I can't ask for any more than what I've received from my players the last three games."

Ira Terrell scored 22 points and gathered 24 rebounds in the rout.

Lee entertains Cooper tonight

BY BOB DILLON

Midland Lee entertains the Abilene Cooper Cougars while the Midland Bulldogs travel to Abilene for a date with co-leader Abilene High in District 5-4A basketball action tonight.

Both the Rebels and Pack are hoping to bounce back from disheartening losses last Friday to San Angelo and Big Spring.

The Rebels took it on the chin to the Bobcats, 70-68, and Midland dropped a 62-61 overtime decision to the Steers.

Midland has the toughest assignment of the evening, facing the Warbirds in Abilene. The Eagles sport an 18-2 season record and 2-0 loop mark to share first place with the Bobcats.

The Pack is 11-11 on the year and still looking for its first league win in three outings.

Lee, meanwhile, is 12-7 on the year and 1-1 in district competition and must win tonight in order to get back into the thick of things.

In other games, Odessa Permian plays Big Spring in Big Spring and San Angelo entertains hapless Odessa High.

Abilene took a key 53-52 overtime victory over Odessa Permian in Odessa Friday and appears to be in the driver's seat, at least for the time being.

Midland will be facing the No. 1 and No. 2 scorer in the loop in 6-8 Darrell Baxter and 6-0 Mike Little. Baxter has scored 51 points in two league games and Little 36.

Craig Dunn paces the MHS attack with 27 points for an average of 13.5 in district while teammate John Magness is averaging 10.0 per outing.

Cooper is led by Kenneth McLeod and Donnie Ray Cruse. McLeod is averaging 14 per outing and Cruse 10.5 for the Cougs, who have blown hot and cold all season long. When they blow hot — look out.

Lee has three players in the double figures in loop play with Junior Miller leading the way with an average of 13.5. Billy Ray Ennis and Roy Lee Smith follow with 12.0 and 11.5 averages, respectively.

Arnold McDowell, San Angelo's scoring threat and the No. 1 scorer in the league, pumped in 31 points to lead the Bobcats past Lee. Steve, who hit 12 of 13 free tosses against Lee, is next with a 13.0 mean.

Midland most likely will start Dunn, Tim Johnson, Mike Wiley, Billy Shock and either Magness or Jeff Gotcher against the tall and talented Warbirds.

Lee's starters will include Miller, Ennis, Steve Reiter, Brent Huckabay and either Smith or Robin Todd.

A sophomore contest is slated to start at 4:30 p.m. followed by the junior varsity battle at 6:15 p.m. and tip-off for the varsity game is 8 p.m.

Lee's JV shares first place with Odessa Permian with both sporting 2-0 loop records.

Eddie Futch receives ring award

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Futch, the man who signaled the end of Joe Frazier's bid to regain the heavyweight championship, joined his fighter as an award winner today when he was voted the Al Buck Award as Manager of the Year for 1975.

Frazier, who lost to Muhammad Ali in 14 rounds in Manila last Oct. 1, and Ali were named the co-winners of the Edward J. Neil Award as Fighters of the Year by the Boxing Writers Association Monday.

In another major award announced today was voted the Al Buck Award as Manager of the Year for 1975. Frazier, who lost to Muhammad Ali in 14 rounds in Manila last Oct. 1, and Ali were named the Futch, not knowing how the officials were scoring the fight, made the courageous decision of asking the referee to stop the Frazier-All bout. Futch said Frazier was unable to see and he was afraid the fighter, who had been hit almost at will in the 13th and 14th rounds, might be injured.

It was the third Neil Award each for Ali and Frazier. Ali, who also won three other title fights in 1975, also won in 1965 and last year. Frazier, who fought only All last year, won in 1969 and 1971.

Steelers' defense may prove tough to crack

MIAMI (AP) — When Roger Staubach leads the Dallas Cowboy offense on the field to face Pittsburgh's Steel Curtain defense in Super Bowl X, he will have four huge problems on his hands.

L.C. Greenwood, 6-foot-6, 245 pounds.
Joe Greene, 6-foot-4, 275 pounds.
Ernie Holmes, 6-foot-3, 260 pounds.
Dwight White, 6-foot-4, 255 pounds.

They are easily the most well known front four in professional football, a frightening, formidable quartet that played a major role in delivering the Super Bowl Trophy to Pittsburgh last January.

Greenwood, Holmes, Greene and White limited Minnesota to a record-low 17 rushing yards in last year's Super Bowl, permitting a mere nine first downs. Unless they are controlled, it is entirely likely that the Steel Curtain could do the same kind of terrible things to the Cowboys.

SO, THE problem is how to control them. Well, the immediate job belongs to the Dallas offensive line composed of tackles Ralph Neely and Rayfield Wright, guards Blaine Nye and Burton Lawless and center John Fitzgerald. All of them are veterans except for Lawless, a rookie out of Florida who will line up across from Holmes and White.

That Dallas line will try to open the holes for running backs Robert Newhouse and Preston Pearson. Newhouse rushed for 930 yards during the regular season and Pearson, who was signed by the Cowboys after being cut by Pittsburgh, gained 509.

The Steeler defensive charge could force Staubach into frequent use of the shotgun formation which the Cowboys have employed to great advantage this season. In obvious passing situations, Staubach drops eight yards back of the center to take the snap.

THE COWBOYS say the shotgun gives Staubach more time to diagnose the defense and attack it. Against the Steelers, he'll be facing three top linebackers in Andy Russell, Jack Lambert and Jack Ham and a secondary that includes cornerbacks J.T. Thomas and Mel Blount, the defensive player of the year, and safeties Mike Wagner and Glen Edwards.

Blount led the NFL with 11 interceptions during the regular season. He is the key man in a secondary that must defend against wide receivers Drew Pearson and Golden Richards and tight ends Billy Joe DuPree and Jean Fugett, who act as play messengers for Coach Tom Landry.

STABAUCH WAS THE NFL's second-best passer during the regular season, trailing only Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota. He completed 198 of 348 attempts for 2,666 yards and 17 touchdowns.

Pearson was his favorite target with 46 receptions. The speedy receiver is best remembered for the 50-yard TD strike he caught in the fading seconds to beat Minnesota in the playoffs.

The Steelers present a peculiar defensive problem for Staubach and the Cowboys to solve. Pittsburgh had the fourth-best defensive statistics in the NFL last season with a yield of 3,861 yards.

That total was split between the pass and the run. The Steelers gave up 1,825 yards to the rush and 1,836 in the air. That means they have no particular weakness—no special area that Staubach can attack.

THE COWBOYS generated the third-best offense in the league and led the NFC with 5,025 yards. Of that total, 2,593 were gained through the air and 2,432 along the ground.

Most Super Bowl teams like to establish a running game first and then play off that to their passing game. Pittsburgh's success in the 1975 Super Bowl can be traced to the nearly complete shutout of the Minnesota ground game, forcing Tarkenton to the air.

