U.S. Rep. Wright Patman dies of pneumonia at 82

WASHINGTON — Rep. Wright Patman, dean of the House of Representatives who spent much of his 47 years in the chamber battling big banks and corporations, is dead after being stricken with the flu.

Patman, 82 years old, had been admitted to Bethesda Naval Medical Center on Feb. 26 for treatment of influenza and two days later was placed in intensive care after developing pneumonia. He died there Sunday morning.

The Texas Democrat was serving in his 24th term in the House. He had announced Jan. 14 that he would step down at the end of the 94th Congress next January.

The White House released a statement expressing President Ford's "deep regret and sadness upon learning of the death of his friend of many years standing."

Patman's "decades of outstanding service to the House of Representatives and to our nation has served as an inspiration to all who knew and worked with him. His dedication to principle and his tireless efforts on behalf of all our citizens will long be remembered," Ford said.

House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okl., said, "No member who has served in the House during this century will make a more enduring impact on the House of Representatives and the nation than Wright Patman."

"He is probably unmatched in his devotion to the problems of human beings. Wright Patman was a hard fighter who, through a life dedicated to public service, gave his best efforts to save his day and generation," Albert added.

Using his chairmanship of the House Banking and Currency Committee, Patman launched numerous attacks on the Federal Reserve System, its tight money policies and banks which he felt had grown too large and powerful.

He chaired the committee from 1963 until January 1975, when an influx of post-Watergate freshmen representatives bent on changing Congress ousted him.

His populist philosophy sprang from early economic lessons learned as he grew up in the East Texas cotton-farming country. The son of a tenant farmer who was forced to pay as high as 30 per cent interest on crop loans, John William Wright Patman was born Aug. 6, 1893, in a log cabin in Patman's Switch, a settlement named for his forebearers.

Young Patman rode six miles to school every day on a mule. He raised cotton to work his way through college and to get a law degree at Cumberland University.

Patman's congressional district changed over the years — cotton was overtaken as the chief product by cattle and timber and the settlement of Patman's Switch disappeared. Texarkana, the biggest city in the district, became Patman's hometown.

Elected to the House in 1928, Patman set his sights on the Banking Committee. More times than anyone knows during his years in Congress, Patman sounded off in his deceptively soft voice against monopoly and mergers, especially of banks.

Patman thought banks should stay tied closely to the communities in which they operated and not be allowed to grow out of bounds. He felt interest should be low because high rates fed inflation.

"Bankers are the only people who can manufacture money without going to the penitentiary," he once said. "They are supposed to use this money to take care of the credit needs of their communities — make loans to businessmen, farmers, individuals on fair terms — not invest it in taxfree municipal bonds."

In 1932, as a second-term member, Patman charged that Treasury Secretary Andrew Mellon's wealth constituted a conflict of interest and offered an impeachment resolution. Mellon resigned during hearings on the matter and was appointed ambassador to Great Britain by President Herbert Hoover. "A pardon midway during a trial," Patman called it.

Patman was one of seven members of the House to vote for impeachment of Hoover for mishandling the Depression.

He also attempted to launch the first congressional investigation of the Watergate affair in October 1972, when he announced a banking committee probe. But he had not notified the panel's members before making public his intentions and they voted against the probe.

During the Depression, Patman triumphed with enactment of the Robinson-Patman Act, which was called everything from the "Anti-Chain Store Act" to the "Golden Rule of American Business." The act banned buyers and sellers from granting or getting discriminatory prices.

Patman considered his finest achievement the 1936 passage of a bill to pay $3.5 billion to World War I veterans. "My enemies called it a bonus bill...that it was a free gift or something," he said later. "But we were only paying veterans for what they had done..."

Following Patman's death, consumer advocate Ralph Nader called him "a great public educator on the power of big money and banking."

Before he was elected to the House, Patman served two terms in the Texas House of Representatives and five years as a district attorney. Faced with stiff challenges from time to time, he was never defeated or forced into a run-off in 28 consecutive elections.

He was married in 1919 to Merle Connor, who died in 1967, and in 1968 he married Mrs. Pauline Tucker, who survives. He and his first wife had three sons who also survive, William of Ganado, Tex., a state senator; Harold, a geologist in Austin, Tex.; and Connor, a Texarkana attorney.

Funeral services will be held in Texarkana Wednesday morning at the First Baptist Church followed by burial in Hillcrest Cemetery.

Midland gauges only .04 inch of moisture

"Every little bit helps," a National Weather Service spokesman said of Midland's .04 inch of rain today, with traces occurring Saturday and Sunday. The rainfall brings the year's total rainfall to .25 inch.

The last measurable rainfall was Feb. 4, the spokesman said. Traces fell Feb. 5 and Feb. 6, he added.

The amount of rainfall was not really significant, since much more moisture is needed to thoroughly soak the dry soil, the spokesman said. However, the rain did not evaporate quickly due to the heavy cloud cover, which was helpful, he said.

A low pressure front from northwest of Brownsville, with warm, moist Gulf air, hit the cooler West Texas air, bringing the long-awaited rain.

Andrews, Lamesa, Crane, Rankin, McCamey, Stanton and Big Lake all reported drizzle or light mist all weekend, with some fog and lightning at Big Lake.

It was partly cloudy this morning in Andrews, Crane and Big Lake, with cool temperatures and no wind. Scattered clouds were in the sky in Rankin and McCamey, where temperatures were cool. Skies were overcast in Lamesa, with cool temperatures. Stanton reported drizzly skies and cold temperatures.

Tonight should be colder, with the low expected to dip into the middle 30s, the National Weather Service said. Tuesday's high should reach the upper 60s.

Snow fell today over the Panhandle and South Plains of Texas while other sections of the drought-plagued state received welcome rain with almost 2 inches drenching Texarkana and 1.43 inches at Wichita Falls.

A flash flood watch was issued for Southeast Texas. Some flooding was reported in the state's northeast corner, The Associated Press reported.

During the morning hours, the South Plains community of Edmonson reported 8 inches of snow, and the big flakes were still falling.

Plainview had about 2 inches of snow and Amarillo was blanketed with an inch in one hour.

Oil session continuing

PANAMA CITY, Fla. (AP) — Top executives of four American oil companies and Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Yamani stayed secluded today at a plush, beachside resort negotiating Saudi Arabia's takeover of Aramco, the giant Arabian-American Oil Co.

As with everything else concerning the unusual meeting in this small Florida Panhandle city, the talks were shrouded in secrecy and heavy security.

The tight security presumably stemmed from concern about a terrorist attack like the one in December during a meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Vienna. Scores of persons were taken hostage, including Yamani, and three persons were killed.

The U.S. State Department, which helped arrange security measures, confirmed that Yamani came here for an Aramco meeting with officials of Texaco, Mobil, Exxon and Standard Oil of California.

The Panama City meeting was a continuation of nationalization talks that began at an undetermined location on the East Coast earlier in the week, State Department officials said.

The 100 per cent acquisition of Aramco would climax a process begun in 1973 when the Saudis bought 25 per cent of the firm. It would also symbolize an historic shift in dominant power from the private, Western-owned oil giants to the third world oil producers.

Yamani has said that the takeover date will be retroactive to Jan. 1, 1976, and Aramco Board chairman Frank Jungers agreed in a recent interview that this was the date tentatively set.

