Indiana, Alabama, Georgia occupy political spotlight

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

President Ford is campaigning for a comeback in Indiana while Ronald Reagan seeks to turn the momentum his way in a Republican presidential contest that may be raging long after the Democrats settle on their White House nominee.

Ford said he remains confident that he will win the GOP nomination, and ranking politicians in both parties agree.

But he won't win it quietly, not now that Reagan has scored a surprising wipeout in the Texas presidential primary election. It was a victory that sional districts. It was a delegate selection primary, with no popular vote test. But Reagan's leading delegate candidates pulled two-thirds of the ballots.

In the Democratic primary, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter scored his own sweep, and cemented his dominance in that campaign. He captured 92 delegates, leaving only six for Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, who ran as a favorite son in an election he engineered to serve his own presidential campaign. Bentsen quit the presidential race early. He won renomination for the Senate, to run against Rep. Alan Steelman of Dallas.

Carter said Sunday that he plans to spend more time now contacting party leaders, making sure all Democrats "feel welcome in the Carter camp," in an effort to unite the party he expects to lead.

"I think now my time would best be spent two or three days a week on the phone," said Carter, who now has 447 of the 1,505 delegate votes needed for nomination. Nobody else is close to him.

Indeed, the man in second place, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, quit the race Saturday for lack of campaign money. That leaves Carter virtually unchallenged in the Democratic primary in Indiana.

His active rivals now are Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona, who said Sunday he'll stop Carter; Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace; Sen. Frank Church of Idaho; and Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California.

Carter now has won eight primaries. Udall and Wallace haven't won any. Church and Brown haven't run yet; their first tests come in mid-May.

Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who opposed Carter in the primary, said the victory there assured the Georgian of the Democratic nomination.

While that may have been an overstatement, there is no one in sight now to stop Carter, with Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey determined to stay out of the race, and Church and Brown untested.

So, ironically, the Democrats who began with a census of a dozen candidates have seen their race steadily narrowed, to the point that it could be all but settled before convention time. They meet July 12 in New York.

And the Republicans, the party in the White House, face the long campaign — with the likelihood that it will become increasingly bitter.

President Ford has won six primaries, and Texas was only the second for Reagan. But the victories came when he needed them, in North Carolina to dampen talk that he ought to drop from the race, and in Texas to prove that he can win big in the South and Southwest.

It means that he'll be running all the way, through the primaries that end on June 8, and the summer weeks before convention time. It also points to an escalating campaign debate, since Reagan has scored his victories in states where he took a hard line against Ford on foreign and defense policies, denouncing Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and charging the administration has let America slump to second place militarily. What worked for him twice is certain to be the formula for the rest of the race.

Ford, on his part, has retorted with sharp words, saying that Reagan is glib, superficial, inexperienced. That, too, is likely to continue.

As a result, the Republicans could face increasing stress and divisions before they are able to align behind a single candidate for the autumn campaign.

Ford campaigned today in Indianapolis and in Birmingham, Ala. Reagan was at work in Indiana. They meet in those states and also in Georgia on Tuesday.

Ford was described as disappointed at the results in Texas, but White House Press Secretary Ron Nesher (Continued on Page 2A)

Presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan breaks into a smile when asked his reaction to his sweeping victory in the Texas primary.

Analysis

virtually guaranteed that the former California governor will be campaigning all the way to the Kansas City convention that begins Aug. 16.

By gaining all 96 delegates elected in Texas Saturday, Reagan cut into Ford's lead in nationwide delegate strength. But the President is still ahead, and by a comfortable margin when uncommitted delegates who are really on his side are tallied.

Nonetheless, Reagan now has the credentials of a winner, the proof of his Southern campaign strategy, and the victory he needed to impress potential contributors.

His Texas sweep exceeded anybody's guess. Reagan himself had thought the race was a close one, and Ford had said at one point that he expected to win.

But Reagan, boosted by the votes of conservative Democrats whose crossover produced a record GOP turnout, won in all 24 Texas congress-

Kissinger to propose Third World fund

By BARRY SCHWEID

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will propose a billion-dollar international fund this week to help Third World countries develop new sources of income, U.S. officials report.

The officials said Kissinger would propose creation of an "international resources bank" when he speaks Thursday to the U.N. Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD). It will be the third major policy speech of his six-nation African tour. Officials said Kissinger's plan calls for the oil-exporting nations to put up about half of the capital and the industrial countries the rest.

Using this capital, the bank would sell bonds on the international market. The proceeds would be used to create new sources of income in countries hurt by falling prices of coffee, sugar and other commodities that are their main source of export income.

Kissinger is also expected to put forward plans to direct private capital to developing countries through multinational corporations.

Spokesmen for some of the poor countries have condemned Kissinger's proposals in advance as devices to continue domination by the United States and the other industrial countries.

UNCTAD Secretary-General Gamani Corea of Sri Lanka has proposed a $6-billion fund to finance integrated buffer stocks of 10 commodities: coffee, cocoa, sugar, tea, jute, hard fibers, cotton, rubber, tin and copper. The fund would buy these commodities when prices are low and sell when prices are high to smooth out price swings.

The United States and some other industrial nations oppose this idea. They say each commodity presents its own market problems that must be solved individually. And some of the poor countries object because a global commodity plan might wipe out trade advantages they have already negotiated on specific raw materials.

The industrial nations also reject as inflationary a proposal to tie commodity prices to the prices of manufactured goods that the poor countries import.

Kissinger arrived Sunday from Senegal, the sixth nation on his tour of black Africa. After stopping first in Kenya, he visited Tanzania, Zambia, Zaire, and Liberia.

While in Senegal, Kissinger proposed a development program to "roll back the desert" in the drought-stricken Sahel region south of the Sahara. He urged Western European nations to contribute to the plan, which U.S. officials said could cost up to $7.5 billion.

Soviet grain buying poses new problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new grain-buying surge by the Soviet Union may force the Ford administration to decide soon whether more grain sales to the Russians would have serious impact on U.S. consumer prices.

Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz, just back from a threeweek trip around the world, has scheduled a news conference today and was expected to comment on the recent Soviet grain purchases.

The new sales have pushed Russian purchases close to a tentative limit set by the administration last fall. If more is sold, it could mean that Russia and the United States will have to negotiate further.

In any such talks, American officials are expected to weigh the consumer impact of additional U.S. sales along with other factors, such as their estimates of U.S. harvests this year.

Major U.S. grain companies disclosed that the Soviets last week bought nearly 4.3 million metric tons of wheat and corn, including some from last year's crop and a further quantity from 1976 production.

The orders also included about 1.9 million metric tons of grain to be delivered after Oct. 1 under a new five-year pact signed last fall. The agreement calls for Russia to buy at least six million metric tons of wheat and corn annually over five years. It also lets the Soviets buy up to eight million tons a year without further consultation with U.S. officials. A metric ton is 2,205 pounds.

Last summer after the Soviet Union had bought about 10 million tons of U.S. grain, the administration halted further sales until more was known about U.S. crop production. The embargo also was ordered in the wake of threats by AFLCIO President George Meany and maritime union leaders to boycott Russian grain ship loadings unless steps were taken to protect American consumers against undue foodprice increases that might have been triggered by the sales.

