Two milk glass chandeliers hang in the living room and the bedroom. The light fixtures in the kitchen are from the coffee shop of the old Scharbauer Hotel, Eastman said.

The bunkhouse was built around an old building on Eastman's property. He added a room to the old bunkhouse and changed the elevation. New doors and windows were also added by Eastman.

Eastman built the bunkhouse as a place to go out for a couple of days a week." As an active member of the Rotary Club and a Boy Scout leader, he plans to use the bunkhouse for activities for those groups.

Lebanon coup brass threatens president

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) -Lebanese army coup leaders threatened today to shell the presidential palace if Christian President Suleiman Franjieh did not

Army sources said a column with tanks and light artillery was moving on the palace, located on the outskirts of Beirut, where Franjieh was being defended by about 2,000 loyalists and Christian militiamen.

Moslem and Christian gunmen fought mortar and rocket duels in Beirut and northern Lebanon as the country lurched toward a resumption of the 11-month civil war.

Leaders of both the Christian and Moslem factions went to Damascus to ask Syrian President Hafez Assad to try to avoid a showdown between Franjieh and the Moslem commander of the Beirut garrison who led a military coup last Thursday and demanded Franjieh's resignation.

In one of many ultimatums served on the president, Col. Raouf Abdul Samad said, "If the president fails to resign by 3 p.m. (7 a.m. CST) we shall began shelling the presidential palace." Witnesses said there was some military activity but no artillery fire as the hour passed.

Samad is the commander of the Mt. Lebanon district with headquarters in Hammana, 12 miles east of the palace. One of his aides said the ultimatum to Franjieh was made in cooperation with the army's high It appeared that the coup leaders were reluctant to move forcefully against Franjieh because they could not be certain how many of their officers and men would follow them. Many of the army's officers are Maronite Christians, as is Franjieh.

Amid the political turmoil and con-tinuing fragmentation of government and military authority, the civil war-fare between leftist Moslem and rightwing Christian factions appeared to be resuming. Gunmen fought a mortar and rocket duel in Beirut's fire-blackened hotel district, and police said 39 persons were killed and 48 were wounded in scattered fighting in Beirut and northern Lebanon during the past 24 hours.

Ford looks for new win; Reagan bracing for loss

CHICAGO (AP) - President Ford looked for another victory, Ronald Reagan braced for another defeat and the Republican rivals left the campaign arena to Democratic contestants today on the eve of the Il-linois presidential primary election. It was the fifth leg of the White w" are the unelected federal ars, a growing band that now makes more rules directly affecting the people than do the elected members of Congress.

In the past decade, three presidents and Congress have vastly increased the regulators' reach and power. The number of major regulatory agencies has doubled to 24 since 1965, and they now employ 105,000 persons, up from 58,455. The cost to America's taxpayer has more than doubled.

Nobody in the federal government keeps track of all the forms that departments and agencies send out to people and businesses. An Associated Press survey turned up more than 9,800 forms the government sends out to the public. An estimated 556 million responses are sent back every year, with hundreds of millions of hours needed to gather the data and com-

THIS EXPOLOSION n federal regulation has created a reaction. President Ford accuses the regulators of "petty tyranny," joining other presidential candidates in seeming to attack the very govern-ment they seek to lead. Republican hopeful Ronald Reagan says business and government bureacrats share a "warm cocoon" in regulation that protects both. Democrat Jimmy Carter pledges to consolidate many agovernment agencies into simpler, more responsive ones. Even Ralph Nader, who inspired much of the new safety regulation, wants to get rid of regulators he says are wasteful. The drive for change has taken on a name: "regulatory reform." Are the criticisms justified? Will Congress reverse its decade-long trend toward centralized regulation? The answer to both questions is yes.

REGULATION DOES cost money. and it also produces benefits. Examples of delays, bungles, overzealous regulation and conflicting rules are easy enough to find. Yet much federal regulation is carried on without complaint or with strong support of the persons being regulated or with calls for more regulation. It is true that, in sheer bulk,

Washington's body of regulations is big and getting bigger. The Code of Federal Regulations, containing only the basic, standing rules set down by the bureacuracy, already packs a shelf 15 feet long with 60,000 book-size pages of fine print.

The number of pages has grown 20 per cent a year for the past several

THESE REGULATORS — appointed officials and civil servants now make more rules than the elected members of Congress.

A Library of Congress study found that during 1974, Congress passed 404 laws while the federal bureacracy churned out 7,496 new or amended regulations. That's 18 regulations for every law.

Most of the regulations carry the force of law, meaning violators could be subject to fines or jail.

THE BUDGETS and number of employes of the regulators have soared in the last decade. In 1965, the 12 major agencies spent $860 million. employing 58,455 people.

President Ford's proposed budget for this coming fiscal year lists $3.8 billion for the 24 major agencies and 105,000 employes.

That means the cost of regulation has gone from $4.43 per American to about $10.36, adjusted for inflation.

THIS GROWTH came as Washington answered demands for cleaner air and water, for less job discrimination against blacks, browns, women and the elderly, for safer autos, workplaces and con-sumer products, and for more honest

Tall City yet taller

The First National Bank of Midland, not completely satisfied with the Tall City's already impressive skyline, plans to make it even taller and more impressive.

Bank officials Friday announced plans to add 16 floors to the financial institution's present eight-story building, making it the city's tallest.

