Hearst says she expected to be killed during robbery

The Los Angeles Times SAN FRANCISCO — Patricia Hearst expected to be shot to death by the leader of her terrorist captors in the midst of her unwilling participation in a San Francisco bank robbery, she said at her trial Tuesday.

"I thought that even though I had gone in there and done this, he was going to kill me inside the bank," the distraught defendant testified. "I just wanted to get out of there."

Miss Hearst, sometimes breaking into tears, took the witness stand for a full day in the fourth week of her armed robbery trial, continuing her chronology of captivity by the Symbionese Liberation Army — the group she says forced her into joining in crime.

IN A SOFT monotone, she described in detail how her captors kept her blindfolded in a closet, threatening and sexually abusing her. She said that finally, warning her to cooperate or die, her captors planned that she be seen at the bank so that the authorities would be pursuing her as well as them.

It was Donald DeFreeze, an escaped convict who called himself "Cinque," who plotted her role in the robbery and told her she would be killed "...if I messed up in any way," she said.

The prosecution, which contends she joined willingly in the robbery, is expected to begin its cross-examination of the 21-year-old heiress by Wednesday afternoon.

IN NEARLY four hours of testimony, Miss Hearst also:

- Described how SLA member Angela Atwood had approached her in the tiny closet she was being held prisoner and instructed her she must have sexual relations with her captors because "...everyone had to take care of the needs of other people and that sexual freedom was part of the functioning of the cell..."
- Subsequently, she said, she was forced to have sexual intercourse with SLA member Willie Wolfe and DeFreeze. Miss Hearst was visibly upset as she described these events and, in the hushed courtroom, her mother, Mrs. Catherine Hearst, covered her face with her right hand.

—Recalled how the would-be revolutionaries who kidnaped her had begun to attempt to indoctrinate her while she was being held in the closet. They expressed surprise, she said, when she was unable to readily identify the name of a left-wing revolutionary group in Mozambique.

—TOLD HOW the SLA had played a cruel joke — issuing a communique April 1, 1974, claiming Miss Hearst would be released "within 72 hours." "It was like their idea of April Fools," she said.

—Said that even when DeFreeze ostensibly offered her freedom, prior to the bank robbery, she had told him she wanted to stay with the group because she secretly feared he would kill her if she had sought release. "I figured he had to kill me," she said. "I'd been with them so long and knew their voices...I knew too much."

—Claimed that in a series of tape recordings issued by the SLA after her kidnaping she was forced to read from her captors' notes and slips. On these tapes — four of which were played for the jury Tuesday — Miss Hearst was heard becoming increasingly critical of her parents and authorities. What she said on the tapes she really did not believe, she said. "I hoped (my parents) would understand," she said.

—Described the young middle-class white followers of DeFreeze as remarking repeatedly that they wished they were not white. "William and Emily Harris and Angela Atwood said many times they wished they weren't white — that they could be like black people," she said. "Nancy Ling Perry would practically have said that she wasn't white, even though she was."

DeFreeze, a black, had joined with whites, she added, because "he thought they needed help." DeFreeze, Wolfe, Miss Atwood, Mrs. Perry, Camilla Hall, Patricia Solitsik all were killed in a shootout with Los Angeles police in May, 1974.

In another development, U.S. Dist. Judge Oliver J. Carter issued a memorandum explaining in further detail why last week he had denied a defense motion seeking to suppress as evidence tape recordings, oral remarks and written statements by Miss Hearst following the April 15, 1974, robbery. This material contains several admissions by the defendant that the defense claims were forced from Miss Hearst by her captors.

tion of why she did not flee when she had the opportunity — "Where would I have gone?" she said during the hearing — "does not satisfy the court that the defendant was, as she claims to have been, a prisoner whose every move was made under the watchful eyes of her captors."

MISS HEARST'S appearance on the witness stand Tuesday was carefully directed by chief defense counsel F. Lee Bailey, standing at a lectern, occasionally referring to notes on a stack of yellow legal-sized papers.

The tapes he played for the jury were designed to underscore the defense contention that she was forced systematically to denounce her parents and claim she had joined her kidnapers in the bank robbery.

In addition to Miss Hearst's voice were heard the voices of other SLA members, their rhetoric ringing through the packed courtroom. The demonstration reached a climax with the playing of a tape received April 3, 1974, on which Miss Hearst said she had "chosen to stay and fight" with the SLA.

On that tape, the voice of DeFreeze was heard, saying that Miss Hearst — "Tania" — was free to leave the group "whenever she wants to."

Miss Hearst told the jury it was April 1 — almost two months after her kidnaping — before she was permitted to remove her blindfold for any length of time.

SHE WAS taken out of a closet in the gang's Daly City, Calif., hideout, crammed into a garbage can and transported to a new hideaway in an apartment on Golden Gate Ave. in San Francisco, she said.

There, she said, the group planned a robbery because the SLA needed money. It was DeFreeze who decided they would rob a bank and informed her she'd be going inside. "I just couldn't believe they were going to do it," she recalled.

Miss Hearst said that when they selected a Hibernia branch bank as their target she purposely did not tell the terrorists that the father of her long-time friend, Patricia Tobin, was president of CARTER RULED that the prosecution, "by the preponderance of the evidence," had shown these statements were made voluntarily.

In the eight-page memorandum, Carter said that the factual question presented during the evidentiary hearing held on the issue "is a close one," but that, on the basis of testimony by the prosecution witnesses, "it appears more likely than not the statements in issue were voluntary."

During the hearing, Miss Hearst had claimed her kidnapers forced her to make the statements.

The jury, Carter noted, would be instructed to disregard such admissions unless the jurors were to find that they were voluntary beyond a reasonable doubt.

Carter observed that Miss Hearst's explana-

DEAR ABBY

Former mental patients appreciate Abby's column

By Abigail Van Buren
DEAR ABBY: May God bless you for asking readers who had spent three months or more in a mental hospital to write to you explaining the problems of getting back into society. You really do care about people, don't you?

I spent two years in a county mental hospital. At first I expected to be thrown together with freaks and nuts who would climb the walls, scream bloody murder and act crazy. Some were a little strange, and occasionally hostile and hard to handle, but none were dangerous. Most were in a deep state of depression. Abby, will you please say a kind word for those wonderful people who work with disturbed patients? It takes a deep love for humanity to care for people who are mentally ill.

Today I am home, well and happy, and I know I never could have made it without the patient.

WOMEN'S NEWS

loving and understanding people who looked after me. Thank you.—
FORMER MENTAL PATIENT

DEAR FORMER: I appreciated your kind letter. And I still welcome letters from former mental patients. You need not sign your names. The response to my request has been heartwarming.

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister's wife, and I would like to tell you what Christmas means to me: It means spending the holidays going to programs in which my musically talented children perform. (Most ministers marry women who can play the piano so they will always have someone to play for the services. These wives usually produce musically gifted children.)

Christmas means working hard to make gifts for the family in order to live within a limited budget. Ministers' wives have always done this. It means cooking everything from scratch for the same reason. Christmas means being excluded from a lot of holiday parties because most people don't want to know the kind of drinks they're serving. (We know anyway.)

Christmas means spending all the time at the stove, sink or washing machine. Nobody offers to help with anything, and after a few tries, you end up doing it alone because it's easier than begging for help.

Christmas means receiving gifts from your family that will enable you to serve them better—rarely anything to satisfy your personal, feminine desires.

Christmas means becoming physically exhausted and trying to keep it from showing. The family isn't concerned. Any suggestions, Abby?—NAMELESS AND NO LOCATION

DEAR NAMELESS: Yours is the saddest Christmas song I've ever heard. Clip this and show it to your family. If they don't know how you feel, they should.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Roy for a year and a half. We plan to be married.

Roy's brother went with a girl I'll call Gloria. Gloria and I are good friends. Gloria broke up with Roy's brother and is going to marry someone else.

My boyfriend and I were invited to the wedding. I want to go. My boyfriend says that he will not go and that out of respect to his brother, I shouldn't go, either. I think he's out of line, and I told him I thought he was childish—that if everyone thought like this, no one would have a friend in the world.

What do you say?—
EASTERNER

DEAR EASTERNER: I'm with you. Adults choose their own friends. (And enemies.)

Adequate preparation vital for brick patio surface

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service

Q. Do you consider brick a desirable patio surface? — Mrs. Arthur T.

A. Yes. But adequate preparation is essential. A sand bed is best so that the bricks can level. Laying the bricks in interlocking patterns works well and makes the surface appearance interesting. When the brick is laid out, sweep dry cement into the cracks. Then water down the whole surface. This sets the cement and the bricks are fixed into position. Breakage is also minimized and you should then not have the problem of grass or weeds growing between the bricks.

Q. When concrete was poured for the terraces of our new house, our aluminum screen doors were on and the cement splashed on the metal. We have tried various aluminum cleaners, but cannot remove the spatters. Can you recommend any remedy? — W.T.C.

A. To remove the concrete spatters, moisten the concrete with a solution of one part muriatic acid to 20 parts of water, mixed in a nonmetal container, and allow it to remain only long enough to soften the cement without affecting the aluminum. Be careful not to splash any of the acid on the aluminum or other metal in the area. Then flush off the solution with plenty of water. Then carefully scrape off the softened spatters with a flat piece of wood, so that you will scratch the aluminum as little as possible. Repeat the treatment if necessary.

Wife claims lighthouse life boring

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — Stranded at the very tip of solid ground, the lighthousekeeper's wife tells a tale of loneliness, boredom and longing for spring.

"Everything is bleak," says Violet Horoschak of her winter on Lynde Point.

What passes for normal human activity is an abnormality for her in a two-family house tucked next to the 1860 lighthouse where her husband works.

With few visitors, she passes long hours reading books. And with someone required to be home all the time to answer the telephone, the Horoschaks can't go out with the Bowdlers, who live in the other half of the modern house.

"It's so boring, there's nothing to do. It's a place to get fat, eat, lie around and watch TV. Even my dog's gained weight."

The mailman doesn't come to the lighthouse, five miles from the center of town, next to the borough of Fenwick. The school bus stops a mile away.

All the summer homes are boarded up. Only two other families stay all winter, the only sign of human life for miles.

"The ice smashing on the side of the rocks is about the only noise besides the seagulls," says Mrs. Horoschak.

Her reading taste runs to mysteries, which come in handy on such occasions as the time high water washed out the road to town for three days last year and kept the Horoschaks prisoners in their home.

She lives with her husband, Coast Guard Boatswain 1C Robert Horoschak and their son. Sharing the house are George Bowdler, also in the Coast Guard, his wife and their three children.

The families take turns keeping up the lighthouse and answering the phone.

Life becomes livelier in the summer when the Horoschaks have parties with their friends in town. But winter visits from friends are rare.

Their next stop will be "someplace warmer," Mrs. Horoschak says. "Hawaii."

Skin consultant advises

Marti Robinson, director of consumer information for a leading cosmetic firm, was in Midland recently and explained her program for skin or complexion care.

Miss Robinson, red-haired winner of numerous beauty contests in California, presented radio and television programs during her visit in the Midland-Odessa area.

"In our artificially-controlled environment, whether it be in the home, office or automobile, the skin is robbed of its natural moisture, especially in locales where the climate is arid and the wind blows. Natural oil and moisture are necessary for a supple complexion."

Also, step three, use of powder base protector. The consultant also has done research into the history of cosmetics in the United States, as a Bicentennial project, and said the cosmetic industry in America did not become a full-time business until after World War II.

She also mentioned the growing trend in men's cosmetics, especially in translucent protectors and after-shave preparations to restore the skin's moisture.

personal reasons to know why good advice on skin care and make-up is important. "I had a bad acne problem when I was a girl. I tried everything — dermatologists, soaps and medication. But I also made the mistake of covering my blemishes with heavy make-up. I just compounded the problem." Today her complexion appears to be flawless and, she says, "it's better than it has ever been, even though I'm older." She said skin care will become second nature if a person will make a habit of it.

"Replenishing the natural moisture of the skin may be accomplished with cosmetics," Miss Robinson said. She said the first step is the evaluation of the skin's condition. The skin is oily, a thin moisturizer should be used daily. If the skin is normally dry, the person should select a moisture emulsion, especially for use under make-up. She suggested for both types of skin the use of a humectant for the eye and neck areas to draw moisture from the air to these spots.

Miss Robinson said the three recommended steps for skin care are 1) Use of a cleansing cream to remove oil and water soluble soils; 2) Use of a skin mask once daily for oily skin and two or three times a week for normal skin.

Connecticut beginning to have garbage troubles

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Garbage is piling up in Connecticut, polluting air and water while cities and towns wait for a $250-million system that will convert most refuse into reusable material.

Some have proposed that sledding be allowed on Saybrook's 120-foot, snow-covered mound of garbage. But officials say the heat generated by the decaying organic matter would create a safety hazard.

Saybrook officials have negotiated a plan to export garbage to New Milford, about 100 miles away, where it can be buried.

The Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection (DEP)

says 69 of the state's 142 landfill dumps cause pollution. Many landfills contaminate underground water with pollutants that seep through the soil.

Incinerators have been closed down in Hartford, West Hartford and New Britain because they sprinkled flyash over the neighboring landscape.

Hartford has taken to burying garbage north of the city in meadows along the Connecticut River. But the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers must approve continued use of the landfill because it is near dikes protecting the city in case of flood.

The long-range solution is the Connecticut Resources Recovery

Authority (CRRA), created in 1973 to set up eight regional plants that will separate metal and glass from garbage for recycling. The plants also will convert what is left over into a fuel that will be burned in electric plants.

"That was three years ago, and we have yet to see any part of the system built," said Joseph L. Boren, DEP

Press conference planned

Former special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski will hold an informal news conference at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in meeting room C of Rodeway Inn.

Jaworski will be the featured solid waste director. Boren said 15 months ago an interim program was launched "to avert a solid waste disaster" in communities which had run out of land to bury garbage.

The first garbage-conversion plant is set for Bridgeport. It will process 2,000 tons daily from that city and eight surrounding towns. CRRA, a quasi-public corporation, expects to sign a construction contract for the plant soon.

DEP estimates it costs a community about $15 a ton to burn garbage in an incinerator and between $5 and $6 to bury a ton in a landfill. That doesn't include the cost of collecting the stuff.

Besides fouling the environment, burning and burying garbage is a waste of natural resources, a fact many communities are beginning to discover.

East Hartford made about $20,000 last year from the sale of glass, metal and old newspapers, despite depressed prices for scrap. Newspapers were collected separately so they wouldn't get wet from messy garbage, bottles are left by residents at several pickup points and metal was pulled out by magnets.

In Barkhamsted and Norwich, similar salvage operations also turned a profit from the sale of glass, metal and paper culled from garbage.

Auditors uncover millions in taxes

AUSTIN (AP) — Auditors uncovered $7.8 million in taxes owed the state in January, Comptroller Bob Bullock said.

He said $3.3 million came from out-of-state firms.

Expert needed to interpret economic changes

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As measured by the numbers, this country's economy over the past decade has risen to the heights, plunged to the depths and is now climbing back up a slippery incline that has few footholds.

The numbers show retail sales are moving ahead, industrial production is rising, the job situation is improving, the stock market has recovered lost ground, inflation is tending lower and some interest rates are half what they were.

Sometimes we become hypnotized by these numbers, and tend to think they are a continuous measurement of the same economic body. But the numbers are mere abstractions, bare bones without the flesh of memory or emotion, unable to distinguish changes in the quality.

A look at the nonstatistical record will show that this past decade was perhaps even more violent than the numbers in regard to our business institutions, including retailers, airlines, railroads, banks, insurers.

Property and liability insurers have lost billions of dollars on underwritings over the past two years, perhaps more than $6 billion in all. Some have gone bankrupt, and others are looking for support or are retrenching. The banking industry has lost billions more on bad loans, and the names of many banks are on various official problem lists. The list of failures, for years restricted to relatively small institutions, now includes giants.

The stock market took one of the deepest dives in its history, from 1052 points on the Dow Jones industrial average early in 1973 to 578 late in 1974, before beginning an unsteady climb to its current mid-900 level.

But these stock averages too are numbers that disguise the carnage, individual and institutional. This is a very different stock market today, even if the numbers suggest business as usual or, in fact, better than usual.

There are many thousands fewer brokers and hundreds fewer brokerage houses. While the volume sets records, there are fewer investors. Most of the trading is by funds and trusts and other institutions.

Moreover, the structure of the stock market is different. The big, individual exchanges have lost much of their individuality, their autonomy, their separate identities. We are attempting to evolve a central market place.

Our three vital financial institutions — insurance, banking and the stock market — are all changed and changing. It is a different world today; it is a world in transition. Other industries too are changing, irreversibly.

The nation's bankrupt railroads still haven't been successfully reconstructed. The airline industry, healthy in a few areas, generally is buffeted by financial turbulence, often accompanied by a total absence of profits.

