Teaching with rocks helps retarded tots

By LUANNA CROW

It's a pretty safe bet the enterprising person who began marketing pet rocks never dreamed they would wind up in a classroom as educational tools.

That innovative use can be credited to Mrs. Mary Bess, special education teacher at Austin Freshman School.

In her class of 23 mentally retarded students, Mrs. Bess and teacher aide Mrs. Jean Ellison use brightly painted and labeled rocks primarily to teach vocabulary.

Each student has his own pet rock. just for fun, and the class has a whole collection of special rocks or "friends" to help them learn their classroom work.

Noting there is no state-adopted textbook for special education classes on the junior high school level, Mrs. Bess uses a variety of teaching aids and media in its place.

She uses the rocks to teach vocabulary in language arts, math, social studies, health and safety, "introduction to pre-vocation" and

In math, for instance, she uses the labeled rocks to demonstrate such concepts as "more than," "less than" or "weight." In health and safety, the pet rocks help instill ideas such as danger, yield, keep out and stop.

Mrs. Bess said the rocks are useful in conveying ideas to her students because they provide a visual stimulus and something tangible representing the concept to be learned. Further, she noted, many students are hyperactive, and han-

Price asks fifth term

PAMPA, Tex. (AP) - Former Rep. Bob Price of Pampa, who served four terms in the U.S. House before he was defeated in a 1974 re-election bid, announced today as a Republican candidate for the 13th Congressional Price was first elected to Congress in 1966. He was reelected in 1968, 1970 and 1972. He lost in the 1974 general election to incumbent Democratic Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon.

Price was the only announced Republican candidate as the filing deadline of 6 p.m. today approached. The 13th district includes much of the Texas Panhandle and stretches southeast to Wichita Falls.

Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee on energy and power of the House Commerce Committee and one of those Albert by-passed, recently sounded the note that other deregulation foes are expected to echo at Tuesday's caucus.

'The speaker's action is a perversion of the orderly procedures of the House and does violence to the legislative process," he said. "It strips the committee not of its privileges but of its duties."

Dingell said Albert and others are "seeking to stampede through Congress legislation that is going to cost the consuming public billions of dollars and will not produce more gas for at least two years.'

"There is no natural gas emergency now," Dingell declared. Rep. Robert Krueger (D-Texas), sponsor of the deregulation plan that is expected to come to a vote this week as a substitute for a short-term emergency natural gas bill, asserted last week that the gas issue had been considered by Congress repeatedly in recent years. On the procedural question, Krueger accused Dingell and others of trying to bottle up long-term gas legislation and prevent a decision by the House. He likened their action to efforts of Southern committee chairmen to bottle up civil rights legislation in former years.

It was only to let the House work its will, Krueger said, that Albert took the emergency gas bill away from Dingell and shepherded it through the House Rules Committee in a way that gives deregulation advocates a major

Storm paralyzes northeast states

By The Associated Press

Swirling snow driven by blizzardforce winds struck the East Coast during the night, knocking out power, forcing airports and schools to close and bringing rush-hour traffic to a virtual standstill in many areas.

A special report from the National Weather Service in New York called the storm "the most severe weather in this area in several years" and urged people to stay indoors if possible. Forecasters warned that exposure to the cold could result in

There also was heavy snow in parts of the Midwest. Accumulations in the East were small, but winds of up to 60 miles an hour combined with the cold to make travel dangerous and hamper clean-up operations.

La Guardia, Kennedy, Newark and Albany airports were closed. The New York Stock Exchange said the opening of trading would be delayed ndefinitely because of the weather. The weather was clear but cold - 10 degrees below zero - in Punxsutawney, Pa., as members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club watched Phil the groundhog emerge from hibernation in his electrically heated burrow.

Legend has it that if the groundhog sees his shadow on Feb. 2, winter will last another six weeks. To no one's surprise, Phil saw his shadow today.

The temperature in New York City was 14 degress at 8 a.m. and was expected to keep falling. Winds were gusting up to 59 miles per hour, making it feel like 29 degrees below

Mayor Abraham D. Beame said all of the city's 6,000 miles of roadways were treacherous. New York-area highways were impassable to traffic because of stalled vehicles and a 240mile stretch of the New York State Thruway from Spring Valley north was closed.

Here is a rundown of the situation in some other areas:

-MICHIGAN: Record-cold temperatures hit much of the state with a reading of 11 below zero in Detroit. Some 10,000 persons were affected by scattered power outages. The cold followed a Sunday snow storm that left drifts up to six feet in some areas.

-NORTH CAROLINA: About six inches of snow fell in the western mountains on Sunday and winds in coastal areas reached 70 miles an hour. School systems in seven counties were closed because of snow which was still falling in some spots. -VERMONT: High winds and snow reduced visibility to near zero. Castleton State College closed for the first time in its history. Power was knocked out in White River Junction in the southern part of the state.

-INDIANA: Eighteen inches of snow was reported in South Bend in northwest Indiana. A snow emergency was declared and schools and most roads were closed.

Jim Reese, 46-year-old former Odessa mayor and a stockbroker, today was expected to file on the Republican party ticket for election to the 19th Congressional District seat held for 40 years by U.S. Rep. George Mahon, a Democrat from Lubbock.

Reese, Odessa's mayor from 1968 to 1974, was to file for candidacy late this afternoon in Austin with Ray Hutchison, state chairman of the Republican party in Texas.

Filing deadline for would-be candidates to enter the May 1 primary is 6 p.m. today. The ex-mayor of Odessa is formally

Alas! the groundhog has seen his shadow

The groundhog saw his shadow this morning in Big Lake, and probably did in Andrews, Rankin, McCamey, Stanton, Lamesa and Midland, as clear, sunny skies prevailed throughout the area.

All area towns reported clear, sunny skies this morning that promised another spring-like day for West Texas. Overnight temperatures ranged from a low 36 degrees in Lamesa, 39 degrees in Midland, to a high of 45 degrees in Stanton.

No winds were reported throughout

If you set store by the groundhog legend, there was no doubt today that Texas is in for six weeks more of winter. Skies were clear throughout the state, assuring plenty of sunshine. That meant Mr. Groundhog couldn't fail to see his shadow and thus, according to the old tale, would dive back into his burrow and doom any hope for early spring, the Associated Press reported

The also was rather cool as light winds targed the state this marning, and no prospect was seen for moisture to east widespread threats of grass fires.

Temperatures near dawn ranged from 26 degrees at El Paso in the far west up to no more than 45 at Galveston and 46 at Abilene, Midland Odessa and San Angelo. Top marks Sunday went as high as 79 at Alice in extreme South Texas.

Fair and warmer weather was forecast through Tuesday except for increasing clouds in parts of South

Phil, the groundhog who made Punxsutawney famous, emerged from an electrically heated burrow in subzero weather today and saw his shadow — a sign that winter weather is in store for at least six more weeks.

Phil's forecast came as the sun rose in clear but chilly skies. Although the temperature hovered at minus-10 degrees, members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club's inner circle watched Phil emerge from hibernation.

On the basic deregulation issue, Krueger and others contend that elimination of price controls will stimulate enough new production to shore up the nation's dwindling gas reserves for at least a decade. Consumers' Energy bills will not rise dramatically and, in the end may be lower than they would have been if gas supplies had run down and more expensive alternative fuels had been substituted, deregulation advocates

On one side is the oil and gas industry, with its multimillion dollar war chest, supported by congressmen from petroleum-producing districts and the Ford Administration.

On the other are consumer groups, big labor unions, and some farm groups - less luxuriously financed but amply supplied with hardworking activists - along with their congressional supporters from urban and suburban areas, primarily in the North and Midwest.

In the middle are the swing voters, those from farm and industrial districts where concern is high over fuel prices but where fears of worsening shortages and loss of jobs may be even greater.

So far, the pro-deregulation forces have won most of the skirmishes. Last October, the Senate voted 58-32 to phase out present price controls. With President Ford committed in advance to sign such a bill, the last hope of opponents is to defeat Krueger's similar-

Odessan announces candidacy

Odessa Republican Vic Shackelford, 48, today announced his candidacy for the 16th Congressional District from West Texas.

During a news conference. Shackelford said, "The people are fed up with the irresponsible acts of Congress. The incumbent has been a part of this irresponsible group, and, for all practical purposes, it has been as if nobody represented West Texas. The other candidate in this race has such an extreme liberal philosophy that it doesn't fit a West Texan's Shackelford said that his residency in Odessa and former residency in El Paso would qualify him to meet the needs of the entire district. He also said those residencies would help him gather votes in El Paso County.

Shackelford is married to the former Rita McGee. They have a daughter who is a senior at Odessa's Permian High School and a son, now a freshman in college.

The gas age is ending for electric power plants.

The Texas Railroad Commission says electric companies must begin phasing out the use of natural gas for making electricity.

It won't be easy. Today most of your electricity comes from power plants that burn gas.

But Texas Electric has already acquired new fuels to reduce our use of natural gas. We have two lignite coal plants in operation and several more planned or under construction. We're also building a nuclear power plant.

There's no choice. We must build new power plants, and building these plants costs a lot of money. That's one reason electricity is costing you more. But it's the only way to make sure you'll have the electricity you need, at rates still much lower than the national average.

Mrs. Vera Smith

Replies made to son who would sue parents

DEAR ABBY: I am sorry for SERIOUS IN N.Y., who is considering suing his parents for $100,000 for having him circumcised while he was a helpless infant and unable to fight back. He claims that he was "disfigured," which is hardly valid, because most of us wear sufficient clothing so that no one will know whether we are circumcised or not.

When I was born, 73 years ago, circumcision was not very popular, and I doubt that my parents, who lived on a minister's salary, even considered it. I fervently wish that they had circumcised me because much of my life I have had trouble.

In the years before men wore clothing, the foreskin provided some protection. Perhaps if nudism comes in, circumcision will go out.

RETIRED MINISTER DEAR ABBY: As a dull-witted Englishman, the "brotherly love" characterized by the American people who sue each other on the slightest pretext is still beyond my comprehension. I refer to that SERIOUS male moron who wants to

No one has ever solved the mystery of why the bottom piece always peeks out from under the top piece on belts, cuffs, straps, etc. However, we do work out a solution now and then.

For example, on patch pockets: when you turn the pocket hem (facing) to the outside of the pocket, pull the edges of the facing past the side edges of the pocket a smidge before pinning. This makes the facing narrower than the pocket, and therefore, keeps the facing to the underside when you stitch

"I'd rather explain higher gas bills than why you don't have gas."

Your natural gas bill is higher. And, you have every right to know why.

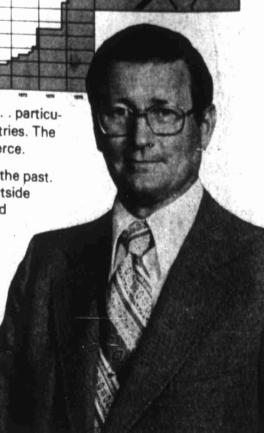

One reason is lower temperatures brought on by winter.

The main reason, however, is simply that you are paying more for natural gas. Because we are paying more. This chart shows how much: This increase hurts both you and Pioneer. It adds to your bill and to our cost . . . a cost for which Pioneer is not entirely compensated. It is passed through without mark-up or additional charges. Why does gas cost more? Competition . . . particularly from petrochemical and other industries. The competition for gas has never been so fierce. We will have to pay more for gas than in the past. But by working together, and without outside interference, you'll have the gas you need today and in the future.

Copley News Service
"Mrs. Roosevelt is the greatest woman alive and if she came into this room, we all ought to get down on our knees before her." Alexander Woollcott spoke those words about a woman who received no formal education; a woman from a family so wealthy a lady needn't do much of anything, a woman frequently accused of meddling where she didn't belong.