When the five-year agreement, hailed by the administration as a major step to reduce the effects of large grain sales on the U.S. economy, was announced last Oct. 20, officials said Russia could buy another seven million tons — for a total of 17 million — without putting any stress on U.S. supplies. But they said if Russia wanted more than 17 million tons, further talks would be in order.

Some further sales were made after the embargo ended, and the new (Continued on Page 2A)

Italian vote set June 20-21

ROME (AP) — Italian national elections were set today for June 20-21, with the Communists driving for their biggest vote since World War II in this NATO country.

The caretaker cabinet also announced that that voting for local and regional offices would take place at the same time in Rome, Bari, Sicily and other places.

Meanwhile, the Italian currency plunged to a record low on the Milan foreign exchange market in the wake of the fall of Premier Aldo Moro's Christian Democrat minority government last Friday night.

Prices also were generally lower in nervous stock market trading. At the market closing, it cost 902.95 lire to buy one U.S. dollar, compared to 897.075 on Friday. The previous low was 888.25 on what was known as "Black April 12."

The elections, being held a year ahead of schedule, could lead to a Communist role in central government, a development strongly opposed by the United States. They could also give the party control of Rome, city of popes and the Italian capital. In regional elections last June the Communist party was the No. 1 vote-getter in the city.

New action by Syria expected in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Savage fighting raged across Lebanon today amid reports of a new Syrian attempt to negotiate an end to the year-long civil war.

Police reported 271 persons killed since the expiration of the 35th ceasefire Friday and the postponement of the election of a new president by parliament until next Saturday.

The right-wing Christian Phalange party said "a surprise Syrian move is imminent that may change the whole complexion of the situation."

The statement did not elaborate. But reports in the local press said Syrian President Hafez Assad planned to end another high-powered delegation to try to patch up his feud with Moslem Socialist leader Kamal Jumblatt and his leftist alliance and mediate a new basis for a settlement of the war.

Assad wants to replace the Christians' prewar dominance of Lebanese political and economic life with an equal division of power between the Moslem majority and Christian minority. Jumblatt wants a Moslem Socialist state.

Palestinian guerrillas mediated a cease-fire at dawn, but the new agreement failed to get off the ground. Heavy artillery shells smashed into high-rise apartment buildings and rockets flashed overhead. Police reported hard fighting in northern, eastern and central Lebanon as well as in Beirut.

In two hilltop Palestinian refugee camps on the northeast side of Beirut, guerrillas lowered their anti-aircraft guns and pounded adjacent Christian neighborhoods for two hours before dawn, a police spokesman reported.

He said Christian militias were blocking food shipments to the two camps again. A similar embargo in December triggered some of the heaviest fighting in the civil war, which so far has taken about 18,000 lives and devastated the once-prosperous economy.

The Ambushers, the largest Moslem militia, claimed they captured a bank building and an office building that gave them strategic control of Beirut's port section. They said they were regrouping for a "large-scale attack to complete their control of the area."

The continuing fighting made it doubtful that parliament could meet next Saturday to elect a successor to President Suleiman Franjeh, the 65-year-old Christian leader whose replacement is demanded by the leftists as the first step toward a political settlement.

Genealogist declares Hughes will 'phony'

By LYNDA FILLMORE

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A genealogist and probate investigator who claims he represents "as many as 11 relatives" of the late billionaire Howard Hughes says his clients believe a purported Hughes will found last week "is a phony from the word go."

W. A. Jones, head of Heirfinders Inc. of Nashville, Tenn., said Sunday he would file papers in Clark County today contesting the will found in the administration building of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

Meanwhile, attorneys for 87-year-old Noah Dietrich, named in the will as executor, planned to file petitions in Los Angeles today for probate of the will and appointment of Dietrich as executor.

Attorney Harold Rhoden said the petitions are intended to wrest control of the Hughes estate in California from Hughes' maternal cousin, Richard C. Gano, who was named by a Superior Court judge as temporary administrator of the estate. Rhoden said he then plans to consult with handwriting and paper experts.

"We have to determine just how old that paper the will was written on is," Rhoden said. "I don't want to go into court and have someone tell me it was made in 1971."

The will, crudely written on yellow, waterstained sheets, was dated March 19, 1968.

Dietrich, who could earn about $40 million as executor of the estate estimated at $1.5 billion to $2.5 billion, said he studied copies of a handwritten manuscript believed to be a section of a novel by Hughes and that he believes it to be authentic.

Jones said two persons who believe they are Hughes' relatives hired him to draw up a family tree on the paternal side of Hughes' family.

He said those two and others who believe they are members of the family on Hughes' father's side are claiming a share of the estate on grounds that a paternal descendency line was never established.

Although Jones declined to name his clients, two of them were identified earlier as Josephine Hughes Crowder of Chester, Va., and Jeff Milton Hughes of Houston.

Jones would say only that his clients are "well settled down people and quite wealthy in their own right."

"At this point, nobody seems to have printed anything about the father's side. In the absence of any children, brothers or sisters, and there are none known, the money would be divided with 50 per cent going to the mother's side and 50 per cent to the father's."

Jones said his clients do not believe the will found last Tuesday in an envelope on a Mormon publicist's desk is authentic.

"People on the inside circle say there is a good will in Houston somewhere and that there are witnesses to it," said Jones, who declined to name his sources. "If they want to be identified they should come forward."

"I am not surprised at its existence," said Dietrich of the manuscript "and I believe it to be genuine. Hughes did many things I was not aware of."

Dietrich said the repeated misspellings and grammatical errors in the manuscript "are characteristic of other things he wrote."

Band 'trip' under investigation

FOWLER, Calif. (AP) — Police and medical experts are trying to determine why 19 members of a youth high school band went into severe hallucinations after a can of soda was passed among them during a parade.

"It was really frightening. They were really wild," said Dr. Norman Wheeler, who treated the youngsters after the Saturday incident.

"I really can't think of anything except LSD that would do that," he said in an interview Sunday. "Most had severe headaches and were frightened to death. They said, 'Don't kill me, don't kill me,' and tried to get away from us."

All 19 recovered after three or four hours and were sent home, Wheeler said. Another 10 to 15 members of the band, from Mitchell Junior High School in Atwater, had mild symptoms but were not admitted to the hospital in this small farming community in southern Fresno County.

Acting Police Chief Vern Gonsalves said there were several versions of how the youngsters obtained the drink.

"The main group that got sick claimed that they got a can of (soft drink) from someone along the street, passed it among themselves and got sick later," said Gonsalves.

"Later we found that two of the kids had left the group and went to a grocery store and got a can of (soft drink), then filled the can up with water," he said. They passed the can around to fellow students, who marched for two hours in 90plus degree heat, Gonsalves said.

"We don't know if there is any chance of any drugs being involved. We haven't any facts to prove that," Gonsalves added.

He said that blood and urine samples from the band members were being sent to the Fresno County Health Department laboratory for analysis.