Few people back in the 1960s would have believed that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., largest food retailer in the nation, and W.T. Grant, one of the leading soft goods retailers, would fall on bad times. They have.

And the cities. The cities of the seventies cannot be viewed as they were in the sixties.

You won't find these contrasts in the numbers unless you look very closely and have an expert to interpret what you see. No, the numbers provide a sense of continuity when it really doesn't exist.

If you study all the numbers you might be inclined to say that everything is back to where it was, because a lot of the numbers have returned to their old position, or are heading in that direction.

Sugar prices still high, despite end of 'crisis'

Newsday
NEW YORK — The great sugar crisis is now a memory. It is difficult to believe that scarcely a year ago the sugar shortage was considered such a threat that the Ford Administration scheduled a summit conference in Washington to deal with it.

Restaurants were complaining about people walking out with their sugar bowls. Bake shops were warning of mass bankruptcies. Consumer groups were threatening sugar boycotts. Industrial users were threatening to switch to corn syrup as a sweetener for their products. And all segments of the industry were pointing to other segments as the culprits. Then, almost as suddenly as it had appeared, the sugar shortage disappeared. The sugar producers and refiners, who saw unheard-of profits in the higher prices, expanded their capacities in search of those profits. Consumers, as they normally do in the face of higher prices, reduced their consumption. Despite warnings in 1974 that it might take two or three years to bring sugar prices back to realistic levels, by last October the world had a sugar surplus for the first time in four years. Raw sugar prices have fallen to less than half their 1974 levels.

and that even with today's lower prices they are unlikely to get back in to some of them. Many industrial users, especially candy makers, switched to corn syrup. A big 1975 corn crop now assures ample supplies of corn syrup at lower prices, so many of those industries have decided not to switch back to sugar.

foods containing large amounts of sugar, notably baked goods, soft drinks, ice cream and candy. One likely conclusion is that the temporary high price of wholesale sugar has become frozen into the profit structure of a lot of food makers.

Typical moonshiner now big time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical moonshiner is no longer a hillbilly squeezing out a gallon of whisky to drink in the woods with his buddies. Instead, according to a Treasury Department official, the moonshiner is a large-scale producer at the center of a wholesale distribution network, sending his illegally produced hooch to metropolitan areas throughout the South.

tions and collecting federal taxes on legally produced alcohol products, reports that 95 per cent of the nation's illegal stills are operated in the South. In 1975, the bureau seized 800 moonshine stills, the fewest since the repeal of Prohibition in 1933. Some 650 persons were arrested, down from 1,414 the year before, according to Rex D. Davis, the bureau's director. In the past 10 years, the volume of confiscated moonshine has dropped. Embury attributed the decline in moonshining to improved economic conditions that permit potential customers of moonshiners to buy legal whisky and increased education about the dangers of moonshine. The whisky, distilled in contraptions often made from automobile radiators, frequently contains a high level of poisonous lead. In addition, the cost of sugar, one of the major components in the moonshine recipe, has skyrocketed, increasing production costs. Reduced efforts at trapping moonshiners may also have figured in the lower number of arrests. "We haven't spent the amount of time on moonshine whisky as we did years ago," Embury said. He attributed the decline in activity to increased law-enforcement duties in the areas of illegal gun use and wagering, which was recently added on to the bureau's operations.

President Ford's announced strategy of doing nothing about sugar prices seems to have paid off. Unfortunately, however, the free market performed admirably only down to the retail level. It has also resulted in drastically lower retail prices for refined sugar. A five-pound bag now selling for about $1.30 was going for around $3 in late 1974. But lower sugar prices have not resulted in lower prices of processed Americans consumed an average of 94 pounds of sugar each in 1974, and less than 90 pounds last year, the lowest level since sugar was rationed during and after World War II. Moreover, the sugar producers have found that they priced themselves right out of many markets

Diplomat dies
UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Albert F. Bender, longtime U.S. diplomat, died Monday night in Geneva. He was 61.

The latest consumer price index shows that since the end of 1974 the price of ice cream has risen much faster than the price of milk, even though ice cream manufacturers are paying half what they were for sugar. Sugar is the most expensive ingredient in soft drinks, but soft drink prices, while they have abated slightly in recent months, are still higher than a year ago. And the price of a layer cake, as measured by the government, is higher than a year ago, even though wholesale prices of both flour and sugar are lower.

Birds a problem for residents in Virginia town

The Washington Post
 WASHINGTON — Almost every night at dusk June Herrington stands at the edge of her backyard in Sterling Park, Va., and beats on a shovel with a wooden stick to try to scare away hundreds of thousands of birds descending toward her lawn.
 Mrs. Herrington and other homeowners in her neighborhood are concerned that up to a million starlings, grackles, red-winged blackbirds and cowbirds that swoop down every sunset to roost overnight may lead to widespread disease.
 The birds shower cars, roofs, clotheslines and lawns with droppings and create a powerful stench. Nevertheless, county health officials say there is no reason for alarm.
 "This is a potentially dangerous problem," said Fred Collier, who lives across the street from the cedar trees where the birds have roosted every night since October. "Should there be an outbreak of histoplasmosis (a lung disease caused by a fungus whose growth is aided by bird droppings), our children could transmit it into schools," Collier said.

large number of cedars there provides them with shelter and with protection from the cold weather. He said the birds probably travel from 20 to 30 miles a day to find food, then return to roost.
 "It's like a white winter wonderland," said Loudoun County, Va., Supervisor Robert Sheetz, who lives less than 100 feet from the roost. "It's like walking on a rubber cushion," he said of the roost area. "There are dead birds everywhere."
 Bridge said many birds are unable to withstand the cold weather. It is a matter of survival of the fittest among the million fowl, he said, with many birds dying of the cold weather or natural causes.

Carol Brannon of 1701 Amelia St. which runs parallel to the roost, said she is afraid to let her 2-year-old daughter play in their backyard which is adjacent to the roost. She fears she may pick up germs from the bird droppings or the dead birds she finds in her yard every morning.

 Robert Montgomery, a Loudoun County health official, said the birds are not a health problem. He said there has not been a case of histoplasmosis, the lung disease, in the county during recent history.
 Most children along Amelia Street do not play outside when it is warm and damp because the smell is unbearable, residents said.

 Other residents said they have not been able to hang clothes outside because of the birds, which are expected to leave about March. And the early morning noise which sounds like rain, that the birds make when they leave for other parts of the county is a nuisance, residents said.

According to residents, the birds smaller groups for shorter periods of time over the past three years.

Problems seen when electronic banking arrives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents may find it more difficult to control spending by their teen-agers. Home burglaries could increase while armed robberies decline. Individual and business privacy could be threatened.
 Those are some of the problems likely to arise as the nation moves toward a system of electronic banking and payments, according to a study released Monday by the National Science Foundation.

Electronic Funds Transfer, as it is coming to be known, already is being developed. It will be computer operated and involve such things as the automatic deposits of a worker's paycheck directly in his bank account by his employer.
 Payments for purchases at supermarkets or other retail stores could be accomplished with a credit-card type document inserted in a computer terminal. This would automatically and instantly transfer money from the bank account of the purchaser to that of the seller.

The study, done by Arthur D. Little Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., said the system is being developed even though most Americans are satisfied paying bills with cash and checks. Because they are satisfied, it probably will be many years before it is in full operation.

 The study said that eventually 70 per cent of the current volume of check payments will be handled by "electronic substitutes." The advantage for the banking system will be lower costs. The study estimates that each check transaction now costs about 30 cents and a credit card transaction costs about 50 cents. The study said a "significant fraction of these costs could be eliminated."
 It estimated there are now about 250 billion payments transactions in the economy each year, including about 28 billion checks.
 The federal government already gives recipients of Social Security checks the choice of having them deposited directly in their bank accounts by mail. In a few years, it expects to do this electronically.
 But as the nation moves toward this system, the study said the following kinds of problems will arise and should be dealt with in advance:
 —Parents may find it more difficult to keep watch over spending by teen-agers once a teenager has gained access to the system through a family credit card or a like item.
 —Since Americans would be carrying less cash, armed holdups may become less attractive, but home burglaries might increase.
 —There may be a big increase in so-called computer crimes, or other crimes involving embezzlement and misappropriation of funds.
 —There will be the creation of larger financial transactions of individuals and organizations "in a way that may threaten individual and business privacy."
 The study said most of the problems already occur in society.

Patent bills date to 1790

WASHINGTON (AP) — When George Washington signed the first patent bill April 10, 1790, the United States became the first nation to recognize by law that inventors had a right to profit from their inventions. Prior to that law, inventors were dependent upon privileges granted by a monarch or through a special act of legislature.

According to Intellectual Property Owners Inc., a group seeking to create public awareness of an effective patent system, responsibility for granting patents was placed upon a board whose first members consisted of Thomas Jefferson, Secretary of State; Henry Knox, Secretary of War and Edmund Randolph, Attorney General.

The birds roost in a wooded area, where children from the community of 20,000 used to play.
 David Bridge, an orthologist at the Smithsonian Institution, said the birds come to the area because the

President's view of differences apparently fluid

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he and challenger Ronald Reagan differ on some issues. But whether it's a philosophical difference seems to depend on which of the President's statements one hears.

At one point in a nationally broadcast news conference Tuesday night, Ford said, "Governor Reagan is to the right of me philosophically." Elaborating on their differences about federal spending and Social Security, he said "it is a somewhat different philosophy."

But a few minutes later, in response to another Reagan question, Ford said, "I don't think there are any philosophical differences.... I think he is to the right of me in a pragmatic and practical way."

Either way, Ford also declared that "anybody to the right of me, Democrat or Republican, can't win a national election."

He named no other names, but on the Democratic side seemed clearly to be referring to Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama.

In stressing the Social Security and federal spending issues, Ford continued to hit at themes he believes will help him in the New Hampshire and Florida primaries.

But he declined two opportunities at the news conference to flatly predict victories.

"I think we will do well in both.... I am encouraged in both cases," he said.

Reagan campaign manager Lyn Nofziger challenged Ford's recitations of the former California governor's positions. Ford said Reagan has suggested from time to time that Social Security ought to be voluntary and that he has suggested Social Security funds might be invested in the stock market.

Nofziger said Reagan "has been stating very clearly that he believes Social Security must be mandatory" and that Reagan has never proposed stock market investment for the fund. Reagan told a news conference in Florida last week that Social Security funds "are not invested, as they could be invested, in the industrial might of America."

Ford said he disagreed with what he described as Reagan's proposal of "a $90-billion cut in federal expenditures transferring the responsibilities and the programs to the local and state officials where they either have to abandon the programs or raise taxes to support them."

Nofziger said Reagan "has always proposed that any transfer of federal program funds back to the states must be accompanied by a transfer of tax sources."

Ford said he would campaign in New Hampshire Thursday and Friday this week. The election is next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a variety of controversies swirled at the level of the lifeblood of political campaigns — money.

The Senate Rules Committee scheduled hearings for today on proposals to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission, which will lose many of its powers after Feb. 29 unless Congress revamps the new federal election law that was partially struck down by the Supreme Court.

Sen. James L. Buckley, Cons.-R-N.Y., whose name led the lawsuit attacking the law, called Tuesday for prompt and major restructuring of the campaign finance procedure.

He said a new Justice Department unit should enforce the law, the Congress should not be allowed as at present to veto FEC regulations and the limits on campaign contributions that were upheld by the Supreme Court should be raised.

House Speaker Carl Albert said he was confident new agreement could be reached on a new law including a reconstituted commission before the end-of-the-month deadline set by the court. The fight to reconstitute the commission is expected to be tougher in the House because of the opposition of Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the committee handling election legislation.

But if the panel is not reconstituted, the faucet of federal matching funds may be turned off as of March 1. Even as the debate over its future continued

Tuesday, the FEC-certified Reagan for an additional $494,687.68 in government money for his campaign.

At the same time, the National Abortion Rights Action League filed a complaint with the FEC trying to stop the award of any matching funds to antiabortionist Ellen McCormack. She is campaigning for the presidency on a single-issue platform and submitted her matching funds application Jan. 31.

She claims she has raised the required $5,000 in each of 20 states from individual contributions of $250 or less.

The FEC staff, now auditing the McCormack submission, plans to report to the commission Thursday.

There were these other political developments Tuesday: —Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., called for a "maximum determined national effort" to rebuild the U.S. Navy, which he said has fallen dangerously behind the Soviet navy. Jackson said as president he would increase the fleet to from 650 to 700 ships instead of the present 477.

—Jackson also made public his federal income tax returns for the past five years, which showed he earned $322,210 during the period 1971-1975. According to the returns, he donated $102,725 received for speeches and other honoraria to charity.

—Fred Harris called on all the Democratic contenders to develop a joint program that would put people back to work.

—Sen. Birch Bayh said he will introduce legislation to eliminate discrimination against military women in such areas as enlistment, promotion and job opportunities.

Nurse found guilty

The Los Angeles Times
LOS ANGELES — Registered Nurse Norma Armistead was found guilty of first degree murder Tuesday for slashing the throat of a pregnant woman and then cutting the baby from her womb.

Mrs. Armistead took off her glasses and wept silently for several minutes after the verdict was read.

The same seven-woman, five-man jury that deliberated 12 hours before returning a verdict of premeditated murder will now have to decide whether the 44-year-old nurse was sane at the time of the crime.

The sanity phase of the trial is scheduled to begin today in the courtroom of Superior Court Judge Harry V. Peetris, who informed the jurors that he expected it would require only one day of testimony.

Should the jury find Mrs. Armistead was insane at the time of the murder, she would be committed to a state mental hospital instead of prison.

Mrs. Armistead's defense in the initial phase of the trial was that she suffered from diminished mental capacity when she slashed the throat of 28-year-old Kathryn Viramontes and then performed a caesarean section operation May 16, 1975.

Mrs. Armistead said it was not until after she had washed the blood off her hands that she realized the Viramontes woman "was dead or dying." The nurse said she then "saved the life" of the woman's baby by cutting it from the womb.

She was arrested after taking the baby boy to the Kaiser Permanente Medical Center in Hollywood, where she worked at the time, and telling doctors there she had given birth herself on route to the hospital.

Arkansas tornado kills 2 persons, injures 15

HAMBURG, Ark. (AP) — A tornado whipping through three small South Arkansas communities Tuesday night killed two persons and injured at least 15, state police said.

They identified the dead as Eddie Anderson, 13, of near Wilmot and a 37-year-old woman from near Parkdale. The woman's name was withheld pending notification of relatives.

John Giles, director of emergency services in Ashley County, said reports indicated the tornado first touched down about 8:20 p.m. at Montrone and then moved east of Parkdale and east of Wilmot near the Arkansas-Louisiana border.

Mayor Bill Place of the 1,202-member Wilmot community said three houses and the Union Baptist Church, all on Arkansas 52, were demolished.

"Three or four other persons were trapped in the house where the boy (Anderson) died," the mayor said. "They had to be dug out. The house was destroyed."

Place said he observed the damage along Arkansas 52, noting that "big tree roots were twisted out of the ground.... Concrete slabs from the homes were thrown about."

He praised the town's two Vietnamese doctors who manned the Wilmot Clinic during the aftermath.

"They began work immediately," he said. "They certainly proved their worth."

Mayor Jack Edwards of Montrose said no damage was reported inside his city limits, but one house was destroyed and a few mobile homes were damaged between Montrose and Lake Village.

One home was reported destroyed at Parkdale.

VD outbreak noted at prison

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections spokesman says an outbreak of venereal disease has been confirmed at the department's Ferguson Unit 20 miles north of Huntsville.

RON TAYLOR, administrative assistant to TDC Director Jim Estelle, said Tuesday the department is fighting the gonorrhea outbreak with medical care and increased supervision of homosexuals.

"We became aware of the problem last week when the prison hospital reported a high number of cases," Taylor said.

He said the hospital screened 15 inmates and found eight cases of the venereal disease. He said a mass screening of Ferguson's 1,600 inmates was ordered and 201 were found to be infected.

TAYLOR SAID homosexual conduct among inmates is a punishable prison offense but he added such conduct will probably exist as long as there are prisons.

Dr. Ralph Gray, TDC medical director, said there was no indication of active gonorrhea cases at other TDC units.

Bowie has two sides

HOLLYWOOD - If you're not into the rock scene, you probably think of David Bowie as a wan, wraith-like weirdo.

the broader, more colorful imagery of his performances, his manner, his appearance.

Belying any doubts about David's masculinity are his marriage to a Swiss-educated lady named Angela and the existence of their son, Zowie, four and a half years old.

Angela's family has adjusted very nicely to David, Bowie ventured.

On the other hand, if you're a rock aficionado, you probably think of him as an electric personality whose multitalents are of near-genius caliber.

But regardless of how you've been thinking of David, if you've only known him by reputation or from a distance, he'd take you by surprise should you meet him, talk with him and have a chance to sample the man behind the mask.

"We got along awfully well," he summed up. So, two years later they got married.