The 24-story building, when completed, also will be the tallest edifice between Fort Worth and Phoenix, Ariz.

The plans, as announced, also call for extensive remodeling and expanding of the firm's banking quarters and parking garage facilities.

Announcement of the $12 million-plus program was an especially exciting one for a city which long has thrived on such huge construction projects, which have marked the city's progress through the years.

With the addition of 16 floors, the structure will have 220,000 square feet of floor space, 160,000 square feet more than in the present bank facility.

It was announced that the parking garage expansion will include the addition of three floors to the present facility, the erecting of six-floors on the quarter block directly east of the present garage, and a four-story segment connecting the two, which will span Colorado Street. This will provide space for 790 vehicles.

Use of five exterior elevators rising through windowed shafts on the west side of the building will be another special feature. This will be in addition to the present elevators. Parking garage elevators also are planned.

The parking facility is scheduled for completion within 18 months, with the tower to be completed in approximately two and one-half years.

Yes, it is an exciting program ... a meaningful, far-reaching one for the bank, the largest between Fort Worth and El Paso, and for the community as a whole. Faith and confidence in the continued growth and development of the city and section are evidenced by the bank's officers and directors. "The project is in the spirit of the bank's tradition of offering its customers and the city the utmost in banking services and leadership," President Wilbur A. Yeager Jr. said.

A somewhat similar statement was made by a bank spokesman when it occupied its present building in 1959. An almost continuous remodeling and expansion project has been underway since that time. An addition on the westside of the building and the attractive plaza were completed two or three years ago.

And now, the most extensive expansion program of all has been announced.

Thus, Midland's impressive skyline continues to soar upward, just as it has since the 1920s when the late Dr. John B. Thomas built his six-story office buildinghospital; the late Clarence Scharbauer Sr. erected the sixstory Hotel Scharbauer, and the late Sen. T.S. Hogan built the 12story Petroleum Building.

Other towering skyscrapers have been erected through the years, topped by the 22-story Wilco Building erected by the late Jack B. Wilkinson Sr. several years ago.

The Midland National Bank occupied its new and beautiful 14story bank and office building only a few weeks ago.

It has been a thrilling experience ... the building of skyscrapers in the Tall City, and the era isn't over yet, by any means. Who'll be next?

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE:

What is 'America' really like, really?

By BENJAMIN SHORE Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - In a handsome brick building a block up Penn-sylvania Avenue from the White House, there is a museum exhibit of the American urban environment that is recommended viewing for bureaucrats, legislators and social

It is the Renwick Gallery's exhibit, "Signs of Life: Symbols of the American City." It displays what architects, interior designers and builders have done chiefly in the name of commercialism.

And it is shocking. The shock, however, is not from what some observers might consider to be a monument to the bad taste of Americans.... It is from the slow realization

(which is the exhibitors' goal) that maybe we are seeing what Americans really like (and what aesthetes would like them not to like).

A McDonald's golden arch leads the viewer into a display of old gas station neon signs (such as the then-garish flying red horse of Mobilgas), modern motel signs, photo displays of housing tracts where residents have adorned their front lawns with plastic decorations to establish some in-exhibitors argue that for most Americans, such a drive is sheer boredom without billboards. Yet the environmental aesthetes forced the Congress to ban billboards along federal highways.

The display of city and suburban streets reminds us of the substantial gulf between what social planners and architects believe the environment ought to be and what Americans have let it become.

The question is raised as to the role of government in setting aesthetic standards for our environment. Is there a role; should there be one?

Most government housing projects in the cities are distinguished by their bleak sameness that seems demonically designed to memorialize the despair of their inhabitants.

The Levittowns (more symbols of planned mediocrity) that sprang up on farmland after World War II to satisfy the broadening middle class' desire for single-family housing were made possible by many programs of government mortgage assistance.
Did the United States get a good deal, or should it have held out for more tree-lined Elm Streets? Is the government to be blamed for underwriting urban sprawl?

And all those government-financed highways linking all those new communities — they made the automobile as American as apple pie, which provided a reason for our free enterprise system to bring us taller and brighter gas station signs, hamburger stand arches, twirling buckets of chicken and motel signs.

You probably have to be over 30 to remember the enjoyment of those Burma Shave limericks that entertained highway travelers before television took over the job of hucksterism. Nostalgia is an old barn with the faint outlines of a Mail Pouch chewing tobacco advertisement that was painted on the now-weathered boards.

But at the Renwick Gallery we see not nostalgia but a sharp challenge to many assumptions that government has been pressured to try to incorporate into designs for the human environment.

The chief underlying assumption is that Americans appreciate and desire something different aesthetically. But this exhibit of our real world may state just the opposite. Perhaps it is a redefinition of aesthetics.

Are Americans has billboards gone? Are federal and local zoning codes on commercial displays or building height limits appreciated by citizens? Why do most Americans find the Las Vegas strip beautiful and exciting?

Bureaucrats, legislators, social planners and other arbiters of public taste should see this exhibit and ask themselves what is genuinely American about environmental aesthetics.

Yet, Reagan aides believe his sharpened criticism of Mr. Ford - on national security grounds - the last six days before the Florida election drastically reduced a huge lead built by the President in the closing few weeks of the campaign. "We are through with euphemisms," one Reagan insider told us. "We'll hit at Ford directly, not at Washington."

