First National plans major expansion

The First National Bank of Midland today announced plans for a $12 million-plus remodeling program, including the addition of 16 floors to its bank building, expansion of its banking quarters and expansion of its parking garage facilities.

Wilbur A. Yeager Jr., bank president, said the parking facility is scheduled for completion in about 18 months, while the tower building will be completed in about 2½ years.

With the addition of 16 floors, the bank structure will comprise 24 stories and 220,000 square feet of floor space, 160,000 square feet more than the present bank facility. Tower tenants will use five exterior elevators rising through windowed shafts on the west side of the building, plus the two elevators now in use. The new elevators will also extend to the lower level parking garage.

The parking garage expansion will include the addition of three floors to the existing facility, the building of six floors on the quarter block directly east of the present garage and a fourstory portion connecting the two that will span Colorado Street. Entry and exit will be from both Colorado and Missouri Streets.

The block-long, multi-story garage will then accommodate 790 vehicles and be designed to operate as a self-parking unit. Elevators within the garage will allow access to all garage floors as well as the lower level and first two floors of the bank itself.

Yeager said, "The project is in the spirit of the bank's tradition of offering its customers and the city the utmost in banking services and leadership."

Wood and Associates of Dallas are architects for the tower building and parking garage. Construction is scheduled to get under way soon.

11 men die in latest Kentucky mine blast

OVEN FORK, Ky. (AP) — Eleven men trapped in the Scotia Coal Co. mine were found dead today, said

H.N. Kirkpatrick of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals. "We have bad news," Kirpatrick told newsmen. "All 11 are dead three inspectors and eight company

Rescue workers found the bodies of the men at 12:07 p.m., Kirpatrick

The families of James Sturgill of Eolia, Ky., and Glen Barker of Cumberland, Ky., confirmed that the two men were among those trapped.

The three inspectors were Kenneth Keiser of Coburn, Va., Curtis Pussey and Richard Simmons. Pussey and Simmons worked out of the Prestonsburg, Ky., office of U.S. Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration. Their hometowns were not known. Word of the deaths was passed among a crowd of rescuers by men who had been down in the mine today searching for the 11 men. The searchers had been lowered into a ventilation shaft which dropped straight into the mine within 3,800 feet of where the trapped men were believed to be.

While searchers had been probing through the mine below, about 100 rescuers waited by the entrance to the ventilation shaft. They received the news of the deaths quietly. The men gathered nearer to the shaft entrance. One federal mine inspector

He moved through the crowd, patting fellow inspectors on the shoulders. "Have you heard about it, all of them," he asked each one. Two men in the mine shaft when the blast occurred climbed to safety and told rescue workers the 11 trapped below were alive after the explosion, a spokeswoman for the Scotia Coal Co. had said earlier. Herschel Potter, chief of MESA's safety division, said in Washington that the two made their way back through the mine after the blast and yelled for help. A rescue crew went in and got them out, he said. Lawrence Phillips, MESA district supervisor who was in charge of the rescue effort, said the 11 men were working in the same area as the 15 miners trapped and killed Tuesday. That area is 31/2 miles from the mine entrance and 1,600 feet underground.

Funerals were scheduled for today for four of the men killed in Tuesday's explosion. All were from small communities in the surrounding mountains of eastern Kentucky.

Within minutes of the latest blast, relatives and spectators began gathering along the road leading to Scotia's No. 1 Black Mountain mine. Several ambulances arrived, and state police cars blocked the entrance. Reporters were not allowed on the property.

Rescue teams had been in the mine around the clock since Tuesday's explosion, trying to clear 31/2 miles of mine shaft of poisonous and explosive gases and to reinforce the roof, a spokesman at MESA's District 6 of-fice at Pikeville said.

Swedish king to wed

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) Swedish King Carl XVI Gustaf, European royalty's most eligible bachelor, became engaged today to West German commoner Silvia Sommerlath.

The royal court confirmed press accounts of the engagement and said a formal announcement would be issued later in the day. Most of the royal family and Miss Sommerlath's family were gathered at the palace.

Carl Gustav, 29, met the 32-year-old Miss Sommerlath in 1972 when she was a hostess at the Olympic summer games in Munich. She has been a frequent guest of the curly-haired king since then at his Stockholm palace and summer residence on the Baltic Sea island of Oland.

The king ascended the throne in September 1973 after the death of his grandfather, Gustaf VI Adolf, at the age of 92. Carl Gustav plans to visit the United States early next month on a "sell Sweden" campaign and his trip will be the first by a reigning Swedish monarch to the United

at least two persons dead by official count, and guerrilla sources said the revolt of Moslem mutineers rolled on unchecked, with rebels capturing another army garrison just south of Beirut and attacking a second at Sidon, 25 miles south of the capital.

Franjieh told a newspaper which supports him, "I'm staying on to de-fend legality and legitimacy. I shall wait for the coup leaders here in the presidential palace."

Brig. Aziz Ahdab, commander of the Beirut garrison who announced the takeover in a television-radio ad-dress Thursday, claimed today he has full backing from the army com-

"We are in close collaboration with the army command and we will labor together and will invite the politicians to concerted action with us to save the situation and the country," said Ahdab at a news conference at his headquarters ringed by armored per-sonnel carriers.

But Army Commander Hanna Said and most of the country's leftist and rightist politicians withheld any public comment, apparently waiting for the outcome of Ahdab's showdown leader of the Moslem soldiers' revolt that has shattered army unity over the last week. But he claimed "scores of his men are joining our move-

On Thursday Ahdab called himself 'provisional military ruler" and said he would stay in power only long enough to get a new president and government. He announced his commitment to democratic parties as he called for resignations of Franjieh and Premier Rashid Karami. There was no word from Karami. who remained isolated in his downtown home.

Ahdab received public support from a number of officers, including the air force and a tank corps commander. He claimed he had the support of the entire armed forces. But the armed forces commander, Gen. Hamma Said, and other members of the high command were silent.

Ahdab controls about 4,000 troops the largest garrison of the 18,000-man armed forces, supported by a strong armored force.

Franjieh has the 150-man presidential guard, heavily reinforced with loyalist units including armor in recent days as coup rumors grew with the disruption in the country.

He also may be counting on support from three large garrisons in the Christian-held sector of Mount Lebanon north of Beirut. One high-ranking officer, however, said these garrisons are expected to wait for a decision from the high command.

As the showdown between Ahdab and Franjieh developed, Beirut's streets were almost empty of traffic. There was no sign of organized opposition to the coup except around Franjieh's palace. But hundreds of armed gunmen from Moslem and Christian private armies took over Christian and Moslem militia exchanged sporadic gunfire in the already ravaged downtown hotel Franjieh was reported to have told Ahdab he would leave office only if voted out by a two-thirds majority of parliament as provided in the Lebanese constitution. The coup leaders gave Franjieh until 9 p.m. today (1 p.m. CST) to resign along with Karami to make way for a new government. Ahdab, a Moslem in his late 50s with police training in the United States, told reporters he had support from "the entire army," including his colleagues in the predominantly Chris-

Tower says Reagan should give it up

WASHINGTON - Texas Sen. John Tower, a leading Republican conservative, says Ronald Reagan has no chance to win the Republican presidential nomination and should halt his campaign to unseat President although officially supporting Ford in Texas, has remained neutral on Reagan because of Reagan's strong conservative support in the Lone Star

But after Ford's decisive win in this week's Florida primary, Tower said Reagan now is a "spoller," only hurting Ford's chances against the Democrats in November, while having no chance of winning the nomina-

Tower said Thursday that he would discuss the Reagan candidacy today Goldwater joins Tower, it would be a further blow to the already battered Reagan campaign. Goldwater's failure to endorse Reagan has caused pitterness in the Reagan camp. The former California governor is trailing Ford in Illinois, where White House officials are hoping for a lopsided victory in Tuesday's voting.
Goldwater could swing some conservative votes in the Ford column by urging Reagan to withdraw.

More important, however, is Towar's recommendation to Reagan.

Both Reagan and Ford campaign planners still see the May 1 Texas primary as Reagan's best chance for a major victory before the California voting June 8, where according to recent polls Reagan still leads Ford. But Tower says Ford will beat Reagan in Texas. "Ford has Reagan out-organised, and he's got the momentum." Tower said. Tower also cited a recent poll of conservative Republicans in Harris County, which includes Houston. It showed Ford leading Reagan even before the President's victory in

"They've very conservative in Har-ris County, so I think that's an important indication that Reagan can't win in my state," Tower said. Only two weeks ago, Ford campaign managers were saying the President could lose the Texas race. Part of the reason was Tower's criticism of Ford for approving energy legislation that Tower said hurt oil interests in his state.

Southwest files petition

AUSTIN - A petition for leave to intervene in the application of Chaparral Airlines to provide service between Abilene and Austin, Houston-Hobby, Lubbock and Midland-Odessa has been filed by Southwest Airlines.

Chaparral's application was consolidated March 1 with the application of Trans Regional Airlines for the same service and renamed the Service to Abilene Case before the Texas Aeronautics Commission.

No objections to the Southwest petition have been filed.

The TAC said Southwest has sufficient interest in the case to justify its participation as a party. TAC further said Southwest's participation will not cause undue delay in the proceedings.

Notices of protest on Chaparral's application have been filed by Wayne B. Henry, the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce and the City of Big Spring.

Four petitions for leave to intervene plus two notices of protest have been filed on the application of Trans Regional. The petitions to intervene were filed by Chaparral Airlines, Southwest Airlines, Edmund A. Hen-derson and Gerald R. James, doing business as Eagle Commuter Airlines. The notices of protest were filed by Rio Airways and Wayne B.

at 15-20 m.p.h. tonight, the National Weather Service said. Wild thunderstorms punished broad stretches of Texas today and winter threatened a freezing comeback in many areas tonight, The Associated Press reported.

These conditions developed as one cold front shoved deeper into the state and a second, loaded with much colder air, approached the Texas Panhandle from New Mexico.

14-member panel to lead Ford drive

Mrs. Linda Allison, chairman of the President Ford committee for Midland County, has announced a 14member steering committee for the President's 1976 campaign.

"Our committee members represent a wide range of interests, accomplishments and experience, Mrs. Allison said. She said they will work hard to continue the President's winning trend in Texas. "We want to elect the President's four delegates from the 19th Congressional District not only to help insure his nomination, but to show that our area appreciates the service he is rendering our nation," Mrs. Allison said.

Mrs. Allison continued, "President Ford is the winning alternative to the negative, divisive philosophies of the Democratic candidates now running in the various primaries."

President Ford stands for a strong national defense, a reduced federal bureaucracy, a decontrolled oil and gas industry, and reduced unemployment, inflation and government spending she said.

The four delegates running to represent the President for the 19th Congressional District are Jim Allison Jr. of Midland, Dave Shannon of Odessa, Mrs. Mary Kirchhoff of Plainview and Mrs. Terry Tapp of Leaders meet to protest Webb closing of Big Spring civic leaders was to meet today in Washington with Air Force Secretary Thomas Reed in another round of efforts to get the military establishment to revoke its decision to close Webb Air Force Base

The Air Force anounced Thursday it intends to close Webb by the end of

'We have talked to many people who have promised us that they will fight for us," said a spokesman for the group which was headed by Mayor Wade Choate.

The group met with Texas Senators John Tower and Lloyd Bentsen Thursday and also held talks with Congressmen Bill White, Jim Collins and George Mahon.

The group issued a statement late Thursday objecting to the reasons submitted by the Air Force in its decision to close down the air base.

'We feel that our governmental and military leaders will reconsider after the facts are fully presented and no action will be taken without a full public hearing on the socio-economic impact of such an action," the state-

The statement argued that the base should remain open because it is necessary to national defense, its flying and training conditions under the open West Texas skies are ideal, and its elimination would create serious economic problems to the area.

The Air Force said that the base pumps $33 million into the Big Spring economy every year and that nearly 2,000 military jobs and about 700 civilian jobs will be eliminated.