"Her father, who is quite conservative, thinks I'm a bit of an eccentric fellow," he said, "but we get along extremely well."

Sex, violence on TV frustrating to FCC head

By JERRY T. BAULCH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard E. Wiley completes his second year as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission next month with a feeling of accomplishment, but unable to eliminate two big frustrations in the job.

They involve personal soft spots, his love of children and his strong belief in the role of religion in his and others' lives.

"I get letters from people who ask

"why don't you do something to protect those kids from violence and sex on television?" he said. "It frustrates me. They don't understand that I can't under the law say this program is too violent or take this program off."

The FCC has "gone about as far as we can," Wiley said.

What makes his frustration so great is that Wiley, 41, the father of three children, was the person who persuaded the television industry to institute the early evening family viewing period. This is aimed at reducing exposure of children to television sex and violence.

The boyish-looking chairman said in an interview that broadcasters have a responsibility to protect children from programs that "can have a deleterious effect on kids. That's why I've been a vigorous spokesman for self-regulation and will continue to be."

The other frustration is that the

FCC hasn't been able to persuade millions of people the FCC isn't considering, and never considered, banning religion from radio and TV.

What the FCC did was get a petition over a year ago from two California residents, asking for a freeze on FM radio licenses to religious groups to see if they were getting too many of the scarce channels. The commission turned that down unanimously last Aug. 1, saying it would do nothing "to promote nor inhibit religion."

But the erroneous rumor that the decision involved banning religion brought the biggest avalanche of mail in FCC history, and it's still coming in big batches along with petitions of protest. The letters may total over two million, although nobody's actually counted them.

"I'm still getting letters and phone calls at home," Wiley said. "I try as decently as I can to explain the facts. I do feel some sense of frustration because I happen to believe that religious broadcasting is an important part of public interest."

Wiley is a pillar of the Cherrydale Methodist Church in Arlington, Va., and when asked what effect this had on his actions as FCC chairman, said, "If you believe in religion, Christianity in my case, you have to feel that affects the whole man. It isn't just a Sunday morning operation. So obviously there's an intangible aspect to it that I would hope pervades all my life."

Elimination of political appointees aim of FEL

By MIKE CAUSEY
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Bureaucracy for the bureaucrats:

That, in effect, is the Bicentennial campaign slogan for the Federal Executive League (FEL), an influential group of top career bureaucrats who have gotten together to work for better executive salaries and to erase the "professional" black eye the government got during the Watergate era.

What the FEL is talking about is a plan which, it believes, would give taxpayers more and better government for their money and permit the day-to-day government to function with fewer stops, reverses or policy flip flops resulting from the ignorance or indifference of fly-by-night politicians. The way to do it, FEL says, is to get rid of the 2,000 political appointees now sprinkled on the top layers of the government or at least put them out of harm's way into less critical jobs.

The League's bureaucracy for the bureaucrats proposal should have wide appeal within the career ranks of the government. The idea, spelled out later here, is that too many political appointees spend too little time in government, that their loyalties lie with General Motors, or Continental Grain or Lockheed form whence they came; that they do their thing in government for about 18 months and then return.

People who think it is a dumb idea, and there will be many, argue that the infusion of political appointees guarantees fresh blood and ideas; gives the elected president some control over the government and keeps the lifetime tenure bureaucrats' on their toes.

This is what the league is pushing: "Simply stated, it is our position that the federal government is floundering badly in most areas because the career civil servants are not permitted to manage and administer operations. Rather, there is interference, usurpation, mismanagement and corruption of federal agencies by political appointees and selectees whose average tenure in federal service is less than two years.

"These short-termers have a political ax to grind and their motivation is usually self-interest or the interests of the industry or professions to which they will return. The standards and rules of conduct that govern civil servants are of little concern to these political hacks. Rather, it is common practice for them to ignore or circumvent every rule in the book. They are just not concerned with the long-range improvement in government or the integrity of the career civil service."

So what is the alternative? The FEL says "all federal positions, including heads of departments" should be "filled by career civil servants."

Florida seeks veto power over Louisiana superport

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Florida has filed for federal "adjacent state" status which Gov. Edwin Edwards says would give it virtual veto power over a multi-million dollar Louisiana superport.

Tallahassee Tuesday to sound out Florida's intention in the filing. Florida officials apparently fear that giant oil tankers bound for the floating port 25 miles offshore would navigate along the coast to avoid Gulf Stream currents, Edwards said.

He said adjacent state status under federal maritime law would put Florida in a position to create serious obstacles for the superport if environmental damage to its coastline was feared.

"I'm concerned because there's a very big environmental feeling over there (Florida) that disturbs me," he said. Edwards has repeatedly said environmental issues must take a back

Operators report basin discoveries

Discoveries have been completed in Crockett and Runnels counties and wildcat sites were staked in Runnels, Concho sectors.

H. L. Brown Jr., Midland, completed No. 1-6 University as a Devonian oil strike in Crockett, 14 miles northwest of Iraan.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 223 barrels of 45.4-gravity oil and three barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,928-1.

Completion was effected on a 13-64-inch choke and through perforations at 8,104-4,113 feet. The pay had been treated with 500 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 6,145 feet, it has 5 1/2-inch pipe set on bottom, and is plugged back to 6,123 feet. Top of the Devonian was picked at 6,094 feet, under ground elevation of 2,358 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,900 feet from east lines of section 6, block 14, ULS, 1 1/4 miles east of the Crockett (Grayburg) field.

Operator has proposed field designation of Crockett, East.

RUNNELS ACTIVITY
Mineral Exploration Co. of Arlington, No. 1 Herring was finished as a Caddo lime gas strike in Runnels, 12 miles northwest of Winters.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 1.98 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 4,754-4,784 feet, after treating the pay with 1,500 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 5,100 feet, and it is plugged back to 4,850 feet, in 2 1/2-inch casing set at 4,830 feet. Top of the Caddo was reported at 4,742 feet, under ground elevation of 1,792 feet.

Wellbore is 467 feet from north and west lines of section 38, H&GN survey.

VENTURE SET
Tri-Star Petroleum Co. of Dallas has staked sites for a 4,900-foot wildcat in Runnels. It is No. 2 Margie Donica.

Drill site is 1,200 feet from northeast and 467 feet from southeast lines of lot 7, Henry L. Bays survey 444, 3/4 mile northwest of Fry production in the Delke field.

Donald G. Holland of Midland has announced plans to clean out to 3,880 feet and test in the lower Capps oil zone at around 3,678 feet, at No. 2 Muller, two miles east of Rowena, in Runnels.

It originally was drilled by Exxon Corp., and completed as a Capps well in the Rowena multipay field.

It is 487 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of J. J. McHenry survey 508.

Frizzell Exploration, Inc., Abilene, plans to drill No. 1 Lucy Nitsch, a location east offset to the recently Fry sand reopener in the Jim Adams field of Runnels.

It is slated to 4,900 feet, and spots 1,225 feet from south and 2,143 feet from east lines of section 81, block 63, H&TB survey, five miles southeast of Wingate.

The reopener, Frizzell No. 1 William Stevens Estate, finished in January for 83 barrels of 43.4-gravity oil, through a 14-64-inch oil add 3 choke, and perforations at 4,332-4,350 feet.

IRION VENTURE
Kerr-McGee Corp. of Amarillo plans to drill an 8,000-foot wildcat, No. 1 A. A. Sugg, in Irion County, one location north of the recent opener of the Gullian (Wolfcamp) oil field.

Drill site is 500 feet from south and west lines of section 3074, block 28, H&TC survey, 11 miles northwest of Mertzon.

Operator plans to test the Wolfcamp zone at 6,700 feet and the Canyon at 8,000 feet.

The site is also 1 1/4 mile east of the Tom Ketchum (Canyon) gas field.

CONCHO PROSPECTOR
Framland International Energy Co. will drill a 3,650-foot searcher for gas in Concho County, four miles southeast of Paint Rock. It is No. 1 W. M. Hartgrove.

Drill site is 960 feet from north and 3,900 feet from west lines of Heirs of Anton Schmidt survey 311, surrounded by depleted producers in the Paint Rock (Strawn) gas field.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

seat to solving the nation's oil supply problems.

Maritime authorities have 45 days to consider the application, which was filed this week.

Private corporations in both Louisiana and Texas have applied to build superports. But Edwards said Florida has not filed for adjacent status with Texas. He said neither Texas nor Louisiana has filed for the status with the other, although they border one another.

"We're kind of have an agreement with them (Texas) that we won't interfere in their business if they don't interfere in ours," he said.

The governor said his representatives are seeking to induce Florida to withdraw its application or, failing that, to use the power sparingly if it is accepted.

Edwards said the law allows states to claim adjacent status if they can prove their interests are substantially affected by offshore ports in other states.

Wildcats scheduled

Exploration has been scheduled in Loving, Crane, Ward and Pecos counties.

MNG Oil Co., Midland, will drill No. 1-10 Kyle, a 22,000-foot prospect in Loving, 15 miles northeast of Ora.

Location is 1,800 feet from south and east lines of section 10, block 55, T-1, T&P survey, on the east side of the Mason, North (Delaware) field.

CRANE TEST
Jack N. Blair and Tom Metcalfe, Midland, staked sites for a 9,300-foot venture in Crane, 3/4 mile southwest of the McElroy field. It is No. 1-48 University.

Drill site is 1,800 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 48, block 31, ULS, five miles northwest of Crane.

WARD SITE
Gulf Oil Corp. accounted for a 6,900-foot try in Ward, 3/4 mile northwest of Pyote and 1 1/4 miles southeast of the middle Delaware oil pay opener in the Caprio field. It is No. 1-08 State.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,915 feet from west lines of section 23, block 17, ULS.

PECOS REENTRIES
Hillis Production Co. of Odessa intends to reenter and test for gas at a wildcat depth of 5,400 feet at No. 1 B. L. Smith, former gas producer in Pecos, 15 miles west of Imperial.

It spots 660 feet from northeast and 1,900 feet from southeast lines of section 7, block 10, H&GN survey, 2 1/4 miles southwest of the Thunderbird (Devonian) field.

John R. Seay, Midland, plans the reentry and testing at 1,403-1,545 feet as a wildcat, at No. 3 USM, former Queen producer in North Pecos, three miles south of Imperial.

Location is 2,318 feet from northeast and 990 feet from southeast lines of section 21, block 3, H&TC survey. The old total depth is 2,404 feet.

Sterling field gets extenders

Two new producers have been completed as long extensions to Cisco gas production in the Crede, East field of Sterling County, about 10 miles northwest of Sterling City.

HNG Oil Co. No. 1-12 Wilkinson, a 2 1/2-mile east extension, finished for a calculated, absolute open flow of 2,350 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-distillate ratio of 138,000-1. Distillate gravity is 48 degrees.

Production was through perforations at 7,155-7,316 feet. The pay was fractured with 42,000 gallons and 36,000 pounds.

Location is 2,635 feet from south and 1,600 feet from east lines of section 12, block 23, H&TC survey.

HNG No. 1-13 Wilkinson, 1/4 mile south of No. 1-12, gauged a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1.6 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-liquid ratio of 114,000-1. Gravity of the distillate is 48 degrees.

Production was from pay behind perforations at 7,080-7,196 feet, after fracturing with 28,000 gallons and 24,000 pounds.

Location is 660 feet from north and 1,900 feet from east lines of section 13, block 23, H&TC survey.

FRANK P. MOOLIN Jr. stands in Rockefeller Center, New York, Tuesday where he picked up an Engineer-of-the-Year award for his work as boss builder of the $7 billion Alaska pipeline. Moolin says women are working on the pipeline on equal terms with men in what he believes is the first time in U. S. construction history. "Some of our best workers are women," he said.

Engineer-of-year says women work well on Alaska pipeline

By STANLEY JOHNSON Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Some of the best workers along the Alaska

Pipeline are women, says the boss engineer for the $7-billion project. "My experience shows that women have been beneficial," Frank P. Moolin Jr. — here to pick up an engineer-of-the-year award — said in an interview Tuesday. "At least the men shower and shave."

"Of course, there's pairing off. But we don't try to establish moral codes."

About 1,000 of the 16,300 workers pushing the pipeline from Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope along the Arctic Ocean to Valdez on the Pacific are women, he said.

"Nobody calls them 'Klondike Annie's' and they do everything the men do except welding," he said. "They're ironworkers, truck drivers, laborers, warehousepersons, cooks — and something there's no unisex word for — bull cooks. That means they clean the dorms."

The reason they don't weld, Moolin said, is "because welders are very close-knit. They move from construction job to construction job as a unit, a very fraternalistic group that likes to think they're the Marine Corps of the industry."

A lot of the women, he said, "feel they're race-setting and strive to outdo everyone. Some of our best workers are women."

Not only do they do the same work, he said, but they get the same pay — about $1,000 per 70-hour week, for instance, for a truck driver of either sex.

He said all the workers, men and women, live in the same bunkhouses built along the 800-mile pipeline route.

Ford officials decline to choose gas plans

The Los Angeles Times WASHINGTON — Ford Administration officials, despite considerable congressional prodding, declined at a Senate hearing Tuesday to choose between two competing proposals for bringing big new supplies of Alaskan natural gas to the lower 48 states.

The result may be a free-for-all in Congress as members begin to line up behind one or the other of the two massive, $9 billion to $12 billion projects.

Legislation is necessary to reduce the tangle of regulatory delays that may otherwise postpone groundbreaking on either pipeline for five years. Federal financial help may also eventually be sought, although a Treasury official told the hearing that either of the proposed projects "could" be accomplished with private funding alone.

The hearing was a joint session of the Senate committees on commerce and on interior and insular affairs. It was called to examine the relative merits of the competing projects and to see whether action could be expedited on one or the other.

The Alaska gas is needed soon in California and other states to make up for dwindling supplies of the fuel from nearer sources.

At stake in the battle over the two project designs — one to go across Canada, the other to traverse Alaska and use tankers to transport liquefied gas to Southern California — are competing environmental concerns and competing destinations for the gas. Complicating the issue is the question of whether routing the pipeline through Canada would add serious risks of future supply cutoffs or price increases.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn.) and 27 other senators, many of them from the Midwest, have introduced legislation favoring the Canadian route. This line would pipe gas overland from Alaska's North Slope through Canada's Northwest Territories and the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The line would divide at the U.S. border, with one spur poking southwest to California and the other southeast all the way to Pittsburgh. In all, 5,600 miles of pipe would be laid.

A number of other senators, primarily from the Southwest, back a measure introduced by Sen. Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) favoring the land-sea route. This involves much less pipe-laying — some 800 miles across Alaska from the North Slope to the southern port of Valdez, following the route of the trans-Alaskan oil pipeline now under construction.

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT
February 18, 1976
Midland County, Midland County Commission
TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:
The above named Commission has received a request from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal Funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following projects:

1. Paying of Streets in low income areas $10,000.
2. Improvements to public-owned community recreation building $1,000.00.

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the above named County has determined to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such decision are as follows:
The street improvements, while having short-term negative impacts during the construction phase, will have long-term beneficial impacts on the environment. The improvements will help prevent neighborhood decline and will improve the living environment of the residents within the area.

The improvements to the Valley View Community Center will have no effect on the environment. The improvements will have a positive effect on the users of the facility and will continue to provide a quality recreational, educational, and social opportunity for the citizens of Midland County.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above named County which document has the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file and is available for public and professional examination, upon request, in the County Judge's Office and Floor, Midland County Courthouse, 1000 North Main Street, Midland, Texas.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments to the Office of the County Judge, Southwestern Community Center, at the Midland County Courthouse on or before March 11, 1976. All such comments will be considered and the County will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the above project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

AL clears courts in Seattle

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — The final obstacle to reinstatement of American League play in Seattle was washed away Tuesday when a Superior Court judge adjourned the baseball trial.

Judge Frank Howard told the nine-woman, three-man jury that they were permanently dismissed although the $32.5 million lawsuit remains alive, on paper, until April 1977.

The suit was suspended with the understanding that it would be dismissed if the paper expansion team actually began play in April 1977.

Nine of the jurors said afterwards that they were leaning towards the side of Seattle, the state and King County. Almost all agreed that they wanted to carry the trial to the end and "see who won."

Clyde Parker, a gray-haired loan collector for a bank, said the trial "was a waste of taxpayers' money," but he agreed with the other jurors that he had wanted the trial to continue "because it's like stopping in the middle of the ballgame."

The governments had accused the league and its teams of antitrust violations, fraud and breach of contract for sale of the old Seattle Pilots team to Milwaukee interests in 1970.

The suit's goal, Atty. Gen. Slade Gorton said, was to recover a major league baseball team for the city, which in the meantime has acquired a $60 million domed stadium, the Kingdome.

Six businessmen, headed by radio executive Lester Smith and entertainer Danny Kaye, purchased the expansion franchise for $5.55 million. They have signed a 20-year lease for the stadium.