Unopened cans from the store, and empty cans found where the children had been, will be studied at the criminal investigation laboratory at Fresno State University, Gonsalves said.

The police official said there are at least two other possible explanations of the incident — some sort of industrial pollution in the soft drink, or that the cramps and panic were triggered by drinking cold liquid after extensive physical activity in the heat.

said "he remains confident that by the time of the August convention in Kansas City, he will have enough delegates to assure the nomination."

That would be 1,130. Ford now has 283 committed delegates, Reagan 236. But there is substantial Ford strength in the bloc of 329 formally uncommitted candidates; at least 254 of them, from New York and Pennsylvania, are aligned with the President.

Nessen said Ford will not alter his campaign strategy. "He's just going to go out and continue to explain and describe his policies," Nessen said. "We're less than halfway through the primaries and the President feels his policies are best for the country."

He said Ford's strategists believe a big crossover by Democrats who used to support Wallace had contributed to Reagan's Texas primary victory. Sen. John G. Tower, Ford's Texas chairman, said so, too.

The numbers pointed to a massive crossover. There were 350,000 GOP votes in the Senate primary in Texas, more than twice as many as normal in that party. More than 14 million Democrats voted in their Senate race. There was no statewide presidential vote to assess.

Sharon Reed Pride, 26, of 1913 Nash St. was treated for cuts and released from Midland Memorial Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

EIGHT FIRES REPORTED

A house fire, two power line pole fires and several other fires kept Midland firemen busy over the weekend.

A faulty bathroom heater connection was blamed for a house fire Saturday afternoon at 4710 Leisure St., firemen said.

The blaze at the home of Doyle A. Wallace caused heavy damage to the bathroom and slight heat and smoke damage to the rest of the structure, firemen said.

Two separate fires Sunday slightly damaged two Texas Electric Service Co. power line poles, firemen said.

One fire at around 9:15 p.m. Sunday burned grass and the pole and wires, firemen said. The cause of this fire is unknown, a Fire Department spokesman said.

A grass fire at about 4:30 p.m. Sunday also involved a power line pole, firemen said. The cause of this fire at in a vacant area on Superior Lane is unknown, a Fire Department spokesman said.

TESCO was notified about both fires, the spokesman said.

A light ballast was damaged by fire early Sunday morning at the 7-Eleven Store at 1912 N. Big Spring St., firemen said.

The fire, which was out when firemen arrived, was blamed on a short in the light ballast, a Fire Department spokesman said.

A mattress was destroyed by fire around 12:15 p.m. Sunday, firemen said. The mattress was smoldering 1 1/2 miles west of FM 1369 on Interstate 20, firemen said.

Four minor grass fires were also reported to the Midland Fire Department over the weekend.

One in the 1200 block of South Weatherford St. at around 8:15 p.m. Sunday was set, firemen said. The cause for another grass fire in a vacant lot at 4322 Greenbriar St. is undetermined, firemen said. No damage resulted from either fire, a Fire Department spokesman said.

A grass and fence fire on the O. H. Morgan Ranch on County Road 1110 caused minor damage to the fence posts, a Fire Department spokesman said.

A grass fire at about 1:30 p.m. Sunday was ignited by a welder's torch, firemen said. The fire in a vacant area in the Garden City Highway and FM 715 caused no damage, firemen said.

Shoppers save at meat counters

By LOUISE COOK, Associated Press Writer

Supermarket shoppers found they could save money during April if they were careful about which items they selected, an Associated Press marketbasket survey shows. Pork chops and all-beef frankfurters went down in price; coffee, chopped chuck and butter went up.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month.

Among the latest findings: The bill at the checklist store declined during April in eight cities, down an average of almost 2 1/2 per cent. The bill increased at the checklist store in five cities, up a little more than 1 per cent. On an over-all basis, the bill at the checklist stores was just over 1 per cent lower at the start of May than it was a month earlier.

In contrast, during March, the marketbasket total increased at the checklist store in eight cities; decreased in four, down an average of 3.2 per cent; and was unchanged in one. The over-all average of the bill at the checklist stores was almost 1 per cent higher than it was at the beginning of the month.

Most of April's savings were at the meat counter and reflected higher supplies of some products. The cost of a pound of all-beef frankfurters declined at the checklist store in seven cities, and the price of center cut pork chops was down in eight cities. At the same time, chopped chuck went up at the checklist store in six cities, partly because farmers are rebuilding their herds and have stopped slaughtering the cows that were often turned into the cheaper cuts like hamburger.

Coffee prices, which have been increasing since last summer's frost destroyed much of the Brazilian crop, went up again at the checklist store in six cities. In two cities, New York and Boston, the price neared $2 a pound. Wholesale prices now range around $2.10 a pound, but it will take two or three months for the full impact of the boost to reach consumers. In addition, many stores sell coffee at a price below the wholesale level in an effort to lure customers to buy other items.

Comparing prices at the start of May with those a year earlier, the AP survey found that on an over-all basis, the marketbasket bill was up at the checklist stores by a little more than 2 per cent.

Butter prices, which declined at the start of the year, have started creeping up again as demand for milk increases with hot weather. The price of a pound of butter was up at the checklist store in seven cities.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, all-beef frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M.; Atlanta; Boston; Chicago; Dallas; Detroit; Los Angeles; Miami; New York; Philadelphia; Providence, R.I.; Salt Lake City; and Seattle.

Goldwater, Rockefeller disagree with Reagan's Panama Canal position

By DON McLEOD

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Sen. Barry M. Goldwater and Vice President Rockefeller, spokesmen for opposing wings of the Republican party, have joined forces to criticize Ronald Reagan for his attacks on President Ford's Panama Canal policies.

Reagan said Sunday in Indianapolis that U.S. military forces now stationed in the canal zone should be employed if necessary to keep the canal open.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Reagan said he would go to the same lengths to protect U.S. interests in Panama as "to keep someone from taking Alaska away from us."

Pressed about whether he would be willing to go to war, if necessary, to protect the canal, Reagan said, "I don't think there's ever been a president who wouldn't have had to say yes."

Reagan's statements were his latest criticism of the Ford administration's negotiations with the Panamanian government that would enlarge that country's role in the canal's operations.

Ford, trying for a comeback after his drubbing at Reagan's hands in Texas, asserted Sunday that Reagan's "campaign rhetoric" leads to the suspicion that the former California governor "might be very rash in how he uses his power if he were to become president."

Ford cited some Reagan statements about the canal and said, "Unfortunately, Gov. Reagan has taken many, too many, simplistic statements that indicate in one way or another that he might take rash action," Ford said.

Asked if he thought Reagan would take such action, Ford replied, "I certainly hope not, but I can only go by his campaign rhetoric and that could lead you to that conclusion."

The President said breaking off negotiations would antagonize 25 nations in South America representing 309 million people.

"In order to adequately defend the canal if negotiations are broken off, you will find the United States, instead of having 10,000 GIs down there to defend it, you will have to have 20,000 or 30,000 and maybe they can't defend it," Ford said.

The canal debate also was joined by Rockefeller and Goldwater.