But Big Spring officials said that the economic impact would be much greater since the base generates other civilian jobs in the area and a large number of military personnel The statement rejected Air Force claims that Webb does not have enough modern facilities and argued that there is a new $5 million hospital at the base and new bachelor airmen quarters are under construction. It stated that to rebuild the facilities in the case of future emergencies would cost three times as much as is now invested in Webb, approximately $128 million.

The air base is used basically as a training facility for U.S. and foreign

Sales tax guirk

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - A law allowing certain large businesses to pay their sales taxes directly to the state, instead of through retailers, is costing Texas cities $16 million a year in lost revenue, a House subcommttee has

Walt Lilie, senior research associate in the comptroller's department, told the taxation panel Thursday that the provision in the tax law works this way:

A company that buys goods totaling $200,000 annually can get a special permit under which they do not pay sales taxes through merchants on the things they buy. Instead, they keep their own records and pay the tax directly to the state.

The reason for the provision is a company might ultimately use an item for a tax exempt purpose, like in the construction of a church.

Like said cities lose money because a company might store or use an item outside the city where it was bought. This means the city would receive no "Do you have any indication that a game is being played?" asked Rep. Al Korioth, R-Carrollton.

"Good business sense might be the appropriate term," said Lilie. "As to whether that business sense is kosher. that is something we need to look into a little deeper."

"Do you think there are people will take advantage of this 'good business sense?'" asked Rep. Ron Waters. D. Houston.

"I do," Lilie said.

Lynn Moak, the comptroller's director of research, said the direct pay provision was written in 1963, before the cities were allowed to have

The Bicentennial Scout Exposition, featuring about 40 demonstration booths, will take place Saturday in the Midland County Exhibits Building on East U.S. 80 from noon to 5 p.m.

The opening ceremony at moon will include remarks by State Rep. Tom Craddick.

More than 700 scouts from 40 Cub Scout, Boy Scout and Explorer units from Midland and Martin Counties will take part in the exposition. The demonstration booths will feautre exhibits such as handicrafts, historical and patriotic subjects, first aid, Indian crafts and camping skills. The booths will be judged on the quality of activity and materials, methods of operation and general public interest, Marvin Eastman, exposition chairman, said.

Every unit will have the opportunity to score points to qualify for the Blue Ribbon Award. The best display for Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts and Explorers will each receive the Presidential Award ribbon. The presentation of awards will take place near the closing of the exposition.

Tickets for the exposition, which is open to the public, are $1 each and will be available at the door.

The Bicentennial project of the Girl Scouts of the United States of America focuses on female contribution - past, present and especially future— toward a better life for the American people. The project, "Hidden Heroines," is to find a woman or women "admired for her achievements and noble qualities and considered a model or ideal."

Senior Girl Scout Troop 144 feels that Mrs. Benton Howell of Midland embodies all the Girl Scout ideals. She Howell, a teacher and pianist, feels that her volunteer work as a Girl Scout leader at Travis School is a source of satisfaction. The Girl Scouts also believe her work and interest in young people is a great contribution to the growth of Midland.

Mrs. Howell was presented with a plaque of appreciation at a tea held in the home of Judy Hodge, 2827 Auburn. Troop members present were: Vickie Brooks, Miss Hodge, Linda Odem, Nancy Barkus, Darlene Moore, Jan Hacke, Helen Angelo, Lynn Gourley, Ilene Gould, Carol Edgerton, Sheri Talley, Libby Watson, and troop advisors, Mrs. R. WASHINGTON - "It's a matter of taste," the saying goes, but how many persons actually exercise their sense of taste? Something may be pronounced "bad" or "good," an adult adaptation of "yummy" or "yucky." Seldom, though, does the individual think through what sensations are being experienced.

Less often, even, does an individual compare tastes to fix a scale of values. If people really thought about what they taste, could anyone but Mel Brooks devise an advertisement that trumpets the "country fresh flavor" or a margarine, or claim that a fabricated orange drink tastes "just like" freshly squeezed juice, or say an imitation meat tastes "better" than bacon? What does better mean? Too often we accept advertising dicta, accept convenience as an excuse or follow traditional taste

This latter practice is particularly disturbing to James Beard, the recorded so vividly impressions of what has crossed his sensitive palate for more than 70 years.

"Even people who are taught to cook professionally, the chefs, don't think about the ingredients in recipes they recreate," he said during a recent interview.

"Many of them have no idea what they are tasting. They put rosemary on lamb by rote. They haven't tried other herbs on lamb. They don't judge the quality of the rosemary. They just use it because they were told rosemary goes with lamb."

In Beard's opinion, it is not only wine that intimidates Americans. Home cooks, he said, are remarkable for "a gross lack of confidence in their

To test his theory, and to open a few eyes as well as mouths, Beard and his associate Carl Jerome organized a class in taste. It was given at their New York school last spring, and some aspects were repeated at summer classes in Oregon.
"We tasted salts," Jerome said.

The consensus made Malden the most popular and kosher the most practical for regular home use.

"We sampled black pepper, white pepper and green peppercorns," Beard continued. "We tried them in a white sauce and in a recipe for steak au poivre. The peppercorns didn't stand up to the flavor of the steak, but their taste came through maf-nificently in the white sauce. White pepper was dismissed by all but one of the 14. It has no taste. Its only function is as a cosmetic for those who can't tolerate black specks in a white sauce

Various hams were sampled, as were raw and cooked fish. The class "loved" raw fish, Jerome said. Bay scallops, raw and in a seviche, were the most popular. While New Yorkers disliked a recipe of "salmon tartare," Oregon students "couldn't leave it

Another tasting centered on meat. Samples of fresh and frozen veal, lamb and beef, were cooked and compared. Beard recorded the results in his syndicated newspaper column.

Frozen veal was marked down for a coarseness of texture, the flavor of lamb that had been frozen was more pronounced, but, according to Beard, the frozen beef was "a real winner." To prove the point and to demon-strate the tasting technique, Jerome arranged a retasting last month for this reporter and three others. A boneless strip sirloin had been cut into eight steaks by a firm specializing in mail-order frozen meat. Every other steak was frozen. The four remaing were left fresh. Despite some guessing before cooking that steaks with a damp surface were the defrosted frozen steaks, (a correct suspicion, it turned out) no one would attempt a certain identification. Once cooked (rare), four separate comparisons failed to yield positive identification. Small differences in texture and appearance were noted in each pair, but they tended to cancel one another out.

In the end, the tasters agreed there was no significant difference in texture or taste, though three of the four steaks judged most attractive turned out to be steaks that had been frozen. They held their form better and looked juicier.

"I have acquired considerable respect," Beard wrote in his column, "for frozen meats, especially those packaged for mail-order sale." So, too, did the tasters.

Yet taste for taste's sake is something one doesn't indulge in cheaply. The "mail-order" steak is an expensive commodity. Omaha Steaks International, the Nebraska firm that provided the beef in question, charges $47.90 for eight of its aged, choice, 11-4 inch thick, 12-ounce strip steaks. That is a cost of almost 50 cents an ounce or nearly $8 a pound. For that price the meat should be good. Even good, and with delivery charges included, and with the elaborate packaging that protects the meat, it still will appeal to only a limited audience.

achievements and noble qualities and considered a model or ideal."

Senior Girl Scout Troop 144 feels that Mrs. Benton Howell of Midland embodies all the Girl Scout ideals. She works with young people in Scouts, church and other activities. Mrs. Howell, a teacher and pianist, feels that her volunteer work as a Girl Scout leader at Travis School is a source of satisfaction. The Girl Scouts also believe her work and interest in young people is a great contribution to the growth of Midland.

Mrs. Howell was presented with a plaque of appreciation at a tea held in the home of Judy Hodge, 2827 Auburn. Troop members present were: Vickie Brooks, Miss Hodge, Linda Odem, Nancy Barkus, Darlene Moore, Jan Hacke, Helen Angelo, Lynn Gourley, Ilene Gould, Carol Edgerton, Sheri Talley, Libby Watson, and troop advisors, Mrs. R. M. Carroll and Mrs. E. E. Moore.

The Washington Post WASHINGTON - "It's a matter of taste," the saying goes, but how many persons actually exercise their sense of taste? Something may be pronounced "bad" or "good," an adult adaptation of "yummy" or "yucky." Seldom, though, does the individual think through what sensations are being experienced. Less often, even, does an individual compare tastes to fix a scale of values. If people really thought about what they taste, could anyone but Mel Brooks devise an advertisement that trumpets the "country fresh flavor" or a margarine, or claim that a fabricated orange drink tastes "just like" freshly squeezed juice, or say an imitation meat tastes "better" than bacon? What does better mean?

Too often we accept advertising dicta, accept convenience as an excuse or follow traditional taste

This latter practice is particularly disturbing to James Beard, the cooking teacher and author who has recorded so vividly impressions of what has crossed his sensitive palate for more than 70 years.

"Even people who are taught to cook professionally, the chefs, don't think about the ingredients in recipes they recreate," he said during a recent interview.

"Many of them have no idea what they are tasting. They put rosemary on lamb by rote. They haven't tried other herbs on lamb. They don't judge the quality of the rosemary. They just use it because they were told rosemary goes with lamb."

In Beard's opinion, it is not only wine that intimidates Americans. Home cooks, he said, are remarkable for "a gross lack of confidence in their own palates."

To test his theory, and to open a few eyes as well as mouths, Beard and his associate Carl Jerome organized a class in taste. It was given at their New York school last spring, and some aspects were repeated at summer classes in Oregon.
"We tasted salts," Jerome said.

most popular and kosher the most practical for regular home use.
"We sampled black pepper, white pepper and green peppercorns," Beard continued. "We tried them in a white sauce and in a recipe for steak au poivre. The peppercorns didn't stand up to the flavor of the steak, but their taste came through maf-nificently in the white sauce. White pepper was dismissed by all but one of the 14. It has no taste. Its only function is as a cosmetic for those who can't tolerate black specks in a white sauce

Various hams were sampled, as were raw and cooked fish. The class "loved" raw fish, Jerome said. Bay scallops, raw and in a seviche, were the most popular. While New Yorkers disliked a recipe of "salmon tartare," Oregon students "couldn't leave it in his syndicated newspaper column. Frozen veal was marked down for a coarseness of texture, the flavor of lamb that had been frozen was more pronounced, but, according to Beard, the frozen beef was "a real winner." To prove the point and to demonstrate the tasting technique, Jerome arranged a retasting last month for this reporter and three others.

A boneless strip sirloin had been cut into eight steaks by a firm specializing in mail-order frozen meat. Every other steak was frozen.

The four remaing were left fresh. Despite some guessing before cooking that steaks with a damp surface were the defrosted frozen steaks, (a correct suspicion, it turned out) no one would attempt a certain

identification. Once cooked (rare), four separate comparisons failed to yield positive identification. Small differences in texture and appearance were noted in each pair, but they tended to cancel

one another out. In the end, the tasters agreed there was no significant difference in texture or taste, though three of the four steaks judged most attractive turned out to be steaks that had been frozen. They held their form better and looked juicier. "I have acquired considerable respect," Beard wrote in his column, "for frozen meats, especially those packaged for mail-order sale." So, too, did the tasters. Yet taste for taste's sake is something one doesn't indulge in cheaply. The "mail-order" steak is an expensive commodity. Omaha Steaks International, the Nebraska firm that provided the beef in question, charges $47.90 for eight of its aged, choice, 1 1-4 inch thick, 12-ounce strip steaks. That is a cost of almost 50 cents an ounce or nearly $8 a pound.

For that price the meat should be good. Even good, and with delivery charges included, and with the elaborate packaging that protects the meat, it still will appeal to only a limited audience.

Hooded men free 16 persons from Mexico jail

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (AP)-"I heard someone shout 'freeze' and then they opened the cells and we headed for the river," said Paul Nesinson as he recounted how he and 15 others were unexpectedly freed from jail at Piedras Negras, the Mexican city across the Rio Grande from this West Texas town.

