Fighting in Beirut reaches new climax

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Moslem and Christian militias fought the heaviest artillery battle of the 11-month-old Lebanese civil war Sunday night and today across Beirut.

More than 1,200 rockets, mortar rounds and artillery shells were fired between 4 p.m. and midnight Sunday, "an all-time record for Beirut," a police pokesman said.

The heavy firing continued this morning, and explosions shook the city and resort areas in the mountains behind the capital.

One shell hit the French Consulate, seriously wounding Vice-Consul Guy Barioulet and slightly wounding Andre Ringard, an attache at the French Embassy. Another shell damaged the French ambassador's car, while several rounds landed within 200 yards of the U.S. Embassy.

The escalation followed the capture Sunday of the 25-story seaside Holiday Inn by leftist Moslems of the Nasserite Ambusher militia. More than 40 persons were reported killed in the fighting for the gutted hotel, which had been a strongpoint for the right-wing Christian Phalangists for

The Phalangists launched an early morning attack to retake the building, and the Phalangist radio claimed the Moslems had been driven out. But leftist leaders said their forces had driven the Christian attackers back to a basement across the street from the

On the political front, the Phalange Party said Christian President Suleiman Franjieh was expected to announce a plan for his resignation

The 65-year-old Franjieh, holed up in the presidential palace on a hilltop five miles east of Beirut, has defied scores of military threats to bomb him out since the Moslem commander of the Beirut garrison, Brig. Aziz Ah-dab, proclaimed himself provisional military governor of Lebanon 10 days

A Phalange spokesman said Franjieh's announcement would follow the broad lines of an agreement worked out by a Phalangist delegation in three days of talks with Syrian government leaders in Damascus. He said the plan includes:

-Expansion of Moslem Premier Rashid Karami's six-man government to an 18-man cabinet of national

-Announcement by the new government of an immediate timetable for political reforms designed to meet the demands of the Moslem majority for equal powers with the Christian minority which has dominated the political and economic life of Lebanon.

-A constitutional amendment that will shorten Franjieh's sixyear term by six months, making it end now. Parliament will then elect a new president from among the Maronite Christians, Lebanon's largest Christian sect, to whom Franjieh would immediately turn over his

"We hope the solution is close," Karami told newsmen.

Behavior modification aids disturbed children

The children dawdle toward their desks, stopping here and there, killing time. Finally in their seats, two youngsters begin work on their classroom assignments.

The teacher, spotting the pair, announces to the class, "I see I've got two good students who sit right down and start-their work. Thank you!"

The tactic is called behavior modification and it's the prime tool in teaching this class of emotionally

Students in Mrs. Black's class have two recess periods as a immediate goal - if they haven't completed a prescribed amount of classwork by recess time, their play time is either delayed or forfeited. "Our coming and going isn't with the bells," she said. "It's with work completed." The strategy is necessary, Mrs.

Estes explained, because emotionally distrubed students have trouble "getting down to task," are easify distracted and have short attention

In her class, the distraction problem is aided by locating each child's desk in a partitioned "office" where he is less likely to be disturbed by other students or to disturb other

Many students, both teachers say, also have other problems such as hearing deficiencies or learning and language impairments. Mrs. Black said they might contribute to a child's emotional problems but could not be considered the cause.

Morning low reached freezing mark briefly

The mercury dipped to a freezing 32 degrees at 7 a.m. today, but a National Weather Service spokesman doubts it damaged any young and tender plants. "It was not that cold for that long," the spokesman said.

Sunday's high reached 72 degrees, and Tuesday is expected to be warmer with temperatures climbing into the middle 70s.

It was generally cool and partly cloudy with slight winds throughout the Permian Basin this morning. Southeast and South Central Texas welcomed light spring rain today while the latest cold snap again nipped a few points farther north with a light freeze.

DEATHS

Temperatures generally were moderating, however, and fair weather graced the north and west parts of the state, the Associated Press reported. With occasional thundershowers mixed in, the rain spread across the southern sections during the night and dwindled by morning in South Central Texas. More moisture was expected through the day in Southeast Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley. For other sections the forecast was sunny and mild. Among the coolest spots near dawn were Dalhart 27 degrees and Amarillo 32, both in the Panhandle, and Tyler

"Many people get the idea these kds are different," Mrs. Estes said. "Sure, they're exceptional, but they're not that different except for particular learning disabilities and, perhaps, they can't cope with things the way other kids can. "They don't have as many actions in their repertoire as most kids. That's the major difference." expressing anger, for example, "the only thing they may know to do is explode" she said.

In both classes, the teachers use charts to show their students how they are faring in conquering a particular problem such as remaining in their seats or raising their hands to seek attention.

"They're being made aware of things they do that are ob-jectionable," Mrs. Estes said. "You have got to let them know the con-sequences of their behavior. They've got to know it." The teachers reward many actions such as not interrupting the instructor or waiting in line as behavior modification techniques with tokens or tickets to redeem for small toys or

In Mrs. Estes' unit of older students, she first couples praise with tokens to show approval, then de-emphasizes the tokens and concentrates on the praise. She pointed out her students are approaching junior high school age where they will not be impressed by the promise of a bag of candy.

Most of the youngsters know why they are in what's known as the "E.D." unit. Mrs. Estes said the youngsters may even describe their actions in previous classes as "bad."

According to Hubert C. Schmidt, coordinator of special education for the public schools, few of the children are under the care of a private psychologist because few have problems severe enough to warrant it. However, teachers still must cope with occasional outbursts, sometimes violent, in the classroom. Mrs. Black said she takes major offenders to principal Frank Marlow's office where he first seeks to discuss the problem with the child. She said corporal punishment is used "probably less" than in a regular class. "We go out of our way to avoid the corporal - these children respond more to praise and struc-In the Rusk class, major outbursts are rare, perhaps because the children are older or because they have had the benefit of prior behavior modification' Mrs. Estes said. One device she uses to correct certain behavior problems is the 'time out box," a three-sided cardboard structure about the size and dimensions of a refrigerator crate. "It's a place to remove a kid from whatever (disturbing) situation him if he is endangering himself or others."

She doesn't think of it as a punishment; rather as removal from the stream does."

"reinforcement environment" of the classroom — they can't win praise and approval from within the time out box. Mrs. Estes said children stay in only five to 10 minutes.

Another technique she uses is "coffee therapy." The classroom always includes a pot of hor coffee and all the necessary paraphernalia. For those students who like coffee — and there are several — it is used as a reward or a "break" in the day's routine. Further, the coffee has a soothing effect on the children and the sugar provides a stimulus for those who need it.

In both Bowie and Rusk, the program features a great amount of individualized attention reinforcement and reassurance. Mrs. Black and Mrs. Shoemaker tend to seven youngsters, while Mrs. Estes and Mrs. Bush teach five.