It must be expected that Dallas will try the same technique of churning out the yards on the ground with Newhouse and Preston Pearson. They will need holes from their offensive line and that's where the Steel Curtain comes in. So, it seems this game will be settled in the trenches.

Friendly 25 free throws turns into marathon

By BILL NACK
Newday

At half-past five on the afternoon of Dec. 11, 17-year-old Hal Cohen stepped to the free-throw line of the Canton High School gym in upstate New York and entered that province between mind and body, where everything feels effortless.

"I just felt I couldn't miss," Cohen recalled the other day. "I'd take three dribbles and...shoot."

So the Streak began — a remarkable run of swishes and rebounds, as it would turn out — and moments after coach Jerry Hourihan halted practice and left his team to its rituals, the 25 free throws to end the practice day. Standing on the line, Cohen calmly sank his 25 shots, and with confidence and concentration he sensed the rhythms coming together.

"After 25, I really had a good feeling," Cohen recalled. "I was in a groove."

THE GROOVE was magic. With a young female member of the swimming team retrieving the shots, Cohen simply would dribble three times and let fly. Soon the total was climbing past 100, then past 120 and beyond. Cohen was sinking consecutive free throws at a rate of about seven a minute, about one every eight seconds. Teammates, finished at the line, stood watching behind Cohen as the numbers rose to 140, to 150, and on to 160. Hourihan had left the gym before the streak began, waiting for Cohen to finish and dress so they could attend a college game together, and returned looking for him 20 minutes later.

"Hal was still shooting fouls," Hourihan said. "As I came into the gym, I was going to say something quietly to him, like, 'Let's go, Hal, we're late,' but our other co-captain, Bob McKenney, he said to me, 'Coach, Hal's got a streak going.' I said, 'How many?' McKenney said, 'A hundred and sixty.'"

If that utterance would have floored the average college or professional coach, it didn't faze

Hourihan, who had grown accustomed to such things from the 6-1 senior. "He's sharp," Hourihan said. "He had shot 109 in a row and 110 in a row another time. This kid's unusual. He's scored 53 points in one game and on several occasions sank 40 or more. He averaged 35 points a game last year."

STILL, 160 WAS 50 more than Cohen had ever sank in succession, so Hourihan remained silent, the only humane thing to do, and then did the next best thing. "I sat down," Hourihan said. "At one point Hal turned to me and said, 'Coach, you want to go?' I said, 'No, shoot if you wish.' Needless to say, I didn't know I'd be there another hour. I was amazed at his relaxed state. He customarily takes three bounces before he shoots, and every time — bing, bing, bing, up."

The count rose to more than 300, and then it was past six o'clock and members of other Canton school teams were heading to the showers through the gym, the swimmers and wrestlers stopped to ask what was happening. "People started drifting into the gym," McKenney said. "By the time he hit 300, there were about 75 people around. They held up all the sports buses; even the drivers were inside watching it."

None of this bothered Cohen, however, though he heard the quiet filling of the gym. "I knew there were people there," he said. "But I didn't want to turn around and jinx myself. I could feel the tension. I could hear people come into the gym and say, you know, 'He's got a streak going. Be quiet.'"

THE NUMBER continued rising, with the arc and fall of the ball, past 400 in a row, past 450 and on toward 500. Hourihan and others in the gym were under the mistaken impression that the world record was 499, so when Cohen drilled his 500th consecutive free throw of the night, Hourihan approached him.

"Hal, are you tired?" Hourihan asked him.

"No," Cohen said.

"We have a ball game in a couple of days," Hourihan said. "Do you have any blisters?" He didn't. "You want to shoot some more?"

"Let me keep going," Hal Cohen said. So the beat and swish of the ball went on, the count continued to mount through an 80-shot streak, from 500 to 580, in which the ball never touched the rim. As Cohen neared 600 Hourihan sensed fatigue by the expression on Cohen's face. It was becoming a long night at Canton High, almost an hour and a half of free-throw shooting.

"My calves inside were really stiff and tired," Cohen said. "My arms weren't that tired, but my hands were, like, tight."

Cohen remembers the end of the streak in detail. He had just made his 598th free throw. Going for 599 he bounded the ball three times and lofted it like the others. "I thought it was going in," he said. "The ball hit the front of the rim, then hit the back of the rim and rolled off the front."

THE 100 or so spectators erupted in cheers as the ball dropped out of the hoop, with many thinking the hometown boy had a world's record. According to the latest Guinness Book of Records, however, Ted St. Martin of Jacksonville, Fla., sank 1,704 consecutive free throws on Feb. 28, 1975. But St. Martin, 41, is a special case. He runs basketball clinics, gives tips to pros on free-throw shooting and sets free-throw records to promote his enterprises.

"I shoot free throws for a living," St. Martin said last night. St. Martin said he believes that no American, aside from himself, has sunk more consecutive free throws than Hal Cohen that night in Canton High, and he regards the young man as the principal threat to his record.

Cohen, for his part, was hardly moved by the feat. As they left the gym together, Hourihan said to Cohen: "Hal, do you want the ball?"

And Cohen shrugged and said, "What the heck do I want the ball for?"

BATTLE SCENE

Sommers makes plans

Sports in spurts and, quick now, can you name the teams involved in the longest game in college basketball history? Hint, no one will know the answer...few will even know the colleges involved....

One of the first things Denny Sommers, the new Midland Cub manager, wanted to know was what happened to Aaron Randall?

Randall, a first baseman out of Grambling College, tore up the Cactus circuit in Arizona last spring, hitting well over 500 and for power not to mention making all the plays in the field.

The way Hank was going, the only mystery seemed to be "Why isn't this guy with Chicago?" When the Texas League season started Randall got off to a slow start, got down on himself and wound up in Fort Lauderdale. But this is another year and perhaps he'll make it this time....

Asked what kind of a team Cub fans could expect, Denny says he'd like to hit and run, "but we'll have have to wait and see who winds up on the roster. You've got to have people who can handle the bat and hit behind the runners for that."

WHAT A difference a year makes. The Tall City's five year domination of high school basketball is over, or so we're told, although it's a bit early to be counting anybody out, yet. Midland, which won three titles in a row, is 0-2 and Lee, which went to the state AAAA semifinals last year after winning its second straight 5-4A title, is 1-1.

Meanwhile, Houston Kashmere, the team Lee took to three overtimes before losing in the state semis, after compiling a 46-0 record last year and a 78-game winning streak, already has been beaten four times this season....

Apparently, Houston Wheatley is back, however. In the recent Dr. Pepper tournament, Wheatley fractured a 37-game winning streak by Louisiana state champion, W.O. Boston, 90-80, after Boston had waxed Kashmere, 108-92....

PERHAPS BASEBALL'S most successful managers have been guys who never made it in the majors. From the past, you've got Joe McCarthy of the old Ruth-Gehrig-DiMaggio days, John McGraw of the old Giants, and Connie Mack. Today it's Walter Alston, Earl Weaver and Sparky Anderson, who are the leading managers rather than the super stars of yesterday.