Today, when so many women are struggling with personal and social change, it's encouraging to look at the life of someone who went through a similar intellectual and emotional

The trek from a lonely girl and a timid bride to first lady of the United States, and eventually its delegate to the United Nations, was a rugged road for Eleanor Roosevelt.

She'd always been sensitive to the plight of the less fortunate, but in 1920 when women struggled for the right to vote, Mrs. Roosevelt had to think before choosing sides.

Then, in 1921 Franklin D. Roosevelt was sticken with polio. Though she knew he'd always be crippled, his wife believed he could live a full life. In hopes of restoring his interest in politics, Eleanor joined the League of Women Voters. There she met female political activists, labor organizers and educators who devoted their energy to social change

Her plan to inspire FDR's recovery was successful. But the effect on Eleanor herself was even deeper. Her concern for world problems had been awakened, and once the seed of awareness had burst forth, it grew and blossomed and bore fruit. She and several friends started a nonprofit furniture factory where unemployed young men of Hyde Park were trained to make reproductions of Early American furniture. They purchased the Todhunter School in New York where three days a week, Eleanor taught American history, literature and civics.

When her husband was elected governor of New York, Mrs. Roosevelt's involvement in women's and children's welfare expanded. Then came the depression, and to assist her husband, Eleanor began acting as his proxy at many public events. Because of the difficulty he had in getting about, she often served as his eyes and ears on the outside

When the Roosevelts moved to the White House, she held a press conference for female journalists only. She felt this might give women reporters greater job security, since they were usually fired first when budgets got tight. She entertained a laced the guest lists with unknown writers, artists and students. When criticized, she explained, "I thought it would be interesting for them.' During the depression and World War II, Eleanor Roosevelt gave unbelievable energy to helping people. She lectured, wrote, telephoned public officials to support Social Security legislation, descended into coal mines, picnicked with children and toured the globe, always lobbying for greater understanding and tolerance among the people of the world. After FDR died, Mrs. Roosevelt continued for another 17 years to work for the well-being of mankind

The Rev. Mike McKinney, pastor of Moran's First Baptist Church, officiated the double ring ceremony in the home of the bride's parents.

The bride, when presented in marriage by her father, wore an Aline Jarmel knit gown. Alencon lace enhanced the fitted bodice with the high neckline, Empire waist and short sleeves accented by daisy trim. Her waist-length illusion veil was trimmed with daisy accents and held by a lace and seed pearl headpiece. The bride carried her sister's Bible and a bouquet of pink roses surrounding a white gardenia.

Attendants for the couple were Mrs. Vaughn Coffman and Michael Vanderworth, both of Wichita Falls. Vonda Nichols, pianist, provided nuptial selections.

A reception was held in the Johnson home. After a trip to Fort Worth, the newlyweds will reside in Athens, where the bridegroom is employed by Texas Utilities Co.

MERIT and MERIT MENTHOL

You can write today for a study conducted by the American Institute of Consumer Opinion for Philip Morris showing that 9 mg. tar MERIT delivers as much—or more flavor than higher tar brands—brands having up to 60%

So we focused on the business end of smoking. The tobacco end. And decided if we wanted to get more flavor through to you, we'd just have to start with more.

After a twelve-year effort, our Richmond Research Center succeeded. They isolated the "key" flavor ingredients of tobacco as they exist in cigarette smoke.

By fortifying tobacco with those natural ingredients Philip Morris Inc. 1976 that proved to be high flavor yet low tar producers, they were able to pack MERIT with 'Enriched Flavor' - without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

Taste Tested By People Like You

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, tested at home*

The results were conclusive. Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar than MERIT, a significant majority of all smokers tested

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

Copiers on way back

Yes sir, the photocopying machines will be returned to service as promptly as possible in the Central Post Office and in the Village and Graves postal stations-

This is good news to many patrons and to numerous postal workers as well.

It is a nationwide project and postal personnel must have baught a whole lot of flak in a brief eriod of time. The order to eplace the machines in post ffices across the land certainly was not long in coming after they had been removed.

The machines probably never should have been removed, once hey were installed. Their removal was ordered by the ostmaster general, who yielded to the pressure from some congressmen who, in turn, were gielding to pressure from some small business interests which offer copying service and didn't like the competition.

But once the coin-operated copying machines were in place in nost office lobbies, they provided useful and convenient service to many patrons, often at less cost than available elsewhere. Patrons who liked and used the machines weren't about to give them up without loud protest.

At the same time, it is said they provided a million dollars a year in profit to the Postal Service. This is something in itself ... and certainly the Postal Service needs every million it can pick up here and there.

The congressmen who originally complained about the machines were responding to a small group of their constituents representing a special interest. They soon were hearing complaints about the removal of the machines from the much larger number of their constituents who represent the general interest in public service.

This really is an interesting point about the entire matter ... the fact that citizen pressure quickly and effectively overshadowed the special interest pressure, and the complaining congressmen pulled back real quick like. Public opinion still is: all-powerful in America.

Anyway, and right or wrong, the head man of the Postal Service has notified post offices that the service, discontinued about a month ago, would be resumed.

And now, what's next on the

It would be well for every American to ponder this very situation and to determine now to vote and to vote intelligently in the 1976 elections.

Congress may ease laws on marijuana

By BENJAMIN SHORE Copley News Service WASHINGTON — As 1976 began, six states had drastically reduced the penalty for personal possession of marijuana. Three still kept it a criminal offense, while the other three dropped it into the civil offense

This so-called decriminalization of marijuana laws will be considered by 27 more state legislatures this year, with six to eight of them considered likely prospects for passage.

The slow trend toward decriminalization may get a boost from the U.S. Congress, which has been considering such legislation for several years.

Although only about 2 per cent of all marijuana arrests in 1974 (the latest year analyzed) were by federal police, it is normal for states to be influenced by federal changes in many areas of law. There is one decriminalization bill pending in the House and one in the Senate. A House official handling the legislation there candidly admitted that no action is planned in this

That leaves the field open to the Senate, where a Judiciary subcommittee is planning to draft a comprehensive bill, possibly by the end of the summer.

It is doubtful that the full Judiciary Committee headed by conservative Democrat James O. Eastland of Mississippi will take up any such legislation this year.

But it will be considered a major victory for advocates of decriminalization if the Senate subcommittee is able to draft a federal bill, which then could be used as a model for state legislatures to (Legalization, which would treat marijuana like alcohol, is not a candidate for serious consideration on Capitol Hill.)

The subcommittee is chaired by Sen. Birch Bayh. D-Ind., and the decriminalization bill that he is expected to introduce (and have referred to his subcommittee) by the end of February will reflect the efforts of his staff to write a bill that addresses the several major problems it sees in various decriminalization proposals.

Chief among them is whether some state and local law enforcement agencies would become overzealous in pursuing pot smokers once the offense is considered minor.

Although the Constitution's protection against "unreasonable search and seizure" would apply to civil as well as criminal offenses, some judges might weigh the "reasonableness" factor differently in a low-penalty or civil case.

Although marijuana-related police abuse has not increased in Oregon, which in 1973 became the first state to decriminalize its marijuana possession laws. Bayh nevertheless is concerned about the possibility in other states.

But, in general, Bayh supports decriminalization for personal possession of one ounce or less, as well as for not-for-profit transfers of one ounce or less.

Bayh is concerned over the staggering amount of public police funds - over $600 million - spent in 1974 on marijuana enforcement, plus the excessive burden placed on otherwise overcrowded criminal courts.

He notes that 70 per cent of all drug arrests are for marijuana, up from 45 per cent five years ago. In numbers of arrests, the "crime" problem has own from 18,000 in 1965 to 445,00

Bayh believes that the law enforcement and court systems are being thrown off balance by maintaining pot smoking as a serious criminal offense.

Given the growing social acceptance of marijuana, the recommendation of decriminalization by a special commission appointed by President Nixon and the lack of compelling evidence of serious medical harm. Bayh believes the time for decriminalization has come.

Defense contract racket eyed

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - No sounding trumpet stirs the hearts of weapons makers quite like a call for more military spending. President Ford's request for a $112.7 billion defense budget, therefore, brought joy to the tractors.

Now the great scramble for military contracts begins anew. Each weapons system is supported by a formidable lobby, composed of the military brass who want it, the contractors who manufacture the component parts, the workers who put them together and the congressmen whose districts enjoy the economic

The Navy's caustic Admiral Hyman Rickover is one of the few who not only have resisted the pressure but have spoken out about it. "It is almost subversive," he once snorted, "not to want to spend government money. The real pressure we get is to undertake more projects to spend more money." The pressure, he said, "is generally in the nature of urging me to undertake new projects which we consider not worthwhile.

The pressure is social as well as political. The giant contractors, such as Northrop Corporation and Rockwell International, court Pentagon officials assiduously. The way to many a defense contract has been greased by a mixture of booze, blondes and barbecues.

The brass hats and the industrialists shoot together in duck blinds. They ski together on the Colorado slopes. They drink together and play poker together. And invariably, the tab is picked up by some smiling corporate executive.

many Pentagon officials, upon retirement, go to work for the companies that had come to them for contracts. The last time we counted them, we found 715 former Pentagon bigwigs scattered over the payrolls of the top defense contractors.

It's a rare contractor that doesn't employ a few retired generals and admirals who are on a first-name basis with the Pentagon's big brass. Northrop Corporation, for example, has 64 ex-Pentagon officials on the payroll. This may help to explain how Northrop has managed to wangle a whopping $620.3 million in military

Boeing Corporation, which is doing a $1.56 billion business with the Pentagon, has 48 former Pentagon bigwigs on the staff. And Rockwell International, with $732.3 million in defense contracts, has 36 ex-officials in key jobs

From Pentagon files, here are a few examples:

-Vice Adm. Robert Townshend was chairman of the selection advisory council, which recommended Grumman for the multi-billion-dollar F-14 fighter plane contract. One month after he retired from the Navy, he joined Grumman International. -Capt. Richard Anderson used to represent the Navy at the General Dynamics plant in Pomona, Calif. He was entrusted to see that General Dynamics met government stanallegiances to General Dynamics, which has hired him as a consultant Anderson told us he had not violated the public trust. -Col. Albert Lehner was the Air Force representative at a Boeing plant. When he resigned from the Air Force, he joined Boeing. "If I didn't think it was ethical," he told us, "I wouldn't have done it (gone to work for Boeing). -As an Air Force officer, Lt. Gen.

Glenn Kent prepared and reviewed analytical work for the Pentagon. Now he does the same thing for Northrop, Westinghouse, Boeing and Lulejian and Associates.

- A senior Navy project officer, J.J. West, of the Naval Material Command, handled eight consecutive procurement requests involving SEACOR as a contractor. Some were dated after he told the Navy he was retiring. A week after West retired from the Navy, he accepted a job with SEACOR. He told us that SEACOR was only one of several firms that offered him a job before he left the Navy and that there was no conflict of interest.

-Fred J. Buzhardt had been the Defense Department's general counsel. Then he moved over to the White House to become one of Richard Nixon's Watergate defenders. Now he has gone back to private practice, with Raytheon, Inc., as one of his clients.

The defense contractors also slip their own people into Pentagon procurement offices as secretaries, clerks and even engineers. They are called "contractor personnel" and are loaned to the Pentagon ostensibly to help the overloaded bureaucrats.

But in fact, the borrowed workers have access to secret information concerning their own companies. On occasion, they even write procurement requests for their firms.

When Adm. F.H. Michaelis took over the Naval Material Command last May, he was upset to find the place swarming with employees on loan from the same contractors doing business with the Navy.

He ordered his top aide, Rear Adm. S.J. Evans, to fire off a strong letter intended for the eyes only of his top officials. Evans warned them to "be alert to improper use of contractor personnel." He called attention, in particular, to "the presence of contractor personnel working alongside Navy personnel." This could lead, he noted, to "unwarranted access by contractor personnel to Navy files

The use of contractor personnel to do clerical work for the Navy or the use of contractors' employees interchangeably with Navy workers, added Evans, was not only improper but "illegal." He ordered an immediate clean-up - an order, our sources tell us, that has been largely ignored.