Aramco produces approximately 8.4 million barrels a day, only slightly less than the production of the world's top two producing countries, the Soviet Union and the United States.

The United States gets about 600,000 barrels a day from Aramco.

Injuries kill Midland girl

ODESSA — A four-year-old Midland girl died from injuries she received in a two-vehicle collision at 11:43 p.m. Saturday at Odessa, Odessa police said.

Rachel Hughes was a passenger in a car driven by her mother Mrs. Dee Hughes, when the car collided with a vehicle driven by Presley Glennon of Odessa, police said.

The accident occurred on University Boulevard at the entrance of the University of Texas Permian Basin, police said.

The young girl was dead on arrival at Odessa Medical Center, a hospital spokesman said.

House of Representatives, has come home to stay.

The 82-year-old Democrat, dean of the House, died Sunday in Washington of pneumonia. His body was flown home to Texarkana for burial.

Patman was hailed by fellow Texas congressmen as "a populist" and "one of the finest Southern gentlemen who ever served in Congress."

Democratic Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth said Patman "never hesitated to take an unpopular stand if he believed it was right."

"Long before today's self-proclaimed consumer advocates were born, Patman was in Congress waging a lonely but effective fight against those who would exploit his fellow citizens of modest means."

Wright said Patman "earned himself a place forever in the hearts of plain people who believe, as he did, that you don't have to be wealthy or influential to be entitled to an even break in America."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe called Patman "a fierce advocate of the people" who "fought the special interests, denounced bigotry in any form and became the respected spokesman of workers and farmers throughout the nation."

"The last of the old-time populists, a great public servant and a good and beloved man, his passing leaves a void that will never be filled," Briscoe said.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who served with Patman in the House in the late 1940s and early 1950s, called Patman "an institution in Congress, serving his district, his state, and his country for more than 53 years in the tradition of the early day populists."

"Congressman Patman was a man of great vigor and integrity and he will be missed," Bentsen added.

Rep. Dale Milford of Grand Prairie, a Democrat, said Patman "will take his place as one of the great legislators in Texas along with (former U.S. House Speaker Sam) Rayburn... and will be marked as great for a different reason."

"Mr. Patman was a populist. And (Continued on Page 2A)

Effects of revenue sharing loss would vary widely in Basin area

By DEBBIE PIERCE

Midland County and city officials predict no noticeable effect if the revenue sharing program isn't extended by Congress; however, the situation is somewhat different throughout the rest of the Permian Basin area, with county and city officials forecasting everything from a slight effect to a drastic effect if funds aren't extended.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said last week that, if the program is discontinued, city halls and courthouses across the state would have to close their doors or drastically increase local taxes to keep up the same level of services they provide.

He said, "The cold truth is that in most cities and counties, he (the taxpayer) will have to pay at least 20 per cent more in local taxes if the program ends."

In Midland, however, the picture isn't quite so gloomy, more / County Judge Barbara Culver and city Finance Director Robert Massengale agreed Midland is enjoying a sound economy now, and citizens probably would not notice any change in services if revenue sharing is discontinued.

Revenue sharing funds are used mainly for capital improvement projects in area cities and counties.

Midland County, for example, used its 1975 share for land drainage and furnishings for the new courthouse, other capital improvements and the Meals On Wheels program. The 1974 funds were used for courthouse furnishings and office equipment, rent on the temporary location of the courthouse, moving expenses into the new courthouse and the Meals On Wheels program, Judge Culver said.

In the City of Midland, revenue sharing funds have been used to air condition and furnish the police building; to purchase equipment, such as rollers for the street department and a truck with a lift device for the traffic engineering department; to pave streets, and to assist the parks and recreation department, such as the purchase of lights for baseball fields and the irrigation of the golf course.

Ector County Auditor Bill Hicks said revenue sharing funds have been used to renovate the county coliseum, for parks and library improvements and for the purchase of equipment. The City of Odessa used its past funds mainly for water and sewer lines, some street work and the purchase of some sanitation equipment.

Andrews County revenue sharing funds went for a civic center, a senior citizens center and other capital improvement projects. Funds received by the City of Andrews went to purchase a street sweeper and tractor, to place container systems in the city streets and for street work. Howard County used its revenue sharing funds mainly for capital improvement projects, to buy equipment and for expenses by the fire department and ambulance service. The City of Big Spring used its funds for a large portion of the street paving project, some sewer line extensions and a new fire truck and police cars.

Dawson County revenue sharing funds went toward the purchase of sheriff's cars, the ambulance service, remodeling of the courthouse and road maintenance by the precincts. One year, salaries were paid in the sheriff's department also, according to County Judge Leslie C. Pratt. Lamesa city revenue sharing funds were used to update city equipment and garbage containers.

Revenue sharing funds in Martin County were used in part to purchase a new courthouse and jail this year. Funds were mainly used for the purchase of equipment for road and bridge improvements, however. The City of Stanton used its revenue sharing funds to repair the new fire station, to complete the remodeling of city hall more and for maintenance equipment.

In Upton County, past revenue sharing funds have been used mainly to purchase large equipment, remodel buildings, maintenance work, street work and services for senior citizens. The City of Rankin used its funds mainly to purchase a new fire station, while McCamey city used its funds for capital and maintenance expenditures.

Crane County funds were first used for the museum/art center building and later to renovate a number of county-owned buildings. The City of Crane used its funds mainly for trash-hauling equipment.

Glasscock County has used its past revenue sharing funds mainly on the repairs to the courthouse but also for the purchase of dump trucks.

Reagan County Judge W. T. Mills said he was ill and would not talk to The Reporter-Telegram at that time, regarding the county's use of funds.

The City of Big Lake used its past revenue sharing funds mainly to purchase equipment.

Bullock further said a study by his office showed that inflation has gradually forced local officials to rely on revenue sharing as part of their operating budgets.

Midland County and city officials, however, disagreed.

County Judge Culver noted, "The Commissioners Court has always been of the opinion that revenue sharing might not be renewed by Congress, so we've not used the funds for our operating expenses like here." She said the items formerly purchased with revenue sharing funds would have to be purchased from the tax budget, which is "already stretched to the bottom dollar."

Big Spring city Finance Director Tom Ferguson said, if the program were discontinued, "the city could not spend as much on capital outlay projects which are nice to have."

Odessa City Finance Director Raymond Fuqua agreed, noting that additional capital improvements of the future would have to come from some other source if revenue sharing is discontinued.

Andrews City Auditor Dennis Elam said, "Since no revenue sharing funds have been used to provide services to citizens, and buildings already built are paid for, discontinuation of the program would have little effect."

Howard County Auditor Virginia Black said, "Discontinuation of revenue sharing would hurt us bad however, would have no effect on local operations, she said, as the use of future funds had not been planned past January, 1977.

McCamery City Secretary Lloyd McKinney noted that revenue sharing has supplemented the city's general fund. "Discontinuation of the program might require an increase in ad valorem taxes, or those on real estate and personal property," he noted.

Crane County Auditor Royce E. Fox said discontinuation of revenue sharing would have a "drastic" effect. He said that, before revenue sharing, the same amount of money was being spent by the federal government, but the money was going elsewhere.