"It's simple," says Sparky. "It's the same reason why a guy who had to struggle to get through med school becomes a great doctor. Anyone who finds a game—or profession easy—isn't observing all there is to it. If you walk out and hit the ball 300 yards off the first tee the first time you ever play golf, the chances are you're never going to learn the fine points of the game."

"If you're Babe Ruth, you're probably going to hand a kid a bat and say, 'Here, go up and hit a home run.' I can understand why a guy might punt...."

Longest college game? Black Hills beat Yankton, 80-79, after seven overtimes Feb. 18, 1956. Now aren't you ashamed? A couple of high school teams in San Diego topped that the other night when Patrick Henry beat the University Dons, 66-61, in eight overtimes after it wound up 43-43 in regulation time.

Roger Staubach signs autographs as Dallas Cowboys arrive in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., to prepare for Sunday's Super Bowl game in Miami.

Big crowd greets Cowboys

MIAMI (AP) — Super Bowl week has begun fittingly with the Dallas Cowboys arriving in Florida with flair to mark their season, and the Pittsburgh Steelers coming to town with businesslike conservatism.

The defending champion Steelers, who methodically won 14 of 16 games to claim American Football Conference honors, arrived in Miami Monday afternoon with no fanfare. Only a couple dozen reporters greeted them.

But when the Cowboys showed up four hours later at Fort Lauderdale, 30 miles away, they were welcomed by a high school marching band, Mayor E. Clay Shaw Jr. and other city officials and businessmen.

MANY PEOPLE didn't expect the surprise Cowboys to be playing in the Orange Bowl next Sunday. They struggled to a 10-4 record, losing three of four games in midseason, but as the National Conference wild card entry shocked Minnesota 17-14 and Los Angeles 37-7 in the playoffs.

"They remind me a lot of our team last year," said quarterback Terry Bradshaw, whose Steelers won the title last year after a 10-3-1 season. "After what they did to Minnesota, we know they're a good football team."

Dallas Coach Tom Landry admitted, "We're just happy to be here. We didn't really expect to be here the first of the year. But this team is a closely-knit, more so than any we've ever had."

The Steelers, forced inside last week when temperatures in Pittsburgh dipped to around zero, immediately were taken to practice facilities at Biscayne College by Coach Chuck Noll.

In contrast, Landry gave his players the day off. "They've got to have a day off sometime. This week isn't much different than any others in the season," explained Cowboy spokesman Curt Mosher.

But closed afternoon workouts were scheduled for both teams today.

BRADSHAW, asked if the Steelers were feeling pressure, said, "We're a pretty loose bunch of guys. We haven't been uptight all year. There's no reason to get uptight now."

Veteran Dallas linebacker Lee Roy Jordan, asked the same question, replied, "We're the underdogs. We've got nothing to lose."

Landry also referred to his club's standing as sevenpoint underdogs by oddsmakers.

Writers shares hanky with weeping Woody

By CLIFF McWILLIAMS
WHEELING, W. Va. — I can't help it. My heart goes out to Woody Hayes. That gallant and pathetic march of the beaten old man across the field with still a few seconds left on the game clock was one of the most magnificent, yet miserable, sights I've ever seen.

His heart was breaking, stabbed to death by John Sclarra's lances, but he wanted to make sure his congratulations to the young, triumphant adversary was not scrubbed by a wave of exuberant UCLA fans.

WOODY'S IMAGE was never brighter...even though most of us realized that some of the brightness was the reflection of unashamed tears.

It's difficult to criticize a man of his stature, but I'm sure Woody himself will be the first to admit that the Buckeye strategy board choked, even as early as the second quarter, when they discarded their tried and true winning football formula and turned to a helter skelter aerial attack.

And in the long winter months, when he has a chance to analyze it in the galling realism of hindsight, I'm quite sure he's going to make some changes. If he was the one who called the signals that diluted the brutal Buckeyes' offense into a rag-tag, playground fire and fall back, pass and pray type of attack, then he should relegate those duties to someone else. And if it was some trusted aide that threw the pansy smelling monkey wrench into the grind 'em out gears, then he should be given his walking papers forthright.

I'll grant, to those few detractors of the old curmudgeon, that Woody gave in to the bitterness of the moment and turned his worst face pressward when he failed to grant an interview to the media following the upset.

Just as surely, however, I am forced to ask them as well as myself if any of us would have had the ability to choke back emotion at such a moment and present a smiling face to what surely would have been his tormentors.

Woody Hayes, in my humble opinion, does not have to apologize.

Not for his coaching career.

Or for his even more enviable career as a solid citizen, a patriot...a man.

The woods are full of anecdotes about Woody: how he has turned down one raise after another, how his family car is a pick-up truck, how his only claim to fame is the Ohio Stadium turf in the back of the truck, how he maintains constant contact with all of his players, how he is always available at a moment's notice to come to grips with someone else's problems.

I heard a new one about Woody the other day. Perhaps it typifies the Woody approach, a rapport with human dignity but an ultra-detailed approach to the little things that make up a champion.

One of the North Carolina State assistant coaches was telling before the Peach Bowl game with West Virginia that he thought he had a blue-chip prospect wrapped up and ready to be delivered. That is, until Woody decided to make a pitch.

IT SEEMED Woody's appointment with the high school phenom was not until 7 p.m., but he arrived in town early in the afternoon. He discovered that a playground was in the prospect's neighborhood so armed with several bags of popcorn he popped down on a bench and surveyed "the battleground."

After a time, one youngster ventured over to him and Woody offered the bag of popcorn. They chatted, then before long, he was the center of attention—not as Coach Woody Hayes but as just a friendly old man who was fun to talk to.

That evening, when he had decided the time was ripe and he already had established a reputation—from the mouths-of-the-kids themselves—that he was the greatest old man to ever grace them with his presence, he made his triumphant approach to the prospect's house.

The kids, of course, delivered him right to the prospect's door with all the homage due an emperor.

Woody not only had gained more knowledge about the recruit than even his mother, but he also had the backing of every kid in town on his mission.

The Wolfpack aide asked a rhetorical question: "And can you imagine who got the plum."

Tarkenton blushes at NFL MVP award

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Francis Tarkenton isn't sure he deserves the honor, but his coach says it's about time he won it.

In any event, the 35-year-old Minnesota quarterback was named Offensive Player of the Year and Most Valuable Player in the National Football League today by The Associated Press.

"I'm appreciative of the recognition," Tarkenton said in a telephone interview from his business in Atlanta. "But I really think it's impossible to pick a person in a team sport that is a most valuable player."

Disagreeing was Vikings Coach Bud Grant, who said, "It's long overdue. I don't know who's more deserving than Francis."

Tarkenton led Minnesota to a 12-2 record and its third straight National Football Conference Central Division title in 1975. He passed for 3,994 yards and 25 touchdowns and established several new NFL records.