The county and state had agreed earlier that if a baseball team were obtained they would be willing to end the proceedings.

ODESSA—Lee and Midland High's golf teams, fresh off impressive showings in Midland's Invitational golf tournament last weekend, will invade Odessa Thursday and Friday for a tournament that will feature 18 West Texas teams.

Leo won the Midland Invitational by two strokes over Odessa Periman while Midland High was third. All three teams will be in this week's field.

Thursday's action begins at 9:30 a.m. at the Golden Acres Country Club, and the action will switch to Odessa Country Club for Friday's final 18 holes. Friday's action also begins at 9:30 a.m.

Other teams entered in the two-day tournament are Odessa High, San Angelo, Big Spring, El Paso Coronado, Pampa, Plainview, Amarillo High, Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo Palo Duro, Amarillo Caprock, Monahan, Sweetwater, Fort Stockton and Pecos.

Aggies, Raiders, Owls take SWC victories

Texas A&M and Texas Tech demonstrated Tuesday night they can win without key players, and Rice proved it can win, period.

The Aggies, leaders in the Southwest Conference race most of the year, held that status with a 94-80 road victory over Houston despite the sudden loss this week of Karl Godine and Jarvis Williams.

The two freshman starters were declared ineligible Monday by the Southwest Conference for undisclosed violations believed to be involved with recruiting.

"I feel justice will be done," said A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf. "I base my opinion on the knowledge of these young men. They've always gone to class and they've never told me anything that wasn't on the up and up."

Texas Tech, which played two games without its starting forwards while they were ill and is still without starter Grady Newton because of an injured knee, stayed close to the Aggies with an 87-76 victory over Baylor. A&M is 11-2 and Tech 11-3.

But the one game in the loss column is bigger than it appears because A&M has beaten the Red Raiders twice and therefore can afford to lose one of its remaining three games and still claim a berth in the finals of the SWC tournament March 6.

Meanwhile, Rice broke its 18game losing streak and won its first SWC contest in 14 starts by surprising Texas Christian 93-78.

A&M's star seniors, Barry Davis and Sonny Parker, became involved in a scuffle with a fan in the second half after Parker chased a ball out of bounds underneath the A&M basket.

"There was a lot of tension building up in this game," said Parker. "When I went for the ball, I reached out for it and the fan threw it away from me. I was so keyed up and it just took a little spark, I just reacted."

Parker said the loss of Godine and Williams "was an advantage to us in a way. We had to prove that we could win even without them."

LAMESA—The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes upset the Snyder Tigers, 76-75, here Tuesday night to end the 1975 case season with a 16-15 record.

Larry Arrendondo led the way with 25 points and Guy Frye pumped in 22 points for the Tors. Lamesa ends the second half District 3-AAA case with a 3-3 mark. Snyder lost its hopes for a playoff berth with a 4-2 mark.

Lubbock Dunbar won the loop crown with a 57-55 win over Brownfield. Dunbar won the first half title, Lubbock Estacado took a 75-56 win over San Angelo. Lake View to end the season with a 17-9 mark.

Dunbar will enter the playoffs next week against 4-AAA champion Brownwood.

Coopman wins nerves battle

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Jean-Pierre Coopman generally is expected to be the loser in his fight against Muhammad Ali Friday night. But the Belgian has been a winner in the war of nerves that is part of the heavyweight champion's bouts.

"Ali can't psyche him because he doesn't understand a word Ali says," George Kanter, Coopman's American manager, said Tuesday.

"Ali doesn't make him nervous—but a pretty girl does," said Coopman's Belgian manager, Charles de Jaeger, looking at a woman reporter.

While the inability of Coopman, who speaks only Flemish, to communicate with the press or engage in a give-and-take with Ali has soothed the 29-year-old challenger's nerves, it also has pushed him farther into Ali's shadow.

When people here discuss the fight, Coopman almost is mentioned as an afterthought. The man dubbed "the Lion of Flanders" seems to be treated as just another part of the production equipment, like the television cameras that will carry the fight into homes in the United States.

All doesn't mock Coopman as an opponent, the way he did George Foreman or Joe Frazier. But he spent a good deal of time Tuesday talking about a fight with Jimmy Young in Costa Rica in April and about plans for fights in West Germany, Japan, the Sudan and the United States.

Young's co-manager, Bob Brown, said negotiations are being conducted with New York promoter Don King and, through King, with Ali's manager, Herbert Muhammad, for an April fight in Costa Rica.

West opened the four of spades, and dummy's seven held the first trick. "The price is right," South remarked amiably.
But the price was wrong, as South soon found out.
Declarer went after the diamonds, winning the first diamond with the king. East took the second diamond and returned a club.

Now South was in trouble because he couldn't get dummy for the rest of the diamonds. He led hearts from his hand, hoping to bring in two heart tricks, but this led to only seven tricks for declarer.

EARLY ERROR

South's mistake came at the first trick. He should ignore the cheapness of the first trick and should win the first spade with the ace or king. This leaves him two low spades to lead toward dummy's jack. West cannot prevent declarer from reaching dummy with a spade after the diamonds are established. South can therefore be sure of four diamonds, three spades and three clubs.

It doesn't even cost South anything to win the first trick with a high spade. He can win only three spade tricks either way. The important point is to save a later entry to the dummy instead of wasting it at the first trick.

'Cuckoo's Nest' takes top honors

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," the saga of one man's fight against the system in an insane asylum, scored top honors in the 48th Academy Award nominations Tuesday.

The United Artists film drew nine nominations, including those for best picture, Jack Nicholson as best actor, Louise Fletcher as best actress, Brad Dourif for supporting actor and Milos Forman for best director.
"Barry Lyndon" placed second with seven nominations and "Dog Day Afternoon" was third with six.

The three films were nominated for best picture, along with "Jaws" and "Nashville."
In the best actor category, Nicholson faces competition from Walter Matthau in "The Sunshine Boys"; Al Pacino, "Dog Day Afternoon"; Maximilian Schell, "The Man in the Glass Booth"; and James Whitmore, "Give 'Em Hell, Harry!"
Miss Fletcher's opponents as best actress are Isabelle Adjani, "The Story of Adele H.," Ann-Margret, "Tommy," Glenda Jackson, "Hedda," and Carol Kane, "Hester Street."

George Burns, whose most critics considered Matthau's costar in "The Sunshine Boys," was nominated in the supporting actor category. Besides Dourif, he faces Burgess Meredith of "The Day of the L'cust," Chris Sarandon, "Dog Day Afternoon," and Jack Warden, "Shampoo."

The supporting actress race features two from "Nashville," Ronnee Blakely and comedienne Lily Tomlin. Also nominated: Lee Grant, "Shampoo;" Sylvia Miles, "Farewell, My Lovely," and Brenda Vaccaro, "Once Is Not Enough."

Academy voters will now view the nominated films and make their final choices, which will be announced to a television audience on Monday, March 29, in ceremonies at the Los Angeles Music Center.

JOHN DENVER and Frank Sinatra rehearse a song for Denver's upcoming special "John Denver and Friend." The show will feature both singers and will be broadcast on ABC on March 29.

Bowie has two sides

By NANCY ANDERSON
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — If you're not into the rock scene, you probably think of David Bowie as a wannabe-waiter-like weirdo.

On the other hand, if you're a rock aficionado, you probably think of him as an electric personality whose multitalents are of near-genius caliber.

But regardless of how you've been thinking of David, if you've only known him by reputation or from a distance, he'd take you by surprise should you meet him, talk with him and have a chance to sample the man behind the mask.

He came to the door of his hotel suite wearing neither sequins on his eyelids nor a dress but, instead, well-cut dark trousers and an embroidered jacket, a bit flamboyant perhaps but not at all bizarre by current show biz standards.

The hair was something else again — vivid, glowing red on top with a streak of lemony yellow against Bowie's pale face.

When he said, "Come in, I'm David," he extended a hand neither too limp nor too soft.

On stage, limber and almost translucent, he appears to have no bones, but he has them.

His gaze has a slightly feline quality, the result not so much of his mysticism (though mystic he is) as of a punch received years ago which nearly took his left eye and gave him a paralyzed pupil.

"I got the punch because I had my eye on someone's girl friend," he said when he was asked about it. "The girl almost cost me an eye. There was some thought that I'd lose it which was particularly alarming, since I was an artist at the time."

He still creates pictures, of course. Not only his album covers which he designs, but through the broader, more colorful imagery of his performances, his manner, his appearance.

So who's influenced him most? What's the inspiration for his style? "As a performer, I'm influenced by all other mediums," he said. "I think of the style of an early Dali, the surrealist school."

"And I very much admire Buster Keaton and Fritz Lang. Those are my roots really."

The mask Bowie wears for public appearances (if it is a mask) is asexual, pale faced and scarlet lipped, and he relates, he came near becoming actually asexual through an automobile accident years ago.

"I was in school only until I was 16," he said, "and, as a matter of fact, was under a doctor's care during much of my youth, not because I was sickly but because I was accident-prone."

"I broke a hand and then, after it healed, I broke a thumb on the same hand. And this was while I was planning to be an artist."

"Then I ran over myself with an automobile. "I was cranking the car with it in gear and it ran against me, breaking both my legs."

"That time I very nearly lost my masculinity entirely, and, until this day, I have a large scar on the inner side of my leg."

Belying any doubts about David's masculinity are his marriage to a Swiss-educated lady named Angela and the existence of their son, Zowie, four and a half years old.

Bowie met Angela at a discotheque and found her "very witty, very funny and very intelligent."

"We got along awfully well," he summed up. So, two years later they got married.

The delay, he declared, derived from the fact that he is basically "very old-fashioned."

Angela's family has adjusted very nicely to David, Bowie ventured.

"Her father, who is quite conservative, thinks I'm a bit of an eccentric fellow," he said, "but we get along extremely well."

Last summer David made a picture in New Mexico, "The Man Who Fell To Earth," described by director Nicholas Roeg as "a mysterious American love story not too far ahead of its time," and was so completely won by the land that he's bought property there.

'Wind' still top movie

By BOB THOMAS
LOS ANGELES (AP) — For 25 years, "Gone with the Wind" was the biggest earning, longest and most fabled movie in Hollywood history. Its record as a moneymaker was finally eclipsed in 1965 when "The Sound of Music" soared to the top of the list. Its record has since been eclipsed by "The Godfather" and now, "Jaws", "Cleopatra" in 1963 ran longer on the screen.

No movie will ever surpass "Gone with the Wind" in legend, and most of it is collected in a new book, "Scarlett, Rhett and a Cast of Thousands,"—Macmillan, $13.95, by Roland Flamini, a Time magazine correspondent in Los Angeles. Much of it is familiar, but Flamini has done his legwork, traveling to Paris to interview Olivia deHavilland, survivor of the quartet of stars, and to Atlanta to learn more about author Margaret Mitchell.

His research has paid off in new information about David O. Selznick's triumph and his downfall — he could never quell his desire to top "Gone with the Wind". These are some of the things the average moviegoer might not know about the film:

—MGM had a chance to buy the Mitchell novel, but Irving Thalberg advised Louis B. Mayer against it because "no Civil War picture ever made a nickel."

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — You've got to give Walter Cavanagh credit.

Everybody else does. Cavanagh has the world's largest collection of credit cards — 788 of them — all different. Mr. Plastic Fantastic.

"It started four years ago when a pal and I made a bet as to who could get the most in three months," he said. "I got 40 and I won."

Cavanagh saw no reason to stop, and now his life can be summed up by the motto on the T-shirt his friend Nancy gave him: "Charge!"

Actually, he makes use of only a handful of the cards in his collection. Cavanagh, a pharmacy manager, is quick to point out that if he used them all he would be hard pressed to afford the interest.

He keeps no cards that charge a monthly fee.

Sex, violence on TV frustrating to FCC head

By JERRY T. BAULCH
WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard E. Wiley completes his second year as chairman of the Federal Communications Commission next month with a feeling of accomplishment, but unable to eliminate two big frustrations in the job.

They involve personal soft spots, his love of children and his strong belief in the role of religion in his and others' lives.

"I get letters from people who ask

"why don't you do something to protect those kids from violence and sex on television?" he said. "It frustrates me. They don't understand that I can't under the law say this program is too violent or take this program off."

The FCC has "gone about as far as we can," Wiley said.

What makes his frustration so great is that Wiley, 41, the father of three children, was the person who persuaded the television industry to institute the early evening family viewing period. This is aimed at reducing exposure of children to television sex and violence.

The boyish-looking chairman said in an interview that broadcasters have a responsibility to protect children from programs that "can have a deleterious effect on kids. That's why I've been a vigorous spokesman for self-regulation and will continue to be."

The other frustration is that the

FCC hasn't been able to persuade millions of people the FCC isn't considering, and never considered, banning religion from radio and TV.

What the FCC did was get a petition over a year ago from two California residents, asking for a freeze on FM radio licenses to religious groups to see if they were getting too many of the scarce channels. The commission turned that down unanimously last Aug. 1, saying it would do nothing "to promote nor inhibit religion."

But the erroneous rumor that the decision involved banning religion brought the biggest avalanche of mail in FCC history, and it's still coming in big batches along with petitions of protest. The letters may total over two million, although nobody's actuality counted them.

"I'm still getting letters and phone calls at home," Wiley said. "I try as decently as I can to explain the facts. I do feel some sense of frustration because I happen to believe that religious broadcasting is an important part of public interest."

Wiley is a pillar of the Cherrydale Methodist Church in Arlington, Va., and when asked what effect this has on his actions as FCC chairman, said: "If you believe in religion, Christianity in my case, you have to feel that affects the whole man. It isn't just a Sunday morning operation. So obviously there's an intangible aspect to it that I would hope pervades all my life."

Elimination of political appointees aim of FEL

By MIKE CAUSEY

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Bureaucracy for the bureaucrats:

That, in effect, is the Bicentennial campaign slogan for the Federal Executive League (FEL), an influential group of top career bureaucrats who have gotten together to work for better executive salaries and to erase the "professional" black eye the government got during the Watergate era.

What the FEL is talking about is a plan which, it believes, would give taxpayers more and better government for their money and permit the day-to-day government to function with fewer stops, reverses or policy flip-flops resulting from the ignorance or indifference of fly-by-night politicians. The way to do it, FEL says, is to get rid of the 2,000 political appointees now sprinkled on the top layers of the government or at least put them out of harm's way into less critical jobs.

The League's bureaucracy for the bureaucrats proposal should have wide appeal within the career ranks of the government. The idea, spelled out later here, is that too many political appointees spend too little time in government, that their loyalties lie with General Motors, or Continental Grain or Lockheed from whence they come; that they do their thing in government for about 18 months and then return.

People who think it is a dumb idea, and there will be many, argue that the infusion of political appointees guarantees fresh blood and ideas; gives the elected president some control over the government and keeps the lifetime tenure bureaucrats on their toes.

This is what the league is pushing: "Simply stated, it is our position that the federal government is floundering badly in most areas because the career civil servants are not permitted to manage and administer operations. Rather, there is interference, usurpation, mismanagement and corruption of federal agencies by political appointees and selectees whose average tenure in federal service is less than two years.

"These short-termers have a political ax to grind and their motivation is usually self-interest or the interests of the industry or professions to which they will return. The standards and rules of conduct that govern civil servants are of little concern to these political hacks. Rather, it is common practice for them to ignore or circumvent every rule in the book. They are just not concerned with the long-range improvement in government or the integrity of the career civil service."

So what is the alternative? The FEL says "all federal positions, including heads of departments" should be "filled by career civil servants."

Ford announces new rules for intelligence agencies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The CIA and the National Security Agency will be barred from eavesdropping on conversations to, from or inside the United States under President Ford's intelligence reorganization, according to administration officials.

The Associated Press has learned that guidelines to be issued today also would:

- Ban the infiltration of domestic organizations except those "composed of non-U.S. persons reasonably believed to be acting on behalf of foreign powers;"
- Bar physical surveillance inside the United States of all persons except employees or contractors of intelligence agencies who have access to classified data, and then only with the approval of the agency head;
- Outlaw domestic break-ins entirely; and
- Place new restrictions on the disclosure of tax returns by the Internal Revenue Service to other government agencies.

The guidelines do not apply to the FBI, which will be governed by a separate set of directives being drawn up by the Justice Department.

The guidelines come after Ford announced at a nationally broadcast news conference Tuesday night his plans to revamp the foreign intelligence organizations. Those plans will enhance the role of new CIA Director George Bush.

The guidelines would contain a flat prohibition against electronic eavesdropping by the CIA inside the United States, officials said.

The NSA would be barred from surveillance of any conversation "which is made from or is intended by the sender to be received in the United States," according to these same officials. The NSA also would be prohibited from intercepting conversations between American citizens abroad, the officials said.

Ford also is expected to propose legislation that for the first time would require judicial warrants for national security wiretaps and the opening of mail, the officials said.