Rockefeller said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" Sunday that Reagan has been "misleading" in his statements on the canal. Reagan, according to Rockefeller, has been asserting that the United States has the same sovereign rights over the canal as it did over the Louisiana Purchase, and "that is a factual misrepresentation."

Goldwater, on NBC's "Meet the Press," advised Reagan to stop making the canal a campaign issue — "I have to support Ford's position on it and I think Reagan would too, if he knew more about it."

Reagan has charged repeatedly that the U.S. negotiations are to give control of the canal back to the Panamanians. Ford has replied that the negotiations are aimed at a turnover sometime in the next century and that any treaty signed would still give the United States full right to use the passage.

U.S. Scientists puzzled by embassy microwaves

WASHINGTON (AP) — American scientists have been investigating the mysterious Moscow microwave signal since the early 1960s, but they remain puzzled about whether the beams can affect human health or behavior.

The only U.S. research project known to have been pursued specifically in response to the Moscow radiation problem was a secret Pentagon-funded study code-named "Operation Pandora" from 1966 to 1969.

Several scientists who took part in that project now say they believe it was terminated prematurely.

"There were a lot of unknowns, and I don't think they were ever really put to bed," said Richard S. Cesaro, who was in charge of the study undertaken through the Defense Department's Advanced Research Projects Agency (ARPA).

The study involved exposing monkeys to low-level microwaves like those which still are being beamed at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

One participant in "Operation Pandora," Dr. Herbert Pollack, is now working as a consultant to the State Department in its current effort to assess potential effects of the searchlightlike Moscow beams.

aimed at the Embassy from two directions.

Pollack, referring to the Embassy radiation, said that "these microwave fields are extremely complicated...The permutations and combinations in this thing are enough to drive us crazy."

Asked about his own view on whether the microwaves could have health effects, Pollack replied: "That's the question they ask me upstairs here (at the State Department), and I can only say one answer: We just don't know."

Administration officials are said to view the microwaves as a Soviet effort to counteract U.S. eavesdropping devices at the Embassy.

However, one scientist associated with "Pandora" said he would not discount the possibility that the radiation may be calculated to cause a "suppressive effect" on Embassy personnel.

A classified State Department summary of the Moscow situation admits that some experiments have linked microwaves to "a variety of nonspecific complaints — such as inability to concentrate, fatigue, headaches — and other functional and reportedly reversible changes including shifts in the ratios of different blood cells."

According to Moscow sources, abnormally high white blood cell counts have been found in upwards of 50 per cent of Embassy personnel tested.

The official summary noted that the U.S. government has paid a claim in connection with the cancer death of a woman who had worked as a secretary at the Embassy in the 1960s. Although the claim was paid on grounds of inadequate medical care, the woman's husband has said he believes her fatal disease was linked to the microwaves.

The department document contended that "no cause and effect relationship has been established between disorders contracted by those in Moscow and their exposure to the electromagnetic field."

Weekend violence claims at least 10

By The Associated Press

Two traffic mishaps, each one killing two persons, swelled weekend death totals in Texas in an otherwise quiet weekend.

At least 10 persons died in weekend violence, including four in traffic, three shootings and others in varied accidents. The Associated Press tabulated the violent deaths from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday.

Two Houston men were killed late Saturday when the car in which they were riding ran off Interstate 10 and plunged into Adams Bayou near Orange, officers said. The bodies of Roderick Ronald Dunson, 24, and Robert Louis Williams, 22, were pulled from the bayou early Sunday.

A Dallas couple died Friday night when their car and another auto collided at a city intersection. Killed were Walter W. Mahon, 59, and his wife Betty Mahon, 55. Mahon had been an advertising representative with the Dallas Times Herald since 1952.

Grady L. Hodkinson, 40, of Dallas was shot to death early Sunday with a small caliber weapon, police said. Officers said Hodkinson was hit several times in the face.

A Fort Worth man, Harold R. Jackson, 36, was shot to death Sunday. Police said the victim was killed by a man who said, "Harold, you done my sister wrong."

A 16-month-old Austin baby, Marie Louise Anderson, died when fire swept her home Saturday night. Firemen found the child's body in a highchair. Her brother, 5, and sister, 3, fled the burning home before firemen arrived. Police said the children's mother had gone down the street to a grocery store.

A boating accident Sunday in Possum Kingdom Lake near Mineral Wells took the life of Malcolm Stewart, 16, of Graham. The Palo Pinto County sheriff's office said Stewart drowned when the powerboat in which he was riding struck a rock cliff and overturned.

A Benton, Ky., man was found dead Saturday night on railroad tracks in Marshall. Sheriff's officers identified the man as Kenneth Watson, 46.

Mary Virginia Eldred, 34, was shot fatally Saturday in Dallas as two men struggled for possession of a gun, police said. One man was arrested.

DEAR ABBY

Greeting cards need to be acknowledged

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Since January 1, 1974 I have sent 911 greeting cards—not counting Christmas and Easter cards. (I sent 3,455 of those.) I mean get-well, sympathy, birthday, graduation, wedding, anniversary and new baby cards.

I go through our local newspaper to be sure I haven't overlooked a birth, engagement, accident or death. I am on a limited income and can't afford to send presents, but I spend as much time shopping for appropriate cards as most people do in the selection of gifts.

My question: Aren't people supposed to acknowledge cards? Only 32 out of the 911 people I sent cards to bothered to let me know that they received them. I am listed in the telephone directory. Am I wrong to expect thanks?—INGORED

DEAR IGNORED: Well-bred people acknowledge cards with a telephone call, a note or a verbal "thank you"—should they see the giver before they have the opportunity to call or write. However, the giver who is "To keep a ledger on "thanks receivable" suggests that the giver is unduly interested in placing the burden of gratitude on casual acquaintances. Still, the laziness and boorishness of those who fail to acknowledge a thoughtful gesture is inexcusable.

DEAR ABBY: I don't understand what you mean when you tell girls: "Save yourself for the man you marry."

How does a girl know WHICH man she's going to marry? I have gone with five different guys at different times, and I thought I was going to marry all of them, but I'm still single.

Will you please explain what you mean?—STILL SINGLE

DEAR SINGLE: I mean, "Save yourself for the man you marry—not the man you MAY marry."

DEAR ABBY: Saw the letter in your column from the lady complaining because the bachelor in the next apartment snored so loud he kept her awake nights.

I am a single lady looking for a nice single man. If the bachelor who snores is between 45 and 60, please send me his name and phone number because I'm lonesome, easy to get along with and very hard of hearing.—RITA

DEAR ABBY: Will you please tell me the difference between a maid and a housewife? My husband says there is no difference. Thank you.—RICHMOND HOUSEWIFE

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: If you have a maid, you'd better keep your eye on your husband.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Dear Lettuce-Lovers:

Pull up a chair and listen while I tell you how I preserve lettuce to keep it from turning rusty-looking.

I got to figuring that if I could put a soap-filled pad under water for as long as two weeks...and as long as it was completely covered with water it wouldn't rust...then why wouldn't it work for lettuce? It did!

