George Wallace claims win in Mississippi caucuses

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Alabama Gov. George Wallace claimed victory in Mississippi's Democratic caucuses Saturday, outdistancing fellow Southerner Jimmy Carter and three other candidates in an early test of Southern political strength in the 1976 presidential campaign.

By Saturday evening about 28 per cent of the approximately 3,000 county convention delegates had been

Another 19 per cent of those elected were uncommitted while Carter, leader of the Iowa caucuses last Monday, had 18 per cent.

The caucuses were the first step in a four-phase process to select Mississippi's 24 national convention delegates.

The presidential nominating votes will be apportioned on the basis of a formula in which each candidate will get a proportion based on the percentage of his delegate strength at a state convention. Democratic officials say the formula will assure that every candidate showing significant strength will have representation in the national convention delegation.

The percentage of support a candidate received in the caucuses will not necessarily reflect the number of delegates committed to him at the national convention, but is expected to provide a general

The Washington Post WASHINGTON - The Great Galactic Ghoul has struck again, this time destroying one of the instruments that was to be used this summer by an unmanned Viking spacecraft to look for signs of life on

Viking lost one of its three soilsampling ovens late Friday as the spacecraft came close to the orbit of Mars, a spot in space about 35 million miles from Earth and 130 million miles from the Sun that space scientists have called the abode of the Great Galactic Ghoul.

"It's uncanny," said John Casani of Pasadena's Jet Propulsion Laboratory where Viking is being controlled and where the Ghoul was born when Mariner 7's battery exploded in 1969. "The Ghoul always seems to know when we're coming its

Of course, nobody knows that the Ghoul is anything but a myth but space scientists find it odd that almost all the accidents that have befallen Mars-bound spacecraft have occurred in the same place. There is no unusual amount of cosmic dust there and no increase in the solar wind, magnetic field or background

By spacecraft count, the Ghoul has been blamed for three total failures and four near misses. The Ghoul doesn't discriminate either. The first two failures chalked up to the Ghoul were Soviet spacecraft, Zond 2 in 1964 and Mars 1 a year later. Their radios went dead just as they crossed the Ghoul's path and never came back

One Mariner lost its radio in the Ghoul's orbit, but came back on when it reached Mars. Another was bombarded with so much cosmic dust

Mariner 7 was the Ghoul's most costly casualty. One of its batteries exploded the day it crossed the Ghoul's orbit and the explosion so damaged the rest of the spacecraft that it was useless by the time it flew

Losing one of the three ovens that will heat soil samples and look in the gases for signs of Martian life doesn't mean Viking is a disaster. But it does mean that only two of the three soil sampling experiments will be performed on the surface of Mars when Viking lands there in July.

What Casani and his colleagues at JPL worry about is that the Ghoul is not finished with Viking. The Ghoul's lair reaches for another 5 million miles and Viking scientists won't breathe easy until sometime next month when their spacecraft flies out of the Ghoul's territory and into the orbit of Mars. And what about Viking 2, which is a month behind Viking 1 and still has to cross the Ghoul's

The event, held under suspices of the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, took place this year in Midland, beginning Friday and concluding with finals Saturday night in Midland High auditorium. Eleven finalists had been selected by the five judges of the competition to vie for top honors in the Saturday night concluding event, chosen from among approximately 80 students.

In addition to the four students named performing winners (who will return here to perform with the orchestra in its next pair of season subscription concerts), judges designated two other young musicians as winners. Performing winners, winners and finalists will share in the $5,600 offered in the yearly competition.

Performing winners were: Cellist John Sharp, Waco; flutist David Aguilar, Corpus Christi, and violinist Lucinda Marvin, Minneapolis, Minn., both students at Indiana University; and pianist Jeffrey Campbell, Dallas, who attends North Texas State University.

Other winners were pianist David Martin, Miami, Okla., and soprano Jmel Wilson, Edinburg, student at North Texas State University.

Trinity Towers drive reaches 36.3 per cent

Trinity Towers' $1.8 million building fund campaign is "off to a good start," with $653,090 raised to date, according to P. F. Bridgewater

Sr., board of directors president. Bridgewater said $359,100 of the total represents contributions from board members, including a substantial pace-setting gift from Mr. and Mrs. George T. Abell. Other individuals and business firms have pledged $293,990.

Mrs. J. W. Starr and John F. Younger are campaign cochairmen. They also will head up the leadership division which is the first soliciting phase of the campaign. It was kicked off last week at a cabinet meeting.

Members of the campaign cabinet, many of whom campaign in the leadership division, are Phil M. Adams, Bridgewater, Murray Fasken, Tom D. Fowler, Clyde Haden, Wanye Moore, Mrs. James H. Pittman Jr., Frank L. Thompson and Wilbur A. Yeager Jr.

The 90-day campaign will conclude in mid-April.

"We're happy and heartened at this early date that 36.3 per cent of the goal has been reached." Bridgewater said, "and we're encouraged that several leading firms and individuals in the Midland area have indicated that they will give their full share support in the program."

The proposed $1.8 million new fivestory building addition will provide 75 additional independent apartment living units and 26 health care beds. It also will feature a multi-purpose area, occupational therapy room, a larger beauty shop and additional business offices.

By remodeling and enlarging certain departments in the present building such as the kitchen and supply rooms, Trinity Towers will be able to handle the increase in resident and health care rooms.

Judge Perry Pickett

The judge maintains a certain "distance," not out of reticence or indifference but rather in an effort to carry out his charge to make fair and impartial rulings and judgments.

"I think the people expect a judge to try to remain aloof," he said. And, at the same time, a judge "should act decisively when action is called for."

The judge's decision-making is most evident in the courtroom where he acts as "a balance wheel between two forces" - the prosecution and the

"It's just as important for a judge and-or a prosecutor, and-or a law enforcement agent to protect the innocent as it is to prosecute the guilty," Pickett said. Furthermore, he said, "A judge is with the rulings of the court," Mashburn said. "And the court does not always agree with the motions I attorney for the defendant are obliged to bring out the best in their witnesses for the benefit of their respective causes.

"The adversary system (of justice) . . in criminal cases only functions properly if you have good, competent, professional representation on both sides of the docket," Mashburn said.

That, he said, amounts to "both the defense attorney and the prosecutor doing the very best they can for their respective sides, and conscientiously bringing out the very best for their side and the very worst on the other

"And out of that conflict, out of that adverse situation," Mashburn said, "the jury should be able to arrive at the truth of the facts in the case." The examination and cross-examination of witnesses, the presentation of material evidence, if any, and the pros and cons of arguments give the appearance of conflict, the district attorney said.

"It appears to be a fight. In reality, what you're trying to do is bringing out the facts in the case for your respective sides." Neither attorney should be, or get, "personally involved" in a case, he said.

"We're trying to get at facts . . . We're trying cases and not per-

Culp pointed to the roles of the prosecutor and the judge. The district attorney, Culp said, is "bound by law" to see that justice is done and not to prosecute merely to win convictions.

U.S., Spain sign five-year treaty extending use of military bases

MADRID, Spain (AP) - The United States and Spain signed a five-year treaty Saturday extending American use of four military bases on Spanish soil in return for $1.22 billion in aid and the withdrawal of 10 U.S. missile-firing submarines from a Spanish port

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger signed his name 36 times to copies of the treaty and its annexes in a nationally televised ceremony with Foreign Minister Jose Maria de Areilza.

U.S. officials, while insisting the agreement is not a commitment to defend Spain, acknowledged that it brings the two countries closer together as well as edging Spain toward the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The pact enlarges Spain's role in Western defense by setting up a joint military planning staff between the two countries as well as procedures for "urgent consultation" in the event of what is ambiguously referred to as

At a dinner given by Areilza, Kissinger toasted the treaty as "a milestone in the relationship of both our countries.

Outstanding, Indeed

Congratulations are in order for Douglas B. Henson who Thursday night at the annual Midland Jaycee banquet was revealed as the Tall City's "Outstanding Young Man of 1975."

This was a fitting tribute to a young man who has gone far beyond the normal call of duty in providing outstanding service and leadership to his community in various phases of its business. civic, cultural and economic progress.

Henson also received the Jaycees' "Distinguished Service Award" in recognition of his many and varied contributions to his community and profession.

Congratulations also are directed to Wayne Peters, a Certified Public Accountant, who was presented as the Jaycees' "Boss of the Year for 1975." He. too, merits the special honor accorded him.

His work in and leadership, including the presidency, of the Midland Jaycees, would be sufficient to qualify him for top honors. INSIDE REPORT:

HHH: 'Less likely' under present plan

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

LOS ANGELES - Non-candidate Hubert H. Humphrey was, on the surface, the totally committed candidate during three hyperactive days here recently, but beneath the surface was making his nomination for President more remote and completely dependent on external events. "I can assure you," Sen. Humphrey told a close California political associate who asked him about published reports that he would enter some key primary elections. "that I have no intention - no intention whatsoever - of entering any primary." This was the message. repeated by Humphrey, privately and publicly, with uncharacteristic consistency to anyone who asked during his Southern California

That limits flexibility even for someone so adept in changing directions during a generation in bigtime politics. Without flexibility to enter a few late primaries, Humphrey's chances become totally dependent upon an absolute deadlock at Madison Square Garden in July. How likely is Humphrey's last hurrah nomination if he really avoids all primaries? The answer from a canny party pro, until recently optimistic about Humphrey: "In the neighborhood of 3 per cent." There exists, then, a gap between appearances and realities. The conventional and generally uninformed wisdom

Evans

(shared by none less than Gerald R. Ford) sees non-candidate Humphrey pinning down the nomination while a herd of faceless announced candidates flail away without effect. In truth, however, Humphrey's most astute supporters see the nomination growing more and more distant as the actual delegate search begins.

Certainly, appearances were bright during Humphrey's swing here that crowded 31 events into 75 hours and fattened the warchest for his Senate reelection campaign in Minnesota by

Humphrey was introduced at a reception as "the next Mr. President" by Armenian leader John Gabriel. That notion was widely shared by many contacting Humphrey here including 40 who paid $1,000-a-couple for a private, press-excluded dinner at the Bel Aire mansion of Roz Wyman, widow of Humphrey intimate and Democratic power Eugene Wyman.

Humphrey was lustily cheered after lectures at the . University of Southern California and the University of California at Irvine. contrasting with his brutal campus treatment in 1968 and even sometimes in 1972. Also in contrast to the bad old days was his giving relatively concise answers to questions and, even more remarkably, his maintaining a strict time schedule. At age 64 after four previous national campaigns, Humphrey had fully blossomed as the complete candidate.

However, those Humphreyites transported into euphoria here were unaware of what for months has been going on behind the scenes.

No adviser proposed that Humphrey risk becoming the spoiler by parging into the primaries early enough to meet the California primary filing deadline of March 14. But many key Humphrey supporters, including Gov. Wendell Anderson of Minnesota, felt he must enter and win some late primaries. If no announced candidate emerged from the pack by the time the votes were in from New York's April 6 primary, they advised, Humphrey should get into seven late primaries - Oregon, Idaho, Nevada, Rhode Island, New Jersey, South Dakota and Kentucky - to show he is a winner.

That plan has been vigorously opposed by Humphrey's closest and oldest advisers as well as Rep. Paul Simon of Illinois, who is running a national draft-Humphrey operation, without Humphrey's approval. They believe Humphrey mixing it with the pack would destroy his uniqueness and destroy the design, described by one Humphrey insider, of his entering the convention "emotionally and physically rested." Humphrey's insistent and consistent repudiation of reports he would enter primaries indicates the triumph, for now at least, of this school.

But by avoiding the primaries. Humphrey feeds unspoken apprehensions among highly placed Democrats. One prominent Californian worries whether Humphrey could survive as a candidate in the post-Watergate era carrying the burdens of an old campaign manager convicted for milk fund transgressions and old campaign debts settled for four cents on the dollar. This politician believes Humphrey will stay out of the primaries because he cannot stand the inevitable barrage against him, which would be more lethal yet in the general election campaign.

Distaste for the pain and privation of primary campaigning is clearly one reason for Humphrey's deepening determination to remain a noncandidate right up to convention time a reluctance which runs counter to his private assessment that the active candidates have failed badly so far.

Gerald Ford: What kind of man

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - The experience of ascending the pinnacle of power can change a man.

The dazzling heights separate the President from the citizens below. High fences, guarded by armed men and sophisticated electronics, keep him remote from reality. Bulletproof limousines move him over the highway. If the streets are crowded, helicopters stand ready to lift him above the traffic snarls and over the head of a saint. We consulted our backstairs White House sources, therefore, to find out what effect this heady experience has had on Gerald Ford. He is still the same plodding, unpretentious guy who moved into the White House

White House workers like to take Liberty out for walks, but the President doesn't feel dog-walking is part of their job. When other family members don't walk Liberty, Ford

Ford's worst two days in the White House began on the dark, rainy Friday that his wife went into the hospital for a cancer operation. Out of a sense of duty, the President sat through a moribund economic con-

He also kept a commitment to speak at the closing session the following morning while his wife underwent surgery. His only concession to his personal feelings was to cut the speech short. Between visits to the hospital, he also kept appointments with important foreign

Our sources remember it was a gloomy, depressing time, with the President scarcely hiding his anxiety. At the end of his most arduous hours, he was escorted to the White House elevator by Richard Keiser, his Secret Service lookalike, and Maj. Robert Barrett, the military aide. Both men shared the grim mood which had permeated the White

Still, just before the elevator door shut to take the President upstairs to the living quarters, he interrupted his personal thoughts and spoke quietly to his two escorts. "Thank you, Bob. Thank you, Dick," murmured Gerald

At the end of a presidential flight, he makes it a point to poke his head into the cockpit and thank his pilots. On a trip back from Detroit, it was raining too heavily at Andrews Air Force base for the President to take the customary helicopter hop to the White House. He started toward the back-up limousine for the drive to the White House

Suddenly, he noticed the helicopter, which had been standing by. He turned abruptly, walked through the rain to the helicopter and thrust his head inside to thank the astonished crew for waiting. Then he sloshed back to the limousine.

Those who know Ford intimately say he is a most considerate and compassionate person. On a visit to Los Angeles, he stayed in an upper floor of the Century Plaza hotel During a ride downstairs to a press conference, the elevator began to misfunction, shuttling up and down. The President's aides grew nervous, and the elevator operator was terrified. Ford calmed him down, saying quietly: "Don't worry, it will work. You'll get us there.

When Senator Ted Kennedy's son went to the hospital for a bone cancer operation, the President placed a private call to Kennedy to inquire about the outcome and to express his personal good wishes.

When Jordan's King Hussein visited the White House on April 29, 1975, Ford invited Sen. George McGovern. D-S.D., to the formal state dinner McGovern had been a pariah to the previous occupants of the White House, and Ford's gesture moved him

During the dinner, the Republican President went to McGovern and told the 1972 Democratic standard bearer: "No matter what, this house belongs to everyone, now more than ever."

There is nothing suave or subtle about Gerald Ford - none of those sophisticated mannerisms which Americans are inclined to distrust. One of the first pictures the White House released of him showed the new President working with one foot propped on his desk.

'Above board'

President Ford has nominated his friend, Rogers C.B. Morton, former congressman and cabinet officer, as a White House counsel.

As part of his duties, Morton is responsible for insuring that the President's election campaign is conducted within both moral and legal bounds.

Yet a few Democrats have rushed into the arena claiming that Morton's appointment was purely political and that the Ford election committee should pay his salary, rather than the federal government.

These points should be made:

1. President Ford, and more important the taxpayers, deserve an honorable man on the federal payroll to make sure for all parties that the President's campaign is run honestly and above board.

2. Almost every potential Democrat candidate, including Senators Jackson, Bentsen,

Humphrey, Muskie, U Church and Bayh: Governors Wallace, Carter and Shapp; Congressman Udall, and all of the "favorite sons," have state or federally-paid staffs which handle almost all of the political duties of those office-

3. Rogers Morton for the last 15 years has sacrificed his personal and financial interests to serve four terms as a congressman, two years as chairman of the Republican National Committee, three years as secretary of the Interior and six months as secretary of Commerce. He takes a $15,000 pay cut to serve as the Presidential counselor overseeing the integrity of the campaign and looking after the taxpayers' interest in same.

Actually, the tax-paying men and women should applaud the appointment and look with suspect on those Democrat officeseekers who try to exploit it.

NICK THIMMESCH

There is little the United States can do in Lebanon

WASHINGTON - Though President Ford spoke bravely of the American role in world affairs in his State of the Union speech, citing U.S. accomplishments in the Middle East, the disastrous situation in Lebanon mocks those honestly uttered words.