At the news conference that dwelled on Ford's plans for changes in the intelligence apparatus of U.S. intelligence agencies, the President also:

- Described Ronald Reagan as "to the right of me philosophically," though he later said there were no philosophical differences between Reagan and him.
- Declined to predict flatly that he would win the New Hampshire and Florida Republican primaries, saying instead, "I think we will do well in both."

—Said he believes the nation has made "substantial progress" toward ending inflation. "When I became President the rate was 12 per cent a year, it's now down around 6," Ford said.

Asked why he lent "the prestige of your high office to discrimination by golfing at Burning Tree Country Club which excludes women," Ford responded: "There are no federal funds going to Burning Tree."

Ford's plan to reorganize intelligence operations includes:

- A Committee on Foreign Intelligence to manage U.S. intelligence agencies under the chairmanship of Bush;
- A three-member Oversight Board headed by former ambassador Robert D. Murphy to review reports from the inspectors general of the various intelligence agencies; and
- An Operations Advisory Group to be the successor of the so-called Fortv Committee in directing covert operations.

Ford also said he would send legislation to Congress that "would make it a crime for a government employe who has access to certain highly classified information to reveal that information improperly."

Ford added that he would "also support legislation that would prohibit attempts on the lives of foreign leaders."

Ford's plan met with mixed reaction from members of Congress.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., second-ranking Democrat on the Senate intelligence committee, said he welcomed the President's initiative but added that he was concerned that "there is no apparent improvement called for in congressional oversight of the FBI."

Senate Intelligence vice chairman John Tower, R-Tex., called Ford's plan "positive and carefully planned" and said he would support the President's legislative proposal to impose criminal sanctions against executive branch members who reveal intelligence secrets.

Chairman Otis G. Pike of the defunct House intelligence committee complained that "the emphasis is on secrecy rather than oversight." Ford's plan would keep secrecy under the controls of "a very small number of people in the executive branch," Pike said. "It's going to depend on those people whether we go back to the abuses of the past."

In addition to former ambassador Murphy, the new Oversight Board will consist of former Army Secretary Stephen Ailes and Leo Cherne, executive director of the Research Institute of America. The Oversight Board will function as a subcommittee as the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board, of which Cherne already is a member, one official said.

Kissinger off to Peru capital

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger took off for Peru today on the second leg of a Latin-American tour that is beginning to be dominated by Cuban issues despite his claim that he is not on an anti-Castro crusade.

Heavy airport security was set for Kissinger's late-morning arrival in Lima. Police in the Peruvian capital used tear gas to break up several anti-Kissinger demonstrations Tuesday by small groups of workers and students.

Peruvian President Francisco Morales Bermudez has stressed "deepening" the Socialist-oriented revolution brought to his country by firebrand military officers in 1968. Nevertheless, he has substantially calmed quarrels with the United States.

"Kissinger is the only secretary of state we've been able to talk to," said a senior Peruvian official.

Kissinger told reporters Tuesday night "I don't need much encouragement" to talk about the Cuban intervention in Angola and the U.S. government's warning against similar action in the future.

The Cuban issue was first raised during Kissinger's visit to Venezuela by President Carlos Andres Perez and recurred all through the day Tuesday. It dominated the questions that followed a speech by Kissinger to a meeting of U.S. and Venezuelan businessmen, politicians and academics.

"What happened in Angola will not happen again," he declared.

Only by arousing American and hemispheric concern, he said, can he build the support necessary to keep Cuba from new foreign intervention.

A subsequent news conference also included many questions about Cuba and Angola.

Kissinger's speech outlined a six-point program to promote inter-American relations, but it also recognized the growing feeling of independence among Latin-American nations.

Such past U.S. efforts as the Alliance for Progress "led many in Latin America to think that the United States wanted to maintain or create a relationship of hegemony," he said. Washington, meanwhile, developed a cynical attitude from "being besieged with demands" from its southern neighbors.

"The United States is prepared to make a major effort to invigorate our hemispheric ties," he declared, adding that his trip "underlines that purpose."

MC board election scheduled April 3

By LUANNA CROW
An election for three seats on the Midland College board of trustees has been called for April 3, and the three incumbents whose terms expire have indicated they will seek election.

The election was called during Tuesday night's regular trustee meeting in the administration building on the Midland College campus.

Up for election are Position 4, now held by Hoyle McCright; Position 5, held by Murray Fasken, and Position 6, held by Gloria Hinojosa. All three were appointed to the board in January 1973 when Midland College was disannexed from Odessa College. Deadline for filing if March 30 in the office of the president, Dr. Al G. Langford. The April 3 election will be held in conjunction with elections for both the City of Midland and the Midland Independent School District.

In announcing their candidacies Tuesday night, both McCright and Mrs. Hinojosa issued statements. Fasken was absent, but Langford said the trustee had indicated he will run and will make a formal statement at a later date.

McCright, executive vice president with The First National Bank, currently is serving as secretary for the board.

"The physical growth of Midland College has occupied much of the time of the board of trustees, first with the initial construction of seven buildings on the permanent campus and now with the impending construction of three more buildings," he said.

"A rapid increase in enrollment has required trustees to devote a large part of their time to development of the faculty, staff and classroom programs which are being added and expanded for each new semester.

"It is for these reasons that I seek election to the board for a full six-year term. I feel that Midland College requires continuity of membership on the board of trustees during this period of growth in the physical plant and in academic, vocational and community service course offerings.

"Midland College is one of this community's most valuable assets," McCright said, "and I would consider it a pleasure to continue my service on behalf of every resident."

Mrs. Hinojosa had this to say: "Being a trustee during the early years of Midland College has been one of the most exciting positions that anyone could hope to hold. It has been difficult at times, but the growth of the school, the construction of the first seven buildings on a permanent campus and the acceptance of the school by Midlanders has made it worthwhile.

"It would be a privilege to continue to serve as a Midland College trustee for another term, both as a representative of the community and to insure the continued growth and orderly development of new programs that will be started as soon as the new buildings are completed.

"I would ask your serious consideration of my candidacy in the April 3 election," she concluded. "I will pledge to you my devoted service as an elected representative of every citizen of the Midland College district."

Administrators get pay hikes

Midland College trustees granted more than $14,000 in administrative pay raises and continued planning for the upcoming sale of $6.3 million in construction bonds when they met Tuesday evening at the college.

Dr. Al G. Langford, college president, told trustees representatives from Moody's and from Standard and Poor's bond rating firms will visit the Midland area March 11 and 12 to assess the area's financial condition.

Langford said the date of the bond sale will have been set by the time the representatives arrive and college officials hope to learn their ratings within 10 days of the visit.

"Hopefully, the first week in April we will be able to sell the bonds to take advantage of the favorable interest rates now available."

The college president also told board members the architect for the two buildings and the addition planned for the college would be on campus today to finalize plans for presentation to trustees as soon as possible.

Midland voters last week approved the bond issue, by a margin of better than 2 to 1, to construct an academic classroom-fine arts building, an addition to the present occupational-technical building and a multi-purpose facility.

Trustees, also acting on contract renewals and salary increases for the administrative staff, awarded raise increments totaling $14,428 to eight administrators.

The administrators, their current salaries and the salaries approved for next year are: Donald Hunt, vice president of academic affairs, $24,200 to $26,200; Marshall Box, occupational-technical dean, $21,000 to $23,000; Camal Dakil, dean of students, $19,800 to $21,600; Bob Phillips, business manager, $20,300 to $22,100; David Norton, assistant to president, $19,800 to $21,800; Raymond Yell, associate academic dean, $20,172 to $21,800; James Bramlett, director of community services, $16,500 to $17,700; and Dee Windsor, registrar, $17,000 to $19,000.

In other business, board members approved tentative plans for landscaping the learning resource center and the physical education building.

Vote keeps thirsty Abilene residents on dry Impact trail

By MIKE COCHRAN
ABILENE (AP) — Trumpeing Abilene's rejection of legalized liquor Tuesday, a temperance crusader modestly labelled it "the greatest victory I ever helped to win."

A university president of the Baptist persuasion called it a "mighty fine day."

The anti-liquor leader observed that "the will of the majority has prevailed."

Even the captain of the losing team found certain solace: "We view the election itself as a victory for our city."

"What election?" asked the mayor of neighboring Impact, rivalling "Dr. Livingstone, I presume?" in a classic example of understatement. The outcome of the election perhaps means millions of dollars for the Impact mayor.

The subject of all this unusual attention was the city of Abilene's scuttling of the second attempt in 37 years to legalize the sale of alcoholic beverages.

Legally dry for three-quarters of a century and sometimes called "the buckle on the Bible belt," Abilene was — and is — the state's second largest city without booze.

The vote was 12,905 against and 11,291 for, a margin of 1,614 in a West Central Texas city of nearly 100,000 with three church colleges and around 40,000 registered voters.

Certain moralistic and legal debates preceded the election, the outcome of which apparently was determined by overwhelming opposition in the Abilene Christian College and Hardin-Simmons University areas.

At Impact, the tiny town totally surrounded by Abilene and a legal suround of exotic beverages, Mayor Dallas Perkins was uncommonly reticent.

With Abilene dry, Impact — which voted itself into cityhood 28-0 in 1960 — and this county's southern watering hole of Buffalo Gap remain the prime sources for quenching Abilene area thirst.

"What election?" asked Perkins facetiously in response to a reporter's request for comment.

"Was today the day they voted? How'd it come out?...." "Mercy, I'm glad you called."

Trustee president to retire

By LUANNA CROW
 James E. Winget Jr., president and two-term member of the board of trustees for the Midland public schools, announced this morning he will not seek a third term.

"I have found my time with the board most rewarding," Winget said, "and I feel I have other activities and endeavors I wish to devote more time to, therefore I will not seek re-election."

Winget assumed the board presidency in January 1975 upon the resignation of then-President C. Wallace Craig. Winget, who had been board vice president, then was elected to the office during regular officer elections last May.

Randall Lundy announced Monday he is seeking Position 5 on the board, the seat currently held by Winget. The only other candidate who has announced for the April 3 election is Steve Scott, who has filed for Position 7 which now is held by retiring board member C. Wallace Craig. The third post up for election is Position 6, held by Gilbert Tompson who has not declared his intentions.

Liberalists choose punishment route

By MARGARET GENTRY
WASHINGTON (AP)—A group of generally liberal scholars and politicians today urged mandatory prison sentences for violent offenders and called for an end to the parole system.

The Committee for the Study of Incarceration concluded that a convicted offender should be punished with jail or some lesser penalty primarily "because he deserves it," not because of any hope of rehabilitation. But the panel also recommended that only the most vicious criminals should be jailed longer than five years.

The committee's conclusions from a four-year study were published today in a book called "Doing Justice."

Former New York Sen. Charles Goodell, now a Washington lawyer, was chairman of the panel which was formed shortly after the 1971 Attica prison riot and was financed with grants from the Field Foundation and the New World Foundation.

"It may seem surprising that a group of liberal professors and activists, when faced with a choice between trying to rehabilitate offenders and punishing them as they deserve, chose deserved punishment," Goodell remarked.

But he said the committee concluded "that is the only fair basis for sentencing people." The committee made no claims that its proposal would reduce crime. Instead, Goodell said, the reforms were offered "as a means of making the system fairer."

The committee also included Alan Dershowitz, a professor at Harvard law school; Herman Schwartz, chairman of the New York State Correction Commission; Eleanor Holmes Norton, chairman of the New York City Commission on Human Rights; Joseph Goldstein, a professor at Yale law school; and David Rothman, a professor of history at Columbia University.

The committee joined Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi, other government officials and a growing number of criminal justice experts in the opinion that efforts at rehabilitating criminals—through vocational training or psychological counseling—have failed to curb crime.

Rehabilitation has been the primary goal of sentencing during the recent past, the committee noted.

Instead, the group proposed that the principal guide for the sentencing process should be a theory of "commensurate deserts"—punishing the offender because he deserves it, based on the seriousness of the crime and how much of a part he played in it.

Board staff actuaries put together a set of proposed new rates that would impose a 5.4 per cent, or $30 million increase on Texans for all categories of building insurance taken as a whole—homeowners, fire and extended coverage.

Broken into categories, the board staff recommended these average increases:

- Fire, 5.2 per cent on dwellings.
- Other structures, however, would receive a 3.4 per cent reduction.
- Extended coverage (windstorm, explosion, hail damage and the like), 7.8 per cent in the Seacoast Territory, 9.7 per cent in the Central Territory and 7.5 per cent in the North-Northwest.
- Homeowners, 7.7 per cent Seacoast, 6.3 per cent Central and 5.7 per cent North-Northwest.
- Farm and Ranch Owners, 1.5 per cent Seacoast, 3.8 per cent Central and 4 per cent North-Northwest.

The Seacoast territory includes Houston, Galveston, Beaumont-Port Arthur, Brownsville and Corpus Christi. The Central territory embraces most of the state, from Texas to El Paso and includes Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonio and Waco. The North-Northwest territory includes Lubbock and Amarillo.

Commission to study tennis center issue

By DEBBIE PIERCE
 Despite two areas of concern, the proposed tennis center at Lee High School came one step closer to reality Tuesday when the Midland Parks and Recreation Commission agreed to put the issue under study for their 1976-77 budget.

The group also decided that further discussions would be made with Midland Independent School District authorities to determine if an adequate working agreement can be reached regarding the two areas of concern.

School trustees okay contracts

LAMESA—Lamesa school trustees have approved contracts for 16 school employees and changed the title of one administrator.

The district's former personnel manager, Fred Weaver, has been re-titled assistant superintendent. He was approved for a two-year contract at a salary of $20,500.

Commissioners Mrs. Tommie Strack and Bob Paxton, appointed at the last regular session to make a more detailed study of the need for the center, reported that tennis in Midland is on the upswing. They said that, though one tennis center in the city is sufficient at the present, another such facility will soon be needed.

Eight other two-year contracts receiving board sanction were O. W. Follis, athletic director, $18,042; David Bond, football coach, $15,370; Charles Keese, high school principal, $19,736; Ellis Schildknecht, middle school principal, $17,828; Lee McAllister, North Elementary principal, $17,248; Neal Roberts, Rogers principal, and Wayne Smith, South principal, $16,170 each.

Commissioners were mainly concerned with restrooms at the center and supervision of play. Paxton noted he would favor the facility's construction only if it would remain open to the public for a reasonable length of time. He said it would be impractical to try maintaining a facility over which there was no general supervision.

Parks Director Robert Thomson said the custodial staff at Lee High would be available until about 11 p.m. each night to lock the restrooms and maintain the center.

One-year contracts were approved for Terry Robertson, assistant high school principal; Randy Simmons, vocational director; Carlton Buesing, special education director; Ken McCraw, assistant middle school principal, and Murray Murphy, also an assistant middle school principal.

Commissioners tabled discussion of the proposed downtown park and a firm to do the design work due to lack of sufficient information. Thomson urged the group to come up with ideas for the type of park and its designer in case the commission is asked for a recommendation.

In other action, the commission:

- Approved a request by the Girl Scouts to use Wadley-Barron Park on March 12 and Elkin Park June 7-11.
- Approved a request by Andres Covarrubias to sell snow cones in Hogan Park on Sundays, with the notation that the selling does not take place on days when softball games are being conducted and does not interfere with money-raising projects in the park.

—Approved a request by the Boy Scouts to use Hogan Park and the Showmobile, if it is available, April 24 for an official Bicentennial event.

—Approved a request from the Ministerial Association to use Wadley-Barron Park July 4 for an interdenominational Bicentennial service.

—Made further assignments to committees for more effective coordination of the parks, zoo, golf and recreation areas.

—Agreed that the three members retiring this year from the board, Roy Kimsey, Mrs. Strack and Dick Saxe, will be recommended for re-appointment, and

Florida seeks veto power over Louisiana superport

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Florida has filed for federal "adjacent state" status which Gov. Edwin Edwards says would give it virtual veto power over a multi-million dollar Louisiana superport.

Tallahassee Tuesday to sound out Florida's intention in the filing. Florida officials apparently fear that giant oil tankers bound for the floating port 25 miles offshore would navigate along the coast to avoid Gulf Stream currents, Edwards said.

He said adjacent state status under federal maritime law would put Florida in a position to create serious obstacles for the superport if environmental damage to its coastline was feared.

"I'm concerned because there's a very big environmental feeling over there (Florida) that disturbs me," he said. Edwards has repeatedly said environmental issues must take a back

Operators report basin discoveries

Discoveries have been completed in Crockett and Runnels counties and wildcat sites were staked in Runnels, Concho sectors.

H. L. Brown Jr., Midland, completed No. 1-6 University as a Devonian oil strike in Crockett, 14 miles northwest of Iran.

It had a 24-hour flowing potential of 223 barrels of 45.4-gravity oil and three barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio measuring 1,928-1.