I filled up a plastic container with water, removed the outside leaves of the lettuce, cut the head of lettuce in half with a stainless steel knife, and plunged all the lettuce completely under. I set this in my refrigerator and forgot it until I was ready to use it.

Next day I removed one half of the lettuce, shook the ice water out, and proceeded from there to cut off as much as I needed for my salad.

Any portion that is left should be plunged back down in that ice water and replaced in the refrigerator for later use.

This will keep at least a week. (I have kept it two weeks as long as I changed the water every five days.)

You have never in your life tasted such crunchy lettuce! And look at the money we are going to save by not having "rust" form.

People who do not have plastic containers can cut the top off a big bleach bottle, wash it well, rinse carefully, then rinse it well with vinegar and use this for a lettuce container.

Heads of lettuce may be quartered for easy insertion into the containers. I do not recommend cutting them any smaller.

If you buy directly through plastic and all, remove half the head and use the above method.

The remaining portion of plastic may be drawn over the cut half of the head and this put in your hydrator for future use.

So happy savings with your next head of lettuce (no need to waste a leaf now) and here's for a crisp, crunchy, nondroopy salad...without "rust"...love, Heloise.

Elastic belts cinch to make

Want a cinchy belt for all those pretty fashions you are whipping up? Cut a length of wide elasticized waistbanding slightly smaller than your waist measurement. Bind the two raw ends and turn them under. Stitch. Add two or three decorative hooks for a belt that you can wrap around anything.

Dear Betty: Here's how I save money on bed linens. I use the good areas of old sheets for cutting "new" pillowcases. They look great, don't cost much and last for a long time. —JoAnn Wilson, Liberty, Mo.

Jesus freaks undergo change

By JOHN DART
The Los Angeles Times

The Children of God, regarded as the most radical and flamboyant of the "Jesus freak" groups a few years back, has matured into a "rationally organized," international sect with links to the World Council of Churches.

The mysterious "Moses" David Berg, who founded the group in Huntington Beach, Calif., in 1968, has become something of an "honorary chairman of the board" for the sect now based in Europe.

This picture of the controversial Children of God was drawn in a scholarly study by sociologist James T. Richardson of the University of Nevada at Reno and Rex Davis, a World Council of Churches official in Geneva.

Davis, whose office explores experimental ministries, visited 30 colonies of the sect in a dozen countries. He established a permanent liaison with the Children of God in 1974 by hiring a staff person from the sect.

The little-known liaison is an odd one inasmuch as the World Council of Churches usually is considered an evil, ecumenical monster by fundamentalist-oriented Christian churches and sects.

Richardson, who has studied the youthful Jesus movement in general, visited Children of God colonies in this country and in England. The study was presented at the last meeting of the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.

Davis and Richardson say the Children of God (often called simply COG) has become one of the most "democratic and unauthoritarian" groups to spring out of the now-dispersed Jesus movement.

The public was misled by "early descriptions of COG's "zombie-like followers" obtained from defectors and casual contacts with the organization, the two men claimed.

The New York state attorney general's office reported in October, 1974, that the sect engaged in numerous illegal acts, including sexual abuse of young members, rape, kidnaping, tax evasion, draft dodging, brainwashing and virtual enslavement of converts.

The report followed an 18-month investigation and testimony, including that of Sarah Berg, the former daughter-in-law of David Berg. The New York attorney general said, however, that First Amendment protection of religious groups would prevent prosecution.

The Children of God a month later formally denied as false the accounts of incest, rape and sexual promiscuity. As for brainwashing, it said: "No one is forced into submission to our beliefs."

Richardson said he and Davis have not tried to systematically prove or disprove various allegations. At the same time, the sociologist said, they never uncovered evidence of sexual misbehavior. "They definitely believe in the sanctity of marriage," Richardson said.

Whatever the assessments of the Children of God's early years, it is generally agreed that they set in motion a U.S. phenomenon that has yet to peak — angry campaigns by parents who say certain religious sects "psychologically kidnap" their offspring.

Some parents arrange to recapture their sons and daughters (even those in their 20s) and have them "deprogrammed" in intensive sessions with interrogators such as Ted Patrick of San Diego.

The heat in recent years has been felt mainly by the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, the Hare Krishna movement and such local groups as Tony and Susan Alamo's Christian Foundation — all of which, like COG, encourage living the faith full time and giving personal property to the organization.

The Children of God still has colonies in California and other states, but has not attracted much attention lately.

Center described wire service for scientists

By EARL LANE
Newsday

On a cold Arctic morning last October, Sgt. Paul Svntek awoke to see an awesome sight through his barracks window. A volcano nearby was erupting. Lava was flowing down the northern slope of the mountain, called Pavlof, and short orange bursts of molten rock were being sent skyward in a bright display.

Svntek, who is stationed at a remote Air Force radar station in the Aleutian Islands of Alaska, got on the phone to the Center for Short-Lived Phenomena in Cambridge, Mass. Soon, scientists around the world were getting an up-to-date report on the activity of Pavlof, thanks to the center and the vigilant Sgt. Svntek. Since 1968, the center has been keeping "the pulse of the planet," as it enthusiastically named one of its early reports. It gets the word out on unusual happenings around the globe. It is, as director Robert Citron likes to put it, a kind of wire service for scientists.

It is not enough for researchers to read two paragraphs about an event in the local paper. They want to learn the precise location and magnitude of the event so that, if possible, they can begin to study it while it is in progress.

A freshly fallen meteorite, for example, contains radioisotopes that decay in a matter of days or weeks. If scientists can study the meteorite before the decay is complete, they can learn something about the history and nature of radiation flux in the solar system. But a delay of even a week can be crucial. "If you can get these materials back to the lab quickly enough," Citron said recently, "they can be as valuable as moon rocks. And you don't have to spend billions of dollars to get them."

Sometimes, however, even prompt reporting is not enough. Citron told of an island that appeared mysteriously in the Caribbean in 1970. It was about 50 yards in diameter, with perhaps 50 to 100 trees on it, and was moving at about 2 knots. Alas, it disappeared within four days, before scientists could reach it for close study. Scientists say it was probably a clump of mangroves, complete with root structures, that broke loose from land and floated along until it became waterlogged.

About 70 per cent of the events reported by the center never appear in newspapers, Citron said. Unlike Svntek, most of the center's 2,300 correspondents are professional scientists. They pass on word of happenings in their area in return for access to the center's event reporting service.

In the center's 1974 annual report, for example, we learn about the Maui mouse invasion. Millions of mice moved down the lower slopes of Mt. Haleakala on the island of Maui, Hawaii, in June, 1974. They devastated local crops, with some farmers losing 30 to 50 per cent of their yield. They entered hotels, houses and restaurants and generally made life miserable for island residents. The precise number of mice involved is not known, but extermination measures brought the situation under control within six months.

The report also tells of the Killarney "raining" fish. About 150 ocean perch fell from the sky near Killarney Station in the rugged Northern Territory of Australia. Killarney is over 320 miles from the sea. The incident occurred during late February, when tropical storms in the area are common. Scientists believe the fish were sucked from the sea in a water spout, carried inland by winds and dumped in a heavy rainfall.