The threatened Christian faction in Lebanon pressures the United States to act, but there is little we can do. Given the mood of Congress and the weakened will at the State Department, there is no way the United States can intervene in force as it successfully did in 1958 when the Lebanese government, threatened by Moslem rebels, asked for our help.

That intervention, by U.S. Marines. assured the integrity of the Lebanese government which, in turn, became the most democratic in the Arab world. The Christian Arab majority was given a six-to-one control of the government, and assured the presidency. The prime minister's post was allotted to a Sunni Moslem.

And life went on quite well until re-cent years, when Moslems became the census majority and, spurred on by angry Palestinians, demanded a larger role in the government. When fighting broke out, the Christian faction, largely conservative, declared it would not negotiate Moslem demands until there was peace. The fighting on-

Now there are massacres, a casualty count of 10,000 killed and 40,000 wounded, pathetic lines of refugees and enormous physical destruction in a nation which Freedom House, in New York City, had rated as the Middle East's best in terms of civil liber-ties and freedom.

There is serious potential of far worse consequences. Syria, which has long denied the existence of an independent Lebanon and does not have diplomatic relations with Beirut, could move into the political vacuum which could come out of this chaos. Israel, best served by a sound, unified Lebanon, wants no part of this trouble, but might act in dramatic fashion if Syria ever entered Lebanon.

While the bloody civil war seems to be the reality in Lebanon, some frustrated Christian officials are ready to blame Israel for the crisis. This past week, Raymond Edde, a senior member in the Chamber of Deputies, met with Joseph Sisco, the State Department's undersecretary for political affairs, and Brent Scowcroft, President Ford's national security adviser.

Edde, a former minister of interior and therefore conversant with civil disturbances, told these top officials that the United States should speak out firmly on the Lebanese situation. He urged that the United States pressure Israel to not attack Palestinian refugee camps in return for an American effort to establish a U.N. buffer zone between Israel and Lebanon for the purpose of keeping Palestinian terrorists out of Israel.

The proposals concerning Israel are old ones, and not regarded as practical. Edde, in his frustration, argues that Israel wants a Lebanon partitioned between Christians and Moslems. indeed, a "Balkanization" of all Arab states in the area. He claims that Israel wants the water from the Litani River in Lebanon in order to provide for 9 million Jews whom he claims will one day populate the Jewish state. And he blames American "acquiesence" in the Lebanese situation on "the enormous influence that 6 million American Jews and the Jewish-owned media have over 220 million other Americans. Much as Israel detests the radical

Arab movement and terrorism, the Jewish state is not responsible for this tragic civil war, and Edde can't provide evidence of such involvement. It is wrong and a serious error for any Lebanese to make Israel a scapegoat. The last thing Israel needs is for a radical Arab victory in Lebanon because that would insure other devastating attacks on conservative Arab nations. This is the dangerous trend in the Arab world, one which seems to escape the American eye.

And isn't it ironical that if Lebanon

an authentic secular state now where Moslems, Christians and Jews have lived together in peace, becomes a state divided between Christians and Moslems it will have been the radical-Arabs who caused it? Still, the Palestinian Liberation Organization calls for a secular state of Palestine. where Moslems, Christians and Jews can live together in peace.

The American response, thus far, to the Lebanese tragedy is to keep hands off, but warn that no outside state should interfere. Actually, the United States has followed a wait-and-see attitude, and just hoped for the best. So while the wonders of detente are widely advertised by the Administration, and the "key" to peace in the Middle East found, according to the Ford Administration, Lebanon is torn from limb to limb. Its fall could only intensify the momentum of the radical Arab movement, and the shieks and monarchs in the Persian-Arabian Gulf are more aware of this than anyone.

One final irony. Some of the American weapons that the Lebanese are using to destroy each other can be traced to the North Vietnamese who acquired them when South Vietnam fell. The North Vietnamese have developed a brisk arms business as a result of that tragedy.

Remember Hitler

All you anti-gun congressmen and pushers for untigun legislation, please read how Hitler helped build up the unions, promised them the world, made them got labor unions but political parties. After he was firmly entrenched in spower by their support, they had anti-

All you union people think on this Are we going to be governed by a bunch of labor basses? Are we going to make our labor unions into political subdivisions? Do we have people in our national Congress that want us to follow Hitler's example in Germany of picking up all the guns and putting us under the heel of criminals and bayonet pushing bureaucrats.

If we are going out for union rule on everything shouldn't we dispense with the Congress of the United States and with the President's office and just let Mr. Meany rule the courtry. If we have unionized armed forces, how is it going to be controlled? By the President and Congress or by Mr. Meany? We are fast following the steps of Hitler's Germany Look at another labor-ridden country -Argentina and England.

AUSTIN-Embattled Judge O.P. Carrillo Jr. may be guilty of. everything the Texas House and Senate, and the federal government says he is, but one thing he is not guilty of is a lack of a sense of humor.

While sharing at bit of bistro osfellowship with the judge, we wiscovered that Carrillo has the kind to of sense of humor that can only be tempered by the turbulent politics of the rugged country where he grew up. This is something that Special Prosecutor Terry Doyle learned a few days later during Carrillo's impeachment trial. Carrillo aimed his barbed wit at Doyle several times during cross examination, and the prosecution team decided the next day to go with

Assistant Atty. Gen. John Odam as the quarterback in the next round of questioning. We learned that several members of the Senate decided it was time to let Odam have the floor questioning the judge. Odam is the fairest haired

Midland County Extension Agent

With harvest complete, Midland area farmers are turning to land preparation activities. Harvested fields are being disked, listed and deep broken as moisture permits. Routine activity for livestock producers includes supplemental feeding and marking and branding of calves. Moisture would be welcomed by farmer and rancher alike at this time

Farmers are finding it increasingly difficult to be heard in Washington.

"Producer interests in agricultural policy are taking a secondary position to interests of foreign policy, consumerism and labor. Secretary Butz is no longer calling the shots on farm policy. Unless farmers are able to take charnge, farm programs may actually be a noose around the producer's neck."

That's the contention of Dr. Ronald Knutson, ecomonist in marketing and policy for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, who spoke at an Extension Service Press Day banquet at Texas A&M University System economist.

Knutson listed two critical policy questions on which producers must evaluate their position: (1) In whose interest is agricultural policy going to be made? (2) How much government involvement should there be? The exonomist noted that the overriding concern of producers is the question of the conditions under which they will have access to international markets.

'Food has become an integral part of the policy of detente. As such, it may be used either as a carrot or a stick in diplomacy. The carrot policy involves freely exporting to make foreign governments more dependent on the United States as a source of supply. The theory behind this is that a foreign power will not bite the hand that feeds it.

"On the other hand, the stick policy makes access to U.S. grain dependent on support of U.S. policy by the recipient government. If food is used as a stick, the producer is in danger of being denied free market access from time to tome,"he said. While food diplomacy receives a lot of attention, organized labor and consumerism stand as even greater threats to producer access to foreign markets, argued Knutson. In both 1973 and 1975 the impact of exports on domestic food prices was the primary reason for export controls. This reflects the fact that President Ford listened to George Meany more than to producers or Secretary Butz.

"Target prices, food reserves and the future of commodity programs stand as the major domestic farm policy issues," noted Knutson. "Farmers feel that in return for full production there must be reasonable assurance that prices will not fall below production costs. They are opposed to reserves because they lower prices. Commodity programs such as those on rice and peanuts appear to be on the

"For agricultural producers to get a fair shake in future farm policies, they must make their voices heard-as one strong body rather than as individual commodity groups. Farmers need a strong right hand in Washington or else they will have to continue catering to the whims of those who desire to use agriculture as a pawn," emphasized the economist.

A windbreak protecting the home or farmstead can make outdoor living and working during the winter months much more enjoyable. The benefits of a welldesigned windbreak are numerous. It can cut down on wind speed and drifting snow, protect gardens, plants, and wildlife and lower heating bills.

An extra advantage to suburban homeowners is a reduction in noise from busy highways. A windbreak consists of several rows of trees or shrubs or a combination of trees and shrubs planted to the north and west of the area to be protected.

Small trees or large shrubs work out better in smaller areas because they can be planted closer to buildings than large trees. Trees and shrubs for windbreaks would be planted during the winter months so they will be ready to grow next spring. Trees for windbreak plantings are available from the Texas Forest Service. Information on ordering these is available at the county Extension office, phone 682-

2 Texas district plans rejected

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Justice Department has rejected a Texas plan for redistricting in Jefferson and Tarrant counties, but left untouched Texas plans for reapportionment in seven others.

The state may challenge the department position in U.S. District Court for the District of Pottinger announced his decision in a letter to Texas Secretary of State Mark White. The department made the letter public.

"Our evaluation indicates that the fragmenting of cognizable minority residential concentrations in Jefferson and Tarrant counties will have a dilutive effect on minority voting strength," Pottinger wrote.

"We are unable to conclude ... that implementation (of the districts proposed for those counties) will not have a discriminatory effect," he continued.

The single-member districts proposed for Jefferson County "have an unnecessary dilutive effect," he said. "The location of single-member district lines almost evenly divides the county's minority population among the county's three new single-member districts," Pottinger continued.

None of the three new districts would have "a None of the three new districts would have "a significant minority population" and this kind of division "appears to be unnecessary on the basis of natural boundaries or overriding considerations of district compactness or on the basis of any compelling governmental justification," he said.

A fairly-drawn alternative remap plan could guarantee at least one single-member district with a substantial minority population in Jefferson County,

As for Tarrant County, the civil rights chief said the new district lines would fragment the minority population among four districts. There would be a significant minority population in only one of the our, he added.

Senate votes toimpeach, bar Carrillo for life

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The legislature gave and the legislature took away.

O.P. Carrillo of Benavides, Duval County, was a judge by virtue of a bill that was passed almost laughingly by the 1969 legislature, creating a new court especially for him.

The Senate took him off the bench Friday when it convicted him of a scheme to take Duval County taxpayers' money through phony equipment rentals. The state's first impeachment trial in 45 years ended with a further vote to disqualify Carrillo from ever again holding public office in Texas.

CARRILLO'S LAWYER, Arthur Mitchell of Austin, said the former baron in the Duchy of Duval will fight to regain his position.

Mitchell asserted late Friday afternoon that Carrillo, 51, had been deprived of his judgeship without due process of law as guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. He said Carrillo had accepted his advice to try to hang onto the position and force Atty. Gen. John Hill to go to court to enforce the Senate's

But Leon Jaworski, the former Watergate prosecutor who served as the Senate's unpaid legal advisor, told reporters he doubted there was any real avenue of appeal from an impeachment.

"SOME TYPE OF ACTION in a federal court, maybe, but I doubt any judge would accept one,' Jaworski said.

The House that impeached Carrillo and the Senate that convicted him included a number of members who voted in 1969 for the bill creating the 229th District Court of Duval, Starr and Jim Hogg

Carrillo's brother, Oscar, then a representative sushed hard for the bill. Sen. Wayne Connally of Floresville sponsored it in the Senate. It was widely known that O.P., then county attorney, had been handpicked by the George Parr machine to become the new district's judge. Carrillo was elected in 1970.

SENATORS PASSED the bill on voice vote, so the only recorded test is the roll call on Connally's motion to suspend rules and pass the bill on a single

Those who voted for that motion and also voted to convict Carrillo were Sens, A.M. Aikin, D-Paris; Tom Creighton, DMineral Wells; Ike Harris, RDallas; Bill Patman, D-Ganado; and A.R. Schwartz, DGalveston. Aikin asked to be shown voting against the bill, however.

Senators often vote for a motion to suspend as a courtesy to the sponsor, while opposing the bill itself.

SEN. JACK OGG, D-Houston, voted to convict Carrillo and said he regretted voting for the bill as a House member in 1969. He said he would have opposed it had he recalled that Carrillo was a co-defendant with George Parr and several others in a federal mail fraud case in the 1950s.

Carrillo was convicted then on one count, but the U.S. Supreme Court reversed all convictions. It said that while it appeared there was a plan to steal from the Benavides Independent School District, there was no actual violation of the federal mail fraud statute.

IT IS INTERESTING that the alleged scheme in that case bears similarity to that of which Carrillo was convicted by the Senate.

School district records allegedly were falsified to show that checks were issued to pay for services or materials that never were received. The Senate convicted Carrillo of taking part in a conspiracy to have Duval County, the school district and the water district pay rent on items that were not received or used. The money allegedly passed through Benavides Implement & Hardware or the Zertuche General Store to the judge and members of his

CARRILLO IS A RICH MAN who tells of former Govs. John Connally and Preston Smith showing up with 5,000 other people, including congressmen, at a barbecue at his ranch. His fortune could slip through his fingers just as his political career has. He told reporters Friday that since the federal government began an income tax case against him in December 1974, he has spent $250,000 in attorneys' and accountants' fees. With his income tax conviction on appeal, and the State Bar of Texas seeking to yank his lawyer's license, Carrillo faces even more expenses.

"That's the cost of liberty," he said with a smile and a shrug of his shoulders as he awaited the Senate's verdict.

Here's how voting went in Senate

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Here is how senators voted Friday on the three roll calls in the impeachment trial of Judge O.P. Carrillo:

MTC opens 30th anniversary year

Midland Community Theatre celebrated the opening of its brandnew Theatre Centre with a production of that American classic. 'Oklahoma!", back in 1958.

Now, MCT celebrates the opening of its 30th anniversary season with a revival of the celebrated show. .

Besides MCT's own birthday, the new season also is marking the nation's Bicentennial, of course- and what better way to pay tribute to that all-American "institution," the Broadway musical, than with a production of the show that paved the way for all the glittering musicals of the '40s, the '50s and '60s and even the Final rehearsals will be under way this week in preparation for the show's opening at 8:30 p.m. Friday. The Theatre Centre box office will open Monday morning to begin sale of tickets to the general public for all performances of the musical through late February.

The box office opened late this past week to MCT members to make seat reservations, and several weekend performances are filling fast, it was announced Saturday.

MCT director Art Cole, who designed and directed the 1958 production here, is staging and directing the upcoming production as well. His cast for the new production is headed by Louis Kluck of Odessa as Curly and Sharon Hyde as Laurey. Marg Samples will be recreating her 1958 role of Aunt Eller.

Others in the cast include Virginia Scott as Ado Annie, Bob Holmes as Will Parker, Bill Shaner as Ali Hakim, Eric Evered as Jud Fry. Louis Pare as Andrew Carnes, Jim Salners as Slim, along with supporting players and ensembles of singers and dancers.

MCT season memberships are now on sale at the theater, ranging from single memberships for single personss and regular memberships for couples, to patron, sponsor, sustaining and benefactor memberships.

"But any cursory reading of the Constitution of the United States would demonstrate that the whole purpose of the judicial system is to protect the citizens from the tyranny of law enforcement officers and soldiers.

"The whole purpose of the courts is to protect citizens' rights from the abuse of authority," Culp said.

And Culp does see abuse, perhaps brought about "through time and some procedural law regulations." He pointed to the grand jury which, he said, "can no longer function to carry out its original function: . . . prevent people from being wrongfully accused of crimes by law enforcement officers, prosecutors and others in authority.

The grand jury, he said, is the "rubber stamp" of the prosecutor. The grand jury hears or examines accusations against a person charged with a crime, may return an indictment against that person, and cause his case to be tried before a jury or judge in a court of law.

The grand jury hears the prosecution's side of the case but not that of the accused, Culp said. "They (grand jurors) only get to hear one side of the case, and that's what the prosecutor wants to tell them.

Accordingly, he said, "The district attorney has a tremendous responsibility to the public, tremendous power, and that should be exercised very cautiously because he has the duty to protect the innocent as well as the potentially guilty.'

Mashburn, who wins a high percentage of cases he brings to trial. does not underrate his responsibility and power as the state's prosecutor.

"I have not yet taken anybody to trial I thought was innocent," he said. The prosecutor has lost some cases. But not to try a case simply because it's not an "absolute cinch" would cause the community to suffer, Mash-burn said. Ideally, he said, a police officer would witness a crime and record the happening with camera and tape recorder. "But cases don't work out that way." It is the prosecutor's

Mashburn was more in agreement than not

"I would prefer to be classified as 'over zealous' rather than 'under zealous,"' he said

"I think it a compliment if they (defense attorneys) think I am over zealous. I try hard in doing my job. If I satisfied every defense attorney, Mashburn said, "then I'm probably not doing my job. I try to be fair and respectful" in court. Mashburn, 39, has been the state's chief prosecutor in Midland County since 1965.

Though possibly zealous, Mashburn said he does not view the grand jury as his "rubber stamp.

He said those serving on the grand jury in Midland County will "not let anybody dictate to them what they are going to do.

"I think that type of statement is awfully trite, meaningless, and demeaning to the people that serve on the grand jury and petty juries," Mashburn said.