Although that kind of adult-student ratio "may sound ridiculous, it's absolutely necessary," said Mrs. Black. "They need very close supervision." The individualized attention often includes sending youngsters for psychological counseling sessions with professionals from Mental Health-Mental Retardation or Family Services of Midland.

Parents also are involved in the program, by way of sessions with the teachers. "We set up behavior modification schedules at home if we think it's necessary," Mrs. Estes

All the specialized attention -parent-teacher meetings, help from such organizations as MH-MR and behavior modification in the classroom - are geared toward replacing or "mainstreaming" the child into a "regular" classroom. "If we can't mainstream, the program is no good," Mrs. Black said, adding that she doesn't believe in 'isolation" of the children unless it is absolutely necessary.

Many students are mainstreamed into such classes in the regular curriculum as art, physical education and music - "the fun stuff." Eventually, teachers hope to return them to the mainstream for all classes. However, returning children to the regular curriculum full time is a detailed process, almost the reverse of entering them into the emotionally disturbed units. Enrolling the child requires referral, parental permission, a physical examination and a psychological exam by a certified psychologist. Returning them to the mainstream also involves "followwork and observation by the teachers in the emotionally disturbed Mrs. Estes said those children were placed in the special education units because of "an inner disturbance that interfered with functioning in the regular classroom." The role of the special unit teacher, she believes, is "to work them up and eatch them up (academically, emotionally and behaviorally) so they can do what everyone in the main-

Council to consider sale of apartments

Midland City Council Tuesday will study a resolution authorizing the execution of a deed selling the old Belmont and Columbia Apartments to realtor R. C. Maxon and approving a ontract for the removal and refur bishing of the area.

At council's last session two weeks ago, the group approved the sale of the apartments which are located in the southeast section of town and have been described as a safety, fire and health hazard by city and school officials. Maxon has agreed to raze the Belmont Apartments and, if possible, rehabilitate the Columbia property. In case rehabilitation is impossible the Columbia Apartments also will be removed.

Council will be considering a short, 31-item agenda during its 1:30 p.m.: session Tuesday.

Another item slated for discussion is a request by the First National Bank of Midland for air rights over

Colorado Street. The bank recently announced plans for a $12 million-plus remodel ing program, including a four-story ortion connecting two parking garage areas. That portion will span Colorado Street, and air rights are necessary since that air belongs to the city, according to City Manager

DEAR READERS: I am presently writing a book that will contain choice letters I've received in the last 20 years. In selecting the material, I came across a letter that gave me a chuckle. I hope it gives you one, too. It was published in my column in October 1968.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 44-year-old bachelor who digs women, but I'm not looking for any matrimonial involvements. I live alone in a modest bungalow and enjoy my privacy.

My problem is an aggressive divorcee who lives next door. She's not bad looking, but she comes on awfully strong. She's a rip-roarin' Republican and a Nixon booster from way back. If she sees a light in my place, she runs right over with a prepared meal and an armful of Nixon campaign literature. She's even offered to cook for me and do my ironing, but I'm not about to fall into that trap. When she's not trying to sell me on Nixon, she's talking about

You said, "You were. You should have asked your date if SHE wanted to dance with the stranger."

Well, I think you were wrong. Why should a man who goes to a supper club (and probably left his wife or girlfriend at home) expect some other guy to provide him with a girl to dance with?

I say, nuts to him. If he likes to dance, let him bring his own date!—WYOMINGITE

Church rites unite couple

Sandra Kay Williams and Billy Floyd Sims Jr. were married Sunday in Christ Presbyterian Church, with Dr. Bobby L. Stalcup, pastor, of-ficiating the double ring ceremony. Parents of the couple are Doris R. Williams of 3000 W. Illinois St., Apt. 48, and Mr. and Mrs. Bill F. Sims of Lubbeck

Sherry Williams served her sister as maid of honor and Pat Malone of Lubbock was best man. Ushers were Rick Robertson and Steve Sims, brother of the bridegroom, both of Lubbock.

Shirley Lott, organist, furnished wedding music.

The bride wore a mid-calf length gown of white Entron nylon fashioned with a V-neckline, elbow-length butterfly sleeves and pearl buttons. She wore a lace ruffled hat with a ring of blue carrations on the crown and of blue carnations on the crown and carried a white Bible.

A reception was held at 3210 Cimmaron St. After a trip to Austin, College Station and Padre Island on the Texas coast, the couple will be at home in Lubbock.

The bride is attending Texas Tech University, where she is a junior student majoring in fashion merchandising. The bridegroom, sophomore student at Texas Tech, is majoring in business administration.

The cost of security

National defense has a much broader objective than the preservation of the integrity of American political and physical boundries.

National defense is designed to protect the interests of the United States throughout the world.

The cost of achieving this goal during fiscal 1977, according to President Ford's budget proposal.

And, as the President conceded to key congressional leaders recently in seeking support for his recommendations, he has proposed the largest defense

But Mr. Ford might also have pointed out that an over-all budget review for the past decade would reveal that spending for defense programs has risen less than any

It is not enough, however, for the President to tinker with comparatives in selling his

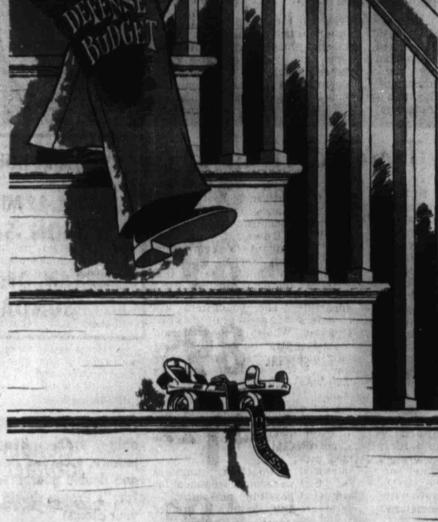

He must persuade Congress first that military balance worldwide reduces the threat of war, that control of the sea lanes and that demonstrated military strength discourages adventurism from hostile nations abroad.

Above all, he must convince Congress of the paradox that the ultimate goal of reduced armament through negotiation depends on maintaining a military might equal to that of our potential adversaries.

Mr. Ford insists that the relatively modest hike in the defense budget is possible only through sharp restraints in noncombat activities. Personnel cuts, restricted travel and fuel consumption and curtailed construction programs are cited as offsetting more emphasis on combat effectiveness.

The President makes a good case in his bid for new ships, new planes and more sophisticated strategic weapons. Congress should scrutinize his spending plan sharply to insure the efficiency Mr. Ford envisions, but it must be wary of jeopardizing the ultimate goal of eased international tensions reached through discussions given authority by strength.

PAN AMERICAN REPORT: Peron's followers hinder own regime

By WILLIAM GIANDONI Copley News Service

If Gen. Juan Domingo Peron were still alive he probably would have to switch his slogan.