The center reports on events in several categories: geophysical, astrophysical, biological, ecological and urgent anthropological or archeological discoveries. The discovery of a remote tribe of primitive people, for example, is considered a short-lived phenomenon. "When you discover a new tribe, their culture is already beginning to change because of that contact," Citron said. Although the center, by reporting the discovery, can be seen as speeding up the changes, Citron said that "once they've been discovered, there's nothing you can do about it." By notifying the right people, he said, efforts to help the tribe adjust to the contact may fare better. (There have been six new tribe discoveries since the center began operations).

The center now reports on about 300 events a year, about half of them dealing with incidents of pollution such as oil spills, Citron said. There was a time when the center would not report oil spills of less than 10,000 gallons. The limit was recently raised to 25,000 gallons because of the volume of spills the center has had to deal with.

Another example was the Appalachian squirrel migration of 1968. Shortly after the center was opened, reports began to trickle in about an unusually large number of squirrels being killed on the highways of the Southeast. Reports later began to come in from as far north as Massachusetts. Scientists theorized that a massive squirrel migration might be under way. Only after some intense study did it become evident that the squirrels, in response to a growing squirrel population, were moving farther and farther from their home base to find and bury their food. Many had become disoriented, and there were reports of squirrels attempting to swim broad channels and even, in one instance, climb a 26-story office building. By serving as a central clearinghouse for information on the squirrels, the center helped scientists get a grasp of the situation more readily than had they been left to their own devices.

The center operates out of a modest suite of offices atop the communications center for the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge. The arrangement allows the center access to a variety of communication equipment. When some big event breaks, such as the Feb. 4 earthquake in Guatemala, Citron said "it can sometimes seem like we are in the war room in the middle of World War III." Within the first 12 hours after the earthquake, the center received 29 telegrams from scientists seeking information on the event. In such cases, the center responds by telegram or telephone with a preliminary report. Most event notifications, however, go out by airmail after basic data have been received and, whenever possible, verified.

"It's a race between timeliness and accuracy," Citron said. "We used to put out some reports that were less thoroughly documented than we would have liked." He mentioned a report of a prehistoric monster found on a beach in Mexico. "It was passed along by a reputable scientist," Citron said, "but it turned out that the monster was a decomposing whale." Now, the center tries to assign scientists to double-check reports promptly whenever possible.

JEFFREY SALMON, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will-H. Salmon, has earned Eagle Scout ranking. He is a member of Troop 233 and Robert Solomon is scoutmaster.

Lucky wife gets 3 ring circus

By DAVID LARSEN
The Los Angeles Times

VAN NUYS, Calif. — Gene Moreland loves his wife so much he gave her three rings.

They are in his garage and they are part of a remarkable miniature circus. It spreads across an area 18 feet by 6 feet and represents 25 years of work by Moreland.

"When I was a boy I always dreamed of running away to the circus," he disclosed. "Now I've done the next best thing. I had the circus come to me."

The garage of his house in Van Nuys is crammed with 16 tents, 62 wagons, 38 railroad cars, countless spectators — 10,000 pieces in all.

It is all done in a scale of one-quarter inch to each foot. "I tried a full inch and then a half-inch, but neither let me use as many pieces," he explained.

Moreland, 55, flipped a switch and the taped noises of a crowd and circus music welled up within the chilly garage, whose walls are plastered with posters.

The lights dimmed and a spotlight focused on Ring One, where Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show was under way.

The big top itself is 6 feet long and a foot high. It is cut away to permit viewing inside.

Radioactive false teeth being worn by Americans

By THOMAS O'TOOLE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The false teeth worn by an estimated 50 million Americans are radioactive.

Not radioactive enough to be considered a health hazard but radioactive enough for the Food and Drug Administration to be considering an order reducing the amount of uranium allowed in the teeth to give them luster.

The FDA is pondering the order after more than a year of study in which it concluded tentatively that the amounts of natural and depleted uranium permitted in false teeth are needlessly high.

Tiny traces of uranium have been mixed in with the porcelain powders used to make false teeth for more than 40 years, a fact the FDA concedes it not generally known.

The FDA said it will not even attempt to recall the radioactive teeth, emphasizing there is no serious danger to the people wearing them. The doctor in charge of the FDA's study said the amounts of radiation released by the uranium in the teeth are too small to damage the gums, the tongue or any other parts of the mouth the teeth might touch.

"The false teeth we've examined do not release radiation in excess of the dose that might be absorbed by the sensitive tissue of the gums," said Dr. Donald Thompson, who is preparing the study for the FDA's Bureau of Medical Devices and Diagnostic Products. "By the sensitive tissue, we mean the basal or second layer of the gums, the one tissue inside the mouth that would respond to radiation."

About 100 million Americans wear at least a tooth crown or partial or full denture. Half these teeth are made of plastic and the other half of porcelain. The plastic teeth are not radioactive, but dentists prefer the porcelain teeth because they are harder and look more like real teeth.

In 1928 the first patents were granted to add traces of uranium to the porcelain to simulate the fluorescence of natural teeth. Porcelain teeth without uranium look fine in natural light but often appear green, brown and even black in artificial light.

"They especially don't look good where there is artificial ultraviolet light, like in a discotheque," the FDA's Dr. Thompson said. "It's the same in parking lots where mercury vapor lamps provide the illumination."

The FDA undertook its study after the National Radiological Protection Board of Great Britain found that porcelain teeth made in England subjected the superficial skin lining the mouth to a beta radiation dose of 2.8 rem (for roentgen-equivalent-man) per year, almost double the accepted maximum rate.

As a result, said McGraw Hill newsletter Nucleonics Week, the British board recommended that uranium no longer be used in the manufacture of porcelain dentures.

Thompson said the FDA will not make the same recommendation since its findings show that American-made porcelain teeth release about one fourth the amount of radiation released by British teeth, because U.S. porcelain teeth have only one fourth as much uranium as the British teeth.

Thompson said the FDA study likely will be completed in a month, at which time the FDA will suggest a new and stricter standard for uranium in false teeth. He said the false-teeth industry has already agreed to standardize its use of uranium at 250 parts per million parts of porcelain, about half what it is today.

The FDA will also ask the industry to look for a substitute for uranium in false teeth. Dr. Thompson said there is no available substitute today.

Fatal beating of Marine brings pledge of reform

By GEORGE C. WILSON
The Washington Post

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — The Marine command here has filled in and planted flowers over the training ditch where Pvt. Lynn E. McClure spent so many punishing hours trying to become a Marine.

Also gone the way of the "git ditch," filled with mud and water to crawl through, is the "motivation platoon" — a Marine Corps institution for shaping up troublesome recruits like McClure.

And there will be no more drill instructors screaming in a recruit's ear, no more breaking rocks all day in the sun with sledgehammers, according to Brig. Gen. David M. Twomey, assistant commander here at the San Diego Marine Recruit Depot, one of the two corps' recruit training bases. The other is at Parris Island, S.C.

"If I find a DI saying so much as 'I'm going to beat you up,' I'm going to throw him off the drill field," Twomey vowed. Twomey, who was chief of staff on Dec. 6, 1975, when "Bubba" McClure was fatally injured during a training drill here, "I'm going to throw him off the drill field."