Though there may be conflicting opinions on how effectively the judicial system works, that's to be expected in any adversary procedure. observed a courthouse insider.

"If there's any (personality) conflict," he said, "I can't see it

"In our system (of government and justice), you've got to have powers that check other powers . they complement each other, no matter how much they dislike what the other branch is doing. "But it's all a matter of interpretation, and this is election year.

(The posts held by Pickett, 59, and Mashburn are subject to the elections this year. The judge has announced his candidacy for reelection on the Democratic party's ticket. Mashburn, though expected to, has not.)

An often silent conflict called "tension" can be healthy for the judicial system, said Jimmie Oglesby, former county attorney.

'There should always be a certain amount of honest tension between the courts and the police," Oglesby said. 'It's not good for the courts and the police to be bosom buddies.'

And the extreme might be just as detrimental to the judiciary's role in preserving rights of the people. Said Culp:

"Any time you have ill-feeling or a dispute between any branch in the judicial system, (that) is because somebody in the system is not doing his duty or is doing something contrary to the law or contrary to the code of ethics."

Talkative players should feed kitty

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

What can you do about a player who insists on talking during the bidding and play?" asks a reader. "One player in our game will remark 'I'll try a diamond,' when he has a strong hand.

"When he likes his partner's lead. he'll comment 'Now we've got 'em on the run,' but when he doesn't like the lead he'll say 'Is that the best lead you can think of?

Every player in our game has asked him to wait until the hand is over before he says a word. But then he acts hurt and calls us a bunch of club-house lawyers. "What would you do if you had a player like that in your game?

I don't believe in untraceable South American poisons. The old-fashioned blunt instrument is good enough for me. No jury of bridge players would find you guilty.

If, regrettably, violence must be ruled out, talk to the other players and get them to agree. If Mr. Bigmouth comments during the bidding, his partner is to put his hand face down on the table and pass for the rest of that auction. If he comments during the play, his partner is to show his hand face up and concede the rest of the tricks. One or two incidents of this kind will cure the stubbornest case.

The problem is more difficult if the game is very sociable and if the comment is harmless. You don't want to lose a friend, and you don't want to make a Federal case out of a mere misdemeanor. But you still want to silence a chronic offender.

A remedy they use at the Lakeside Country Club, in the Los Angeles area, may work pretty well even in a game at home. A player who makes any comment at all during the bidding or play or who complains about his partner at the end of the hand must drop a dollar into a special kitty. On a good day, this kitty has been known to pay for all the drinks and food at that table. In a home game, it could be divided up at the end of the session or could be used to pay for playing cards and other supplies.

The dollar should go into the kitty even if the remark helps an opponent more than the offender's partner. In today's hand, for example, declarer benefited doubly from a defender's

South took the opening lead with dummy's ace of clubs and drew two rounds of trumps with the ace and king. Then he led a low club toward

After much thought, West remarked: "You tempt me." It was quite clear that he was tempted to

Instead, West correctly discarded a diamond, and dummy won with the queen of clubs. A ruff would have made the hand easy. Declarer would follow with dummy's low club and would eventually discard a diamond from dummy on the king of clubs. He would then use dummy's last trump to ruff a diamond

If West had kept quiet, declarer might have tried to cash the king of clubs and ruff his last club in dummy This plan would work if East had the last trump. South wisely left the clubs alone since he knew where the last trump was. He drew the last trump, getting the nine of spades as a discard from South took the rest of the trumps and the top diamonds, forcing East to bare down to two clubs and two spades. Declarer then cashed the king of clubs and gave East a club trick. The forced spade return gave dummy the last two tricks and the slam

"Why did you have to signal in spades?" West demanded. "He'd have taken a finesse if you'd kept

This complaint cost West an additional contribution to the kitty. He had already paid for his remark about being tempted. It was pleasant and relacing for North and South to win the rubber with a slam and also have a drink at the expense of their talkative opponent.

Castro expanding Cuban Third World involvement

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than 2.000 Cubans are working in about a dozen poor countries far from Cuba's borders as part of a plan to expand Cuban influence in the Third World. U.S. officials report.

The Cubans are scattered across three continents, building schools and hospitals and offering technical assistance and political advice.

In contrast to well-publicized Cuban military involvement in Angola, these Cubans work almost unnoticed by the rest of the world in such countries as Guinea, the Congo, Somalia, Tanzania, Guinea-Bissau, Sierra Leone, Equatorial Guinea, Algeria, South Yemen and Vietnam

Officials here have no estimate on how many of these Cubans are military personnel, but Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger recently suggested the figure is high. Discussing Cuban armed forces at a news conference, he said, "They seem to be everywhere but Cuba."

Prime Minister Fidel Castro last month acknowledged that Cuban military involvement has not been limited to Angola. He told the Cuban Communist Party Congress that the Cuban army had "shed blood more than once in other countries threatened by imperialist

Until a little over a year ago. Cuban tank battalion was based in Syria. But officials say most foreignbased Cubans operating outside Angola, including servicemen, are on peaceful missions. They say these Cubans could be put to good use at home but, as one official said, Castro has never been content to concentrate

He said Castro wants to build up Cuba as the country the Third World looks to for leadership. Another factor, he said, is that Castro finds these farflung ventures nourishing to

Marshall S. McCrea - Executive Vice President and Trust Investment Officer. First National Bank

EMORIAL Jan. 22 lter Roy Scheets. Keith Treadway. n St., boy. Jan. 23 ce Daniel Boyce.

'Trial of century' opens in San Francisco Tuesday

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The clock outside the bank read 9:45 on a bright, cool April morning when a slim young woman with an Army earbine sprinted across the gold

The long black coat and the curly wig did little to hide her identity. To make sure, her name was announced by her heavily armed companions:

Moments later, $10,690 was gone from the bank's cash drawers, two bystanders were shot and Patricia Campbell Hearst had taken the first steps toward becoming the central figure in what one of her lawyers has called "the trial of the century."

The events and pressures that carried Miss Hearst, the victim of the nation's first political kidnaping, into core of the federal trial that is to begin Tuesday.

Soon to turn 22, she is charged with armed bank robbery and use of a firearm to commit a felony. If convicted, the heiress to a newspaper fortune faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $10,000 fine on the first count and 10 years in prison on the second.

Patricia Hearst is the only surviving member of the fiveperson team that witnesses say struck the Sunset branch of the Hibernia Bank on April 15, 1974. The other four died in a shootout with police a month otout with police a month later in Los Angeles.

From the beginning, Miss Hearst appeared cast as the leading player in the carefully orchestrated robbery. intended to be perhaps the finest hour for a ragtag band of revolutionaries — the Symbionese Liberation Army that had kidnaped her on Feb. 4, 1974.

Two months after her kidnaping.

Miss Hearst announced she was joining the SLA. She took the name of Tania, after a mistress of slain revolutionary Che Guevara, as the SLA declared war on "corporate enemies of the people."

Her parents said their daughter was being coerced. As if in answer, the SLA picked a quiet neighborhood bank for its effort to prove that she was indeed a convert.

"She let it be known that she meant business. She had a gun and looked ready to use it," recalled bank guard

Until that moment, Patricia Hearst had been a kidnap victim. Now, she was a fugitive, sought as a material witness to the holdup. Less than two months later, she was indicted on the federal bank robbery charges.

The FBI would spend $5 million and 17 months trying to find her. They finally did, in San Francisco, on Sept.

Miss Hearst's participation in the robbery is not disputed. Bank surveillance cameras snapped more than 1,200 pictures during the three-minute holdup. It took the FBI less than four hours to identify her.

But her motives are very much in dispute. After her capture, she said that she "feared for her life" that day - that the SLA would kill her if she failed to cooperate.

Charles Bates, the FBI agent in charge of the Hearst case, said at the time that pictures taken by the bank's cameras showed that Miss Hearst held a sawed-off semiautomatic carbine but also "there was a gun held by another person on her."

And Miss Hearst's chief attorney. F. Lee Bailey, has said: "We'll have a simple defense - somebody put a gun at my head and I did what they told

But nine days after the robbery, another tape with Miss Hearst's voice surfaced. She said that she had taken part in the robbery willingly.

Four days after her arrest last fall, she signed an affidavit saying she was coerced into participating in the bank robbery. She said she "was instructed by them (her captors) that she must accompany them to the bank; that she must allow herself to be photographed by the bank camera.

"Meanwhile, one of her captors, armed with a gun which was kept pointed at her, kept an eye on her and had told her in advance that if she made one false move she would be killed immediately," declared the affidavit, written in the third person.

Her four companions in the holdup, as identified in federal bank robbery warrants, were Donald DeFreeze. Nancy Ling Perry, Patricia Soltysik and Camilla Hall.

New Schnabel twist develops

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The Charles Schnabel case received anotherjolt Saturday with a copyrighted report in the American-Statesman that the district attorney may have unintentionally resigned last year by accepting campaign contributions.

The Texas Consitution says an officeholder suffers "automatic resignation" if he becomes a candidate for another office more than a year before the end of his term.

The Texas Election Code defines a candidate as anyone who takes "affirmative action" to seek office. It says accepting a contribution "for use in a future election" is affirmative ac-

Dist. Atty. Bob Smith announced for district judge early this month. His term expires next Dec. 31 Smith accepted six campaign contributions totaling $2,450, according to records on file with the secretary of state, which also list $11,056 in campaign expenditures by Smith last

The newspaper quoted Smith as saying the definition of candidate in the election code does not necessarily control what iscontemplated in the constitutional provision. Otherwise, he said, the constitution could be amended by statute. Saturday afternoon, Smith said:

"The term candidate as used in the constitution was put in there obviously to keep people from running in the middle of their four-year term. If they lost, they could run again."

The election code is "for the purpose of reporting campaign contributions and expenditures," he said.

"I felt like if I was going to run for district judge, I needed to make some preparations," he said. "There was no secret." The people he went to knew that was the office he would run for, he said.

"It bolls down to this: I had a choice to run for district judge or not. I chose to run," he said. As a practical matter, he could not run an effective May primary campaign if he waited until January to take the first steps, he Smith said someone would have to file suit to have his office declared to be vacant before the issue could be resolved by the courts.

Smith's opponent, Hume Cofer, said it would be inappropriate for him to file such a suit even if he believed Smith indeed had made a mistake.

Other attorneys reportedly said Smith's actions raise serious legal questions over his subsequent activities as district attorney, including his extensive investigation of Secretary of the Senate Schnabel.

A Travis County grand jury in-dicted Schnabel Dec. 30 on two counts of theft and one count of official misconduct. Since the grand jury, not the district attorney, does returns indictments, presumably they are still good. However, Smith and his investigators presented the evidence to the jury that the indictments are bas-

HOW TO SELECT A REALTOR Experience has proven hat sellers get more for their homes when they sell through a REALTOR, But how does the seller go about selecting the right REALTOR? Ask friends and neighbors who have bought or sold real estate to make recommendations. If they were pleased, it's a good start - but only a start. Call the mortgage officers of a few banks or savings and loan associations. They do business with REALTORS every day and should be candid. Look for evidence of dignified advertising and numerous "For Sale" signs. And when you check the advertised listings see which REALTORS run the greatest

Hey, how about Hadacol Corner?

DALLAS (AP) — Every place had to be called something, even if it was Nakedtop, Va., Opossum, Trot, Tex., or Muckafoone Creek, Ga.

Now an East Texas State University professor who got hooked on place names 15 years ago wants all 50 states to publish a book on the subject during this

Dr. Fred Tarpley, head of the department of literature and languages at the Commerce, Texa school, said in an interview that such a projector would fill a wide gap in the national records of the United States. Some of this information could be lost at forever if we don't get to work on it now. The professor said eventually the list would contain from three to five million place names, including towns, lakes, streams, rivers, oil fields, rock for mations, valleys and schools.

Tarpley, director of the project being sponsored by the American Name Society, said scholar throughout the nation are working to find the true meanings of various names. In Tucson, Ariz., Dr. Byrd Granger of the UA University of Arizona is listening to tapes which

For example, the folks out in a small town in the Big Bend of far West Texas were convinced they had the prettiest sunsets in all of the national and wanteddi that name. But there already was a Sunset, Tex., andog so the residents spelled it backwards and came upes with the community of Tesnus.

Many small towns, Tarpley said, were nothing a more than watering places along the railroad lineast during the movement across the West.

"They might name a community after the engineer on the train, or the conductors, their wives, children and even their pets. These are the things we must discover and preserve for future generation he said.

How else, without this research, would you know that Lively. Tex., was so named because the frequency of dances held in the community caused folks to call it a "lively little place" and then shorten the phrase to the official name?

There is now a move to clean up some of the places names given by the rough and rugged settlers. mountain men, outlaws, and trail drovers.

For example, in Washington there was an Creek. It now is official Sob Creek. Trapley said names which are now considered A racial or ethnic slurs are being changed. Jap Creek has been changed to Japanese Creek; Chink Gulch to Chinese Gulch; Polock Mountain to Polish Mountain and Nigger Ben Hill to Negro Ben Hill. The professor said a nationwide survey of place names will not only be a major step in preserving "something of our heritage, but it will be scientific, literary, historic and linguistic in the findings."

And when the research is done, it may explain with there is still a Smackass Gap, N.C., an Old Woman Gut, Del., and a Wee Wee Hill, Ind.

Campaign slows birth rate on island of Singapore

SINGAPORE (AP) - The birth rate is slowing down in this tiny island-nation where the population density is 9,814 per square mile — 20 times that of India and 40 times that of

The government is in the midst of a campaign to encourage no more than two children per family. A newspaper advertisement shows two smiling children and says, "The more you have the less they get. Two is enough."

Singapore, 226 square miles in area, has 2.2 million people, about half of whom are under 21 years of age. Statistics show the median age is 27 for men and 23 for women.

Because of the youthful citizenry, it is expected to take another 50 years of the two-child family average to achieve zero population growth, or-births equaling the number of deaths, according to Dr. Wan Fook Kee.

Dr. Wan, chairman of the Family Planning and Population Board, said last year's crude birth rate was 17.6 live births per 1,000 population. The Board's target was no more than 18 births per 1,000. Six years ago there were more than 22 births per 1,000 population.

Fewer than 40,000 babies were born in 1975, the fanal year of a five-year plan to restrict population growth. There were 46,000 births annually before 1971, when the plan was launched.

Dr. Wan estimated last year that almost 90 per cent of all married women between 15 and 44 used contranceptives or had been sterilized.

"Contraceptive practice has thus reached practically the saturation point," he said.

Friday's lawsuit is a companion action to a $29.2 million libel suit lodged against Bell by Ashley and the family of T.O. Gravitt, the firm's one-time top executive in Texas who committed suicide in October 1974.

Ashley claimed in the more recent suit that Bell misused the records

while defending itself against the first suit, including checking to see who Ashley was talking to after he was

"As a consequence of Bell's theft of his records," the suit said, "Bell was in a position and did use such position to harass and intimidate such persons involved."

·Named as defendants besides Southwestern Bell were San Antonio Bell vice president and general manager Chester L. Todd and Bell executives David E. Burchett and Joe Cochran.

Todd issued a statement through the Bell public relations office after the suit was filed which said Ashley filed the suit Friday in a desperate effort "to keep his charges alive in the media where no proof and certainly no facts' are required to generate headlines.

SW Bell terms latest Ashley suit vindictive effort

"We have always felt that Ashley's tactics are designed with the intent to damage our reputation in the public eye. This vindictive, revenue-seeking tactic will not work," Todd added.

Ashley and his wife, Bonnie, asked in the suit for $1 million actual damages and $3 million exemplary damages.

"Mr. and Mrs. Ashley assert that confidentiality of long distance records is of the utmost importance.' the lawsuit said. "It is a weapon whereby Bell can destroy a business or individual by release of personal information to his competition ...' Ashley said the records Bell released to its lawyers included calls to Bell employes, other former employes, friends, business associates and confidantes. The lawsuit contended that Todd gave orders to Burchett and Cochran to turn over the Ashley records to Bell's lawyers, which they did.

"There's nothing new in this latest nuisance suit, which is merely part and parcel of the existing suit in federal court," said Todd. "Ashley already is suing us for invastion of privacy. Todd refused to comment on the evidence in the lawsuit, citing a gag order in the original case.

The lawsuit said also: "Mr. and Mrs. Ashley contend that their telephone records, like a banker's or doctor's chart, are private and not subject to release without their knowledge and consent, or a public hearing and subsequent court order." The most recent lawsuit brings to four the number of actions lodged by Ashley or the Gravitt family against Ashley and the Gravitts filed the first $29.2 million suit against Bell shortly after Gravitt killed himself, leaving two suicide notes including the warning that "Watergate is a gnat compared to Southwestern Bell.' That suit was split into two actions, moved from state court to federal coart and is still pending.