Now Peron might be tempted to say: "For one Peronist, there is nothing worse than another

Gone are the days when most men and women were proud of being followers of the charismatic general. Now in the cafes and on street corners in Argentine cities where people meet to talk politics many a heated discussion can be ended simply by asking, "Whom did you vote for in 1973?" If, as is likely, because over 60 per cent of the electorate cast ballots for Peron, the heckler was a Peronist, the commotion he was making will

After almost three years of Peronist government, first under President Hector Campora, the man Peron picked as his stand-in, then under the general himself, and since July 1, 1974, under his widow, Argentina is coming to the realization that the Peronists cannot govern their potentially wealthy South American homeland either.

According to some Argentine ontemporary historians, the last good" government their country had was that which Peron gave them during his first term, from 1946 to 1952. At least, during that period, the nation seemed to prosper, its people were able to enjoy life, and, as Peron was able to brag, "For one Peronist, there is nothing better than another

Some of the late general's apologists say that a change came over him when his wife, Evita, died in over him when his wife, Evita, died in 1952, and he was not the same man during his second term of office.

His critics, of course, insist that the degeneration of the Peronist government was inevitable and that even had he not suffered a personal tragedy the events that led up to the revolution of 1955 would have taken place.

However, virtually all observers agree, the revolt of the Argentine armed forces that toppled Peron on Sept. 19, 1955, caught the bulk of the Argentine people by surprise. Peron's economic, social and political errors may well have been obvious to his critics, but what with the strict control he maintained over the press and other communications media they were not known to the masses.

The result was that for the next 18 years, a period during which eight different men tried unsuccessfully to different men tried unsuccessfully to run the country, every time a president encountered a serious problem the Peronists were able to jeer that the difficulty would not have arisen had the Peronist experiment not been terminated prematurely.

Gen. Alejandro Lanusse, the fifth military man to have given Argentina a try, finally relented and let the Peronists run their own candidate in the national elections of 1973.

Peronists run their own candidate in the national elections of 1973. Predictably the Peronists won.

But things only got worse. President Campora lasted a mere 49 days before he resigned so that Peron himself could be elected. Peron, 78 and in failing health, was never able to get a grip on the reins of government.

His widow, who had been elected vice president, was a former show girl whose first contact with Argentine politics came when she met Peron, then in exile, in Panama. After Peron, then in exile, in Panama. After his death, she fell easy victim to the practiced politicians who were maneuvering for control of the Peronist movement.

What Argentina and the world have been witnessing much of the time since mid-1974 is the struggle within Peronism, between leftist and rightist groups and among individuals within those groups.

That is to say that in Argentina

today Peronists are their own worst

Observers in Buenos Aires predict, however, that neither the opposition political parties nor the Argentine armed forces will attempt to topple armed forces will attempt to topple Mrs. Peron's government.

Rather they hope that the Peronists will stay in power long enough and make enough mistakes to convince the Argentine people that Peronism offers no solution for their own personal problems or for those that afflict the nation. Then, the voters who go to the polls next Dec. 12, distillusioned with the Peronists, will elect a better government, they say elect a better government, they say

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Political payoffs uncovered

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON - At least $8 million in illegal corporate payoffs have disappeared into the pockets of Washington politicians during the past decade.

While the spotlight has focused on corporate bribery overseas, we have investigated payoffs to politicians here at home. We have determined that political bigwigs collected the $8 million from four corporations alone: Ashland Oil, Gulf Oil, Northrop Aircraft and Phillips Petroleum.

The dimensions of the scandal indicate it may develop into a corporate Watergate.

Our reporters, Terry Repak and Marc Smolonsky, dug through Securities and Exchange Commission documents in an attempt to trace the money. They contacted 45 congressmen who were identified in the documents as recipients of illegal payments.

Our investigation even led to the White House itself. President Ford allegedly received an illegal $1,000 contribution from Phillips when he was the House Republican leader. A White House spokesman told us there was no way to verify the payment now. But he conceded the money was never returned.

When Richard Nixon occupied the White House, his campaign aides were caught accepting an illegal $100,000 contribution from Ashland in 1972. The money was returned with a big show of piety. We have now discovered that the Nixon campaign accepted an earlier $100,000 from the illegal recipients, refused to acknowledge that they got any illegal money from any corporation. Many have received letters from Gulf demanding restitution. They won't give back money, they said, that they don't recall receiving.

Only four corporations accounted for these staggering political payoffs. The SEC is investigating many other companies that were also slipping money to politicians. But no one is investigating the politicians who

INSIDE REPORT: Mo Udall's last chance viewed in April 6 balloting

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK MILWAUKEE - Rep. Morris Udall arrived in Wisconsin last week grimly determined to puncture Jimmy Carter's high soaring balloon but missed so badly that not only Udall's own presidential campaign but Sen. Hubert Humphrey's dreams for a last hurrah are seriously threatened. Udall's superficial advantages here are awesome: a year-long organizational head start, blanket support from the state's Democratic establishment and the last surviving liberal choice for a state whose Democrats selected Eugene Mc-Carthy in 1968 and George McGovern in 1972. Yet Udall is so clearly running behind Carter here that he entered Wisconsin attacking Carter as a non-liberal whose nomination would end a 52-year tradition of liberal presidential candidates.

Mo Udall, liked and admired on Capitol Hill, is no gut fighter. His attack was tepid enough to confirm the universally held view here that he faces an uphill fight against Carter. A loss April 6 would surely end Udall's campaign, leading to a facedown between Carter and Sen. Henry M. Jackson — a two-man confrontation militating . against a convention nilitating . against a convention leadlock and the brokered nomination of Humphrey.

Having picked Wisconsin a year ago as his best primary state, Udall has public endorsements from five of seven Democratic Congressmen and the legislature's Democratic leaders plus private blessings from Gov. Patrick Lucey and Sen. Gaylord Nelson. Nobody of stature is for Carter: his chairman is state Assemblyman Harout Sanasarian, a madcap consumer advocate not greatly beloved in the legislature. madcap consumer advocate not greatly beloved in the legislature.

Carter has not spent a dime nor set

Carter has not spent a dime nor set foot in Wisconsin since last June.

Yet, a scientific poll of Democratic voters by the Milwaukee Sentinel completed five days before Carter's Florida triumph shows Carter ahead (22 per cent), trailed by Jackson (13 per cent), Gov. George Wallace (11 per cent) and Udall (10 per cent). Equally impressive to politicians was a crowd showing up at Carter's Madison headquarters — "people nobody knew," reports one Democratic insider — to watch the Florida returns on television.