In some cases, employees of the contractors are still working on procurement requests affecting their own companies. Thus a contractor, who needs more money for parts or re-design, can arrange with his inside man to write up the order. Often it is subject merely to a pro forma "okay" by a Navy employee.

INSIDE REPORT:

Gov. David Boren: Jimmy Carter's friend in Oklahoma

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

OKLAHOMA CITY - Gov. David Boren, the most popular politician in Oklahoma today, prefers Jimmy Carter for President but, for now, is seeking uncommitted national convention delegates — a posture both reartening and worrisome nationally for the Carter campaign. The governor's preference, though mannounced and tentative, puts a different meaning on Oklahoma's emocratic precinct caucuses Feb. 7. arter not only may lead all candidates in electing delegates to county conventions, but his potential rength here also must include what ay be the largest bloc chosen in the ecincts: uncommitted delegates led

If Boren prefers Carter, why not be one with it and endorse him right w? Partly because Boren is not ntirely sure what the little Georgia eanut farmer with the warm smile nd the icy eyes really stands for. "I wish Carter," Boren told us, "were out 50 per cent stronger on the things I'm concerned about" - those dings being "conservative, states' sights, fiscally sound government." National implications are double-edged for Carter. A first-place finish Oklahoma, added to his speccular win in Iowa and his respecble second place in Mississippi behind Gov. George Wallace), would ccelerate Carter's boom. But foren's hesitation suggests Carter on may have to choose where he eally stands, a choice that could educe his broad but amorphous base just elected governor at age 33 in a stunning rise from obscurity, Carter nearing the end of his four-year term as governor of Georgia. Seeking tips from Carter about streamlining government, Boren enjoyed the famous Carter hospitality at the governor's mansion and, like many before him, was entranced.

Boren and Carter first met in Atlanta in November 1974 - Boren

Through most of 1975, it was presumed Boren would endorse Carter. When he instead edged into the uncommitted camp a few weeks ago, Oklahoma political circles put out reports he had been so advised by Speaker Carl Albert, the state's senior Democrat. Boren told us he had discussed the presidential picture with Albert, who expressed his own intention to stay uncommitted but gave no advice. Boren explained reasons for his uncommitted stance in an interview at the governor's mansion. While declaring "I lean toward Carter." he said he wants to see whether Carter can win in the early primaries before endorsing him. Moreover, Boren was bitterly disappointed by Carter's support for the energy bill continuing oil price controls. While returning Carter's hospitality by entertaining him here last November, Boren believed he talked houseguest Carter into a fiveyear deregulation of natural gas. Nevertheless he is worried that Carter does not fully share his concern about big government and big

Thus, Boren this week was preparing to launch an active campaign for uncommitted delegates. Indeed, Boren's hand-picked Democratic state chairman, State Sen. Robert Funston, has been pursuing that course for some time. So have labor leaders, particularly in Tulsa, who still yearn for Sen. Hubert Humphrey. The upshot: the Feb. 7 caucuses could go over 50 per cent undecided against three active candidates - Carter, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and former Sen.

Fred Harris of Oklahoma. Bentsen is supported by remnants of the old Kerr machine led by the savvy William Reynolds, a longtime political aide to the late Sen. Robert S. Kerr. Rep. Tom Steed argues for Bentsen on grounds he will remain a U.S. Senator from Texas even if disappointed nationally and could help Oklahoma, which has two Republican Senators. That argument is more compelling to yesterday's old pros than today's issue-oriented amateurs.

Harris is a most unfavorite son not solely because of his leftward plunge but also by having ignored erstwhile Oklahoma supporters since leaving the state for good in 1973. Still, liberals in Oklahoma City, Tulsa and college communities give him a dependable hard core.

Boren fears Harris' strength in the servative Oklahoma, with noncandidate Humphrey, "acceptable, but no more," as third choice. But Boren considers Bentsen "a regional candidate" who will not be nominated. That leaves Jimmy caucuses and views him as "too radical" - out of line with the thinking of Oklahoma. He sees Carter and Bentsen as the Democrats best able to carry an increasingly con-

Whether Boren follows this reasoning by later delivering his uncommitted delegates for Carter depends on two factors: first, how Carter runs in the early primaries; second, what happens to Boren's nagging doubts about Carter on the issues. But can Carter become the 'conservative, states' rights, fiscally sound" candidate wanted in Oklahoma and still win Northern primaries? That question haunts the Carter campaign.

Deserters drift away from UFO promotion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Deserters from the Great Lost UFO Cult are straggling back after a summer and fall of spiritual wandering, settling gently to earth in a pleasant rustic halfway house in the seclusion of Topanga Canyon.

They have dropped out by choice. most of them disillusioned with what was to have been a journey to a new life beyond the earth promised by the cult's elusive leaders, Bo and Peep, also known as The Two.

Last April, an original group of 24 threw off their families and possessions and dropped out of sight. Many others joined later.

They followed The Two, later identifed as Marshall Herff Applewhite, 44, and Bonnie Lu Trusdale Nettles, 48, of Houston. The leaders promised that those who dared to give up everything would be transported aboard a .UFO to another spiritual Followers were required to bring camping gear, clothes, a vehicle and some money. They traveled to various parts of the country, some camping in the desert.

Most of the followers, according to Joan Culpepper, are now scattered across the warmer states of the West and Southwest, still believing they will "graduate" to a higher state of spiritual knowledge.

deserves a second chance, and that includes the person put behind prison bars.

Tharp, 27, is a state vice president of the Texas Jaycees. He was nominated last year as one of the five outstanding young men in the state.

He also is an inmate at the Federal Correctional Institution in nearby Seagoville, convicted of the 1974 robbery of a bank in Shreveport, La.

A soft-spoken, easy-going man, Tharp will be released from prison Feb. 19 and he said in a recent interview, "Give a guy a chance when he gets out. If everybody thinks he is dirt, he will think so too. A lot of men who would never get into trouble again do so only because they are backed into a corner.

Sentenced to five years in prison, Tharp spent his hours reading, studying, working with Jaycee projects. He also drafted a 10-point program he is certain would reduce repeat offenses and help combat the current growing crime rate.

Once released, he says he will take the plan to all who will hear him, to Congress, the U.S. Supreme Court, heads of all Protestant denominations, Roman Catholic bishops and leaders of civic clubs throughout the United States.

Tharp has a job waiting on his release, public relations director for Volunteers in America, a service county jail facilities.

offenders. Second offenders should serve their entire -Reinstitution of the death penalty for violent crimes. "I think this would be a definite deterrent to people murdering one another and feeling they could get out of it easily. -A pardon for all first offenders not convicted of a violent crime with all constitutional rights restored.

-Sentencing of youthful first offenders not involve ed in crimes using guns or hard drugs to service programs, such as work in hospitals, or nursing homes. -Permission of a parolee to enlist in the military

-Use of federal prison guidelines for state and

-Get civic organizations and churches to petition federal and state correctional officials to allow prisoners more participation in clubs and activities. -Permit all youth penal institutions to begin unior achievement programs to teach "the youths the American way of life and how they can succeed legitimately."

-Regular conjugal visits, as now being done in California and Mississippi. "The prison system in effect condones homosexuality, divorce and separation of families." The 10th step is a review of Tharp's disgust with a

On February 10, the voters of Midland will decide whether to complete the Midland College campus by building a new academic classroom-fine arts facility and an addition to the occupationaltechnical building. These building were included in the original Midland College plans but had to be eliminated because of skyrocketing construction costs which were unforeseeable at that time.

IN ORDER TO MEET THE NEEDS OF GROWING ENROLLMENT AT THE COLLEGE—NOW MORE THAN 2,000 STUDENTS-THESE FACILITIES ARE ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY, AND SHOULD TAKE CARE OF COLLEGE NEEDS WELL INTO THE 1980's.

The SECOND Proposition on the ballot is for bonds to build a multi-purpose center for JOINT USE by Midland College, Midland Independent School District, and the entire community. Unless this facility is constructed, the public schools must build a new gymnasium at Midland High School at an estimated cost of $1,000,000.00 and Midland College would be required to "add on" to its present physical education center at an estimated cost of $750,000.00 to meet new requirements of the U.S. Dept. of Health, Education & Welfare that equal physical education and athletic programs be offered to both men and women. This would cost the taxpayers $1,750,000.00 for two limited-use facilities, not adaptable to other community needs.

IT MAKES SENSE TO BUILD ONE BUILDING FOR JOINT USE BY MIDLAND COLLEGE AND BOTH HIGH SCHOOLS, WHICH CAN ALSO BE USED BY THE ENTIRE COMMUNITY FOR MANY, MANY WORTHWHILE PURPOSES!

Chaps host Hawks today

Although Howard College is only 5-5 in Western Junior College Conference play, Coach Harold Wilder believes this may be his best Hawk team since he left Abilene High after back-toback 5-4A championships.

"We've probably got better depth than at any time in my six years here. We don't have the size like when Thomas Bledsoe (TCU) and Charles Williams (Miss. State) were here. Both of them were 6-7 and Bledsoe went 225, so they gave us a great double post pairs' says Wilder.

"But we've got decent size at 6-6 (freshman Paul Cathey), 6-5 (Marvin Johnson), 6-4 (Larry Erb), 6-3 (Ray Martin and Reggie Leffal).

Wilder, whose Hawks play Midland College at MC gym tonight, also may have another scorer like the fabled Archie Meyers, who scored 50 points five times one year.

JOHNSON, A 6-5 sophomore from DeRidder, La., is the nation's junior college scoring leader with a 32.1 average

But Ben Crenshaw weathered it. He stuck it out. He worked at his trade. And, almost three years after he hit the pro golf tour with such incredible impact, he's reached his maturity. "I think he is coming up on the Ben Crenshaw we were expecting," said Hale Irwin, beaten by Gentle Ben in the stretch drive for the title in the Hawaiian Open. "I think he has realized his maturity. I think he will carry on into the upper levels of the Crenshaw's final round, sixunderpar 66 Sunday lifted him to his second consecutive tour title and reestablished him as one of the game's brightest young stars—a role he held three years back, then surrendered in his times of struggle.

He hit the tour with gaudy credentials-three consecutive national collegiate titles. He won in his first start as a fullfledged member of the tour. He immediately fell prey to comparisons with Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer and all the greats of the game. They called him "the best Ben since Hogan.'

It was too much too soon "I won right off the bat," the 24year-old Crenshaw said. "I wasn't ready for it. I think I put too much pressure on myself. I was pressing, trying too hard to win, to finish high. I didn't know enough.

"Last year I was just trying to work my way up the ladder, so to speak. I think I improved myself and I think I improved my game.

knew I could win the golf tournament. I don't know how to explain it, but I knew.'

He won it by a comfortable four strokes with a 270 total, 18 under par and a record on the 7,219-yard Waialae Country Club course. The victory was worth $46,000 from the total purse of $230,000, set him up as the year's leading money-winner with $88,680, put him in the World Series of Golf and made him the first golfer of the season to win consecutive tournaments. He'd won the Bing Crosby just the week before, following the same come-from-behind formula. In each tournament, he was three shots back going into the final round.

He made up most of that with a front-nine 31, five under par, took the lead to stay with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 10th hole and nailed it down when he picked up four strokes over Irwin in a four-hole stretch starting on

Irwin, bothered by a heavy cold all

unheralded Larry Nelson for second at 274. Nelson had a last-round 69.

U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, Charles Coody, Al Geiberger and Mike Morley followed at 275. Morley had a closing 66, Graham 68, Coody 69 and Geiberger 71.