In 15 seasons, Tarkenton has completed 2,931 passes in 5,225 attempts for 291 touchdowns — all records. His 38,846 yards passing is within striking distance of Johnny Unitas' standard of 40,239 yards.

The Athens, Ga., native was in the process of creating a memorial for his late father, Dallas Sr., when informed of the awards he has won. The elder Tarkenton, a Methodist minister, died of a heart attack while watching the Dallas Cowboys defeat the Vikings 17-14 in the NFC playoff Dec. 28.

Thousands of sympathy letters were sent to the Viking office and Tarkenton plans to apply the memorials toward construction of a new church in his father's name.

"Daddy spent all of his life in the church," said Tarkenton. "One thing I was always very proud of was being the son of a Georgia preacher man."

Grant said one of the best things the Viking organization has ever done was get Tarkenton back after a five-year stopover in New York with the Giants.

"He's blessed with a great talent and a superb body and mind," said Grant.

Tarkenton, who still appears to play with the same enthusiasm he brought to the game as a 21-year-old rookie in 1961, says the fanfare hasn't made any difference to his way of life.

Knight seeks perfection

By PAUL ATTNER
The Washington Post
NEW YORK — It was late in the second half of another one of those dreary mismatches Indiana has created the past two basketball seasons and Scott May, the only starter still playing, fired up an off-balance, spread-leg, playground jump shot that barely touched the front of the rim.

"Scotty, good shots, good shots, nothing but good shots," screamed Bobby Knight from his perch on the Indiana bench.

You could see fans in Madison Square Garden shake their heads, wondering how a coach whose team is winning by 25 points could be yelling so harshly at his star player for taking one ill-advised shot.

TO UNDERSTAND why No. 1-ranked Indiana as a team and Scott May as an individual have been so impressive this year, it is essential to understand Bobby Knight's reason for chewing out an all-American at a moment when most coaches would be thinking about their next opponent.

"For him there is no letdown period in a game, no matter what the score," said May about his coach. "He isn't trying to run up scores. But he wants whoever is playing to play as well as they can all the time. He doesn't tolerate bad habits."

So Knight will sometimes instruct more intently, and raise his voice more frequently, in the latter states of already-won games. Knight's worry is that May might take a similar-unwarranted shot in another contest, when things aren't quite so under control.

"The whole game of basketball boils down to playing as well as you can no matter who you are playing or where you are play," said Knight. "Matchups, offenses, defenses and all that don't mean anything."

"My major concern as a coach is to take these 10 guys and get them playing what they do best. You've got to motivate them. You've got to get them ready to play every time out. I don't think there is anything to peaks and valleys in a season."

RIVAL COACHES and media types are beginning to compare the Hoosiers with some of college basketball's past great teams. For a squad that has yet to win a national title, it is at once a great compliment and an untruth. Although this Hoosier team is very, very good, it has perhaps more vulnerable areas than most great squads. Knight's coaching is so good it hides these weaknesses.

Indiana is not a good outside shooting team, although it is hitting more than 53 per cent of its field-goal attempts this year. May is the Hoosiers' one consistent outside threat, and if he is shut off, Knight can't rely on guards Quinn Buckner and Bob Wilkerson to supply that outside marksmanship.

The Hoosiers also have lapses in rebounding, have wilted under pressure at the foul line and have had problems overcoming zones thrown up by Kentucky and Notre Dame. The bench is not deep and Knight lacks a center to back up Kent Benson.

But Indiana continues to win because the players believe in Knight's system and they execute it well. These players are strong and brawny, so Knight has them setting mansize picks that consistently open up easy shots. His passing offense creates constant motion that grinds away at opponents, relentlessly freeing Hoosiers for morale-depleting baskets.

"We've found out," said May, "that if we do what he says, we win. It's that simple."

BASKETBALL — The Kentucky Colonels dealt Travis Grant to the Indianapolis Pacers for a consideration. FOOTBALL — Bethlehem, Pa., coach Bill Whitbeck, an assistant football coach at Lehigh University, was promoted to head coach.

Alabama came from 16 points down with 8:57 remaining to go ahead by one with eight seconds to go, but Florida refused to fold. Reserve forward Al Bonner took an inbound pass, drove the baseline and had his shot blocked by Alabama center Leon Douglas, but Gene Shy recovered the loose ball and barely beat the buzzer with a game-winning layup.

The game had been dominated by the opposing centers. Douglas topped Alabama with 21 points and 18 rebounds, while Bob Smyth of Florida came through with 17 points and 18 rebounds.

"Give Florida credit," said Alabama Coach C.M. Newton. "They were well prepared. It's a very disappointing loss after coming from 16 down, but I'm proud of our team for coming back the way it did."

In Nashville, Tenn., it was orange night as Vanderbilt fans celebrated their team's first victory over arch-rival Tennessee in two years. The game had to be halted a number of times as members of the sellout crowd of 16,000 hurled oranges onto the floor—one of Tennessee's nicknames being the Big Orange.

Vanderbilt led 41-38 at halftime and gradually stretched the margin to a dozen late in the second half as Joe Ford scored 25 points and Jeff Fosnes added 23. Tennessee's two stars were both held in check, Ernie Grunfeld finishing with 20 points and Bernard King with 16.

Udall favors buying foreign petroleum

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona believes the United States should buy and use all the foreign oil it can instead of embarking on a crash program to shift to domestic sources in the name of energy independence.

Reversing the energy course advocated by the administration, Udall's plan would be to increase imports and save U.S. oil for as long as possible.

Udall also says that if his Democratic presidential campaign succeeds, the goal of his administration would be to cut the number of jobless Americans by more than half, to no more than four million, within a year.

The candidate and his advisers estimate the potential cost at about $11 billion. They have no specific formula to finance it, although Udall says it could be offset by cuts in the defense budget and by tax-raising measures in the name of reform.

program that would disrupt the economy," he said.

The balance of payments — the difference between what America buys abroad and what it exports — is expected to show a surplus of about $2 billion for the past year. Udall did not say what level of increased imports he would consider acceptable.

But any significant increase in oil imports would quickly put the balance of payments into the red. The United States now imports about 38 percent of the oil it consumes. Consumption totals about 17 million barrels a day.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

According to Federal Energy Administration figures, imports are running at about 6.6 million barrels a day. Thus, on an annual basis, the imports cost close to $32 billion.

Udall said if elected he would pursue policies designed to guarantee full employment — a common theme among the Democratic candidates — and would provide "some leadership on the adjustments we're going to have to make" as energy becomes scarcer and more costly.

But in the interview, as in his published position papers, he avoided dollar-by-dollar specifics about the cost and revenues involved in the proposals.

Udall said he favors prompt action on legislation that would require the federal government to spend whatever is necessary to guarantee a job for every able-bodied American.

He endorsed a bill sponsored by Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and based his forecast of the cost on their figures.

