Lebanese civil war takes bloodiest toll

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Rightwing Christian forces launched a drive today on two Palestinian refugee camps controlling highways to the Christian Mt. Lebanon area as the Lebanese government reported the heaviest 24-hour toll in the ninemonth-old civil war.

The Christians' apparent objective was to sever communications between the two adjacent hillside camps on the northeast side of Beirut. Army sources said if the Christians succeed in separating the camps, they could try to overrun them one at a time and disarm them.

Heavy fighting rocked Beirut and towns and villages in northern, eastern and southern Lebanon. A police spokesman said 49 persons were killed and 89 wounded during the night, raising the toll for 24 hours to 218 dead and 399 wounded.

Total casualties for the nine-monthold war rose to more than 8,800 dead and more than 26,600 wounded by official count.

Mostem Premier Rashid Karami proposed an unconditional cease-fire within 48 hours. Both sides rejected the proposal.

Christian President Suleiman Franjieh was reported making final arrangements for a weekend meeting with Syrian President Hafez Assad in an attempt to complete a political plan that might end the war.

While these two leaders sought a settlement, their hometowns in northern Lebanon - Moslem Tripoli and Christian Zagarta - fought a rocket grenades in which 14 persons were reported killed. Police said the firing continued this morning.

Fighting was also reported at Damour, 12 miles south of the capital, and at Zahlah, 35 miles to the east. The government radio said all highways into Beirut were cut for the sixth day, aggravating food and fuel shortages for the city's million battleweary inhabitants.

Military sources said a Christian force of 2,000 men was advancing on the Jisr el-Basha and Tal Zataar refugee camps, in which 27,000 Palestinians live. They are the guerrillas' main air defense bases in the Beirut area and have repeatedly trained their antiaircraft guns to blast

The Christians have blocked all routes to the two camps for the past 12 days to prevent food supplies from reaching them. A third camp on the north side of Beirut, Dbaieh, was overrun by the Christians Wed-nesday, and its guerrilla defenders fled. The camp houses 5,000 Christian Palestinians and controls the coastal highway to Tripoli.

Guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat cabled Arab heads of state that 30 refugees were killed and 17 were wounded in Dbaieh. Security officials said 100 were killed and 250 were wounded in the battle for the camp and that most of them were

Patty Hearst claims doctor bullied her

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Patricia Hearst, taking the witness stand 12 days before her trial for bank robbery, has accused a government psychiatrist of bullying her to a point of tears with pointed questions about the holdup and her terrorist com-

"He asked me if I felt proud about robbing a bank and I said 'no.' Everything was like an accusation," the newspaper heiress said in a clear but soft voice. "He didn't care what I said or didn't say."

The special pretrial hearing was called Wednesday to determine whether the psychiatrist, Dr. Harry Kozol of Boston, would be permitted to continue his examination of Miss

One of Miss Hearst's attorneys, Al Johnson, characterized Kozol as an "FBI interrogator," Johnson, who testified at the hearing as a witness, said he ended the jail examination after Kozol's questions forced Miss Hearst to leave the room in tears.

"I said he was an interrogator, and that the FBI had enough in-terrogators," Johnson related.

Kozol was scheduled to take the stand for continuation of the hearing today. He declined comment after Wednesday's hearing when asked about Miss Hearst's allegations.

Kozol is one of several psychiatrists for both sides who have examined the heiress in preparation for her Jan. 26 trial on federal bank robbery charges.

Since her arrest four months ago, the 21-year-old Miss Hearst had made no public statements prior to Wed-nesday's hearing. A murmur of surprise rolled through the nearly filled courtroom when chief defense attorney F. Lee Bailey called her to the witness stand.

The sometimes tense threehour hearing saw Miss Hearst recount in detail an examination by Kozol at San Mateo County Jail on Jan. 7. Under single horn sprouted unicorn style.

New York City behind in budget cut battle

By JAMES L. ROWE JR. The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - New York City already is falling behind in the repairs needed to bring its budget back into balance by 1978, a twoweek study of the city's finances by a major New York accounting firm has found.

The report, commissioned by the U.S. Treasury Department, said, among other things, that the cuts the city must make in its spending levels are running behind projections; that city officials may be too optimistic in their revenue projections and that the city's accounting and reporting systems must be improved substantially - and soon.

The report, submitted by Arthur Anderson & Co., makes no conclusions about New York City's ability to meet its three-year financial plan. The report is careful to note that the information has not been audited. Nevertheless, the report raises York's ability to get back on its feet by 1978 and borrow money from the public again.

The Treasury commissioned the study under the terms of the bill passed last year which authorizes the federal government to lend the city up to $2.3 billion through June 30, 1978, provided the Treasury Secretary can determine "there is a reasonable prospect of repayment."

Despite the overwhelmingly gloomy projections in the Andersen study, Treasury Secretary William E. Simon said Wednesday night that he had "been able to conclude" that the city has a reasonable prospect of repaying the loans.

The federal government already has advanced the city $370 million and expects to send it another $140 million today.

In releasing the 103-page study, Simon said in a statement that "The tremendous concerns set forth in the tremendous challenges New York City and New York State face in the next 2 1-2 years. Virtually every page of the report identifies an important target which must be met if New York City is to be returned to a totally sound fiscal and financial basis.

Among the dozens of problems identified by Andersen:

-Budget expenditures were to be reduced by $110 million in the fiscal year ending next June 30. So far the city has achieved only $12 million in saving and only enough programs have been pinpointed for cuts to decrease spending by $50 million a year. Those savings have to grow to $543 million in fiscal 1977 (beginning July 1, 1976) and to $851 million in fiscal 1978. This will "require major changes in operations which have not been identified to date."

-The city comptroller's office already has discovered $571 million years which the city will have to account for somehow. -The city assumes it will be able to hold all salary levels at 1975-76 levels for the whole plan. -The estimates for pension outlays by the city are based on woefully outdated assumptions about mortality, so that pension costs are not being reported and funded at the rate at which they are being incur-

-If the city loses in court and is forced to pay off securities which have matured, it could cost New York $2 billion more than projected.

-New York City's lack of controls and other inadequacies in its accounting system and procedures "raise questions about the city's ability to exercise control over the collection of revenues, the expenditures of money and the preparation of financial reports." The study notes that the city had revenues and expenditures versus planned ones for July through November, even though it was need-

Even though the city plans to have a totally new accounting system in place by July 1, 1977, the Andersen report says that the city's ability to put one into effect within 18 months is highly doubtful. The report says that 'the present circumstances demand immediate improvement."

While federal aid to the city is supposed to end June 30, 1978, the report said that labor's demands for higher salaries, the need to do maintenance and make capital expenditures deferred during the current threeyear plan and having to come up with money to redeem securities in November 1978 are "factors which might preclude the end of federal financing for the city in 1978."

Jerry Register seeks nomination for county constable position

Jerry Register, 27, former Midland County deputy sheriff, Wednesday announced his candidacy for the Democratic party's nomination for constable in the May primary elec-

"I just want to run the best race I can," said Register, who resigned his 1½-year post with the sheriff Dec. 12. He is the second man to enter the constable's race.

Filing earlier was the incumbent, Jack Merritt, 71, who has held the constable's job for 16 years.

Register, who filed for candidacy with Vann Culp, executive committee chairman of the county's Democratic party, named Virginia Goulet as his campaign treasurer, according to County Clerk Rosenelle

Register said he postponed filing for the post after Merritt announced his bid for reelection on Dec. 16—
the same day that deputy constable
Bob Harris, 41, filed for sheriff.

Merritt, courthouse observers say, would not have sought another four-year term in office had Harris indicated he wanted the constable's job. "I did kind of have second thoughts," Register said of his candidacy, "because I do have a lot of respect for Mr. Merritt. And when I resigned (from the sheriff's department) I was onder the impression that he wasn't going to run."

"I just really think the world of

Mr. Merritt," said Register, a 1966 Midland High School graduate, "I' respect him as a man, and think he has done a good job (as constable) in the past."

Before joining the sheriff's department in mid-1974, Register served five years on the Crane and Kermit police departments. He was a patrolman at Crane from 1969 until 1971 when he moved over to Kermit.

Under Midland County Sheriff Ed
Darnell, Register served as a deputy jailer and communications officer. Register and his wife Shara are parents of a 2-mar-old boy, Jasen.

New theater center may be link between rivals

Midland Community Theatre's new $1.5 million theater center will provide an opportunity to avoid the gulf between college and open theater and serve as the classroom for both.

Art Cole, MCT managing director, voiced this opinion Wednesday at the noon meeting of the Downtown Lions Club.

"Besides this, the new facility will eliminate the duplication of services, lack of communication and open rivalries so often present between college and open theaters in many cities," Cole said. The new structure will be built on a

4.677 acre tract of land on W. Wadley Drive immediately east of the 2100 Wadley Apartments. The property was purchased from the City of Midland in early November at a price of $93,450

Cole said, "It'll probably take us years to pay for this center, but we'll get done - we just need contributions on a larger scale than before from the citizens. He added that the advantages of having just one theater for the college, the public and MCT use were not only the initial capital cost but also the long-term cost and the "melting" of college and public theater, with the unique opportunities provided to both. Some three years was spent searching for a suitable location for the new theater center, according to Cole. During that three-year period, Midland College was born, so MCT enthusiasts attempted to make their new structure responsive to the new school's needs. What the world doesn't need are just another college or just another community theater, he noted.

Cole told Lions and their guests that the new facility would be similar to MCT's old theater in that the theater itself, the seating capacity and the actor-audience relationship would be maintained. Additions planned would include rehearsal areas, storage space, scenery and property shops and a second, smaller theater for productions in various forms.

Other plans call for an area especially for dance, a space for filming and video-tape production, several classrooms, a children's classroom, theater library room, carpentry shop and a spacious lobbygallery. Cole said MCT personnel hoped to break ground at their new theater site sometime this year and be in the building by 1977. He said they would need the old facility at 2301 W. Indiana

The new instructor had been associated with Fire Fox since May 1974. As sales engineer, he acted as consultant to various government, industrial and private groups in the used and operation of specialized fire apparatus and emergency medical vehicies and equipment.

At the college, he will be directing a two-year program which promotes professionalism among paid firemen and teaches aspiring students.

Hill receives his B.S. degree in physics from Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa., and has studied at General Motors Institute and the University of Connecticut.

Prior to his employment with Fire Fox, he served five years as project engineer for General Electric Co. in Houston, charged with technically managing spacecraft sub-system components spplied by GE.

Schnabel is indicted on two counts of theft and one of official misconduct.

In interviews with the Associated Press, some members of the committee also criticized the official misconduct charge. Others said they lacked sufficient information on that count to make a judgment.

Schnabel is accountable directly to the committee, and it is that group of senators that has reviewed his case most throughly

"On the basis of what I know, no," said Sen. John Traeger, DSeguin, vice chairman of the committee. "I don't think Charlie Schnabel took one penny. I think he moved some funds around from one fund to another."

"On what I've seen, and we went into this thoroughly in executive session, there's not enough evidence to warrant an indictment," said Sen. Mike McKinnon, D-Corpus Christi. "I think there's been some bad judgment. I think in reality Dist. Atty. Bob Smith is just running for Sen. A. R. Schwartz, D-"Galveston, said he didn't think Schnabel should have been indicted on any of the charges.

The third count says Schnabel used a Senate Print Shop employe named Frank Smith on 'Schnabel's farm east of Austin. The defense is expected to argue that Frank Smith volunteered to do the work and received no state money for it. Two other senators, Jack Ogg, D-Houston, and O. H. "Ike" Harris, R-Dallas, also said the indictments never should have been returned.

"They look weak to me," Harris said. "It's hard to secondguess a man when you haven't heard all the evidence," said Ogg. She's sick of hospital teasing

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband has had a lot of back surgery, which required several long stays in the hospital. While there, a couple we were friendly with sent him get-well cards regularly, which we both appreciated, but all their cards had the same theme: "The male patient was fooling around with his nurses."

After my husband came home, this couple visited him, and their conversation was full of teasing about the nurses giving him massages. backrubs and baths. I was even asked point blank if I wasn't afraid my husband would run off with a . pretty young nurse.

Whenever we are with this couple now, they get back on the pretty young nurse subject until I am sick of hearing it.

Perhaps because I am neither young nor pretty and have such a meager quotient of self-esteem. I'm depressed for days about these remarks, especially when they are made in the presence of others, which is often the case.

My husband never stands up for me, which may indicate that he enjoys the talk.

What can I do to put an end to this? I've tried to U avoid being with this couple, but I can't do that forever.