Such talk is bold. But there is an undercurrent of feeling on the Republican right that this is a sperate last gasp that will neither help Reagan nor change the President's course.

Carter used the delay caused by Miss Hearst's illness to draft a plan for speeding up the trial. He outlined his plans for jury instruction and allotted 31/2 hours for each side to make closing arguments, which he hopes will be delivered by Friday.

The judge said the defense will have a day to a day and a half for its rebuttal after the government rebuttal.

19 months underground, she renounced her parents and claimed she voluntarily took part in the April 15, 1974, robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch here — the robbery for which she now faces charges. In her trial testimony she claimed her captors sexually assaulted her, beat her, locked her in dark closets and forced her to tape the communiques and to participate in the bank robbery.

D.C. amendment slated to top agenda in House

By EDMOND Le BRETON

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is taking up the question of whether the Constitution should be amended to give the District of Columbia two senators and a share of representatives in the House.

The House is scheduled Tuesday to take up the amendment, proposed by the District's nonvoting delegate, Walter E. Fauntroy.

On the same day, the Senate is to begin debate on its version of legislation to reconstitute the Federal Election Commission and thus assure the continuation of the government campaign law.

By the terms of a Supreme Court decision, the commission must be reestablished as a body of presidential appointees or lose its authority to handle campaign funds. The court originally set a March I deadline and then extended it to March 22, which Congress now cannot meet. However, handlers of the legislation say a brief interruption in the flow of campaign contributions would not seriously hamper candidates.

Before the election bill debate, the Senate is to take up a bill designed to strengthen enforcement powers of government agencies that administer cleanliness standards in food processing plants.

Meanwhile, the House was to take up a compromise measure to settle a long controversy over financing child day-care centers. It would continue until July 1 a suspension of strict staffing standards ordered by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare and provide $125 million in additional federal funds to help meet the requirements.

The House will vote Wednesday on arrangements to escort the Magna Carta from Britain to this country for Bicentennial observances. A confused series of parliamentary moves and votes last week resulted in defeat of a resolution setting up the arrangements. The vote also resulted in some embarrassment to congressional leaders who thought the details had been worked out with their British counterparts. The proposed constitutional amendment for the District of Columbia would not make a state of the capital city but would grant it full voting rights - two senators, and, on the basis of a population of about 750,000, two representatives.

minority within the federal government. The current $3.8 billion for the 24 major agencies is less than one per cent of Ford's proposed budget. Yet their impact, once confined to a few industries - transportation, communications, agriculture, finance and drugs - now has spread to many unaccustomed areas.

HOW MUCH DOES all this regulation cost? There is simply no accurate way to measure regulation's total impact on the nation, although many are willing to try.

President Ford's aides in the Office of Management and Budget estimated regulation's cost at $130 billion a year in artificially inflated prices, additional costs to business and lost productivity. This estimate totaling about $2,000 for each family - is based on a mish-mash of economic assumptions, projections and guesses.

IN ONE INSTANCE, the OMB

counted the costs of foreign trade restrictions that no longer exist.

Deluge of forms keeps growing

WASHINGTON (AP) - The federal government buries the public each year in more than 500 million forms asking about everything from income taxes to critiques of the "Discover America Pow Wow and Trade Mart.'

The Commerce Department wants to hear how many contracts 600 businesses signed at its annual travel show, while the Internal Revenue Service expects every taxpayer in America to fill out one of its 86 million tax returns.

The Agriculture Department's weekly report of red tart cherries gets only about 706 replies a year, and the Tennessee Valley Authority wants data from 21 commerical fish and mussel dealers.

From taxes to cherries, the federal government has a form asking individuals and businesses for information on just about everything.

Businessmen contend they cannot afford to answer many of the forms feeding the government's need to know and that the cost of answering the inquiries is passed on to the consumer as higher prices.

Some consumer groups, on the other hand, say many government decisions are based on incomplete or biased information. For example, the agencies dealing with energy often use industry-supplied data that critics see as self-serving and unreliable.

No one in the federal government keeps track of all the forms that department and agencies send out to indviduals and businesses.

An Associated Press survey, however, turned up more than 9,800 separate forms the federal bureaucracy sends out ot the public. An estimated 556 million repsonses are returned each year, with hundreds of millions of hours needed to gather data and complete the forms.

'The question is how much information do we need to run the government," said a congressional aide who studies the paperwork burden. "We may have gone too far." Thousands of the forms are needed by government programs requested by business - agricultural marketing orders, government contracts and economic development loans.

For example, travel companies and red tart cherry processors get a direct benefit from government forms.

The travel companies come to the Commerce "Pow Wow" each year to sign contracts to bring foreign tourists to this country. On the Commerce forms, the companies say how many contracts were signed and how much they were worth. Because the companies say each year they sign tens of million of dollars in contracts

at the meeting, Commerce continues to hold the "Pow Wow." The weekly cherry production forms are a crucial part of the federal marketing order that helps keep cherry prices up by controlling the supplies that reach the market.

A service station owner may think a Census Bureau form is just a burden, but officials say the data he supplies - added to that from others - may encourage the construction of a new shopping center or factory that would boost his gasoline sales. The IRS leads one part of the federal forms race with 3,500 forms that elicit about 122 million responses a year from the general public. The latest figures available from the IRS show about 3,500 forms sent out to the public for tax purposes, down from 5,000 in 1968 The Department of Health, Educa-

The administration study also said Americans spend $40 to $60 billion a year to meet federal pollution standards. Yet the congressional General Accounting Office, in a report critical of the OMB study, said Ford's aides had misquoted the original source for the figure, which had put antipollution costs at $33 billion.