Bob Murphy, who shared the lead at times over the first nine holes, bogeyed five of six holes coming home. He finished with a 74 and was tied at 276 with a group that included Lee Trevino, who shot four consecutive 69s. Arnold Palmer, who came so close to victory in this tournament a year ago, never really got in the chase this time. He had a final 71 and 279

"It's an incredible experience," Crenshaw said. "I just don't know what to say. I know it can't continue. I can't keep on winning forever."

And he isn't going to try. He is taking a two-week break from the tour and won't compete again until the Los Angeles Open.

24 Hours race

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Time stood still Sunday for Brian Redman and Peter Gregg. In fact, it even reversed itself by 72 minutes.

The gerrymandering of the race clock, a 3-hour. 49-minute cessation of competition and a suspected case of sabotage were the ingredients of Gregg's unprecedented third straight overall victory and the first for Redman in one of the strangest 24 Hours of Daytona endurance races ever.

The race clock was stopped during the event, for the first time in its 15-year history, at 10:12 a.m. Sunday when four of the frontrunning cars, including the race leading Gregg-Redman BMW CSL, sputtered to a halt with watered gasoline in their tanks.

OFFICIALS DECIDED the problem was more than a case of unfortunate racing luck. An investigation located water in one of the compartments of a fuel truck that had serviced pit road just after

At 9:01 a.m., the leader had routinely pitted for more fuel- and that's when the trouble began.

We saw too late that there was water mixed with the fuel we had pumped into the car," said BMW team manager Jochen Neerpasch. The two other factory BMWs in the race also received the watered fuel before the problem was discovered.

As the crews battled furiously to purge all the moisture from the porous, foam-filled gas tanks, the second-place Porsche Carrera of John O'Steen, John Graves and Dave Helmick began to chip away at the BMW's 16-lap advantage.

But the challenger also pitted for fuel, encountering the same problem. Finally, with the Carrera of Jim Busby and Hurley Haywood, Gregg's co-driver in the last two 24 Hours races, bearing down on the lead, officials of the sanctioning International Motor Sports Association blew the whistle.

'We felt it was in the best interests of the greatest number of competitors to stop the race until the problem could be traced and corrected," said IMSA President John Bishop. During the delay, all fuel tanks were flushed and fresh gasoline was trucked in from Jacksonville, 70 miles away A SPOKESMAN for Union Oil Co., supplier of the logical explanation. The water didn't just suddenly appear. Someone had to put it in there," said one official, who asked not to be identified. "But we'll probably never be able to find out who did it." The other two factory BMWs, and the O'Steen-Graves-Helmick Carrera were irreparably

'It was probably sabotage, I know of no other damaged by the water in their fuel systems. "I honestly feel the decision was reasonably fair," said Redman. "Several other cars were affected and others would have been."

I know the Union Oil Co. people who supply the fuel here have the strictest quality controls," Gregg added. "It could have been that somebody put water in deliberately." WHATEVER DID happen, the race was resumed at 12:49, with he official clocks turned back to 9 a.m., just before the trouble started. That restored the

BMW's 16-lap lead over the runnerup and 26 laps

But with the battle-scarred, white and rainbowstriped BMW chugging along since before dawn on only five cylinders with an exhausted Redman at the wheel, victory was less than certain. "I've never been so tired after a race," Redman "I had driven a four-hour stretch during the night (two hours is usually tops) after Peter became

Redman, considered by his contemporaries to be underrated despite his many accomplishments, ended up driving about 15 of the less than 21 actual hours of competition.

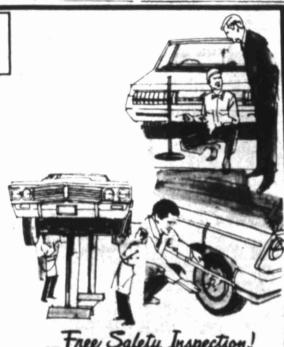

THE WINNERS covered 2,093 miles, or 545 laps around the 3.84-mile Daytona International Speedway road course, at an average speed of 104.04 miles per hour, short of any records. The final two hours were run in an almost continual downpour, with a tornado watch posted for the area.

MIAMI (AP) - Judy Rankin might be one of the tiniest players on the women's golf tour, but she's the only one who kept her game together during winds which gusted to 45 miles per hour-and it meant $5,700.

"I don't suppose I've ever played in winds harder than that." the 5-foot-3 blonde from Midland, Tex., said Sunday after shooting a one-underpar 71 for a winning 54-hole total of

"I don't keep the ball superlow. But I think I kept my head, understood what the wind was going to do and chose the right clubs. She was the only woman in the Ladies Professional Golf Association field of 60 not to fall apart in the cold and rain at the 5,670-yard Kendale Lakes Golf and Country Club course. She was three shots ahead of runnerup Pat Bradley, who closed with 74. Saturday coleaders Jane Blalock and Kathy Whitworth soared to 76 and 77, respectively, to end up third and fourth at 217 and 218. "I came down here because I've always been a slow starter," said Mrs. Rankin, 31, a 15-year tour player. "I had never won a tournament in Florida, and it's kind of a thing with me this year to play well in Her determination enabled her to overcome a triple-bogey eight on the first hole she played Friday. "I just kept trying," she said. "I knew this was a course you could get lots of birdies on." She had only three birdies Sunday, but held her bogeys to two to be the only player to break par.

Mrs. Rankin, a runnerup six times last year when she pocketed $50,174. got help from the lakes to beat Miss

Bradley.
Miss Bradley owned a two-shot lead after getting a birdie on the 12th hole. But after a 20-minute holdup for lightning, she hit the water on 13 for a triple bogey. She regained a share of the lead with birdies on the next two holes, but had a double bogey on 16 when she hit the water again.

"If I didn't swim, I think I would have won," said Miss Bradley. "The wind was blowing tremendously left to right. Usually my ball will drift to the right. I didn't want to go right and was thinking about it when I swung (on both bogey holes).

"I felt kind of dejected, but felt proud I kept my composure and managed to hold onto second," added the third-year player from Westford,

Miss Bradley, who won the 1975 Far East Open to finish with $28,293 in season earnings, took home $4,170 in this initial event of the season. Miss Blalock earned $3,200 and Miss Whitworth $2,600. Tied for fifth at 219, worth $1,900 each, were first-round coleader Mary Mills, who closed with a 77, and Kathy Postlewait.

Some folks don't think the Southwest Conference basketball race will be settled until Valentine's Day when Texas Tech takes on the Texas Aggies in that place you wouldn't want to visit and play basketball-G. Rollie White Coliseum in College Station.

But the SWC chase is no longer a two-team affair. Permit Southern Methodist as dissenting vote in this election year.

already making unrealistic salaries. Especially in view of the fact that most of them would play regardless of salary. I think the World Football League proved that. You never heard of a WFL player quitting the team because he wasn't getting paid. Now that says something in itself. For the most part-well maybe all of them-owners have given their players resonable pay scales. In fact, they are more than resonable. For this kindness of heart by the owners. the fan continuously pays more at the gate for his ticket, more at the parking lot to get into the stadium and more at the concession stand to feed his ever hungry kids. If players are given free agent status when their contracts with one club is fulfilled, then it resonably follows that salaries will increase. That's not to say that the players will be worth more, but their market value will climb to the needs of certain clubs. THAT CAN and will mean only one thing. The fan is going to pay through the nose-or will he?

When will the fan rebel? How long will he continue to pay to see overpaid stars do their thing? A mere mental error could ban a player from the city at the kind of prices we are talking about, or even worse, there may be a lot of talent on the field with no one to watch in the stands.

I like to watch a Johnny Bench or a O. J. Simpson play as well as anyone. I love to see Jeff Burroughs smack one over the fence, or Fran Tarkenton scramble from all those big guys, or Rick Berry pluck buckets; but it is already to the point that I can't afford to see many of these stars play during the course of a year.

I just don't think the fan can stand much more. Athletes are getting a little greedy, and it may be time to bring back the Sunday afternoon family picnic instead of hauling off to the ball park.

Old tools asset to phótographer

By AMEI WALLACH Newsday

NEW YORK - The idea, when Iwin Glusker thoutht of it, was so simple that as the best ideas do, it immediately seemed commonplace. As though it had been around for a long time.

He was watching a film when the idea came to him. It was a film on the sculptor Brancusi, made by the photographer Hans Namuth, who, as it happens, is Glusker's

ENTERTAINMENT

Some of the sculptures in the film were wood. Some were steel. Wood and steel. For the former art director for American Heritage and Horizon magazines, that rang a bell. Of course. Wood and steel. Tools. The tools that the early settlers of this country and their descendants used every day.

Glusker tells what happened next:

"Hans and I had done stories together before, for Horizon, so I knew we were on the same wavelength. I went to the guy and I said, 'Get some old tools and photograph them as sculpture.

"He said, 'Why?' "I said, 'Don't ask, do it."

And Namuth did. He found a wooden jack plane that some colonial carpenter may have used to smooth boards. A sugar auger, used to break up the sugar that came possibly Colonial Williamsburg.

The photographs are also the basis of a book, "Early American Tools," published by Olivetti Corp. for distribution to its-friends and contacts. It hadn't been planned that way. The project, in Glusker's mind, was meant to turn into a trade book put out by a popular publisher. But no publisher was interested. So Namuth, who had dealt with Olivetti in the past, approached that company, and the suggestion was made that since Olivetti made tools - far more sophisticated ones, of course - it might be interested in this book as "Bicentennial birthday card to the people of America."

The tools are objects where function came first. Modern architects like to follow the dictum that form should follow function. Only sometimes did form matter at all to the makers of these tools. They simply wanted to get something done and to make the simplest tood to do it with. Some of those tools still work. They're still used in restorations. A complex apple corer used by colonial housewives has never ben improved upon. It cored, peeled and sliced apples all atonce. Of course it wasn't strictly reliable. But it worked often enough if the apples were just the right size and just the right firmness. And we today have nothing to match it.

Namuth's choice of using natural light to photograph the tools gives them a staunch quality of age like something seen in a musty barn. The tools are highlighted, but only because their environment is so dark. It's the kind of light Caravaggio evolved in the 16th Century, and for which Rembrandt is best know. A spotlight out of darkness. Stark drama.

Namuth first started noticing old tools in the early '60s. He is known mainly as a photographer of modern artists, and the artist Jim Dine had a collection of tools that he sometimes incorporated in his

'60 Minutes' fares well in competition

By LAWRENCE LAURENT

The Washington Post The first phenomenon of television's second season is "60 Minutes," a news oriented series that is competing, quite successfully, with entertainment program. Nearly everyone in the TV business is convinced that news programs always fail when placed against entertainment programs.

current movie may be his last.

Wayne is on location at Carson

But in its first month, "60 Minutes" has stayed in second place in the 6 p.m., Sunday time period (CBS). It trails "The Wonderful World of Walt Disney," but has consistantly beaten ABC-TV's "Swiss Family Robinson." (Mythology aside, it does help to have an entertainment program as weak as "Swiss Fami-

"Sixty Minutes" succeeds, says executive producer Don Hewitt, by being able to "package reality as attractively as Hollywood packages fiction." In a quieter moment, he sees the series as a combination of stories that are too long for daily newscasts and too short for the long documentary.

From its 1968 premiere as an alternate-week program (Tuesdays), "60 Minutes" grew to 36 telecasts last season and is now designated to run 52 weeks a year. The expanded schedule brought the hiring of Dan Rather as the third member of the well established team of Mike Wallace and Morley Safer. Rather, at first, was reluctant and there was much speculation abot how well he would fit into the program.

"I talked man-to-man with both Mike and Morley," Rather recalled. "Each said, in effect, 'We need a third person. You're the person we want'

"There simply hasn't been a problem. Mike, Morley and Don Hewitt built this broadcast. Now, as a new member of the team, the onus is on me to learn just how Mike and Morley do so many good pieces so consistently.