Big Lake City Secretary James Barnes said, "Termination of revenue sharing will not greatly affect the city, since funds are not used for operating expenses. Loss of funds in the program would hurt, but the city could get along without them."

Upton County Judge Peggy Garner said, "Though the county could live without the revenue sharing funds, discontinuation of the program would have a great effect on the services offered to the people of the county. Taxes would have to be raised and the county would have to cut out many extras."

ODESSA — Working mothers and other persons interested in the Department of Public Welfare rules for child care facilities will have an opportunity to present their opinions on the rules at a public hearing at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Barn A of the Ector County Coliseum.

The meeting will be the second of the day for DPW officials. The DPW is authorized by the Child Care Act of 1975 to establish and enforce standards for day care facilities. The amount of paperwork called for, floor space requirements and seemingly contradictory regulations have drawn much criticism at other hearings held throughout the state.

Most people feel some amount of government regulation is needed, but disagree over just how much is acceptable. Mrs. Hazel Baylor, regional administrator of the DPW's Far West Texas office, encourages all speakers to write their comments on paper to give to DPW representatives. This is not necessary, but will be helpful when the DPW meets in Austin next month to revise the standards, she said.

you know another word for populist is representative. He believed in representing the views of his people. And he did so for a record length of time in the U.S. House. He'll be missed," Milford said in a statement.

Rep. Jim Collins of Dallas, a Republican, said he "never agreed with Patman on many votes. We usually saw things differently. But I'll tell you one thing about him. He was one of the finest Southern gentlemen who ever served in Congress."

Collins said Patman "was a man who had warmth about him, an inner warmth. And he was sincere in what he believed. I don't think anyone could have ever beaten Wright Patman."

Briscoe was expected to meet today in Austin with Secretary of State Mark White to discuss a special election to fill the first district seat.

The press release announcing Patman's retirement had noted 1976 would be the first year "since 1920 that the name of Wright Patman has not appeared on the ballot in the state of Texas."

Patman also said on that occasion, "I am very proud of what we have been able to accomplish in the first district of Texas—often over great odds. Overall, I am convinced that we have built a solid base for the future in this entire area."

"But I am proudest of the opportunities I have had to help individuals and families on all kinds of problems through the years. This is the thing that has given me deep satisfaction and really made my service worthwhile."

In today's hand you get nowhere if you're worried about waste. Sooner or later you take the ace of clubs and go after the diamonds. How do you play that suit?

Even if you're from dear old Glasgow you must lead the ace of diamonds from your hand and wastefully drop dummy's ten of diamonds on the trick.

Next, you lead a diamond to dummy's queen. When West discards a low heart (hoping you'll notice only the color and take it to be a diamond), you know that you need a finesse through East's jack.

OVERTAKE
You are in position to lead the eight of diamonds from dummy and overtake with the nine of diamonds in your own hand. Now you can continue the suit and run your nine tricks.

If you had been shall we say conservative?—on the first diamond, you would be leading the ten of diamonds from dummy on the third trick of the suit. East would not cover with his jack, and the lead would stay in dummy. This would limit you to three diamond tricks instead of five.

Senate already seeks new majority leader

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate won't vote for a new majority leader until next January, but the outcome of the contest could well be decided by the end of this week.

Discussions with senators and staff aides indicate the contest is shaping up this way: —The early frontrunner is Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., majority whip for the past five years.

—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., would be a strong candidate for the job, but he would have to decide to abandon any hopes for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Humphrey hasn't announced his candidacy for either the presidential nomination or majority leader, but he told the Minneapolis Tribune that the Senate job "would be about as good a climax to public life as I could want."

However, Humphrey feels the same way about the presidency.

—Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, is making a strong bid for the post.

—The current dark horse in the race is Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., a Southern moderate.

When Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., announced last week he would retire in January, he said he had told Byrd of his plans last September.

That gave the majority whip a big jump on his colleagues and helped make him the frontrunner for the job. But several observers pointed out that, despite that edge, Byrd doesn't have the job nailed down.

The various candidates for the job immediately began seeking commitments from their colleagues for support in the Democratic caucus next January. Their hope is to secure a majority as soon as possible, and several sources predicted the contest could be settled by the end of the week.

WASHINGTON (AP)— Social Security taxes, jobs, the Federal Election Commission and the leak of the secret House intelligence report are among the topics up for congressional consideration this week.

Little major legislation was scheduled for floor consideration in either chamber, but committees were expected to be busy.

In the House, Administration Committee Chairman Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, has set a goal of Tuesday to reach major decisions on legislation to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission.

The Supreme Court declared unconstitutional portions of the act that created the commission and set rules for campaign financing.

There is general agreement within Congress on revamping the law to provide for the commission's membership to be presidentially appointed, something required by the court decision.

However, other proposed changes in the law are controversial, especially some that would limit the solicitation of employees for contributions to political committees established by corporations.

A Senate committee also is considering revisions of the act, but the Senate was expected to await House action.

The Senate Public Works Committee starts work this week on legislation to replace a $6.1-billion public works job bill President Ford vetoed as too expensive and ineffective. The veto was sustained when the Senate failed to muster a two-thirds vote against it.

The House Ways and Means Committee was expected to take up a subcommittee recommendation that could result in an increase in Social Security taxes next year for higher-earning persons and their employers. The boost would be intended to bolster the Social Security trust funds, now running in deficit but in no danger for several years of failing to provide payments.

The 5.85 per cent Social Security tax this year is levied on a maximum income of $15,300, so the maximum tax paid by a worker is $885. Under automatic provisions of existing law, the base next year is set to rise to $16,500, making the top tax $965. The subcommittee proposed making the 1977 base $17,700, meaning a worker at the upper limit would pay $1,035, or $70 more than he would under existing law. The employer pays a matching tax in each case.

The House Ethics Committee planned a closed session Tuesday to discuss procedures in its probe to determine the source of the leak of the House intelligence committee's report. This committee has never before conducted an investigation.

CBS correspondent Daniel Schorr has acknowledged obtaining a copy of the report and making it available to The Village Voice, a New York weekly, which published it.

The committee has requested $350,000 to finance the investigation, but the request has been received coolly by members of the House Administration Committee, which holds the pursestrings.

In the Senate, Democrats were maneuvering for the job of majority leader to succeed Mike Mansfield, who is retiring next January.

Congress panels face busy week

WASHINGTON (AP)— Social Security taxes, jobs, the Federal Election Commission and the leak of the secret House intelligence report are among the topics up for congressional consideration this week.

Little major legislation was scheduled for floor consideration in either chamber, but committees were expected to be busy.

In the House, Administration Committee Chairman Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, has set a goal of Tuesday to reach major decisions on legislation to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission.

WASHINGTON (AP)— That time-honored "wishbook," the Sears, Roebuck mail-order catalog, has replaced McGuffey's Reader at Tacoma Community College for the teaching of basic English.

The Sears catalog has been elevated to the status of textbook in the school's "survival English" course for Vietnamese refugees and other newcomers to the United States.

Karen Bollard's 5½-month course is one of 90 federally funded adult English classes in the state. It is limited to adult heads of households who are looking for jobs. The language barrier has prevented many refugees from finding work, Mrs. Bollard says.

The Sears catalog is required reading for the 23 adults in her two-month-old class. She says it is the most convenient way she has of teaching an expanded vocabulary of basic terms.