Later, Gravitt's widow, Oleta, filed suit to force Bell to give her a pension she said was due on her husband's death. Bell refused citing a pension agreement about making payments while a suit against the company was pending.

A state district court judge awarded the pension to Mrs. Gravitt, but Bell appealed and the appeal is still

President undergoes checkup

WASHINGTON (AP) -President Ford underwent his annual physcial checkup Saturdayand declared:

"I feel fit as a fiddle." "I'm getting healthier every day," the President told reporters after the three-hour examination by a team of doctors at Bethesda Naval Medical Center in suburban Maryland. "No problems," said the White House physician, Dr. William Lukash, in a brief exchange with reporters. Asked if he had passed all his tests, Ford, who is 62, said with a smile, "I think I passed them all with flying colors."

His only problem, he said, was that he was having a little trouble seeing in the sunlight at that moment because of a test in which his eyes were dilated.

The President said the doctors advised him not to change his health habits - "exercise and watch the calories

"I weigh less than I have in 20 years," Ford said. His most recently reported weight was 195 pounds. Asked if the examination proved he was fit for the exhausting presidential campaign ahead, he replied, "It proves I'm fit to be president." Ford, who prides himself on his health, has directed Lukash to make public a detailed report on the medical examination findings. The report is expected in a few days after all test results are in.

Pregnancy note added

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The Miss America Pageant has added a clause to its constitution stipulating that contestants "must not be and never have been pregnant."

The pregnancy clause was adopted "to eliminate the possibility that a contestant could be eligible because she was unmarried, although she was a mother or had been pregnant at some time," pageant director Albert A. Marks said Friday. He said the rule would also apply to abortions.

The new directive was tacked onto a rule which previously said that the contesant "must be single and never have been married or had her marriage annulled." Two years ago the pageant amended its by-laws to prescribe that contestants must be female. "That change was made after several instances across the country when men attempted to enter various events such as contests to select a college homecoming beauty," Marks recalled. AFTAH Printing 694-4373

Multi-family housing declines sharply since 1973

By REP. HENRY S. REUSS

pecial to The Washington Post WASHINGTON — Though public attention has been focused on the difficulties of single-family housing construction over the past few years; multi-family housing construction has suffered worse - down 75 per cent since 1973.

Well-planned multi-family housing uses less land, is cheaper to build, is more efficient to heat, is easier to provide with utilities and is more accessible to jobs.

Chairman William A. Barrett of the subcommittee on Housing and Community Development and I recently urged HUD Secretary Carla Hills to accompany us on a treasure hunt through the housing laws" and draw on a number of revived programs to implement a multi-family housing campaign.

Specifically, we proposed a housing mixture in which ownership-occupied condominiums and cooperatives would have the largest share, with subsidized rental units and apartments for the elderly and handicapped also represented.

Our proposal, we believe, could be realized with funds already appropriated - portions of the $265 million newly available for Section 235 federally insured homeownership assistance; the $15 million just appropriated for Section 802 federal guarantees to state housing finance agencies, and the virtually untouched $1.5 billion for Section 8 leased rental multi-family housing. Why? First, since multi-family projects are on a much bigger scale than single-family home construction, the financial risk is greater. And mortgage interest rates tend to be at least a percentage point higher.

Second, many cities have instituted rent controls. And, in these inflationary times, others seem likely to follow suit. Uncertain of the rate of return on rental properties, investors hesitate.

Third, renters are flexing their muscles these days. Tenant organizations and rent strikes on the collective level; and sheer vandalism - defacing walls, breaking windows, ripping off applicances - on the individual level, make rental properties less at-

Yet the federal government is currently doing almost nothing to make building multi-family units attrac-

Here is how Chairman Barrett and I would use existing programs and funds to get good multi-family lowand moderate-income housing. A site would be chosen either in the inner city, if sufficient vacant land is available, or outside, convenient to job centers, existing public facilities and transportation. Garden apartments, high-rises, low-rises, duplexes, clustered single-family homes would be sited adjacent to open land for a park, garden plots or other recreational purposes. The majority of the units - perhaps 80 per cent - would be Section 235 stead of the traditional rental units. Moderate-income people would buy rather than rent these apartments, and with Section 235 homeownership assistance would end up paying a monthly sum copmparable to rent. while acquiring equity in the bargain. would be kept by the seller. A substantial portion of the gain over that sum would go to HUD to reduce HUD's costs and to keep costs down on subsidized units.

Not only Sec 235 units would be built. Perhaps 15 or 20 per cent of the apartments could be built under the Section 8 leasing program, to ensure a mixture of income levels. Since private investors now have little interest in Section projects, state housing finance agencies, now in being in the majority of state, could finance the project through federallysubsidized bonds, in some cases federallyguaranteed as well, now available under Section 802 of the Housing and Community Develop-

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Tower (R-Tex.) broke from the bipartisan consensus in the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence by opposing the creation of a new intelligence oversight committee as "a premature and simplistic solution."

He urged instead that oversight functions be carried out by the existing subcommittees of the Armed Service Committees of the Senate and House. Tower is second-ranking Republican on the Senate Armed Service Committee. In a statement which ran counter to the majority of his Republican and Democratic colleagues on the committee, Tower said he considered the proposal for a new oversight committee "premature" because President Ford has indicated he will deal with intelligence reorganization issues in a message to Congress.

"It is simplistic," Tower continued, "because it assumes that intelligence activities can be neatly divorced from other activities of the affected agencies and departments ..."

Tower followed a parade of senatorial witnesses before the Senate Government Operations Committee who spoke out in favor of a new oversight committee to curb the abuses of the intelligence community which have reverberated through Washington for more than a year.

Proponents of an oversight committee include Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield (D'Mont.) who first proposed a joint intelligence oversight committee 21 years ago.

The intelligence community, said Mansfield, "will continue a mystery ... unless and until Congress chooses to change its policy and to exert some degree of scrutiny and vigilance, to perform some measure of oversight, to extract a commitment of ongoing accountability."

The majority leader's call for a new oversight panel in the Senate was echoed by Sen. Frank Church (D-Idaho), chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.), chairman of the government operations panel as well as Sens. Howard Baker (R-Tenn.) and Lowell P. Weicker (R-

Mansfield endorsed a provision in the still-secret draft bill of the Senate Intelligence Committee calling for the rotation of one-third of the members of the proposed oversight panel each two years.

He counseled against the creation of a committee "manned by some elite few who gained admission outside the normal selection process

... and in the end so impotent that it would itself become a creature if not an active conspirator within the community over which it must exert scrutiny."

Tower was represented by a spokesman as having growing doubts over the past few weeks of the possibility of establishing a "leakproof" special intelligence committee. "He is apalled at the kind of thing that has been going in Congress the past month, mainly in the House Intelligence Committee," said the Church has argued that the most serious leaks of intelligence material were the CIA or former CIA operatives and not Congressional committees.

The Government Operations Committee began Wednesday several weeks of hearings from members of Congress, administration officials and intelligence experts in the private sector as a testimonial base upon which to draw up insurance oversight legislation.

Compulsory helmet law under attack

By COLMAN McCARTHY

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — A few months ago, a band of angry motorcyclists varoomed their engines and went tooling through Washington on their way to the U.S. Capitol.

The easy and hard riders gained attention for their few hours of impressive revving, but after that they skidded out and vanished.

The issue that brought them here — compulsory helmet laws — has not vanished. Instead, this group and others made their point so well that they now have a number of allies in Congress pushing bills to repeal the law.

The motorcyclists who rode into town that day may have confirmed the prevailing but highly mistaken stereotype of them — beer-busting, leather-jacketed nomads — but in fact the anti-helmet lobby is as sophisticated as any other group out to make its case against government intrusion. The compulsory helmet laws have already involved the courts, Congress and the executive branch; in the months of debate ahead, anyone who uses public highways and pays taxes will have something at stake also.

The argument against forcing the nation's 15 million cyclists to encase their heads was stated by Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) when he instroduced his bill in early September: "The government has no business telling the individual when he can or cannot wear a helmet when only the individual's safety is involved. Even if it is true that helmets reduce traffic injuries and fatalities, the fact remains that the decision to wear a helmet should be left to the individual, using his own judgment and not having the government doing his thinking for him. The individual has a right to be left alone when his actions do not affect the public health, safety, morals, and the general welfare."

Helms on helmets is backed up by other voices; one is that of Roger Hull, the editor of "Road Rider" magazine, who alerted his fellow riders: "Right away we've got to scream our mandatory helmeted heads off to stop the Feds and their murderous 'safety' drive."

The temptation in arguing against Helms, Hull and those for whom they speak is to equate them with the Hells Angels mystique. The screaming Mr. Hull aside, the temptation should be resisted. Otherwise the dialogue becomes so emotional that logic and facts count for little and useless "sides" are created:

for or against the motorcycle.

Anti-motorcycle propaganda is based on any number of cliches, forged from isolated personal experiences in which a cyclist was rude, noisy or law-breaking. Actually, motorcycles are a low-cost, low-polluting and low-energy means of transportation, with many citizens using them in high rationality because they have had it with high-cost, high-polluting and high-energy cars. No one has ever documented that motorcyclists are either more surly or more enlightened than anyone else on the nation's highways.

In coming to Congress to repeal the compulsory helmet laws, motorcyclist groups have a record of failure in the state legislatures. The odds against them in the states — all but three have helmet laws — is high because repealing can be costly. The DOT is authorized to withdraw all federal highway safety funds and 10 per cent of highway construction money if a state repeals the mandatory law. This may lead writers in the motorcycle magazines to blast "the feds" but the government cannot be charged with picking aimlessly on this group.

In one recent California study — financed in part by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety — severe head injuries were said to have accounted for 12 per cent of the injuries observed but to have represented half the fatalities. Another institute study of vehicles in fatal crashes found that motorcycles have "markedly higher rider death rates than other vehicles — threeand-a-third times those of the smallest car. The high rate of involvement of motorcycles in fatal crashes per years registered is especially worthy of note because their average exposure, in terms of miles traveled, is substantially less than that of cars and trucks.

Many who oppose the mandatory law concede the dangers of motorcycling and acknowledge that the unseasoned and the untrained are especially vulnerable to killing themselves and others. That isn't the issue, they say. Instead, as a recent editorial in The Richmond News Leader argued, "No government should succumb to the superficially seductive argument of paternalistic protectionists forever declaiming their commitment to 'safety.' Taking care of one's self is the self's — not the government's

That is the essence of the case against mandatory helmet use, articulated by everyone from senators like Jesse Helms to such motorcycle groups as ABATE (A Brotherhood Against Totalitarian Enactments). It is an appealing case, perhaps, but not an especially strong one.

Motorcyclists may boldly tell helmet law advocates to mind their own business — the 'I-have-a-right-to-kill-myself' argument — but this overlooks the fact that the helmet advocates may not be worried at all about the safety of the cyclists; they are concerned with losses other than the cyclists' life

This position was expressed in a 1972 decision by a federa district court in Massachusetts which upheld the constitutionality of the state's helmet law: "While we agree with plaintiff that the act's only realistic purpose is the prevention of head injuries in-curred in motorcycle mishaps, we cannot agree that the consequences of such injuries are limited to the individual who sustains the injury ... The public has an interest in minimizing the resources directly involved. From the moment of the injury, society picks the person up off the highway; delivers him to a municipal hospital and municipal doctors; provides him with unemployment compensation if, after recovery, he cannot replace his lost job, and if the injury causes permanent disability, may assume the responsibility for his and his family's subsistence. We do not understand a state of mind that permits plaintiff ot think that only he himself is concerned."

point make a reassessment of my life.

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post
PLAINS, Ga. — If Jimmy Carter should be catapulted from a brick house in ths town of 572 people to the White House in Washington, D.C., he would be a decisive, energetic and controversial president, in the opinion of those who have watched his career

Some of these same people say he would also bring to the job a monumental ambition, without which he would never have undertaken a seemingly impossible quest. For by the previous standards of presidential politics, Carter has nearly every strike against him: he is unknown to most of the U.S. public, unpopular with a substantial number of politicians and citizens of his own state, lacks a wide acquaintenceship or natural base of support within the Democratic Party, and has never spent a day in political office in Washington.

THE SURPRISING things is that it appears that as of today, he does have a chance for the presidential nomination - and in some calculations, a substantial chance. In recent weeks he has scored high in straw poll sentiment among Democrats in several key states. Rival politicians and the news media are giving him serious attention.

The self-confident Carter himself has spoken to startled reporters of "my inaugural address" and the programs planned for "the first year of my administration." On a more practical level, he recently purchased a buffer zone of land around his home and plans a zoning code for his tiny South Georgia town to control souvenir shops and commercial developers " when I am president.

A more likely possibility, in the opinion of political observers, is that Carter could become vice president next year. "If he's the David who slays the George Wallace Goliath in Florida - or even the David who starts the Wallace slide - he will have earned the right to the vice presidential nomination," an impartial Democrat-watcher said. Carter has said he is not running for vice president but indicated he will take the VP nomination if asked.

The image of Carter is that of an easygoing Southern farmer with a homespun manner and a ready grin, so much "the candidate of the common man" that his nickname, Jimmy, is on all his campaign literature and will be submitted for all the ballots. Beneath the surface, people ho know him say, is another set of attributes - a keen, disciplined intellect which propelled him close to the top of his class at the U.S. Naval Academy, a fierce determination and unshakable certitude about his own deci-

"He's one of the kindest people I know but he's stubborn," said his mother, "Miss Lillian," describing her son in the terms of paradox often used by se who know him well. "He is like a beautiful cat with sharp claws."

WHAT DRIVES Jimmy Carter? How and why does he run? What have been his characteristic ways of seeking and utilizing power? For clues to the answers - and to his probably behavior in the White House if he should become President - searchers go to his early life and the pattern-setting activities of his rise in Georgia politics.

James Earl Carter Jr. has roots deep in the soil of his native place — a tie to land and setting that pulls him back almost every weekend to this out-of-theway town, to the despair of his campaign schedulers. He comes back, he says, becasue he can't really feel at home in any other place.

The Carters have lived and farmed near Plains in Southwest Georgia for 150 years. Jimmy's father was a self-made businessman (peanut processing and warehousing) in Plains, a civic leader and state legislator. His mother, "Miss Lillian," is a remarkable woman of broad interests who went to India as a Peace Corps volunteers nurse 10 years ago, at age 67. Jimmy's wife, Rosalynn, also a native of Plains, is the daughter of a mechanic. Her mother still works at the local Post Office.

Young Jimmy decided even before grammar school to set his sights on the U.S. Naval Academy at Annapolis, and consciously pursued this goal during his school years. Appointed as planned by the local congressman in 1942, Carter was set back by a doctors' report that he was underweight for the Navy and had flat feet. He stuffed himself with bananas and methodically rolled his arches on Coca-Cola bottles for many hours every week to pass the test.

Carter finished 59th among 820 in his Annapolis class in 1946, and served on surface ships and submarines before joining Adm. Hyman Rockover's staff to do engineering work on the first nuclear submarines. When his father was stricken with cancer in 1953 he abandoned his Naval career and came home to Plains and take over the family peanut farm

CARTER RAN for state senate in 1962 in a race that marked his emergence as an independent figure and left a deep impression on his political thinking. Early that year, the U.S. Court of Appeals had loosened the hold of Georgia's courthouse cliques by striking down the state's "county unit" voting system. Carter cast himself as a champion of the people against still-entrenched politicians, a convic-tion reinforced when voting irregularities and a stuffed ballot box in a small county gave a narrow victory to his opponent. Assisted by a team of lawyers and a barrage of stories from The Atlanta Journal where his cousin had been an editor - Carter succeeded in having the tainted ballots invalidated to give him the election victory.

The race in the contested county was part of a larger contest for power between rival courthouse factions. Carter ignored this facet and has called his race "a classical struggle against the darker forces of politics ... almost a crusade." From that time forward the sandy-haired, blue-eyed Carter has campaigned in politics as an "anti-politician."

Friend and foe alike are struck with Carter's unshakable confidence in his own initiatives and causes, a certitide that some have interpreted as ordering on zealotry. Atlanta attorney Charles Kirbo. Carter's lawyer in the 1962 vote fraud case and his senior adviser ever since, attributes Carter's sureness about himself to "absolute confidence in his relationship to God." It is to some extent a semireligious faith in the "rightness" of his cause.

Asked whether he feels a "sense of mission," Carter says, "I don't feel that God wants me to be president and therefore I'm going to be president ... I o-have a feeling, based on my religious belief, that whatever talent or ability or opportunity I have ought to be expended in an optimum way to serve God and my fellow man. My prayer quite often is that this is what my life will be.