Completion was effected on a 13-64-inch choke and through perforations at 6,104-6,113 feet. The pay had been treated with 500 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 6,145 feet, it has 5 1/2-inch pipe set on bottom, and is plugged back to 6,123 feet. Top of the Devonian was picked at 6,094 feet, under ground elevation of 2,358 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 6, block 14, ULS, 1 1/4 miles east of the Crockett (Grayburg) field.

Operator has proposed field designation of Crockett, East.

RUNNELS ACTIVITY
Mineral Exploration Co. of Arlington, No. 1 Herring was finished as a Caddo lime gas strike in Runnels, 12 miles northwest of Winters.

The calculated, absolute open flow was for 1.98 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 4,754-4,784 feet, after treating the pay with 1,500 gallons of acid.

Total depth is 5,100 feet, and it is plugged back to 4,850 feet, in 2 1/2-inch casing set at 4,830 feet. Top of the Caddo was reported at 4,742 feet, under ground elevation of 1,792 feet.

Well site is 467 feet from north and west lines of section 36, H&N survey.

VENTURE SET
Tri-Star Petroleum Co. of Dallas has staked site for a 4,800-foot wildcat in Runnels. It is No. 2 Margie Donica. Drillsite is 1,200 feet from northeast and 467 feet from southeast lines of lot seat to solving the nation's oil supply problems.

Maritime authorities have 45 days to consider the application, which was filed this week.

Private corporations in both Louisiana and Texas have applied to build superports. But Edwards said Florida has not filed for adjacent status with Texas. He said neither Texas nor Louisiana has filed for the status with the other, although they border one another.

"We kind of have an agreement with them (Texas) that we won't interfere in their business if they don't interfere in ours," he said.

The governor said his representatives are seeking to induce Florida to withdraw its application or, failing that, to use the power sparingly if it is accepted.

Edwards said the law allows states to claim adjacent status if they can prove their interests are substantially affected by offshore ports in other states.

Wildcats scheduled

Exploration has been scheduled in Loving, Crane, Ward and Pecos counties.

MNG Oil Co., Midland, will drill No. 1-10 Kyle, a 22,000-foot prospector in Loving, 15 miles northeast of Orta.

FRANK P. MOOLIN Jr. stands in Rockefeller Center, New York, Tuesday where he picked up an Engineer-of-the-Year award for his work as boss builder of the $7 billion Alaska pipeline. Moolin says women are working on the pipeline on equal terms with men in what he believes is the first time in U. S. construction history. "Some of our best workers are women," he said.

Engineer-of-year says women work well on Alaska pipeline

By STANLEY JOHNSON Associated Press Writer

Pipeline are women, says the boss engineer of the $7-billion project.

"My experience shows that women have been beneficial," Frank P. Moolin Jr. — here to pick up an engineer-of-the-year award — said in an interview Tuesday. "At least the men shower and shave."

"Of course, there's pairing off. But we don't try to establish moral codes."

About 1,000 of the 16,300 workers pushing the pipeline from Prudhoe Bay on the North Slope along the Arctic Ocean to Valdez on the Pacific are women, he said.

"Nobody calls them 'klondike Annies' and they do everything the men do except welding," he said. "They're ironworkers, truck drivers, laborers, warehousepersons, cooks — and something there's no unisex word for — bull cooks. That means they clean the dorms."

The reason they don't weld, Moolin said, is "because welders are very close-knit. They move from construction job to construction job as a unit, a very fraternalistic group that likes to think they're the Marine Corps of the industry."

A lot of the women, he said, "feel they're pace-setting and strive to outdo everyone. Some of our best workers are women."

Not only do they do the same work, he said, but they get the same pay — about $1,000 per 70-hour week, for instance, for a truck driver of either sex.

He said all the workers, men and women, live in the same bunkhouses built along the 800-mile pipeline route, use the same toilet facilities and "it's up to them whether they go to the saunas separately or together."

Ford officials decline to choose gas plans

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Ford Administration officials, despite considerable congressional prodding, declined at a Senate hearing Tuesday to choose between two competing proposals for bringing big new supplies of Alaskan natural gas to the lower 48 states.

The result may be a free-for-all in Congress as members begin to line up behind one or the other of the two massive, $9 billion to $12 billion projects.

Legislation is necessary to reduce the tangle of regulatory delays that may otherwise postpone groundbreaking on either pipeline for five years. Federal financial help may also eventually be sought, although a Treasury official told the hearing that either of the proposed projects "could" be accomplished with private funding alone.

The hearing was a joint session of the Senate committees on commerce and on interior and insular affairs. It was called to examine the relative merits of the competing projects and to see whether action could be speeded on one or the other.

The Alaska gas is needed soon in California and other states to make up for dwindling supplies of the fuel from nearer sources.

At stake in the battle over the two project designs — one to go across Canada, the other to traverse Alaska and use tankers to transport liquefied gas to Southern California — are competing environmental concerns and competing destinations for the gas. Complicating the issue is the question of whether routing the pipeline through Canada would add serious risks of future supply cutoffs or price increases.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale (D-Minn.) and 27 other senators, many of them from the Midwest, have introduced legislation favoring the Canadian route. This line would pipe gas overland from Alaska's North Slope through Canada's Northwest Territories and the provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta. The line would divide at the U.S. border, with one spur poking southwest to California and the other southeast all the way to Pittsburgh. In all, 5,600 miles of pipe would be laid.

A number of other senators, primarily from the Southwest, back a measure introduced by Sen. Ted Stevens (R-Alaska) favoring the land-sea route. This involves much less pipe-laying — some 809 miles across Alaska from the North Slope to the southern port of Valdez, following the route of the trans-Alaskan oil pipeline now under construction, plus a few hundred miles of connecting pipelines in the lower 48 states.

However, this project would require a special plant at Valdez to convert the gas to a liquid by chilling it to minus 260 degrees Fahrenheit. It would be shipped in 11 specially constructed tanker ships to Point Conception near Santa Barbara or another location on the Southern California coast. Pumped ashore, the liquefied natural gas (LNG) would be reconverted to its gaseous state. Existing pipelines would then carry it to customers in California and overland to Texas for transhipment to other states.

The overland route would provide gas to consumers more cheaply, at least at the outset. It would cost less to build — $10 billion to $12 billion, according to a Treasury Department estimate, compared with $9 billion to $11 billion for the land-sea approach. But the overland pipeline would cost significantly less to operate.

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT
February 18, 1976
Midland County, Midland County Courthouse, 218 East 10th Street, Midland, Texas 79701.

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:
The above named County proposes to request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal Funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:

1. Paving of Streets in low income areas $150,000.
2. Improvements to public-owned recreation building 1,000,000.

It has been determined that such request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the above named County has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).

The reasons for such decision not to prepare such Statement are as follows:

The street improvements, while having short-term negative impacts during the construction phase, will have long-term beneficial impacts in that the project will help arrest neighborhood decline and will improve the living environment of the residents within the area.

The improvements to the Valley View Community Center will take place on the interior and will have no effect on the environment. The improvements will have a positive effect on the users of the facility and will continue to provide a quality recreational, educational, and social opportunity for the citizens of Midland County.

An Environmental Review Record respecting the within project has been made by the above named County which documents the environmental review of the project and more fully sets forth the reasons why such Statement is not required. This Environmental Review Record is on file and is available for public examination and copying upon request, in the County Judge's Office, 2nd Floor, Midland County Courthouse, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

No further environmental review of such project is proposed to be conducted, prior to the request for release of Federal funds.

All interested agencies, groups and persons disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the County to the Office of the County Judge, Such written comments should be received at the Midland County Courthouse on or before March 11, 1976. All such comments so received will be considered and the County will not request the release of Federal funds or take any administrative action on the within project prior to the date specified in the preceding sentence.

Directors meeting

The board of directors of the Lancaster Garden Center-Museum of the Southwest elected Mrs. Bill Coleman treasurer and Mrs. R. H. Barnett corresponding secretary during a meeting in the center. Plans for a bazaar and bake sale to be held in the center March 31 were finalized. Plans also were discussed for the center's spring flower show, and Mrs. William Drake, general chairman for the show, distributed schedules. Mrs. R. D. Hardman, Mrs. T. C. Watkins and Mrs. Don Dow served on the schedule committee. The next meeting of the directors will be March 15. Members of Tejas Garden Club will be the hostesses.

Easier clean-up

You can make the daily chore of straightening up the house easier and quicker by borrowing your daughter's doll buggy. Use it to haul the things that are being returned to their proper places. As you push the buggy from room to room, it makes it possible to straighten and put things in order in just one trip.

MRS. ROBERT K. HILLIN, general chairman of the Charity Ball held by the Junior League of Midland, Inc., in Midland Country Club, is shown at the benefit with her husband.

Repapering

When repapering, tack some of the wallpaper on an out of the way wall in the attic or basement. If you need a patch later, it will match perfectly. Left in a roll, it would be brighter.

DEAR ABBY

Former mental patients appreciate Abby's column

By Abigail Van Buren
DEAR ABBY: May God bless you for asking readers who had spent three months or more in a mental hospital to write to you explaining the problems of getting back into society. You really do care about people, don't you?

I spent two years in a county mental hospital. At first I expected to be thrown together with freaks and nuts who would climb the walls, scream bloody murder and act crazy. Some were a little strange, and occasionally hostile and hard to handle, but none were dangerous. Most were in a deep state of depression. Abby, will you please say a kind word for those wonderful people who work with disturbed patients? It takes a deep love for humanity to care for people who are mentally ill.

Today I am home, well and happy, and I know I never could have made it without the patient.

WOMEN'S NEWS

loving and understanding people who looked after me. Thank you—FORMER MENTAL PATIENT

DEAR FORMER: I appreciated your kind letter. And I still welcome letters from former mental patients. You need not sign your names. The response to my request has been heartwarming.

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister's wife, and I would like to tell you what Christmas means to me: It means spending the holidays going to programs in which my musically talented children perform. (Most ministers marry women who can play the piano so they will always have someone to play for the services. These wives usually produce musically gifted children.)

Christmas means working hard to make gifts for the family in order to live within a limited budget. Ministers' wives have always done this. It means cooking everything from scratch for the same reason.

Christmas means being excluded from a lot of holiday parties because most people don't want us to know the kind of drinks they're serving. (We know anyway.)

Christmas means spending all the time at the stove, sink or washing machine. Nobody offers to help with anything, and after a few tries, you end up doing it alone because it's easier than begging for help.

Christmas means receiving gifts from your family that will enable you to serve them better—rarely anything to satisfy your personal, feminine desires.

Christmas means becoming physically exhausted and trying to keep it from showing. The family isn't concerned. Any suggestions, Abby?—NAMELESS AND NO LOCATION

DEAR NAMELESS: Yours is the saddest Christmas song I've ever heard. Clip this and show it to your family. If they don't know how you feel, they should.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Roy for a

Adequate preparation vital for brick patio surface

By GENE GARY
Copley News Service
Q. Do you consider brick a desirable patio surface? — Mrs. Arthur T.

A. Yes. But adequate preparation is essential. A sand bed is best so that the bricks can be level. Laying the bricks in interlocking patterns works well and makes the surface appearance interesting. When the brick is laid out, sweep dry cement into the cracks. Then water down the whole surface. This sets the cement and the bricks are fixed into position. Breakage is also minimized and you should then not have the problem of grass or weeds growing between the bricks.

Q. When concrete was poured for the terraces of our new house, our aluminum screen doors were on and the cement splashed on the metal. We have tried various aluminum cleaners, but cannot remove the spatters. Can you recommend any remedy? — W.T.C.

A. To remove the concrete spatters, moisten the concrete with a solution of one part muriatic acid to 20 parts of water, mixed in a nonmetal container, and allow it to remain only long enough to soften the cement without affecting the aluminum. Be careful not to splash any of the acid on the aluminum or other metal in the area. Then flush off the solution with plenty of water. Then carefully scrape off the softened spatters with a flat piece of wood, so that you will scratch the aluminum as little as possible. Repeat the treatment if necessary.

Wife claims lighthouse life boring

OLD SAYBROOK, Conn. (AP) — Stranded at the very tip of solid ground, the lighthousekeeper's wife tells a tale of loneliness, boredom and longing for spring.

"Everything is bleak," says Violet Horoschak of her winter on Lynde Point.

What passes for normal human activity is an abnormality for her in a two-family house tucked next to the 1860 lighthouse where her husband works.

With few visitors, she passes long hours reading books. And with someone required to be home all the time to answer the telephone, the Horoschaks can't go out with the Bowlders, who live in the other half of the modern house.

"It's so boring, there's nothing to do. It's a place to get fat, eat, lie around and watch TV. Even my dog's gained weight."

The mailman doesn't come to the lighthouse, five miles from the center of town, next to the borough of Fenwick. The school bus stops a mile away.

All the summer homes are boarded up. Only two other families stay all winter, the only sign of human life for miles.

"The ice smashing on the side of the rocks is about the only noise besides the seagulls," says Mrs. Horoschak.

Her reading taste runs to mysteries, which come in handy on such occasions as the time high water washed out the road to town for three days last year and kept the Horoschaks prisoners in their home.

She lives with her husband, Coast Guard Boatswain 1C Robert Horoschak and their son. Sharing the house are George Bowlder, also in the Coast Guard, his wife and their three children.

The families take turns keeping up the lighthouse and answering the phone.

Life becomes livelier in the summer when the Horoschaks have parties with their friends in town. But winter visits from friends are rare.

Their next stop will be "someplace warmer," Mrs. Horoschak says. "Hawaii."

Mrs. Charles Spears

Skin consultant advises

Marti Robinson, director of consumer information for a leading cosmetic firm, was in Midland recently and explained her program for skin or complexion care.

Miss Robinson, red-haired winner of numerous beauty contests in California, presented radio and television programs during her visit in the Midland-Odessa area.

"In our artificially-controlled environment, whether it be in the home, office or automobile, the skin is robbed of its natural moisture, especially in locales where the climate is arid and the wind blows. Natural oil and moisture are necessary for a supple complexion."

Also, step three, use of powder base protector. The consultant also has done research into the history of cosmetics in the United States, as a Bicenennial project, and said the cosmetic industry in America did not become a full-time business until after World War II.

She also mentioned the growing trend in men's cosmetics, especially in translucent protectors and after-shave preparations to restore the skin's moisture.

personal reasons to know why good advice on skin care and make-up is important. "I had a bad acne problem when I was a girl. I tried everything — dermatologists, soaps and medication. But I also made the mistake of covering my blemishes with heavy make-up. I just compounded the problem." Today her complexion appears to be flawless and, she says, "it's better than it has ever been, even though I'm older." She said skin care will become second nature if a person will make a habit of it.

Connecticut beginning to have garbage troubles

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Garbage is piling up in Connecticut, polluting air and water while cities and towns wait for a $250-million system that will convert most refuse into reusable material.

Some have proposed that sledding be allowed on Saybrook's 120-foot, snow-covered mound of garbage. But officials say the heat generated by the decaying organic matter would create a safety hazard.

Saybrook officials have negotiated a plan to export garbage to New Milford, about 100 miles away, where it can be buried.

The Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection (DEP)

says 69 of the state's 142 landfill dumps cause pollution. Many landfills contaminate underground water with pollutants that seep through the soil.

Incinerators have been closed down in Hartford, West Hartford and New Britain because they sprinkled flyash over the neighboring landscape.

Hartford has taken to burying garbage north of the city in meadows along the Connecticut River. But the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers must approve continued use of the landfill because it is near dikes protecting the city in case of flood.

The long-range solution is the Connecticut Resources Recovery

Authority (CRRA), created in 1973 to set up eight regional plants that will separate metal and glass from garbage for recycling. The plants also will convert what is left over into a fuel that will be burned in electric plants.

"That was three years ago, and we have yet to see any part of the system built," said Joseph L. Boren, DEP

solid waste director. Boren said 15 months ago an interim program was launched "to avert a solid waste disaster" in communities which had run out of land to bury garbage. The first garbage-conversion plant is set for Bridgeport. It will process 2,000 tons daily from that city and eight surrounding towns. CRRA, a quasi-public corporation, expects to sign a construction contract for the plant soon.

DEP estimates it costs a community about $15 a ton to burn garbage in an incinerator and between $5 and $6 to bury a ton in a landfill. That doesn't include the cost of collecting the stuff.

Besides fouling the environment, burning and burying garbage is a waste of natural resources, a fact many communities are beginning to discover.

East Hartford made about $20,000 last year from the sale of glass, metal and old newspapers, despite depressed prices for scrap. Newspapers were collected separately so they wouldn't get wet from messy garbage, bottles are left by residents at several pickup points and metal was pulled out by magnets.

In Barkhamsted and Norwich, similar salvage operations also turned a profit from the sale of glass, metal and paper culled from garbage.

Expert needed to interpret economic changes

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — As measured by the numbers, this country's economy over the past decade has risen to the heights, plunged to the depths and is now climbing back up a slippery incline that has few footholds.

The numbers show retail sales are moving ahead, industrial production is rising, the job situation is improving, the stock market has recovered lost ground, inflation is tending lower and some interest rates are half what they were.