Those estimates assume a need to provide five million jobs within 18 months, to bring the unemployment rate down to about 3 per cent.

They estimate the cost per job at up to $10,000 a year, but say that would be offset by a decline in unemployment and welfare expenses, and by an increase in federal revenues stirred by higher employment and increased economic activity.

Udall estimates the annual net cost therefore would be about $11 billion. He said that could be offset by defense spending cuts, tax revisions and, if necessary, an increased deficit. The candidate and his advisers said they could not estimate how much the deficit might go up because of uncertainties about the economy.

The jobs would be generated by stepped-up construction of government financed or aided projects, or would be provided in public service employment on government payrolls.

Udall contends that the cost eventually would be more than balanced by increased revenues produced by the new jobs and an accompanying economic revival.

He advocates cuts in defense spending for conventional weapons, a sharp reduction in the number of tactical nuclear weapons deployed abroad and substantial cuts in the $23 million earmarked in the Pentagon budget for conventional forces assigned to primary or backup roles in Asia.

Udall's account of his defense views does not include dollar figures on Pentagon budget cuts.

His other projected revenue source for the jobs program would be tax revisions, and he says tax reform would be one of his top priorities.

He said at least $20 billion a year escapes "through tax loopholes."

While he proposed a series of tax changes, he avoided itemizing what they would raise — or cost.

Among them: —Gradual repeal of the provisions under which capital gains are taxed at a lower rate than other income, although Udall proposes that taxpayers be permitted to average their gains from the sale of stocks or other assets over a period of years, to spare them hefty tax bills in a single year. That would eliminate part of a tax advantage that now costs the Treasury about $5 billion a year, but Udall didn't spell out how much.

—Changes he said would "put real teeth into the so-called minimum tax" on the wealthy, including repeal of the present exemption for the first $30,000 of tax-sheltered income and a crack-down on other shelters. Again, he didn't say what that would raise. The House approved legislation including new minimum tax provisions that would raise $707 billion the first year they took effect, but that measure awaits Senate action.

—An annual review by Congress of federal tax expenditures — money that is not raised by the Treasury because of preferences, subsidies, incentives or other tax law provisions. Tax expenditures are estimated to cost the government $50 billion a year. Udall said Congress should be required to review them annually to continue those it wants to keep in effect.

Congress has repeatedly bogged down on proposed overhauls of the tax code by would-be reformers, but Democratic leaders have said there will be another effort next year.

Udall set a goal of reducing the current nine million unemployed to between three and four million in a year, adding that that could cure most of the nation's current economic woes.

"The real way to balance the budget and get more revenues is to take up the slack in the economy," he said. "If we had a 4 per cent unemployment ... this horrendous, all-time record peacetime deficit would actually be a surplus."

Udall said any program to stimulate the economy with government-sponsored jobs would have to be coupled with a plan to prevent a spurt in the rate of inflation.

Projects set in WF regions

A wildcat site was staked Tuesday in Scurry County, and a reentry was slated in Andrews. Also, Glasscock gained a field confirmation, and an extender was completed in Sterling.

MGF Oil Corp., Midland, staked site for No. 1 Bowen, et al, a 7,500-foot Ellenburger try in Scurry, 15 miles northeast of Snyder.

Drillsite is 1,980 feet from south and east lines of section 138, block 2, H&TC survey and one location west of the depleted Camp Springs (Pennsylvanian) oil field.

ANDREWS REENTRY
J. C. Barnes Oil Co., Midland, intends to reenter and plug back to wildcat depth of 11,078 feet at No. 1 Phillips-University-Stillwagon, former Devonian producer in the BMH field of Pecos County.

A drillstem test from 7,464-7,706 feet, in an unidentified formation, on which the tool was open two hours, had gas to the surface in 16 minutes on a 1/4-inch choke, no gauge reported.

Recovery was 1,070 feet of heavily gas-cut drilling mud and 75 feet of free oil. Sample chamber recovery was 9.2 cubic feet of gas and 650 cubic centimeters of fluid, being 60 per cent salt water, 40 per cent oil.