U.S. citizens. They were freed by two hooded men who burst into the prison about 3 a.m., tied up the five guards on duty and then broke the locks in the cells where most of the American men and women were held. Piedras Negras Chief of Police Rafael Ceja Barajas said the two men were "Americans and spoke only English"

Nesinson, of Minneapolis, Minn., four other men and one woman, made it across the river Thursday morning and were later arrested by U.S. authorities. They spent the night in the Maverick County jail while of-ficials determined whether any charges were pending against them in the United States.

Sheriff J. Bean Salinas said he would release the six persons today. All are U. S. citizens and cannot be sent back to Mexico.

Others with Nesinson were: Pascual Narvaer Uriegas, 20, of Ozona, Tex.; Jeffrey Andrew Garafola, 24, of San Francisco, Calif.; Dale Chenoweth, of Moss, Tex., Kari Kristine Jorgensen, 23, of Denver, Colo., and Jim Rodgers, 26, also of

"It was unexpected," Nesinson said. "I was in my cell reading a magazine when I heard this noise. I thought they were bringing some drunks in, but then I heard someone shout 'freeze' and saw the hooded

"They tied up the guards and then opened the cells and we all headed for the river. I did not talk to them (the hooded men)... what could I say? ... I just followed the group. The river is about two blocks from the prison.

"I was weak because of the lack of sunshine and exercise in jail for nine months and I was the last man at the river. I floated on my back and made it across. I walked into town and a deputy stopped me. I told him where I was coming from and he assured me they wouldn't send me back."

Nesinson said he had no idea who the hooded men were, but "I know why they did it ... to free Americans who are in prison in Mexico for crimes that have not been proven. I am grateful to them."

It was believed that 11 of the 16 were U.S. citizens.

They were freed by two hooded men who burst into the prison about 3 a.m., tied up the five guards on duty and then broke the locks in the cells where most of the American men and women were held. Piedras Negras Chief of Police Rafael Ceja Barajas said the two men were "Americans and spoke only English" four other men and one woman, made it across the river Thursday morning and were later arrested by U.S. authorities. They spent the night in the Maverick County jail while of-ficials determined whether any charges were pending against them in the United States.

Hughes address reported

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Billionaire Howard Hughes' current address is the Princess Hotel in Acapulco, Mexico, according to a document filed in U.S. District

The document was filed by lawyer Edward Clyde of Salt Lake City, who represents Hughes' Summa Corp. in a $9-million suit alleging it was victimized by fraudulent sale of mining stocks.

Clyde had agreed to keep Judge Aldon J. Anderson abreast of Hughes' address within 10 days after Hughes moves to a new location.

Hughes had been listed as living in The Bahamas, but defense attorney Robert Wyshak noted news reports that Hughes had moved to Mexico and asked verification of his ad-against American citizens, Mr. Nixon repeatedly argued that he had followed the lead of his predecessors in the White House.

In 1964, he said, during Allende's earlier bid for the presidency "I was aware ... that the incumbent Administration in the United States determined that it was in the interests of this nation to impede Mr. Allende's becoming president because of his alignment with and support from various communist countries, especially Cuba.'

He said that the Kennedy and Johnson administrations "expended approximately four million dollars on behalf of Mr. Allende's opponents and had prevented Mr. Allende from becoming President."

In the arena of surveillance activities within the United States, Mr. Nixon said: "I remember learning on various occasions that during administrations prior to mine, agencies or employes of the United States Government, acting presumably without a warrant, conducted wiretaps, surrepitious or unauthorized entries, and intercepts of voice and non-voice communications.

In a sharp response to the former President's answers, chairman Frank Church (D-Idaho) of the Senate intelligence committee critized what he called Mr. Nixon's advocacy of a doctrine of "the sovereign presidency" as a "pernicious and dangerous doctrine.

Church acknowledged that his investigation uncovered evidence of abuses in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. But he said the lesson was not that "the illegal actions were justified;" it was that "once government officials start believing they have the power to act secretly and outside the law we have started down a long slippery slope which culminates in Watergate."

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) -If space travelers of the future become stranded in orbit, they may be dribbled to safety inside an oversized white basketball.

Engineers at the Johnson Space Center have designed a zippered ball 34 inches in diamater to be used as an emergency space chamber for transfer of passengers from a disabled spacecraft to a rescue craft.

"It's a lot roomier than it looks," says Elree J. Wilkinson, a Johnson Space Center engineer. But he admits the accommodations are not designed Passengers would climb into an opening in the ball and zip it closed from the inside, like a sleeping bag. The ball is then inflated to four pounds of pressure, becoming a selfcontained survival chamber.

To fit inside, a six-foot-tall man has to collapse into a knot, knees under chin, and duck his head as the opening zips closed. But once the ball is inflated, there's room to spread out

A small, single port hole gives a limited view and the passenger can communicate via a radio headset.

Engineers designed the rescue ball in preparation for operations of the space shuttle, a reusable airplane-like spacecraft that will carry up to seven passengers into orbit during the next decades. Current plans call for the shuttle to carry only three of the highly expensive astronaut-style be used only if the shuttle were to become stranded in orbit. Another shuttle would be launched from earth for the rescue, but the passengers would have to move from one craft to They could do so zipped safely inside the ball.

The rescue balls are designed of the same material as in the astronauts' suits—several layers of insulation and reflective materials, with a tough, air-tight neoprene bladder.

The ball has a handle which would enable a suited astronaut to move it easily from one craft to another in the weightlessness of orbit. Or the handle could be connected to a transfer rope.

The shuttle will also have a new style space suit for the astronauts because the "ready to wear" era has come to space.

During the Apollo and Skylab era, space suits were individually cut for each astronaut. The suits cost about $100,000 each, with, as one astronaut put it, "only one pair of pants."

The shuttle spacesuits come in several different parts, all in stan-dard sizes, and the astronaut merely selects the appropriate parts. The torso part of the suit is separate from the arms and legs and can be used by anyone of the proper size. The arms and legs can be adjusted easily by each astronaut.

Space suits are, in effect, rigid balloons filled with oxygen. In order to move, astronauts must bend the rigid balloon, a chore that required real work and significantly limited movements with the Apollo suit.

The shuttle suit is designed with bearings at the shoulders, waist and elbows. Movement is much easier, but resembles the mechanical action of a robot.

For Russian ears

The bombast in Leonid Brezhnev's address to the 25th Communist party congress, warning the United States not "to put pressure on our home policy," was balanced judiciously with a renewed pledge to seek better relationships between the two countries.

But it is unlikely that the Communist leader's words were intended to influence American foreign policy, anyway.

The pursuit of detente has its skeptics in Moscow just as it does in this country. They must be reassured that the price of accord does not include the sacrifice of Soviet goals of expanding the Communist ideology.

And Washington already is aware that the Soviet approach to peaceful coexistence does not preclude global adventurism such as the intervention in troubled

By focusing his remarks on the United States, perhaps, Brezhnev hoped to discourage reflection by the Russian people on the past failures of the congress to solve the Soviet Union's domestic problems. The shortcomings of previous five-year plans, which the congress creates, are a sensitive issue among Russians clamoring for consumer goods and perturbed by repeated agricultural disasters.

Brezhnev's expressed commitment to peace, armament limitations and rejection of the use of force - designed to relieve Soviet discontent - cannot be considered a valid guide to U. S. policymakers.

The most revealing feature of the Brezhnev talk probably was the exhibition of stamina on the part of the 69-year-old leader, who had been rumored to be ill. He spoke for more than five hours.

Matter of interest

The federal Treasury went to the financial well not too long ago with the sale of almost $7 billion in federal bonds and notes.

But that's only a fraction of the estimated $76 billion budget holdings of the federal debt in deficit for the fiscal year 1976 which ends June 30 or of the total of $90 billion the government will be forced to borrow in calendar

Bombastic debate in Washington has kept most voters aware of the extent to which this nation is operating in red ink.

But the public generally remains in blissful ignorance of the direct cost of its extravagance.

The national debt by June 30 is expected to soar over the $600 billion mark, double what it was a mere 15 years ago. The interest will amount to almost $38 billion next year, making up most of the more modest deficit contemplated by President Ford for LUXURY TRAVEL: The World Bank, Inter-American Development Bank and the International Monetary Fund were set up to lend money to underdeveloped nations. But not all the money goes to help poor countries.

The three prestigious banks have spent more than $500,000 in the last two years, for example, to pay the travel expenses of wives who accompanied bank officials on business

A Treasury Department study showed the World Bank, during a 21month period, "funded 268 trips by spouses," In 44 cases, the bank paid not only for transportation but subsistence. The average wife's travel expenses ran well over $2,000. The Inter-American Development Bank paid the way for 76 wives to accompany their husbands during the same 21-month period, at an average cost of $170. The International Monetary Fund paid the wives' expenses in 26 cases, shelling out an average of more than $2,000 per trip.

Spokesmen for the international banking organizations explained that most spouse travel is permitted only after the husband has been out of the country for months.

gas company was willing to make the Copley News Service One of Nicaragua's colorful airmail for the tobacco project.

In Nicaragua, the fiefdom of the late Gen. Anastasio Somoza and his sons and heirs for over 40 years now, it was inevitable that Somoza interests, along with other tobacco growers, would benefit from modern methods of curing the leaf with gas heaters. But that seemed all to the good. It meant that Nicaraguan government agencies, like INFONAC, would give Moyer what help he needed in getting international financing for the project. In fact, INFONAC did provide the required government guarantee it took for Moyer to obtain a $154,000 U.S. Export Import Bank loan.

Gas Popular, Moyer's company, totally owned by U.S. investors, has spent $530,000 on equipment for the tobacco project sponsored by IN-FONAC. That includes payments on the Export Import Bank loan.

But then came the Arab oil boycott and the cost of the gas that Moyer was purchasing from the Esso Standard Oil (EXXON) distributor in Nicaragua soared. Moyer had to raise the price he was charging INFONAC.

Like many such Latin government agencies, INFONAC was not prompt in paying for what it received from Moyer's company. Over a two-year period, the bill rose to the equivalent of nearly $190,000, and Moyer was unable to meet obligations to creditors. At one time, the Nicaraguan government agency did agree to pay Moyers' creditors in the country out of the funds it owed Gas. Popular, but then it reneged and the creditors embargoed the company.

INFONAC thereupon canceled its contract with Gas Popular in October, 1975, and authorized one of the creditors to rent Moyer's tanks, trucks, trailers and other equipment to a company that started supplying gas to the tobacco growers for the account of Esso Standard Oil. Moyer was left with nothing more than the debts. If INFONAC would pay the debt to Gas Popular, all of Moyer's creditors could be satisfied. If the contract had not been canceled the final payments on all loans would have been paid this year.

Moyer has appealed to Nicaraguan authorities, from President Anastasio Somoza on down, without obtaining

However, Rep. Bob Wilson of San Diego, Calif., who wrote to Somoza inquiring about the matter, did receive a letter from the Nicaraguan president reporting that he had given instructions "to endeavor through all means to find an equitable and just solution for all parties concerned."

Somoza emphasized "our paramount interest in protecting the excellent name Nicaragua has earned throughout many years with regard to its fair treatment and cooperation to foreign investment."