AFTER THREE years in the state senate Carter began running for Congress, a year ahead of the election, but shifted to the governor's race at the last minute when the leading Democratic candidate was delined by a heart attack. In a whirlwind of handshaking and speechmaking he made a good first im-pression on a statewide public that barely had heard of him. Only a few days after his defeat in the 1966 Democratic primary, Carter began laying out a systematic four-year drive to win the statehouse in 1970, and immediately began his unannounced cam-

Using techniques much repeated in his current presidential drive, Carter began early and traveled without letup to every corner of the state, shaking hands, making friends and building a grassroots Carter claims to have made reorganization of the federal structure, modeled 1,800 speeches in the four-year campaign and shaken after his state government reorganization in the hands of 600,000 people - more than half the Georgia. He has also promised to undertake comnumber of Georgians who vote.

As in his race for president, he made it a rule to agriculture, energy and transportation within a year shun hotels and stay overnight in the homes of sup- of taking office. porters. The overnight visits, sometimes on a spare sofa, cemented personal relations with his flattered

The political strategy of his 1970 campaign was controversial, and gave rise to charges of expediency against Carter. Carter's hired pollster, William R. Hamilton, reported in September 1969 (a year before the Democratic primary) that former governor Carl Sanders was ahead 2-to-1 because of his excellent public rating for performance in office, but faced "a slight problem with his liberal image." Carter was advised to make his play to the George Wallace voters - "the middle and lwoer middle class whites who feel they've been pushed around, and the ones who'll vote for an average man because 'he understands us.' Hamilton recommended against a racist appeal, noting that Carter "can pick up that part of Middle America that is racist by talking bout other issues.'

Carter followed the Hamilton blueprint. He charged Sanders with refusing to invite Wallace to Georgia while governor in order to please "a group of ultraliberals, particularly those in Washington" and pledged that he would invite Wallace if elected. Calling himself a conservative and "basically a redneck," Carter emphasized his kinship with working people.

Television commercials filmed a year in advance showed Carter harvesting peanuts at his farm and asked, "Can you imagine any of the other candidates for governor working in the hot August sun?" Without any mention of racial views Carter praised the segregationist incumbent governor Lester Maddox for his "forthright expression and personal honesty" and declared that "I expect to have particularly strong support from the people who voted for George Wallace for president and the ones who voted for Lester Maddox (for governor).

On election day he won the bulk of the Wallace-Maddox vote. But on Inauguration Day in Atlanta, Carter stunned many supporters by announcing that 'the time for racial discrimination is over." He proclaimed a non-discrimination policy in state employment, appointed many blacks to state office and hung a portrait of the Rev. martin Luther King Jr. on the previously lilywhite walls of the capitol. All this was in keeping with his largely unknown record in his home town, where he refused to join the White Citizens' Council and urged acceptance of blacks in the Baptist Church.

Carter never said during the campaign he was a segregationist, but he didn't disabuse those who assumed he was. His campaign was later publicly excused by Sen. Leroy Johnson, a senior black leader, because "you have to do that to win." But Lester Maddox never forgave the turnabout, and now calls Carter "the most dishonest man I've ever

AS GOVERNOR Carter was independent, innovative and controversial. His major drive was extensive reorganization of state government, devised by 21 teams of experts including many he personally recruited. Carter digested and acted on each of 252 recommendations and special reports from his study groups, ranging from a vast and troubled Depart-Human Resources to operation of farmers' markets and sweet potato houses. After mighty struggles with the legislature and some state office holders, most of his plans were put into effect.

Because of his highly independent ways and tendency for public confrontation to bring pressure on the legislature, Carter was unpopular with many fellow politicians. "Jimmy never learned the three guiding rules of politics - reward your friends. punish your enemies and then make up with enemies," said a former legislative supporter who wishes him well.

According to political enemies of Carter in Georgia who insist on anonymity, he can be abrasive, unfeeling and even ruthless to those who are blocking his way. "He's totally egocentric ... If you're not with him, he will cut your throat," said a politician who had bitter experiences. A more detached but hardeyed political figure observed, "Politicians don't like him because he doesn't like them. Who does he like? Anybody who can further his intense ambition."

In December 1974, his last full month as governor. Carter formally announced his candidacy for president. He already had a plan in his pocket for 250 days of travel outside Georgia in 1975.

CARTER'S STYLE of low-key personal charm and ready smile has served him well in his presidential campaign, and would be powerful assets should he reach the White House. Those who have watched the charm and smile in action often say Carter could surely be elected if he had but the chance to speak to the entire electorate one by one, or in small groups. Though not yet a practiced performer in the art, television offers him something akin to the chance if he has enough access to it.

In his campaign, among Carter's major themese are the need for restoration of public confidence in government and for an infusion of the popular will in high circles to merit that confidence. His major

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) - Carl Sawatski, general manager of the Arkansas Travelers baseball team, was named president Saturday of the Class AA Texas League, replacing Bobby Bragan.

Sawatski, 48, was chosen during a meeting of league team owners here. He will take over immediately and the league's offices will be moved from Fort Worth to Little Rock, Ark.

Bragan served six years as president of the league.

Sawatski retired as an active baseball player in 1963. He was a journeyman catcher for the Chicago Cubs, the Chicago White Sox, the Milwaukee Braves, the Philadelphia Phillies and the St. Louis Cardinals.

Jim Paul, general manager of the El Paso Sun Devils, was named league vice president, taking the post vacated by Sawatski.

Golf Tournament

But when Nicklaus finished playing the 18th, when the cold, windy day's actitity was over, the positions had been reversed. Nicklaus led Morley by one stroke.

Nicklaus, the 1975 Player od the Year making his first start of the season, birdied the last two holes—one after the TV cameras had left the action. Morley bogeyed once, missing the green after the cameras had left the air.

It was a two-stroke swing and put Nicklaus in commanding position in his quest for a fourth Crosby title.

"My swing kind of got away from me in the middle of the round. And I wasn't putting very well. I had a lot of chances I didn't make." Nicklaus

"Obviously, I'm very pleased to be leading the golf tournament, but I'm still not as certain as I should be. I'm a little apprehensive. I don't have the total confidence you get in the middle of the season.

He had a third-round 70, two under par, and put together a 54-hole total of 209. Morley, a non-winner in six years of tour activity, had a 71 and a 210

Australian David Graham fought Wasington, who led UCLA's 86-70 his way to a 73 he characterized as victory over Notre Dame three weeks 'conservative," and was in third ago with 24 points, scored 16 in the place at 211.

Dave Hill, the second-round leader slipped to a wind-blown 76 and fell back to 212, three off the pace. He was tied with Ben Crenshaw, who had a 70.

Little Bud Allin managed a 71 and was next at 213.

Graham, Hill and Crenshaw all played out of range of the cameras at Spyglass Hill, one of three Monterey Peninsula courses used for the first three rounds of this unique event.

Hill, who had shot a 65 the day before, had only one birdie and put three sixes on his card.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - "More than anything else, being in the Pro Bowl is fun," said Merlin Olsen, who makes his 14th appearance in the National Football League classic here

Monday night. Other players and officials agree. There's not much tension, quite a bit of money - and always the lure of Bourbon Street, with its honky-tonks, restaurants and partytime atmosphere. This year, there's also the attraction of playing in the new Louisiana Superdome, the airconditioned, carpeted, indoor sports palace that's caused so much despair among its politician-builders and so much delight among fans and

For most players, the fun starts the minute they hit town and is interrupted only by the daily one-hour practice sessions. They're relaxed, no-pads sessions and players do little more than rehease already well-

When they're not practicing with the players they spend their entire careers trying to beat, the Pro Bowlers are the guests of the NFL at New Orleans Jazz basketball games, Fair Grounds horse racing and steamboat rides up the Mississippi

Reservations to restaurants and nightspots are handled by the NFL, which also picks up the tab.

And for most players, earning a spot on the Pro Bowl means a bonus of up to $5,000. That's over and above what the player is paid for competing - $2,000 for winning, $1,500 for losing, although some teams have eliminated the fee from star players' contracts.

There's also a first-class airline ticket to New Orleans, room and board in a downtown or French Quarter hotel and a hardly-staggering $25 for incident expenses during the week.

"The players particulary enjoy New Orleans," one NFL official said. "They like it a lot better than Miami, which surprised a lot of us. "They seem to appreciate its compact nature and the fact that you don't have to walk far or take an expensive cab ride to the action," he

"And, after all, this game is supposed to be a reward, to be fun." The American Conference leads the National Conference in the series three games to two. The NFC won last

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP)- Princeton, the nation's top defensive team, played keepaway basketball and upset ninthranked St. John's 58-55 in overtime Saturday in a regionally televised game. St. John's overcame a ninepoint Tiger first-half several minutes in the second half, controlled the ball throughout the five-minute overtime. Armond Hill hit a driving jumpshot and added a free throw to give Princeton its final margin. St. John's is 14-2. Its only other loss was to top-

International tennis ups prize money to $5 million

LONDON (AP) - The international tennis Grand Prix circuit will carry $5 million in prize money in 1976, a 30 per cent increase. But it will be more difficult for the fans to follow what's to going on.

The 50 or so tournaments that make up the circuit will be divided into six bagrades this year instead of four, and each one has a different system for be awarding points that result in the of year-end championship.

A player will get 160 points for winning Wimbledon, Forest Hills or the French championships, but only on tournaments. The object is to get into the top eight of the Grand Prix standings and win an automatic place in the rich Masters Tournament at the end of the year.

Geoff Mullis, who runs the Grand Prix for the sponsors, said the Masters will be in the United States this year, but the site has not yet been decided. He has recently been in America looking at indoor stadiums in Atlanta and Houston.

Mullis said 43 per cent of the Grand Prix prize money is for tournaments in Europe, 32 per cent goes to United States events and 25 per cent to other parts of the world. This is a boost for the sagging European circuit, which has lost a lot of its top players to World Team Tennis.

'Top class women's tennis is almost confined to the United States," Mullis said. "I think the same thing would have happened in men's tennis if it had not been for the Grand Prix." Mullis agreed the formula has become more complicated.

"In fact this was a decision of the World Professional Tennis Council, and I was opposed to it," he said. "I wanted to keep it simpler for the manin the-street to follow. There were others who agreed with me, but we were outvoted.

So now the Grand Prix points will be distributed like this:

Triple crown (French championships, Wimbledon, Forest Hills): winner 160 points, runner-up 120, semi-finalists 80, quarter-finalists 40.

5-Star (tournaments with $150,000 prize money); winner 120, runner-up 90, semi-finalists 60, quarter-finalists

4-Star ($125,000 prize money) winner 100, runner-up 75, semifinalists 50, quarter-finalists 25.

3-Star ($100,000 prize money): winner 80, runner-up 60, semifinalists 40, quarter-finalists 20.

2-Star ($75,000 dollars prize money): winner 60, runner-up 45, semi-finalists 30, quarter-finalists 15.

1-Star ($50,000 prize money): winner 40, runner-up 30, semifinalists 20, quarter-fnalists 10.

Four five-star events are listed on the calendar-the Italian championships in May and tournaments at Boston in August, Woodlands, Tex. (doubles only) in September, Tehran in October and Stockholm in committee votes on the other two berths, based generally on the overall record, so this league could have five teams qualify, especially as evenly balanced as it is. "The people over at Schreiner screamed because they had a better overall record, but they didn't feel they had played that tough a Cardinal points out the drawback is that the eastern conference has more people and they can be swayed very easily, "Still only two teams over their have overall winning records this year, Cooke County and McLennan Community College.

NMMI CONCLUDED a sensational week, following a win over Western Texas with a 72-67 victory over South Plains College Thursday to boost its season's record to 15-2.

"We had South Plains down by 13 with 10 minutes to go and with two to go it was down to two before we pulled away," Cardinal said.

The secret to the success of the Roswell, N.M., team's game is discipline. "We lead the conference in defense and the 67 points SPC scored against us was 30 below their average. They only got behind us twice on the fast break, so I really don't feel we gave them any cheap

Baseball losing stability

(Second of a series)

Baseball has been and is one of the most stable endeavors in all the professional sports, but owners are claiming that the climate is changing after a certain ruling by an arbitrator in December attacked baseball's controversial reserve clause.

The reserve clause, which appears on every player's contract, simply states that management can renew a player's contract unilaterally year after year, indefinitely. This, in effect, binds a player to a club as long as that club wants his services.

It has been a sore spot between management and the player's association for years, but the players got a break on December 23.

Peter Seitz, who is an arbitrator on contract problems between owners and players, ruled that pitchers Dave McNally of the Montreal Expos and Andy Messersmith of the Los Angeles were free agents after they had completed their obligation to their employers by playing the 1975 season without signing contracts.

Owners shouted that Seitz exceeded his authority, and had no right to rule on the legality of the reserve clause, which has been ingrained into the baseball system.

WITH THE Seitz ruling, players can become free agents by fullfilling their contract with the club and by playing one additional option year where the club can decide to let him go or keep him for that year.

The owners fired Seitz and Ewin Kauffman, owner of the Kansas City Royals, filed suit for himself and the other 23 owners.

The case fell into Judge John W Oliver's lap. Oliver, of the U. S. District Court in Kansas City, has promised a ruling by next Friday, but the stakes in the game at hand are so high that an immediate appeal is certain. It probably won't be decided for a long while.

In the meantime, players and owners are showing scant prospects of accord on a new Basic Agreement between management and the Major League Players' Association. No one wants to be too hasty on any written agreements at this stage with the verdict still out.

As a result, spring camps may not open on time, and there is a possibility that the season may have another belated start.

The first result of the Seitz' ruling is already being felt by the owners. American League President Lee MacPhail says that signed contracts are coming in very slowly, compared with other years.

Most of the players feel that if the Seitz ruling stands, longer term

DURHAM, N.C. (AP)-The Board of Trustees of the American Football Coaches Association strongly protested Saturday the failure of the NCAA to extend the deadline for limits on football coaching staffs.

contracts and higher salaries will result. Owners say that if the ruling stands, a flood of free agents will appear on the baseball market that could spark a bidding war, which would prove ruinous to the game. They still have visions of the Catfish Hunter case, who was given over $3 million after being declared a free

NCAA meeting no cure all

By PAUL ATTNER The Washington Post

St. LOUIS, Mo. - Delegates came to the annual National Collegiate Athletic Association convention determined to solve all the major problems that have plagued college athletics the past half decade. Instead, they wound up with some new headaches that may prove even more troublesome.

The major schools wanted reorganization smaller schools wanted fewer rules that infringe on institutional autonomy. The medium-sized schools wanted to establish a stronger position within the organization.

What they all got was a major debate over the merits of awarding scholarships according to the financial need of the athlete and an extraordinary power display by a number of college presidents. who previously had considered the NCAA hardly

MOST OF the NCAA's influential schools want no part of need scholarships or of meddling by presidents in what athletic officials believe are affairs the presidents do not fully understand.

Both, however, are here to stay. "There are going to be a lot more presidents in attendance next year, and I think that means 'need' will pass," said Alan Williams, Virginia's faculty representative. "It's amazing. 'Need' wasn't even an issue until this

As much as veteran delegates hate to admit it, the presidents are in control. They are their institutions official representatives to the NCAA, but long have delegated their voting authority to an athletic director or faculty representative. But they can take back that vote any time, and about 80 presidents did so. Just two years ago, only two presidents came to the convention.

Although schools in Division III already have passed a need rule (effective in 1979), the major schools fear it. They have built their empires on freeride scholarships, where the schools pay for everything, and they feel threatened by a switch to

THE TYPE of need scholarships the NCAA almost approved, the proposal lost only 120-112, is really a modified version of what the Ivy Leagues now offer. An athlete, under the proposal, would have his tuition and any mandatory fees paid by the college. The rest of his college expenses (such as room and board and supplies) that now are allowed under a free ride would be paid for on the basis of need. His parents would fill out a confidential financial statement and the NCAA, using a complex formula, would determine how much money the applicant should get.

Austrians take no chances

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP) - Nearly 5,000 specially trained Austrian police and Army soldiers are being brought into this beautiful capital of winter sport in an attempt to insure that terrorist attacks do not mar the upcoming Olympic Games.

Police officials, aware of what happened at the 1972 Summer Games when Arab terrorists attacked the Israeli athletes in the Olympic Village, are confident they can protect athletes and prominent spectators from attacks during the Feb. 4-15 Winter

There will be more than two policemen and soliders for every participant and official, and the sight of steel-helmeted, machine-gun carrying men throughout the Games' sites will not give this spectacle a scene of peace and calm. But officials believe that is better than risking a terrorist attack.

Still, organizers acknowledge that safety cannot be guaranteed for Nordic sportsmen who will live outside the sealed-off, high-rise Olympic Village, located on the edge of this city. About 350 Olympic atheletes and team

Bass mark weathers years

By GREG AKINS

STATE RECORD LARGEMOUTH BASS CAUGHT, 13 pounds eight ounces.....That was the fishing news, January, 1943. In the following 33 years, fisherman have been looking for that magic weight, 13 pounds nine ounces. As yet, there has not been a bass equal to this weight recorded.