These inexplicable signs only leepen Udall's frustration begun nonths ago when he first observed Carter's skillfully taking both sides of every issue. Rested since finishing second in Massachusetts March 2, an second in Massachusetts March 2, an invigorated Udall arrived in Milwaukee March 15 ready to expose Carter's equivocations to Wisconsin's liberals. Indeed, in private conversation he was impassioned and But when Udall opened his Wisconsin drive with a press conference, the passion had vanished. Declaring Wisconsin "may well be the last chance" for a liberal nominee, Udall routinely criticized company divestiture, health in-surance, busing, jobs and aid to cities. The performance was so pedestrian that the NBC team following Udall did not bother offering it for the network Worried about Carter's gains among black voters, Udall later that day told black clergymen that Car-ter's stand for "voluntary" busing means that "when it comes to the crunch, he's against your con-stitutional rights." Udall also hit hard on Rhodesia and South Africa, declaring: "These racist govern-ments won't last long." But the reaction was impassive, centrasting with tearful . emotion evoked by Carter's non-substantive talk of brotherhood at a black church in Chicago four days earlier.

Nor has Udall cornered the state's liberal activists. His grass roots organization does not compare with organization does not compare with Sen. McGovern's 1972 Wisconsin operation — or, for that matter, with Fred Harris's 1976 Wisconsin operation. Despite Harris's decision not to campaign here, his Wisconsin forces have decided on a "guerrilla" campaign for Harris instead of getting behind Udall.

That leaves the Udall campaign relying heavily on the politically sophisticated left-of-center unions. Carl Wagner, a political operative for the public employees union (AFthe public employees union (AF-SCME), has been sent from Washington to Madison to coordinate labor's pro-Udall activity. Capping that effort is the endorsement of Udall (expected momentarily at this writing) by Ray Majeris, Milwaukee-based regional director for the United Auto Workers, after getting a green light from pro-Carter UAW president Leonard Woodcock.

A close second to Udall's push for vital UAW backing is his quest for an by Gov. Lucey, whose advisers deeply doubt Udall can be nominated even if he wins here. Such skepticism is widespread, casting a pall over his campaign. Typical was the dogged local television reporter who insisted at Udall's Milwaukee press conference that he discuss plans to withdraw from the race. To salvage Udall's candidacy, some supporters are not claiming it is endorsement and active campaigning viable but are calling it essential to keep the Humphrey option open.

Udall booster Martin Hanson, a veteran Wisconsin liberal, has successfully urged some Wisconsin Humphreyites that Humphrey's only chance is a Udall win April 6.

To spread this message beyond political sophisticates will require Udall's convincing Wisconsin liberals that Jimmy Carter so menaces their cause that some alternative — Udall, Humphrey, whomever — is imperative. That is a hatchet job for which Mo Udall, the good-natured old basketball player from Tucson, is spectacularly unsuited.

Several members of Congress have aformed the administration that any effort to sell arms to Egypt through the government's foreign military sales program would result in a bitter debate.

Humphrey and Sens. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Clifford Case, R-N.J., all members of the Foreign Relations Committee, have suggested a compromise: sell the cargo planes through commercial channels and to Egypt this year.

If the U.S. government is involved in a government is involved in a government-to-government sale of the planes, it gives official U.S. government sanction to the transaction. On the other hand, that controversy would be reduced if the sale were done on a private basis.

So far, said Humphrey in an interview, both Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger have refused to agree to limit sales to the planes. "The President seems to be adamant about that," said the Minnesota Democrat.

Humphrey said he and other members of Congress have had several meetings with administration officials to try to work out a compromise. But he said there has been no progress so far.

Did he take that as an indication the administration has further arms sales in mind? "I don't think there's any doubt of it," he said.

The Los Angeles Times
ATLANTA — The place looks like an 1880s ghost town recycled beneath

The very name - Underground Atlanta - conjures up visions of the post-Confederacy South.

That is partly what its promoters hoped to capitalize on seven years ago when they transformed two blocks of Atlanta's deserted underbelly into the city's best-known fun zone — a cluster of shops, restaurants and nightclubs.

WALK AMONG the gaslighted streets in this old railroad and warehouse district - the city's birthplace, now canopied by concrete viaducts - and you step into a time capsule. The past and present exist side by side here, but the crowds have dwindled, and the future of Underground Atlanta is uncertain.

Actually, the Underground isn't underground; it just seems that way. In the 1890s, long after Atlanta had risen from the ashes of the Civil the townspeople complained that trains chugging through downtown were clogging traffic and killing businesses, as well as an occasional pedestrian. "The time has arrived where to delay longer than is absolutely necessary the building of a viaduct over the railroad tracks between Whitehall and Peachtree (streets) would amount to criminal neglect,' said Mayor James C. Woodward in his annual message to the City Council in 1899.

So, up went concrete overpasses over several downtown streets and rail crossings. And up went the shops and restaurants and other assorted businesses from the first to the second floor, leaving the street, or first, floor to serve as basements or warehouses or loading docks.

THE ABANDONED STREETS pecame a dank and dreary eyesore for decades.

But at last Underground Atlanta was born, and from the first it teemed with crowds and with fancifully named shops symbolic of the old city: Ruby Red's Warehouse, Kenney's Alley, and the Burning of Atlanta Bar.

At Muhlenbrink's Saloon, the venerable jazz' entertainer, Piano Red, pounds a rickety upright and sings ragtime while waiters serve rum-aud-fruit-juice drinks labeled 'Flaming Hurricanes." (Overpriced at $4, but you can keep the glass).

At the Pickrick Restaurant, you can sometimes find the proprietor former Georgia Gov. Lester G. Maddox - hawking autographed ax handles when he's not whistling birdcalls to the strains of a player piano.

Both the economic recession and fears of inner-city crime, if not crime itself, have prompted many Atlantans to go to the city's outskirts for night life, leaving downtown Underground to hotel-dwelling conventioneers and other visitors.

Caution urged with herbicides

AUSTIN — Agriculture Commissioner John C. White has urged all Midland County farmers who use 2,4-D and other hormone-type herbicides to exercise particular caution this spring in observing application regulations.

Midland County is among 76 in the state which opted to observe the regulations administered by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

"These hormone-type herbicides are essential in production plans of some farmers but they can be a serious problem to other if wise practices are not followed," White said.

He reminded farmers they must obtain permits to spray this type herbicide on plots of 10 acres or more. On smaller plots the farmer must notify the agriculture department before he sprays.

White advised checking surrounding fields for susceptible crops prior to application.

Herbicides can drift during application from the target area and will affect crops such as cotton and other broad-leaf plants. Other vegetation severely damaged by herbicides are fruits, vegetables and ornamentals.

White suggested a spray pressure of 20 to 30 pounds for herbicide use. "Spraying is best done when winds are from 0-3 mph and temperatures are less than 90 degrees Fahrenheit. When winds reach 10 mph." he said, "and temperatures exceed 90 degrees, the operations should be halted.

Reagan, Wallace busy in North Carolina

Associated Press Writer Republican Ronald Reagan and Democrat George Wallace blitzed North Carolina today for votes in Tuesday's presidential primary, while President Ford and Jimmy Carter, the apparent frontrunners, looked ahead to future races.