Wine drinker: Bordeaux 1970 vintage ages well

By TOM GABLE Copley News Service

One of the many pleasures of wine drinking is to occasionally taste wines that approach perfection, then go back to them at regular intervals to watch their development.

The 1970 vintage from Bordeaux offers dozens of such opportunities for watching fine wines develop with age. Prices have dropped considerably from one year ago. And there appears to be enough in distribution channels to assure availability in most areas.

As has been widely reported, the 1970 vintage in Bordeaux was the best since 1966 and, possibly, since that incredible year of 1961, when even unknown chateaus produced wines of style

The best higher-priced wines from the 1970 vintage are the Chateau Mouton Rothschild and Chateau Latour from Pauillac, the Chateau La Mission Haut Brion from Graves, and Chateau Petrus from Pomerol. The Chateau Lafite Rothschild, which came up a bit short in tastings six months, nine months and ons year ago, now seems to be opening up and showing its breeding.

The Mouton is deep and rich in color and BIG. The tannins still overpower the fruit but the class is there and the definite aroma of Cabernet Sauvignon is beginning to develop complexity. The Latour is better balanced and has a beautiful, perfumed bouquet. Even in its youth, the Latour is almost perfect.

Although Haut Brion is the wine listed as the 'First Growth' in Graves, from the 1855 classification, it is the Chateau La Mission Haut Brion that offers the best from that area in the 1970 vintage. It is deep and dark in color, definitely Cabernet Sauvignon in the aroma, and big, rich and chewy in the mouth. It is one of the wines that "coats the teeth" and will live for Chateau Petrus is the highest-priced of this first group, retailing at $30 a bottle. It is made in limited quantity from Merlot grapes, which are softer and better-rounded in their youth than Cabernet Sauvignon. The Petrus is smoother and more velvety than wines from other areas of Bordeaux. It is another almost-perfect wine, but one that should be passed over in favor of the La Mission, Latour or Mouton because of the price. The other three go for $17 or so.

The Lafite, at $27, is just now losing an early awkwardness and thinness, revealing the true Lafite style and elegance for the first time. But, again, the Latour, Mouton and La Mission Haut Brion offer the best prices in this high-priced

Not all the fine wines of Bordeaux are priced exorbitantly. Some second, third, fourth and even fifth growths (according to the 1855 classification) show the style of their areas of Bordeaux and the quality of the 1970 vintage.

Chateau Giscours has dropped in price from over $10 to almost $5 while the roughness of the wine one year ago has given way to the first signs

Children who don's ·match 'phoned in'

A new baby-sitter once came to the house where I introduced her to the kids. She looked from one to the other, then carefully scrutinized their father and me and said, "What happened?

None of you match."
I said, "I phoned 'em in."

I could have. We have one of the most dissimilar, mismated, variety-packed families you ever laid eyes on. No one has the same hair coloring, the same color of eyes or the same temperament.

One tans, one burns, one sulks, one talks you to death, one is freckled, one is bronze, one tall and lean, one chubby and close to the ground.

I don't think we ever really had a sense of humor about children until we were thrown a brown-eyed, freckled nose, redhead. Now, they're a real conversation piece.

One day at the bus stop a strange woman (not to be confused with a woman who is a stranger) approached me and said, "Is this your son?" I nodded.

'Does his father have red hair?" I said, "No."

"Did you have him late in life?"

I bristled, "Why do you ask?" 'Well," she smiled, "my husband and I were blessed with a redhead very late in life. I had a friend who said one word everytime she looked at him . . . 'Rust!'"

I broke up every time I thought about it. From then on my crazy quilt family became a joy. I became a woman of mystery. When carry-out boys said, "Does his father have red hair?" I'd reply huskily, "I can't remember."

I could change the color of my own hair four times a year and still look related to someone in

But the greatest advantage to a family of opposites happened one Sunday in church. My son was sitting in the pew ahead of me where I duly noted there was a chunk of hair missing where before had been bubble gum. He had grabbed his school jacket with the zipper hanging loose down the front. And when he took it off, he revealed to the entire congregation words to live by: "SAVE WATER: BATHE WITH SOMEONE YOU LOVE."

A woman next to me whispered, "Can you imagine a mother sending a boy to church like

I shook my head in disgust and whispered back, "She probably phoned him in."

has sent a 7,500-ton Kresta II class guided-missile cruiser and a 3,900-ton Kotlin class guided-missile destroyer into West African waters. Previously, the Soviet Navy had positioned an amphibious ship off Angola.

None of these ships now is close to the Angolan coast, but their presence in the West African area is regarded by U.S. officials as a display of Soviet military muscle designed by Moscow to influence the outcome of the Angolan civil war in favor of the pro-Communist Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA).

Despite persistent rumors to the contrary, the Pentagon insists that U.S. naval forces are thousands of miles away from Angola.

The U.S. aircraft carrier Saratoga and the amphibious assault ship Guadalcanal have sailed from the United States for the Mediterranean. The Pentagon says this is a routine deployment to replace other ships returning home and is unrelated to the Angola problem.

Virtually every time Staubach has thrown the football for the Dallas Cowboys, he has done it at the direction of Coach Tom Landry. Unlike most coaches, who tend to allow their quarterback to call their own signals, Landry shuttles his plays in, one at a time, with alternating running backs

THAT system of long-distance calls hasn't sat too well with Staubach. Like anyone inside pro football or out of it, he has his pride. It's been dented a bit by Landry's sideline system.

acting as messengers.

Occasionally, he's permitted to allow his feelings to surface. They did once again on Wednesday as the lowboys continued their preparations for Super Bowl on Sunday against the National Football League's defending champions, the Pittsburgh Steelers.

"I would rather call my own plays," Staubach said when the old wound was reopened. "I talked to Landry about it in the offseason. But he feels it (the sideline system) is a trend in football."

WAS HE convinced that Landry's way of doing things is more successful, or has he simply accepted it was a way of life? "I've accepted it," he said pointedly.

All of the Cowboys' quarterbacks have accepted it, starting with little Eddie LeBaron and Don Meredith when the franchise was born in 1960 with Landry at the helm. There were times, in fact, when Landry alternated quarterbacks on every play.

Staubach's introduction to the message system came in 1969, when he came out of the Navy. For several years, he and Craig Morton, now with the New York Gaints, dueled for the starting job. Staubach won it for good in 1973. He also won a lot at calling his

FOR THE first nine games that season. Staubach barked out his own commands. In the 10th one, on Thanksgiving Day, Dallas lost to Miami. "The day after we lost, Landry called me and said, 'Forget about the play-calling. I just want you to worry about studying and ex-own signals that year-but not for long.

Staubach points out that more than football was on his mind when the Dolphins were beating the Cowboys. "My mother was dying of cancer." he said. "She was down to 62 pounds and my wife and I were taking care of her in our home.'

Nevertheless, Staubach's days as his own man behind the Dallas center ended with that loss-and it's been that way since then. Landry insists it's for the better.

"Calling plays has been controversial at times," he said at Wednesday's news conference. "But I don't think it's that any more. We're not saying Roger's not capable of calling the plays. But now, a lot of the teams in the league call the plays for their quarterbacks. And it's a tremendous advantage to the coach.

"WHEN A quarterback calls a play," Landry said, "we don't know what he's calling. So we can't say if it was a good play for that situation or a bad one, and therefore whether it the play itself or the execution.

"It might take a quarterback three or four plays to detect what's wrong, Landry said of a team's failure to move the ball. "I'm not going to waste three or four plays. We can adjust

"A quarterback doesn't like it because he doesn't like to feel like a robot-but the fact he doesn't call the plays doesn't matter. He still has to execute. He still has to do all the

Staubach would rather do it all on his own, not just somebody else's work. "I would rather control the game...I'd like to handle my own thing," he says. "It's something that's missing."

It's an interesting note that while Staubach calls someone else's plays, Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw calls his own yet it is Bradshaw who has had his capabilities, his intelligence, called into question. He's been called everything from a dumb hillbilly to an educated ignoramus.

Naturally, he's bristled at those opinions. He seemingly silenced his critics a year ago when his masterful play-calling throughout the season and in Super Bowl IX against Minnesota helped lead the Steelers to the first championship in the club's Steelers' Coach Chuck Noll isn't worried about Bradshaw's playcalling or the defense he directs. He sees to be more concerned with the Dallas defense it will face, the socalled "Flex defense" employed by Landry's troops.

Tech, Aggies grab wins to set up SWC showdown

By The Associated Press

Texas Tech and Texas A&M successfully protected their unblemished Southwest Conference basketball records Wednesday night and Houston again discovered life can be rocky on the road.

Rick Bullock muscled in 32 points and hauled down 17 rebounds in Texas Tech's 67-61 victory over winless Texas in Austin. The Red Raiders are 40 to lead the 2-0 Aggies in the young campaign. The two teams meet Saturday in Lubbock.

"Man, that was some kind of a physical game," said Tech Coach Gerald Myers. "Texas impressed me...they are young but they get after it. We had a fight on our hands.'

The Aggies played their finest game of the year to outgun Southern Methodist 93-87 behind Sonny Parker's 26 points.

'It was a helluva game," said Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "We played as hard as we could and as good as we could. SMU came to SMU Coach Sonny Allen, who saw his team drop to a 3-2 SWC ledger, said "We've played four great games in a row. Unfortunately, we didn't win this one. We didn't lose it-they just won it. I don't think A&M is looking forward to playing us in Dallas."

Thomas Bledsoe went wild for Texas Christian, scoring 25 points as TCU evened its SWC ledger at 2-2. "We probably had our best game of

Heels earn revenge against giant killers

What a difference two weeks make. And two courts as well.

The last time North Carolina's basketball team met Wake Forest, the Tar Heels were unceremoniously beaten in the Big Four Tournament at Greensboro, N. C.

But the seventh-ranked Tar Heels got their revenge Wednesday night on their own court, cutting Wake Forest's giant-killers down to size with a 99-74 rout in emotion-charged Chapel Hill.

"The difference in this game is that was here at Carolina," said North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, whose Tar Heels lost a 95-83 decision to the Deacons the last time they met.

"It was a great win. We are extremely pleased with our rebounding and defense in this particular game. By Wake missing on offense in the first half, it gave us the chance to rebound. We did an excellent job going for the basketball and got more rebounds because Wake Forest was not shooting well."

Wake Forest Coach Carl Tacy, whose team had shot out of nowhere into the No. 5 position in the polls by beating Atlantic Coast Conference colleagues North Carolina, North Carolina State and Maryland, reflected on the obvious.

"We weren't quite as prepared to play as we had hoped," he said. "This is the only time this season that our players could not get going on their own. The biggest consolation is that it's over and one bad game is behind

SuperSundayhousewifeguide Evert gets to strange football verbiage trophy

MIAMI (AP) - Since millions of housewives and other uninitiated will be TV captives Sunday, it is only proper that they should be indoctrinated in the strange verbiage that will be pouring out of the tube on the Super Bowl.

Football has a language all its own. Apart from the technical stuff, such as "nose guard" and "slant pattern," it is a language that has been embellished by the commentators. Sometimes it seems Chinese is simpler.

Here is a thumbnail glossary, offered free of charge. It comes with the price of the paper. "Run for daylight ...

They even run for daylight in the Monday night games, meaning they could run 12 hours before the sun comes up. But they also run for daylight in daylight. It means a runner is trying to get into the open field.

"It's a new ball game .. It's not really. But with only two minutes to play and the score tied 21-21, it always becomes a whole new ball game even if most of it is all used

"He drew a crowd..." It could be Evangelist Billy Graham or fan dancer Sally Rand, but it isn't. It's just a ball carrier that suddenly has run into a cluster of enemy tacklers.

"That'll ring the church bell..." Don't strain your ears waiting for the chimes. This is what they say when a man catches a long pass with nothing between him and the goal line. 'The human bowling ball..."

You automatically expect a little round man rolling over the ground, knocking over enemy tackler like tenpins. It's a description attached to 5-10 200-pound Robert Newhouse but don't expect those big Steelers to do much tumbling.

"He's some kind of ballplayer ... " Don't try to find out what kind. It just means the guy is pretty good. "It's right on the money ... "

Those tight-fitting jersey football suits don't have pockets and nobody's really carrying much money. It means a good pass but maybe a better cliche is "He hit him on the numerals." "As we said at the top of the show ... "

Top, bottom, left, right, east, west. This could cause some confusion. Don't fret. It's a condescending, inside expression used by television people to say, "When we first started..." "He can spin on a dime ...

Maybe he could once. But there's inflation. Make it a four-bit piece. "They're loading up the shotgun..." Don't run for cover. Nobody's going to shoot.