Of course, the intriguing possibility is that a fish this large may have been caught, but not recorded. The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is aware of a 13 pound bass caught from a private lake in West Texas which s within a half pound of the record and never officially recorded. There may have been more, and probably were.

Information on trophy fish has become a useful tool of the Parks and Wildlife Department fisheries bass, 20 pounds; rainbow trout, 2 biologist. In order to obtain this information, the P&WD has instituted a Fish Award Program to recognize fishermen who catch fish above the P&WD standards.

The program covers 14 species of fresh and saltwater fish. The following is a list of these, along with the minimum weight for each:

Spotted Seatrout, 7 pounds; redfish, 25 pounds (from the Gulf of Mexico); redfish, 14 pounds (from bays); black drum, 35 pounds; southern flounder, 6 pounds; largemouth bass, 8 pounds; crappie (black and white), 3.5 pounds; white bass, 4 pounds; channel catfish, 15 pounds; blue catfish, 40 pounds; flathead catfish, 60 pounds; walleye, 12 pounds; striped pounds. To qualify for the award, you must hook and land the fish by yourself; have it weighed on a scale certified by the Texas Department of Agriculture; and send a witnessed statement of weight along with the application.

The applications are available from P&WD offices and license deputies (most sporting good stores, marinas,

The Permian Bass Club held their first tournament of 1976 at Oak Creek Lake January 10 & 11. Cool weather and good fishing was reported and an enjoyable time was had by all.

Cruse hit his jump shots from the top of the key while Bradford, subbing for Tim Orr who had four fouls, hit two field goals and five-out-of-five free tosses to spark the third period

Cruse, a 5-9 senior, led Cooper with 17 points followed by Bradford and oger Ridlehoover with 13 and 12 points, respectively.

GOOD BY JOHN REDDELL

As we say good by, we want to say thank you for a job well done. We want to say thank you for a football program that has made Midland High School competitive to the limit of the ability that we have possessed. We want to say thank you for a program that has been fun for the players and fans alike.

For those of us whose young men have been touched by your wonderful influence, you will be greatly missed. Throughout District 5-4A, coaches, athletes and sports fans who have responded to your keen sense of values and to your reputation for fair play will surely miss you

We regret that there have been those in our community who have not recognized the brilliant luster of the precious gem that we once possessed. We regret that there have been those within a position to have made your stay more enjoyable, and perhaps even lasting, who have not fully appreciated the high moral standards and unselfish qualitites that you have demonstrated both on and off the playing field.

Is it because of indecision and prolonged procrastination that our town has lost perhaps the finest high school football coach in Texas, and a firstclass citizen as well? We would only hope that someday, when our house is put in order, our paths may cross again. OUR HOUSE MUST BE PUT IN OR-

ABA stars to clash

DENVER (AP) - What possibly could be the last All-Star game in the history of the financially wobbly American Basketball Association will be played Tuesday night following allimportant meetings of the Board of Trustees that hopefully will decide in what direction the league is headed.

Reduced in size from 10 teams to seven and from two divisions to one this season by the rapid demise of its Baltimore, San Diego and Utah franchises, and with its Virginia club still experiencing serious money difficulties, the ABA's Board of Trustees will try and thrash out the numerous problems plaguing the league.

The trustees will meet Monday, after the league's various committees—on merger, expansion, et-c.—gather Sunday for- separate sessions to formulate their suggestions.

Then they will discuss either going ahead with plans for the 1976-77 season or folding. Of course, they also will talk about the possibility of merger with the rival National Basketball Association, but such a possibility is dependent upon the outcome of the NBA Players Association lawsuit preventing the joining of the leagues.

Commissioner Dave DeBusschere said there's still a chance for merger with the NBA, but he doesn't think it will happen by next season. "I believe the ABA will operate next season as an independent league," he said.

"The ABA has suffered a lot of setbacks," said DeBusschere. "There have been a lot of crises this season. We've lost a tremendous amount of credibility. That's what we have to our product, of our show. It's as good, if not better, than the NBA." The ABA will put on its annual mid-sason show, the AllStar game, Tuesday night at 11:30 p.m. EST in new McNichols Arena, where earlier this season a league record crowd of 17,298 watched the hometown Nuggets 4play the New York Nets.

This time, under the All-Star format adopted after the loss of the three franchises, the firstplace Nuggets will face a collection of the rest of the league's best players. In the past, it had been East vs. West.

The All-Stars' starting lineup will have Julius Erving of New York and Billy Knight of Indiana at forward. Artis Gilmore of Kentucky at center. and James Silas of San Antonio and Brian Taylor of New York at guard.

In reserve will be forwards Marvin Barnes of St. Louis, Maurice Lucas of Kentucky and Larry Kenon of San Antonio, center Billy Paultz of San Antonio and guards Ron Boone of St. Louis, George Gervin of San Antonio and Don Buse of Indiana.

Kevin Loughery of the second-place New York Nets and the winning coach in last year's All-Star game in which the East trounced the West 151-124 at San Antonio, will coach the All-Stars.

Reportedly, the Virginia team has been kept alive by money from Utah interests who are hopeful of regaining a franchise.

"The prospects of Virginia finishing the season are good," said a league source. "But the team's fate will be determined at the meetings. The through the rest of the season, not just

Veeck's Sox, they'll change

CHICAGO - If there's something you don't like about the Chicago White Sox, just stick around. It could change

Who said baseball is steeped in tradition and never changes? Have you checked the latest news from the White Sox? Any resemblance between the White Sox of 1975 and the White Sox of 1976 will be purely coincidental. It all started with Bill Veeck becoming their owner. At age, 61 becoming their owner. At age 61, when many men are thinking about retirement, Veeck needed some excitement — and perhaps a challenge. What better challenge than the White

Veeck wasted no time changing his team. And the White Sox are in need team. And the White Sox are in need of many changes when you consider they finished 22 1-2 games off the pace in 1975. The same day the American League owners welcomed Veeck into their select group. Veeck disposed of 37-year-old pitcher Jim Kaat, the top winner for the Sox this year with a 20-bit record. 14 record.

Before the week was over, Veeck also parted with such mainstays as Bill Melton and Ken Henderson. And all that happened in Veeck's first week on the job. Even Cardinal general manager Bing Devine would have trouble keeping up with that pace.

DON UNFERTH, traveling secretary for the White Sox, stated the obvious in a recent conversation at White Sox Park. "Bill has lost none of his pep — and I was here in 1959, too," Unferth said. "I think Bill will make some more trades."

Unferth is wearing more than one hat these days. He was speaking as tne team's interim publicity director. Buck Peden used to have that job, but he quit to take the same job with the Chicago Cuba after Veeck took con-

"It was a surprise to me that Buck left." Unferth commented. "I don't know what was behind it. The Cubs got a good man." Chuck Shriver used to be the Cubs' mouthpiece. He' might succeed Peden. Shriver has been hired by a Michigan Avenue public relations firm, which happens to be an investor in the group that bought the White MAYBE VEECK has more imrtant things on his mind than the publicity director. Like the park.

"They're going to eliminate the AstroTurf," Unferth said of the infield. "And they'll possibly take the temporary fence down in center field.

That would make it 440 feet in center

"That means we'll have to have an outstanding center fielder. Whether he hits won't matter. We'd like to have somebody in center along the lines of Jim Landis, Ken Berry or Jim

So what did the White Sox do? They hired Busby. Unfortunately, Busby is 48. Plans call for him to be a coach rather than the center fielder. But who knows what might happen if Veeck gets bored next summer?

Veeck might want to relive 1959, when Busby was an active player.

VEECK COULD be accused of living in the past when he selected his manager. He hired 67-year-old Paul Richards who last managed (Baltimore) in 1961. He was the White Sox manager from 1951-54. Richards is hardly a part of the White Sox youth

What kind of a team will Richards field? One with many new faces.

Unferth speculated on what could be the 1976 lineup and came up with the following possibilities: first base - Jim Spencer (who hit .266 in 1975); second base - Jorge Orta (.304); third base - Alan Bannister (.262); shortstop — Bucky Dent (.264); outfielders — Carlos May (.271), Morris Nettles (.231), Nyls Nyman (.226) or Pat Kelly (.274); catcher — Brian Downing (.240); designated hitter — Ralph Garr (.278).

IF THOSE averages fail to impress, you won't like the home run totals, either. Of those players mentioned, Spencer and Orta had the most home runs last season — 11 apiece. Orta was the runs-batted-in leader with 83. Dent was next with 58. Hardly a potent attack.

Pitchers? Unferth said the starters could come from the following: Wilbur Wood (16-20), Jesse Jefferson (5-11), Claude Osteen (7-16), Bart Johnson (injured) and Terry Forster (3-3) or Rich Gossage (9-8). Bullpen work could be left to Forster or Gossage, Dave Hamilton (7-7) and Clay Carroll (7-5).

The pitching staff is likely to change before the season opens. May could be used as trade bait. In view of all the changes, will Unferth be retained? "Every indication points to me being back," he replied. "I hope so, I think I'll have the same role. I hope I don't have any more duties."

McCAMEY-The Reagan County Owls clinched at least a tie for District 7-AA's first half cage title here Friday night with a 47-41 victory over the McCamey Badgers. Reaching that first half tie was rewarding enough in itself, but the Owls were not terribly impressive. They ended up hitting in spurts, which staked them to large leads on two different occasions, but it should have been easier against the outmanned Badgers, who kept scrapping until the final tick of the clock. The victory upped Reagan County's season mark to 15-9, but more importantly, it gave them a perfect 3-0 reading in district play with only Ozona left to play in the first half. McCamey fell to 13-10 and 2-1, and will battle Crane Tuesday in a final effort to stay alive.

"We looked like a bunch of dogs out there, didn't we?" Reagan County coach Jack Kiser lamented after the game. "I never felt like we were going to lose the game, but we sure didn't play very well. I'm just glad we got this one under our belts.

McCamey held its only lead of the night at the 7:20 mark of the first period when Clifton Pettis hit the first basket of the night, but the Owls flooded the Badgers with what looked like was going to be a dazzling shooting performance. Reagan County's Phillip Schneeman tied the game at two and Mark Edwards cut loose with two perfect bombs while Jennings Teel countered with a layup and a bomb for a quick 10-2, eight point lead. The

The Owls looked like they were going to blow the Badgers out of the gym, but again, the second quarter proved to be a jinx. The Owls hit only two of 15 shots from the field as the Badgers closed the gap to 23-17 at the half with Vincente Alvarado scoring five of his 18 points.

Two more baskets by Alvarado-and one by Pettis cut it to 26-23 midway through the third stanza, but the Owls answered the challenge with 12 unanswered points and a 38-23, 15point lead at the end of the period.

The Reagan County spurt was over, however, and the Badgers kept chipping away at the lead while scoring 18 to the Owls' nine. Alvarado eight points, Pettis seven and Brooks three to close the gap.

The McCamey girls' varsity won the first half championship with a 62-40 win over Reagan County. Joy Harris scored 28 points while CarolynRidley and Emma Deanda added 16 and 12 points respectively. AT WITS END

Basic differences noted in sexes in way to say au revoir, or goodbye

By ERMA BOMBECK

Saying good-bye is not a unisexual

There is a basic difference between the way a man says good-bye and a woman makes her exit. If you don't believe it, then try to imagine for a moment that a man has jumped out of a car and is saying good-bye to his good friend, Burt, with whom he has just had lunch

"Hey, Burt, I've had a ball. You know we really ought to do this more often. I get in a rut. I really do. A tenminute lunch at the desk out of a brown bag gets to be a drag. That peach melba for dessert is right here (pointing to hips). What the heck. You only live once, right? Was that a meringue crust? I think Bob served that one night at a cookout. Which reminds me, we owe them. I'm ashamed to look Bob and Doris in the face. We've been to their house eight times now and we've never entertained them.

"Listen, I'm holding you up and you're running all the gas out of your car. Did you just have your pistons ground? I thought so. You don't have to tell me if you don't want to, but where do you take your car to be serviced? Ed's Garage? That's where Stew takes his car. He's been a standing there for years. The only thing I heard about Ed is that he's overpriced, but you've been happy

"Hey, while I'm thinking of it, did you see who was waiting to be seated while we were having lunch? Fred Fronkmyer. I'm not kidding. He and his wife - you didn't know he was married again? Three months ago. I've been to all his weddings He's going to keep doing it until he gets it right. We shouldn't joke about poor Fred. Listen, I've got to get going, these knee-length elastic stockings are killing me. One size fits all. Who are they kidding? You could amputate my leg to the knee as I'm standing here and it's so numb 1 wouldn't feel a thing.

.. You were about to say something No, no, I've got a minute. Say that again. Arnold and Velma are rolechanging? Arnold will be climbing the wall in two weeks. He doesn't even like children. Especially his own. Which reminds me, hasn't Bruce lost a lot of weight? If you ask me I think he's gone too far. He used to have a shape, but I saw him on the golf course the other day and he's about as sexy as a pencil.

"Must run. Listen, before I go, love your leisure suit. You should always wear green. I mean it. Call me sometime. You don't have my ne ?W number? Give me a pencil. You'd think I'd have a pencil in one of the: se pockets, wouldn't you? Silly. I'm not going to write my number on the bac k of your driver's license. You have t c keep it until, good grief, Burt, it's expired. You're driving around with an expired license. Imagine that, 22 person three years older than I an i driving around . . say, Burt, speaking of age, guess how old . . . let 'em honk, I'm leaving in a minute

Punch a hole

When you cannot get the lid off of screw-type baby food jars, punch a small hole in the top of the lid. This releases the air inside the jar and makes it easy to unscrew the lid.

Wedding held Stolen cactus

on plane ride reunited

ABINGTON, Mass. (AP) — As the singleengine plane he was piloting reached the skies of his hometown, Robert Farquharson, 23, turned the controls to automatic and was married to the girl sitting behind him.

The girl was Donna Corriveau, a 21-year-old bank teller, also from Abington. Farguharson is a foreman and carpenter as well as a pilot.

Members of the wedding party waved congratulations across the clear blue from two other planes.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Paul John Rich of the First Parish Unitarian Church, who dutifully noted on the marriage certificate under location, "2,500 feet over Rte. 18, Abington.

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) -Mrs. Garnet Brady and her stolen cactus have been reunited.

The 5-foot, 44-year-old cactus had been the object of a neighborhoodwide hunt and a $200 reward since it disappeared from her porch two weeks ago.

Mrs. Brady said a neighbor brought the plant back, saying his two boys had bought it from a man and given it to him as a birthday gift. She said the neighbor didn't ask for the reward, so she was going to return the money to those who had donated it. The cactus, a childhood gift from Mrs. Brady to her late mother. was of a great sentimental value to her.

"I just want to thank everybody who helped me out," Mrs. Brady said. "They were all wonderful.'

Three of the declared Democratic presidential candidates, Sens. Lloyd M. Bentsen of Texas, Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, are running for new Senate terms, too. All are heavily favored to win Senate re-election unless otherwise occupied.

So are Sens. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota the Aug. 3 primary. and Edmund S. Muskie of Maine. Muskie had faced the prospect of a stiff challenge, but it evaporated when Rep. William S. Cohen announced he wouldn't Twelve hours after Casev's resignation became effective. Gov. Dolph Briscoe set special elections Friday for Feb. 28 to fill the congressional vacanacy and three vacancies in the Texas Legislature.

The first to resign was State Sen.

Bob Garamage, D-Houston, who immediately filed for Casey's District 22 vacancy Houston lawyer T. Charles Whitfield, a former Texas House member was the second to put up the $500 filing fee for the

State Reps. Joe Pentony, DHouston, and Gene Jones, DHouston, also resigned Friday to run for Gammage's District 7 vacancy in South Harris and Fort Bend Counties. Jones resigned effective Jan. 31 and Pentomy dated his resignation April

They were joined by a third representative, fellow Democrat Woody Denson of Houston, but he did not resign his present District 81 Seat. Also filing for the special senate district election was Republican Walter Keith, a Houston

Convict indicted for 'Skid Row Slasher' slayings

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A man already in prison for a brutal hatchet attack has been indicted in 11 bizarre killings, nine of which police believe were the work of the so-called "Skid Row Slasher."

The county grand jury indicted Vaughn O. Greenwood, 32, on Friday for the killings, mostly of derelicts and transients, over an 11-year period. The indictment was returned after three days of closed hearings under a court-imposed gag order.