Dan Rather found he'd let himself in for a heavy load of work and he spends most of the week at CBS News headquarters on the west side of Manhattan, or out with a film crew on assignment. "I've been running ever since I got here," Dan decorative items of ivory Rather said the "average '60 Minutes' pieces takes six or eight weeks to do." This includes the research, the reporting, filming, writing and editing. "Then," said Rather, "you polish.

The exhibition includes When we talked recently this items drawn from month. Rather was working on a collections in Midland story about violence in the schools: a story about actor Robert Redplus important pieces ford's fight with a western power from The University of company; an updated story about Texas at Austin, the Field the first black students admitted to Museum in Chicago and the University of Alabama; plus, the Diamond M Museum features on a big city police department's bomb disposal squad, and on the conflict's of interest among members of the Congress.

Meanwhile, Wallace was working on two stories set in Italy. One is set in Bologna, which elected a Community Party member as mayor, The other is an interview with journalist Oriana Fallaci. Safer's work centered on the lasd days of one time teamsters Union boss James R. Hoffa and a feature story on Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown (D-Calif:)

To Hewitt, "60 Minutes" is intended "to shine a light in dark corners" and, at the same time, serve as an Ombudsman to the citizen who has no other place to turn. "I mean," says Hewitt, "the person who needs somebody to fight s battle and there's nobody Hewitt spouts examples: There was the elderly oil company worker in California who was threatened with the loss of his pension after the rules for retirement were changed. "It was legal," Hewitt said, "but it was wrong." There was "the airline pilot in Texas who questioned the safety of an atomic energy plant and found himself being investigated by Texas

Hewitt also recalls an aircraft inspector in Georgia who pointed out defects in planes and suffered social ostracism. And there was the recent story about chemical workers in Hopewell, Va. who suffered medical ills from a pesticide called kepone.

The subjects vary widely and there is only one Hewitt rule: "The length of a story is dictated by its value." He adds a joking, "and by the length of my short attention

Hewitt now sees "60 Minutes" as the logical extension to having spent more than half of his 58 years with CBS News. He moved over from print journalism and rose to direct the evening news pro-

He is perhaps best known as the director of the first of the "Great Debates" between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon on Sept. 26, 1960. Hewitt introduced himself to the candidates and said, "I assume you two gentlemen know each other reporters, Hewitt can call on members of a unit that includes 15 producers, 15 film editors and one director. The one director is Arthur Bloom and while Hewitt won a collection of Emmy awards as a director, he insists that Bloom is now "the best in the business." I asked, "Better than Don Hewitt?" The answer: "Yeah 'fraid so.'

Railroads reiterate complaint against pipeline eminent domain

AUSTIN - Texas railroads got another chance to tell a legislative committee how much they hate the idea of coal slurry pipeline companies having the right of eminent domain.

In fact, the Legislature may not even have the power to bestow that right on the pipeline which would carry the coal and water mixture from the Rocky Mountains to Texas utility plants, according to Walter Caven, general counsel of the Texas Railroad Association.

Caven told members of the House Energy Resources Committee that the pipeline proposed by Houston Natural Gas Co. was for private purposes rather than public, because it would benefit only one utility

PARTMENT

Using the power of eminent domain for private purposes is unconstitutional, Caven claims. Legislation which would have granted pipeline companies the power to condemn property never got out of committee last session, largely because of railroad opposition.

Committee Chairman Rep. Joe Hanna of Breckenridge said the rail companies had requested "equal time" after committee members visited a coal slurry pipeline in Arkansas last fall.

"Adoption of the proposed legislation by a few states would seriously and perhaps fatally impair the railroads' chances to finance needed improvements - and action by Texas could start a chain reaction," according to Louis W. Menk, of St. Paul. Minn., president and chief executive officer for the Burlington Northern Railroad.

Menk and other railroad witnesses contend that railroads can carry all the coal Texas will need in the near future, and the industry is counting on

Wildcat test gauges flow

H. L. Brown Jr., Midland, No. 1-6 University, Crockett County wildcat, 14 miles northwest of Iraan, flowed gas at the rate of 4.66 million cubic feet per day and recovered an estimated 211/2 barrels of oil on a drillstem test from 6,075-6,145 feet. The tool was open one hour and 10 minutes.

The sample chamber recovered 12 cubic centimeters of 46-gravity oil. It spots 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 6, block 14, ULS, 11/2 mile east of the shallow Crockett pool and 34 mile north of a 6,833-foot failure.

Alaska state troopers find line equipment

ANCHORAGE, Alaska - Alaska State Troopers at the Glennallen detachment have recovered nearly $14,000 in equipment and tires belonging to Alyeska Pipeline Service Company. Several pipeline workers at Glennallen Camp have been arrested in connection with the incident.

An investigation by Alaska Troopers and Alyeska led to the arrests late last week in the Glennallen and Palmer areas.

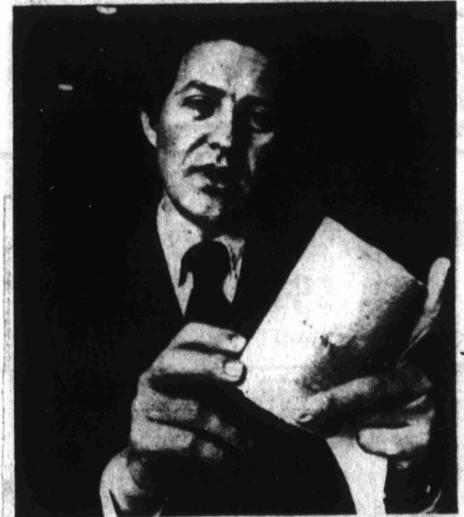

The arrests began January 15 when Troopers stopped a car discovered to be carrying stolen goods near Glennallen. Troopers recovered tires apparently stolen from Alveska and arrested Ronald Earl Geiger, a mechanic and former employee at Glennallen Camp.

According to Troopers, additional information led to the arrest of Gilbert T. Edmonds and Mike Edmonds, both tire repairmen at Glennallen Camp. Additional tires and other goods worth about $3,320 were recovered from the Edmonds' property in Palmer.

The investigation then led Troopers to John Kostel, a heavy duty mechanic at Glennallen Camp. He was arrested and charged with receiving and concealing stolen property valued at $4,420.

Three others charged in the thefts were Roy Brown, a tire repairman; Clayton Fogle, master mechanic; and Bill Davis, shop foreman, all of whom were employed at Glennallen Camp. Troopers recovered a $6,000 pump which was in the possession of Davis and Fogle. They were also seeking indictments against other workers in connection with the thefts.

If it could conserve as well, the savings could "If only the rest of the country could total more than 3.3 billion barrels of do half so well, we'd really have a oil equivalent a year.

How has the federal government gone about achieving its reduction in energy consumption?

First, it adopted what it called "the three strategies" for building operations, transportation and emplove activities.

Under FEA and General Services Administration directives, the various agencies were to reduce illumination levels in their offices by "delamping;" to maintain temperature setting during the heating (winter) season of 65 to 68 degrees Fahrenheit during working hours and installing insulation to prevent heat

Also, they were to increase temperature settings during the cooling (summer) season to a minimum of 78 to 80 degrees: to reduce the operating time of machines and to change from nighttime to daytime cleaning.

The GSA itself has removed over three million lights in its buildings all over the country including more than two million in the Richmond-Washington-Philadelphia area alone. This reporter arrived early for an interview with John R. Lewis of FEA, an official of the energy management program, and found his office in darkness. After his arrival, he switched on the lights and the fluorescent rods in two of the six fixtures had been removed. The thermometer just above Lewis' desk registered 76. When asked about it, he said that it was difficult in old buildings-his office is in the "new" post office building, a 40-year-old structure-to attain uniform temperatures.

The Defense Department, which saved 25 per cent in consumption in FY 1974, is by far the government's largest user of energy. It consumed 85 per cent of the government total in FY

It played an especially large role in total savings in the transportation area, with Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps planes flying fewer training missions and Navy ships staying in port more days per quar-The savings were relatively easy in fiscal years 1974 and 1975. That was when "the cream was skimmed off," to use an FEA official's expression. From now on the going will get tougher.

Banker held on charge

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) William R. Houston, vice president of The Columbia Bank of Columbia, Miss., is being held on federal extortion charges in El Paso, Tex., an FBI spokesman said here. Donald T. Sullivan, special agent in charge of the Jackson FBI office. said Houston was arrested by FBI agents in El Paso shortly before midnight Saturday. Houston was the subject of an intensive search which began after bank officials reported him missing Friday morning. FBI, state, county and local law enforcement officials had refused to discuss the disappearance of the 42year-old banker. Sullivan said Sunday that the extortion charge resulted from a phone call allegedly received by officials of The Columbia Bank Friday, The message reportedly involved a kidnap ransom demand of $25,000 for Houston's return. Authorities alleged that Houston made the call himself. No other persons were believed the incident, Sullivan said. Houston was in custody Sunday pending the filing of a formal complaint.

The extortion charge carries a maximum sentence of a $5,000 fine or 20 years in prison. Houston, the father of three children, was affiliated with The Columbia Bank and several other businesses in the Marion County

A multi-media "Conflict and Resolution" display depicting the major periods of crisis which tested the strength of the U.S. Constitution and the nation itself will be available n car no. 10 of the American Freedom Included in the car's exhibits are

Abraham Lincoln's original draft of the preliminary Emancipation Proclamation, stovepipe hat, wallet law books and personally signed copy of The Believer's Daily Treasury containing a quotation from the Bible for each day of the year. Other items representing America's Civil War days a replica of Lincoln's rocking chair and box at Ford's Theatre the night of his assassination in 1865, photographs of Lincoln, Gen. Grant and Gen. Lee, and campaign posters for the 23rd Michigan Infantry. President Franklin D. Roosevelt is depicted in the crisis period of the Great Depression and World War II. Items displayed are several microphones of the same era as those used by FDR for his fireside chats and a Nov. 9, 1932, issue of the New York Herald Tribune. Headlines on an eight-page issue of the Honolulu Star Bulletin of Dec. 7, 1941, recall events of WW II. Other items representative of the period are FDR's cane, the pen he used to sign the Selective Service Act of 1940, his brown leather briefcase, his mother-of-pearl cigarette holder, a black marble pen and pencil desk stand, a rocker-type blotter from his desk, a leather-trimmed magnifying glass paperweight and one of his silver ashtrays, as well as a giant photo of the four-term president. Another period of crisis depicted by the train's tenth car is symbolized by former president John F. Kennedy and covers the Cuban Missile Crisis and the president's assassination. Items included in the display are Kennedy's famous rocking chair, his doodle of a sailboat, a solid gold cigar box with scenes from Moscow, a gift from Nikita Khruschev, handwritten notes from his book Profiles in Courage, the telegram informing him the book had won a Pulitzer Prize and an early draft of his inaugural address. Two pieces of artwork from the Kennedy family's private collection are also exhibited - a bronze bust of JFK by Felix deWeldon and a portrait by James Wyeth. The civil rights conflicts of the 1960s are represented by Dr. Martin Luther King in the display of his black vestments, red prayer shawl trimmed in gold, the Bible he used and a replica of his pulpit in Atlanta, Ga. Four projectors which simultaneously flash scenes from King's Peace marches are also included in the exhibit. The American Freedom Train is sponsored by The American Freedom Train Foundation Inc., a tax-exempt, non-profit organization headquartered in Bailey's Coossroads, V.a. It is on a 21-month, 17,000-mile journey across the country as part of the Bicentennial observance. Visitors may view the exhibit from noon to 10 p.m. Feb. 7 and from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Feb. 8-9 at the Midland Regional Air Terminal. Admission is $1 for children aged 3-12 and for senior citizens 65 and over. All other tickets are $2, with children under 3 being admitted free. Tickets are available in Midland at Gibson's Discount Center.