SEC agrees to send champ to Sugar Bowl

LOUIS (AP) - The Southeastern Conference agreed on Wednesday to send its football champion to the Sugar Bowl for the next three years.

The SEC thus became the sixth major conference to have an official tie-up with a postseason bowl game.

The announcement to send the SEC champion to the New Year's Eve Sugar Bowl was made by Dr. Harry Philpott, president of Auburn University and head of the committee which studied the proposed tieup.

The Sugar Bowl's offer to tie in with the SEC originally was made to the conference's athletic directors last month and was unanimously recommended to the presidents of the 10 member institutions.

Dr. Philpott said his committee met Wednesday with Sugar Bowl representatives and generally approved all major points of the proposal. The committee then recommended acceptance to the SEC Executive Committee.

This was accomplished through a meeting of committee members here for the National Collegiate Athletic Association convention and by telephone calls to those not here.

Details will be worked out in the next few weeks and a formal contract will be signed at a conference meeting March 2-3-4 in Atlanta.

The bowl tie-up came in the wake of statements by Alabama Coach and Athletic Director Bear Bryant earlier this month that all bowl tie-ups should be eliminated.

"I agree with Coach Bryant and I wish all the bowls would open," said SEC Commissioner Boyd McWhorter. But given the consideration that they aren't, we had to go with what was at hand. There was a fear that the conference might have been locked out of a bowl.'

Other bowl tie-ups have the Pacific-8 and Big Ten champions in the Rose Bowl, the Big Eight winner in the Orange Bowl, the Southwest Conference king in the Cotton Bowl and the Western Athletic Conference champion in the Fiesta Bowl.

Miller expects peak performance

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - "My game," observed Johnny Miller in a soft-spoken, low-key, matter-of-fact fashion. "should come to a peak this than I did last.

"I'm not saying I will play better. Maybe I won't. But judging from my past performances, that's the way it should work. My game should peak this week, be better than last week, then be not quite so good next week at

And that should settle things in the $200,000 Phoenix Open Golf Tournament that got underway today on the 6,726-yard, par-71 Phoenix Country Club course, a desert layout on which Miller has demonstrated an unmatched mastery.

He won this event last year with a 260 total, the lowest score in 20 years of tour activity. He won by 14 strokes, a margin that has been exceeded only once in history.

He's coming into the tournament this year with victories in three of his last four starts- including a come-from-behind triumph in last week's seasonstarting Tucson Open. He's positively bubbling with confidence. He's playing well and expects to play even better. He wants to

And, perhaps even more importantly, he believes he's going to win.

"I'm not saying I will win," Miller disclaimed. "There's a lot of players in the field capable of winning: guys like Tom Weiskopf and Tom Watson and Lee Trevino. You can't say definitely that you're going to win with guys like that in the field. "But there's no reason I shouldn't win. I'm playing good—tee to green I'm probably playing as good as I ever have—and I've got momentum.

"They won't admit it, but the other guys have to be thinking about me. They know I won last week. They know I'm a streak player. They know I play this course pretty good. They have to be thinking about me and that's a help." So Miller, who has that happy habit of shooting extremely low rounds, appears to have everything going for him in his quest of a third consecutive sweep of the two Arizona tournaments. If he makes it, he'll reach one of his announced goals for the year-the million career winnings plateau. He's just $12,848 short.

"That was one of my major goals for the year," he said. "I wanted to be the youngest ever to win a million." Miller is 28. Jack Nicklaus, who isn't playing here, was 30 when he reached a million in 1970.

Standing in Miller's path are such players as Weiskopf and Watson, who chased him to the Tucson title, Trevino, Hale Irwin, Billy Casper. Gene Littler, Bruce Crampton and rookie Howard Twitty, a homegrown product of Arizona State who finished second last week.

CBS-TV will provide national television coverage of portions of the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

NCAA eyes cost cutting measures

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Possible further restrictions on financial aid lay ahead today for members of the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

But if the tone set Wednesday by delegates to the NCAA's 70th convention was to prevail, the issue-like others based on economy-may have been headed for a back seat.

"I thought as the result of the issues that we enacted at the special session in August there was a growing concern," the NCAA's executive director, Walter Byers, reflected after cost-saving measures were ignored during Wednesday's special con-

"It's a matter of having to believe in the institutions' judgment," Byers said of his own position. "What they thought was reflected on the convention floor.

During the special session, marked by only one serious floor fight, some 700 convention delegates enacted a smattering of a dozen proposals to trim burgeoning budgets.

As proposed, restrictions on games played by teams in sports other than football and basketball also failed. And yet the delegates, when sked to authorize an extra football game, turned the proposal down.

"A lot of people who were impoverished last summer got wealthy in a heck of a hurry," observed one conference commissioner, alluding to an apparent change in member moods.

"It's very apparent this body is not interested in cost-saving measures,' said a member faculty representative, Arthur DeGenaro of Mansfield, Pa., State.

"It would seem that there may be too many regulations already on a national basis," a source close to the NCAA's hierarchy suggested. "A lot of the members apparently thought they wouldn't save anything if some of these things passed.

While financial aid was at the head of today's regular convention agendaa more heated issue still promised to be a proposed realignment of Division I football powers.

MIAMI (AP) - Dallas center John Fitzgerald will have to eyeball Pittsburgh's Joe Greene while making blind five-yard snaps to quarterback Roger Staubach in Sunday's Super Bowl game. But Fitzgerald insists he won't be intimidated into errant

"I am not going to be concentrating on the snap," Fitzgerald said Wednesday. "I am going to be concentrating on blocking. You've got to go with the knowledge the ball's going to be right there. I'm going to just put my head down and let that rascal go.'

Fitzgerald's snaps could play a major role in the success of the Cowboys' shotgun offense. Especially since the four-year veteran had three bad snaps in Dallas' 17-14 victory over Minnesota in their playoff opener. In the shotgun, used in passing situations, Staubach lines up five yards behind center and the Cowboys flood the secondary with five the earlier franchise hunt with entertainer Danny Kaye, said Wednesday night: 'We were interested in buying the Chicago

Smith said, however, he would talk to Kaye

League lawyers David E. Waggoner said baseball owners were "horrified" when they learned that the Pilots were being sold to a Milwaukee group. Super Sunday down to two teams and a mystery

By BOB OATES

The Los Angeles Times MIAMI — At this time of year it always comes down to two teams and a mystery. And Dallas is this year's mystery team. Are the Cowboys good enough to hold their momentum for one more game against an opponent that seems to have them outmanned? In Super Bowl X here Sunday, the Pittsburgh Steelers will be favored by a touchdown. The consensus is that the reigning champions have the most resources, including Franco Harris and one of the finest defensive clubs in National Football League history.

Still, as the baseball people say, the Steelers have been laboring lately. Terry Bradshaw has pitched three cold games in a row, starting Dec. 20 in Los Angeles. Meantime, Roger Staubach has made Dallas the hottest team in football with three upsets over the Redskins, Vikings and Rams. So this is a ballgame offering suspense first of all.

AND FOR three other reasons it might be an event bringing some excitement to a series that has never had a well-played thriller:

-This is a first-ever matchup of Super Bowl winners. From personal experience, quarterbacks Bradshaw and Staubach both know how to proceed and how to win in this kind of pressure.

Bradshaw led Pittsburgh to a 16-6 decision over Minnesota last year in Super Bowl IX at New Orleans. Staubach was the Most Valuable Player of Super Bowl VI, also played at New Orleans, where Dallas routed the Miami Dolphins, 24-3.

-Both coaches, Tom Landry of Dallas and Chuck Noll of Pittsburgh, are Super Bowl veterans who have shown the insight and imagination to frame winning Super Bowl game plans, Noll last year and Landry four

Each coach is at his best, indeed, when plotting changes and adjustments for a specific opponent, as Noll proved with his passes and reverses against Minnesota's zone defenses a year ago and as Landry proves all the time with the refinements of his many plays and formations.

-Both offenses threaten with running plays by their quarterbacks, giving each team some of the variety enjoyed by a good college offense.

ALTHOUGH THE average NFL club attacks with a combination of two running backs, the Steelers and Cowboys each deploy three, including Bradshaw and Staubach, who can be expected to carry the ball Sunday with all-or-nothing dedication, knowing that if hurt they will have six months to recover.

It can be assumed, of course, that both organizations will try first to win with their defenses. The Steelers and Cowboys essentially are defensive teams. That's how they got here. And by all present signs, this is going to be a war: passionate, rough, facemask to facemask.

But the Super Bowl is always that. The difference this time is that, for once, this might be more than a defensive fight. With two inventive coaches on the sideline and two Super Bowlwise running quarterbacks on the field, it might - just might - be a Comparing the quarterbacks, the edge goes to Staubach if it's a close game. He is superior to Bradshaw as a clutch passer. In truth, Staubach is at his best when he has to throw. This season in particular he has excelled in a quarterback's most difficult assignment: converting third-down plays to keep possession of the ball.

TIME AFTER time he has sustained key Cowboy drives with big thirddown passes and runs.

Bradshaw, by comparison, throws best when he doesn't have to throw on second-and-1, for example, or on any down when the Steelers are on the move with ball-control ground plays, or when the other team expects the run and commits fewer defensive men to the pass. As a passer, Bradshaw is least effective where Staubach is strongest: reading a complicated zone defense on third-and-7 or more. Bradshaw is a better pure passer than Staubach, but football is seldom a contest between pure passers. As a runner, Bradshaw, 6-3, 210, is big and fast; Staubach at 6-3 and 197 is more wiry and niftier. The difference between them this season was that Staubach carried the Cowboys as well as the ball whereas Bradshaw, as a rule, needed definitive help from Franco Harris. The 25-yard touchdown run by Harris against Oakland on a Pittsburgh ice rink last week - one of many Harris runs beating Steeler opponents this season — had an effect matching Staubach's four touchdown passes for Dallas the same day in the sunshine of Los Angeles.

THUS THE matchup of Super Bowl X isn't Staubach vs. Bradshaw but Staubach vs. Harris. If Harris can control the ball for the Steelers, they'll probably win. If he can't, Staubach will have a lively chance to win it for the Cowboys. Strategically, this could be one of the NFL's most interesting championship matches, and the strategic question is whether either defense can be run against. On a regular-season Sunday two months ago, each might have held the other to 50 yards rushing.

Because of the inventive nature of the coaches, however, and because they've had a two-week preparation period, one or the other, or both, they may be able to make the necessary changes in blocking assignments and other defensive tactics.

Noll's job is to get Harris through the Dallas line. It won't be easy. Normally, the Steeler running game is similar to that of the Rams, who, as you may remember, netted 22 yards on the ground against Dallas Jan. 4.

As a defensive team, the Cowboys typically set out to stop the run first and force their opponents to pass. They take away the run with the NFL's strangest defense — what they call a "flex" defense.

In their basic alignment, as illustrated in the Ram game, the Cowboys use a virtual two-man line, with two linemen a step back, three linebackers close, and the strong safety up there, too.

FROM A four-point stance, the linemen charge a step, one way or the other, and hold their ground. They and the linebackers and the strong safety move into pre-assigned positions, filling every gap and taking all the daylight away from the Lawrence McCutcheons and Franco Harrises and Rocky Bleiers.

Eight of the 11 Cowboys are thus committed to the run, at least on first down and frequently on other running Theoretically, the Dallas defense is vulnerable to passes. But sound football teams don't like to open up with passes, particularly in big games, especially with quarterbacks who throw interceptions, and Bradshaw has been intercepted five times already in only the first two rounds of the playoffs.

It is more likely that Noll has been at the blackboard these last several days scheming to get Harris through the Dallas defense - somehow.

Accordingly, when Pittsburgh has the ball in the first quarter Sunday, the thing to look for is the kind of game Harris is having. If he breaks a poll of harness writers.

big run or two or three early on, it will mean that Noll has broken Landry's defensive code. It will also mean that Pittsburgh is heading for a win.

IF HARRIS can't run, it will be harder for Pittsburgh to win, maybe When Dallas has the ball, the man to look for is Jack Lambert, Pittsburgh's middle linebacker, a 23-year-old sophomore who is rapidly gaining a reputation as one of the league's nastiest middle linebackers.