Sometimes we become hypnotized by these numbers, and tend to think they are a continuous measurement of the same economic body. But the numbers are mere abstractions, bare bones without the flesh of memory or emotion, unable to distinguish changes in the quality.

A look at the nonstatistical record will show that this past decade was perhaps even more violent than the numbers in regard to our business institutions, including retailers, airlines, railroads, banks, insurers.

Property and liability insurers have lost billions of dollars on underwritings over the past two years, perhaps more than $6 billion in all. Some have gone bankrupt, and others are looking for support or are retrenching. The banking industry has lost billions more on bad loans, and the names of many banks are on various official problem lists. The list of failures, for years restricted to relatively small institutions, now includes giants.

The stock market took one of the deepest dives in its history, from 1052 points on the Dow Jones industrial average early in 1973 to 578 late in 1974, before beginning an unsteady climb to its current mid-900 level.

But these stock averages too are numbers that disguise the carnage, individual and institutional. This is a very different stock market today, even if the numbers suggest business as usual or, in fact, better than usual.

There are many thousands fewer brokers and hundreds fewer brokerage houses. While the volume sets records, there are fewer investors. Most of the trading is by funds and trusts and other institutions.

Moreover, the structure of the stock market is different. The big, individual exchanges have lost much of their individuality, their autonomy, their separate identities. We are attempting to evolve a central market place.

Our three vital financial institutions — insurance, banking and the stock market — are all changed and changing. It is a different world today; it is a world in transition. Other industries too are changing, irrevocably.

The nation's bankrupt railroads still haven't been successfully reconstructed. The airline industry, healthy in a few areas, generally is buffeted by financial turbulence, often accompanied by a total absence of profits.

Few people back in the 1960s would have believed that the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., largest food retailer in the nation, and W.T. Grant, one of the leading soft goods retailers, would fall on bad times. They have.

And the cities. The cities of the seventies cannot be viewed as they were in the sixties.

You won't find these contrasts in the numbers unless you look very closely and have an expert to interpret what you see. No, the numbers provide a sense of continuity when it really doesn't exist.

If you study all the numbers you might be inclined to say that everything is back to where it was, because a lot of the numbers have returned to their old position, or are heading in that direction.

Reform curbs eased

The U. S. Supreme Court has taken a major step toward protecting the American political process from election reform laws that would create advantages for incumbents and infringe on individual rights of political expression.

Sen. James L. Buckley and former Sen. Eugene McCarthy, who carried their challenge of the 1974 federal election reform act to the high court, achieved only a partial victory but a significant one. Although they lost their case against the public financing of presidential elections, the court appears to have upheld their argument that statutory limits on campaign spending create artificial advantages for some candidates and amount to infringement on rights of free speech and freedom of the press.

Only three justices expressed concurrence on all points set forth in the court's unsigned majority opinion. Obviously there is a fine line of philosophical disagreement on the court in establishing how far a government can go in its intrusion into a free election process without making it something less than free. The court is saying that the public interest is served by limiting what an individual can contribute to a political candidate, but would be harmed by limiting what individuals in the aggregate can raise and spend on his behalf.

While the Supreme Court has now cleared the judicial track for federal funds to be used in financing this year's presidential campaigns, it has raised at least a temporary roadblock by cutting the props out from under the Federal Election Commission. In ruling that Congress must revise the law promptly to establish that the commission is an enforcement agency of the executive branch, the court may also have opened the door to challenges of other recent attempts by Congress to assume powers that traditionally fall within executive responsibility.

And still other doors have been opened. The constitutional principles applied to this test of a federal election law can surely be applied to state and local campaign reform laws which have been put on the books in this post-Watergate era.

There will be a scurrying in Congress to meet the 30-day deadline for revising the composition of the Federal Election Commission so presidential candidates can continue to receive their promised subsidies. There may well be some scurrying, too, at the state and local level to determine whether the U. S. Supreme Court has cast a constitutional shadow over new rules affecting other election campaigns unfolding across America in 1976.

Waste of bread

A federal judge on the West Coast found the evidence so flimsy in a price-fixing case against six bakeries and five of their officials that he called off the trial without asking the jury to consider the charges. The judge said that rarely in his years on the federal bench, had he seen prosecutors bring defendants into court on such meager grounds.

The Justice Department is expected to be diligent in enforcement of antitrust laws on behalf of consumers, especially when the product involved is a staple like bread.

In this case, however, the zeal of federal prosecutors to find a price conspiracy where none existed may boomerang. Legal talent does not come cheap. Sixteen lawyers were involved in defending the bakeries in this case. Where is such extra business expense likely to show up? In the price of bread, of course.

INSIDE REPORT

Ronald Reagan boom said for real at Antrim, N.H.

ANTRIM, N.H. — The potential disaster faced by President Ford in the Feb. 24 New Hampshire primary is affirmed by voters in this rockribbed Republican town, who are not truly anti-Ford but hope for Ronald Reagan as a political savior to regenerate the nation.

Interviews conducted in picturesque, 189-year-old Antrim at the foot of the White Mountains, with the help of Patrick Caddell's Cambridge Survey Research, showed a better than 3-to-2 edge for Reagan against the President. But this was not the usual lesser-of-two-evils choice. Whereas Republican voters interviewed gave Mr. Ford a high 62 per cent approval rating, they gave an astronomically high 84 per cent approval of Reagan.

What these voters think they see in Reagan was typified by a 45-year-old commercial artist who professed to admire the President but is voting against him because "I think Reagan will bring in a breath of fresh air. At least, I hope so."

Antrim, whose population of 2,122 is largely lower-middle income of Yankee stock, was selected by Caddell as a statewide weathervane in recent Republican primary elections. If it should prove a good barometer again, Ford campaign operatives have totally failed to paint Reagan as an incompetent. Indeed, for salvation the President may now need a self-inflicted Reagan wound of critical dimensions, or some spectacular break abroad.

Accompanied by Doty Lynch, senior Caddell analyst, we interviewed 57 registered Republicans the second day after Mr. Ford's swing through New Hampshire, with these results: Reagan, 27; Ford, 18; undecided, 14.

Evans

Contrary to widespread reports from New Hampshire about soft voting attitudes, Antrim Republicans were firm. Only three Ford voters and three Reagan voters seemed susceptible to change. Although undecided voters were unusually numerous, they do not seem a fertile field for exploitation. Most profess far less interest in the primary than decided voters, and many probably will not vote at all.

Thus, the Reagan edge here seems committed and hard, revealing a drastic shortfall in the anti-Reagan strategy. Reagan's $90 billion transfer plan was favored 4-to-1, getting approval from many Ford supporters. Despite Ford campaign efforts to paint Reagan as a high-tax governor, several voters mentioned his record there as reason for supporting him. "I hope Reagan can do in the nation what he did in California," said a fiftyish schoolteacher.

Several Reagan backers echoed his oratory and William Loeb's Manchester Union Leader. "He wants to put government back with the people," said the 43-year-old wife of a grocery store owner. A 51-year-old plant guard told us Reagan "hasn't been contaminated by Washington politics."

Beyond this lies an unusual vein of optimistic hope in Reagan, extraordinary for the 1970s. Declaring himself "sick and tired of the other politicians," a 64-year-old retired railroad worker declared he wanted "some new blood out there." A 19-year-old factory worker said he registered as a Republican last week specifically so he could vote for Reagan "to turn things around." Said a 56-year-old mill worker: "I think Reagan will clean up the country and help out the working class."

In addition, foreign policy is working for Reagan and against the President. By a 5-to-1 margin, these voters were critical of détente and felt the U.S. should take a harder stand. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger got an anemic 43 per cent approval rating — compared with 54 per cent for super-controversial publisher Loeb and 75 per cent for Gov. Meldrim Thomson. When asked about Kissinger, many Yankee voters — including some Ford supporters — responded with grimaces and grunts.

While voters rated the two candidates roughly even in honesty, thoughtfulness and job qualifications (with a slight edge to Reagan), a substantial majority felt Reagan is more conservative, closer to the people of Antrim in his views and more concerned with their needs. Given these views, only Mr. Ford's incumbency may be keeping the race as close as it is.

Although negative comments about either were few, pro-Ford voters were markedly less intense about their man than the Reaganites. Their support is generally passive, based on a feeling that the President is "trying" and ought to be given more time.

"With what Ford inherited as President, he's done a good job," said the 27-year-old wife of a papermill worker. A 37-year-old secretary said that "since he's never been elected, he ought to have a chance to serve a full term" — a frequently voiced argument.

Surprisingly little awe is shown in this snow-covered village about the prospect of turning out an incumbent Republican President. Even some Ford supporters suspect Reagan will win the primary. Of the voters expressing an opinion about who is ahead, Reagan was picked 4 to 1, with only eight lonely voters putting the President in front with election day nearby.

WHAT ARE YOU GETTING SO WORKED UP ABOUT?

THE FUTURE OF NATO:

It needs to keep up with the times

By EDWARD NEILAN
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The recent bases agreement reached between the United States and Spain and the prospect that a new accord between the United States and Turkey is imminent have led some analysts to conclude that all is well again along the southern tier of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

That conclusion may be hasty as well as missing the point of what is involved in the changes taking place in the various member countries (Spain is not a member) of NATO.

The dynamics of change are not confined to the member states. There have been some strong arguments that NATO itself, in its present form, may be organizationally cumbersome and outdated. There have been some compelling arguments that NATO should be revamped.

Leon Sloss, on leave from the State Department where he is special adviser to the director of politico-military affairs, wrote recently of the health of NATO:

"Political institutions, much like living organisms, either adapt to change or eventually become ineffective and wither away. NATO is no exception, and its members have recognized the need for change."

Sloss' contention, shared by quite a number of diplomats, is that NATO increasingly appears to be drifting at the mercy of events rather than seeking to shape its security stance.

These and other deficiencies contribute to a growing conviction that NATO no longer serves the purposes that initially brought its 15 members together.

NATO was created to prevent Soviet domination of Western Europe. In 1949 that was seen as a clear and present danger that directly affected the interests of Western Europe and the United States and Canada as well.

The nations agreed to coordinate their defense planning in peacetime and to assist each other in defending their territory if any member should be attacked. The heart of the treaty is Article V which declares that an attack on one member will be met by response from all members.

NATO is supposed to be an alliance of sovereign states, with each participating equally. In practice, however, there is great variance in participation.

France and Greece have decided not to take part in the joint military maneuvers of the alliance. France rejects much of NATO's strategy.

Iceland maintains no military forces and the contribution from tiny Luxembourg is nominal.

The heavy Communist influence in Portugal's recent internal convulsions has left Lisbon outside more and more of NATO's sensitive activities.

Planning and coordination are the main NATO peacetime military functions. Consultation could be isolated as the key word on the political side of the equation.

The difficulty in translating theoretical thrust into contemporary reality can be seen in the evolving new relationship between Turkey and the United States.

A series of differences has strained the bilateral relationship to the point that the question has been raised in Europe: Can the Washington-Ankara partnership produce a believable deterrent at that end of the NATO arc?

Five American intelligence-gathering installations have been inoperative since last July when Turkey retaliated for the ban imposed last year on American arms sales. The ban was relaxed last October and negotiations on the status of the 26 U.S. bases in the country were resumed. But, the mood is cool on the Turkish side.

Turkish officials have not missed the fact that Spain was promised about $1.2 billion annually for base rights while Turkey is due to get only about $400 million.

The U.S. response is that the two cases are different because Washington is obligated under the NATO treaty to defend Turkey; Spain is not a NATO member although the U.S. bases there are important in the NATO defense picture.

The key word in all of this is "change." The key question must be: Can NATO itself be adaptive and responsive enough to the changes within and among its member countries to remain effective?

Sugar prices still high, despite end of 'crisis'

Newsday
NEW YORK — The great sugar crisis is now a memory. It is difficult to believe that scarcely a year ago the sugar shortage was considered such a threat that the Ford Administration scheduled a summit conference in Washington to deal with it.

Restaurants were complaining about people walking out with their sugar bowls. Bake shops were warning of mass bankruptcies. Consumer groups were threatening sugar boycotts. Industrial users were threatening to switch to corn syrup as a sweetener for their products. And all segments of the industry were pointing to other segments as the culprits.

Then, almost as suddenly as it had appeared, the sugar shortage disappeared. The sugar producers and refiners, who saw unheard-of profits in the higher prices, expanded their capacities in search of those profits. Consumers, as they normally do in the face of higher prices, reduced their consumption.

Despite warnings in 1974 that it might take two or three years to bring sugar prices back to realistic levels, by last October the world had a sugar surplus for the first time in four years. Raw sugar prices have fallen to less than half their 1974 levels.

It was a classic example of the marketplace doing its stuff, but, unfortunately, it worked only up to a point.

Domestic sugar-beet production rose last year by 31 per cent, to nearly 30 million tons, while sugar-cane production was up 18 per cent, to 29.2 million tons. This glut of new production collided head-on with consumer resistance.

Americans consumed an average of 94 pounds of sugar each in 1974, and less than 90 pounds last year, the lowest level since sugar was rationed during and after World War II.

Moreover, the sugar producers have found that they priced themselves right out of many markets and that even with today's lower prices they are unlikely to get back in to some of them. Many industrial users, especially candy makers, switched to corn syrup. A big 1975 corn crop now assures ample supplies of corn syrup at lower prices, so many of those industries have decided not to switch back to sugar.

President Ford's announced strategy of doing nothing about sugar prices seems to have paid off. Unfortunately, however, the free market performed admirably only down to the retail level.

It has also resulted in drastically lower retail prices for refined sugar. A five-pound bag now selling for about $1.30 was going for around $3 in late 1974. But lower sugar prices have not resulted in lower prices of processed foods containing large amounts of sugar, notably baked goods, soft drinks, ice cream and candy.

One likely conclusion is that the temporary high price of wholesale sugar has become frozen into the profit structure of a lot of food makers.

The latest consumer price index shows that since the end of 1974 the price of ice cream has risen much faster than the price of milk, even though ice cream manufacturers are paying half what they were for sugar. Sugar is the most expensive ingredient in soft drinks, but soft drink prices, while they have abated slightly in recent months, are still higher than a year ago. And the price of a layer cake, as measured by the government, is higher than a year ago, even though wholesale prices of both flour and sugar are lower.

Typical moonshiner now big time

WASHINGTON (AP) — The typical moonshiner is no longer a hillbilly squeezing out a gallon of whisky to drink in the woods with his buddies.

Instead, according to a Treasury Department official, the moonshiner is a large-scale producer at the center of a wholesale distribution network, sending his illegally produced hooch to metropolitan areas throughout the South.

"It's not the 'Snuffy Smith' operation," said Rufus Embry of the Atlanta office of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. "It's a commercial type criminal in there to make some money."

The bureau, which is responsible for tracking down moonshine operations and collecting federal taxes on legally produced alcohol products, reports that 95 per cent of the nation's illegal stills are operated in the South.

In 1975, the bureau seized 800 moonshine stills, the fewest since the repeal of Prohibition in 1933. Some 650 persons were arrested, down from 1,414 the year before, according to Rex D. Davis, the bureau's director.

In the past 10 years, the volume of confiscated moonshine has dropped. Embry attributed the decline in moonshining to improved economic conditions that permit potential customers of moonshiners to buy legal whisky and increased education about the dangers of moonshine. The whisky, distilled in contraptions often made from automobile radiators, frequently contains a high level of poisonous lead.

In addition, the cost of sugar, one of the major components in the moonshine recipe, has skyrocketed, increasing production costs.

Reduced efforts at trapping moonshiners may also have figured in the lower number of arrests.

"We haven't spent the amount of time on moonshine whisky as we did years ago," Embry said. He attributed the decline in activity to increased law-enforcement duties in the areas of illegal gun use and wagering, which was recently added on to the bureau's operations.

Birds a problem for residents in Virginia town

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — Almost every night at dusk June Herrington stands at the edge of her backyard in Sterling Park, Va., and beats on a shovel with a wooden stick to try to scare away hundreds of thousands of birds descending toward her lawn.

Mrs. Herrington and other homeowners in her neighborhood are concerned that up to a million starlings, grackles, red-winged blackbirds and cowbirds that swoop down every sunset to roost overnight may lead to widespread disease.

The birds shower cars, roofs, clotheslines and lawns with droppings and create a powerful stench. Nevertheless, county health officials say there is no reason for alarm.

"This is a potentially dangerous problem," said Fred Collier, who lives across the street from the cedar trees where the birds have roosted every night since October. "Should there be an outbreak of histoplasmosis (a lung disease caused by a fungus whose growth is aided by bird droppings), our children could transmit it into schools," Collier said.

The birds roost in a wooded area, where children from the community of 20,000 used to play.

David Bridge, an ornithologist at the Smithsonian Institution, said the birds come to the area because the large number of cedars there provides them with shelter and with protection from the cold weather. He said the birds probably travel from 20 to 30 miles a day to find food, then return to roost.