DOES THE REGULATION do any good? Frequently, yes.
The 3,451 people with accounts at a

Houston bank didn't lose their savings when the bank collapsed. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. paid them $12,259,733. Of course, some say there should be more federal regulation of banks to prevent such failures.

Not all governmental nitpicking is needless. Late last year, the Food and Drug Administration got a court order to seize imported boar-bristle brushes from a Los Angeles importer because the brushes were contaminated with nits.

Nits are lice eggs. Even the auto manufacturers concede that federal auto safety regulations save motorists' lives, probably by the thousands.

America's air is measurably cleaner since EPA began work. Whatever the cost of cleaner air or prolonged lives, their worth can't be measured in dollars. This makes com-

There is little question that government can take years to reach a seemingly simple decision, as when the FDA went through nine years of hearings, proposals and comment periods before deciding that anything labeled "peanut butter" must contain at least 90 per cent peanuts.

Outright mistakes are made. And sometimes even admitted. In 1973, the fledgling Consumer Product Safety Commission erroneously banned as unsafe a toy plastic ball manufactured by the Marlin Toy Products, Inc., of Horicon, Wis. The commission later admitted the boner, but the company says the mistake cost it $1.2 million in canceled orders and forced the layoff of all but 10 of its 85 employes. Congress has authorized payment of damages to Marlin, with the amount to be set by a claims THERE ARE CASES where the regulators strain the law.

A federal job-safety inspector wanted changes in an allegedly unsafe hydraulic log-cutting machine clearing land in California's Napa Valley in 1972. Although the wood was sold entirely within California, the Labor Department insisted the land being cleared was for planting grapes, and that grapes were for making wine sold across state lines, and that this made it a federal case. A review commission sided with the logger by a 2-to-1 vote last year and threw out his $600 fine.

Sometimes one agency's rules collide with those of another.

Job safety rules call for protective railing around blood pits in meatpacking plants, but Agriculture Depart-. ment inspectors disapprove of the railings because they become encrusted with gore and are unsanitary. So OSHA compromised by allowing employes to use safety harnesses to prevent their falling into the pits.

The burden of government paperwork is a frequent complaint by busineessmen

For example, Maryland automobile dealers have to fill out 31 federal forms and 51 state forms. Eighteen of the federal forms deal with taxes and payrolls, 11 with pensions and one each with job safety and nondiscrimination.

THERE IS MOVEMENT aimed at limiting the regulators' powers in this year of the 200th anniversary of the American Revolution.

But the regulators have powerful defenders — usually the industries they oversee - who are fighting this new revolt in Washington. Many proposed changes require legislation, and Congress often moves at least as slowly as the regulators.

WASHINGTON — In the years to come, people are repealed its fair trade law. However, he added that more likely to remember March 11 as the anniver-retailiers cut prices selectively — 10 to 20 per cent sary of the Great Blizzard of 1888 or even the death of Johnny Appleseed in 1847 than as the day in 1976 fair trade laws were repealed.

Unlike repeal of the Volstead Act ending prohibi-tion, repeal of the Miller-Tydings Act of 1937 and the McGuire Act of 1954, which bound retailers to charging prices set by manufacturers, is apt to pass barely noticed. No lavish advertising or promotions of lower prices are planned. "In fact, most shoppers are not even aware of" (the repeal), observed Mike Harvey, assistant manager of Best Products Co. in Arlington,

FAIR TRADE LAWS, which were in force in twothirds of the states as recently as two years ago, harked back to the Great Depression when they were designed to protect the small merchant against margin cutting by large retailers.

The 1954 afterthought, extending the obligation to charge fixed prices to businessmen who had not signed contracts with manufacturers, was intended as further protection after big discount houses came on Under fair trade laws, the average markup on Sony television sets was twice that of RCA sets, for example. Panasonic radios offered retailers two and a half times the profit of comparable, non-fair-traded GE radios. TV and stereo products were most often involved, but manufacturers of cameras, watches, small appliances, kitchenware, bedding, jewelry, auto parts and power tools also took advantage of the laws. Almost all were heavily advertised national brands that could command premium prices. Fair trade laws fell victim to consumerism. Signing the repeal last December, President Ford noted the laws eliminated price competition and inflated costs. The White House estimated the laws cost the American public some $2 billion a year.

REP. BARBARA JORDAN (D.-Tex.), the principal sponsor of repeal, issued a statement saying, "Prices will go down because the market factors of competition will set prices."

Not so you'd notice it, unfortunately. Blame ever-present inflation and the tide of affairs.

Although 19 states still had fair trade laws on their books, they had not been vigorously enforced of late. Companies such as Sony, which didn't hesitate to take violators to court in the past, stopped doing so when they saw the handwriting on the wall. Other companies that traditionally fair traded formally notified their distributors of their decision to stop the

By mid-1975, fair trade's gradual demise meant that the value of such products represented less than 4 per cent of gross retail sales nationally compared with 10 per cent 15 years ago.

Herb Filderman, president of George's Radio and Television Co., a large Washington area retail firm, said an end to fair trade prices by Sony and Panasonic makes "no appreciable difference."