INSIDE REPORT:

Here's why Sen. Scoop Jackson panics the left wing By ROWLAND EVANS

And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - Panic spreading through the left wing of the Democratic party the morning after Sen. Henry M. Jackson's smashing victory in Massachusetts can be directly traced to blue-collar voters in working-class neighborhoods such as Precinct 66 in Lynn. These voters oppose forced racial busing but, unlike their brothers in Boston neighborhoods torn apart by the issue, they are not obsessed with it. That enabled Jackson to overwhelm Gov. George C. Wallace, 139 to 86, in Precinct 66. But of more concern to the liberal left was its new champion, Rep. Morris Udall, running fifth in the precinct with only 46 Thus, liberal operatives are asking themselves this question: Can Mo Udall, the early winner of the elimination contest on the party's left by capturing the upper-income suburbs and college campuses, also capture the all-important blue-collar vote? If so, can he do it soon enough to help his candidacy — say, in Penn-sylvania April 27? The nature of Jackson's win in Massachusetts suggests the answer to both questions

It is not difficult to see why Jackson, picked for fourth place or lower by Massachusetts politicians, nished a strong first. While losing to Wallace in South Boston and other busing crisis spots, he dominated most other blue-collar areas. Outside the busing zone, Wallace was somewhat weaker and Sen. Birch Bayh, billed as the left's blue-collar champion, was breathtakingly im-

More difficult to explain is why non-charismatic, old-shoe Scoop Jackson ran so well. His own explanation of better organization (phone banks), high spending and labor backing begs the question of his vivid distinctiveness among all those Democratic candidates decrying unemployment: his opposition to busing and, perhaps more important, his advocacy of hard-line national security stands. The 11th hour endorsement of Jackson by Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan, now a symbol of renascent nationalism, called attention to this distinctiveness on foreign policy. Outside busing crisis areas, supporting Jackson was clearly the honorable alternative to a

Wallace protest vote. Hence, Udall's problem: having captured the liberal mantle, he must hasten to hide it. On Tuesday night in Boston, he quickly substituted the more acceptable "progressive" for the more dangerous "liberal" in describing himself, But some advisers say he must stop selfidentification in any way as left of center now that all his opponents on the left are gone or going.

But shedding labels will not answer Udall's problems. While he can outbid Jackson in promising jobs, he cannot pecome Pat Moynihan's soul partner or even jettison his pro-busing

The answer, emerging among liberals once Jackson's victory became apparent on election night: attack Scoop Jackson. One political operative from organized labor's left wing encountered Alan Baron, liberal activist who has been busy undermining Jimmy Carter's campaign, in the corridors of Boston's Copley Plaza Hotel that night. His message to Baron was to get off Carter's back and onto Jackson's.

To understand this bizarre tale of Each man swears it was the other.

But Jackson is not nearly so vulnerable as Carter. In contrast to sphinx-like Carter, his positions are clear, his past an open book. Far the clear favorite for the large bag of delegates in New York April 6, which would give him further momentum. Unless Udall can quickly generate blue-collar support, his only favorable primary in the foreseeable future is Wisconsin's "beauty contest" April 6, ne longer binding on delegates and sure to be obscured by the same day's New York results.

Accordingly, some liberals feel their best hope to cripple Jackson is not Udall but Jimmy Carter, whose fourth place in Massachusetts reflects the gradually building criticism of his credibility. Although Carter's voters so far have tended to be right of center, many of his state managers are McGovernite veterans. If Carter, Vietnam hawk, responds to his Massachusetts loss by more sharply defining his fuzzy centrist positions and moving left, he might pick up diehard doves who, paradoxically, will never forgive Jackson for supporting the U.S. effort in Vietnam. Hampering this course, however many tastemakers on the party's left clearly regard Jackson as the lesser evil to Carter - a man they disagree with but like and trust. Baron, veteran liberal leader Joseph Rauh and Sen. George McGovern himself are all in this category.

Indeed, some leaders of the old liberal establishment believe their salvation is Sen. Hubert Humphrey. But Humphrey's candidacy always has been predicated on a Jackson collapse. Key labor leaders, privately prepared to abandon Jackson for Humphrey after a poor showing in Massachusetts, the next morning were telephoning congratulations and affirming their loyalty.

Consequently, the basic question of Democratic politics may be whether Mo Udall, who has generated, sparkling magnetism in the suburban salon, can transport it to the neigh-borhood saloon without deserting the orthodoxies of the left. The question arises because Scoop Jackson, without benefit of charisma, managed to combine bread-and-butter liberalism, a nationalistic foreign policy and public concern for the white majority into a highly respectable and effective victory,

Drugs threat to aged

By HARRY NELSON The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - The drug problems of the elderly are a growing concern of doctors who treat patients past their middle years.

Some older persons abuse mind-altering drugs in an attempt to escape from loneliness and boredom.

Others are unin-tentional victims of what a Berkeley psychiatrist calls the "spaced-out grandma" syndrome — peculiar behavior resulting from the interactions of drugs prescribed for the ailments of old age. Both problems, says Dr. Sidney Cohen, clinical professor of psychiatry at the University of California at Los Angeles medical school, have been less investigated and much less written about than the drug problems of youth,

Yet, say Cohen and Dr.
Wendell R. Lipscomb of Berkeley, drug abuse in the elderly is a significant problem and one which is becoming more common.

The spaced-out grandma syndrome is apt to develop, Lipbscomb says, when patients are overtreated for the multiple conditions common in old age sleeplessness, high blood pressure, arthritis, mood swings, for example.

The problem is apt to rise, according to the psychiatrist, when doctors prescribe multiple prescriptions for these ailments, producing in the patient's system a cocktail of different drugs which can cause strange behavior.

The chemical psychosis clears up as soon as the patient is taken off the drugs, he said. Then the doctors must get together to plan a better treatment program, including drugs, that will not cause trouble.

Treating elderly persons with drugs is a special challenge, according to experts. The problem is that elderly persons respond to drugs differently than younger persons because aging has altered the ways their bodies handle the drugs. Some of the symptoms induced by drugs mimic the stereotyped behavior associated with old age forgetfulness, weakness, confusion, tremor, loss of appetite and anxiety, for example.

According to Donald A. Holloway, a doctor of pharmacology at the Methodist Retirement Home in Durham, N.C., the brain is the organ most apt to be affected by the alterations in drug activity that are due to aging.

In a publication called Professional Pharmacy," Holloway recently outlined the reasons why the elderly may react differently to drugs. Among the reasons are lessened activity of enzymes in the liver which metabolize drugs and increased body fat, which dilutes the effects of some drugs and causes slow release of others stored in fat.

Certain drugs used to relieve depression, called tricyclic antidepressants. may cause greater susceptibility to disorientation, delirium and psychosis in older persons, Holloway said. Hypnotic drugs (used to induce sleep) are metabolized and excreted more slowly in the elderly, possibly leading to their accumulation in the body and overdosage, the pharmacist said. The person may also become confused about whether it is day or night. Two drugs widely used for the pains of arthritis are often induced or reactivated."

Pope's kiss sparks hope

The Washington Post
ROME — Pope Paul VI's dramatic gesture in kneeling to kiss the foot of Metropolitan Meliton of Chalcedon could set the right tone for unity discussions between Orthodox and Roman Catholics.

The unprecedented gesture could indicate that the role of the Pope is service rather than domination. The function of the papacy is expected to be the central issue in the dialogue.

The Orthodox churches are a series of patriarchates. A crucial obstacle to full communion between the Orthodox and the Roman Catholic churches has been Orthodox fear that the Pope, patriarch of the West, might claim not only primacy in the church, which they are prepared to acknowledge, but also sovereignty over it.

The Pope's gesture may allay the fears that he might want to govern Orthodox patriarchates in case of reu-

Now West cannot ruff another diamond because he has no more trumps. Even if you return a heart, it is too late. South steps up with the ace of hearts, draws trumps and runs the diamonds to discard the jack of hearts and club. The rest is easy.

WHAT COMES FIRST First things must come first. When you win the first trick with the ace of diamonds you must return a heart instead of giving your partner a diamond ruff.

If South tries a heart finesse, it loses. If he refuses the heart finesse, West will get the king of hearts later. When trumps are led, you will step right up with the ace of spades to lead diamond. This gives West his diamond ruff and the king of hearts, to defeat the contract. DAILY QUESTION

HOUSTON (AP) - William Odell Hines, 38, was married Wednesday but he couldn't make it to the ceremony. He was in jail.

R. R. Rainosek, 35, Hines' lawyer, stood in for the groom in a proxy marriage to the former Carrie T. Haydel, 66, in Justice of the Peace Kenneth Pacetti's office.

Hines has been detained in the county jail without bond after escaping from the city jail several weeks ago to get married. He was arrested the first time about five years ago on a charge of burglary and was put on probation. He failed to report on schedule to his probation officer, authorities said, and was placed in the city jail shortly before last Christmas.

Rainosek said Hines walked away about six weeks ago to marry his bride-to-be but was taken into custody while the couple was taking blood

He presently is in the county jail awaiting trial for revocation of parole and escape.

"I tried to get Hines out of jail for the wedding but he's not on bond," Rainosek said. "The honeymoon may have to wait.'

Varied events mark

WASHINGTON (AP) - More than one million Americans are involved with more than 26,000 activities planned as part of the nation's 200th birthday party, says John Warner, head of the American Revolution Bicentennial Administration.

"What we are seeing is probably the largest outpouring of national spirit and effort for any nonwartime project in the nation's history," Warner

Most of the effort is grassroots citizen participation in such diverse projects as poetry writing contests, parades, revivals of Colonial Era plays and the like, the federal Bicentennial coordinator said.

"But there are two clouds over the Bicentennial, Neither should be considered serious and both are due at least in part to misunderstandings," he added.

MINORITIES COMPLAIN that they have nothing much to celebrate, and there is growing concern that the observance of our 200th year is somehow being turned into a 'Buy-centennial sell-

Warner said the most vocal minority groups are blacks and American Indians, who complain that their places on the social and economic ladders give them little to cheer about. Some argue that the Bicentennial is shaping up as an orgy of selfcongratulation by the establishment and white ma-

"THE BICENTENNIAL is much more than a time to praise the men and deeds of the establishment,' Warner pointed out. "It is also a time to focus on the unique contributions of the minorities to the American heritage and a time to consider the unfulfilled aspirations of some of our people. It is a time to look ahead, to profit from the mistakes made in the past and to work to improve the quality of life of all Americans."

Washington has helped sponsor, usually with matching funds, local Bicentennial projects that involve minority heritages, he said. There are programs involving some 50 Indian tribes; major projects include construction of museums to display the artifacts of the original Americans, not just for the Bicentennial but for future generations of

Not all such programs are for view only in the United States. A major exhibition, "2,000 Years Of American Indian Art" opens at the Hayward Gallery in London late in 1976.

ON THE COMMERCIALISM issue Warner notes that in a time of tightly pinched budgets, Congress directed that the Bicentennial Administration finance local projects not with tax revenues, but with BA standards and approved by a three-man, independent design panel. They carry the double-star red official symbol.

But these are only a small part of what is on the market. "The word Bicentennial doesn't belong to the government or anyone else," Warner said.

"ANYONE WHO wants to manufacture mementos is free to do so, and thousands of such items are appearing on counters and shelves. A lot of it is shoddy, and I doubt consumers will pick up much of the worst items. But the same laws that guarantee Americans free speech also guarantee freedom of taste and a marketplace largely unregulated except for such things as product safety and deceptive advertising.

"But the Bicentennial celebration is too big to be tarnished, much less pulled down, by such a small facet of the observance as souvenirs," Warner added. "Americans always have bought souvenirs in great quantities and they most probably always will. But they buy them not for the souvenirs alone, but for what they represent. In our case, it will be a national milestone of truly stupendous proportions."

Women's job odds brighter

WASHINGTON (AP) -The job market for this year's male college graduate is bleaker than t was for last year's but the picture is brighter for women expecting degrees, college placement services report.

Reports from 159 colleges and universities, compared with March 1975, show job offers over-all are down 16 per cent for bachelor's degree candidates, 25 per cent for master's candidates and 32 per cent for doctoral students, the College Placement Council reported

"Although still on the negative side," it said, 'these figures are a marked improvement over the picture in January when bachelor's volume was down 37 per cent, master's 33 per cent and doctoral 51 per cent."

The brightest spot in the survey was an in-creased demand for female graduates on the job market, although women represent only 16 per cent of all new job takers at the bachelor's level and 15 per cent at the master's level.

Women who plan to get a bachelor's degree have received 27 per cent more job offers in March than a year ago, while offers to men have dropped 20 per cent. At the master's level, the volume for women is up 36 per cent while for men it is down

13 per cent. On the over-all decline in offers for March, the council, based in Bethlehem, Pa., speculated that companies may be making job offers later this year than in the past. "There are reports from the field that the number of interviews is holding up but that employers are delaying decisions on job offers. So, it is still too early to draw conclusions, spokesman said.