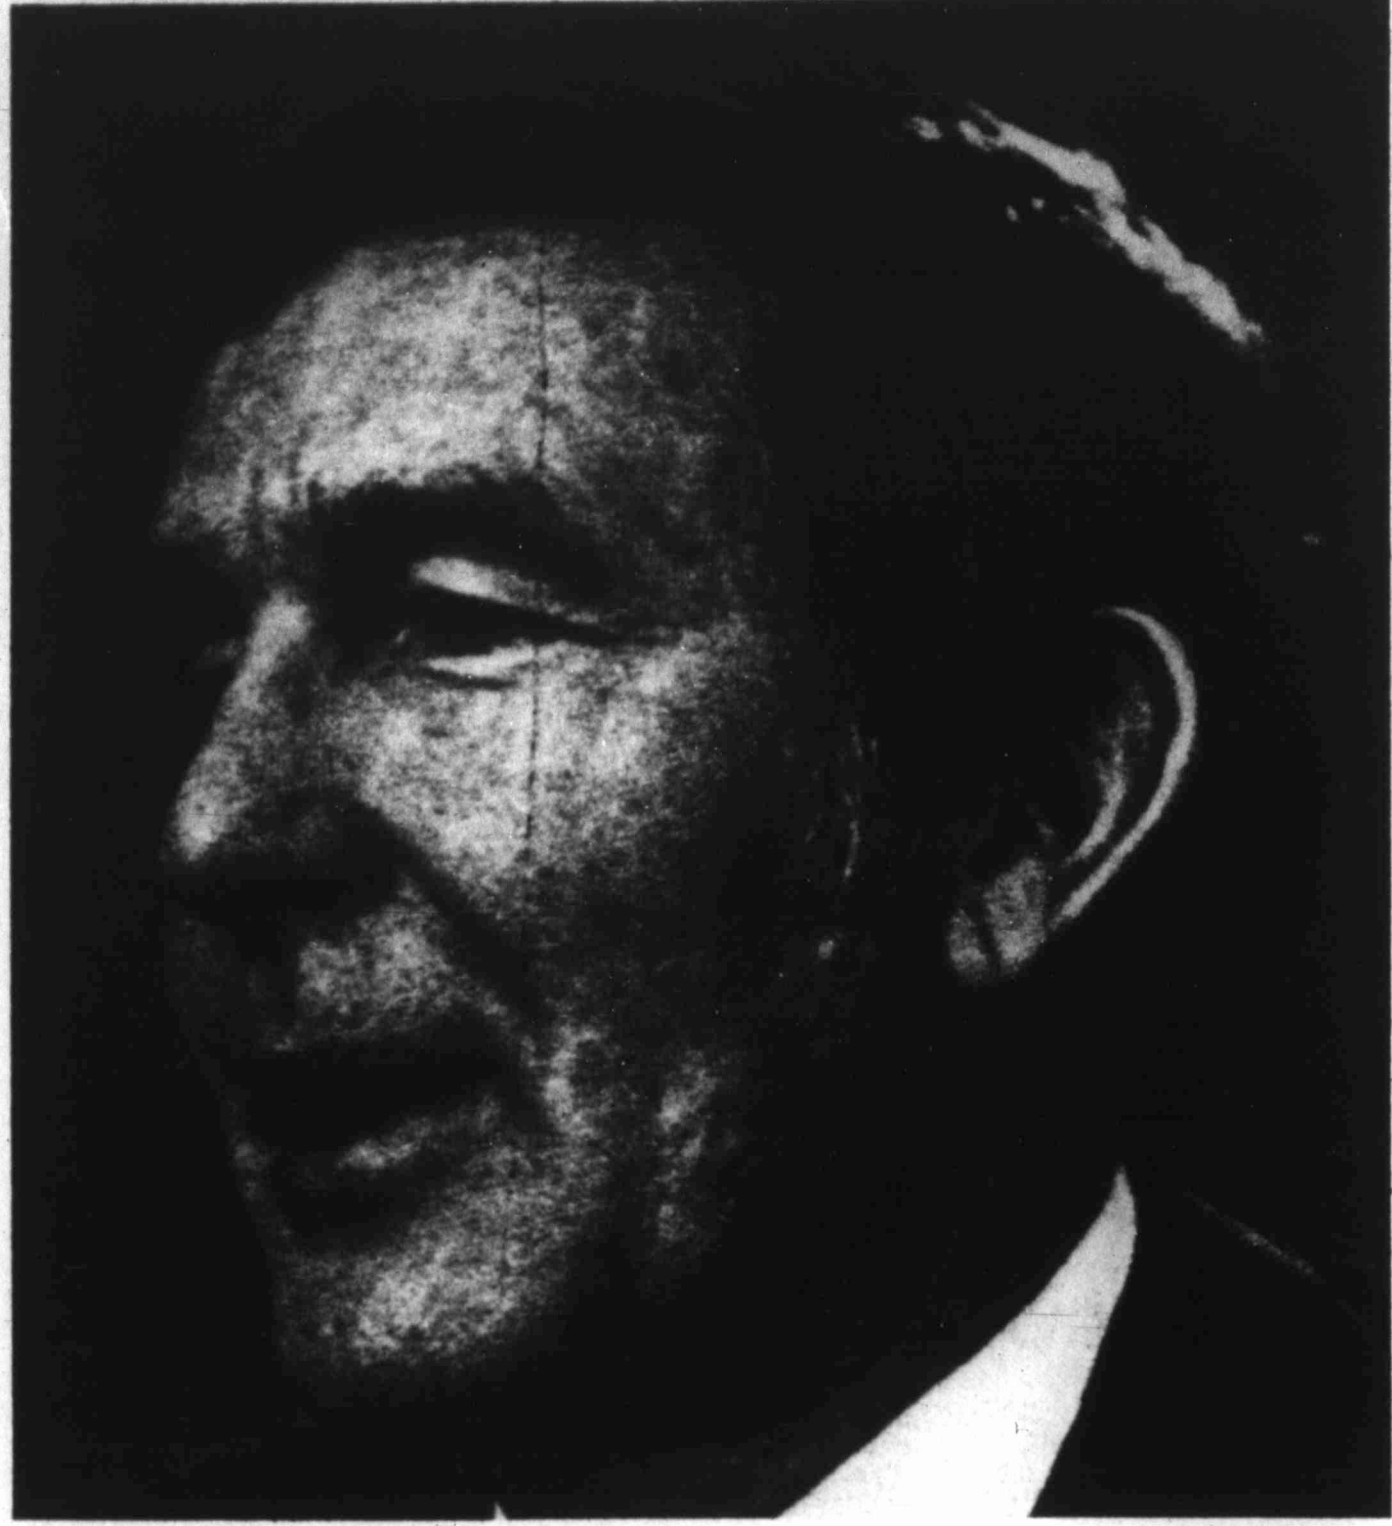

A previous test from 7,455-7,706 feet was misrun.

Location is 660 feet from north and 4,847 feet from east lines of section 1, block 104, Jasper CSL survey; seven miles southwest of Bakersfield.

NEW OPERATOR CHANGES DEPTH
Ryder-Scott Management Co. of Wichita Falls has taken over and rescheduled to new wildcat depth of 4,900 feet, the former A. L. Sauder No. 2-L Swenson, Stonewall County venture.

It originally was planned as a 3,500-foot Swastika prospector, 1 1/2 mile north of the Flat Top 124 (Swastika) field.

Location is 900 feet from north and 2,300 feet from west lines of section 125, BBB&C survey, seven miles south of Old Glory.

Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., believes the United States should buy and use all the foreign oil it can instead of embarking on a crash program to shift to domestic sources in the name of energy independence.

Texas Electric president appeals for environmental rule changes

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Burl B. Hulsey, president of Texas Utilities, has appealed to the National Commission on Water Quality to urge Congress to change U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations on thermal discharges from power plants.

Hulsey told a committee of the commission, chaired by Rep. Jim Wright, D-Tex., that cooling reservoirs are a more practical approach to handling waters used by electric power plants than the cooling towers required by EPA.

"Very extensive evidence ... supports the using of cooling reservoirs in Texas as a superior technology and as a utilization of resources I think is in the best public interest," Hulsey said at a hearing here Monday.

Hulsey cited Lake Arlington, which supplies water to Arlington and provides terminal storage of water from CEDAR Creek Lake for the Tarrant County Water District, as an example of such cooling reservoir.

"Lake Arlington provides needed recreation in the center of a metropolitan area. It is a popular spot for fishing, boating and water skiing ... while providing cooling water for Texas Electric's Handley generating plant," Hulsey said.

However, he said, the EPA refuses to take into consideration such examples.

"They would have us build cooling towers instead of lakes and thus eliminate the benefits of multipurpose reservoirs," Hulsey said.

"What cooling towers would do is use more of our precious water resources, use more energy and increase the cost of providing electricity to our customers," he said.

Hulsey quoted a brief from the State of Texas in a suit filed last year against the EPA to the effect that the use of cooling towers would increase the fresh water deficit in Texas by 273 million gallons a day by the year 2,000 because of attendant evaporation.

"This is insupportable when you consider that this amount of water would satisfy the daily needs of approximately three million people," Hulsey said.

Wright said there is some question as to whether requiring cooling towers instead of reservoirs would benefit the public.

He suggested that the EPA may have misinterpreted the intent of Congress when the National Water Quality Act of 1972 was written.

"We did not intend to imply that just because water is warm it is polluted," Wright said.

"If we require the expenditure of large amounts of funds that raise electric rates ... and they achieve better water quality, that's all right. But if it doesn't, that's a waste," Wright said.

Hulsey was one of several representatives of industry, municipalities and state and local agencies that appeared at the hearing.

These would include increases in the capital gains tax and in the minimum tax on wealthy citizens, but Udall did not say exactly how much he proposes to raise with such measures.