ON THE CONTRARY, Jerry Martin, marketing director of Best's, declared the demise had a "considerable" effect on the "tremendous" volume of business the chain did in late 1975.

Other retailers said it was hard to separate increases due to the end of fair trade and increases due to the end of the recession and the return of con-

Of those manufacturers who fair-traded, none contacted this week indicated they believed the demise would mean higher profits for themselves or lower prices for the consumer.

Hal Warner of Corning Glass Works said sales surged at first last April when New York State retailiers cut prices selectively — 10 to 20 per cent — on certain items, not across the board. Sales soon returned to normal and so did prices. Sony had a similar experience.

The bidding was the same at both tables of a match between the United States and Argentina, and so was the opening lead. The difference came in declarer's play to the first trick.

The Argentine declarer won the first trick with the ace of clubs, led a spade to the dummy and took a diamond finesse, losing to the singleton queen. West then ran the clubs. South had no way of getting back to his hand, and eventually took only four tricks. Down five!

Israeli superspy almost unknown

By DAVID LANCASHIRE

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) - Nobody noticed the plain, middle-aged man slipping from cafe to cafe in Buenos Aires 16 years ago. Isser Harel didn't want to be noticed. He was planning a kidnaping.

And when Adolf Eichmann - the Nazi convicted and hanged for organizing the World War II slaughter of Jews for Hitler - was captured in his Argentine hideout and flown secretely to Israel for trial, almost nobody knew that the inconspicious stranger in Buenos Aires was Eichmann's captor.

Isser Harel has made a career of being unnoticed. Yet for more than a decade he was a key figure in the Middle East and the mystery world of espionage - the intelligence expert who built and ran Israel's secret services. 'Capturing Eichmann was the most important achievement of the Israeli secret service," Harel reminisced recently in his Tel Aviv home. "But capturing Eichmann wasn't the most sophisticated or complicated operation I directed. Those cases are still unknown," Harel said, and many of them must remain unknown.

Allen Dulles, former chief of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, once said Harel's underground network was "among the world's best." ExCIA operative Miles Copeland, in his book "Beyond Cloak and Dagger," says the intelligence service built by Harel "may have succeeded where others have failed in planting (agents) in the Soviet government."

But Harel kept his name a state secret all the time he was Israel's chief spy from 1952 to 1963. It was divulged only two years after he resigned in an argument with then Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion over Harel's mailing of explosive parcels to German rocket scientists working in Egypt.

Harel also differs from the glamorous spies of fiction like James Bond, whom he calls "too stupid." In all his years in business, Harel said.

he never carried a gun and he was never seduced by a beautiful woman. at least not in the line of duty.

"I often used women as agents, though," he said. "Women were some of our best operators, but I never used them in a sex role. It's dangerous. You put a woman to work on a man and you never know what will happen - the situation can turn around.'

Harel came to Palestine from the Soviet Union in 1930 as an immigrant farmer and orange grower, joined the Jewish underground in World War II and caught a German counterfeiter on his first assignment. By 1948 he was manipulating Arab agents, building the filing system that is the basis of intelligence work, breaking up Jewish terrorist gangs and virtual ly running the secret service.

Four years later he was officially put in charge and he constructed Israel's complicated system of intelligence departments in its present form: "Mossad" (the institute) for operations abroad, "Shin Bet" (security service for secret work inside Israel, "Aman" (military in-telligence), plus a police special bran-ch and a Foreign Ministry research

FBI checking bribery story about Callaway

DENVER (AP) - The FBI has begun investigating the proposed expansion of a Colorado ski area controlled by Howard "Bo" Callaway.

U.S. Atty. James L. Treece says the probe began when an agent relayed to federal prosecutors a report that a bribe might have been paid. A newsman says the report originated with an anonymous telephone call he received.

Callaway took a voluntary leave of absence from his post as President Ford's campaign manager over the weekend after Sen. Floyd K. Haskell, D-Colo., announced that his Senate subcommittee will hold hearings on the resort at Crested Butte, Colo.

The Senate investigation was prompted not by allegations of bribery but by questions about a meeting last summer in which Callaway, then secretary of the Army, met with Forest Service officials in the Pentagon and asked that the ski area be allowed to expand, according to then-Undersecretary of Agriculture J. Phillip Campbell.

The bribery allegations do not mention Callaway's name. But Treece said it was the possibility of bribery that gave the FBI a con-nection to the case. He said such a bribe would be a federal crime.

The bribery allegations apparently originated with a newsman who said he was told by an anonymous caller that $135,000 had been paid. The alleged recipient denied it and said he called for the investigation. The newsman said he would not have even printed the story had officials not begun an investigation.

On Sunday, Simon Tullai, assistant agent-in-charge of the Denver FBI office, confirmed that the FBI was investigating the case but refused further comment. "We were told back at headquarters to refer questions to the U.S. attorney's office," Tullai

Callaway said he is confident there has been no impropriety. He said he asked to be relieved because he feels Ford's reputation of openness, honesty and integrity makes it "important to go the extra mile." Ford said in Greensboro, N.C., that he was relieving Callaway at Callaway's

Like almost all Rocky Mountain ski resorts, Crested Butte operates on public land and its owners pay the government royalties

The controversy began after the Crested Butte Development Corp., in which Callaway owns the controlling interest, applied to the Forest Service for inclusion of Mt. Snodgrass, adjacent to the present area.