The Pittsburgh defense is designed to funnel the other team's ballcarriers into Lambert. The Steelers do this by employing Mean Joe Greene in the middle of their defensive line to shield Lambert from two blockers, the center and a guard. Greene charges at an angle. His hit is delivered at the center's helmet, but because he comes sideways as one of the largest men in football, 275, 6-4, Greene usually slows down a guard,

Neither the center nor guard can extricate himself fast enough to block Lambert, who, if things go well for Pittsburgh, is thus free to make most on the tackles. If this happens right away in the first quarter — if Lambert is around the ball carrier as usual - it will mean that Landry hasn't been able to figure a way to run against this team. If, on the other hand, the Cowboys block Lambert, they should be able to

By extension, if they block Lambert and tackle Franco Harris, they can

Super Bowl turf poses problems for matchup

By ROBERT FACHET The Washington Post

WASHINGON - Hockey's confrontation of champions at Philadelphia Sunday proved memorable, but for the wrong reason. Few will remember the Philadelphia Flyers' 4-1 victory; few will forget the spectacle of the Soviet Central Army Club returning to its dressing room after only 11 minutes of play. When the Soviets returned to the ice, they were totally dominated by the Flyers, managing only 13 shots to 49 and frequently giving up possession of the puck at sight of a Flyer. It is probable the Flyers are a better hockey team and would have won without the softeningup process to which they resorted. Unfortunately, we will never know, and the Soviets will always have the excuse that they were just trying to stay alive.

ASKED WHETHER he thought the Soviets had been intimidated, NHL president Clarence Campbell lifted his eyebrows, beamed and said, "I don't know whether they were or not."

For several years, Campbell has been trying to find ways to tame the Flyers, but he was elated with this exhibition. And for good reason. Of seven previous games involving NHL teams and the two Soviet teams — the Army and the Wings — only Buffalo had won.

A loss by the Flyers and the NHL folks would have had even more trouble peddling overpriced tickets for the interminable winter of mismatches, slap shots, puck dumping and head hurting that passes for NHL hockey.

In the negotiations for the present Soviet tour, the NHL made some concessions, including the addition of several players to the two Soviet teams. Arrangements were even made for use of Soviet referees in four of the eight games. Philadelphia was not one of those four, however.

WITH A SOVIET referee, the Flyers likely would have played four against six through much of the afernoon. With most NHL referees, their tactics would have invited a couple of dozen penalties. For this face-saver, however the NHL trotted out 45-year-old Lloyd Gilmour, the most lenient of its good old boys, that dwindling group in striped shirts that likes to let them play and blows whistles only for gross violations.

In Gilmour's case, that amounts to little short of murder. When the Soviets discovered the intended victim was their star left wing, Valeri Kharlamov, the beat a hasty retreat.

Kharlamov received a sleep-inducing shoulder in the jaw from Flyer defenseman Ed Van Impe, who confessed to the assault but said "it was an accident." Kharlamov's misfortune followed a lengthy series of apparent "accidents" in which Flyer elbows, fists and sticks found themselves remarkably close to Soviet faces and stomachs.

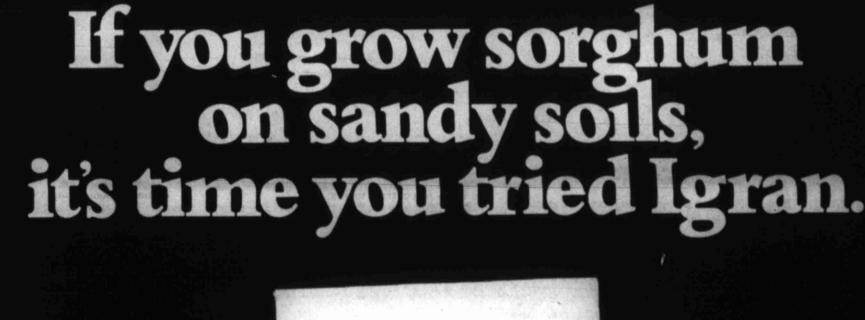

THEY WEREN'T accidents, of course. Bobby Clarke, whose stick eliminated Kharlamov from the 1972 series with Team Canada, commented after Sunday's victory that "I don't think we've ever played so disciplined as this."

Don Saleski determined early that anything would be okay with Gilmour, and that the Soviets would not attempt to fight back. Checked hard by Vladimir Lokotko, Saleski shoved the Soviet player and then aimed his stick blade menacingly at Loktoko's belly button. Although NHL rules specify a major penalty for such action, Gilmour did not respond, even when shoved by the protesting Soviet goalie, Vladislav Tretiak.

There was no fear that the Soviets would stay in their dressing room. Alan Eagleson, the militant anti-Soviet head of the NHL Players Association, had warned the Flyers earlier, Clarke related, that "They may arrive late and they may leave the ice, but they always come back because they want the money." in this case

THE NHL, its back to the barricade, wasn't about to yield an inch either. When the Soviets returned, they were assessed a delay-of-game penalty, and the Flyers' power play produced the game's first score. Konstantin Loktev, the Soviet coach, made remarks about "animal hockey" and no doubt the Soviet television announces echoed them. There were opinions that the Soviets deserved their harsh treatment, citing the 1972 Olympic basketball final and the baised scores of gymnastics and figure-skating judges.

Election commission to probe Morton appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Federal Election Commission will investigate the appointment of Rogers C.B. Morton as a White House adviser paid by the taxpayers but assigned by President Ford to at least some political duties.

Democratic presidential candidate Fred Harris filed a complaint letter with the commission on Wednesday night, calling for a "full investigation and full disclosure concerning the mixed White House and political duties of ... Morton."

An FEC spokesman said the complaint by Harris would not be brought up during today's commission meeting, although commissioners might be advised of it during a closed executive session.

But the spokesman said the receipt of a notarized complaint letter would automatically launch a staff investigation.

Harris' letter asking for the investigation followed comments by commission chairman Thomas Curtis, who said Wednesday that he is concerned about the propriety of the appointment. Officials say they are concerned that money spent for Morton's political activity would not be counted against Ford's campaign spending limit.

A commission spokesman said Curtis was not saying the Ford campaign is in violation of campaign law but "they're in dangerous waters. They're treading on thin ice."

Ford on Tuesday named Morton, who has served as his commerce secretary, to be a White House counselor on economic and domestic policy with "incidental duties of liaison with the President Ford Committee and the Republican National Committee." Morton would receive a White House salary of

It had long been expected that Ford would name Morton to a high campaign post in which his salary would be paid by the Ford election committee. But when the announcement was made, White House spokesman

Ron Nessen downplayed Morton's political role.

Sargent Shriver, also a Democratic candidate, voiced concern about the Morton appointment Wednesday, but stopped short of filing an official complaint. A Shriver spokesman said the appointment was an "affront to the American taxpayer" and "shows the same flagrant insensitivity to the public interest that has become all too characteristic of the Ford administration."

Elsewhere, there were these political developments Wednesday: -Republican candidate Ronald Reagan campaigned in Jacksonville, Fla., where he again brushed off criticism of his plan to decentralize

The former California governor blamed federal bureaucrats for criticism of his plan to transfer many social and welfare programs from the federal to state and local govern-

-Former North Carolina Gov. Terry Sanford, a Democratic presidential candidate, filed papers with the FEC showing campaign expenditures in 1975 of $335,363. Sanford checked into the Duke University Medical Center for rest. He had been hospitalized in Massachusetts after complaining of chest pains Sunday.

-Democratic candidate Sen. Birch Bayh said in a speech to the Washington Press Club that proposals by Ford and Reagan to cut federal spending have been misleading. Bayh said such plans smack of political gimickry and fiscal irresponsibility.

Bayh said that instead of cutting the federal budget, more money should be pumped into the economy in an effort to end the recession.

-The citizen lobby Common Cause asked all presidential candidates to list their budget priorities for 1977. Common Cause chairman John Gardner said, "Nothing can switch the candidates from rhetoric to reality more quickly than down-toearth talk about the budget.'

-Democratic party officials ordered Wisconsin Democrats to come up with a plan for selecting convention delegates that is not dependent on the state's traditional open primary election. Under the existing system, voters do not have to identify themselves with either party and can vote in either the Republican or Democratic primary.

-Officials of Alabama Gov. George Wallace's presidential campaign presented nine cartons of records to the election commission. The records, containing the names of 130,000 contributors, are to be used to verify a claim for some $2 million in federal -Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, a Democratic candidate, announced he will conduct fundraising parties in 20 states on Sunday, using a telephone hookup.

—Rep. Wright Patman, DTex., announced he would not seek reelection. Patman, 82, who came to Congress in 1929, has served longer than any other person now in Congress.

-Sen. Hiram Fong, RHawaii, announced he will not seek re-election. Fong, 68, was the first Oriental-American to serve in the Senate and has represented Hawaii since the islands won statehood in

Vatican restates its position on sexuality

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Assailing "the unbridled exaltation of sex," the Vatican today renewed the Roman Catholic Church's condemnation of sex outside marriage but broke new ground in its treatment of homosexuals. While condemning homosexuality as intrinsically wrong, the Vatican statement drew a distinction between 'transitory' and "incurable" homosexuals. It said the latter should "be treated with understanding" and "their culpability ...judged with prudence.'

The 6,000-word "Declaration on Certain Questions Concerning Sexual Ethics" was issued by the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of Faith with the approval of Pope Paul

Vatican experts said the document was aimed at those persons challenging the traditional sexual morals of the church, including some priests and theologians. Among the sexual acts condemned in the statement were premarital sex and masturbation. The president of the United States Conference of Bishops, Archibishop Joseph L. Bernardin of Concinnati, called the document a "clear, pastoral and timely proclamation of values which are fundamental to the defense of human dignity.'

The Vatican declaration asked parents and teachers to educate the young on sexual matters with prudence and with "information suited to their age." It said the mass media, the entertainment world and artists and writers "must show tact. discretion, moderation and a true sense of values" so as not to add to "the growing permissiveness of behavior.'

"The corruption of morals has increased, and one of the most serious indications of this corruption is the unbridled exaltation of sex," the declaration said.

"The sexual function has its true meaning and moral rectitude only in true marriage. It said masturbation is a "seriously disordered act," premarital sexual relations are "contrary to Christian doctrine," and "homosexual acts are intrinsically disordered and can in no case be approved of."

But it said a distinction is drawn, "and it seems with some reason, between homosexuals whose tendency comes from a false education, from a lack of normal sexual development, from habit, from bad example, or from other similar causes, and is transitory or at least not incurable; and homosexuals who are definitely such because of some kind of innate instinct or a pathological constitution judged to be incurable. It said this latter category of homosexuals must be treated by the Church "with understanding and sustained in the hope of overcoming their personal difficulties and their inability to fit into society. Their culpability will be judged with prudence. But no pastoral method can be employed which would give moral justification to these actions on the grounds that they would be consonant with the condition of such people.'

French 'no pay' policy questioned

By ELIAS ANTAR

Assoniated Press Writer PARIS (AP) - A tough new "crime will not pay" order put in force by French police during a recent kidnap sensation has raised fears that it will precipitate bloodshed in future, not avoid it.

Reversing a policy of lenieney,policemen brusquely stepped in last week to prevent payment of a $3.4 million ransom for the release of Louis Hazan, chief executive of France's largest phonograph record company.

"To stop this dangerous increase in crime, the police will henceforth oppose payment of any ransom," the interior ministry declared in a statement. A few minutes later it announced the capture of two of Hazan's kidnapers as they arrived at a rendezvous to collect the money.

But Hazan himself then was still in the hands of other members of the kidnap gang, and Hazan's family said it was not informed that the payment would be stopped. Police traced the executive and freed him unharmed 24 hours after announcing the new hard

The stress of most newspaper editorials, however, was not on the successful outcome of the incident but on the risk that Hazan could have been killed by the irate kidnapers.

Le Monde said that Interior Minister Michel Poniatowski "played with the life of a man the way one plays with dice 'by chance." Le Quotidien de Paris said some jurists would interpret the new ruling as akin "to the crime of non-assistance to a person in danger" and would make the police the accomplice of kid-

Critics said the new rule would make families of future kidnap victims not contact the police but deal with the abductors privately and directly — which could only play into chances of getting away with it.

Officials informed of the new police decision indicated it would be imposed selectively depending on the circumstances of each case. In any event, there are no specific statutes on the law books that could allow authorities to take action against persons who paid ransom money, they said.

Sources said the new ruling was aimed at preventing new kidnapings and hostage taking. The sources would not speculate on whether it might tend to encourage more ruthless acts by kidnapers intent on collecting ransom money.

Stamp, AMP O'Hare, first day of issue.

Public pressure in the past two years for action against hostagetakers prompted "shoot to kill" orders for police whenever it was certain this would not endanger the hostages.

But in more than 60 such incidents in 1975, police killed only five gunmen. The fact that no hostages were seriously hurt was drowned in the public clamor for more action, itself prompted by the wide publicity given kidnapings such as the Hazen case.

In 1973 there were only three hostage incidents. By 1974 they had jumped to 56 and incomplete figures for 1975 indicate a higher total.