In Washington, R. Sargent Shriver prepared to announce a decision on the future of his already shaky Democratic campaign. Shriver, after a poor showing in Illinois last week, said he would limit his efforts to Texas' May 1 primary and the elec-tion May 8 in Marlland.

And the Federal Election Commission was scheduled to meet, also in Washington, to certify a final $1 million to presidential candidates. Its authority to give out matching federal funds expires at midnight under a Supreme Court order.

North Carolina's election is important to both Reagan and Wallace, who are trying to reverse earlier primary setbacks. They have spent more time campaigning in the state than the others.

Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson, Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall and former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris also are trying for some of North Carolina's 61 Democratic convention delegates. But Jackson visited the state only once during the campaign and Randall and Harris not at all, concentrating their efforts on other upcoming races.

Ford spent some time over the weekend in North Carolina, and aides said after he left that they are confident of a sixth straight victory over Reagan, the former California governor. Carter, the ex-Georgia governor, was working elsewhere as the week ended.

Reagan scheduled appearances today at the Asheville, Charlotte, Greensboro-High Point and Raleigh-Durham airports before leaving in late afternoon to campaign in Wisconsin for the April 6 primary

Wallace prepared for a news con-ference in Charlotte, to be followed by a motorcade trip across the southern part of the state, with stops in five towns. He planned to return to his home in Montgomery, Ala., at Reagan, in Asheville Sunday, told campaign workers he still believes his challenge to Ford for the GOP nomination is going better than he thought it would when he started. North Carolina "might be the first chance where there is a possibility of a victory," he said.

But he added, "We're not so op-timistic as to say that we felt we were in any way a frontrunner."

The Wallace camp, too, spoke with guarded optimism about the fourth confrontation in a row with Carter The Alabama governor finished ahead of Carter in Massachusetts

Check furnace filters once a month and save money.

Why check filters regularly? A dirty filter makes your furnace work harder and use more electricity. Either replace a dirty filter or clean it as recommended by your furnace manufacturer.

Here are other ways to get your heating dollar's worth:

Set your thermostat lower. When you lower the thermostat setting, you also lower your energy use and cost.

Be sure your home meets the latest FHA home insulation standards. You can save as much as 20 percent or more on energy consumption if your home is well insulated.

Consider installing a humidifier. At lower thermostat settings, your home will be more com-fortable with additional humidity.

Open draperies or shades on the sumny side of the house. Let the sunshine heat your home. When the weather is cold and gray, keep draperies closed to help keep the heat inside.

Painting exhibit opens

ROSWELL, N. M. — A new exhibition of paintings by noted New Mexico artist Sidney Redfield has opened at the Roswell Museum and Art Center.

Redfield, born in Minneau Redited, born in Minneapolis in 1901, is no stranger to the Roswell Museum. By 1948, when he went to Taos to study with the late Oscar Berninghaus (one of the founding members of the famous Taos Society of Artists), he had already had oneman shows at the museum, in 1939 and 1947. Since then, Roswell exhibitions of his work have been numerous, taking place in 1949, 1954, 1959 and 1962. His paintings also have been included in several exhibits at the Museum of New Mexico in Santa Fe during the 1940s and '50s.

It has been said of Redfield that "he captures the arid beauty and hostility of the country with an insight rare to the self-taught artist." The self-taught artist is nowadays something of a rarity himself, but when combined with the skill and discipline which Redfield possesses, it is an exceptional case indeed.

Redfield attended New Mexico Military Institute at Roswell in the early 1920s and went on to earn a degree in chemical engineering from Stanford University. He followed his profession as a chemical engineer for many years, while at the same keeping active as an artist.

Redfield's exhibition will remain on view at the museum for the next several weeks and the public may view it without charge weekdays as well as Sundays.

There is reason to rejoice, of course, in the detaching of this performance from Walter's complete set of Beethoven symphonies, and that reason is exemplified in another record released simultaneously: Odyssey Y 33925, which contains the Walter reading of the "Eroica." It is a substantial performance, as well interpreted as most but not in the same class with Walter's "Pastoral" and sometimes (note the uneven firm believer in "live" music, and he prides himself that his company is one of the few modern dance troupes on today's scene that performs only to live, non-electronic music. It has never given public performances utilizing tapes or other recordings.

Accordingly, in the forthcoming concerts, the orchestra will be seated onstage behind the area, bearing out Hawkins' conviction that musicians should be seen as well as heard.

"Using canned music is like having a canned bull-fight," Hawkins has declared on occasion.

"The real life-giving quality of the dance is its immediacy, its flesh-and-blood— so the audience can watch the 'pulse' of the dancer. In the same way, the music must be experienced moment by moment. Human beings are making that music and they should be seen in the act of making it. Music is not just an ac-companiment — if music is not actual theater, it is not good enough. EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY

If you just happen to be a type of "Sherlock Holmes" who can administer a particular technique of salesmanship . . . you may be the man we are looking for . . If you're the kind of individual who can "snoop" out a deal find the oyster with the pearl ... uncover a "sleeper" ... AND ... can sell those involved that you have the best way for all concerned to capitalize on it ... WE WANT TO TALK TO YOU!!!

We are a 30-year old Dallas, Texas based firm, highly reputable and financially sound ... considered by many, including our competitors, to be the leader in our highly professional field. We have many times experienced national prominence from our activities and we're now expanding with a new and innovative marketing approach to meet the sometimes hidden demands for which our service provides the key.

To be considered . . the individual we are looking for should also be somewhat knowledgeable . . and hopefully, have a good working and perhaps even personal relationship with some of the business and political leaders of the area in which he resides. He must also be mature. active, aggressive and aware of current events. His character must reflect high integrity with a dependable, respectable and self-starting, industrious reputation. He should also have a fairly recent, verifiable, proven successful track record in sales, management or as a businessman. His current financial condition and credit standing must also be stable. Type of business or educational background not all that critical. ALL APPLICANTS THAT MEET THE FOREGOING RE-QUIREMENTS WILL BE CAREFULLY CONSIDERED.

Renumeration for this position will be in the form of commissions plus certain types of expenses. Some of our representatives have earned in excess of $50,000 their very first year.

We sincerely hope you are the exceptional individual for this EX-CEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY! If so, write for further details to: Box H-21,c/o Midland Reporter-Telegram

But the American Basketball Association, which has filed antitrust action for this and other alleged actvities, may be guilty of the same

Several team officials from the NBA have confirmed the previous existence of a pooling arrangement to pay for the league's top stars. But one NBA official charged that the ABA has engaged in the same prac-

LEGAL SOURCES say that if the charge is substantiated, it could jeopardize the ABA's antitrust suit against the NBA under the "clean hands doctrine," which prevents a party from seeking damages for a violation if it has engaged in the same illegal practice. The ABA has filed an antitrust case in federal court here and the suit is scheduled to go to trial June 1. But the ABA may have committed similar actions, which could pull the rug out from under its restraint of trade arguments, several attorneys

William Alverson, president of the Milwaukee Bucks, confirmed Sunday a New York Times story which said that all the NBA teams were contributing part of the big-dollar salaries of such superstars as Rick Barry, Kareem Abdul Jabbar and Eivin Hayes. The Times said the practice began in 1968 and continued for at least five years.