Neil Edstrom, then the service's district ranger in the Gunnison National Forest, drafted a report last summer recommending disapproval. He also wrote in a letter on Jan. 20, 1975, to Ralph Walton, the resort's president and Callaway's brother-inlaw, that "ski area development is essentially an irreversible commitment of resources which we do not feel is necessary at this time.'

Last summer, Callaway met with Forest Service officials in his Pentagon office and asked that the expansion be allowed, Campbell said.

No action has been taken on the requested expansion. The Forest Service last month approved a request by the Gunnison County commission for a six-month delay before an environmental impact statement is filed.

Commission to consider requests

The city Parks and Recreation Commission will hear three reports and consider four requests and one proposal when it meets in regular session at 4 p.m. Tuesday at city hall.

Parks Commissioners will study requests by the Midland Rotary Club to use Wadley-Barron Park May 1 for a Get-Out-To-Vote rally, and by the Midland Zoological Society for per-mission to dedicate a new exhibit in the memory of George H. Vineyard. The group will also consider requests by the Midland Shrine Association to use Cub Stadium Sept. 25-26 for an annual circus, and by the Alamo YMCA to use Alamo Pool this

A proposal to come before the commission Tuesday is from the Midland Kiwanis Club regarding the club's involvement in the future development of some undeveloped park property at Haynes and Whitney

Parks Commissioners will hear three reports, including a report on city council action pertaining to recommendations from the last commission meeting, a revenue report from Hogan Park golf course and council action on staff recom-mendations, and a progress report.

Quick, Bear Bryant, if you really know how to walk on water now's the time to tell C.M. Newton.

Perhaps taking a cue from Bryant's Alabama footballers, who finally won postseason contest last season, Newton's eighth-ranked cagers registered the school's first-ever triumph in the National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament Saturday, knocking off fifth-ranked North Carolina 79-64.

That sends the Crimson Tide on to the next round of the talent-laden Mideast Regionals at Baton Rouge, none other than unbeaten. No. 1ranked Indiana. The Hoosiers walloped No. 17 St. John's 90-70 and led an advance of the top four teams in The Associated Press ratings.

Second-ranked Marquette whipped Western Kentucky 79-60; No. 3 Rutgers, the nation's only other undefeated quintet, had the scare of its life before nipping Princeton 54-53 and fourth-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas buried Boise State 103-78. Sixthranked UCLA, the defending NCAA champion, also advanced with a 74-64 victory over San Diego State.

If it turns out that Bryant really can't walk on water, perhaps he can at least tell Newton where the stumps are since the Tide will be the underdog against Indiana. But they're not about to switch partners for the Louisiana Hayride with the Hoosiers. "We're not going to change what we've gone through that's gotten us here," Newton said. "It would be silly to get away from what we do so well. We'll prepare for them just like we've prepared for anyone else."

By tarrying until the date when spring training was to start and letting it drag well into the exhibition season, baseball is undermining the nationwide revival it has enjoyed the last few seasons, a comeback, incidentally, for which pro football earned a well deserved assist.

THE THORNY problem of the Series in recent years, with which the 1976 season was awaited.

The Players' Association and owners are in the midst of a grunting tug of war over the reserve clause and to a lesser extent over a myriad range of other fringe and security benefits. But in case you haven't noticed that rope they are tugging on is the dues paying fan.

On the one side, the players are demanding more money, more freedom, better playing conditions, less supervision and more in-

No where have we seen any mention of the players giving something in return, such as 100 per cent effort or guaranteeing that they will be in condition to give 100 per cent effort once they take the field.

ON THE other side, the owners seem to operate their clubs like a tax loss rather than a business, anyway. O, there are a few like, Wrigley, O'Malley and Busch who expect baseball to stand on its own. What profits Wrigley makes, he ploughs back into the club and ball park improvements. Maybe that's the reason the fan receives better treatment and prices in their parks than most of the Still, most operations invite excesses such as exorbitant payrolls and encourage demands that stagger the imagination of the freight-paying

The bone of immediate contention is the reserve clause and the promise for the players that its elimination or limitation will open the world to still undreamed of riches.

The owners counter that they need the reserve clause to derive the benefits from those young prospects who were carefully nursed through unproductive development years in the minors.

The players are going to have their way. The courts have already assured that. The argument is over the length of time a player must spend in $18,000 a year, minimum, bondage. Either way it makes little dif-ference to the fan. His only concern is what the tab is going to be when he steps up to the box office, Pro football, hockey and basketball already have priced themselves out of the reach of many fans. Is baseball next?

DENTON, Tex. (AP) - Don't knockSouthwest Conference basketball. At least not around Syracuse Coach Roy Danforth.

Syracuse's fourth consecutive visit into the NCAA basketball playoffs was crushed 69-56 Saturday night by Texas Tech in the first round Midwest Regionals.

Tech, now 25-5, finished second to Texas A&M in the SWC's regular season but whipped the Aggies in a postseason tournament. The Aggies were ignored when NCAA invitations to its 32-team field were passed out, sending the SWC into its annual pout that basketball is getting bigger and better in the football-oriented league but nobody seems to notice. "Texas Tech has one fine club and will do well in the regionals," said Danforth. "That stuff about them not playing good basketball down here is a bunch of bunk." THE 19TH rated Red Raiders will be matched against Big Eight champion Missouri Thursday night in Louisville, Ky., with Michigan and Notre Dame colliding in the other semifinal game.