A recent poll showed 51 per cent of those asked favored the use of force in freeing hostages, but 70 per cent favored giving in to the abductors demands if a relative was involved.

Aerial 'fireballs' seen, directly — which could only play into their hands by increasing their reported in five states

By The Associated Press

Residents of five states-Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas-flooded police switchboards Wednesday evening with reports of something afire in the sky.

A number of callers thought they had seen an exploding airplane but authorities learned the event wasn't of earthly origin.

The National Weather Service said it was either a meteor shower or exploding meteors. Most reports were that a fiery object with a trail of smoke had been observed.

Duncan. Okla., highway patrol dispatcher Jim Swafford said he saw the "pinkish-looking ball of fire" through the window of his station at 6 p.m. (CST).

He said the interplanetary visitor resembled a large ball from a Roman candle. Swafford said it turned from pink to white as it approached the horizon, then disappeared in a puff of smoke about 20 degrees off the horizon from his vantage point.

"It was so bright that it could have been seen in daylight," reported a flight controller at a Tulsa, Okla., airport. If it were a meteor, it could have been what astronomers call a bolidean exploding meteor.

By JOHN CARMODY

The Washington Post

The Wolfe project had been in the works long before the PBS board of governors decided last spring that changes should be made at the top management level of the public TV system, triggering a talent search that led them to Grossman Thanksgiving weekend.

WASHINGTON - In a few months, Public

Broadcasting Service audiences will see a and narrated by journalist and social chronicler

But it is the kind of programming experiment that Grossman obviously wants to see on a network that he thinks has been "lazy" in the past and staffed with "too many executives who have

Grossman, in an interview on the eve of his election, was forthright about the shortcomings and success of the 6-year-old public network which he takes over Feb. 1, replacing Hartford Gunn, who moves up to vice-chairman of the governors board.

Grossman wants to see people like Mike Nichols, Orson Welles and Mel Brooks somehow attracted to public TV.

"I want to create a climate at PBS," he said, "that will attract the top talent in New York and Hollywood and let them do things that commercial TV doesn't allow."

'There's a great frustration around the country about what people are seeing on commercial networks," said Grossman.

"The audience is already finding public TV when there's a superior show, like that National Geographic special, 'The Incredible Machine.' That show got almost half the audience in New York when it aired."

A former advertising executive at both CBS and NBC who has operated his own public relations firm since 1966, Grossman is no stranger to PBS (whose on-air logo the Grossman firm designed in 1971). Two years ago the Ford Foundation hired

Grossman to set up a national fundraising project to show PBS' 264 stations how to increase community support as Ford began to withdraw its help after 20 years and $250 million in seed This put Grossman on a first-name basis with many of the managers and undoubtedly helped dispel some of the built-in antagonism that grass-roots public TV holds for New York's influence on its industry (a major reason PBS was originally set up in Washington instead of New

The project also gave him an outsider's insight into the system not available to most of the other 60 candidates screened for the PBS presidency.

"A lot of public TV on the local level," said Grossman, "has been crying too long. You can go to some stations in the system and there's a fellow reading the agriculture report from a card table. But in the next room there'll be $95,000 worth of great equipment sitting idle. They've gotten lazy in the system." Grossman is aware that there is a moral problem at PBS. In the nine months since a special search committee began looking for first an executive vice president and then a president to replace Gunn, wages and jobs have been pretty much frozen. Other top posi-tions — notably public affairs programming coordinator — have not been filled.

"The morale will take care of itself," said Grossman, "if we can meet my other top priorities." He listed them as first making PBS programming better and more interesting, and then putting them across to the public with more

Copley News Service BERKELEY, Calif. — You'd hardly equate a mustachioed, long-haired astrophysicist at the University of California's Lawrence Laboratory with something as mundane as a Carrugahorn - but that's what

It began about three years ago when the Berkeley professor, Frank S. Crawford, asked himself why a child's "Hummer" hummed. A Hummer is one of those thin, yardlong pieces of flexible corrugated plastic that produce a mournful wail when a child whirls it around his

Crawford could think of no obvious explanation for the sound it made, and for a professor of physics and a scientist concerned with why things happen, such vacuums are abhorrent. It had bothered Sir Isaac Newton, too, why the apple had fallen from the

Crawford even took the question to his class at Cal and had his students whirling Hummers around their heads at different speeds — and each

Then one day he held a Hummer out of his car window.

'To my amazement I found that the frequency of the note was exactly proportional to the car speed," he recalled. "The fifth harmonic set in at about 35 miles per hour and lasted until 40 m.p.h.

"The 10th harmonic set in at 70 and lasted until 80." Then he got to the heart of the matter. He tried a similar experiment without the corrugations. It didn't

"I made a simple theory." Crawford explained. "As the air flows down the tube it bumps into the corrugations at a certain frequency, given in bumps per second, and when this frequency matches one of the natural harmonics of the tube, it

But blowing it was something else. No human lung could provide the airflow. But in playing with the airflows needed to make the Hummer hum, he tried some corrugated brass tubing purchased at a hardware store for connecting to a gas pipe.

"One day," he remembered, "I put a brass tube in my mouth and played bugle-like sounds with very little

"I got longer brass tubes and found

I could play very nice 12-bar blues."

And, thus, the Carrugahorn was born - a brand-new kind of wind instrument that he manufactures in three basic types: the bugle; the neck horn, which is longer and wraps around the neck; and the slide horn, in which the bell slides in and out to help control the tones.

The tone, while "bugle-like," is lighter, less brassy, described by one listener as "like faerie music."

That, of course, led to the Water Pipe. In testing his theory that the bumps in the pipe were creating standing waves that resulted in the sound, Crawford set out to measure air velocity by fitting a Hummer to hole cut in the bottom of a plastie bucket and then pushing it up and down in a tub of water.

We've had a week to get things going again! We've also encountered some new and rather strange faces. Antique sales show increase

NEW YORK (AP) -Sotheby Park Bernet's announcement that trading through its auctions in America has returned to 1973 record levels is regarded as good news for New York's international art and antiques trade. The firm's regulated public auctions in New York are regarded as the barometer of the market.

Much of the success of the season, which opened in early September, was attributed by Parke Bernet president John Marion to noticeably increased American buying and bidding against international competition.

Net sales of $32,674,039 of property were recorded September through December. The results represent a 28 per cent increase over the same period last year and are 3 per cent behind the same period for the preceding year, which ushered in the record

The Agriculture Department announced plans to put the new system into effect Feb. 23 after Supreme Court Justice Harry A. Blackmun last Friday denied a further bid to halt the new definitions. Initially planned for adoption last April 14, the grade changes have been delayed by months of court challenges from consumer groups and

The three top grades of beef commonly seen in retail stores are prime, choice and good, in their order of tenderness and juiciness. A prime steak has more marbling flecks of fat - than choice or good.

Under the new rules, standards for prime and choice will be widened and those for good narrowed so more beef can gualify as top grade. Although the use of federal beef grading by meat packers and retail stores is voluntary, it is common in the industry and labels designating prime, choice and good are familiar to shoppers.

Historically, the tenderest and most expensive cuts of beef are prime and come from cattle which have been pampered and fed grain during much of their lives, particularly in the final few months before slaughter.

But grain prices have risen so much in recent years that cattle feeding has been on the decline and many farmers and feed-lot operators, until recently, say they have st money on their operations. By enlarging he prime and choice categories, producers will be able to feed less grain to animals and still have them qualify for the more expensive grades. Among the opponents of the new grading plan is the Consumer Federation of America, which contends shoppers will be charged higher prices for meat that is lower in quality. A Consumer Federation spokesman said, "Consumers will wind up paying choice prices for good beef."

Ethiopian aid wasted,

Aspin says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States sent more than $15 million worth of food to Ethiopia during that country's 1974 famine, even though Ethiopia had a commercial grain surplus and refused to aid its own starving people, according to a State Department document. Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., released the State Department inspection report. He accused the Ethiopian government of "duplicitous" conduct and the U.S. Agency for International Development of "incredible mismanagement." AID administers foreign food relief and credit sales programs under the direction of an nteragency committee.

The inspection report by the Office of the Inspector General of Foreign Assistance was dated Nov. 25, 1974. It estimated that 100,000 to 200,000 persons died as a result of the drought that preceded the famine.

Aspin said the report states the United States and international donors spent about $25 million during the 1974 fiscal year "to supply free food grains to Ethiopia while the Imperial Ethiopian government spent nothing for grain for its needy, despite the fact that it had stated it would do so." An earlier report by the Carnegie Endowment for Peace accused the U.S. government of aiding Ethiopia in covering up until December of 1974 the existence and extent of the famine. 1

Cards are stacked

Overriding United States objections the United Nations Security Council Monday night invited the Palestine Liberation Organization to participate in an unprecedented debate on the Middle East.

And this is the way it is in the United Nations these days. The cards are stacked against the United States.

The vote on this particular issue was 11-1 with three abstentions to have the PLO delegation take part with the same rights as U.N. members. Abstaining were Britain, France and Italy, believe it or not. This is strange in itself.

U.S. Ambassador Daniel P. Moynihan spoke out against the proposal in words loud, clear and meaningful, before casting his lone ballot in opposition.

The ambassador explained to newsmen that the matter in the Security Council is procedural and not subject to the veto power held by America and the council's four other permanent members.

There is nothing particularly surprising in the balloting. Moynihan knew in advance that he would lose, as he did on Dec. 4 when the council voted 9-3 with three abstentions to admit the PLO to a debate on Israeli air raids against Lebanon. This must be terribly frustrating for the ambassador, going into voting sessions time after time, knowing all the while that he will be out voted. But he never fails to have his say in stating the policies and views of his country.

The PLO, incidentally, referred to Israel as a "Zionist, racist state" at the Monday night ses-

A spokesman for the organization said PLO will continue its military and political struggle to establish a Palestinian state. The Egyptian ambassador has been quoted as saying that his country wants the council to adopt a resolution favoring PLO participation in the next Geneva Conference as well as in recognizing the Palestinians' right to a state of their own.

Meanwhile, it is reported that the United States will veto any resolutions designed to achieve any such goals. And the talk goes on and on in the United Nations.

The following penned note from Mary Philippus was received by the editor a few days ago. It speaks for itself:

"By having taught in the Midland schools 33 years, I really learned to know many of our Midland children. And really to know them was to love them.

"Today we do not seem to have time to record the 'good deeds' that they do. That's a pity.

"Last week I was very sick and standing in front of my doctor's office, waiting for a taxicab to take me home. A young man and his girl friend came up to me and asked if they could take

Mrs. Mary Philippus, who me home in their car. Gratefully, I replied that I would be delighted. They not only brought me home, but returned in a couple of hours with a bowl of hot, homemade soup and a small bouquet of flowers.

"I had never seen nor heard of these two darlings. I decided their praise should not go unsung if I could get the story told.

"Maybe, afterall, CARE is the great panacea.

"Don't you agree?"

Yes, we most certainly do, Mrs. Philippus, and thank you for your continuing spirit of caring for others. It's wonderful ... and most meaningful.

The Machiavelli Plan termed 'brilliant'

WASHINGTON — The question of whether or not the United States should finance political parties abroad through the CIA doesn't seem to be a problem to the Administration. The only debate is about what parties should receive the money. Rumor has it that the CIA plans to give $6 million to the Christian Democrats in Italy to make sure the Communists don't get elected. But there are some people in Washington who feel that now that the cat is out of the bag, the contribution could be counterproductive.

One of them is my friend Giulio Machiavelli who knows the political situation in Italy as well as anybody.

"I think we should give money to a political party in Italy only if we're certain it will produce results. "You mean to the Christian Democrats?" I said. 'No, I mean to the Italian Communist Party.' "Have you gone mad?" I said to Machiavelli. "Why would we give money to the Italian Communist

"It's very simple. If the CIA hands over the funds to the Italian Communist Party, everyone will say the Communists in Italy work for the CIA and the center parties will win the election

"But that's Machiavellian." I told my friend. "The American people would never stand for it."

"Neither would the Italians." Machiavelli said. "Look, right now every political party but the Communists are tainted in Italy because it is widely believed their politicians are on the CIA payroll. The only way we can reverse this is by putting the Communists on the payroll and cutting off everyone else

"But you can't cut off non-Communist politicians from CIA funds," I protested. "The Right, the Center and the Non-Communist Left depend on that money for their own personal expenses. They have villas to pay off, new cars to buy, Swiss bank accounts to keep up. You can't take money out of their pockets just to defeat the Communists.