The fatal beating of McClure, 20, a mentally handicapped youth from Lufkin, Tex., has touched off congressional investigations and brought a pledge of reform from Twomey and other corps leaders.

McClure's death, Twomey said in an interview here, "was very tragic. It should never have happened. It's a black mark against the corps. It's a black mark against me, because I was chief of staff at the time."

Although the corps insists that the reforms were in the works before McClure's death and are not directly linked to it, Marines reporting here will find this a different place from the base McClure knew, Twomey said.

It is going to be "welcome to the National Football League" from the first day a youth reports to this base, Twomey said. The recruit will be told: "It's going to be tough, but we think we can make it."

The DI-recruit relationship, the general further promised, will be more like father-son or tutor-pupil than it has ever been in the corps' 200-year history.

"Like detente," he said of the new orders on leadership coming from Commandant Louis H. Wilson in Washington, "stress is a bad word." The DIs are taking the guidance to heart, said Twomey in saving his arm toward the drill field. "All of a sudden it's like being in church. I'm amazed."

"We have to realize there's been a change in today's young man" because of the social revolution he went through — a revolution Twomey feels brought "a more permissive society, and maybe not as much stigma to 'I quit.'"

A young man who joins the corps in the current social climate, the general contended, "has a little tiny spark down in his gut that says, 'I want to be a Marine.'"

"My mission and that of every other leader in the corps is not to put out that spark with humiliating stress but to fan that little spark into a raging bonfire," Twomey said.

In disclosing that motivation platoons had been ended here, Twomey said the new system will place responsibility properly on the shoulders of DIs who, in the past, "didn't really have to lead" problem recruits because they could shove them off into "motos," as they were called.

McClure was placed in a "moto" because, as a senior DI here put it, "He couldn't adapt." McClure — who got a 28 in speech on his 10th grade report card before dropping out of Lufkin High School that year and had committed himself to a mental hospital before joining the corps — was continually subjected to "strees" here between Nov. 13 and Dec. 6, 1975.

He never could seem to please the DIs, said recruits who trained with McClure, but tried so hard to do so that he was affectionately called Gomer Pyle by his comrades.

Instead of recognizing McClure's limitations and discharging him from the corps, said Marines in affidavits taken by investigators for his family, which is suing the corps for $3.5 million for his "wrongful death," the young Marine was punished.

He was first sent to a "correctional custody platoon" for men who have broken corps rules and finally to the motivational platoon — where he received the fatal injuries as he was allegedly ordered to fight one Marine after another with pugil sticks — long poles padded on the end. They are used to simulate bayonet moves.

In the correctional platoon, said a fellow recruit, "they made him dig a hole down to where the water was; then they would throw the dirt back down on top of him."

"Then," continued McClure's friend, "they would make him get back out and do a bunch of pushups because he was so skinny." McClure was only 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed 115 pounds.

McClure, as another part of his correctional platoon punishment for leaving the base without permission during his first days of training, was ordered to "bust rocks with a 38-pound sledgehammer."

"We got out there and bust cement blocks all day long," said McClure's friend in a tape-recorded statement heard by a Washington Post reporter and confirmed as genuine by witnesses who were present when the recording was made.

The same friend, who also was sent to the motivation platoon with Mc-Clure, described McClure's troubles with the GIT ditch, or GIT-pit — a ditch 40 feet long, 5 feet wide and 2 feet deep in mud and water. The GIT-pit — "GIT" standing for group incentive-training — had an obstacle every 10 feet that the marine had to crawl under or over.

"You have to crawl underneath the water and stuff," said McClure's friend in the recorded statement. "McClure went into this thing, and he wouldn't go all the way down because it was so cold. This is 8 o'clock in the morning. He wouldn't duck his head under the water. So one of the DIs grabbed his head and held it under the water. About 5 or 6 seconds later they let him up. They done that to him a couple of times."

"If you please them, they say, 'OK, you were good enough. Get out of here.' But McClure never let go like that," the friend continued. "He was always there until the end... All they did to him was cause him punishment."

A Marine's father here heard of how McClure was beaten in the pugil stick fight and became so incensed that he hired a special investigator with his own money to find out what happened.

The Marine Corps official press release issued here Dec. 7 said only that McClure "was injured yesterday afternoon at 3:45 p.m. during a close combat class utilizing pugil sticks... The circumstances surrounding the incident are being investigated. There was no indication that McClure had been subjected to a series of beatings as some Marines are now asserting.

The private investigator — Irving Richards of Oceanside — uncovered enough suspicious material about the McClure beating to lead the family to file a claim against the Navy for "wrongful death." This is a legal remedy that must be tried before a federal court ordinarily will consider a suit.

The McClure family has retained attorney John W. Gyorikos, of Oceanside, with Richards heading his investigation. Richards and a fellow investigator, Frank Wheeling both served in the Marine Corps as enlisted men.

Gyorikos is trying to prove that McClure was fraudulently recruited by the Marines and also that McClure was forced to fight in the pugil stick bouts in ways contrary to Marine regulations.

Twomey said in the interview here that pugil stick fighting was authorized last fall by the top command at this base as an addition to motivational platoon training.

Fannin student top winner in contest

Editor's note: The following essay was a winning entry in a contest conducted by the Downtown Rotary Club of Midland as part of Free Enterprise Week. The contest was conducted among students throughout Midland schools. Top winners received plaques and cash with which to purchase a share of stock.

By SCOTT MCLEAN

I am a fifth grade student at Fannin Elementary School. Because I am an American I am free to choose how I will make a living and how I will use my talents to the best of my ability.

I can go to school and I can pass or fail depending on how hard I try. I can go to college or drop out and be a bum. I can get a job, buy a horse, start a business and make money or go broke due to my own efforts.

My country makes it possible for everyone to enjoy a good education, a nice home, a fine car, lots of good food and many more nice things.

I may become a dentist, a teacher, a singer or a businessman. I have many choices to make and I will decide which job is best for me. I find out what I like the best and what I can do the best.

I am free to work and to play. I can make good choices and bad choices. I am free because I live in a free country. America should hold its head high because it has something to be proud of and so do all of the people who helped it grow and be free.

I think that freedom is the best quality there is in the world. And all this freedom combined is called free enterprise.

Free enterprise is a challenge in many ways. Freedom means there are choices that must be made and to make a good choice I must be a responsible person.

While I am free to choose what I want to do, I must remember that our free enterprise system also includes considering others. I must always try to treat other people fairly. I must not take advantage of my freedom by being dishonest in any way.

Another part of free enterprise is

thinking for yourself and doing what you think is best. I might choose right or I might choose wrong, but if I am not pleased with my choice I always have the freedom to choose differently.

As a part of a free enterprise economy I must compete with other people in school, sports or in my job. By competing, I will become a better person by learning more and understanding more about my abilities.

I will earn what I deserve and I will deserve what I am willing to work for. Free competition is rewarding, but certain rules of fair play must be used as guidelines.