Greenwood, an ex-convict, is serving a 32-years-to-life sentence for a knife and hatchet attack on two men in 1964 and the burglary of actor Burt Reynolds' Hollywood Hills home last

At Greenwood's sentencing last September, Superior Court Judge

Jack Goertzen called him a "phenomenal danger to society."
Evidence presented to the grand jurors indicated the skid row killer, who gruesomely slashed his victims' throats ear-to-ear, cutting through to the spine, sometimes drank the blood of his prey.

Greenwood is expected to be returned to Los Angeles from Foisom Prison this week and could be arraigned within two weeks.

The "Slasher" attacks began Dec. 1, 1974. A victim with a slashed throat was found about once every week until Jan. 31, 1975, when the body of Clyde C. Hay, M, a mechanic for the National Cash Register Co., was discovered in Hollywood. Most of the other victims were found in the skid Greenwood also is accused of killing two men 12 years ago in downtown Los Angeles.

According to the indictment, the first victim was murdered Nov. 13, 1964, on the steps of the main library. where derelicts frequently sleep and

Panel to quiz Nixon about Chile

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Senate Intelligence Committee will question former President Richard M. Nixon about U.S. operations against Chile, but it has decided not to ask entertainer Frank Sinatra about a woman associated with John F. Kennedy and organized crime

The committee voted Friday to submit a series of written questions to the former president about U.S. efforts to overthrow Chilean President Salvador Allende and about the socalled Houston plan for domestic intelligence gathering, chairman Frank Church, D-Idaho,

But Church said the committee saw no reason to question Sinatra about a possible link between President John F. Kennedy and the Mafia in a CIA plot to kill Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Sinatra had been named as the "mutual friend" who introduced Kennedy to Judith Campbell Exner, a California woman who also knew two underworld figures involved in a CIA

HOUSTON (AP) - A federal court jury has rejected a claim by a Houston dentist that a 1972 hijacking of an Eastern Airlines plane from Houston to Cuba strained his marriage.

Divestiture issue heats up among congressmen

Reporter-Telegram

Washington Oil Correspondent WASHINGTON-The divestiture issue-aimed at reshaping the petroleum industry-is heating up in Legislation to force the major oil companies to get out of all but one industry function, such as refining, is under active consideration. Some votes to be taken in the weeks are a

could go a long way toward determining the outcome. For one thing, it is entirely possible there will be an effort to attach a divestiture provision to proposals pending in the House to deregulate the wellhead price on new onshore sales of natural gas in interstate commerce. A vote on the natural gas regislation will be taken soon, probably during the first week in February

Meanwhile, the Senate Antitrust and Monopoly Subcommittee is holding hearings on divestiture and plans to mark up a bill before it relating to the issue

Divestiture proposals are not new in Congress. The issue has been raised from time to time over the years. However, it got fresh momentum last fall when the Senate rejected a move to attach a divestiture "rider" made to another bill by a vote of 55-45, a much closer vote than had been generally anticipated

For cirities of the industry, this meant it would only be necessary to get six senators to switch sides in order to get divestiture approved by the Senate. And some senators who had voted against the "rider" made it clear they were leaning in that

Divestiture legislationi is getting further attention because this is an election year and gives political candidates an opportunity to demonstrate they are for the little guy and against the big corporations.

Advocates of deregulation generally rest their case on three premises

—The oil industry as it is currently structured is not competitive. It enables a few giant corporations to control the market and thereby stifle competition and increase their own

-The only remedy for this alleged lack of competition is through a

Micronetics firm started

Micronetics, a newly incorporated firm with headquarters in Midland. has been formed to market a chemical solution process for treatment of metal surfaces.

The MG 440 Process has shown in test cases to be capable of resisting oxidation by a factor of more than 1,000 per cent and the result is accomplished without metal coating or plating. The process also is a corrosion inhibitor

The firm is located at 502 N. Big Spring St. in Midland and has offices in Houston, Dallas and Tulsa.

Edwin E. Watts, a Midland resident since 1972, is president of the new firm. He is a former vice president of Starr Gas Co. here and former regional industrial representative for Shell Oil Co. in Houston

Watts said Micronetics' MG 440 Process can reduce surface roughness of a majority of metals to unusual degrees, completely restore rusty, contaminated parts, improve frictional characteristics of metals and ickly remove burrs on intricate breakup of the big companies so that many smaller ones will emerge at all levels in the industry, thereby assuring more competition.

The Federal Trade Commission and the courts are incapable of dealing with the antitrust problems in the oil industry and, therefore, a legislative shortcut is necessary

The implication through all this is that the consumer currently is being ripped off and that one result of divestiture would be more competition and lower prices.

Opponents of divestiture challenge all these premises and contend that the end result would weaken the industry generally and create higher prices to consumers, not lower prices or increase supplies.

Regarding competition, they say it already exists and that there is less concentration in the petroleum industry than in almost any other major industry.

An energy research project at George Washington University of Washington, D.C., recently did a detailed study of divestiture and came to the conclusion that many of the arguments presented by advocates of divestiture legislation simply do not hold water.

William A. Johnson, director of the project, testified at Hart's subcommittee hearing this week. presenting the findings of the university's research group.

He reported there was little substance to the charges being made against the industry.

'Indeed, what we have found is that many of the alleged anticompetitive practices of the oil industry can be traced to unwise and shortsighted

Land board meeting focuses on Yates pool

AUSTIN-Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong is hopeful that both sides. will eventually work out an agreement for future oil production from the Yates Field of West Texas, so the State School Land Board won't be saddled with taking a deciding vote on the controversial issue

Armstrong has asked legal counsel representing the Yates heirs and whose representing Marathon Oil to resubmit written briefs to the School Land Board, detailing their views of unitization in light of comprehensive energy legislation signed by President Ford last month.

Once again the School Land Board will take the potential unitization of 26.420 acres in Pecos and Crockett counties under consideration when it meets on Feb. 17.

Tuesday the three-man board again used the prospects of the federal energy legislation to delay action on Marathon's request to unitize the field, making it the largest production "unit" in Texas in 15 years.

The board, comprised of Armstrong as chairman and Stuart Long of Austin and Fred Wulff of Brady, is unanimous in wanting to delay action on the pooling agreement until the full effect of the energy legislation is

Before the price roll-back bill was signed by President Ford, Marathon said unitization would increase the state's royalty from oil production in the Yates Field from $3.9 million to $17 million per year. But the energy legislation has the effect of rolling back oil prices from $10 to $12 per barrel to $7.66 per barrel.

The application to unitize the Yates field has been pending before the School Land Board since November, and there are some indications that it will be unwilling to make a decision on the request in February. On March 2, the Federal Power Commission has scheduled a meeting in Washington, to fully detail provisions of legislation to interested parties.

During the 50 years of drilling activity, the Yates Field has produced 620 million barrels of oil, and Marathon contends that by "pooling" all interests, an additional 1.2 billion barrels can be extracted for the field's estimated remaining life of 80 that they have no disagreement to unitization, provided the family's share of the royalty interest is raised from one-eighth to one-fourth.

If the School Land Board did agree to unitize the field, Marathon officials say they would petition the Texas Railroad Commission to increase production allowable from 50,000 barrels-per-day to 100,000 barrels-per-day.

The Yates heirs submit that the state should view the proposed unit agreement with a long term view towards maintaining its oil and gas reserves "at the highest possible level rather than giving (them) away." That statement was submitted to the School Land Board in a brief prepared by attorney J. Lyndell Kirkley of Fort

Unitization requires that 65 per cent of the interests of any producing field must agree to the pooling. Fifty-one per cent of the Yate's interest have now agreed to the plan, and the School Land Board controls enough of the remaining property to impelment the

Joining in supporting Marathon's application for unitization are Amoco Production Company and Chevron Oil Company. Shell Oil Company said it is opposed to the precendent of increasing royalty percentages at the time of unitization

Ford's message did not include objectives for cutting imports

By MAX B. SKELTON HOUSTON (AP) - On energy matters, President Ford's second State of the Union address to Congress was a sharp contrast with his first. His 1976 energy objectives were summarized in about 300 words. A year earlier, on Jan. 15, 1975, those objectives had required about 2,500 words. And, just one night earlier, he had made a special televised speech on his energy and economic proposals.

Both of the State of the Union speeches, however, emphasized concern about declining domestic crude production and dependence on foreign supplies.

The 1975 speech summarized the situation this way: "Our growing dependence tupon foreign sources has been adding to our vulnerability for years and we did nothing to prepare ourselves for an event such as the embargo of 1973."

Ford's 1976 speech put it this way: "Domestic production of oil and gas is still declining. Our dependence on foreign oil at high prices is still too great, draining jobs and dollars away from our economy at the rate of $125 per year for every American.' The new speech included no specific objectives for reducing oil imports.

A year earlier, Ford had said "We must reduce oil imports by one million barrels per day by the endnof this year and by two million barrels per day by the endmof 1977."

There are differences of opinion on whether the million-barrels-a-day cutback objective for 1975 was at-There is argument the objective was to reduce only the import level that had been projected for 1975 prior to the 1973 embargo. And there is argument that such a goal could only mean actual 1975 imports would be one million barrels a day below the 1974 level.

Under the first argument, Ford could claim at least partial success. Under thesecond argument, he could

Total oil imports in 1973 averaged a record 6.2 million barrels a day and projections were anticipating a 1975 level approaching if not exceeding seven million barrels a day. Official averages are not yet

A final average of about 5,900,000 for 1975 would be practically a dead heat with 1974 when total imports averaged 6,088,000 barrels a day.

The makeup of the 1975 imports, however, were quite different from those of 1974 Crude oil imports last year ap-

Domestic crude output last year approximated 8,400,000 barrels a day compared with 8,766,000 in 1974.

In his latest report to Congress Ford said the compromise energy legislation enacted in December "was late in coming, not the complete, answer to energy independence, but still a start in the right direction.'

Ford called for immediate action on other proposals "to make America invulnerable to the foreign oil cartel."

Aim of the programs conducted so far is to prepare for federal lease sales, the Oil and Gas Journal reports in its January 19 issue. The lease sales, in turn, will cover acreage on which the industry hopes to find bigfield discoveries that will reverse the decline in the country's oil and gas

Explorationists generally agree the large, easily found fields have been discovered in the Gulf of Mexico and onshore in the Lower 48. If sizable new reserves are to be found, the weekly business magazine says, they are in offshore frontiers or onshore

The U.S. Geological Survey says as much as 3 million barrels per day of oil and 4 trillion cubic feet per year of gas might be available in frontier offshore areas if the accelerated federal leasing program is carried through on schedule. Such production, USGS says, would require development of about 30-billion barrels of oil and 120-trillion cubic feet of gas

Hitting this target will require an outlay of billions of dollars for leases and drilling equipment on top of millions already spent. One major company estimates the industry has spent $100 million in frontier geophysical programs. And it will be years—at least 5 or 6, maybe morebefore the first oil and gas could begin to flow from any fields discovered, the Journal says.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Texans should be beware of fasttalking strangers who promise get-rich quick oil and gas schemes, say Atty. Gen. John Hill and Securities Commissioner Roy Mouer.

The filing of lawsuits by Hill apparently has not convinced fraudulent oil and gas operators to get out of Texas, Mouer said.

Mouer and Hill said in a joint statement Friday that telephone calls from strangers soliciting money to drill for oil and gas "should raise an instant red flag.

They estimated that so-called "Schedule D" companies took in approximately $100 million from 47,000 investors throughout the nation from January 1973 to October 1975.

"Schedule D" companies get their name by trying to raise money by using a sales brochure called a 'Schedule D' offering sheet. It is a form prescribed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission which promoters can use as an alternative to registering oil and gas interests with the SEC.

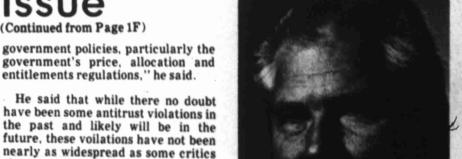

"A great many" of the companies "have picked up their operations and moved to other states where the threat of legal action is less severe." Mouer said. "But it is now becoming apparent that a number of these companies have not left Texas at all. They simply have stopped filing.

Fraudulent operators frequently set up a roomful of salesmen who make list," Mouer and Hill said.

Mouer said his investigators "have been too swamped to present criminal cases to the appropriate district attorneys," but he has talked with Dist. Attys. Carol Vance of Houston and Henry Wade of Dallas.

Caudle said two-thirds of the known oil deposits were still left in the ground, the trick was to develop techniques to recover the oil which were economically feasible.

Water flooding is a technique used for many years, and is the most reliable secondary recovery method, Caudle said, although it leaves 30 to 50 per cent of the oil in the ground.

Because oil and water do not mix, some substance is needed to reduce the "interfacial tension" between the two substances so the rest of the oil can be recovered, Caudle said.

Water flooding can be augmented by using detergents or "soaps" to reduce the friction and make oil and water more "miscible." Oil soluble materials or substances like alcohol or liquid carbon dioxide can also be used, but are more expensive, Caudle

Injection of natural gas, steam, and the use of hot gases to heat the rest of the reservoir are also methods of enhanced recovery that Caudle listed. Caudle spoke at an Energy Briefing

Workers, company partners in mine experiment

By STEPHEN D. KLAIDMAN

The Washington Post PHILIPSBURG, Pa. - When the Rushton coal mine opened near here in 1965, it was a nonunion shop destined for major labor trouble. It took 2 years and a 5-week strike led by United Mine Workers' official Joseph (Jock) Yablonski to organize the mine. For the next few years, Rushton was frequently shut down by wildcat strikes.

Yet today, the company and the workers are partners in an experiment in industrial democracy in which management has voluntarily given up its right to direct the 215-man work force. Nine-man crews of miners, fully respnsible for production, are working unsupervised at the coal face 220 feet below the ground.

DISPLACED FOREMEN are free to devote most of their time to safety. removing the fundamental contradiction of the same person being responsible for both safety and output.

At a time when falling productivity is seen as an extremely srious threat to the American economy, even the world economy, the Rushton experiment is of great interest to both business and government.
It is also being watched carefully by organized labor, some of whose leaders see it as a scheme to break unions by co-opting the workers. It creates an apparent identity of interest between workers and management, they argue, which is not only misleading, but pernicious in that it could seduce the workers into letting their unions wither away, leaving no one to bargain for them or to represent them when they have grievances.

THE SYSTEM ignores the principle of seniority by raising all workers to top pay of $87.20 a day and encouraging the regular trading off of jobs between crew members, but it seems to leave intact what is perhaps the fundamental role of all unions, job pro-

Experiments similar to the one at Rushton are being carried out at an auto mi44or plant in Bolivar, Tenn. the transmission planning and engineering division of th Tennessee Valley Authority and a surgical ward at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York.

The results are not in on the Rushton experiment, which was set up by one academic entity and is being audited by Prof. Paul Goodman of Carngeie-Mellon Unviersity in Pittsburgh. He said the first study measuring the overall effectiveness of the project for the 1973-74 period would be completed around the end of

THERE IS NO essential difference between what miners do on an autonomous crew and what they did under the supervision of foremen. Someone has to run the mining machinery, someone must operate the shuttle car that takes the coal from the face to the conveyor belt that carries it to the surface, track must be laid and bolts to hold up the mine roof must be put in place.

What is different, however, is that the miners decide for themselves at what pace the work will be done, when they will take breaks, whether or not the miner operator and the shuttle car operator should switch jobs for a while, whether a particular procedure should be introduced under a particular set of circumstances. In short. the miners make the judgments traditionally made by management judgments that affect produciton. safety and working conditions.

LEM HOLLEN, an ex-cross country truck driver with 14 years in the mines and a high rate of absenteeism before joining an autonomous work crew, talked about how it has improved his job satisfaction and his attitude. "A lot of guys had pretty bad foremen and they rode their asses all the time. It's nice to go into the mine and go to your job without anybody telling you what to do.

"I think anybody can be taught to

MARK NAYLOR, 26; who went into the mines 4 years ago when he got out of the Navy "because they pay was good," said he volunteered for the autonomous work crews "because I was gonna get paid a higher rate."

But, Naylor said, "After I got into it that was the last thing I thought of. The work got a lot easier. We were makin' all the decisions ourselves about how the work should be done. We found it was the best way to work in a coal mine. A man could enjoy his work more and anytime he can enjoy his work he don't mind comin' to believe a union was necessary to represent the miners. He is participating in this experiment for similar reasons.

ON THE MANAGEMENT side, Blair Rickard, the mine superintendent, who characterized himself as a "hard-line boss," said, that "in my way of thinkin' this is the greatest thing that ever came down the road for the coal miner.

"I THINK it is ridiculous," he said, "for just 15 per cent of our working population (management) to be concerned with productivity and the service we perform. Inasmuch as everyone's economic welfare is at stake I think we all have to be involved. A new assessment of the values under which we work together is needed.