Michigan, the Big Ten runnerup and 14th ranked, rallied from behind to nip tough Wichita State 74-73 on Rickey Green's 20-foot jump shot in the other game here at North Texas State's "Super Pit."
Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers

said, "Our league has improved. When we do well out on the court, it means more to our conference than just talking about how we've improv-

He said, "I think we have three or four teams in our conference which could have done well in this game

Danforth said Syracuse, which finished the year 20-9, had trouble penetrating Tech's tough man-forman defense.

"I SAID before that this was the youngest team I've had in eight years and I was surprised they were able to post-season play, the true nature of a team comes out and we played like a young team. Maybe they had a party last night and didn't invite me.'

It looked like Michigan also might get a seat on the sidelines as Wichita State, the Missouri Valley Conference champion, jumped to an early 11 point "Wichita just dominated us the first 20 minutes of the game but we made a great comeback," said Wolverine Coach Johnny Orr. "We just decided to go to a man-to-man press, put four little guys in there and just suck it up. We were fortunate."

Orr said, "We're elated to be playing Notre Dame. We certainly ought to know enough about them. We see 'em on television all the time." Orr added that it was about time Michigan won a last second game.

"I don't feel bad about the way we won it because we lost games to Illinois and Indiana like that this year,"

Players control game

By WILL GRIMSLEY AP Special Correspondent

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) -"This no longer is an economics issue-it is a power struggle," said a member of baseball's hierarchy. "We are fighting for our lives."

Chub Feeney, president of the National League, put it more vividly. "They have taken our swords," he "now they want our horses, too."

The players' position was enunciated by the headstrong and controversial Mike Marshall of the Los Angeles Dodgers: "I just want the rights deeded me by Franklin Delano Roosevelt," he said.

said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "They have two great players in May and Kent Benson (20 points) and a well-balanced team that complements them well." Once-beaten Marquette stretched its winning streak to 22 games with an easy triumph over Western Kentucky behind Butch Lee's 21 points and 18 by Earl Tatum. The Warriors committed only two turnovers en route to a 36-29 halftime lead and blew the Hilltoppers out with a 14-5 burst early in the second half.

Rutgers' perfect record was in jeopardy in the closing seconds but the Scarlet Knights, who led by 10 early in the second half, survived when Princeton's Pete Molloy, a little-used reserve guard, missed the first part of a one-and-one situation with four seconds left. Rutgers Coach Tom Young called two successive timeouts before Molloy stepped to the Nevada-Las Vegas, which averaged 110.8 points a game during the regular season, took a 48-39 halftime lead over Boise and poured it on in the second half. Eddie Owens topped the Rebels with 24 points and Jackie Robinson added 20. UCLA's Richard Washington collected 25 and the Bruins broke open a tight game with San Diego State in the second half after leading by only three at the intermission.

Michigan came from 12 points down in the second half and nosed out Wichita State on Rickey Green's 20foot baseline jump shot with six seconds left. Western Michigan trailed Virginia Tech by 13 but caught up on Jeff Tyson's basket with 40 seconds left in regulation time. Tyson then added five of his 25 points in the overtime.

Playmaker Jim Rappis turned scorer with 20 points on 8-of-13 shooting to lead Arizona over Georgetown. Mike Russell and Rick Bullock combined for 40 points as Texas Tech manhandled smaller Syracuse. Reality is this: after close to 100 years of virtual servitude under the reserve clause, the players wake up one day to find themselves emancipated. An arbitrator's decision, twice upheld in the courts, says they can play an option year without a contract and then become free agents.

THE RULING has left club owners in a state of shock. They have operated so long under the reserve clause, making a player their untouchable property for life unless traded or sold, that they feel they have been left naked. They say they would face bankruptcy.

'Ninety per cent of our assets are the players themselves," contends Bob Howsam, president and executive officer of the World Champion Cincinnati Reds. "If we lose our hold on them, we are doomed. We can't possibly survive. "The courts have given us our freedom," said a bitter Reggie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals. "It's hard for the owners to accept it, especially those notorious for paying low salaries."

If the owners feel powerless at the loss of the cornerstone of their operations, the players find themselves suddenly bulging with new muscle. This can be a dangerous situation in itself. Some may not know how to han-

The sensible players and their negotiator, Miller, realize this and are willing to accept a compromise reserve agreement that both sides can live with. Most observers believe this would be a six-year total term that a club may hold a player before he can gain his release. The owners are a conglomerate of mixed backgrounds and philosophies, themselves not fully united in purpose. There are seasoned old baseball men such as Phil Wrigley of the Cubs, Walter O'Malley of the Dodgers and Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox.

Lee Rebs take on Pecos at 4

Midland Lee entertains Class AAA Pecos at 4 p.m. today at Lee while Midland rests until Tuesday when the Bulldogs take on Lubbock Coronado at Memorial Stadium .

Lee takes a 5-4 record into today's game with the Class AAA Eagles. The Rebels took a 4-1 win over Pecos in Pecos a week ago.

Following today's game, Lee gets another crack at Lubbock Monterey in Lubbock Tuesday. The Plainsmen rocked the Rebels, 14-3, in the Midland Invitational Baseball Tourney over the weekend and it may be even tougher to win in the Hub City because Lee most likely will face ace Scott Gardner who already has two one-hitters and a two-hitter to his credit.