Simple rules save both time, money

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD The time to bet on a horse is when he is going to win. This simple rule would save a great deal of money, if horseplayers would only follow it. I don't have time right now to show how it works with horses, but here's how it works with a bridge hand. North dealer going to break.

The average horseplayer would cash the king of diamonds and then to lead another diamond from his The diamonds don't break, and the hand collapses. How can you tell in advance that the diamonds are sour?

HOW TO TELL

After cashing the king of diamonds, take the ace of diamonds. If both opponents follow, you can give up one diamond and make the contract with four diamonds, one spade, two hearts and two clubs.

If West has four diamonds, you get to your hand in clubs to lead a diamond toward dummy's jack. If East has four diamonds, you discover the bad break and try the club finesse instead of continuing with the diamonds. As I said, tackle a suit when it is going to break. And now, I'll leave it to you to work out this simple rule for horses and the stock market. I've done my share.

DAILY QUESTION Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player passes. You hold: S-Q9754; H-KJ942; D-7; C-109. What do you say? ANSWER: Bid one spade. Unless partner raises spades you intend to show the hearts next. It's all right to bid hearts (the cheaper suit) first when you have two four-card suits, but bid the higher suit first when you have two five-card suits.

Teaching with rocks helps retarded tots

It's a pretty safe bet the en-terprising person who began marketing pet rocks never dreamed they would wind up in a classroom as educational tools

That innovative use can be credited to Mrs. Mary Bess, special education teacher at Austin Freshman School.

In her class of 23 mentally retarded students, Mrs. Bess and teacher aide Mrs. Jean Ellison use brightly painted and labeled rocks primarily to teach vocabulary. Each student has his own pet rock, just for fun, and the class has a whole collection of special rocks or "friends" to help them learn their classroom work. Noting there is no state-adopted textbook for special education classes on the junior high school level, Mrs. Bess uses a variety of teaching aids and media in its place.

She uses the rocks to teach vocabulary in language arts, math, social studies, health and safety, "introduction to pre-vocation" and

In math, for instance, she uses the labeled rocks to demonstrate such concepts as "more than," "less than" or "weight." In health and safety, the pet rocks help instill ideas such as danger, yield, keep out and stop.

Mrs. Bess said the rocks are useful in conveying ideas to her students because they provide a visual stimulus and something tangible representing the concept to be learned. Further, she noted, many students are hyperactive, and handling the rock "friends" simultaneoualy keeps their hands and minds busy.

The pet rocks, she siad help "develop quick thinking and exercise the brain for its daily responsibilities and (help the students) express emotions and understand their role in

Gas decontrol foes call Tuesday caucus

The Los Angeles Times
WASHINGTON — Opponents of a plan to phase out existing federal price controls on natural gas have called a special session of all House Democrats for Tuesday in a last-minute effort to head off deregula-

Convoking the Democratic Caucus was the latest ploy in a classic battle of lobbyists and parliamentary infighters over one of the most important issues Congress is likely to decide this year. At stake are higher consumer prices and enormous profits for some gas producers, but also a set of difficult decisions about how best to maximize future supplies of the nation's most desirable energy

Tuesday's meeting has been timed by opponents of deregulation to give them a chance to win back wavering Democrats just before the closely contested issue is expected to reach the House floor. Instead of focusing directly on deregulation, however, Democrats who favor continued federal price controls intend to concentrate their fire on a controversial maneuver by Speaker Carl Albert (D-Okla.)

Albert, who comes from the most prolific oil and gas district in the nation, invoked certain rarely used parliamentary powers just before the Christmas recess to by-pass committee chairmen who oppose deregulation and to take direct charge of bringing the decontrol bill to the floor

This ploy, while authorized by House procedures, would permit a vote on deregulation this week even though some Democrats assert that the proposal has not gone through the normal sequence of subcommittee hearings, legislative drafting sessions, and review by a full House com-

Albert's action has been seized upon by opponents of deregulation as a way of mustering support for their cause. As things stand now, most observers agree, deregulation would win a majority if a straight vote were held on the plan. Thus, as often happens when Congress takes up a difficult decision, the key vote probably will come not on the issue itself but on a preliminary question of procedure.

Angola faction talks of oil field seizure

By The Associated Press

British correspondents reported today that the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA) in Angola is planning to nationalize the Cabinda oil field if the American Gulf company does not resume production

Another British correspondent reported that Western-backed forces in both north and south Angola are putting up stiff resistance to the advancing MPLA forces.

Gulf was producing 150,000 barrels a day from the offshore Cabinda field until December, when it shut down production at the insistence of the U.S. State Department so that the MPLA would not get the oil revenues.

A. J. McIlroy of the London Daily Telegraph said MPLA Prime Minister Lopo do Nascimento has stated the Angolans will develop their own oil if the Americans continue their "economic blockade."

Nicholas Ashford of the Times of London said Nascimento told him if Gulf does not resume production soon, his government would have to seek other means of exploiting the Cabinda field.

"This would not be difficult as, according to a local Gulf representative, there is no shortage of other companies wanting to take over Gulf's operations," Ashford wrote in a dispatch from Cabinda, an MPLAcontrolled enclave separated from Angola by a narrow strip of Zaire and the Congo river estuary.

Ashford added that Gulf had cabled Nascimento that the resumption of production was to be considered at a meeting of the company's board of directors this week. He said this was taken as an indication that Gulf might be planning to return.

McIlroy said the MPLA is claiming more than $2 billion in royalties from Gulf. A second Angolan oil field is off Santo Antonio do Zaire, just south of the Zaire border. It is controlled by the Western-backed National Front (FNLA), but McIlroy said advancing MPLA forces would probably take it over soon.

The report of new military resistance by the FNLA and the National Union (UNITA) came from Jane Bergerol of the London Financial Times. She said military sources in Luanda, the MPLA capital, reported that South African troops were still fighting alongside UNITA troops and had slowed down the MPLA drive on Huambo, the UNITA capital in south central Angola.

"The sources claim there is a South African-led attempt to push the MPLA away from the strategic crossroads of Alto Hama," she said.

The South African forces were reported last week to have withdrawn to Angola's southern border with SouthWest Africa.

Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), chairman of the subcommittee on energy and power of the House Commerce Committee and one of those Albert by-passed, recently sounded the note that other deregulation foes are expected to echo at Tuesday's caucus. 'The speaker's action is a perversion of the orderly procedures of the House and does violence to the legislative process," he said. "It strips the committee not of its privileges but of its duties."

Dingell said Albert and others are "seeking to stampede through Congress legislation that is going to cost the consuming public billions of dollars and will not produce more gas for at least two years.'

sponsor of the deregulation plan that is expected to come to a vote this week as a substitute for a short-term emergency natural gas bill, asserted last week that the gas issue had been considered by Congress repeatedly in recent years.

On the procedural question, Krueger accused Dingell and others of trying to bottle up long-term gas legislation and prevent a decision by the House. He likened their action to efforts of Southern committee chairmen to bottle up civil rights legislation in former years.

It was only to let the House work its will, Krueger said, that Albert took the emergency gas bill away from Dingell and shepherded it through the House Rules Committee in a way that gives deregulation advocates a major

Congress plans Lincoln recess

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress this week takes up natural gas deregulation, voter registration by postcard and rice legislation before beginning its first recess of the 1976

The recess, to begin this Friday and run for 10 days, is the traditional Lincoin's Birthday holiday to allow Republicans to attend party meetings over the country.

President Ford was to confer today with some members of Congress about the prospects for ending natural price controls, an abolition that the Ford administration supports. Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., says he will try to bring the decontrol bill up on the House floor Tuesday when the lawmakers consider emergency legislation designed to cope with expected natural gas shortages. The emergency bill was designed to permit industrial users to buy supplies at the price permitted on intrastate shipments, which is much higher than the regulated interstate quotation. Krueger's amendment would provide for a fiveyear phaseout of federal regulation. This amendment is similar to one adopted in the Senate last year.

When it takes up rice legislation, the Senate will vote Tuesday on an attempt to shut off debate on a controversial bill revising the federal program long in effect for the nation's rice growers. The measure would put into effect a program similar to that now used for wheat, feed grains and two consumer protection bills.

Lebanese government reopens all schools

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The Lebanese government announced the reopening of schools throughout the country today in another cautious step back toward normal life after 10 months of civil war. Initial school attendance was not reported. Nor was it immediately known how many schools were unable The Beirut stock exchange and the money market also reopened for the first time in three months, but only slight trading was reported. The city's banks were still closed.

with the cease-fire in its 11th day, the mixed armistice commission of Syrian, Lebanese and Palestinian officers announced it was taking 'stern measures" - which it did not spell out - to curb kidnaping and counter-abduction by Moslem and Christian militiamen.

A statement said 22 men were kidnaped during the past 48 hours; the bodies of four were found; 12 were released; and the other six were missing. Such abductions caused the collapse of several previous ceasefires. The commission also sent squads to patrol the biggest industrial section in the country, on the northeast edge of Beirut, in an attempt to get some of the factories there back in operation for the first time in six months.

Meanwhile, two Palestinian guerrilla factions clashed, and a leftist Moslem leader said peace will not return to Lebanon until Christian militias are "completely crushed."

"We shall not stand with our hands tied after this bloodbath," said a spokesman for the pro-Iraqi Rejection Front after men of the Syrianbacked Saika guerrillas raided the offices of two pro-Iraqi Beirut newspapers, killed six employes and wounded 10 others. Palestine guerrilla chief Yasir Arafat called a meeting of leaders of all guerrilla organizations to try to avert more fighting. A statement afterward said Saika leaders promised to take action against 'unruly elements' responsible for the attack.

Alas! the groundhog has seen his shadow

The groundhog saw his shadow this morning in Big Lake, and probably did in Andrews, Rankin, McCamey. Stanton, Lamesa and Midland, as clear, sunny skies prevailed throughout the area.

All area towns reported clear. sunny skies this morning that promised another spring-like day for West Texas. Overnight temperatures ranged from a low 36 degrees in Lamesa, 39 degrees in Midland, to a high of 45 degrees in Stanton.

No winds were reported throughout

If you set store by the groundhog legend, there was no doubt today that Texas is in for six weeks more of winter.

Skies were clear throughout the state, assuring plenty of sunshine. That meant Mr. Groundhog couldn't fail to see his shadow and thus, according to the old tale, would dive back into his burrow and doom any hope for early spring, the Associated Press reported.

It also was rather cool as light winds fanned the state this morning. and no prospect was seen for moisture to ease widespread threats of grass fires.

Temperatures near dawn ranged from 26 degrees at El Paso in the far west up to no more than 45 at Galveston and 46 at Abilene, Midland-Odessa and San Angelo. Top marks Sunday went as high as 79 at

Alice in extreme South Texas. Fair and warmer weather was forecast through Tuesday except for increasing clouds in parts of South

Phil, the groundhog who made Punxsutawney famous, emerged from an electrically heated burrow in subzero weather today and saw his shadow — a sign that winter weather is in store for at least six more weeks.

Phil's forecast came as the sun rose in clear but chilly skies. Although the temperature hovered at minus-10 degrees, members of the Punxsutawney Groundhog Club's inner circle watched Phil emerge from hibernation.

Legend has it that if the groundhog sees his shadow on Feb. 2, winter will last another six weeks. If the sky is cloudy and there is no shadow, spring is supposed to be just around

On the basic deregulation issue, Krueger and others contend that elimination of price controls will stimulate enough new production to shore up the nation's dwindling gas reserves for at least a decade. Consumers' Energy bills will not rise dramatically and, in the end may be lower than they would have been if gas supplies had run down and more expensive alternative fuels had been substituted, deregulation advocates argue.

The pitched battle expected in the House this week will be the culmination of prolonged maneuvering by armies of lobbyists that have been campaigning on the subject for more than

Vic Shackelford

Odessan announces candidacy

Odessa Republican Vic Shackelford, 48, today announced his candidacy for the 16th Congressional District from West Texas.