By turning to one section of the catalog — for instance, "living room furniture" — she can teach an entire range of everyday words like

"couch," "chair" and "lamp." And the new words are easier to learn when there is visual identification — catalog illustrations.

Mrs. Bollard says her goal is to teach the refugees to "respond correctly more often than incorrectly" in the English language. "But inevitably I'm giving them a certain amount of cultural indoctrination, too."

Among other aspects of the class are field trips to the grocery store, where students have to locate items on a shopping list and learn to "unit price" — figure out which loaf of bread is the best buy. They also go to the hardware store to learn the difference between light bulbs and fluorescent tubes and how to find electrical fuses. Another 60 adults have already signed up for the next class and are on a waiting list. Mrs. Bollard says she looks forward to a high dropout rate because that would reflect the success of the course.

"So far, only two people have terminated," she says. "They found jobs."

ENNIS, Tex. (AP)— Most of the 500 persons evacuated from their homes following a chemical plant fire here over the weekend had returned to their homes today and authorities said air samples so far have all proved harmless.

Fumes from the burning FMC Corp. plant late Friday forced many residents to flee their homes. Sunday, authorities were cleaning up.

A spokesman said the fire department has asked the evacuees to wash off canned goods and be cautious of stored foods.

Residents have been warned to stay out of their homes if a strong gas odor prevails.

The plant's first fire in its 12 year existence in this North Texas town of 12,000 exploded 35-gallon drums of chemicals and sent toxic fumes across the southern portion of the town. Plant officials said the damage could exceed $325,000 including loss of 30,000 to 40,000 gallons of chemicals.

There were no serious injuries.

Hale takes shot at TV as darkness stops play

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — "I don't want to knock television," Hale Irwin said, "because golf certainly wouldn't be where it is without TV. But..."

And Irwin, rapidly becoming one of the tour's brightest stars, continued with a blast at the networks, pro golf's accommodation of television's wishes on starting and finishing times and the schedule that had him and Kermit Zarley interrupted and delayed a day in their sudden-death playoff for the title and the $40,000 first prize in the Citrus Open Golf Tournament.

"Somebody blundered," the irate Irwin said in a flat, carefully-controlled voice when darkness halted the playoff Sunday after two inconclusive holes. The playoff was scheduled to be completed Monday morning at 9:30 a.m., EST.

Irwin, winner of the Los Angeles Open two weeks ago, and Zarley, on the mend from major surgery last fall, completed the regulation 72 holes of play in a tie at 270, 18 under par on the 6,829-yrd Rio Pinar Country Club course. Zarley scrambled his way to a gutsy 69 and Irwin shot a 66.

With the early twilight of winter approaching, they went to the 15th hole to begin a sudden-death playoff for the $40,000 first prize and the title.

Both made par. They went to the 16th. Both made par, with Zarley holing a testing, four-foot second putt.

And it was too late, too dark to continue. The playoff was suspended. "I wish we could have finished," Irwin said. "We should have. There's no reason we couldn't have finished."

"Somebody really blundered," he repeated. The bespectacled Irwin made it clear he was not criticizing the decision to halt play—"us four-eyes don't see good in the dark," he said—but directed his displeasure toward the relatively late starting times, which, of course, necessitate an equally late finishing time.

NBC-TV was scheduled to provide national television coverage 4-6 p.m., EST, but stayed on until the day's play was completed.

To coincide a finish with the television times, the leaders went off late. Irwin teed off at 1:28 p.m., and Zarley at 1:35. The first group went off the tee at 9:30 a.m., compared with a 7:30 a.m. starting time for the first two rounds which were not televised.

By comparison, tournaments on the West Coast often have the leaders teeing off at 10:45 a.m. on television days. With the three-hour time difference, that provides for a 6 p.m. finish in the East. In the Hawaiian Open, with a five-hour time difference to the East, the leaders were away before 10 a.m.

Golf, of course, is not alone in its scheduling accommodation to fit television times. Baseball recently abandoned its traditional daylight-only World Series format to provide midweek night games for television.

5-4A golf race nears

District 5-4A golf competition opens this week and both Midland Lee and Midland High have shown the capabilities of making a strong run at the title.

For the Rebels and Bulldogs the opening round is particularly important since it will be played at Hogan Park, the home course for both teams and for the ultimate winner, a strong home showing is always important.

Lee has won the Midland Invitational and Odessa tournament titles in its backyard, and took a second at San Antonio. The Rebels may have been robbed of a third title by rains that washed out the final round of the Austin Invitational.

Lee, led by Monte Watson's 78, was tied for first with Tyler Lee at 322 after the first 18 holes Friday. But when the rains came, the final round was washed out. Scores reverted to the first round and the tie was broken by adding the score of the fifth golfer on each team.

Midland High, as a result, slipped from second place to third after winding up with a 323 team total Friday. The Bulldogs, who beat Abilene Cooper for the Del Rio Tournament a couple of weeks ago, were led by Mike Mahan, who shot a sparkling 77. Mike's score was only one off the medal pace set by San Marcos' Chuck Yarbrough and Tyler Lee's Steve Bowman, the defending state AAAA medalist.

All eight 5-4A schools will compete in the first of five district tournaments Friday.

Former Midlander wins Super Bowl tournament

BY TED BATTLES

Bob McGregor, a one time Midlander, came back to the Tall City this weekend to win the Super Bowl's Regional Pro Bowlers Tournament in impressive style Sunday.

After winning the qualifying block of 14 games bowled Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning with 3,005 pins, 205 over his average, the 33-year-old McGregor won seven out of eight games in a head-to-head roll off Sunday afternoon among the eighth top qualifiers.

For his efforts, McGregor, who now bowls out of Dallas, received $1,000 first prize money.

Tommy Krueger of Austin, who qualified for second by bowling 128 pins over his average, maintained that position by splitting his eight one-on-one matches and collected $600.

STEVE MCBRIDE of Dallas was third compiling a 6-2 win-loss record in the playoffs while John Denton of Midland, fifth after the qualifying games, posted a 6-2 playoff record to swap places with J.T. Fernandez of Albuquerque, N.M.

McGregor piled up a total of 4967 pins to 4687 for Krueger, who was a distant second. His only loss in the playoffs was to Fernandez, who split his eight matches.

A one-time PBA tour regular, McGregor won The Sporting News Rookie of the Year award in 1968 and in 1973 won the National Pro Resident Champion.

Bob gave up the tour to return to college and now squeezes in pro tournaments as his duties as personnel manager of Dallas' Jack in the Box chain will permit.

Cecil Caddell, tournament director from Dallas, labeled Midland's first venture into pro bowling a success. "With 77 entries, we had an especially good turnout for Saturday night's pro-am competition."

Next month the tournament will be held in Tulsa.

NIT nears final picks

NEW YORK (AP) — The field for the National Invitation Tournament, the nation's oldest post-season basketball classic, will be completed today with the selection of the final six teams.

North Carolina State, which turned thumbs down a year ago on the NIT, heads the list of possibilities for the final six spots. Norm Sloan, N.C. State's coach, reportedly has said he would favor an invitation this year.

Among other possibilities are Pan American, Florida State, Oral Roberts, Kansas, San Francisco, Kansas State and St. Peter's.