"IT WAS done with something like one player per team, not just four or five in the league," said Alverson. "We pooled the total salaries, and clubs either got money back or sent the net to the league office to even

"It ended in 1971," Alverson said. We cut it out because the ABA claimed in a lawsuit that it was hurting them. Since then, the ABA has been doing exactly the same thing, after complaining about it."

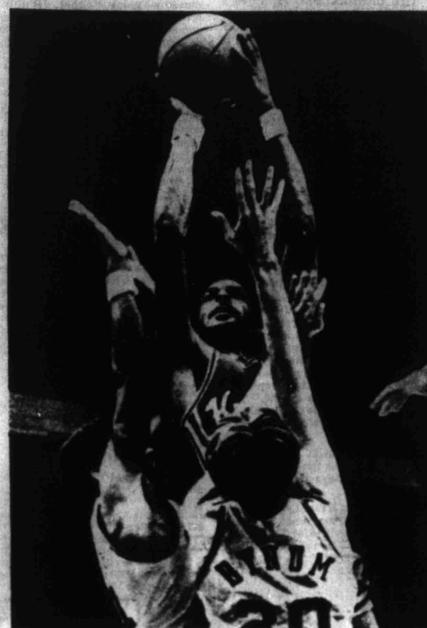

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Golden State Warriors, said, however, that the practice lasted until the 1973 season. He said that part of Barry's annual salary was paid by the other NBA teams after Barry returned to the NBA in 1972, but that the NBA hasn't shared in those payments in the last two years. An ABA source said he did not know if his league had done any pooling to pay its biggest salaries, but he confirmed that the league had reduced some team's assessments because they had signed some highpriced stars.

THE TIMES could find no direct evidence that the ABA had a similar share-the-salary agreement as the NBA, but found documents on file in federal court here that "make clear that some ABA teams got reductions in their league assessments for signing such stars as Julius Erving (New York) and David Thompson

Several attorneys questioned were uncertain whether reduced assessments were equivalent to the NBA's documented pooling practices.

One lawyer theorized that "even if the ABA did pool its teams to pay some players, it could be argued that what is illegal for the big guy in an antitrust action may not be illegal for the little guy."

Another lawyer said the ABA could claim any alleged restraint-of-trade activities were done in response to the NBA's actions. "The ABA could say," the lawyer theorized, "it was more unreasonable for them to act so we should still get damages.'

Bartow,

By Associated Press

Gene Bartow remembers the first time UCLA played Indiana this season. It's not a very pleasant memory, but it's one he's getting a chance to erase.

"It was my first game at UCLA." said the man who stepped into the shoes of the legendary John Wooden as coach of the Bruins. "It meant so much to me, the pressure that was on me was extended to our players. I think we were over-prepared.'

Indiana overran UCLA 84-64 in that season opener in St. Louis Nov. 29, the Hoosiers' first triumph in a perfect string of 30 so far this year. The Bruins, meanwhile, stumbled through the early part of their schedule but then put the pieces together to win the Pacific-8 title and berth in the NCAA tournament, where they are defending the title they won 10 of the past 12 years Bruins remember opener under Wooden.

BARTOW WILL get a chance to wipe out the memory of that initial defeat Saturday when Indiana and UCLA square off again in the NCAA semifinals at the Spectrum in Philadelphia. It's the second game of a doubleheader that will be nationally televised (NBC, 1 p.m., CST), with Rutgers, 31-0, and Michigan, 24-6, meeting in the first semifinal. The winners meet in the final Monday night, March 29.

If top-ranked Indiana's 65-56 triumph over No. 2 Marquette in the Mideast Regional Saturday was the Game of the Year, the UCLA-Indiana matchup must rate as the Rematch of the Year. And Bartow and his troops say things will be different this time around. "If we play like we have in 13 of our last 16 games," said Bartow,

"we're going to be ready, real

"We will be a lot better," promised UCLA forward Marques Johnson. "When we played them last November, they were a veteran ballclub who had played together for three years and they were pointing for that game like it was a national championship.

'It's going to be a good game, a great game for college basketball," added guard Ray Townsend. "We are different. We are smoother, more together, more intense than the last time.'

THE LAST time, All-American center Kent Benson of Indiana was the dominant factor, controling play at both ends of the court. But since then, 6-foot-10 freshman David Greenwood has replaced 7-2 senior Ralph Drollinger as UCLA's starting pivotman, and Bartow hopes the two of them will be enough to contain

Also on display in the big rematch will be two of the game's premier forwards, Scott May of Indiana and Richard Washington of UCLA. The 6-foot-7 May is a first-team AllAmerican and college basketball's Player of the Year, while the 6-101/2 Washington was a secondteam All-American.

Both played prominent roles in Saturday's regional finals.

Washington scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds to lead fifthranked UCLA, 26-4, past 15th-ranked Arizona 82-66 in the West Regional on UCLA's home floor, Pauley Pavilion. The game was tied 58-58 with eight minutes left before UCLA broke it open with 12 consecutive points, Washington getting two baskets and an assist in the burst.

Green does it again counts himself a lucky man. 'I'm lucky I can play golf for a living." he said. "I'm lucky that playing golf enables me to go all over the world, places my mother and father never even thought about going. I've played in Australia and New Zealand and Morocco and Japan. I've played in England and Scotland and other places in Europe. I'm lucky I can do this. Not everybody can." And how about the money he's piled up while playing his game, well over one-half million dollars in the last 31/2 seasons? Money isn't everything," Green replied in his curiously quick, clipped delivery. "It's nice to have, but it isn't everything.

"I'm trying to pile up the titles, not money. If you win the titles, win the golf tournaments, the money

It was the second title in as many weeks for the man who calls himself "just a skinny kid from Birmingham," and the 11th, including a Japanese title, in his career.

Now Green, who won this one by two strokes with a 12-underpar total of 276, would like to get lucky enough to win one of the game's Big Four crowns.

BY TED BATTLES

Looking back on the rebuilding year that wound up in a Super finish, Dallas wide receiver Golden Richards attributed the Cowboys' surprising successes to a variety of factors that just seemed to help the team mesh.

BATTLE SCENE

Of course, the bargain basement acquisition of Preston Pearson didn't exactly wipe away the running memories of Calvin Hill, but as a pass receiver, Preston provided the Cowboys' offense with an added dimension.