"It's like a white winter wonderland," said Loudoun County, Va., Supervisor Robert Sheetz, who lives less than 100 feet from the roost. "It's like walking on a rubber cushion," he said of the roost area. "There are dead birds everywhere."

Bridge said many birds are unable to withstand the cold weather. It is a matter of survival of the fittest among the million fowl, he said, with many birds dying of the cold weather or natural causes.

Carol Brannon of 1701 Amelia St. which runs parallel to the roost, said she is afraid to let her 2-year-old daughter play in their backyard which is adjacent to the roost. She fears she may pick up germs from the bird droppings or the dead birds she finds in her yard every morning.

Robert Montgomery, a Loudoun County health official, said the birds are not a health problem. He said there has not been a case of histoplasmosis, the lung disease, in the county during recent history.

Most children along Amelia Street do not play outside when it is warm and damp because the smell is unbearable, residents said.

Other residents said they have not been able to hang clothes outside because of the birds, which are expected to leave about March. And the early morning noise which sounds like rain, that the birds make when they leave for other parts of the county is a nuisance, residents said.

According to residents, the birds have been migrating to the area in smaller groups for shorter periods of time over the past three years.

Patent bills date to 1790

WASHINGTON (AP) — When George Washington signed the first patent bill April 10, 1790, the United States became the first nation to recognize by law that inventors had a right to profit from their inventions. Prior to that law, inventors were dependent upon privileges granted by a monarch or through a special act of legislature.

According to Intellectual Property Owners Inc., a group seeking to create public awareness of an effective patent system, responsibility for granting patents was placed upon a board whose first members consisted of Thomas Jefferson, Secretary of State; Henry Knox, Secretary of War and Edmund Randolph, Attorney General.

Problems seen when electronic banking arrives

WASHINGTON (AP) — Parents may find it more difficult to control spending by their teen-agers. Home burglaries could increase while armed robberies decline. Individual and business privacy could be threatened.

Those are some of the problems likely to arise as the nation moves toward a system of electronic banking and payments, according to a study released Monday by the National Science Foundation.

Electronic Funds Transfer, as it is coming to be known, already is being developed. It will be computer operated and involve such things as the automatic deposits of a worker's paycheck directly in his bank account by his employer.

Payments for purchases at supermarkets or other retail stores could be accomplished with a credit-card type document inserted in a computer terminal. This would automatically and instantly transfer money from the bank account of the purchaser to that of the seller.

The study, done by Arthur D. Little Inc. of Cambridge, Mass., said the system is being developed even though most Americans are satisfied paying bills with cash and checks. Because they are satisfied, it probably will be many years

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says he and challenger Ronald Reagan differ on some issues. But whether it's a philosophical difference seems to depend on which of the President's statements one hears.

At one point in a nationally broadcast news conference Tuesday night, Ford said, "Governor Reagan is to the right of me philosophically." Elaborating on their differences about federal spending and Social Security, he said "it is a somewhat different philosophy."

But a few minutes later, in response to another Reagan question, Ford said, "I don't think there are any philosophical differences.... I think he is to the right of me in a pragmatic and practical way."

Either way, Ford also declared that "anybody to the right of me, Democrat or Republican, can't win a national election."

He named no other names, but on the Democratic side seemed clearly to be referring to Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama.

In stressing the Social Security and federal spending issues, Ford continued to hit at themes he believes will help him in the New Hampshire and Florida primaries.

But he declined two opportunities at the news conference to flatly predict victories.

"I think we will do well in both.... I am encouraged in both cases," he said.

Reagan campaign manager Lyn Nofziger challenged Ford's recitations of the former California governor's positions. Ford said Reagan has suggested from time to time that Social Security ought to be voluntary and that he has suggested Social Security funds might be invested in the stock market.

Nofziger said Reagan "has been stating very clearly that he believes Social Security must be mandatory" and that Reagan has never proposed stock market investment for the fund. Reagan told a news conference in Florida last week that Social Security funds "are not invested, as they could be invested, in the industrial might of America."

Ford said he disagreed with what he described as Reagan's proposal of "a $90-billion cut in federal expenditures transferring the responsibilities and the programs to the local and state officials where they either have to abandon the programs or raise taxes to support them."

Nofziger said Reagan "has always proposed that any transfer of federal program funds back to the states must be accompanied by a transfer of tax sources."

Ford said he would campaign in New Hampshire Thursday and Friday this week. The election is next Tuesday.

Meanwhile, a variety of controversies swirled at the level of the lifeblood of political campaigns — money.

The Senate Rules Committee scheduled hearings for today on proposals to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission, which will lose many of its powers after Feb. 29 unless Congress revamps the new federal election law that was partially struck down by the Supreme Court.

Sen. James L. Buckley, Cons.-R-N.Y., whose name led the lawsuit attacking the law, called Tuesday for prompt and major restructuring of the campaign finance procedure.

He said a new Justice Department unit should enforce the law, the Congress should not be allowed as at present to veto FEC regulations and the limits on campaign contributions that were upheld by the Supreme Court should be raised.

House Speaker Carl Albert said he was confident new agreement could be reached on a new law including a reconstituted commission before the end-of-the-month deadline set by the court. The fight to reconstitute the commission is expected to be tougher in the House because of the opposition of Rep. Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, chairman of the committee handling election legislation.

But if the panel is not reconstituted, the facet of federal matching funds may be turned off as of March 1. Even as the debate over its future continued

Tuesday, the FEC certified Reagan for an additional $494,687.88 in government money for his campaign.

At the same time, the National Abortion Rights Action League filed a complaint with the FEC trying to stop the award of any matching funds to anti-abortionist Ellen McCormack. She is campaigning for the presidency on a single-issue platform and submitted her matching funds application Jan. 31.

She claims she has raised the required $5,000 in each of 20 states from individual contributions of $250 or less.

The FEC staff, now auditing the McCormack submission, plans to report to the commission Thursday.

There were these other political developments Tuesday: —Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., called for a "maximum determined national effort" to rebuild the U.S. Navy, which he said has fallen dangerously behind the Soviet navy. Jackson said as president he would increase the fleet to from 650 to 700 ships instead of the present 477.

—Jackson also made public his federal income tax returns for the past five years, which showed he earned $322,210 during the period 1971-1975. According to the returns, he donated $102,725 received for speeches and other honoraria to charity.

—Fred Harris called on all the Democratic contenders to develop a joint program that would put people back to work.

—Sen. Birch Bayh said he will introduce legislation to eliminate discrimination against military women in such areas as enlistment, promotion and job opportunities.

Nurse found guilty

LOS ANGELES —

Registered Nurse Norma

guilty of first degree murder Tuesday for slashing the throat of a pregnant woman and from her womb.

Mrs. Armistead took off her glasses and wept

silently for several minutes after the verdict was read.

The same seven-woman, five-man jury that deliberated 12 hours before returning a verdict of premeditated murder will now have to decide whether the 44-year-old nurse was sane at the time of the crime.

The sanity phase of the trial is scheduled to begin today in the courtroom of Superior Court Judge

Harry V. Peetris, who informed the jurors that he expected it would require only one day of testimony.

Should the jury find

Mrs. Armistead was insane at the time of the murder, she would be committed to a state mental hospital instead of prison.

Mrs. Armistead's defense in the initial phase of the trial was that she suffered from diminished mental capacity when she slashed the throat of 28-year-old Kathryn Viramontes

and then performed a caesarean section operation May 16, 1975.

Mrs. Armistead said it was not until after she had washed the blood off her hands that she realized the Viramontes woman "was dead or dying." The nurse said she then "saved the life" of the woman's baby by cutting it from the womb.

She was arrested after

Arkansas tornado kills 2 persons, injures 15

HAMBURG, Ark. (AP) —

A tornado whipping

through three small

South Arkansas communities Tuesday night killed two persons and injured at least 15, state police said.

They identified the dead as Eddie Anderson,

13, of near Wilmot and a 37-year-old woman from near Parkdale. The woman's name was withheld pending

notification of relatives.

John Giles, director of emergency services in Ashley County, said

reports indicated the tornado first touched down about 8:20 p.m. at Montrose and then moved

east of Parkdale and east of Wilmot near the Arkansas-Louisiana

border.

Mayor Bill Place of the 1,202-member Wilmot community said three houses and the Union

Baptist Church, all on Arkansas 52, were demolished.

"Three or four other persons were trapped in the house where the boy

(Anderson) died," the mayor said. "They had to be dug out. The house was destroyed."

Place said he observed

the damage along Arkansas 52, noting that "big tree roots were twisted out of the ground.... Concrete slabs from the homes were thrown about."

He praised the town's two Vietnamese doctors who manned the Wilmot Clinic during the aftermath.

"They began work immediately," he said.

"They certainly proved their worth."

Mayor Jack Edwards

of Montrose said no damage was reported in-one house was destroyed and a few mobile homes were damaged between

VD outbreak noted at prison

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — A Texas Department of Corrections spokesman says an outbreak of venereal disease has been confirmed at the department's Ferguson Unit 20 miles north of Huntsville.

RON TAYLOR, administrative assistant to TDC Director Jim Estelle, said Tuesday the department is fighting the gonorrhea outbreak with medical care and increased supervision of homosexuals.

"We became aware of the problem last week when the prison hospital reported a high number of cases," Taylor said.

He said the hospital screened 15 inmates and found eight cases of the venereal disease. He said a mass screening of Ferguson's 1,600 inmates was ordered and 201 were found to be infected.

TAYLOR SAID homosexual conduct among inmates is a punishable prison offense but he added such conduct will probably exist as long as there are prisons.

Dr. Ralph Gray, TDC medical director, said there was no indication of active gonorrhea cases at other TDC units.

ABA votes to permit attorneys to advertise

The Washington Post PHILADELPHIA — The American Bar Association, for the first time in its history, Tuesday authorized lawyers to advertise limited information about fees and services in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book and in other ABA-approved publications. The change in the ABA's ethical code, is not binding on state or local bar groups, which regulate lawyers. Although many of the groups are hostile to such advertising and consider it unprofessional, some of the bar groups are expected to adopt it. The Reuben H. Donnelly Co., publishers of the Yellow Pages in much of the nation, said Tuesday that it does not accept specific price advertising, although it does accept advertising about credit terms. Presumably, these restrictions would apply to legal advertising.

alphabetically in both the white pages of the phonebook and in the Yellow Pages under the heading of "lawyers." Limited distribution of business cards, announcements of address changes and listing in a few ABA-approved professional directories also have been permitted.

The resolution, adopted on a voice vote after three hours of debate, came in response to several suits challenging the ban and to a Supreme Court ruling last June that removed antitrust protection from the legal profession.

The ABA's highest officers had sought further relaxation of the bar's restrictions on advertising, but ABA president Lawrence E. Walsh said the bar had "moved forward quite rapidly when you consider the sensitivity of lawyers on the issue."

"We'll see them in court," said Sandy DeMent, executive director of the Washington-based National Consumer Center for Legal Services. "It's a shabby effort, designed to accomplish as little as possible."

A spokesman for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. in Washington said the company routinely rejects all price advertising in the Yellow Pages because prices are subject to frequent change during the life of a telephone book.

"That's not to say we couldn't reconsider, but that is our policy," said Win Chamberlin of C&P. He said he understood the rule was virtually uniform throughout the Bell telephone system.

The change in the code of ethics also allows lawyers to advertise in the Yellow Pages or in "reputable law lists or legal directories" their office hours, legal education, credit terms and field of concentration.

Before Tuesday lawyers generally have been allowed to list themselves

Lebanon seeks loans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon will seek $1.5 billion in loans from the United States, Europe and the Arab oil states to help rebuild its war-shattered economy, Economy Minister Adel Osseiran says.

"It is too early to determine the precise size of damage to the economy. Preliminary estimates by my experts put it at $3.5 billion to $4.4 billion," Osseiran said in an interview.

Other estimates run as high as $10 billion. Osseiran said several Arab and Western governments have expressed readiness to help, and some wealthy Lebanese abroad have pledged financial contributions.

"Initially, we need $1.5 billion in loans," said Osseiran, "but I'm hopeful that the size of grants and contributions from governments and Lebanese emigrants would help squeeze the size of projected loans."

Ten months of street fighting wrecked the free-wheeling economy in what used to be the financial center and playground of the Middle East. About 12,000 persons were killed and another 40,000 wounded.

Several Lebanese banks fled and set up operations in Western Europe. Scores of Lebanese and foreign business firms transferred their headquarters and staff to Bahrain, Egypt, Jordan and Greece. More than 50,000 other Lebanese sought business opportunities and refuge in Paris, Brussels and London, according to Lebanese officials.

Crewmen abandon ship

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Crewmen from the 40,000-ton tanker S.S. St. Thomas, who vowed over a month ago to stay aboard until they were paid in full, have left the vessel rather than risk possible removal by immigration authorities.

Capt. John Koukis and his 28-man crew had been stranded aboard the rusty-gray ship since Jan. 13, when it was seized by U.S. marshals after the Greek company that owned it defaulted on a bank loan.

Power, heat and food supplies were cut off, but the crewmen said they would remain on board until they were paid. By Tuesday, their food supplies were so low they ate spaghetti for breakfast.

They began filing down the gangplank late Tuesday on their lawyer's advice, and policemen drove them to a hotel.

The attorney, Peter Picotte, said he wanted them to accept an offer of $35,000 plus transportation costs back to their homes in seven different countries. But the crewmen, who were last paid Jan. 7, demanded $45,000.

"Two tugs are going to tow this ship away

Wednesday morning and I imagine the U.S. Immigration Service will make an effort to take these men and deport them," Picotte told the captain Tuesday.

A bankruptcy action Jan. 13 against the ship's owner, St. Thomas Maritime Ltd. of Liberia, caught the crewmen in the middle after they had unloaded the ship's cargo of crude oil.

The owners, represented by a Greek shipping agent, Karavias Ltd., defaulted on a mortgage to the Bank of Nova Scotia. U.S. District Court Judge Daniel H. Huyett III ordered the vessel seized, and the ship has been moored at Philadelphia's Tioga Marine Terminal since.

Last Wednesday, the ship was sold at auction for $594,000 to Union Mineral and Alloys Corp. of New York. The bank was owed $903,000.

After the sale, the ship's heat and power were cut off, and food supplies were also stopped. The crew turned to reserve food, but the supply was almost gone when the men walked off the ship. Portable generators had supplied enough current to operate the ship's lighting.

Fear of being deported without pay as soon as they left the ship had kept the crew holed up. The gangplank was raised so that federal marshals could not come aboard and deport them.

The lowest ranking crew member is owed $192, and the men feel the salaries should come out of the sale price, their attorney said.

In a hearing before Huyett Tuesday, the ship's creditors objected to paying the full $45,000. Huyett assembled the creditors' representatives and ordered them to agree on a settlement.

Zoning Board approves housing project request

Two requests were approved and one was recessed during Tuesday's regular meeting of the Midland Zoning Board of Adjustment.

A request by Homer Pace for the Midland Housing Authority to build a housing project on the southeast corner of Northland Shopping Center between Pecos and A Streets was unanimously approved by the board.

Pace said plans are to construct a flat, four-story building for low-income level senior citizens. Housing Authority chairman Harry Clark said the facility would have 84 units in the mini-rise section and 36 units in the cottages section.

The board also approved a request by the Boy's Club of Midland Inc. to build an extension to their clubhouse at 110 E. New Jersey St. in violation of front yard setback requirements stated in the city code.

Jim Alsip, a member of the board of directors for the Boy's Club, said the improvements would extend the clubhouse 30 feet to the west and 20 feet to the front. He said plans called for construction to begin next month. The present building is 55 feet wide and about 75 feet in length.

The board recessed consideration of a request by L. C. and Thelma Lovett to build a storage building at 606 Devonian Dr. in violation of rear yard requirements stated in the code. The issue was recessed until the board's next meeting March 16 due to a death in the Lovett family and the absence of the two requesters.

Ford: Nixon China trip won't affect foreign policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford says Richard Nixon is going to China as a private citizen and not to be involved in any foreign policy matters.

Ford told a news conference Tuesday night he saw no reason to ask the former president to postpone or cancel the trip, which begins on Saturday.

"Mr. Nixon is going to the People's Republic of China as a private citizen at the invitation of that government," Ford said.

"I don't believe for any alleged political purposes that I should intervene with the invitation of a foreign government to have a private American citizen visit that country."

Asked whether the trip would produce any complications for U.S. foreign policy, Ford said, "None whatsoever."

Ford said that while Nixon has received "periodic briefings or information concerning world affairs," he was given no special briefing in relation to his visit.

Nixon will leave Los Angeles at about 9 a.m. Friday for the trip to Peking. He will fly in a Chinese Boeing 707 jetliner which is scheduled to land at a little-used section of Los Angeles International Airport about three hours before the departure.

Nixon is scheduled to return to California on Feb. 29, sources said.