The 12-team tourney gets underway Saturday with the championship game slated for March 21.

Pete Carlesimo, president of the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Basketball Association, sponsor of the NIT, named the first six clubs Sunday. They were Louisville, 20-6, of the Metro-Six Conference; Kentucky, 15-10, of the Southeastern Conference; Oregon, 19-10, from the Pacific-8; North Carolina A&T, 20-5, of the Mid-East Athletic Conference, and independents Providence, 19-9, and Niagara, 17-11.

Baseballers eye games today

Midland and Midland-Lee face Class AAA baseball teams today in trying to get back on the winning track after both Tall City teams dropped doubleheaders Saturday.

The Lee Rebels travel to Pecos for a 7 p.m. game today, sporting a 1-2 season mark compared to Pecos' 2-2 reading while Midland, 2-3, entertains the Odessa Ector Eagles at 4 p.m. at the Memorial Stadium diamond. Ector is 1-4 on the year.

Cub Boosters meet tonight

Midland Cubs baseball Boosters will have an opportunity to meet new manager Denny Summers at 7:30 p.m. today at the Coors hospitality suite, west on Highway 80. Among topics for discussion will be the annual spring trip to Scottsdale, Ariz., March 19-21.

Tar Heels to make unexpected trip west

By The Associated Press
The North Carolina Tar Heels hadn't planned on it, but they're going west for the NCAA playoffs.

This little trip was arranged at the last second by the Virginia Cavaliers. Surprising Virginia pulled off one of the biggest upsets of this year's college basketball season Saturday night, whipping the fourth-ranked Tar Heels 67-62 in the finals of the Atlantic Coast Conference playoffs.

NORTH CAROLINA will be forced to travel to Dayton, Ohio, for the NCAA's Midwest Regionals next Saturday instead of playing in the more familiar surroundings of Charlotte, N.C., site of the East playoffs.

North Carolina will face a tougher draw because of it, too. Virginia's startling victory gave the Cavaliers a first-round game against DePaul.

North Carolina's loss means a first-round NCAA date with the winner of the Southeastern Conference and puts three of the nation's top four teams in the same regional—top-ranked Indiana, second-ranked Marquette and the fourth-ranked Tar Heels.

THE SEC race will be decided Monday night when Alabama faces Vanderbilt in the season finale. The Crimson Tide must beat the Commodores for the championship, otherwise a coin flip will decide North Carolina's eventual opponent.

The SEC race was thrown into a turmoil due to Saturday's results, which produced a 90-85 upset for Kentucky over Alabama and Tennessee's 86-70 romp over Georgia.

Elsewhere, several other teams landed berths in the NAAs with victories Saturday.

Cincinnati defeated Memphis State 103-95 to win the MetroSix tournament; Arizona stopped Arizona State 77-72 to take the Western Athletic Conference crown; Missouri won the Big Eight with a 95-60 rout of Colorado; Texas Tech defeated Texas A&M 74-72 in the Southwest Conference finals; Hofstra won the East Coast Conference title with a 79-72 whipping of Temple; Wichita State took the Missouri Valley crown by beating Drake 75-69 while Southern Illinois was losing 103-92 to New Mexico State in overtime; Boise State won the Big Sky championship with a 77-70 double-overtime victory over Weber

Russell unlikely hero

DALLAS (AP) — Talk about your unlikely heroes. Enter Mike Russell.

It's not that the 6-foot-7, 19-year-old sophomore from Buffalo, N.Y., hasn't displayed considerable promise for Texas Tech in a 24-5 season for the Red Raiders.

He averaged 10 points and six rebounds per game this year. But Russell has been so inconsistent this season that he isn't exactly the guy you call on in a pressure-cooker situation.

In fact, Tech Coach Gerald Myers didn't call on Russell Saturday as the Red Raiders set up a play designed to go to pure shooting Grant Dukes or high scoring Rick Bullock.

However, Russell ended up with the ball and two seconds on the clock and calmly swished a 17-foot jump shot for a 74-72 victory over the Texas Aggies in clench the first Southwest Conference postseason basketball tournament.

The victory places Tech in the first round NCAA playoffs at Denton against Syracuse next Saturday night. Tech and the Orangemen, winners of the Eastern College Athletic Conference Upstate New York Tournament, collide at 7:05 p.m. The Big Ten runnerup and the Missouri Valley Conference champion meet in the nighttime.

Russell said of his winning basket: "I didn't know for sure that it was going in when I shot. It looked like I had a chance. I just started jumping up and down and hollering. I had that shot five times during the game and that was the first one made."

Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf said "That's the longest shot Russell ever made in his life."

Musser upholds SWC report

HOUSTON (AP) — Bob H. Musser, depicted as a callous, inefficient private investigator, says the Southwest Conference's suspensions of Texas A&M basketball players Karl Godine and Jarvis Williams would appear stronger if his entire report were made public.

"If everything that was in my whole report had been revealed, it would appear quite differently," Musser said, referring to allegations the SWC's case might not be strong. "The work we did we felt was well documented and easy to doublecheck and I'm sure the SWC did." The SWC asked Musser, a Houston private investigator, to investigate charges of illegal inducements made to the two players and then were convinced enough of his evidence to declare Godine and Williams ineligible through next season.

Mittermaier steals Cup show, but Americans stage surprises

COPPER MOUNTAIN, Colo. (AP) — The show was Rosi Mittermaier with a supporting cast of Americans.

The West German superstar won both the women's giant slalom and special slalom events, captured the World Cup slalom title and became the first world champion since Anemarie Proell began her reign in 1971.

competition against the best skiers in the world at Aspen, Colo., next week.

Mahre's second-place finish to World Cup points leader Ingemar Stenmark of Sweden in Sunday's slalom was his best-ever finish in Cup competition. And just the day before, his twin brother, Phil, had finished second in the giant slalom to Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif. That was Jones' first Cup victory.

And on Sunday—the day the U.S. team capped its best-ever showing in a World Cup event—course No. 8 at this young Rocky Mountain resort was renamed "Rosi's Run."

Steve Mahre of White Pass, Wash., set the final jewel into the crown the U.S. team will wear as it continues its answers at the very least." The husky catcher said he would approach the men during an exhibition game scheduled Monday between the Philadelphia Phillies and the "Tom Seaver camp."

"I want to know what's going on myself," added Rose.

Bench and Rose believe some form of reserve clause is needed, although they say the old unilateral clause will never be acceptable again.

The clause, which binds players to their clubs until they are traded, sold or released, was struck down this winter in the courts. One appeal also was struck down and another is pending.

While the players legally have won the right to sell their services to the highest bidder, the owners say it would ruin the game. Even some players say only superstars would be well served by elimination of the clause.

But the two sides can't agree on how long a player should have stayed in the major leagues before playing out his option and becoming a free agent. "Baseball definitely needs a reserve clause," said Rose. "But I'd say the time limit is negotiable."

Miller loses support of Cincinnati players

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Cincinnati Reds' stars Johnny Bench and Pete Rose said Sunday they'll go to bat for compromise in an effort to get stalled negotiations with baseball team owners off center.

Bench and Rose said they could not support the hardline stand taken Saturday by Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association, when the talks broke down in New York.