Leading the Rebel hit parade are shortstop Greg Howard, first basmean Raymond Munoz and out-fielder Scott Dudenhoeffer along with Alan Neal.

Howard is hitting the ball at a .467 clip and was named to the all-tourney team over the weekend while Munoz is hitting .400 and Dudenhoeffer .444. Dudenoehffer missed all four games in the tourney due to the flu. Neal is hitting .320.

Midland, with a 3-8 record, is sparked by Gary Merritt with a .353 average.

A special barbecue was held late Saturday night following the Midland Invitational Baseball Tournament at Cubs Stadium with a 10-man alltourney team and three trophies given away in the Midland Lee Cafeteria.

Alamogordo, N.M. blasted tourney winner Lubbock Monterey, 14-4, in the finale, but the Plainsmen took home the first place trophy after winning three of four games during the twoday tourney. All five teams played four games each with Monterey recording a 3-1 mark compared to Alamogordo, Midland Lee and Duncanville with 2-2 records. Midland High, the fifth team in the meet was 1-3. Alamogordo's Tigers lost to

Mrs. Hiss, who made history as the first woman to make an Indianapolis car race, received low marks in her debut Sunday in the Jimmy Bryan 150, which So low, in fact, her fellow drivers are threatening to boycott the next race on the schedule unless USAC officials ask Mrs. Hiss to get more experience elsewhere before trying again. Sources said she had been asked to withdraw.

USAC Executive Director Dick King said he is "reviewing the status of Mrs. Hiss' conditional competition license.' 'He said he would make a statement on the matter later this week. Mrs. Hiss, a Tustin, Calif., amateur sports car

But her debut was a rocky one: being lapped 22 times by the leaders, running on the most treacherous parts of the course at 15-20 miles per hour slower than the others, and failing to get out of the way of faster cars. She ended up a distant 14th, last among the cars still running, and was blackflagged once for going dangerously slow. One official reported she nearly hit a fireman at the scene of an accident. Mrs. Hiss ran well in private practice sessions here

Attempt to plug fuel leaks fails

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) - Attempts to plug leaks in pits storing used radioactive fuel at Florida Power & Light Co.'s Turkey Point power plant have been unsuccessful, say officials from the company and the Nuclear Energy Commission

The "spent fuel" pits at the plant have been leaking for two years, but the releases of radiation have been small and pose no threat to the public or to plant workers, company officials told The Miami Herald. Officials said efforts to sto of radioactive water from the leaks have been hampered by intense radioactivity inside the pits that makes it impossible for people to work inside them.

The pits are heavily-shielded, multi-story buildings of concrete and stainless steel adjacent to the nuclear reactor located on Biscayne Bay 25 miles south of Miami.

Each year, fuel that is no longer useful for producing electricity is unloaded as pellets of uranium and other radioactive material, placed in the pits and flooded with water. Although no longer useful, the fuel holds lethal radiation.

away the radiation. It is this water that is leaking.

Leaks were discovered in one of the pits in 1972 and were considered too minor to repair, a company spokesman said. The second of the two pits was found to be leaking in

"The leaks are undesirable, and we would like to get rid of them, but they are no safety hazard," said A. D. Schmidt, FPL's vice president for power

"The pits are not going to collapse, ing to rail apart. Officials say permanent repairs may have to wait until all of the fuel can be unloaded and the pits drained. In the meantime, the storage pits are nearing capacity so FPL is seeking federal approval to expand the storage area.

"Leaks do not heal themselves," said Norman C. Moseley, director of inspection and enforcement for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's Southeast region.

"Turkey Point has not yet received permissison to store additional fuel at its plant, and it is possible that we might require them to repair the leaks before they get that approval,"

The flow was gauged on a 16-64-inch choke and through perforations at 9,518-9,541 feet, which have been acidized with 1,500 gallons.

Testing continued on the same choke. It made 76 barrels of oil during the succeeding 21 hours, and 33 barrels of oil during the next 24 hours.

Drilled to 11,269 feet, it has been plugged back to 9,578 feet. Location is 990 feet from south and 660 feet from west lines of section 6, block 143, T&StL survey, 4½ miles north of the Petco (Devonian and Ellenburger) gas field.

Then the full strategic reserve plan, covering the seven-year, 500 million barrel program, must be completed and sent to Congress by Dec. 15. Congress can order changes, but once set the acquisition of oil reserves can

Latin America may be sleeping giant of future oil production

Copley News Service
WASHINGTON — A new study by the U.S. Geological Survey indicates Latin America could be the "sleeping giant" of future world oil production. The report, prepared by Dr. Bernardo F. Grossling, research geophysicist, says that Latin America

By way of comparison the United States, by far the most heavily ex-plored petroleum-producing nation in the world, has drilled 2.2 million wells since the search for petroleum first regan in the 19th Century.

Grossling points out:
"The volume of oil in a given region is not necessarily proportional to the number of wells drilled a direct inbeen or will be found."

In the Middle East, for example, only a small amount of drilling in a relatively small total area of favorable land has developed large amounts of oil.

"But," Grossling says, "this comparison of favorable areas and the number of wells drilled, is an indication of the extent to which prospective targets have been This means that Latin America,