"With all those rookies on the squad, we had a rah rah spirit we'd never had before," Richards said. "And then there was Coach Tom Landry himself."

Richards went on, "He changed some of his philosphies, loosened up and relaxed some of the rules. There was no Holiday Inn the night before a home game for the team and no curfew.

"DESPITE SOME of the stories, there's not as much carousing around the night before a game as some people believe. After all, we are professional athletes and we have to be ready the day of the game athletes and we have to be ready the day of the game or we're not going to be around very long."

The Shotgun offense was another factor. Used primarily on third down passing situations, Richards agreed that it gave quarterback Roger Staubach that good look at defenses.

"And it was a sensible move," Richards added. "With third and long, who are you fooling when you line up in your regular formation?"

Richards intimated that there was a lot more to the Shotgun, or Spread as he preferred to call it, than

Shotgun, or Spread as he preferred to call it, than met the average fan's eye. "We had different variations and sets for different situations, depenwhether we were in our own territory, in the osition's territory, inside the 20 or in the last two utes of a half."

AFTER STUMBLING through a tough preseason schedule with a disappointing won-lost record, the game that made the Cowboys probably was the season opening win over the Los Angeles Rams, picked by many as the team to most likely meet and beat the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Super Bowl.

"Landry called it the best defensive game he ever had a team play. He told us after the game that defensively it was perfect, except for one or two plays. As it turned out, it was even better than the playoff victory over Los Angeles, although the score in that game was more decisive," Richards said.

Richards feels that when Staubach is ready to hang up his shoulder pads, the Cowboys have a "diamond in the rough" standing in the wings.

"Clint Longley can do it. He needs game experience, but not as much as most people think," asserts Golden.

"EVERYBODY TALKS about that game two years ago when he came off the bench to beat Washington after the Redskins had knocked Staubach out of the game. But in the final game last season against the Jets, he showed something.

"The weather and playing conditions were terrible in New York. Nothing was at stake. There was no incentive and no one was fired up for the game, yet Clint started and did an efficient, professional job of running the club. He gained a lot of respect from the part of the team with that performance."

rest of the team with that performance."

There's just one thing about Longley,...those

"It seems like he always has seven or eight of them with him," Richards complained. "Before one game, he turned one loose in the locker room."

It was suggested that it probably loosened up the "Loose! It tightened everybody up with fear. And it was before a playoff game, too."

Yankees lose

Court decision

New York (AP) —
The New York Yankees have lost in court their claim to 13 Yankees Stadium fixtures that were destroyed when New York City condemned the old stadium in 1972 in preparation for its rennovation.

The fixtures included such items as the electronic scoreborad, the playing field and 64,859 seats.

"I may miss a few calls today but your serve is so fast I don't always see it so no hard feelings?"

"No hard feelings?"

"Wedderburn replied and then went out and won a pulsating tie-breaker first set from the third seeded Walker and then cruised to an easy second well when I needed it," said Wedderburn, who missed 23 of his 41 first serves in the opening set.

A good example of Wedderburn's serving when needed came at set

49ers' delay proves fatal

NEW YORK (AP) - The North Carolina-Charlotte 49ers took three bites of the "Big Apple"—but couldn't get the fourth down.

After delicious victories over the University of San Francisco, Oregon and North Carolina State, time finally ran out Sunday for the Cinderella team of the 1976 National Invitation Tournament.

"I think we did a tremendous job and I'm really proud of my team, said North CarolinaCharlotte Coach Lee Rose after losing the NIT finals 71-67 to the red-hot Kentucky Wildcats. "I think you must keep in mind that Kentucky's got three high school All-Americas on their team-and we have none.'

THE UNHERALDED 49ers had a seven-point lead with ten minutes left in the game and the opportunity to knock off one of college basketball's traditional powers. But strangely, they went into a slowdown while Kentucky's entire starting front line was sitting on the bench in foul trouble.

When they started backing off," ssid Kentucky Coach Joe Hall, "that was just fine with us. We ap-preciated that."

Eventually Mike Phillips, Jack Givens and James Lee- all of them saddled with four fouls-came back into the game to help Kentucky win the 39th NIT title.

The Wildcats, who landed in the finals at Madison Square Garden with close victories over Niagara, Kansas State and Providence, didn't do things the easy way in the championship game, either. Phillips scored five points in the last minute. including a crucial tap-in on a missed foul shot, and the 49ers contributed two key turnovers at the

"PHILLIPS' big play at the end was a super effort," said Hall, whose team was given up for dead in midseason but finished with 10 straight victories. "The big thing about this team is that for the last 10 games, they have simply refused to be beaten. I had all the confidence in the world that we were going to win this one.' Hall, whose Wildcats lost the NCCA championship game last year to UCLA, put the whip cream on his 1975-76 season by beating the 49ers.

The Wildcats' dramatic victory overshadowed a splendid performance by UNC-Charlotte's Cedric Maxwell, who scored 24 of his tournamentleading 109 points to win the NIT's Most Valuable Player prize.

Arco takes steps to become natural resources company The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - The nation's 18th largest industrial corporation has lately resembled a compulsive horse trader in the paddocks.

The firm is Los Angeles-based Atlantic Richfield Co., and in the last seven weeks it has announced various plans to buy and sell some $700 million worth of properties. The total is equal to almost 10 per cent of Highlighting the list of deals was its announcement last week of a $162 million tender offer for 6 million common shares of Anaconda Co. That would give Arco a 27 per cent interest in the New York-based metals producer and mark its first important step outside of the energy

While the rash of deals may give the company the appearance of a wheeler-dealer, however, they are actually all part of a dual corporate strategy, according to top Arco-financial and planning executives.

Part of that strategy — to balance its U.S. oil production, refining, and marketing capabilities in order to become independent of foreign supplies - has been public knowledge for more than a year.

But the other part - to broaden itself into a "natural resources company" through diversification - has "manifested itself publicly" with announcement of the Anaconda offer, these executives told The Los Angeles Times. While Arco is "not trying to become a conglomerate," they said, it has become increasingly interested in "related" businesses as the political climate surrounding various energy ventures has deteriorated.

"We're putting out money where we think it's entirely clear we can get a good reutrn on our investment," said Richard M. Bressler, Arco's senior vice president of Returns aside, Arco has been juggling a lot of valuable assets lately. In early February it announced the tentative sale of its East Chicago, Ind., refinery for $80 million plus another $30 million return of working capital. On March 3 it revealed details of an ongoing sale of its gasoline stations in all or part of 14 Midwestern states. And two days after that it announced that it was negotiating the sale of its wholly owned Canadian subsidiary to the Canadian national oil corporation for $400 million. Then came the Anaconda announcement last week.

Bressler, corporated planning vice president Robert E. Wycoff, and financing the tax division vice president Claude O. Goldsmith gave The Times an inside look at how the Anaconda move came to pass and the reasoning behind it.