"Marvin could be 100 per cent right in principle, but if we sit back and wait for the owners to give up the reserve clause this thing could last until the fourth of July," Bench said.

Rose said Miller had worked hard for the players, but added, "I don't like the way things get bitter and nasty every four years when basic agreement negotiations come around."

Miller said the players could run baseball without the owners if necessary.

Bench said he planned to talk to Pittsburgh first baseman Willie Stargell, St. Louis outfielder Lou Brock and New York Mets pitcher Tom Seaver and infielder Joe Torre and others "in an attempt to get the club to give up the reserve clause this thing could last until the fourth of July," Bench said.

Rose said Miller had worked hard for the players, but added, "I don't like the way things get bitter and nasty every four years when basic agreement negotiations come around."

Marcis edges Petty at flag

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Dave Marcis says he's just as glad he didn't know he was coming down to take the checkered flag when he charged out of the No. 4 turn at the Fairgrounds Raceway a year and a half ago.

"I wouldn't have done anything differently if I had known it was the last lap, but I think it helped me not knowing," said the 36-year-old Skyland, N.C., Dodge driver of his 10-foot victory Sunday over defending champion Petty, a 13-time winner here.

The confusion resulted from three late caution flags, the last one of which ended with both the green flag to resume full speed and the white flag signaling the final lap coming at the same time.

Marcis, who had been down a lap with just 22 to go, outsprinted the Dodge-driven Petty from Randleman, N.C., in that final lap to hold the lead he had gained for the final time on the 389th lap with the departure of a third challenger, Cale Yarborough.

"I'd rather explain higher gas bills than why you don't have gas."

Your natural gas bill is higher. And, you have every right to know why.

One reason is lower temperatures brought on by winter.

The main reason, however, is simply that you are paying more for natural gas. Because we are paying more. This chart shows how much:

This increase hurts both you and Pioneer. It adds to your bill and to our cost... a cost for which Pioneer is not entirely compensated. It is passed through without mark-up or additional charges.

Why does gas cost more? Competition... particularly from petrochemical and other industries. The competition for gas has never been so fierce.

We will have to pay more for gas than in the past. But by working together, and without outside interference, you'll have the gas you need today and in the future.

New light bulb could last decade or longer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will finance the development of a new light bulb that uses less than a third the amount of energy needed to run the conventional incandescent bulb, the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) says.

ERDA announced Friday it is awarding a $310,000 contract for development of the new bulb, which could burn for as long as 10 years, according to its inventor.

energy around in tight circles through the mercury gas, so the unit can be packaged inside a common-looking light bulb.

The ERDA contract was awarded as part of the agency's program to develop and encourage energy conservation techniques.

ENERGY OIL & GAS

The new bulb screws into an ordinary socket and looks like an ordinary incandescent bulb, except for a small power-booster built into its base. Fluorescent lights already in use are generally in the form of tubes requiring relatively bulky voltage-boosting transformers, characteristics that limit their use.

The bulb was invented by Donald Hollister, a physicist who has been developing it in his own company, Lighting Technology Corp. of Fullerton, Calif. Under the ERDA contract, Hollister intends to refine, test and evaluate the bulb's design, mass production and marketing.

If the bulb catches the public's fancy, ERDA said, its use could save electric energy equivalent to some 500,000 barrels of oil a day—roughly 3 per cent of U.S. oil demand and 8 per cent of oil imports.

ERA said an ordinary incandescent light bulb emits light because a thin wire filament is heated to glowing temperatures by the electricity passing through it.

A fluorescent light, on the other hand, contains no filament but forces electromagnetic energy through a mercury gas that "glows" with invisible ultraviolet rays. These invisible rays strike chemicals called phosphors, coated inside the walls of the fluorescent tube and make them glow with strong visible light.

Since fluorescents don't depend on generating heat to produce light, they don't waste as much energy as incandescent bulbs, and since they have no filament to burn out they last longer.

But the typical fluorescent light has to pass its electromagnetic energy from an emitter at one end of a tube to a separate receiver at the other end. Hollister's invention uses, instead, a magnetic coil which pumps the

FEA admits more dependence on foreign oil than expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Energy Administration says oil price increases and setbacks in developing nuclear power plants both play a role in the FEA's new forecast which concludes the United States will be more dependent on foreign oil in 1985 than expected.

Other factors in the updated forecast were reinforcement of the OPEC foreign oil cartel, adoption of gradual price decontrol on oil a year after the administration called for immediate decontrol and continued refusal of Congress to end natural gas price regulation.

In its original "Project Independence" report in October 1974, the FEA forecast a reduction of oil imports to about 3.5 million barrels per day, about 16 per cent of 1985 oil demand.

In the new version, the agency said Thursday that oil imports may be 5.9 million barrels per day, slightly less than current import levels and representing about 28 per cent of the nation's oil requirements.

The previous forecast feared a decrease in international oil prices from $11 per barrel to $7 per barrel, which might have revived high demand. The new study shows no expectation of price decreases from the current $13 per barrel.

The earlier report predicted nuclear power could supply 30 per cent of the nation's electricity by 1985, but the new report forecasts it would claim only 26 per cent.

The nuclear power outlook was downgraded because construction has slowed and orders for new plants have been canceled in recent years.

Although the forecast changed, the general conclusions of the massive "Project Independence" analysis were unchanged — "that the nation could achieve practical energy independence by 1985 by adopting energy conservation measures plus incentives to stimulate increased energy production.

YMCA to offer yoga classes

Registration begins Monday for beginning and advanced Yoga classes at the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring St.

The beginning class will meet on Mondays and Wednesdays from 7-9 p.m., beginning March 15. Meeting times for the advanced class will be determined by student interest. No classes will be held during the Easter vacation week, April 19-23.

Yoga postures are beneficial to both the athletically inclined and the physically inactive, Joe Ellis, executive director of the Central Y, said. Yoga is a general conditioning and toning program, which helps with releasing tension, he said.

Mrs. Isabel Koch is the instructor. YMCA members must pay $32 for the course, while the non-member fee is $40.

R. M. CARROLL, senior production engineer with Shell Oil Co. in Midland, has completed 30 years with the company. He started his Shell career in March 1946 in Houston. He has served in a variety of positions in Texas, New Mexico and Canada. He moved to Midland in 1957.

The Rice Brothers Canyon oil pool of Northeast Fisher County gained a location west extension with completion of Sojourner Drilling Corp., Abilene, No. 1-A J. D. Ferguson, two miles west of Hamlin.

The 24-hour potential gauge was for 104 barrels of 38-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 885-1. Production was through perforations at 4,513-4,534 feet.

Location is 2,400 feet from north and 2,900 feet from west lines of S. J. Swenson survey 13.

It pumped 48 hours through perforations at 9,202-9,380 feet, after treating the pay with 12,000 gallons of acid. It produced 35 barrels of oil and five barrels of water in 48 hours.

The project is 860 feet from north and east lines of section 49, block B-2, CCSD&RGNG survey.

Suharto dismisses Lt. Gen. Sutowo

By HAMISH McDONALD Special to The Washington Post

JAKARTA — President Suharto has finally dismissed Lt. Gen. Ibnu Sutowo, head of the state oil corporation Pertamina in a long-awaited purge of the financially troubled company's top management.