Their fate in Congress would be questionable anyhow.

In the energy field, the Arizona congressman proposes that the United States use its market power to require competitive bidding by foreign producers who seek to sell their exports here. Udall's proposal, similar to a plan sponsored by Sen. Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., envisions a system in which the government, instead of the oil companies, would deal with exporters. The purchase bids would be sealed and — if the theory worked — exporting nations might undercut each other's prices to gain a share of the American market.

"We buy something like 40 per cent of the oil that's exported in the world, and if we suddenly said: 'We're going to make you bid against each other for the rights,' I think we could divide the cartel and probably get some reduction in price, or at least head off the next increase," Udall said in an interview.

Udall said that at current consumption rates, most of the world's oil and gas is going to be used up in the next 25 years. He said the United States should speed its search for alternative power sources, and for more effective ways to use its coal.

"As long as we can handle the balance of payments, and the balance of payments has been looking pretty good, we may be better off using up and buying up their oil, and saving ours, rather than to start a crash

Field extensions final in West Texas sectors

Field extensions have been completed in Cottle, Menard and Tom Green counties.

Perkins-Prothro Co. of Wichita Falls, completed No. 3 Carroll as a confirmation and 3/4-mile northeast extension in the Cee Vee (Pennsylvanian reef) field of Northwest Cottle.

It gauged a 24-hour potential of 99.6 barrels of 38-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 150-1.

Production was through perforations at 4,630-4,634 feet. Treatment and choke, if any, were not available.

Drilled to 5,000 feet, it has 4 1/2-inch production string seated at 4,998 feet.

Wellsite is 990 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 5, F. P. Knott survey, 10 miles northwest of Paducah.

The discovery, the firm's No. 2-A Carroll, finished Oct. 1, 1975, for 84 barrels of 39-gravity oil daily, through perforations at 4,706-4,708 feet.

MENARD EXTENDER
The P-G, Southwest (lower Strawn) oil pool of Menard gained a third well with completion by Lloyd Patton of Fort Worth, of No. 3-C Concho Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America.

It finished to flow 115 barrels of 35.2-gravity oil per day, through a 10-64-inch choke and perforations at 4,034-4,038 feet, after treating the pay with 200 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio was 840-1, oil add 1/2.

Wellsite is 467 feet from north and east lines of Mrs. George Brown survey 14, abstract 1669, eight miles north of Fort McKavett.

Reeves area gains oil well

Fifth producer and a location northwest extension has been completed in the Worsham, South (Delaware sand) field of Reeves County, 18 miles southeast of Pecos.

McIntosh & Olsen of Midland finished No. 2 Anthony & Tubb to flow 54 barrels of 37.5-gravity oil and 45 barrels of water per day, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,907-1.

Completion was effected through perforations at 5,070-5,076 feet, after acidizing the pay with 500 gallons and fracturing with 2,500 gallons and 2,750 pounds.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 14, block C-3, PSL survey.

TOM GREEN OILER
John L. Cox, Midland, completed No. 1-B Miss Ela, a fifth producer and location west extension in the Miss Ela (Canyon) oil field of the Panhandle sector of Tom Green County, 30 miles north of Barnhart.

It pumped 15 barrels of 38-gravity oil and 10 barrels of water per day, with gas-oil ratio of 770-1, through perforations at 7,155-7,334 feet, which had been fractured with 30,000 gallons.

Drilled to 7,550 feet, 4 1/2-inch casing was set at that depth.

It is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 61, block 7, H&TC survey.

Gulf wildcat develops flow

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-SD State, Reagan County scheduled 10,800-foot wildcat, eight miles west of Big Lake, was drilling below 7,100 feet in lime, dolomite and shale, after flowing gas and recovering free oil on a drillstem test in an unidentified formation.

Tool was open 1 1/2 hour on the test taken from 6,780-6,830 feet. Gas surfaced in five minutes at the rate of 19,000 cubic feet daily. Recovery was 150 feet of free 43-gravity oil, and 600 feet of formation water.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,320 feet from east lines of section 5, block 8, ULS, 6 1/2 miles southeast of the Big Lake (Ellenburger) field.

Skelly tester reports flow

Skelly Oil Co. No. 1-B Jal Deep, Lea County, N.M., wildcat, four miles west of Jal, flowed four hours from the Fuisseman, making six-tenths of a barrel of condensate and five barrels of load after, plus gas at the daily rate of 8.6 million cubic feet, decreasing to 3.1 million cubic feet per day at the end of the test.

Flow was through a 1/2-inch choke and perforations at 16,411-16,439 feet. The section earlier had been acidized with 40,000 gallons. Testing continued.

It is 1,980 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of section 17-25-36e, one mile north of the depleted opener in the Jal, West (Fuisseman) field.

Commissioners order restroom expansion at Exhibit Building

By ED TODD

Midland County commissioners Monday gave Pace Construction Co. the go-ahead on expanding the restroom facilities at the county's Exhibit Building for $15,490.

Pace's bid on the project was the only sealed bid received by the commissioners. The contract the commissioners awarded Pace included the installation of a kitchen vent for $350.

The commissioners took no action on Dist. Atty. Jim Mashburn's proposal for realignment of pay for his assistants. Mashburn said a $10,000 salary was simply not enough to attract a new prosecutor and not nearly enough to keep an assistant on the payroll.

"They are a prime commodity on the legal market," Mashburn said of young lawyers who gain their initial experience under district attorneys.

"This is the period where we're perpetually losing people, and at the end of two years, bam, they're gone," he said.

At present, Mashburn pointed out, the top salary he can offer an assistant is under the starting salary $12,000—Dist. Atty. John Green of Odessa can offer his assistants.

Mashburn said the $10,000 budgeted for a second assistant was inadequate.

"That, frankly, is not competitive," he said. "Our adjoining county, has two openings for assistants, and he (Green) is starting them at $12,000."

The commissioners indicated they would consider salary increases for the positions. Currently, Mashburn has one assistant, Rusty Wall, and is looking for a second to replace Marc Morrison, who resigned late last year to enter the private practice of law.

In a public hearing, the commissioners heard representatives of the Midland Council on Alcoholism make an argument for federal community development funds for construction of a new treatment center for alcoholics and problem drinkers.

Jerry Tschauer, planning director for the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, said downward from $54,000 may be available to Midland County this year. The funds are doled out by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Spokesman for the Midland Council on Alcoholism was Robert Freeman, the council's president.

Joining him with the request that the commissioners consider his case for funding was Bob Dickson and W. W. LaForce Jr. of the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Gas leak evacuates school

DALLAS (AP) — A leaking natural gas main forced the evacuation of a junior high school and area residents in northeast Dallas Monday afternoon.

Gas company officials spent two hours trying to shut off the gas that seeped through the street and sidewalk.

Principal W.J. Davis evacuated the Forest Meadow Junior High School when a strong gas odor filled the area.