Arco's first "conversations" with Anaconda date back to 1968, Wycoff said. Arco "talked to a number of copper companies then" but nothing panned out. Arco's interest was renewed last summer when Crane Co., a diversified New York manufacturer, first offered to buy 5 million Anaconda shares (22,6 per cent of the total) in exchange for $100 million worth of Crane debentures, according to Wycoff.

After three extensions of its offer and opposition by Anaconda's management, Crane wound up early this month with 4.1 million shares, or 18.6 per cent of the total. But it was blocked by a court order from significantly increasing its Anaconda holdings and from seeking representation on the metals firm's board.

Meanwhile, Tenneco Inc., a Houston-based conglomerate, and Anaconda mana gement had on Feb. 2 announced agreement in principle on a merger of those two firms in a $500 million exchange of stock. Under Montana law (Anaconda is incorporated there) the merger would have required approval of two-thirds of Anaconda's shareholders. And Crane's announcement on Feb. 3 that it would vote its shares against the Tenneco offer made it uncertain whether the necessary votes would be forthcoming.

A drop in the price of Tenneco's stock following its revelations in mid-February of $12 million in questionable payments to overseas consultants and agents further soured looked like an opening to us," said

Within days of the Tenneco overseas payments announcement, Arco began a series of brief, "informal discussions" with Anaconda management during which it mentioned "the possibility of (Arco) making a substantial capital investment" in the metals firm.

Two days after Crane's tender offer for Anaconda shares expired on March 8, Arco Chairman Robert O. Anderson telephoned Crane Chairman Thomas M. Evans seeking certain assurances related to Arco's intended offer. And the next day — March 11 — the two companies reached agreement providing Arco with a two-year right of first refusal should Crane decide to sell any of its 4.1 million Anaconda shares. Crane also pledged not to tender any of those shares pursuant to the Arco of-

Arco immediately began preparing the legal notice of its tender offer, which took up three newspaper pages. It used code names to prevent any leak of its intentions - when the notice first went to the printer on March 12, Anaconda was "Adcoanan" and Arco was "Marcus

The printer and the public got first wind of what was really going on shortly after Arco directors approved the offer at a Chicago board meeting last Tuesday afternoon After Arco's agreement with Crane was revealed Wednesday morning effectively blocking any Tenneco takeover of Anaconda — the Houston firm withdrew from further merger discussions. Crane's Evans said the Arco offer is "a matter between Atlantic Richfield and each individual Anaconda shareholder, and on Thursday, Anaconda said it would not oppose the oil company.
Ultimately, Arco is thinking of much more than a 27 per cent in-terest in Anaconda. "We don't just make investments in companies," commented Wycoff. If there is a merger, Anaconda "could provide attractive investment opportunities of considerable magnitude," he add-

Preservationists want to dingbat' designs

By SETH MYDANS Associated Press Writer

When Richard Gutman travels the country, he has eyes only for diners — long, sleek silver ones or squashed little greasy ones like Buddy's Truck Stop in Somerville, Mass.

Paul Ivory sometimes goes miles out of his way to visit a particularly eye-catching gas station - the vintage Chinese pagoda, for instance, in Milwaukee.

They may sound like an odd pair of tourists, but their detours are only partly for pleasure. Gutman and Ivory consider themselves archaeologists of a sort, trying to save a bit of Americana that is slipping into history almost unnoticed. It's the architecture of an earlier auto age - not just diners and gas stations, but motels, car washes, drivein movies, parking lots, toll booths - a genre of "dingbat architecture" designed to catch the eve of a person traveling 40 m.p.h. along the net-work of two-lane macadam roads that linked American towns between 1920 and 1950.

DINGBAT DESIGN, the fanciful term coined by the new preservationists, includes such ornaments as the whale-shaped car wash, the Indian teepee selling Western souvenirs, the ice cream stand that looks like an eskimo pie, and the donut shop with a giant donut on the roof: gaudy, individualistic, purely American.

"It's the last bastion of American individualism," says historian Peter H. Smith, a leader of the movement he calls "commercial archaeology."

Today from coast to coast, fastfood chains are replacing the hamburger-shaped eatery and the all-chrome diner. Carbon-copy modular gas stations with clip-on mansard roofs are uprooting the mushrooms, windmills and lighthouses that once caught the eye. Indoor suburban theaters are driving the drive-ins out of business. Environmental regulations are sweeping billboards off the landscape. Mass-produced plastic-vacuum signs are doing away with hand-crafted

THE PROBLEM was discussed at a recent meeting in Boston of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, where the usual concerns are Bullfinch churches and the birthplaces of famous men.

'What this country really needs is a museum of the American highway," Smith said, a museum that preserves dingbat architecture in much the same way Williamsburg, Va., preserves colonial architecture.

In Ipswich, Mass., the friedclam capital of New England, there's a food stand shaped like a fried clam box. Castroville, Calif., in the heart of artichoke country, has a restaurant shaped like an artichoke.

And thousands of miles away from Honolulu, in Merchantville, N.J., there's the Hawaiian Cottage Theater Restaurant, shaped like a giant pineapple.
All were built to serve travelers two, three and four decades ago. There's a seafood restaurant that looks like a ship, a chain of cheese stores built like wheels of cheese, and uncounted ice cream parlors around the country shaped like igloos or decorated with icicles hanging from their eaves.

THE LATE LAMENTED One-Stop Flea Spot on a road into Washington, D.C. sold flea powder and resembled a huge dog. A duck farm along Route 27 on Long Island. N.Y., has a building snaped like a gigantic duck. The building has given rise to a general descriptive term for these gaudy creations: "the Long Island duckling school of architecture."

A few small steps have been taken toward preservation.

The 1917 pagoda-style gas station in Milwaukee is a listed landmark of that city, owned by Mobil Oil Corp. and still pumping gas. In Washington D.C., public pressure forced Gulf Oil Corp. to preserve a classic 1937 station, also in operation today.

Gutman calls the diner "one of the ultimate examples of American indigenous architecture ... the complete factory-built job right down from the days of its birth as a horsedrawn lunch wagon to the super-deluxe 20-unit modular restaurant of the 1970s."

Ivory, a museum director for the National Trust, says gas stations have conformed to a "tradition of garisnness" right from the start.

THE FIRST ONE opened in 1911, and Dallas, Detroit and Houston each claims to be the site. Since then, America has seen gas stations that look like windmills, castles, mosques, pagodas, mushrooms, lighthouses, skyscrapers and women's dresses.

Examples of most of these styles exist today, many still pumping gas, many unrecognized as the architectural gems that Ivory says they are. But others have been torn down, remodeled or abandoned, and still others have been put to such unexpected uses as selling bicycles, shoes

Diners, motels, gasoline stations they may not be everybody's idea of beauty, but Smith, Gutman, Ivory and their colleagues argue that they have transformed the American landscape and there should be recognition.