The new acting president-director of Pertamina is Maj. Gen. Piet Haryono, a senior army officer working as head of the Budget division in the ministry of finance. The choice of Gen. Haryono is thought here to underline the new hold on Pertamina and economic planning in general of the technocrats who control the finance ministry.

Sutowo, a free-wheeling administrator, used his direct links with Suharto to avoid normal planning procedures. Virtually a law unto himself he built up in recent years an estimated $8 billion program of investments in petroleum, petrochemicals, steam-making, aviation, shipping, real estate, agriculture, insurance and tourism.

The former Pertamina chief, barred from seeking loans of 1- to 15-years duration because of international standby arrangements for the Indonesian currency, plunged heavily into short-term markets to finance his projects. Declining oil in price increases and cost escalations in the projects exacerbated increasing difficulties in rolling over loans, to the point where the central government was forced to rne in Pertamina, in last March.

The full seriousness of the Pertamina disaster has probably not yet been revealed, but enough emerged around the announcement of the latest national budget in January to show that it caused a major setback to national development plans. Throughout last year President Suharto acted to save face for Sutowo, a long-time political ally, while at the same time ordering thorough investigations of Pertamina.

It became clear that Sutowo was on his way out when Suharto twice referred in January to the bitter experience of the Pertamina affair, a statement which in the allusive Javanese style of the Suharto administration amounts almost to a passionate denunciation.

Gen. Sutowo left his job last month for three weeks of medical treatment in the United States, although it became known later that part of the time was spent playing golf in the Philippines. Sutowo's future plans have not been revealed, but he is known to have amassed a considerable personal fortune during his two decades in successive Indonesian

British Columbia voters see red after socialist tenure

By RONALD L. SOBLE
The Los Angeles Times

VICTORIA, B.C. — British Columbia's three-year experiment with its first Socialist government has residents of this picturesque province seeing red — and it's not just the budget deficit run up by the Socialists.

For one thing, the province's 1.5 million drivers have been shocked to discover that their auto insurance rates will double or triple this year.

THE REASON is that the Socialist government-created Insurance Corp. of British Columbia (ICBC) is so debt-ridden that its rocketing premiums will barely keep it afloat.

So why can't British Columbia's drivers turn to a private insurance firm if they don't like ICBC's rates? Because the Socialists drove some 20 private insurance firms out of the province by making it illegal for them to sell auto insurance here.

On balance, the Socialists were seen by their supporters as moving British Columbia into social programs designed to give the working man a better life and infusing vitality into some of the money-losing companies they took over.

For three years, from 1972 to 1975, British Columbia had joined two other western provinces, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, in Socialist government. But these two other provinces aren't nearly as rich as British Columbia and had used their form of socialism to help further welfare aims.

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S economy, on the other hand, had been showing one of the fastest growth rates in Canada, bolstered by rich timber stands, oil reserves, productive copper, lead and zinc mines, profitable fisheries and a fast-growing tourist industry.

Its population is one of the fastest-growing in Canada, thanks to the temperate climate, gorgeous scenery and the nation's highest wage rates.

But in 1972, the Socialists, under the banner of the New Democratic Party, caught the attention of the voters by promising more.

David Barrett, 41, the Socialist leader of the New Democrats, a former social worker, sold the voters on a platform that aimed at giving British Columbians a bigger share of the wealth and making corporations, many of which are U.S.-based, shoulder a bigger financial burden.

THE SOCIALISTS' biggest problem was that "they had no experience on how to govern," says Nick Hills, a veteran Vancouver-based journalist. "They went too far too fast."

Just how fast the Socialists went is something William Bennett is just finding out.

Bennett is British Columbia's new 43-year-old premier, elected to office last December. He is the handsome, wealthy son of W.A.C. Bennett who also was the province's premier for 20 years until the Socialists took over in 1972.

The Bennetts belong to the Social Credit Party ("Socreds" in the local press), a party at the opposite political spectrum from the New Democrats — conservative in its politics and with a history of being cooperative with big business. There also is some feeling that young Bennett may be particularly friendly toward some of the American-based firms operating in British Columbia.

In an effort to discover whether the Socialists were as profligate with British Columbia's finances as Bennett suggests they were, he took the unprecedented step of hiring Clarkson, Gordon and Co., a big Toronto-based accounting firm, to study the province's books.

BENNETT PRESENTED the results in a televised address last month. Instead of the $40 million budget shortfall that the Barrett administration had projected for the government's financial year ending this March 31, Bennett said the deficit would be $41 million.

The new premier vowed a lean budget, tough restraint on government worker salaries and other anti-inflation measures.

The latter was interpreted by many to indicate tax increases, particularly on individuals. Along with Ontario, British Columbia has the lowest individual provincial taxes in all of Canada.

The opposition Socialists countered by declaring that the Bennett government was playing a numbers game with the previous administration's books and that the province's finances weren't as precarious as Bennett outlined.

"THE PREVIOUS administration gave the people a fairly tale trip of government services," claimed Bennett in a recent interview with The Los Angeles Times in his Victoria capitol office.

"British Columbia used to be the most sound province, financing current programs out of current revenues," he said. "But now we have a shortfall in revenue and will have to borrow for the first time in 23 years."

"The previous administration led people to believe that all things could happen and that mysteriously someone else would pay for it. Now I'm faced with bringing reality to British Columbia."

That's very much a political judgment, of course, but enough of British Columbia's voters bought this line in December to put Bennett's Social Credit government into office with just under a 50 per cent plurality in a four-party race.

Notwithstanding their short three-year term, the Socialists left some indelible marks on British Columbia.

For one, once in power, they moved quickly by doubling to 30 per cent the royalty the province gets on oil. Steep royalty hikes were also laid on the mining industry. The logbanks, meanwhile, are experimenting with electronic funds transfer systems which are expected to grow into a network of computer terminals for savers' plastic cards.

All of that will cost a lot of money, top S&L regulators agree, and some of the smaller associations may either drop out or join with others to stay in business.

There was a flurry of mergers in the early 1970s, reflected in records of federal regulators.

The peak probably resulted from soaring interest rates of the late 1960s which drew savings dollars out of the S&Ls and into higher yielding investments such as U.S. Treasury bills, regulators say. Some of those mergers were encouraged by regulators to salvage ailing associations.

Now the industry is on the threshold of a new stage in its growth, says Maurice Mann, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco, which regulates S-and-Ls in California, Arizona and Nevada.

ing industry soon found itself facing sharply higher taxes.

INDEED, BARRETT'S three-year legacy of socialism found a rapid acceleration of government inroads into many phases of provincial life. Among them:

—Nationalization of several companies, some of which were understood to be in financial difficulty. These included producers of natural gas, forest products, land developers and even a local steamship service.

—Creation of the star-crossed ICBC, the insurance corporation.

—Establishment of a land freeze to protect British Columbia's limited farm land from further real estate development.

—A $200-a-month guaranteed income for old-age pensioners and the disabled, one of the best provincial pensions in Canada.

—Increasing the province's minimum wage from $1.50 to $2.75 an hour.

—Development of legal aid services aimed at having the provincial government provide counsel for consumer complaints that go to court.

If reelected, "we would have moved a little further into government ownership," observes David D. Stupich, who as finance minister was a member of the Barrett cabinet.