In terms of salary, bachelor's degree candidates getting job offers can expect an average $715 a month if they have humanities majors and up to $1,339 monthly for petroleum engineering,

While most home canners are still enjoying the fruits and vegetables of last year's labors, government and industry officials are looking ahead to the, summer of 1976, trying to avoid shortages like the ones that plagued consumers in 1974 and 1975.

Nancy Harvey Steorts, consumers affairs adviser of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, says manufacturers report they will have more than four billion replacement lids available for this year's canning season. That's about double the 1975 supply.

Will four billion be enough?

BILL KERR of the Kerr Glass Co. of Los Angeles,

one of the major manufacturers, said he hopes so, but refused to make any predictions.

Asked whether the supply would be adequate, Kerr said: "I'd have to ask you what the demand will be. We're going to do a lot better (than last year). We estimate we'll make 50 to 60 per cent more lids this year. Whether that will be enough, we don't know."

Kerr said this year's lid production will be double the number made three years ago. He said the company has been operating three shifts a day, seven days a week since Oct. I to turn out replacement lids for the reusable glass jars used by consumers to preserve a wide variety of foods.

THE COMPANY also has been shipping them through regular distribution channels, and Kerr said people have been buying "right through the winter." He said company representatives report the lids "don't remain on the store shelf longer than over-

The Ball Corp. of Muncie, Ind., another major manufacturer, also is producing lids at a record rate.

Like Kerr, Ball has added new equipment and spokesman Bill Brantley said the lids will come off the assembly line at the rate of 1,200 a minute. Last year, Brantley said, Ball produced four or five replacement lids for every new jar and lid combination. This year, he said the ratio will be seven to one tion. This year, he said, the ratio will be seven to one.

THE CANNING lid crunch began in 1974 when soaring food prices prompted millions of Americans to turn to home gardening. The increased demand, combined with tight supplies of tinplate and soda ash, created a shortage.

Production was stepped up last year, but the lids disappeared as quickly as they were put on the shelves. There were reports of hoarding by worried consumers and claims that the industry was

The Federal Trade Commission, after a sevenweek investigation, said it found no evidence of collusion on the part of the manufacturers, wholesalers and retaliers. Instead, the FTC said, the shortage resulted from "unprecedented demand which the industry was unprepared to suppply despite substantial increases in ... production."

NO ONE REALLY anticipated the increased interest in home preserving of foods. "Five years ago," recalled Kerr, "we could hardly give the lids

Kerr said that despite the large volume produced, lids account for a relatively small portion of the com-pany's sales which totaled $229 million last year. He declined to give specifics, but said that jar, cap and lid sales generally account for only 9 or 10 per cent of (Kerr also makes commercial glass containers like mayonnaise jars — the ones you should not use

THE DEPARTMENT of Agriculture, meanwhile is continuing its campaign to make sure that home canners follow safety procedures to avoid problems like botulism, a sometimes-fatal food poisoning.

Botulism is caused by toxin formed during the growth of a bacteria and can result from improperly processed items.

Among the USDA's suggestions:

—Don't try to take shortcuts or experiment. Follow tested methods such as those in the department's Bulletin No. 8 on Home Canning of Fruits and —Use only jars, cans and lids made especially for home canning.

 —Do no reuse lids.

Do not use overripe food.

Do not overpack foods.

FOLLOW THE TIME and temperature directions for foods and container sizes listed in the in-

Test the seal according to instructions. (There were problems in late 1973 and early 1974 with some lids that did not seal because of faulty manufacturing, but the problem has been corrected.)

—Do not used canned foods showing signs of spoilage like bulging lids, furny smells or mold. If there's any doubt, throw it out without tasting.

—Boil home canned vegetables covered for at least 10 minutes before serving and be particularly careful with tomatoes. The amount of acid in the tomatoes can vary widely and this can affect the growth of bacteria. Check with local agricultural experts for advice.

First toll-free list published

CLAVERACK, N.Y. (AP) — Three years ago, Paul Montana was trying to find a toll-free hotel reser-vations number. His search was unsuccessful, but he has turned the frustration into profit.

Montana, 64, has compiled the "Toll Free Digest," listing thousands of "800" numbers that can be called free of charge.

The directory's main focus is travel and leisure, and it has hundreds of listings for hotels and motels, both in this country and abroad, and for airlines, ski resorts and car rentals.

Other listings include Self Improvement, Fats Off, Acupuncture Chinese and Internal Revenue Service.

The idea for the digest, which sells for $2, came when Montana had to make a toll call to a Uties, N.Y., hotel because he couldn't find the toll-free listing. Later, his wife found the 800 number in a

"Why didn't some idiot put all those toll-free numbers into one book?" he asked and followed up with his own answer: "Why not us?"

The Montana family went to work, combing magazine advertisements, sales brochures, catalogues and the small print in newspapers.

Montana said telephone company personnel refused to furnish him with listings, saying they did not want to conflict with their regular toll-call average.

(Since the book came out, Montana says, the phone company has called with questions, saying its customers want to know where they can get the

The family finally produced a 30-page directory filled with almost 3,000 toll-free numbers and some The directory's cover reminds customers: Somewody out there wants to talk to you..."

Francisco Giant pitcher John Mon-tefuaco is every bit the flake who boldly predicted that he'd strike out Johnny Bench and a dozen other Cincinnati Reds before a game last, summer. "The Count" didn't quite make good on his prediction, but had the kind of year that won Rookie Pitcher of 1975 for him.

"John wasn't your wet behind the ears rookie," Denny noted. "He's probably 25 or 28. When he was with us at Amarillo two years ago, our trainer, Ducky Crandall, reported that John's locker was empty, Ducky you want my best pitcher or the pit-cher with the best record? John had lost some tough decisions and his 8-9 record really wasn't that impressive.

"If you want my best pitcher, it's Montefusco. He has outpitched Minton 2 to 1 in my book," Denny told the Giants brass." So Montefusco was hustled off to Phoenix, where his stay

Before long he was with San Francisco for the September finish and made headlines by standing the NL champion Dodgers on their ear and hitting a home run to boot.

Last year, he made Denny's judgement look good when he compiled a freshman record of 15-8 with a stingy 2.88 earned run average. Not bad for a guy the Midland Cubs called "cousin", well out of ear shot, of course, during much of the 1974 $90,000 over the next three years."

Bench fears baseball openers in jeopardy

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — 'We're in the 11th hour of something that is jeopardizing the baseball

That was the dour statement of Cincinnati star Johnny Bench after baseball's negotiating committee and some 50 players met eye-to-eye Thursday in a two-hour, 25-minute exploratory session at the Tampa airport hotel.

There was little reason for op-timism, indicated by Bench's observation that negotiations for a new labor contract between the major leagues and the Players Association still were stalemated.

"If we don't get off dead center and get it done by the middle of next week, the start of the season could be jeopardized," Bench said.

But both sides agreed to remain in Florida for marathon negotiating sessions starting today.

BENCH, WHO recently signed a $200,000 contract with the world champion Reds, was one of those instrumental in getting together the owners' committee and the Players Association executive committee of 24 for an exchange of ideas. A number of other players attended the session as observers.

Marvin Miller, executive director of he Players Association, confirmed Bench's pessimism. Miller said the wo sides were no closer to a solution. He said the main issue of responsibility for liability in the event of a compromise on the controversial reserve clause remains unsolved.

The owners still were adamant on the reserve issue, despite an arbitrator's decision in the case of pitchers Andy Messersmith and Dave' McNally, which permits a player to play one year, then an option year and then becomes a free agent. Two federal courts have upheld the right of the arbitrator to make such a deci-

Lynn agrees to $250,000

BOSTON (AP) — Fred Lynn, the American League's Most Valuable Player and Rookie of the Year in 1975, will sign a three-year contract for a total of about $250,000, it was reported Quoting a source close to Lynn's negotiations with the AL champion Boston Red Sox, The Boston Globe reported: "Lynn will sign within the next 10 days. He'll sign a three-year deal worth about $250,000.

"That $1.3 million story about his contract is pie in the sky. That's something his lawyer just threw out last December as a feeler.

"He wanted a $500,000 insurance policy, disability deals, and things like that. In the end, he should sign for something like $80,000, $85,000 and

Regardless of the number of years finally agreed upon, the owners want it to begin immediately, eliminating the arbitrator's one-and-one option ruling. The players refuse, claiming they can not legally give up the right granted them by the arbitrator.

The Players Association says any player could sue the organization if his one-and-one right is abrogated by a collective bargaining compromise. The owners claim there is no liability, that the bargaining agreement supercedes the player contract.

"We kicked it around, but it still comes back to the liability problem, the legality is the issue," said Bench. "I don't know if we'll ever get over that load. Until that logjam is broken, it doesn't make any difference how many (option) years we negotiate."

Bench added, "They (the owners) have got to realize that we have one-and-one and it's here to stay."

Actually, the one-and-one issue would be effective for two years (1976)

As a result of the impasse, the owners have refused to open spring training camps, and many players are in Florida at their own expense to get in shape for the scheduled season.

"Our principle push in getting negotiations resolved," said Fit-zgerald, "is so we can open the camps. Whether we open the camps depends on substantial progress in reaching an agreement in the point of the reserve area."

Bench said that many of the players now training on junior and senior high school and college fields, wearing shorts, old sweatshirts, and using equipment bought collectively, can't stay much longer.

"THEY CAN'T afford it." Bench said. "They're paying rent back home

One of the knotty problems in the negotiations is the question of how many players would be willing to wave the one-and-one option if a compromise is reached.

Bench said that would be impossible to determine until the players

The Tar Heels are hoping to come back in the NCAA playoffs Saturday from an Atlantic Coast Conference bust. And to do that, they'll have to come up to Alabama's rebounding

"Alabama's probably the best offensive rebounding team we'll see," says North Carolina Coach Dean Smith. "Alabama is a very quick team. I don't know if we've played anybody with better quickness and size. They like to fast break a good bit and they like to run.

SMITH, UNHAPPY with the Tar Heels' defense in their stunning loss to Virginia in the ACC playoff final last week, accented that element of the game in tuneups for the firstround Mideast Regionals at Dayton, Ohio.

"I was terribly disappointed with our defense against Virginia," Smith noted. "Virginia shot 67 per cent against us in the second half. No matter what kind of defense you're playing, that should never happen."

Guided by Mitch Kupchak and Phil Ford, North Carolina won the regular-season ACC championship before the upset by Virginia in the always-frantic league payoffs. Alabama, powered by center Leon Douglas, displaced Kentucky as the Southeastern Conference champion

A POSSIBLE explanation of the sudden surge in Crenshaw's golfing fortunes-he's already scored two victories this year and shared the lead with Hubert Green in Thursday's first round of the $200,000 Doral Open-may be a lesson he received from his father last winter.

"He used to be a scratch golfer, but he's about a five handicapper now,' Crenshaw said of his father, Charles, an Austin, Tex., attorney.

Bobby Knight, left, coach of the year, and Scott May, player of the year, compare notes before NCAA tourney.

Knight garners Coach of Year

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) -Bobby Knight, who produced two All-Americans and guided Indiana to its second consecutive undefeated regular season and the nation's No. 1 ranking, was named College Basketball Coach of the Year today by The Associated Press.

The designation of Knight as Coach of the Year followed Thursday's selection of Hoosier forward Scott May and center Kent Benson as firstteam AllAmericans and of May as the National College Basketball Player of Knight, winning the honor for the second straight year, beat out Tom Young of Rutgers 170134 in voting by sports writers and broadcasters throughout the country.

The third-rated Scarlet Knights were the only other undefeated major college team and finished the regular season at 28-0, the best record in the school's history.

Al McGuire of second-ranked Marquette was a distant third in coach of the year voting at 77 points, followed by Dean Smith of No. 5 North Carolina at 56 points; C.M. Newton of No. 8 Alabama, 27 points, and Digger Phelps of No. 7 Notre Dame, 23 points.

nearly 24 points a game, is a repeater from last year's All-America team. Benson, a 6-11 junior, averaged 17 points and led the team in rebounding and field goal accuracy to earn All-America honors for the first time.