The miners interviewed for this article, however, seemed more interested in what has become known among sociologists as the quality of working life than in increased productivity or even any ultimate share they might have in its returns.

The Rushton experiment was set up in early 1973 under the sponsorship of the National Quality of Work Center by a joint committee of union officers and mine managers. It had the blessing of Arnold Miller, president of the United Mine Workers of America, but the agreement provided that either union or management could call off the experiment at any time for any

The idea behind most of the tax break proposals on stocks put forward in recent years is that the stock market needs a stimulus to make it possible for corporations to raise enough money through selling shares to provide the jobs, goods and services that the country will want in the

Critics contend that the primary beneficiaries of such an approach are businessmen and brokers, rather than the public.

Rep. Brock Adams D.-Wash., chairman of the House Budget Committee, asserted that Ford's position "makes me think of Marie Antoinette - let 'em eat stock op-

The proponents' point of view holds that American corporations are being discouraged from starting projects that would create future jobs because they can't raise money for them through selling shares.

When a company looks for capital, it can turn to three basic sources - its own earnings, borrowing, or selling part ownership of itself to others in the form of stock.

According to Salomon Brothers, the large investment banking firm, $95.6 billion in capital was generated by corporations last year through retained earnings.

Borrowing, aside from banks and the short-term money markets, is done through sales of securities such as bonds. Last year, reports Investment Dealers Digest, $36.95 billion worth of new debt issues were marketed through the underwriters of Wall Street.

Underwritings of new common and preferred stocks, according to the publication, totaled $9.77 billion in the same year.

Graduate center schedules seminar designed for business executives

Permian Basin Graduate Center has scheduled a seminar specifically designed for executives with limited background in managerial accounting and finance. The course, entitled "Managerial Accounting and Finance for Nonfinancial Executives - Seminar I," is slated Feb. 5 through 7.

Classes will be 8:30 to 11:45 a.m. and 1:15 to 4:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday, and 8:30 to 11:45 a.m.

graduate center's classroom located in the basement of Gihls Tower East, 119 N. Colorado St. Fee is $225 including textbook and materials.

Dr. Charles H. Smith, accounting professor in the College of Business Administration at Arizona State University, will conduct the seminar. Smith is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Ac-countants and the American Accountin Association.

Graduate center officials describe the course as "particularly worthwhile for engineers, lawyers, geologists, independents, small businessmen and other executives who have moved into positions requiring financial analysis and decision making for which they have had little or no previous preparation.'

The seminar has no prerequisites. Persons desiring further information may contact the graduate center office, 104 Gulf Building, Midland, or call 563-2311.

Money supply starts running low for civil rights organizations

By PETER ARNETT NEW YORK (AP) — The civil rights movement is now barely paying its way in America after a decade flushed with success.

And some black leaders say that all funds should be raised from black communities because the support of affluent whites can no longer be relied

"The white liberals are giving their money to their favorite presidential candidates, not the civil rights movement," said the Rev. Jesse Jackson, head of Chicago-based Operation PUSH.

"And the Jewish middle class is contributing all their spare cash to the state of Israel these days. With the tightened economy, more and more people are concentrating on their own special interests.'

The money crunch had hurt most civil rights organizations, some more seriously than others. The North Carolina branch of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference suspended operations in October because of a $17,000 debt, and the state leader moved to Delaware to work with a group of ministers.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the nation's oldest and largest civil rights organization, is reportedly $250,000 in debt, and the deficit "is reaching a point where it could imperil critical programs that are the lifeblood of the organization, including its foremost thrust in school desegregation," according to one official.

The only civil rights organization holding its own seems to be the National Urban League "which had a very good year last year, well over our projection," said William Sims. director of the organization's fund department. The Urban League's advantage over the other non-profit civil rights organizations is that it has the direct support of American industry in its programs to integrate work forces.

But even the Urban League is getting the message that there is a diminishing interest in the civil rights movement in America.

"A white corporation executive told me recently 'civil rights is no longer popular," Sims said.

Other black leaders blame President Nixon and President Ford for taking the emphasis off equal employment and other civil rights issues.

"Just because black communities are quiet does not mean that we have made enough progress," said Ed Reed, an executive assistant in the Boston chapter of the NAACP. Reports of such progress are misleading and blacks are liable to be on the streets again when they realize how poorly they are faring economically.

The 66-year-old NAACP reportedly has had trouble meeting its payroll in the New York headquarters "but we are nowhere near the spot where we might go under," an official said.

The association has 1,400 chapters and a membership of around 450,000, and some sources see renewed fund raising vigor when the respected, but aging association head, Roy Wilkins, retires later this year.

The Rev. Jackson of PUSH says that the depressed economy and the diminishing interest in civil rights "has given the black community its biggest challenge yet."

Jackson says that the black middle class must now assume responsibility for the financing of the black struggle; "We have had some black representation in the past - lawyers, doctors; preachers. But as our new fundraising base we need support from the new generation of moneyed blacks, the black executives the black athletes. They are all successful as a direct result of the civil rights struggle. Yet eight out of 10 black athletes don't financially help the civil rights movement." Jackson said.

PUSH was $400,000 in debt a few months ago, but two public benefits raised half that amount.

Some officials within the NAACP say their base membership fee of $4 should be raised to cover increased

The Rev. Jackson says the only hope for black organizations is to totally take over their financing and administration.

GOOD YEAR

Reagan believes his message in touch with times

BY LOU CANNON The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Back in the days when Ronald Wilson Reagan was selling progress as "the most important product" for General Electric, he filmed an institutional advertisement for GE's nuclear submarine.

The ad was an effective one, and Reagan read his script in the crisp and smiling manner he used in selling GE household products. There was a joke in Hollywood at the time about a man who had seen the ad and remarked, "I really didn't need a submarine. but I've got one now.

An anti-Reagan Republican recalled this crack the other day while reminiscing about the way California politicians of both parties had underestimated Reagan. "It's the same way with the party now and it's going to be the same way with the country," he said, shaking his head. We never really wanted a Reagan. but we've sure got one.

Certainly, at least, the Republican party has a strong challenger to President Ford in the person of Reagan, the one-time sportscaster and movie actor who on the strength of a single speech in the 1964 presidential campaign launched a political career that seeks culmination in the White House

THOUGH HE has come a long way from the days when he was host and actor on "GE Theater" and "Death Valley Days." Reagan is the first to say that his message against government centralization and deficit spending hasn't changet of having been on the government side," says Reagan after having served eight years as the governor of California. "Then I was warning of what could happen. I was amazed at how accurate I was."

Reagan believes that his nowfamiliar message is in touch with the mood of the times. He seems himself as a person who can save the republic by balancing the budget and by "turning the government from its obsessive centralization in Washington.

Even before the present-day fiscal conservativism came into vogue, Reagan demonstread in a state with 3-to-2 Democratic registration edge that he had reached far beyond his own ideological camp. He left office after eight years as governor of California with a higher popularity rating, as measured by Mervin Field's California Poll, than any of his predecessors.

Nevertheless, doubts persist that Reagan is up to the presidency. despite his showing that he can govern a major state.

by Ford campaign strategists, still believe that a Barry Goldwater of 1964, complete with opposition to Social Security and TVA, lurks behind the Reagan smile. Former Kentucky Republican Chairman Charles Coy, in a homely expression of another enduring concern, finds Reagan "as thin as spit on a slate rock.

AT TIMES Reagan seems to be the various things his advocates and his adversaries say about him. What Reagan says and what Regan says and what Reagan does are frequently contradictory. And he left a conflicting legacy after two four-year terms in the governorship.

Elected in 1966 on a platform of curbing government growth, Reagan sponsored the largest tax increase in the state's history, partly because of a deficit he inherited. However, he succeeded in keeping the state work force at a stable level of 103,000 employees and he left a hefty surplus in the Reagan based much of his original campaign on "cleaning up the mess at Berkeley." a reference to the student disorders there then. Yet, Reagan as governor increased funding for the university and the state colleges by 100 per cent while spending for general state operations increased by 50 per cent.

Campaigning almost perpetually on the welfare issue, Reagan finally pushed through the legislature a "welfare reform" measure that significantly reduced the state's caseload. But this legislation also raised grants to the poorest recipients to one of the highest levels in the na-

Reagan appointed more blacks and Mexican-Americans to important positions in government than any previous California governor. But Reagan's campaigning against "unlawful demonstratoins" and, particularly, his refusal ever to criticize George C. Wallace on the race issue continues to make him suspect in the black community.

These are contradictory highlights of a record on which there are some pints of agreement. Friends and foes of Reagan alike agree that his administration was unmarred by serious scandal and that his judicial appointments were of high quality.

THERE IS agreement, too, that Reagan was a pro-business governor. as reflected by his regulatory agency appointments, even though he now in-cludes "big business" in his campaign litany of the forces that have brought about government centraliza-

Finally, there is agreement that Reagan the governor proved to be far more pragmatic than Reagan the campaigner. Once acquainted with the legislative realities, Reagan proved adept at modifying his goals without changing his rhetoric. Typically, he would accept a heavily diluted compromise and represent it as a total victory.

Reagan came late in life to any serious political philosophy.

Born on Feb. 6, 1911, in Tampico, Il-I., he was the son of an affable, harddrinking, small-town shoe salesman whom Reagan in his autobiography describes as a "first-generation black Irishman" and of a vivacious, openhearted mother known for her good works among prisoners and indigents. His mother was the quietly dominating force in the Reagan family, and it is usually of her that Ronald Reagan speaks when he talks about his childhood.

In his autobiography, "Where's the Rest of Me?", Reagan describes his mother in these terms: "Nelle Wilson Reagan - small, with auburn hair and blue eyes - had the conviction that everyone loved her just because she loved them. My father's cynicism never made the least impression on her, while I suspect her sweetness often undermined his practical viewpoint about the world."

Reagan recalls the "passion for quality" of his father, who was a Catholic, a Democrat and a fervent advocate of trade unionism in an era and a place where such advocacy was unusual. But both Reagan and his older brother. Neil, lived in fear of their father's drinking bouts and the temper he displayed during them.

In reaction, Reagan did not drink at all for many years, and he still largely limits himself to an occasional glass of wine with dinner.

RONALD REAGAN was a quiet, somewhat introspective child. He liked to play with lead soldiers and to roam the woods around Tampico by himself, observing wildlife and learning, as he later put it, "the real riches

But a desire for approval and performance lay within this quiet child. It was cultivated by his mother, who taught him to read when he was 5 and invited in the neighbors to demonstrate how well he did it. Reagan can still recall reading aloud the newspaper account of the Preparedness Day bombing in San Francisco on July 22, 1916.

Reagan's film career soured after World War II, and he was one of the first movie actors to turn to television. Beginning in 1954, when his profitable association with television's "GE Theater" began, Reagan toured 125 GE plants, meeting a quartermillion employees.

The GE tours gave Reagan valuable political experience. So did his presidency of the Screen Actors Guild, where he showed a grasp of the wage-and-hour issues important to journeyman actors and, as president of the union, led a successful strike.

NO EVIDENCE exists that an eventual career in politics was consciously on Reagan's mind. In looking back, Reagan claims to hve had no glint of his future political role, and he still regards himself as a person who essentially is not a politician.

Reagan was at this time, in the mid-1950s, a Democrat of vaguely New Dealish cast. His father, in hard times in the Depression, had landed a government job with the Works Progress Administration as a reward for his Democratic party loyalties.

Reagan promptly became a boyhood New Dealer, and he is a booster of WPA to this day. His instincts and political style, if not the policies he advocates, remain those of a lowermiddle-class Democrat from the Middle West

This style also was influenced by Reagan's choice of Franklin D. Roosevelt as his first political idol. For years, one of Reagan's bestdelivered lines in the speech that carried him to political prominence was borrowed from FDR: "You and I have a rendezvous with destiny. We will preserve for our children this, the last best hope for man on earth, or we will sentence them to take the last step into a thousand years of darkness."

Reagan's views became increasingly conservative during his eight years of association with General Electric. When he was hired GE President Ralph Cordiner recognized that Reagan's poltical views were general in nature and advised him to "work out a philosophy for yourself."

That philosophy, in tune with Reagan's corporation-oriented audiences, quickly became antigovernment.

Reagan, while still a Democrat, supported Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952 and became a Republican in 1962. In 1964 he was selected to give a nationally televised speech for Goldwater. Its success, surprising even to Reagan, immediately catapulted him into national prominence.

THE SPEECH was called "A Time for Choosing" and its central message was nearly identical to the one Reagan now preaches in somewhat tidier language. Then, Reagan spoke against the progressive income tax, the Tennessee Valley Authority and housing assistance. Then and now, Reagan was opposed to Social Security, although he is acutely aware of the political liability such opposition proved to be for Goldwater.

"You can't win by running against Social Security," Reagan said once. 'Barry proved that."

But in his famous 1964 speech Reagan said that Social Security "is not insurance but a welfare program and Social Security dues are a tax for the general use of government."

When Reagan, during his appearance before a Southern Republican conference on Dec. 13, 1975, was asked by a friendly questioner what he thought about Social Security, he replied: "Young people in the room, perk up your ears because you're the biggest victims of this ... Barry Goldwater, God bless him, tried to warn the people years ago and nobody would listen (cheers) and now it happens ...

Reagan then went on to describe the fiscal problems of the Social Security system and its dependence on collecting higher and higher taxes from people coming into the system. He suggested that an alternative insurance policy might be worthy of consideration. Subsequently, he has said in Florida that the favors retention of Social Security.

More important than his stand on any particular issue, in the view of Reagan's critics, is his supposed shallowness. The "thin as spit on a slate rock" jibe expresses a reservation about Reagan that is as essential as the crack made about President Ford that he can't "chew gum and walk at the same time.

THERE IS a difference, however, between these two concerns. In the President's case it is fundamental intellectual capacity that is being questioned. In the case of Reagan it is the way he uses his mind.

'He has a Reader's Digest approach to problems," says Rus Walton, once a leading man in Reagan's administration. "He does not comprehend a problem deeply." Often, the difficulty with Reagan intellectually seems to be that he deals with problems in terms of visual images rather than in terms of substance.

For instance, the day after Reagan announced his presidential candidacy, he was put on the defensive in Charlotte, N.C., by reporters' questions about his views on civil rights sit-ins and other demonstrations. Reagan responded by relating a long incident that sounded very much like a movie script in which he said that racial discrimination had ended in the Navy after a black steward at Pearl Harbor cradled a machine gun in his arms, "which is not an easy to thing to do." and started firing at attacking Japanese planes.

Afterward, when an interviewer pointed out that discrimination in the Navy hadn't ended until President Truman had signed an executive order after the war. Reagan politely disagreed and told the reporter: "I've never forgotten the story about that man with the machine gun.

Reagan has always sought to make a virtue of this simplicity, which his critics call simplemindedness. One of his favorite lines is that "there are simple answers - just not easy ones.

What kind of a President, then, would Ronald Reagan make? His performance as the chief executive of a state with a larger budget than most of the nations of the world suggests these probabalities:

IT WOULD be a pro-business administration in tone and coloration with a balanced budget as the enunciated goal. But Reagan most likely would not hesitate to adopt "pumppriming" measures to avoid recession, even though declaring them to be temporary expendients.

It would be even more defenseminded, and perhaps more bellicose. than in Ford Administration. Reagan's belief in preparedness and his distrust of the Soviet Union run deep and have persisted through his political life.

It would rely on extensive delegation of authority, and the Cabinet would have an important role.

The dark side to his passing on of authority is that Reagan himself may not know what is happening.

"We had a saying in the Air Force that you had to fly the plane or the plane would wind up flying you," says Rus Walton. "There always was a suspicion in Sacramento that the plane was flying Ronnie." The other qualities that are seen in

Reagan by those who have worked for him or against him at close quarters are: toughness, honesty, friendliness combined with reserve. He is less stubborn than Mr. Ford and probably less decisive. He has a tendency to back himself into a corner and a knack for finding a way out.

REAGAN'S SUCCESS in California was based on his charm, his integrity in office and on a consistent ability to arouse the emotions of middle-class Americans of both parties against a system that no longer seemed able to maintain control or to deliver on its promises.

Judging by what other governors are saying today, Reagan's themes anticipated the future. Now that the nation's own drift seems to be as "anti-political" as the trend was in California a decade ago, Reagan is using his old themes as a presidential platform. Basically, he is running against Washington and the accumulated grievances built up against the government through the Vietnam war, Watergate and inflationary recessions.

Reagan's ability to exploit these grievances has been adequately demonstrated. The public opinion polls suggest he is a formidable candidate against any opponent and that he has overcome his adversaries' depiction of him as a conservative extremist. He is a hero to many in his own camp, and he has far more reach with Democrats and independents than Goldwater had in 1964.