JOHN BOYD, an economics professor at the University of British Columbia who was an economic adviser to the Socialist government, agrees with Stupich's statement but isn't sure it's really important in assessing the Barrett government.

Yes, says Boyd, the Socialists did take majority control of some half dozen companies and, he adds, a few prospered and a few didn't during the three-year term.

"But this might have happened anyway due to economic circumstances," says Boyd. "The ones that did well might have done well under private enterprise."

The real accomplishment of the Socialists, he says, was a redirection of economic policy.

"We were more concerned with social-economic development rather than just profits," he says.

FOR EXAMPLE, says Boyd, under the old government industry might build pulp and paper mills and focus on traditional productivity objectives to turn a profit.

The Socialists, he says, wanted the mills built in the interior of British Columbia to develop its vast lands rather than continuing to concentrate industry in the south of the province.

Moreover, says Boyd, to draw the population to the interior, it was the goal of the Socialists to also establish around an industrial core, such as a mill, a broad range of housing, educational and other social services.

Also on the drawing board were proposals to establish a government-owned oil refinery and, in cooperation with Japanese interests, a steel mill, all in the interior.

Council to tour apartments

By DEBBIE PIERCE

Midland City Council Tuesday will resume discussion on what to do with the old Belmont and Columbia apartments in the southeast section of town.

Discussion was postponed from council's last session because the group wanted to take a tour of the site before taking action. That tour will be at 10 a.m. prior to the regular meeting at 1:30 p.m. in council chamber at city hall.

The Belmont Apartments are bounded by Hicks, Belmont, Gist and South Main streets, while the Columbia Apartments are bounded by Colorado, Stokes, Gist and South Main streets. The area has been called "a disgrace" and "a potential trouble area" for crime because of the rundown condition of the apartments.

Both city and school officials are concerned with the area and want it razed or sold to someone for renovation. School officials are concerned mainly because of the area's proximity to Edison Freshman School.

Rental car agencies at Midland Regional Air Terminal are once again on council's agenda. The group will discuss possible locations for future rental car service centers and the proposed continued use of a service station site by National Rent Car Agency.

And council will also pick up where it left off last session with discussion of a request by Ralph Mason for a zone change from local retail to local retail-1 on three lots at 2100 W. Wall St.

The public hearing on the request was postponed two weeks ago so two absent council members could hear the full testimony before action was taken.

The request is for construction of a Sonic Drive-In restaurant. When the issue came before the city Planning and Zoning Commission, its proponents received notification the commission would recommend council deny the request due to the probable traffic hazard the drive-in would create.

In addition, at council's last session, two doctors with offices in the area appeared before the group protesting that a drive-in would decrease the value of property in the area and present a trash problem.

In other action, council will consider: — Extending the city's lease agreement and appropriation of funds for the present back-up ambulance until March 31;

— Discussion of the housing assistance plan in the city's Community Development fund application;

— A request to modify the city's building code to allow adobe construction in the city;

— A request by Midland County for sewer service at the County Exhibit Building;

— A request for paving the 400 block of W. California Avenue between Big Spring Street and Marlenfeld Street;

— A method of disposing of surplus equipment;

— The possible sale of properties received through delinquent tax suits;

— In executive session, various land acquisition and personnel matters;

— Authorizing assignment of certain Rich Air facilities at Air Terminal;

— Authorizing execution of a contract with Southwestern Laboratories for testing work necessary before preparing plans for runways at Air Park and the parking apron at Air Terminal;

New S & L merger wave said possible

The Los Angeles Times

A new wave of mergers may sweep over the savings and loan industry if Congress goes ahead with proposals to reorganize the nation's financial institutions.

One effect of the broad changes now being debated in Washington would be to make savings and loan firms more like commercial banks, with authority to issue some kind of checking account, make consumer loans and do other kinds of lending they are not allowed to do now.

The banks would get more competitive weapons, too, such as being allowed to pay interest on money in checking accounts, and to pay as much interest on savings as the S&Ls. Ceilings on savings account interest have historically given the edge to S-and-Ls.

Both S&Ls and commercial banks, meanwhile, are experimenting with electronic funds transfer systems which are expected to grow into a network of computer terminals for savers' plastic cards.

All of that will cost a lot of money, top S&L regulators agree, and some of the smaller associations may either drop out or join with others to stay in business.

There was a flurry of mergers in the early 1970s, reflected in records of federal regulators.

The peak probably resulted from soaring interest rates of the late 1960s which drew savings dollars out of the S&Ls and into higher yielding investments such as U.S. Treasury bills, regulators say. Some of those mergers were encouraged by regulators to salvage ailing associations.

Now the industry is on the threshold of a new stage in its growth, says Maurice Mann, president of the Federal Home Loan Bank of San Francisco, which regulates S-and-Ls in California, Arizona and Nevada.

It has progressed from a collection of small, local institutions promoting thrift and home ownership, through rapid growth in the post-World War II housing boom, to the past decade of "ever more competitive, free-wheeling, hostile and consumer oriented" economic conditions, Mann told an industry meeting last fall.

The next stage of the industry's life, he says, will be either as a strictly government-regulated public utility to funnel mortgage money to homebuilders, or — as he thinks more likely — as an industry of "full service, consumer oriented, retail level financial institutions."

But Mann says this route "will be an expensive, difficult and complicated road that many S&Ls are not equipped or may not be prepared to travel."

"CERTAINLY WE WEREN'T as doctrinaire as European Socialists," says Boyd. "We were just a good old left wing government."

The sky began to fall in on the Socialists in 1975. It came in the form of a business slowdown (with not anywhere near the severity of the U.S. recession), mounting inflation and, in turn, "catchup" demands that made British Columbia Canada's wage pacesetter and which triggered some of the worst strikes and labor strife in the nation.

Pulp and paper workers, who work for the province's biggest industry (it produces about half of its gross national product) walked off the job last July. Railway and supermarket employees did likewise.

Forest workers in rural areas said they could hardly make ends meet on $15,000 a year. Butchers in Vancouver said they needed twice that to meet the rocketing cost of living.

BACKED INTO A CORNER, Barrett surprised many fellow Socialists by ramming back-to-work legislation through Parliament last October.

But by the end of 1975, British Columbia's average weekly wage rate — $227.76 — was far and away higher than the rest of Canada, which had a national weekly average for last year of $200.44 — the latter figure is itself about $30 above the U.S. average rate.

On the price front, Barrett imposed a province-wide freeze on food, drug, fuel and transportation prices. Barrett said he called the December election (under the law, he could have waited another two years) as a public mandate for his economic policies and to test public opinion on Ottawa's new national program of wage and price controls.

British pound slumps lower

LONDON (AP) — Britain's ailing pound sterling, which dropped in value to below $2 for the first time in history on Friday, tumbled again in foreign exchange dealings today but then leveled off.

The pound, once one of the world's most stable currencies, closed at $1.9815 Friday. It opened around two cents lower today and at one point dropped as low as $1.9392.

But by late morning the currency had risen somewhat and leveled off at $1.9475, a drop of nearly 3/4 cents from Friday's close.

There has been general selling and quite a bit of "cover" activity. "We have had some selling from the banks, but the Fed and the Middle East seem to be buying in the same direction," says a source.