"I'm tremendously pleased at The AP selection of Scott May and Kent Benson to the AllAmerica team, and particularly that of Scotty as Player of the Year," Knight said.

'That pleases me much more than Coach of the Year selection, although appreciate that honor and I'm greatful. But let's not kid ourselves, it's those players out there who did that for me.'

Knight, just 35 years old, is finishing his 11th year as a college head coach. He compiled a 102-50 record in six years at Army and has an amazing 120-20 mark and four straight Big Ten championships in five seasons at Indiana.

May, described by pro scouts as "the complete player," is one of the reasons for Knight's success.

He outscored Notre Dame's Adrian Dantley 133-76 in the nationwide vote for player of the year.

Dream duo to end marriage

CINCINNATI (AP) — Johnny Bench and the beautiful blonde model he saw in a toothpaste commercial and married two months later are to dissolve their marriage three weeks after their first anniversary.

"We simply agreed to disagree and go our separate ways," Bench said in Tampa, Fla. The Cincinnati Reds' catcher is among the leading players gathered to try to settle the dispute between the Major League Baseball Players Association and the 24 owners.

"It is a personal and private matter," said Bench, contacted Thursday night.

Reuven Katz, attorney for the couple, refused to say when papers would be filed for dissolution of the marriage in Cincinnati under Ohio's no-fault divorce law.

"I am not going to file anything Friday," Katz said, adding that he could 'not comment on the couple's personal life. Vickie Bench, 26, the former Miss

South Carolina from Mount Pleasant, S.C., returned last month to New York City to resume her modeling career. The 28-year-old Bench startled friends last month announcing he planned to attend the Mardi Gras in New Orleans alone. He went on from there to Tampa. The couple's wedding Feb. 21, 1975 in a downtown Cincinnati church was attended by 900 guests and so many were at the reception, one writer said it looked like "only the immediate

PRO BASKETBALL — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Los Angeles Lakers, blasted NBA officiating in general and labeled referee Bob Rakel as a racist. "He may not be, but I know he doesn't like me." The comments were prompted when Jabbar reached over Dave Cowens shoulder Wenesday and was tagged with an expelling sixth foul. Jabbar claimed he got "nothing but the ball."

The 7-2 center yelled, "racist" at Rakel as he left the game. Cowems commented, "That wasn't much of a foul. It embarrassed me even though it went in our favor."..

Freshman They don't make 'em like Maxie anymore

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - It was 43 years ago this week that he was in the midst of three successful defenses of his world light-heavyweight champion-ship in five weeks: Al Stillman Feb. 22, 1933, in St. Louis, Ed Heuser March 10 and Bob Godwin March 24 in New York.

They really don't make 'em like that anymore. Wow, Maxie Rosenbloom had 289 professional fights. Some years in his 17-year ring career, he headlined as often as once a week. He was stopped only twice, and that was some kind of miracle. Nobody could ever hit him. Without drink or smoke, he was the life of any party. He made more money in show biz than in boxing.

At 71, Rosenbloom died pretty much alone and in a silent stupor last Saturday in a South Pasadena rest home. In the last few years of the seven he was confined with Paget's Disease eating at his bones, he was a pathetic sight. Friends would go to see him. He didn't recognize anybody. He couldn't speak. They stopped going. What's the use?

LAST SIGHTED in public at a Friars Club luncheon, though, he was still the life of the party. For years, the Friars Club was his last act. Every lunch, every dinner. "Here's Maxie" ... And he always left them laughing. That was his gift. He was the original "dese" and "dose" guy, the mold they made for the punch-

The doctors said he took too many punches and there was "good deal of damage to his brain." That's got to be a lie. Nobody ever hit Maxie. He slapped and slipped and danced. But he looked as if he'd been hit. The twisted nose was smashed all over his magnificent face.

And even before age and disease reduced him, he sounded like it. At the end, it was awful. He was speechless, H. Allen Smith, the humorist who died just the other day, regarded Rosenbloom as his favorite interview among thousands. It was in the days Maxie was running his popular saloon and restaurant here, appearing on Broadway and making movies. The bucks were rolling in. That was a couple hundred years ago.

SMITH MET HIM in a New York hotel room. One of Rosenbloom's

brothers had come to put the touch on Maxie. Maxie was always the easiest of touches when he had it. But he was disappointed this time. His young brother was the one person Maxie figured had himself pretty well

There was a lot of chatter. "Then you'll give me some, huh, Maxie? You'll give me some dough so I can fix it with the bookie?" his brother finally

"Sure, kid," Maxie said. "Listen, you want to come to my broadcast tomorrow night?"

"What broadcast?" his brother asked. "What broadcast do you have reference to, Maxie?"

"My broadcast, you dope, Maxie said. "Don't you know by now, your brother is on the air."

"Oh, your broadcast. Oh sure, Maxie. I listen every week. I must have misunderstood you. I never miss it. I think you are wonderful ... But about the money."

THE BROTHER at last departed. "That's the way it is," Maxie said. "I would have swore on a stack of Bibles he wasn't after dough. Sometimes I wish I was a package wrapper in a store or something. It is not only my relatives. It is every man, woman and child I have ever known in my whole life since I was born down on Attorney

Maxie brought in his new wife to introduce her all around. "Look at her," Rosenbloom beamed. "She was educated in a convent. She can talk faster than H.J. Kaltenborn and she's smarter. Tell what you were doing, honey, when you first met me."

"I am a child psychologist," Mrs. Rosenbloom said: "I had a group of children with subnormal mentalities. Children with a chronological age of. say, 16 and a mental age of 4 or 5."
"Morons," Maxie said, "She gave up morons for me."

Spring training no longer needed as 'dry out' tank

By COLMAN MCCARTHY The Washington Post

VERO BEACH, Fla. - The car rolled through the gates of Dodgertown and parked at the corner of Jackie Robinson Avenue and Roy Campanella Drive. A father and his boys moved toward the vehicle to look in th window. "See if it's one of the players," the father directed. "that looks like Steve Garvey." It was a frustrated search party. It was not the slugging Mr. Garvey at all who drove into the 340-acre spring training complex of the Los Angeles Dodgers. Nor was it any of the other 45 baseball players scheduled to converge here in early March to chase fungos, play pepper or otherwise squeeze the juices of the Grapefruit League. Instead, the man in the car was an Indiana steelworker taking his annual three weeks vacation to watch the workouts. He has been coming to Vero Beach for years, attaching his jumper cables to the energy the Dodgers have been sparking in him since the Flatbush days at Ebbets Field. Hollywood once made a baseball movie called "It Happens Every Spring," but this year it is dif-

The club owners and players are arguing with the umpire over the legality of the reserve clause, a contractual dispute about the players' talents and their rights to sell them. Instead of "play ball," both sides plan to play dead. Across the state in Sarasota, a few rookies are doing windsprints at the Chicago White Sox camp, but none of the other training camps - with 600 jobs available to some 1,000 aspirants - has opened.

Why open them at all? However deep the institution of spring training has sunk into the consciousness of the fans, or however giddy the baseball writers become over six weeks of loafing in the Sun Belt, little that happens in the camps affects either the quality of play during the season or the public's appreciation of big league

THE ORIGINAL purpose of spring training was less to prepare the players for the advancing summer than to detoxify them from the sport of the reteating winter. Babe Ruth March fat and groggy from his offseason extravagances. For the wild bunch — the Dizzy Deans, the McGinnitys, the Gas House gangs — the camps were dry-out tanks. When Cap Anson, the Calvinist manager of the old Chicago White Stockings, invented spring training in 1886 his players grouched at his commands to slim down. Anson's efforts were seen as a stunt to the other teams, but when the Chicagos won the pennant that year the odd way became the accepted stay in shape, because that't what their smart agents shout back at them. Flesh can't be peddled if it's flabby. Job security is pressure enough to persuade today's Garveys, Lynns, Benches, Hunters and Fisks to keep themselves fit and limbered between October and April. The day-care centers that Cap Anson needed for his grownup babies aren't necessary for today's players, lawyered and agented to excess.

BY CLOSING the training camps, and telling the players to get in shape on their own, the owners would save the considerable sums needed to feed, house and transport their springtime charges. If the owners were as smart about customer relations as about reserve clauses, these savings would be passed on to the fans, the regular season customers whose support even the mighty Walter O'Malley and Charley Finley need. Reduced ticket prices would surely produce better gates than "bat days" and other front-office hypes.

To cancel spring training might deny the old folks in Florida and Arizona the tun of putting some coals into the hot stove league, but this problem has a solution. Let the teams play regular-season games in such places as Vero Beach (The Dodger stadium seats more than 5,000), St. Petersburg, Lakeland and Daytona. The attendance the teams get in some of the Florida tank towns is likely to be more than they get or deserve in the big cities. Many of the teams (Detroit and Montreal, for two) are rostered by such bush-league talent that their regular season is little more than an extension of spring training

Angry grid fan charges OUTD Club with 'rape'

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - Dick Wegener called it "rape" Thursday when he was notified that the Oklahoma Touchdown Club was hitting him and other junior club members for an addidtional $50 for priority seating rights at the OUTexas football war this fall.

Wegener said a letter from Jerry Keen, business manager for the Touchdown Club, advised that club members making a contribution of $100 or more to the university are gong to get their Texas priority.

"Last year," Keen's letter read, 'you contributed $50 as your Junior Touchdown Club dues, which established your priority. You need to send us an additional $50 to maintain your 1976 Texas seating priority."

That kind of bothered Wegener

"You could say I got—at being raped for everything OU's athletic department and regents can rape us for," he said.

"Before, they fixed it so you'd get better tickets if you'd pledge more money, but at least you could still get in to see the ball game even if you didn't contribute much.

"Now it seems like you're not even going to get in to see the Texas game unless you pay 'em that $50 more."
G. T. Blankenship, Touchdown Club

president, said the policy of requiring the extra $50 donation from junior members was strictly the university's. He said the club was just the

Leaping Lee key to Ducks

NEW YÖRK (AP) — He leaps over tall press tables, scores baskets in a single bound and seems faster than a speeding bullet.

Ronnie Lee, pilot of Oregon's wild "Kamikaze Kids", plays basketball better horizontally than many players do vertically, it appears.

"He is as intense as any college player I've ever seen," says pro scout Neil Johnson of the Portland Trail Blazers. "He has as much influence on a game as Bill Walton did when he was at UCLA."

LEE'S CIRCUS-like stunts will be on display when the Ducks play in the 39th National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden. Oregon has the Ducks play in the 39th National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden. Oregon has drawn a first-round bye and will appear in a quarter-final game Monday night against the winner of Saturday's San Francisco-UNC-Charlotte opener.

"Because of his overall excellence, I think that Ronnie Lee is college basketball's player of the year," says his coach, Dick Harter. "There are players who score more, but none as dominating in the clutch. No one has ever competed for loose balls and done the little things that Ronnie has done continually for Oregon over the past four years. No player puts all these things together like Ron Lee."

Harter calls Lee the foundation of his team. He's more than that. He's the symbol of Oregon's flammore than that. He's the symbol of Oregon's flamboyant style—diving and skittering after loose balls with reckless abandon. LEE HAS scored more points, handed out more assists and played more minutes than anyone in Oregon's basketball history. He also holds the school record for floor burns and hurling his body through

"I've always been active, I guess," Lee says.
"When I was little, I'd be doing anything—climbing fences, breaking windows, jumping from second-story windows. My mother said it was impossible to keep me in my shoes." keep me in my shoes."

Harter's program at Oregon weeds out the timid and Lee has fit into the tough mold with flying colors. One of Harter's practice "games" is to roll the ball between two players and have them dive, scuffle and scrape for the missile. For those who don't give 100 per cent in these sessions, Harter has his players climb a long rope at the Ducks' MacArthur Court.