Police said the leak was in a six-inch main under 100 pounds of pressure.

Winds scattered the gas before it could accumulate.

The leak's exact location was discovered when a pocket of pressure knocked a jackhammer out of a workman's hands.

Wilkins to resign

NEW YORK (AP) — Roy Wilkins, the 74-year-old executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, says he will resign at the end of the year.

Wilkins, who has headed the country's oldest civil rights organization for 22 years, made the announcement Monday at a board of directors meeting.

Agatha Christie leaves unpublished manuscripts

LONDON (AP) — Detective fiction queen Agatha Christie left two unpublished manuscripts, her autobiography and Miss Marple's swan song, her publisher reported today.

Dame Agatha, who died Monday at the age of 85 at her home in Wallingford, west of London, wrote the Marple manuscript 30 years ago but forbade its publication until after her death. In it she kills off the spinster sleuth, Miss Jane Marple.

The writer arranged a similar fate some 30 years ago for her greatest creation, the Belgian detective Hercule Poirot. But last year she pulled Poirot's final case out of the vault, and it was the last published work of her lifetime. The title was "Curtain."

Her publisher, William Collins, refused to say when the last Marple book might appear or if the autobiography would be published.

Commencing with "The Mysterious Affair at Styles" in 1920, Dame Agatha wrote 85 books and 17 plays, including the world's longest-running hit, "The Mousetrap," still a sellout in London after 23 years. Her books were translated into 103 languages, 14 more than Shakespeare's, and her publishers estimate that more than 350 million copies were around the world, making her one of the best-selling authors in history.

Fifteen of her mystery stories were made into movies, including last year's "Murder on the Orient Express," the most successful British film ever made.

Publishing sources estimated she left a fortune of more than $20 million, with millions more to come in royalties and movie rights.

MC registration starts Wednesday for spring classes

Midland College students will register for spring semester classes Wednesday and Thursday in the campus's physical education building.

Registrar Dee Windsor has announced that all registration periods have been reserved for Wednesday. Prospective students who complete their pre-registration processing on Tuesday will be assigned to the remaining time slots available Thursday.

After that time, students will be required to register after classes begin Monday. Windsor said no registration activities will be conducted Friday.

Registration times Wednesday and Thursday are 10 a.m. to noon, 1 to 5 p.m. and 6 to 8 p.m. Students will be required to pay all tuition and fees as they complete registration.

Special services to start tonight

Evangelist Carl Wade of Chattanooga, Tenn., will conduct special Christian renewal services Tuesday through Thursday nights at the North A and Tennessee Streets Church of Christ here.

Mr. Wade, minister of a Church of Christ congregation in Chattanooga and also a writer for denominational publications, will conduct the services at 7:30 p.m. each day.

13th body found in hotel debris

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — A 13th body has been found in the wreckage of Fremont's Pathfinder Hotel, three days after an explosion and fire tore through the building.

Another five persons were still missing and feared dead as workmen picked through the rubble late Monday. Dozens were injured in the blast Saturday.

Hang glider crash kills 16-year-old

GRANTS, N.M. (AP) — A 16-year-old Albuquerque boy died this past weekend after a gust of wind caught his hang glider and slammed it into a rocky ledge. Grants police said.

Officers said the youth was Brent L. Appleby, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Appleby of Albuquerque.

Police detective Jim Goodall said Appleby and two other youths were flying the glider Saturday off a 300-foot mesa 4 1/2 miles north of Grants, just off New Mexico 53.

Muleshoe plane crash kills two

MULESHOE, Tex. (AP) — An Air Force officer and a civilian from Clovis, N.M., died Sunday when a private plane crashed into a wheat field 16 miles west of here and not far from the New Mexico line.

State police identified the dead men as Maj. William A. Channel, 42, and Donald R. Roper, 40.

Restaurant man wages 18-year war with union

By MIKE GOODMAN

The Los Angeles Times LAS VEGAS — Eighteen years ago Hershel Leverton found pickets marching outside his tiny, nonunion restaurant when he opened for business. He is still being picketed.

Leverton has changed locations four times since 1958, and his restaurant, the Alpine Village Inn, now grosses $1.5 million annually, with 85 employees—all nonunion.

And each day when the restaurant opens at 5 p.m. pickets from the powerful Culinary Workers Union, Local 228, arrive for their nightly vigil.

"Winter or summer, they're always out there," said Leverton, glancing out his second-story office window.

"Those bloodsuckers. I won't give in...never."

Newspaper articles and union literature chronicling the 18-year feud dotted Leverton's office.

A hunting rifle rested in its case behind the door.

Leverton, 52, a descendant of Dutch immigrants, said he spent the night on the roof awaiting return of the bombs who have struck twice in four months.

Two bombs exploded on the roof Dec. 20 at 9 p.m.—during the dinner rush—forcing evacuation of 300 customers. Another bomb blew up a storefront in September.

No injuries. No arrests.

Officials of the 21,000-member culinary union have denied any connection with the bombings or with any of the other incidents involving Leverton over the years.

"They've tried everything," Leverton said. "Sugar in the gas tanks...stink bombs...sabotage...threats..."

"You just don't kiss and make up after all that."

Most of the harassment has been directed at Leverton—his employees.

"Hershel takes it all, rather than us," said Eduard Zochert, a headwaiter and greeter for 12 years. "He doesn't want any of us to know what it's like."

The bombings, however, have unnerved even Leverton's loyal nucleus of a dozen longtime employees. Four others have quit, and a brief electrical blackout last week sent workers into a momentary panic.

"It was just an electrical short, but we didn't know what to expect. It was nerve-wracking," recalled Paul Lauzer, a bartender for eight years.

Lauzer, Zochert and six other key employees have a personal stake in the restaurant's success. In recent years Leverton has made them part owners, with him as majority stockholder in the corporation.

Other employees said their wages and fringe benefits far exceed what is offered by the union, and they emphasized that they wouldn't dream of joining.

"No wonder we're such a thorn in their union side," said Darrell Roode, another part owner who oversees daily operations.

Leverton's restaurant is considered one of the best in Las Vegas, and its success taunts union officials.

A Las Vegas newspaper editor recently wrote a satirical Christmas "gift" column in which he listed the Culinary Union as recipient of "an Xmas party at the Alpine Village."

"You'd think they'd end all this foolishness after all these years before somebody gets hurt," remarked a waitress who asked to remain anonymous.

But the bitterness runs deeper than a struggle over unionization.

"It has become a personal battle between Hershel and the head of the union," said Zochert, the waiter.

Al Bramlet, boss of the Culinary Union since 1953, first tried to organize the restaurant 18 years ago, Leverton said.

Bramlet declined to be interviewed, but Leverton gave his recounting of the day 18 years ago when he found Bramlet sitting at the bar 15 minutes before opening.

"Bramlet came in out of the blue and said we had 15 minutes to join or he'd put me right out of business."

"Take your best shot," I told him, and 15 minutes later 20 pickets started marching."