'Ah, but that's just the point," Machiavelli said. "They won't be cut off. When the Soviets find out the CIA is supporting the Communist Party in Italy, the KGB will have no choice but to support the Christian Democrats. If we're to believe our government, the Soviets pour in a lot more money for an election in a foreign country than the Americans do and, therefore, the Christian Democrats will have more funds to salt away for themselves than when they were financed by the CIA."

"It's an interesting proposal," I said. "But what happens if the CIA financing is so successful the Communists win in Italy?"

'There is very little chance of that happening. In almost all cases whichever side the CIA supports in an election loses. But we must make sure that there is a great deal of publicity that the Communists in Italy are being financed by the Central In telligence Agency.

"How would you publicize something like that?"

"We'd get Director William Colb to brief a congressional watchdo committee in secret session that the CIA was going to give $6 million to the Italian Communist Party. He would make them all swear that they wouldn't reveal a word of it to anyone.

"Five minutes after the briefting was over, every newspaper bureau in Washington would know about it. The day after the story was printed the White House would deny it. As soon as the denial came out, everyone in Italy would believe it was true. "It's brilliant," I told Machiavelli.

"But if the CIA starts supporting Communist parties in other countries, won't it hurt detente?' "It might," he replied, "but what better way to show the Soviets that we mean business?"

Mark Russell says

A very rare Russian bird called a "smew" has been sighted flying around the eastern United States. Apparently, the bird is either lost or has defected.

A spokesman for the State Department says that there are no forms to fill out unless the Soviet defector is a ballet dancer.

Critics of the State Department charge that if the Department can pay a fancy salary to a consumer adviser, they can establish a Defecting Smew's desk.

Eager promoters foresee a career for the Russian bird if it can either dance or play hockey. Otherwise, it can only do an occasional guest spot on Sesame Street.

The Russian Embassy here is hoping that this is an isolated case, on the theory that no smews is good smews.

Candidates reach for the stars

By JACK ANDERSON with Les

 ${\bf WASHINGTON-The\ presidential}$ candidates have started their quadrennial scramble for Hollywood stars to brighten up their campaigns. Since the candidates are a lackluster lot, they may be more eager than usual to find some glamor to excite the voters. Sargent Shriver, who is running behind in the popularity polls, is out front in the race for stars. He has induced more than 100 celebrities to ciimb aboard his stalled bandwagon including Lauren Bacall, James Caan, Carol Channing, Cloris Leachman, Paul Newman, Mark Slade and Joanne Woodward.

Ronald Reagan, himself a former actor, has an inside track in Hollywood. He has recruited such Hollywood stalwarts as John Wayne. Jimmy Stewart and Lloyd Nolan. Fred Harris, the populist from Oklahoma, is claiming the support of Carroll O'Connor and Dennis Weaver. Henry "Scoop" Jackson, the Senator from Washington, has landed

Bonanza's Lorne Greene, with a supporting cast of lesser luminaries. Alabama's Gov. George Wallace has rounded up a few country and Western stars. Most of the other candidates, like Sen. Birch Bayh, D-

Ind., have been inquiring quietly how to go about lining up stars. One of President Ford's backers also acknowledged lamely: "We don't have anyone big yet.

In contrast, his predecessor. Richard Nixon, just about had Hollywood locked up four years ago. We can now tell how he did it.

To win the favor of the movieland brass, Nixon characteristically promised special tax relief for Hollywood. As early as April 5, 1971, he met with the industry's top executives who, according to a confidential memo, "pleaded for some sort of tax relief." The President agreed to "take a look."

Not long afterward, the Internal Revenue Service gave the movie industry a multi-million-dollar tax break. A Nixon aide immediately began to recruit stars on the basis, as a memo puts it, of "what the President has done for the film industry."

There was also some Nixon-style arm twisting. A popular Canadian rock singer, who wanted to become a U.S. resident, was offered an immigration waiver if he would come out for Richard Nixon.

An extraordinary effort was made to bring Sammy Davis, Jr., into the Nixon camp. Sammy wanted a diplomatic passport or, at least, a White House appointment, Finally, an appointment was promised to a presidential commission,

Thereafter, the Nixon campaign spent thousands of dollars to fly Davis in style wherever he would appear for

Perhaps the most spectacular Nixon effort began with a plot to capitalize on Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's celebrated power of persuasion. Ali McGraw was supposed to lure Kissinger, then a bachelor, to Hollywood to whisper pro-Nixon sentiments into the ears of

"We should ask Henry," suggested a Nixon campaign memo, "to say something like, 'It would make me very happy if you could see your way clear to help re-elect President Nixon.'"

Unfortunately for the plotters, a foreign crisis intervened, and Kissinger had to fly off to Peking. But the party was held anyway, with Pat Nixon doing the whispering.

Many of the stars, who were pressured to support Nixon, are still in a holding pattern this year. In a chat with our reporter Mike Viner, Sammy Davis summed up the

"I'm going to stay independent," said the singer. "I'm good friends with the Fords. But this time, I'm not backing anyone."

Dean Martin leans toward Reagan but is in no hurry to endorse him. Danny Thomas praised the courage of George Wallace but backed away from an outright endorsement. And Charlton Heston, who declared for Nixon in 1972, is doubtful as of now whether he'll endorse anyone.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: The Commerce Department had planned signing ceremony, complete with distinguished guests and champagne, to mark the culmination last month of the tedious negotiations with the Soviets over grain shipments. A few days before the ceremony, the State Department asked Commerce officials to cancel it as an expression of displeasure at Russia's involvement in Angola.

 Arch-conservative Congressman Robert Bauman, R-Md., has been raising money for Ronald Reagan. But Bauman pocketed $2,626.52 of the money, according to a voucher, "for out-of-pocket expenses."

The wry and independent Mr. Nelson A. Rockefeller

WASHINGTON - Nelson Rockefeller, who once declared that he didn't want to be vice-president of anything, and proved later that he meant it, is a bit sardonic these days and turns the pain of rejection into-wry and independent remarks. Rockefeller, the Vice President, in conversation, sounds a little like Rockefeller, the 1964 presidential candidate. He's somewhat bitter ut the way the conservative wing of his party, particularly the Southerners, laid it on him during his Southerners, laid it on him during his first year, and he enjoys the pleadings of GOP regulars to get out there for the Ford minus-Rockefeller ticket.

Time after time, Rockefeller turns away the question as to whether he will campaign in the primaries for Mr. Ford by pointing out that the President's own campaign manager, Bo Callaway, said Rockefeller would be a "liability" to the ticket. Therefore, the last person in the world who should be campaigning in New who should be campaigning in New Hampshire and Florida would be Nelson A. himself.

Nelson A. himself.

No. Rockefeller wants to go his way in the months preceding the Republican convention, picking and choosing when and where he will speak and addressing himself only to issues and great matters which interest him. He is as independent as a continuous conti cat which has just polished off a gourmet meal, and then, head erect, walks out of the room, paying no heed to his I loving-care owners.

Rockefeller makes it clear that he takes no orders to give speeches on behalf of Mr. Ford, although he won't ignore the Ford Administration in his public appearances. His present interest is to go beyond the immediate future, talk about long-range goals and enduring issues like the energy shortage, inflation, new jobs and relations between the federal and local governments. He's always relished such futuristic adventures. Six Presidents ago, Rockefeller, now 67, was telling Franklin Delano Roosevelt in the most assertive terms how to rid Latin America of the Nazi menace - so energetically, in fact, that F.D.R. came to regard Rockefeller as a menace himself. He was just as assertive, even bull-headed, and always hard-working in the Truman and Eisenhower administrations.

Rockefeller was the constant optimist who wanted to get things done. Thus, to some, he was a progressive, a "liberal," even a wild spender. To others, he was a constructive pragmatist. Nowdays, he is appalled with the nihilism flourishing among opinion-makers. He admits that the American people have been through some ordeals - Vietnam, urban riots, Waterwate the Nixon resignation -but Watergate, the Nixon resignation -but says all this has spent itself and a new new era is upon us.

The trouble is, by Rockefeller's thinking, Congress and the press are in the same old critical rut and aren't showing leadership. He thinks that perhaps life will have to get worse for Americans before it can get better. He is an almost blind defender of

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, blames most of Kissinger's troubles on Congress which, he says, is loaded with guilt over its own failures. He reaches for superlatives to describe Kissinger, and then one realizes that this is a passion pouring out of Rockefeller's own patron relationship with Kissinger. Since he helped create him, how can Rockefeller be objective?

Similarly, he employs narrow scope in looking over the political devils in his life, the old right guard which made life miserable for him when he actually was a liberal and dogs him now even though he is a conservative. He can tell how the late George Humphrey, Eisenhower's secretary of the treasury, prevented Rockefeller from becoming secretary of defense just out of spite.

Rockefeller somehow believes that Richard Nixon is the shadowy director of a still-secret campaign to get the Republican nomination for John Connally, still a hero to the sequestered ex-President in San

As for Rockefeller's own plans in this election year, he says it is foolish to discuss them, since Mr. Ford will be nominated and elected. Therefore, no speculating on Ronald Reagan and certainly not Rockefeller, selfdescribed as "not an independent political personality," but just a staff assiatant to the President.

But this staff assistant feels some hurt from the way he fared in the Ford Administration, believes Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld not only opposed him but engineered the Sunday Massacre which disposed of James Schlesinger and William

So, for now, Rockefeller will take part in Lincoln Day functions in Michigan and New York, including a cocktail party in his apartment for which a $1,000 contribution to the GOP is required for admission.

He vows that he will live until he is 100, claims he will never write memoirs and that he's ready for anything because who knows what's in the tea leaves. This man really hasn't changed much in 40 years, has

Americans drive more, die less

By STEPHEN J. LYNTON

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — American motorists, who deserted the highways two years ago in the face of the nation's fuel crisis are answering the roads' call once again and driving more than ever before, but they are killing one another far less often in traffic accidents.

Despite this return to the freeways and byways, the annual highway death toll has dropped by almost 10,000 victims since the peak years of 1972 and 1973, the lost era of cheap and plentiful gasoline when more than 56,000 autoaccident victims died annually. The 1974 fatality count was 46,685 and, significantly, last year's auto fatalities continued at the same reduced

The dramatic drop in highway deaths is one of the encouraging signs government transportation officials and private researchers are finding, as they sift through statistics for 1975, which are still trickling in.

IN ADDITION to the resurgence of highway travel, researchers have also noted an upturn in gasoline tax collections by state and local governments, which use these revenues to finance transportation projects, and some improvement in the mileage the average U.S. motorist gets to each gallon of gas. Americans drove more than 1.3 trillion miles last year, government officials believe.

The nationwide highway speed limit of 55 miles per hour is regarded as a significant factor in some of these trends, but it remains a focus of debate and continuing study. Many transportation specialists believe it has accounted for about half the drop in auto fatalities, by altering driving patterns, increasing motorists' awareness of speec hazards, and spurring police crackdowns

Statistics gathered in a few, limited national studies and by state officials, indicate that Americans are driving more slowly, even though many may still exceed the 55 mile per hour limit.

The significance of 1974 to U.S. travel patterns is only slowly becoming clear. As lines formed at gas stations and fuel grew scarce, America's almost 130 million drivers cut back on auto trvel for the first time since World War II. According to U.S. Department of Transportation statistics, based on traffic counts and other estimates, Americans drove 19 billion fewer miles in 1974

LAST YEAR saw a motoring revival, with U.S. drivers outdistancing their 1973 mileage record - some 1.309 trillion miles - by 6 billion more miles, according to nearly complete government tabulations. Similar trends have been noted by private orgnaizations, including the American Automobile Association.

U.S. officials stress, nevertheless, that the rate of renewed growth in highway travel now lags far behind its rapid pace in years before the fuel crisis. Americans drove only 1.9 per cent father in 1975 than in 1974, government figures indicate. In pre-crisis years, highway travel increased at more than twice this pace each year.

"We haven't gone back to business as usual in terms of the historic growth of travel, and I don't think we will," said W. Johnson Page, a government specialist in driving trends. "I'm just guessing, but I think our travel growth is going to be slower from here on.

The Transportation Department has forecast that highway driving will increase by only about 2.5 per cent annually in the next 15 years, largely because of slower predicted increases in U.S. population. In the boom years of the 1950s and 1960s, auto travel rose by 4.4 per cent a year. An additional factor thought to have kept some motorists off the roads last year was the economic recession.

The emerging trend in travel growth contains a mixture of good and bad news for state and local governments, which have relied on gasoline taxes to finance road building and repairs as well as other transit projects. Many transportation officials are worried because gas tax revenues have not kept pace with steep rises in the costs of building and running highway and mass transit programs.