During a news conference, Shackelford said, "The people are fed up with the irresponsible acts of Congress. The incumbent has been a part of this irresponsible group, and, for all practical purposes, it has been as if nobody represented West Texas. The other candidate in this race has such an extreme liberal philosophy that it doesn't fit a West Texan's thinking. Shackelford said that his residency in Odessa and former residency in El Paso would qualify him to meet the needs of U the entire district. He also said those residencies would help him gather votes in El Paso County. Shackelford is married to the former Rita McGee. They have a daughter who is a senior at Odessa's Permian High School and a son, now a freshman in college.

Chaps host Hawks today

Although Howard College is only 5-5 in Western Junior College Conference play, Coach Harold Wilder believes this may be his best Hawk team since he left Abilene High after back-toback 5-4A championships.

'We've probably got better depth than at any time in my six years here. We don't have the size like when Thomas Bledsoe (TCU) and Charles Williams (Miss. State) were here. Both of them were 6-7 and Bledsoe went 225, so they gave us a great double post pairs" says Wilder.

"But we've got decent size at 6-6 (freshman Paul Cathey), 6-5 (Marvin Johnson), 6-4 (Larry Erb), 6-3 (Ray Martin and Reggie Leffal).

Wilder, whose Hawks play Midland College at MC gym tonight, also may have another scorer like the fabled Archie Meyers, who scored 50 points five times one year.

JOHNSON, A 6-5 sophomore from DeRidder, La., is the nation's junior college scoring leader with a 32.1 average.

from the average player is that he shoots about 57 per cent from the floor and 83 per cent from the line. His high game this year has been 45 and his low 24," notes Wilder.

two years of struggle, occasional temper tantrums and galling frustration so severe he even considered leaving the tour.

But Ben Crenshaw weathered it. He stuck it out. He worked at his trade. And, almost three years after he hit the pro golf tour with such incredible impact, he's reached his maturity.

I think he is coming up on the Ben Crenshaw we were expecting," said Hale Irwin, beaten by Gentle Ben in the stretch drive for the title in the Hawaiian Open. "I think he has realized his maturity. I think he will carry on into the upper levels of the Crenshaw's final round, sixunderpar 66 Sunday lifted him to his second consecutive tour title and reestablished him as one of the game's brightest young stars—a role he held three years back, then surrendered in his times of struggle.

He hit the tour with gaudy credentials-three consecutive national collegiate titles. He won in his first start as a fullfledged member of the tour. He immediately fell prey to comparisons with Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer and all the greats of the game. They called him "the best Ben since Hogan.

It was too much too soon. "I won right off the bat," the 24year-old Crenshaw said. "I wasn't ready for it. I think I put too much pressure on myself. I was pressing, trying too hard to win, to finish high. I didn't know enough.

"Last year I was just trying to work my way up the ladder, so to speak. I think I improved myself and I think I improved my game.

He won it by a comfortable four strokes with a 270 total, 18 under par and a record on the 7,219-yard Waialae Country Club course. The victory was worth $46,000 from the total purse of $230,000, set him up as the year's leading money-winner with $88,680, put him in the World Series of Golf and made him the first golfer of the season to win consecutive tournaments.

He'd won the Bing Crosby just the week before, following the same come-from-behind formula. In each tournament, he was three shots back going into the final round.

He made up most of that with a front-nine 31, five under par, took the lead to stay with a 12-foot birdie putt on the 10th hole and nailed it down when he picked up four strokes over Irwin in a four-hole stretch starting on unheralded Larry Nelson for second at 274. Nelson had a last-round 69.

U.S. Open champion Lou Graham, Charles Coody, Al Geiberger and Mike Morley followed at 275. Morley had a closing 66, Graham 68, Coody 69 and Geiberger 71.

Bob Murphy, who shared the lead at times over the first nine holes, bogeyed five of six holes coming home. He finished with a 74 and was tied at 276 with a group that included Lee Trevino, who shot four consecutive 69s. Arnold Palmer, who came so close to victory in this tournament a year ago, never really got in the chase this time. He had a final 71 and 279.

"It's an incredible experience," Crenshaw said. "I just don't know what to say. I know it can't continue. I can't keep on winning forever."

And he isn't going to try. He is taking a two-week break from the tour and won't compete again until the Los Angeles Open.

The race clock was stopped during the event, for the first time in its 15-year history, at 10:12 a.m. Sunday when four of the frontrunning cars, including the race leading Gregg-Redman BMW CSL, sputtered to a halt with watered gasoline in their tanks. OFFICIALS DECIDED the problem was more than a case of unfortunate racing luck. An investigation located water in one of the compartments of a fuel truck that had serviced pit road just after

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) - Time stood still

At 9:01 a.m., the leader had routinely pitted for more fuel— and that's when the trouble began.

We saw too late that there was water mixed with the fuel we had pumped into the car," said BMW team manager Jochen Neerpasch. The two other factory BMWs in the race also received the watered fuel before the problem was discovered.

As the crews battled furiously to purge all the moisture from the porous, foam-filled gas tanks, the second-place Porsche Carrera of John O'Steen, John Graves and Dave Helmick began to chip away at the BMW's 16-lap advantage. But the challenger also pitted for fuel, encountering the same problem. Finally, with the Carrera of Jim Busby and Hurley Haywood, Gregg's co-driver in the last two 24 Hours races, bearing down on the lead, officials of the sanctioning International Motor Sports Association blew the whistle.

"We felt it was in the best interests of the greatest number of competitors to stop the race until the problem could be traced and corrected," said IMSA President John Bishop.

During the delay, all fuel tanks were flushed and fresh gasoline was trucked in from Jacksonville, 70

A SPOKESMAN for Union Oil Co., supplier of the 104 octane racing gasoline in all cars, said, "There's no scientific explanation for how the water got into

The spokesman said an investigation was underway to determine where the water had come from. "It was probably sabotage, I know of no other logical explanation. The water didn't just suddenly appear. Someone had to put it in there," said one official, who asked not to be identified. "But we'll probably never be able to find out who did it."

The other two factory BMWs, and the O'Steen-Graves-Helmick Carrera were irreparably damaged by the water in their fuel systems. "I honestly feel the decision was reasonably fair," said Redman. "Several other cars were affected and others would have been." "I know the Union Oil Co. people who supply the fuel here have the strictest quality controls," Gregg added. "It could have been that somebody put water in deliberately." WHATEVER DID happen, the race was resumed at 12:49, with he official clocks turned back to 9 a.m., just before the trouble started. That restored the BMW's 16-lap lead over the runnerup and 26 laps over third and fourth.

But with the battle-scarred, white and rainbowstriped BMW chugging along since before dawn on only five cylinders with an exhausted Redman at the wheel, victory was less than certain.

"I've never been so tired after a race." Redman said. "I had driven a four-hour stretch during the night (two hours is usually tops) after Peter became ill from something he had eaten. 'John Fitzpatrick (another BMW driver) relieved

Midland's Judy Rankin beats wind for title MIAMI (AP) — Judy Rankin might (on both bogey holes). be one of the tiniest players on the women's golf tour, but she's the only one who kept her game together

during winds which gusted to 45 miles per hour-and it meant $5,700.

"I don't suppose I've ever played in winds harder than that," the 5-foot-3 blonde from Midland, Tex., said Sunday after shooting a one-underpar 71 for a winning 54-hole total of "I don't keep the ball superlow. But what the wind was going to do and chose the right clubs. She was the only woman in the Ladies Professional Golf Association field of 60 not to fall apart in the cold and rain at the 5,670-yard Kendale Lakes Golf and Country Club course.

She was three shots ahead of runnerup Pat Bradley, who closed with 74. Saturday coleaders Jane Blalock and Kathy Whitworth soared to 76 and 77, respectively, to end up third and fourth at 217 and 218. 'I came down here because I've always been a slow starter," said but held her bogeys to two to be the only player to break par. Mrs. Rankin, a runnerup six times last year when she pocketed $50,174, got help from the lakes to beat Miss

Bradley.
Miss Bradley owned a two-shot lead after getting a birdie on the 12th hole. But after a 20-minute holdup for lightning, she hit the water on 13 for a triple bogey. She regained a share of the lead with birdies on the next two holes, but had a double bogey on 16 when she hit the water again.

"If I didn't swim, I think I would have won," said Miss Bradley. "The wind was blowing tremendously left to right. Usually my ball will drift to the right. I didn't want to go right and was thinking about it when I swung

"I felt kind of dejected, but felt proud I kept my composure and managed to hold onto second," added the third-year player from Westford, Mass.

Miss Bradley, who won the 1975 Far East Open to finish with $28,293 in season earnings, took home $4,170 in this initial event of the season. Miss Blalock earned $3,200 and Miss Whitworth $2,600. Tied for fifth at 219,

SWC chase tightens up

Some folks don't think the Southwest Conference basketball race will be settled until Valentine's Day when Texas Tech takes on the Texas Aggies in that place you wouldn't want to visit and play basketball—G. Rollie White Coliseum

The Aggies and Red Raiders rolled along Saturday night doing what they do best-winning in the clutch. A&M nicked Texas Christian courtesy of Karl Godine's 20-foot jump shot at the buzzer 66-64 and Tech rode Rick

THE LOWEST player (that's the one that is capable of making 37 errors in one year or contributing 15 fumbles) is getting at least in the range of $15,000 per season-that's per season, not per year. Then there are the super stars that earn amounts that is almost unbelieveable to me.

terback worth $400,000 per season? Is any player even worth in the $200,000 range? I personally think they're pushing it a little far to claim being worth $100,000.

PRO PLAYERS in all sports are already making unrealistic salaries. Especially in view of the fact that most of them would play regardless of salary. I think the World Football League proved that. You never heard of a WFL player quitting the team because he wasn't getting paid. Now that says something in itself.

For the most part-well maybe all of them-owners have given their players resonable pay scales. In fact, they are more than resonable. For this kindness of heart by the owners, the fan continuously pays more at the gate for his ticket, more at the parking lot to get into the stadium and more at the concession stand to feed his ever hungry kids.

If players are given free agent status when their contracts with one club is fulfilled, then it resonably follows that salaries will increase. That's not to say that the players will be worth more, but their market value will climb to the needs of certain clubs.

THAT CAN and will mean only one thing. The fan is going to pay through the nose-or will he?

When will the fan rebel? How long will he continue to pay to see overpaid stars do their thing? A mere mental error could ban a player from the city at the kind of prices we are talking about, or even worse, there may be a lot of talent on the field with no one to watch in the stands.

I like to watch a Johnny Bench or a O. J. Simpson play as well as anyone. I love to see Jeff Burroughs smack one over the fence, or Fran Tarkenton scramble from all those big guys, or Rick Berry pluck buckets; but it is already to the point that I can't afford to see many of these stars play during the course of a year.

AUSTIN - Texas railroads got another chance to tell a legislative committee how much they hate the idea of coal slurry pipeline companies having the right of eminent domain.

In fact, the Legislature may not even have the power to bestow that right on the pipeline which would carry the coal and water mixture from the Rocky Mountains to Texas utility plants, according to Walter Caven, general counsel of the Texas Railroad Association.

Caven told members of the House Energy Resources Committee that the pipeline proposed by Houston Natural Gas Co. was for private purposes rather than public, because it would benefit only one utility

Using the power of eminent domain purposes is unconstitutional, Caven claims.

Legislation which would have granted pipeline companies the power to condemn property never got out of committee last session, largely because of railroad opposition.

Committee Chairman Rep. Joe Hanna of Breckenridge said the rail companies had requested "equal time" after committee members visited a coal slurry pipeline in Arkansas last fall.

"Adoption of the proposed legislation by a few states would seriously and perhaps fatally impair the railroads chances to finance needed improvements - and action by Texas could start a chain reaction," according to Louis W. Menk, of St. Paul, Minn., president and chief executive officer for the Burlington Northern Railroad.