"HIS PROGRAM takes a certain type of person, one with a lot of character," says Lee. "That's good hereaves that way there are no individuals on the comedy's particular plot gimmickry. Comedian Woody Allen's zany farce centers around ol' Born Loser Allan Felix who'd like to make it with the opposite sex but hasn't the knack. A film buff, Felix idolizes the late Humphrey Bogart and Bogart's smooth way with women, and in his fantasies relies on the ghost of Bogey to give him advice on "how to handle dames." But it remains for friend Linda to be the one to remove Felix's neurotic hangups, his self-defeatism, by proving rather conclusively that some women find him appealing despite all his shortcomings. The play closes on the premise that a glorious and very rewarding new chapter in Felix's life is about to begin.

Altogether satisfactory and believable as the inept Felix is David Willis, a newcomer on the MCT stage. Willis seems to have a real knack for delivering Woody Allen's drolleries and throw-away witticisms in just the right off-hand manner.

Good, too, in their respective characterizations are Linda Thorsen Bond as Linda, a girl with her own hangups and neuroses, and Bill Salt as husband Dick, a business-minded young man with a telephone syndrome. They make an attractive stage couple.

I had mixed feelings about Monty Cottier's opening night performance in the role of Bogart. I happen to be a fan of Cottier's, from his previous work on the MCT stage, so I know he is capable of delivering a good characterization. As Bogart he was not uniformly believable sometimes yes, sometimes no - and it was not always possible to understand his lines clearly, possibly because of those shiny Bogart teeth he'd been fitted with. I think he might be more convincing as Bogey without the special dental plates. At any rate, one hopes the situation will improve.

Providing lots of scenic interest to the proceedings are a number of attractive girls, some of them newcomers onstage. They include Linda Salt, LaJuana Blanco, Charlotte Morris, Lessie Neill, Jan Rever, Jill Poage, Lisa DeMasi and Melinda Evans. Mini-skirts may be "out" in 1976 but they look very good indeed on various of these young women. ("Sam" has a '60s time setting you remember.)

The National Gallery will not disclose how much it paid for its five cutouts. All were bought with funds provided by the late Ailsa Mellon Bruce and all are being saved for eventual display in the Gallery's new $92 million East Building, to open in 1978 on the Mall.

The National Gallery's largest cutout is the 12-foothigh, 33-foot-long "Grand Composition with Masques" of 1953. The others are "Beasts of the Sea" of 1950, "Venus" and "Woman with Amphora and Pomegranates," both of 1952, and "La Negresse," a 20-foot-long work also dated 1952.

These cutouts will be shown together in a sky-lit gallery atop one of the new building's towers. Matisse, who was born in 1869 and died in 1954. spent the last years of his life making wall-size works as Director for Youth Affairs - Pam Powell was asked if she were crushed. "Partially," she replied.

Hours after the decision was announced, one White House staffer called requesting information on the internship program. "Funny you should ask ...," said Pam Powell.

Her mother is another one with what you'd call a positive attitude. Also a rather persuasive one, since she considers herself and her late husband responsible for turning "Ronnie Reagan" into a Republican.

'Pam surprises even me," says June Allyson, who adopted her at two weeks. "No matter what she does, she loves it." June Allyson does not mind one bit that her daughter chose politics over acting. Nor does she mind that Pam Powell at 27 is (like her younger brother) still single.

"I think they're both looking for another Dick Powell," she says referring to the father who died when Pam was 14. "Gosh, he was the greatest man. When he went ... I still can't say 'died' ... When he died they broke the mold.

In fact the only thing she does mind about a daughter she "never had any problems with" is that she's become quite heavy. ,'As a mother that makes me mad," says June Allyson, who weighs 87 pounds, "cause I'm so skin-

Pam Powell sits, a tiny woman ("Five-foot-nothing," she is fond of saying), a blonde, blue-eyed woman wearing a good amount of jewelry and make-up, with a chirrupy, alert attitude that belies her bulk.

She sits in the sea of yellow furnishings of her apartment, surrounded by her possessions: gilt lamps created out of statues of Renaissance ladies, out of a samovar; a pet rock; a rubbery Mickey Mouse; a collage featuring press clips of all the events that occurred on the day of her christening at All Saints Episcopal Church in Los Angeles. Truman flew to Key West for a two-week vacation that day. She's got her brother's collage, too; he wants his back, but "I'm the oldest. I get to keep 'em.'

But underneath all that determined brightness of California brought East, one senses an equal amount of wariness, even nervousness about her. "Gee, I wish I could see what you're writing right now," she'll say over the phone. Or, "May I ask why you're doing an article on me?"

Well, part of the reason is, she's been concerned with our nation's youth through two administrations, and not many people know a lot about her. Which may be exactly the way she'd like to keep it. Her guardedness extends to her social life as well.

She won't, for instance, say whom she's dating, just that there's no one serious, and that it's been two years since she last fell in love ("long enough to be able to get some work done"). Also that she "can't keep a plant alive or a pet - let alone sustain

And for emphasis she points to a tragic wilt of a stalk, bent low over its

The other reason for the interest is the age-old child of famous parents question. "I really give what sounds like a facetious answer," she replies; but she is never facetious. "I had a terrific normal happy childhood even though I know it wasn't ... Who did you talk to about me?"

Well, among others, a person who had heard her childhood included a birthday party attended by an

"And a clown," adds June Allyson, 'the clown was a friend of ours." "Other people had elephants at their birthday parties," says Pam

"But I don't think she was conscious of the fact we were movie stars," June Allyson continues. "When she was in elementary school, we did a mother-daughter fashion show, and when we got out of the car, one of the school kids said, 'Isn't that the famous movie star, June Allyson?' and Pam said, 'No. That's my

And so, Pam Powell says, childhood was, "spending your summer days on a (movie) set ... and having your horse for a day." It was living on a farm in L.A. and watching a pregnant cow fall into your large swimming pool. Also watching Dick Powell and June Allyson, all dressed up to go to a party, fishing the cow out of the pu'l. It was making appearances on the June Allyson Dupont Show and the Dick Powell Anthology.

"There just never seemed to be any problems," agrees Frances Bergen (the wife of Edgar), a family friend who considered young "Pammy" an enchanting child." Yes, she was an A student at her Catholic high school; yes, she gave the valedictory speech.

And it was, according to her mother, the same at Marquette University. And life was, according to Pam Powell, most pleasurable afterward, too: at the Orange Coast Daily Pilot (where, one writer says, "Her writing was fair. She didn't set the disaster, either"); at the Los Angeles public relations firm where she dealt with all the Hollywood types. She was earning $150 a week, but when she asked for a raise, she says, they told her, "Pam, we really appreciate the job you're doing; but you'll probably be married in a few years. Why should we invest in you?"

And so she did something rather spectacular. Without saying a word to her bosses, she upped and flew to New York City. "I got buggy, itchy. I thought 'I cannot put up with this.' I was fighting with my boyfriend too. And I called my immediate boss from New York. Said, 'I'm not coming into work today."

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The financially troubled Museum of Modern Art in New York has agreed to pay about $1 million for "The Swimming Pool" of 1952, a huge, late paper "cutout" by Henri Matisse.

Five similar Matisse collages - none yet placed on view here - were acquired by the National Gallery of Art in 1973.

The Modern, whose operating deficits have averaged more than $1 million a year, will sell works from its collections to pay for its Matisee, a 54-foot composition once displayed in the artist's dining room in France.

The National Gallery will not disclose how much it paid for its five cutouts. All were bought with funds provided by the late Ailsa Mellon Bruce and all are being saved for eventual display in the Gallery's new $92 million East Building, to open in 1978 on the Mall.

The National Gallery's largest cutout is the 12-foothigh, 33-foot-long "Grand Composition with Masques" of 1953. The others are "Beasts of the Sea" of 1950, "Venus" and "Woman with Amphora and Pomegranates," both of 1952, and "La Negresse," a 20-foot-long work also dated 1952.

These cutouts will be shown together in a sky-lit gallery atop one of the new building's towers. Matisse, who was born in 1869 and died in 1954, spent the last years of his life making wall-size works

Hours after the decision was announced, one White House staffer called requesting information on the internship program. "Funny you should ask ...," said Pam Powell.

Her mother is another one with what you'd call a positive attitude. Also a rather persuasive one, since she considers herself and her late husband responsible for turning "Ronnie Reagan" into a Republican. "Pam surprises even me," says June Allyson, who adopted her at two weeks. "No matter what she does, she loves it." June Allyson does not mind one bit that her daughter chose politics over acting. Nor does she mind that Pam Powell at 27 is (like her younger brother) still single.

as Director for Youth Affairs - Pam

Powell was asked if she were crushed.

"Partially," she replied.

"I think they're both looking for another Dick Powell," she says referring to the father who died when Pam was 14. "Gosh, he was the greatest man. When he went ... I still can't say 'died' ... When he died they broke the mold."

In fact the only thing she does mind about a daughter she "never had any problems with" is that she's become quite heavy. ,'As a mother that makes me mad," says June Allyson, who weighs 87 pounds, "cause I'm so skin-

Pam Powell sits, a tiny woman ("Five-foot-nothing," she is fond of saying), a blonde, blue-eyed woman Wearing a good amount of jewelry and make-up, with a chirrupy, alert at-titude that belies her bulk.

She sits in the sea of yellow furnishings of her apartment, surrounded by her possessions: gilt lamps created out of statues of Renaissance ladies, out of a samovar; a pet rock; a rubbery Mickey Mouse; a collage featuring press clips of all the events that occurred on the day of her christening at All Saints Episcopal Church in Los Angeles. Truman flew to Key West for a two-week vacation that day. She's got her brother's collage, too; he wants his back, but "I'm the oldest. I get to keep 'em.

But underneath all that determined brightness of California brought East, one senses an equal amount of wariness, even nervousness about her. "Gee, I wish I could see what you're writing right now," she'll say over the phone. Or, "May I ask why you're doing an article on me?"

Well, part of the reason is, she's been concerned with our nation's youth through two administrations, and not many people know a lot about her. Which may be exactly the way she'd like to keep it. Her guardedness extends to her social life as well.

She won't, for instance, say whom she's dating, just that there's no one serious, and that it's been two years since she last fell in love ("long enough to be able to get some work done"). Also that she "can't keep a plant alive or a pet - let alone sustain

And for emphasis she points to a tragic wilt of a stalk, bent low over its

The other reason for the interest is the age-old child of famous parents question. "I really give what sounds like a facetious answer," she replies; but she is never facetious. "I had a terrific normal happy childhood even though I know it wasn't ... Who did you talk to about me?"

Well, among others, a person who had heard her childhood included a birthday party attended by an

"And a clown," adds June Allyson, "the clown was a friend of ours." "Other people had elephants at their birthday parties," says Pam

'But I don't think she was conscious of the fact we were movie stars,' June Allyson continues. "When she was in elementary school, we did a mother-daughter fashion show, and when we got out of the car, one of the school kids said, 'Isn't that the

famous movie star, June Allyson?' and Pam said, 'No. That's my

And so, Pam Powell says, childhood was, "spending your summer days on a (movie) set ... and having your horse for a day." It was living on a farm in L.A. and watching a pregnant cow fall into your large swimming pool. Also watching Dick Powell and June Allyson, all dressed up to go to a party, fishing the cow out of the pc-1. It was making appearances on the June Allyson Dupont Show and the Dick Powell Anthology.

"There just never seemed to be any problems," agrees Frances Bergen (the wife of Edgar), a family friend who considered young "Pammy" an enchanting child." Yes, she was an A student at her Catholic high school; yes, she gave the valedictory speech. All of that ...

And it was, according to her mother, the same at Marquette University. And life was, according to Pam Powell, most pleasurable afterward, too: at the Orange Coast Daily Pilot (where, one writer says, "Her writing was fair. She didn't set the world on fire; but she wasn't a total disaster, either"); at the Los Angeles public relations firm where she dealt with all the Hollywood types. She was earning $150 a week, but when she asked for a raise, she says, they told her, "Pam, we really appreciate the job you're doing; but you'll probably be married in a few years. Why should we invest in you?"

And so she did something rather spectacular. Without saying a word to her bosses, she upped and flew to New York City. "I got buggy, itchy. I thought 'I cannot put up with this.' I was fighting with my boyfriend too. And I called my immediate boss from New York. Said, 'I'm not coming into work today."