Nationally, motor fuel tax revenues dropped sharply by 2.7 per cent in 1974 after rising by 9.7 per cent in 1973. While government figures show-ed a turnabout last year, the 1975 increase in these state revenues is believed to have been only 3.7 per cent, and part of this rise was at-tributed to boosts in tax rates by eight states and the District of Columbia. (More to Come)

THE DEATH toll on the nation's highways had been mounting since World War II until the steep drop caused by the fuel crisis in 1974. Highway safety researchers noted, nevertheless, that the fatality rate — the number of traffic deaths compared with the number of miles Americans drove — had decreased significantly over the

In the 1950s and early 1960s, the declining auto-fatality rate was attributed mainly to improvements in highways, such as construction of median strips. IN the late 1960s and early 1970s, researchers began to detect the effects of safety researchers began to detect the effects of safety improvements in cars, including seat belts, shoulder harnesses, nonshattering windshields and collapsible steering wheels.

After the fuel crisis, the precipitous fall in traffic fatalities was initially attributed to Americans' reduced driving as well as the 55 mile per hour limit. But as motorists return to the highways, the national maximum of 55 is drawing increasing attention as a major factor. drawing increasing attention as a major factor.

Drivers are also thought to be using seat belts and other safety devices more often.

THE 55 MILE per hour limit, in the view of many transportation specialists, has led to slower driving speed, with a variety of consequences. Drivers maintain better control of their ears, officials say. Crashes occur with less imears, officials say. Crashes occur with less impact. Safety devices work more effectively. Polic emake more speeding arrests. Cars travel at more nearly uniform highway speeds, with less difference in speed between the fastest and slowest motorists.

Studies of 10 states by the National Safety

Council found that average freeway speeds dropped from 66.1 miles per hour in 1973 to 58.6 in 1974, with the fastest drivers apparently slowing donw the most.

Americans also appear to be getting more miles to the gallon, as a result of slower speeds, changes in other driving habits, increased use of small cars and government pressure on auto manufacturers.

Motor vehicles, including autos, trucks and buses, averaged only 11.85 miles to the gallon of fuel in 1973, a low point. This rose to 12.13 miles per gallon in 1974. Figures for 1975 have not yet been compiled, but a government estimate based on available data indicated an average of 12.06 miles per gallon, more than in 1973 but slightly less than in 1974.

Panel can't give cyclamate a clean bill of health

The best brains in science cannot answer the question of whether the artificial sweetener spent six months studying the problem for the government.

The committee con-cluded Tuesday that it could say only with 95 per cent probablility that cyclamate, 30 to 50 times sweeter than sugar, does not cause cancer. The panel said there remains a nagging -doubt over whether it may be a weak

The small degree of uncertainty seems cer-tain to touch off a debate over what degree of safety should be required by government regulators.

The scientific panel said that not even a proposed five-year experiment costing $8 million$10 million and using 52,000 rats and hamsters could establish, with absolute certainty, that the government was wrong in 1969 when it banned the chemical from foods and drugs. "Science today is just not good enough to an-

dismissed

AUSTIN (AP) - The Texas Supreme Court dismissed today Kroger Co.'s appeal of a $25,700 judgment against the company's Galveston store for alleged false imprisonment of a teen-aged grocery checker.

Lawyers for Cathy said the controversy had been settled and asked the high court to dismiss the appeal.

Although a jury found and the compan that Kroger had restrained Mrs. Black, 18, without adequate legal justification, the trial judge ruled that she get nothing.

The Houston Court of Civil Appeals, however, awarded her the $25,700 judgment, plus interest.

Court records show that Mrs. Black was shown to a small room in the store in April 1974 where a man who iden-tified himself as being a company security agent told her if she was not honest, she would be handcuffed and taken to

The man tol her, she testified, that it might be a "long time" before she saw her 2year-old daughter again.

She testified that she was so frightened that as he called off names of months, she made up amounts of money she had allegedly stolen from the store.

The total came to approximately $700, and Kroger's took $75 out of her $79.25 paycheck; claimed $149 from her savings account; and $200 from her checking account of $219.

Her sister made up the remaining $275.

Mrs. Black said she signed a statement admitting taking the store's money only because "I felt like I had to."

Use of crude below forecast

HOUSTON (AP) - Current domestic oil consumption is running about three million barrels a day below projections made prior to the Arab embargo, a regional Federal Energy Administration administrator

About two thirds of the decline can be traced to conservation efforts and about one third to lower economic activity and milder weather, Delbert M. Fowler of Dallas said Tuesday.

Fowler discussed the effects of the embargo at the opening session of Interpipe '76, a three day international pipeline technology conference and exhibition.

He said it has become clear that, with the emergence of the power of oil producing nations, the private sector alone cannot assure an adequate and secure supply of imported oil at a reasonable price.

He said private companies no nger dominate the oil market now that the producer nations are making price decisions.

Inflation council urges blood collection changes

WASHINGTON (AP) - The government's inflation monitoring council is urging more commercialism in the collection and distribution of human blood, thus challenging the current federal policy of seeking an all-volunteer blood system.

"The council offers an opinion that our public policies toward blood would be improved substantially if it were recognized that blood is a product that is not very different from other consumer goods," the Council on Wage and Price Stability said Wednesday.

petition would encourage a better quality of blood available for transfusions and at a more reasonable

The proposals were contained in comments filed with the Food and Drug Administration in response to proposed FDA regulations which would require labels distinguishing between blood donated by volunteers and blood provided for cash.

The FDA regulations would also require labels warning that blood from paid individuals is associated with a higher risk of hepatitis than blood from volunteers.

The FDA proposals were viewed by the counnil as aiding the policy enunciated by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in 1974 that endorsed "efforts to bring into being an all-voluntary blood donation system and to eliminate commercialism in the acquisition of whole blood and blood components for transfusion purposes.'

The Council on Wage and Price Stability is headed by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and composed of the President's top economic and consumer aides, along with the secretaries of Agriculture. Commerce and Labor. The council and its staff are responsible for keeping track of inflationary pressures in the economy and for assessing the inflationary impact of proposed government actions.

The council and government health officials agree that an estimated 10 per cent to 15 per cent of the U.S. blood supply comes from paid in-dividuals, who receive from $5 to $20

They also agree there are no reliable tests to detect hepatitis in blood, so collection agencies must rely on assurances from donors that they have never had the disease.

There is also agreement that blood transfusions are linked to nearly 100,000 cases of hepatitis a year, in-cluding about 850 deaths. Blood collected for cash is generally related to an infection rate three times to 10 times that for donated blood.

The council said it agrees that patients and doctors are entitled to know through labeling of the risks involved. But it urged the FDA to change the proposed regulations to permit commercial collectors to provide information on the infection rate from their own particular supplies rather than for all commercial blood

The council proposed fostering competition between suppliers of blood, while requiring test procedures to maintain quality. Donors could be solicited "in any lawful manner" and paid to make it worth their while to give blood at times when the need is most urgent.

American capitalists put eyes on Vietnam

By WARREN BERRY Newsday

NEW YORK - Less than nine months after Americans abandoned Vietnam to the victorious Communist armies, U.S. capitalists are making overtures to return.

"Yes, there have been some meetings and discussions with them, but not over ther and not involving Mr. Sellers," an official of the giant Cities Service Co. confirmed. The man he refers to is Robert V. Sellers, board chairman of the $3-billion-ayear oil company. Sellers is quoted in an upcoming Forbes Magazine piece as saying: "Based on our short experience, Vietnam had the promise of becoming a new oil province ... We'd like to get back and confirm whether that is rightor not.

One of the few U.S. financiers to be allowed in since the Communist takeover, Louis Saubolle of the Bank of America, reports that "in the last six weeks, there's been a softening of attitudes of both sides of rather rigid attitudes. In my discussions with the Vietnamese (last July), they definitely expressed their willingness to have American companies come back. From their side, they want to do Reached in his office in Hong Kong, the U.S. banker - who travels on a French passport - said "the problem we're having is with Washington, not Hanoi. I'm fully aware that this is an election year, so I don't expect the (U.S. trade) embargo to be lifted this year.' Executives of big American companies, including oilmen who operated in Vietnam in 1972 and 1973, reportedly have met in Singapore and Paris with Le Van Mau, director of Hanoi's National Import and Export Corp., Saubolle says, From Paris, Forbes reported that Vietnam's commercial attache, Do Thanh, had indicated that the Communist government is interested in profit -or production-sharing arrangements with capitalist companies, especially oil producers.

"The proof that we want to develop the offshore oil is that we have created a special department for oil and gas and that reports directly to the (Vietnamese) general assembly, the diplomat was quoted as saying. In Houston, Shell Oil's vice-president, Jack C. Threat was quoted as saying: "In time, it always seems to happen that our worst enemies become our

Basically, that's the way the company feels, he confirmed for Newsday, adding that he would like to get back into "places where we seem to be precluded." With Cities Service as a partner, Shell had drilled about a half-dozen offshore wells in Viet-namese waters. "We saw some evidence of hydrocarbons there, but not enough to tell if it was commercial," he said. "Then the war was 'we have not been to Hanoi nor has Hanoi been to us," the American oilman said.

John Lichtblau, director of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, backed up something suggested by banker Saubolle: "They may have total distrust of the U.S. government, but no doubt they would like to see these capitalistic oil companies come because they feel that no one else could do the job offshore." Neither China nor the Soviet Union could spare the technicians to do the job for the Vietnamese, he said. Saubolle, who operates from a Hong Kong skyscraper, noted that while the United States keeps an embargo on trade with Hanoi, American allies such as the Japanese quadrupled their trade there in the last half of 1975. And a European consortium has given the new South Vietnamese government a $40 million credit line for industrial expansion. As a longtime China-watcher for the Bank of America, the nation's biggest bank, Saubolle says: "I'm personally convinced that we will not see a China problem. We will not wait for 23 years (the time it took the U.S. to normalize relations with China) before we normalize business relations with

SEATTLE (AP) - Massive underground structures which once housed nuclear missiles are being considered as sites for another kind of nuclear power. A Seattle engineering group has proposed that obsolete intercontinental ballistic missile sites become the homes of nuclear power reactors.

The former Titan missile facilities were "designed to resist nuclearbomb attacks, earthquakes and external sabotage," the engineers say. "It would take a lot of politicking," said an official of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's office of research, which would consider the idea, "but I can't think of any overriding reason that would rule it

George Henderson, chief engineer for a group called Power Generating Cooling Systems, said, "We're oldtimers who believe this country spends too much time in research and not enough time in using what we already know.

Each Titan installation includes two concrete hemispheres 140 feet in diameter. The roof of the hemisphere is covered by 50 feet of earth. The floor is mounted on springs to absorb shockwaves from earthquakes or nuclear bombs.

Missile-storage siloes 190 feet deep with 600-ton steel doors on top to seal out external radiation from nuclear attack are located nearby. "If they keep radiation out, I'd think they could keep radiation in. which would provide safe, long-term storage for nuclear waste," said A. C. Smith, the group's technical director. A necessary part of the scheme is that "dry cooling" be used for the steam plants because many of the Titan sites are far from major water

Water still would be used to cool the reactor itself

But in the power plant, instead of using huge amounts of water to cool and condense steam in the process of generating electricity, amonia would replace water.

Mining applications now may be approved

SYLVESTER FARRIS, an attendant at at a gas station in Oak Park, Ill., holds pre-1965 allsilver U.S. coins used to purchase gasoline for 20 cents a gallon at the station. The station offers the gas for 20 cents only if it is paid for with all-silver coins.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Interior Department is expected to approve four controversial strip mining applications in the coal-rich Northern Great Plains following a Supreme Court decision removing an injunction that has delayed the project more than a year.

The court swept aside on Monday an injunction that had blocked approval of the strip mining despite thedepartment's claim that the coal is needed to meet the nation's energy

At the same time, the court announced it would hear, probably in April, the government's appeal of a lower-court decision that a regionwide environmental impact statement is needed before such applications are approved.

None of the justices dissented from either decision.

Supporters of legislation to impose strict controls on strip mining predicted the court's action would increase pressure for passage of such a bill. A measure tightening controls on strip mining was passed last year but vetoed by President Ford.

The strip mining case stems from a suit by the Sierra Club and allied groups to block approval of mining plans in the Northern Great Plains until the government prepares a comprehensive statement about the impact on the region's environment.

The Interior Department said such a statement is not needed. The department already has prepared a national report on the impact of coal leasing on federal lands, plus an impact statement covering the 7,800square-mile Eastern Powder

River Basin in Wyoming. The department asked the court for permission to grant permits to Alantic Richfield Co., Carter Oil Co., KerrMcGee Coal Corp. and Wyodak Resources Development Corp. for mining operations in the Powder River Basin.