Menk and other railroad witnesses contend that railroads can carry all the coal Texas will need in the near future, and the industry is counting on this business to provide capital and make possible the loans needed to rehabilitate tracks and other equipment.

San Antonio City Public Service Director of Engineering Jesse Poston said the rail industry should not try to "get well" at the expense of utility rate payers.

CPS is contesting Burlington Northern rates before the Interstate Commerce Commission for the hauling of coal from Wyoming. Poston said coal slurry pipelines would provide needed competition.

Robert R. Bateson, general attorney for Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fe Railway Company, said the issue of eminent domain should be left to Congress because it is an issue of "national common carrier tran-

An investigation by Alaska Troopers and Alyeska led to the arrests late last week in the Glennallen and Palmer areas.

The arrests began January 15 when Troopers stopped a car discovered to be carrying stolen goods near Glennallen. Troopers recovered tires apparently stolen from Alyeska and arrested Ronald Earl Geiger, a mechanic and former employee at Glennallen Camp.

According to Troopers, additional information led to the arrest of Gilbert T. Edmonds and Mike Edmonds, both tire repairmen at Glennallen Camp. Additional tires and other goods worth about $3,320 were recovered from the Edmonds' property in Palmer.

The investigation then led Troopers to John Kostel, a heavy duty mechanic at Glennallen Camp. He was arrested and charged with receiving and concealing stolen property valued at $4,420.

Three others charged in the thefts were Roy Brown, a tire repairman; Clayton Fogle, master mechanic; and Bill Davis, shop foreman, all of whom were employed at Glennallen Camp. ### Customer pays for ripoffs

By PATRICIA DIBSIE

Copley News Service
More than $8.5 million worth of merchandise disappears off the shelves and racks of America's retail and wholesale stores daily.

But the biggest culprit is not the shoplifting customer - it's the stores' employes who are responsible for the biggest percentage of the ripoff. Those facts are sad enough to make you really feel sorry for store owners - but don't. They're not absorbing the loss, they're making it up by charging you — the paying customer — for the ill deeds of others.

"The rate of inflation is nothing compared to the markup of merchandise to make up store losses," said Keith Barress, director of training for Security Training Institute.

Barress is in charge of training ordinary-looking people to do extraordinary jobs as undercover agents.

There doesn't seem to be any occupation that's too farfetched for undercover work.

"Maids, janitors, dock workers, junior executive trainees - you name it - they've all been covered by security people," Barress said.

Barress thinks that the majority of employes steal from their employers. "If it's not money or merchandise, it's time," he said. "It's sad - but true." Steve Smith, not his real name, has been working as an undercover agent for four years in different parts of the country. There are quite a few people who are sorry they ever set eyes on Steve's height is average, so is his weight. His eyes are green, his hair brown. There's nothing really outstanding about this man - he's not ugly, he's not handsome. You might say he's got everything going for him for this particular line of work.

Before he signed up for the security training course he served four years in the Navy and a few years as a cook in various restaurants. At 25, he decided that he didn't want to be a cook and then he saw an advertisement for undercover training.

"My first assignment was with a large paper products company," he said. "They were losing thousands of dollars in merchandise and figured it was an inside job but didn't have any luck having their people poke around '

Steve was hired as a dock worker. "I loaded the paper onto trucks late at night," he said.

Steve's undercover caper called for him to play the role of a harmless wino. "Everybody knew I kept a bottle of cheap wine in a hiding place and I would sneak off every now and then and take a drink so that my breath smelled like wine all the time," he said. "After a week on the job the stealing started again and some of the fellows approached me to see if I wanted to make a few extra bucks.

"I said I could use some extra money and, boy, did they take me under their wing and explain the whole operation."

Steve wouldn't elaborate on their method of stealing. "Let me just say that they had everything pretty well thought out," he said. "The only thing they didn't count on was a harmless wino that didn't turn out to be so harmless after all."

The company had lost about $50,000 before the wino came on the scene.

Steve has also worked as a stock man in a major supermarket chain. "There were several of us who stocked the shelves at night after the store was closed," he said.

It was more than a month before Steve was invited to join their close

"One night they asked me to join them on a dinner break," he said. "I told them I didn't bring anything from home and they asked me if I wanted to join them anyway.'

Steve did join them - for one of the best meals of his life. "They went back to the butcher department and picked out the finest steaks - but only after they had raided the gourmet department for some of the best hors d'oeuvres and wine. It was a very fitting meal for a last supper.'

Holland offers bonus tour

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA Copley News Service

AMSTERDAM — The Dutch of this at-once patrician and seedy sort of a place turned 1975 into a memorable

Their home, this town that may well be the most popular and sophisticated large village in the world, was having a birthday. So a party was in order.

But it was not just another birthday. It was Amsterdam's 700th anniversary, an occasion calling for grand-scale celebration. And that the burghers had.

Rather than having one big blast on the official anniversary day, Oct. 27, Amsterdammers scheduled a yearlong agenda of fairs, concerts, exhibits, restoration projects and other events.

In retrospect, the outstanding feature of this long-winded bash is the after-the-party life of many of the projects created or completed to celebrate the city's birthday.

For example, the fabulous Amsterdam Historical Museum, which opened in October, will no doubt delight millions for years to come. Visitors came from all over the world to join Amsterdam's party of the century. But now, during the winter months, the crowds are gone. The town's many attractions are, of course, still around, but now you have elbowroom. It may be nippy, and at times outright cold, but there is a briskness in the air outdoors and a coziness by the fireplaces that are fixtures in most restaurants and homes which you can taste only at this time of the year. The folks browsing for antiques in the shops on Spiegelstraat, admiring the impressive collection of 17th Century paintings of civic guard companies in the glass-domed hall of the Historical Museum, or looking at the latest in clothes, furs, glassware and books in the stores on Kalverstraat turn out to be Amsterdammers during these days when only the trees are scantily dressed - rather than New Yorkers, Iowans or Californians.

And, of course, the so-called offseason is when everything (including air fare!) is cheaper. Though it boasts many inexpensive hotels and restaurants, Amsterdam actually is one of Europe's most expensive cities. In fact, almost all of Holland — whose citizens enjoy a very high standard of living - can be a rather costly travel experience, however rewarding and memorable.

The enterprising Dutch, however, have come up with a dandy program aimed at budget-minded visitors. Conceived a dozen years ago, this season's "Stay on the House in Holland" bonus package can save you anywhere from $85 to $200, depending on the length of your visit.

Available through your travel agent, the new and expanded program is good now through March 31 in Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague. It costs you nothing to get the Stay on the House certificate which you redeem for a book of vouchers in any of the three cities.

The only requirement is that you fly

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Environmental Protection Agency says some 95,000 operators of livestock feedlots may be required to seek federal permits for waste disposal.

The EPA and the Department of Agriculture have distributed regulations on waste disposal for comment from interested agencies and individuals. They will not be final for several more months.

The agencies originally estimated that some 25,000 feedlot operators would be covered by the proposed regulations.

However, the agencies re-figured the impact of the proposal to take into account feed lots located further away from navigable waters, in areas hit by severe storms and flooding at least once every 25 years.

After dummy's queen of hearts wins the first trick you feel a bit better about your contract. Now you must decide whether to go after the diamonds or the clubs.

As I said, tackle a suit when it is going to break. And now, I'll leave it to you to work out this simple rule for horses and the stock market. I've done my share.

DAILY QUESTION Partner opens with one diamond, and the next player passes. You hold: S-Q9754; H-KJ942; D-7; C-109. What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one spade. Unless partner raises spades you intend to show the hearts next. It's all right to bid hearts (the cheaper suit) first when you have two four-card suits, but bid the higher suit first when you have two five-card suits.

By JERRY HARKAVY PORTLAND, Maine (AP) — Jimmy Carter says his strong opening day showing in Maine's Democratic presidential preference caucuses may help his chances in next-door New Hampshire's first-in-the-nation primary.

'The first test of strength in New England is obviously of great benefit to our campaign," the former Georgia governor told newsmen after arriving here for a Sunday

Carter, who campaigned longer and harder in the state than any of the other candidates, won nearly half the delegates in the voting at caucuses here and at a handful of smaller communities. The lightly attended caucuses kicked off a monthlong series of precinct meetings to pick delegates to the Democratic State Convention next May 7-9.

The 1,893 state convention delegates will, in turn, pick the party's 20 delegates to the national con-

Carter was the leader in the first caucuses in the nation, in Iowa, but trailed Alabama Gov. George Wallace in Mississippi caucuses.

In Portland, which has 95 convention seats as the largest city in the state, Carter supporters won 44 seats, uncommitted slates took 32 seats, former Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma got 12, Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana got 3, Rep. Morris Udall of Arizona got 2 and Sen. Hubert Hum-phrey of Minnesota and Sargent Shriver each got 1.

In Caribou, Carter got six delegates and the remaining five were uncommitted; Gardiner picked seven Carter supporters and five uncommitted delegates, and Manchester chose one for Carter and two uncommitted.

The caucuses continue until the end of the month, but communities with populations of more than 5,000 must hold their meetings during the first two weeks of February.

state had the backing of former Gov. Kenneth M. Curtis, one of Maine's most popular Democrats. Aside from Shriver, who made two recent visits to Maine, candidates spent little effort in the state. None showed up here Friday night for a candidates' forum sponsored by the Democratic State Committee.

Only about 500 of Portland's 13,500 enrolled Democrats, less than 4 per cent, participated in the caucuses

Delegates chosen in the caucuses must announce any presidential preferences prior to balloting, but they are not bound to any candidate and may switch preferences later.

Republicans also are holding municipal caucuses in Maine this month, but all GOP convention delegates will be uncommitted.

Dallas mayor says it was family's decision

DALLAS (AP) - The first woman mayor of this bustling, commercial city, the eighth largest in the country, says it was a family decision that caused her to run for the city council in 1972.

It was a decision last week by then-Mayor Wes Wise to run for the U.S. House of Representatives that vaulted Adlene Harrison to mayor.

It also means two of the nation's ten largest cities, both in Texas, now have woman mayors. Lila Cockrell took over as mayor of 10th-ranked San Antonio last year.

In both cities, the mayor's job is part time with a city manager running the day-today government.

But Mrs. Harrison says she has already decided she will be mayor only until April when a special election will be held to fill the post.

Mrs. Harrison, who was chosen mayor pro tem last September, says she plans to run an active government until a successor is chosen.

"The largest problem I face right now is figuring out how many more hours I can heap on top of what I'm already working," she said.

The two-term council member said one of the first things that will probably have to be cut is the number of ceremonial functions the mayor is usually called on to perform.

Hard work is nothing new to Mrs. Harrison, who says she already works 16 or 17 hours a day in her position on the council.

Mrs. Harrison grew up in Dallas and attended the University of Missouri where she received a bachelor's degree in 1944.

She returned to Dallas where she worked for a number of different companies including Nieman-Marcus

"I can't say I really enjoyed my working career because I never felt I was in the right place," she said in an interview in the Dallas Times Herald.

In 1955, she married Maurice Harrison, a local businessman. The two are the parents of Janie, a freshman at Northwestern University. Harrison says he is responsible for his wife's running for the city council in 1972. "I kiddingly said, 'Why don't you run?" Harrison said. "Adlene had been working with the city and for the city for many years."

The work has continued and grown since her election as council member from District 3.

"It has been four years since I read a novel just for fun," Mrs. Har-

She said she knows the rest of her term as mayor will be full of work because of such things as a 17.8 per cent rate increase request by Dallas

Power and Light Co. But she says she is hopeful in spite of the hard work facing her. 'There are so many problems and so few clear-cut answers," she said."But never before has there been so much citizen involvment." "So no matter how tired I get sometimes, I know this work is worthwhile, so I pick up the pieces and perform as best I can," she added.