That was in 1970. She studied singing; she studied acting. It was, she says, "Kinda something I always wanted to do. But I didn't want to ad-

Yes, the name helped, and she admits it. She appeared in "The Secret Storm," "The Edge of Night." She modeled for De Beers diamonds and Sarah Coventry jewelry. She had, in short, "a real good time."

Credit records privacy sought

By NANCY L. ROSS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - An airline executive told how an Internal Revenue Service agent burst into his office one day demanding the names of all persons who had flown to Las Vegas during the year. The executive objected and asked the agent to get a subpoena for the documents. The agent replied, "You want a subpoena? You got one." He whipped an administrative subpoena out of his pocket.

Sensing the IRS was on a "fishing expedition," the executive told the agent, "Oh yeah? I'll see you in court" (where the subpoena's validity could be tested by a judge). The agent never showed up.

SUCH CONDUCT on the part of the agent was routine; on the part of the executive, unusual. In three days of testimony last month before the Privacy Protection Study Commission, representatives of airlines, hotels, car rental agencies and credit card issuers told how they cusotmarily acceeded to requests for information on their cutomers' whereabouts, purchases and contacts from law enforcement officials, government agencies, private attorneys and even foreign governments, usually without the cardholder's knowledge or permission.

Concern over the misuse of confidential personal financial information has prompted the recent introduction of bills in both houses of Congress to restrict dissemination of this data and to inform the customer who is getting what informationa about

AT LAST COUNT, there were approximately a quarter-billion credit cards in circulation, or more than one for every man, woman and child in the country, according to Arthur Anderson & Co. Another 150 million dormant accounts are on file. with credit cards.

There are an estimated 2,000 credit reporting bureaus in the country with approximately 220 million files. Ten per cent of the bureaus are computerized in five systems. The largest of the computerized systems, TRW, Inc., with headquarters in the Washington area, alone has credit records of 50 million persons.

Compared to this, the few hundred requests for information that major credit card companies receive each year appear miniscule. Yet the methods of acquiring individuals' files and the uses to which private financial information is put have raised questions. Credit card issuers testified last month that information was routinely supplied, often without benefit of a judicial subpoena, for use in tax, drug, divorce and criminal cases.

THE COMMISSION will report later this year on whether the disclosure law applying to federal agencies should be extended to the private sector. But several members of Congress have decided to act immediately. The House Subcommittee on Courts, Civil Liberties and Administration of Justice, whose chairman is Rep. Robert Kastenmeier (D-Wis), recently added credit card issuers, credit unions and credit reporting bureaus to the list of organizations that henceforth will be allowed to release information only under strict controls. The subcommittee has set up a four-tiered system which means that no data may be given out on an individual if he or she objects unless a judicial subpoena is served. The individual has 14 working days in which to get the subpoena quashed. Moreover, the cardholder must be notified whenever a request for his records is made except when a judge decides notification would seriously jeopardize an ongoing investigaton.

THE JUSTICE Department is known to object strongly to this bill, feeling it would impede law enforcement. In the past, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Internal Revenue Service have used administrative subpoenas - in-house orders that do not have to be signed by an impartial judge and almost always have insisted on secrecy during and after the fact.

On the other hand, many credit card issuers would welcome shifting to others the responsibility for telling their customers they gave out confidential in-formation to comply with the law. Such unpleasant incidents make for bad public relations.

DURING THE FEBRUARY hearings held by the Privacy Commission, virtually no credit card issuer, except the Bank of America, had a policy of notifying — or of not notifying — customers about who was snooping into their affairs. "We never thought about it before," was the common reply. As the hearings ended, American Express announced it would volun-tarily notify cardholders. Other companies have not Fearing that the House omnibus anti-surveillance bill, which incorporates the credit card festrictions, would be a long time in getting through Congress, Sen. Richard Schweiker (R-Pa.) has introduced his own bill dealing exclusively with credit cards.

The Senate version goes further in protecting the cardholder by stating that no information shall be given to a third party without the consent of the cardholder. The exception would be when an individual presents a card for payment. The store or restaurant can check with the issuer to determine the validity and status of the account without the express permission of the cardholder. The provisions dealing with udicial subpoena and notification are similar.

Staff aides say the bills are aimed at "non-routine" use of credit card records; i.e., use by law enforcement officials. The bills are not aimed at interrupion of routine use of records by credit reporting

Pecos gains opener, wildcat, extender

Pecos County has gained a Wilberns dolomite gas discovery, a wildcat location and a field extension. A Pennsylvanian drillstem test developed oil in Winkler County, and a field stepout has been finaled in Mineral Service Corp. No. 1 Mc-Divitt-State is the Wilberns strike. It finaled for a calculated absolute open flow potential of 1,800,000 cubic feet of gas per day to reopen the Heiner, South (Wilberns Dolomite) field.

A reentry project, it originally was drilled by British American Oil Producing Co. as a Wilbers gasser and repotentialed in 1967 as a Wolfcamp discovery.

Gas hearing rescheduled

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - The Railroad Commission has reset a March 22 hearing on Mineral Wells natural gas rates for May 3.

The postponement was requested by Brazos River Gas Co., which supplies gas to Mineral Wells.

The company protested at a hearing Tuesday that the Mineral Wells city council cut back Feb. 20 on a rate increase the council granted last August. The reduction, said vice president Ernest Harris, would cost the company $83,000.

Harris said the utility has a $148,000 mortgage payment due in June, and he added, "I don't see any way we are going to make it. We might be in-solvent at that time, to put it bluntly."

City manager Bill Rivers of Mineral Wells complained that Brazos had discriminated against the city by obtaining higher rates for Mineral Wells but not pursuing higher rate requests at nearby Weatherford and

The rate reductions voted by the council last month included trimming the minimum monthly payment per meter from $3.53 to $3.

The commission called the Tuesday hearing to consider reinstating the August increases until a full hearing could be held on the matter.

Hearing examiner John Camp said he hopes to recommend action to the three-member commission next

A statement about the negotiations was expected from Aramco officials in New York.

Indications were that Saudi oil minister Sheik Ahmed Yamani was still at the resort. Yamani has been the star participant in the talks aimed at the sale to Saudi Arabia's government of the 40 per cent holdings offour American oil companies in the Arabian-American Oil Co. (Aramco).

The first signs that a break in the talks, which began in this Florida Panhandle city Sunday, were over came in the predawn hours today when one of three airplanes parked at a local airport flew off.

An airport guard said seven or eight cars drove up to the airplane at 5 a.m. CST and the plane took off shortly after. A gatekeeper at the resort where the negotiations were held said Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Yamani was not in any of the cars.

It was not known who was aboard the plane, which was one of two belonging to Yamani. The plane, which seats 12 people, had brought the sheik's 19-year-old daughter to Panama City on Saturday night. Airport officials said the airplane was bound for Gander, Newfoundland, a refueling stop on the usual route to Saudi Arabia. The gatekeeper at the Bay Point Yacht and Nountry Club confirmed that seven or eight cars left early today.

"The sheik wasn't in any of them. I know because I have to check them out," he said. "I check them in and I check them out. There weren't any

Two other airplanes still were parked at the field. They were part of a small fleet that brought executives of Mobil, Exxon, Texaco and Standard Oil of California to Panama City for talks aimed at completing the sale of the remaining 40 per cent American interest in Aramco, the world's largest oil-production firm.

Earlier an official of the club predicted that the oil-company executives would leave today. He said Yamani would stay on, possibly until Sunday, for a brief rest with his

But none of the meeting's principals were available to newsmen to say how the talks had progressed Thursday or if a settlement had been reached.

Ted Phillips, an Aramco spokesman in New York, would say only that Aramco would issue a statement, probably in New York, after the meeting.

Yamani, spotted by reporters as he left a local restaurant Wednesday night, responded to a yelled question that "We will finish them up tomorrow (Thursday)." That was the first statement made by any participants in the secret

Harris Lydon, vice president for corporate sales at Bay Point, said the meeting had been due to end Wednesday. But he said Aramco officials asked for an open-ended extension on their rented facilities.

The acquisition of Aramco is a process that started in 1973 when Saudi Arabia bought 25 per cent of the firm. Saudi ownership was later in-creased to 60 per cent and published reports have said the price for the final 40 per cent could reach $2 billion.

Key points apparently involved in the Panama City talks included the final price as well as American insistence on continued supplies of oil for a specified period at a set price.

The heavy security force that surrounded Bay Point before the talks began was apparently aimed at preventing a terrorist attack such as the one that occurred in Vienna during a December meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Yamani and other OPEC officials were taken hostage in that attack and three persons were killed.

House approves $1.5 billion in aid to spur offshore work

WASHINGTON (AP) - While one member predicted an economic bonanza for areas effected by exploration for offshore oil, the House has okayed a $1.5-billion aid bill for states to cope with rapid acceleration of offshore oil and gas leasing pro-

The legislation, intended to spur rapid development and pumping of U.S. offshore oil fields, was passed 370 to 14 on Thursday. The funds would be paid over five years to Alaska and some Atlantic Coast states.

In addition to the $1.5 billion, the federal government would guarantee up to $200 million worth of state bonds a year for the offshore oil and gas pro-

The Senate has approved a similar bill. House-Senate conferees may be appointed to work out a compromise. Opponents of the aid bill included

Rep. Charles Wiggins, R-Calif., who called it "a new giveaway to the coastal states at the expense of everybody else.' While rapid development of offshore fields will cost the coastal statessome money, Wiggins argued, "the fact is this is going to be a bonanza and everybody knows it."

But Republican Rep. David Treen

of the Gulf Coast state of Louisiana said, "The effect of this legislation will be to shift our dependence on foreign oil to dependence on ourselves."

San Antonio holds power plant funds

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - South Texas' nuclear power plant project will get no funds from councilmen here for at least 60 days.

The city council Thursday froze its financial contributions to the plant pending study of a consultants report on soaring costs.

Councilmen voted 5-3 to withhold the payments on their $444 million, 28 per cent share in the two-unit nuclear plant to be built near Bay City, Tex., and completed in 1983.

City Public Service staff members have called the project the energy "bargain of the century," but recently several councilmen have questioned soaring costs due to in-

The $625 million, $125 million a year, will go to the states to provide municipal facilities for new populations of oil and gas workers.

One example will be the Alaskan Indian village of Yakutat with a population of 500 that is expected to be transformed into a boom town major petroleum staging area.

House experts said it is impossible to estimate how much Yakutat - or any other area - will get of the $1.5 billion federal money.

Conoco plans huge Texas expenditures

HOUSTON — More than $128 million will be added to Texas' economy by Continental Oil Co. during 1976 - an increase of 28 per cent over last year.

Tom W. Sigler, senior vice president and coordinator of North American activities, said the total includes capital explenditures, payrolls and state amd local taxes.

Conoco plans to spend $67 million in Texas for capital items, exclusive of maintenance and normal operating costs. Most of the expenditures are earmarked for oil, gas and uranium exploration and production, natural gas processing facilities and pipeline Signler said Conoco's Annual payroll for its 2,850 Texas employes is $45 million. Direct taxes for state and local governments are expected to be about $16.5 million this year.

Conoco will produce and average 67,000 barrels of oil per day in Toxas this year, a slight decrease from last year. Conoco operates 3,600 oil and plans to drill 150 new wells in Texas

Sigler said the increased capital spending in Texas is indicative of Conoco's expanded program to develop additional energy supplies.

Conoco plans to spend more than $1 billion in capital outlays and expioration expenses in 1976 — 37 per cent higher than last year. About half of the amount will be directed to energy-related projects in the U.S.

The downturn was blamed partly on concern over the interest rate outlook. Federal Reserve statistics sday. issued after Thursday's close seemed to indicate that the Telegraph, the most active Fed was looking for a slight Big Board issue, eased 4 to further rise in money market | 56 in a 340,700-share block

The Dow's decline also reflected weakness in U.S. Steel, off 2% at 84%, and Bethlehem Steel, down 1% at 46. A Wall Street Journal article raised questions about the steel industry's growth prospects.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .14 to 54.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .18 at 105.12. Volume on the Big Board remained moderately active.