RRC again sets full allowable

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Chairman Ben Ramsey of the Texas Railroad Commission noted the increase in crude oil imports into this country as the commission set the statewide allowable today for February at 100 per cent-the 47th consecutive month of wide open production.

Four major purchasers of Texas crude oil asked for less oil next month than January, and spokesmen said their nominations merely reflected that they were getting less oil from their field connections.

Nominations for February totaled 3,941,462 barrels a day, a decrease of 18,123 barrels daily from January.

Ramsey said imports as of Jan. 2 totaled 4,622,000 for the previous fourweek average. This was an increase of 849,000 a day from the four-week period ended Jan. 3, 1975. As usual, the allowable of the East Texas field was restricted to 86 per

37-state study reveals bleak fiscal outlook

WASHINGTON (AP) - A survey of the financial health of the states indicates that most states "face an increasingly bleak fiscal future" with spending increases outpacing increases in income.

"With few exceptions, state surpluses of previous years are gone," a statement with the survey reported. "Governors and legislatures, many of whom have already taken dramatic belt-tightening measures, are faced with further tax increases or spending cuts or both to keep their budgets in balance.' The 37-state survey found that estimated revenue for fiscal 1976 will increase 8 per cent. Expenditures are expected to reach $71 billion and revenue will total only $67.7 billion. "This appears to indicate that the effects of the recession mere than offset the revenue growth attributable to inflation," the report said "When you don't have the money, you have to raise taxes or cut spending, just when the recession demands that you do the reverse,' said James Martin, deputy director of the National Governors Conference, which sponsored the survey. In the statement, the organization said the study also indicated: -The fiscal picture in energy-producing and agricultural states is more favorable than in heavily industrial states, where unemployment

-Welfare and Medicaid payments, driven up by recession, brought about major spending increases in fiscal 1975. -The rate of increase in state government expenditures has been leveled by budgetbalancing efforts of governors and legislatures in the current fiscal year. -States are spending dollars earmarked for capital expenditures on current operations.

'To the extent that states had surpluses in any real sense, they have virtually disappeared." the statement said. The report was prepared by the National Association of State Budget Officer's and the National Association for State Information Systems Copies have been sent to President Ford, top administration officials, congressional leaders and governors, many of whom now are preparing state budgets. The administration is finishing the federal budget, to be delivered to Congress next Wednesday. The report gives total figures for all 37 states in the survey, but it does not list individual state expenditures or revenues.

the states missing from the survey are Alabama, Alaska, Colorado, Maine, Mississippi, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. A member of the governors conference staff said 12 of those states were unable to make data available in time for inclusion and that Alabama refused to take part.

Have-nots now hold stake in gold price

By PAUL E. STEIGER The Los Angeles Times

KINGSTON, Jamaica - Gold, that magical metal with the power to bend men's minds, is suddenly giving Bangladesh beggars, Bolivian peasants and Jamaican construction workers something in common with Russian commissars, South African mining magnates and French wine merchants.

That something is an interest in keeping gold prices high — the higher, in fact, the better. Russians and South Africans, of course, have long had a stake in high gold prices, since they mine most of the world's annual production. And prosperous Frenchmen - not to mention their neighbors in such nearby European countries as Switzerland - have a well-known penchant for hoarding gold as a substitute for the neighborhood savings and loan association. They, too, enjoy a windfall when gold prices climb.

But now a host of the world's poor countries are also being drawn into the act, and the pressure of their interest, added to that of the more traditional fans of gold, is threatening efforts by the United States and other countries to clean up the world monetary system by phasing gold out of it.

The new interest in gold by the world's poorer, less-developed countries has emerged because they are about to get a good-sized hunk of it — 9 million to 10 million ounces directly, plus access to the profits from the sale at public auctions of another 20 million ounces. These benefits are due to be handed out over the next four years as part of the overhaul of the world's monetary system agreed to in principle by members of the 128-nation International Monetary Fund here recently. The new Pegasus Agreement, named after the hotel here where the pact was finally hammered out, calls for the IMF to unload over the next four years 50 million ounces of gold — one-third its total supply - worth $7 billion at current market prices. The intention of a number of countries, incouding the United States, is for the IMF to dispose of the remaining 100 million ounces of its gold in subsequent years.

The effect of this, U.S. officials believe, will be to put gold well on the road to becoming just another metal, dislodging it from its present role as the most glamorous - and frequently most troublesome - element of the world's money

Once that happens, in the U.S. view, governments acting singly and through the IMF will be able to manage the world's money suppoy more smoothly and rationally than in the past.

To be sure, not everybody thinks gold should be phased out of the monetary system. Indeed, a persistent minority of economists has long argued that the metal should be restored to a central place in the monetary affairs of nations. They contend this action would put a brake on what they regard as the irresistible urge of governments to print too much paper money. thereby spurring inflation not only in their own countries but across national boundaries as well.

Moreover, some nations - France, in particular - continue to have a strong affinity for gold. They believe it makes a nice nest egg in an uncertain world, and they would feel safer having more of it in their government coffers.

Youth gangs terrorize San Francisco's Chinatown

Washington Post SAN FRANCISCO — In the high school that serves San Francisco's Chinatown, some students walk the campus carrying guns;

Police have arrested 14- and 15-year-olds in the neighborhood for armed robbery and assault, and they say they cannot count the extortions committed on a daily basis by teenagers hwo band in gangs.

Across San Francisco Bay, police say gangs, whose leaders came from San Francisco's Chinatown to the Chinese community in Oakland, in recent months have extorted as much as $25,000 from restaurant owners and committed gang rapes. Oakland police also have reports that teenagers connected with gangs in the city's high schools are passing around a machine gun.

"I used to carry a machete," a young San Francisco man said last week after describing how he was stabbed five times last spring by gang members who thought he was a friend of someone who owed them money. "Buit then I realized that if they're going to get me, they're going to get me.

THE EXACT number of Chinese gangs is unknown; officials estimate between two and five major gangs are operating in Northern California. San Francisco police say the gangs members in other cities with large Chinese populations. In Los Angeles, a police department Asian task force is attempting to control youth

The youths are the most recent newcomers to a gang violence that has plagued the Chinese community here since the late 1960s, when relax-ed federal immigration laws brought thousands of Chinese to an already overcrowded urban ghetto.

By police reports, no more than 200 bay area youths are connected with the gangs. They constitute a tiny element of the large Chinese community here, which is estimated at 90,000 in San Francisco, one-tenth of the city's population.

Since 1970, police said, some 40 persons — 30 of them in the bay area - have been killed in California intergang fighting, and numerous others have been wounded in street confrontations. Victims as young as 14 have been shot, stabbed or beaten to death, according to police records.

Many of the youths involved are new arrivals to San Francisco, teenagers with limited English who often wind up in remedial classes where many of their fellow students are delinquents.

GANGS OFFER companionship, a sense of purpose, protection against a hostile environment — the same attractions that drew some immigrants in the late 1800s into protective societies called tongs. And like the sensationalized "tong wars" of the early 1900s feuds that sometimes erupte dinto violence — intergang fighting among Chinese youths is a phenomenon not fulle understood outside Chinatown.

Many tourists and non-Chinese think of the city's Chinatown 28 a glittery square mile of restuarants, groceries and import stores. Traffic on Grant Avenue, a narrow street that runs through the center of the neighborhood, is frequently slowed by tour buses.

But the neighborhood is a miniature city — and a crowded one, housing some 40,000 persons, according to the 1970 census. It maintains a separate Chamber of Commerce and has a local telephone directory printed in Chinese.

Chinatown's housing density is 10 times the national average, according to researcher Victor G. Nee. As of 1974, he found, the neighborhood had the highest level of tuberculosis and suicides in the country. Its unemployment rate hovers around 13 per cent. Fortyone per cent of Chinatown's populaiton is below the federal poverty level, and about three-quarters of its housing is below city code, much of it consisting of 50-year-old tenements with inadequate plumbing. Nee found.

"It's like putting 50 people on a bus when the bus can only hold 40," said San Francisco police community relations officer Fred Lau. You're bound to have problems."

In 1967, a group of foreign youths made their first appearance in Chinatown as the Wah Ching -Young Chinese. They banded together, as one youth remembers against the taunts of American-born Chinese. "They'd call them 'chinks," he said. "And they had nothing. When youre foreign-born, you've got no job, you've got no money. Wouldn't you join?"

Initially, some say, the Wah Ching wanted job training and bilingual education. They brought their demands in 1968 to a meeting attended by the Chinese American Citizens Alliance and representatives of the Chinese Six Companies, a protective society that evolved from regional associations in China.

But the Six Companies, a business-oriented and politically conservative institution, rejected the demands of the Wah Ching. It was in the bitter years that followed, according to observers, that the young group began to harden. Petty extortions and protecting of turf gave way to armed robbery and involvement with the Chinatown underworld. Illegal gambling in Chinatown traditionally has made protection a lucrative business.

In 1969 and 1970 the gamg members began to split over control of money and power. And in 1970, with the fatal shooting of a 19yearold Wah Ching member, the youths began a series of murders that locally was called the Chinatown gang war.

AT ITS HEIGHT, the violence developed into a series of what appeared to be planned executions. Three victims were discovered strangled and tied with rope, and a young counselor was found shot to death, with a note reading "Die, pig informant," attached to his body.

About a dozen young men have been convicted since 1974 on charges or murder or conspiracy to murder, but no shooting deaths have occurred in recent months.

Three months ago, a youth thought to be connected with a gang was hadly beaten and burned with cigarettes in Oakland.

Some community workers say organized gangs no longer exist here. Police, however, citing a recent rash of armed robberies by young persons speaking Cantonese, say the gangs have turned on the community instead of each other.

By police esitmates, some 45 robberies have been committed in the last 90 days by young men policebelieve are gang members. Because victims frequently fear retaliation, more crimes go unreported, police

A NUMBER of Chinatown residents said there is little trust in the neighborhood for the San Francisco Police Department which has seven Chinese-American officers. "A good number of them (Chinese residents), particularly new arrivals, are afraid of the police," said Jack Woo, head of Six Companies. "In Hong Kong, they're used to the police over three - they have an image of bribery, payoffs, under-thecounter wheeling and dealing.'

And the Chinese community, which historically has relied on protective societies and policy bribery to ease white hostility, has "always lived with extortion," said police officer lau. "If you don't contribute, things start happening to your business."

Lau said problems of communication between the police and the community might be eased by increasing the number of Chinese-speaking police officers. The department recently lowered its height requirement for recuits in an effort to attract more Asians.

may be spreading, recruiting Helper recalls gang days

The Washington Post SAN FRANCISCO "All the people I grew up with are either dead or in jail or out of town now." Wayne Yee, director of a federallyfunded counsel-ing and leagl aid pro-gram called Chinese Youth Alternatives, told a visitor last week. "i just want to see it stop.' Yee is a veteran of the so-called gang wars, which he says have been sensationalized by police and local newspapers, he has been arrested in connection with murder, kidnap, and conspiracies to murder, but says he was never arraigned because police could not make the charges stick. A close friend of his, labeled by police as a former gang leader, is now in jail for conspiracy to murder.

Yee, 25, was born on the outskirts of Chinatown, to immigrants from the canton region of China. His father ran a laundry in San Francisco's industrial district; his mother worked in a garment factory.

He grew up in Chinatown, attending public schools with white teachers by day and Chinese school in the evening. He was about 15, he said, when he began to lose interest in school and to admire the flashy foreign-born teen-agers who had appeared in the neighborhood

"I just started cutting class," he said. "It was boring

... you'd start driving around in hot rods. They (the foreign-born) were the tough guys, more or less established. They'd dress different, very col-

"You'd really go out and look for trouble sometimes. You'd be walking down the street and have busloads of tourists ... they'd look at you and smile, and crowd uphhe whole sidewalk, taking pictures, asking you questions like, 'What do Chinese people eat?' Or they'd say, 'Gee, you have nice Oriental clothes.' ... You were always a little angry inside. You'd look for a person foolish enough to call and look for trouble son foolish enough to call you a name."

He joined a gang of foreing and American born Chinese teenagers, at the same time that at the same time that other gangs were beginning to recruit. "They had their alley and we had our alley," he said. "It was well known in the community that if you'd pick on one of us you'd pick on all of us."

The 1968 confrontation between Chinese Sans between Chinese gang members and the more members and the more conservative community left Yee "mixed up, confused, frustrated," he said. Shortly afterward, he was approached by a tong, a protective group, that wanted to recruit him. The contract, said, "They can provide you with money and a place to eat and sleep," Yee said. "If I had said, I need a gun." I would have been. gun,' I would have been given one."