Good rules give competitors a fair chance to do the best they can and to earn the most they can. Bad rules ruin or kill competition.

The goal of free enterprise is to have the best possible competition consistent with the general welfare. Another part of free enterprise is pride. If we didn't have pride in being American we wouldn't fight to keep us free.

It has been an honor entering this contest of free enterprise. This is what free enterprise means to me.

South cashed the ace of trumps, led a trump to the queen and then returned the nine of spades from dummy.

A Marine's father here heard of how McClure was beaten in the pugil stick fight and became so incensed that he hired a special investigator with his own money to find out what happened.

The Marine Corps official press release issued here Dec. 7 said only that McClure "was injured yesterday afternoon at 3:45 p.m. during a close combat class utilizing pugil sticks... The circumstances surrounding the incident are being investigated." There was no indication that McClure had been subjected to a series of beatings "as some Marines are now asserting."

The private investigator — Irving Richards of Oceanside — uncovered enough suspicious material about the McClure beating to lead the family to file a claim against the Navy for "wrongful death." This is a legal remedy that must be tried before a federal court ordinarily will consider a suit.

The McClure family has retained attorney John W. Gyorkos, of Oceanside, with Richards heading his investigation. Richards and a fellow investigator, Frank Wheeling, both served in the Marine Corps as enlisted men.

Gyorkos is trying to prove that McClure was fraudulently recruited by the Marines and also that McClure was forced to fight in the pugil stick bouts in ways contrary to Marine regulations.

Twomey said in the interview here that pugil stick fighting was authorized last fall by the top command at this base as an addition to motivational platoon training.

Fannin student top winner in contest

Editor's note: The following essay was a winning entry in a contest conducted by the Downtown Rotary Club of Midland as part of Free Enterprise Week. The contest was conducted among students throughout Midland schools. Top winners received plaques and cash with which to purchase a share of stock.

By SCOTT MCLEAN

I am a fifth grade student at Fannin Elementary School. Because I am an American I am free to choose how I will make a living and how I will use my talents to the best of my ability.

I can go to school and I can pass or fail depending on how hard I try. I can go to college or drop out and be a bum. I can get a job, buy a horse, start a business and make money or go broke due to my own efforts.

My country makes it possible for everyone to enjoy a good education, a nice home, a fine car, lots of good food and many more nice things.

I may become a dentist, a teacher, a singer or a businessman. I have many choices to make and I will decide which job is best for me as I find out what I like the best and what I can do the best.

I am free to work and to play. I can make good choices and bad choices. I am free because I live in a free country. America should hold its head high because it has something to be proud of and so do all of the people who helped it grow and be free.

I think that freedom is the best quality there is in the world. And all this freedom combined is called free enterprise.

Free enterprise is a challenge in many ways. Freedom means there are choices that must be made and to make a good choice I must be a responsible person.

While I am free to choose what I want to do, I must remember that our free enterprise system also includes considering others. I must always try to treat other people fairly. I must not take advantage of my freedom by being dishonest in any way.

Another part of free enterprise is

thinking for yourself and doing what you think is best. I might choose right or I might choose wrong, but if I am not pleased with my choice I always have the freedom to choose differently.

As a part of a free enterprise economy I must compete with other people in school, sports or in my job. By competing, I will become a better person by learning more and understanding more about my abilities.

I will earn what I deserve and I will deserve what I am willing to work for. Free competition is rewarding, but certain rules of fair play must be used as guidelines.

Good rules give competitors a fair chance to do the best they can and to earn the most they can. Bad rules ruin or kill competition.

The goal of free enterprise is to have the best possible competition consistent with the general welfare. Another part of free enterprise is pride. If we didn't have pride in being American we wouldn't fight to keep us free.

It has been an honor entering this contest of free enterprise. This is what free enterprise means to me.

Some of the finest people I've ever known are so full of energy that they can't wait to get through with their own work so that they can start on somebody else's. People of this kind make wonderful leaders—except at the bridge table.

South took the king and ace of diamonds and then, still bubbling over with energy, led the eight of spades.

Dummy's queen of spades lost to the ace, and back came a club. Since West could not have an opening bid without the king of clubs, South's only chance was to put up the ace of clubs and play for four spade tricks.

South cashed the ace of trumps, led a trump to the queen and then returned the nine of spades from dummy.

East hoped low, hoping that South would ruff, but South discarded a club, relying on what he had learned from the lead of the eight of spades.

PLAY WORKS

When this play worked, declarer ruffed a low spade and led a third round of trumps to dummy's king. The king of spades dropped East's jack, and the rest of the suit was good. South got rid of all of his clubs, making his game contract.

If West shifts to a trump at the third trick, allowing South to do his own work, South has no clue to the spades and would never hit upon the winning line of play.

ANSWER: Bid three hearts. You have 10 points in high cards and therefore know that the combined count is 26 to 28 points, enough for game, but not for slam. You will insist on game in hearts or clubs.

Wage trend alarming

There was such relief at the nation being spared a lengthy strike in the trucking industry that the cost of avoiding it tended to be assigned to the fine print. Labor Secretary W. J. Usery Jr. hailed the settlement as a compromise, which it was, but its economic impact is no less worrisome.

Economists are estimating that the package won by the Teamsters Union — mainly increases in wage rates and fringe benefits and a stronger cost-of-living adjustment clause — will add about 30 per cent during the next three years to labor costs in one of our basic transportation industries.

Since the productivity of individual workers covered by Teamsters contracts is expected to increase by no more than 3 per cent a year, the settlement is obviously open to attack as "inflationary." To the extent that higher labor costs are not covered by increased output by each worker, prices must be increased. In fact, trucking companies already have filed applications with regulatory agencies for general freight-rate increases to cover the impact of the Teamsters contracts.

The trucking settlement may emerge as a pattern for other collective bargaining confrontations coming up later this year. On the plus side, the avoidance of a crippling strike that would have set back economic recovery is a welcome precedent, as Mr. Usery pointed out. The other side of the coin is not so satisfying, however.

Tracing the fathers

The Social Security Administration, after long resistance, has finally been ordered to release Social Security numbers to help track down absent welfare fathers.

That's good. It means the federal government will furnish to state authorities the Social Security numbers of missing fathers whose children are on welfare. Then the states will use the numbers in tracing the missing fathers through state records, such as motor vehicle registrations. This gives the states another line of pursuit, in addition to avenues previously open for tracing through the Internal Revenue Service, through the Pentagon and the Veterans Administration.

The right of privacy should protect welfare clients from public exposure and humiliation when they are guilty only of poverty.

But family desertion is a crime that costs the taxpayers more than $1 billion a year.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Mysterious Russian arms ship

By JACK ANDERSON
WASHINGTON — Early in 1976, Western intelligence agencies detected a Soviet ship steaming across the Indian Ocean. They deduced from its silhouette that it was carrying planes and tanks.

The vessel was tracked into the Gulf of Aden, where it was expected to stop at the port city of Aden. This is the Soviet doorway to its Arab satellite, South Yemen, whose military installations bristle with Soviet weaponry.

But the arms vessel continued to push into the rival waters of North Yemen, dropping anchor at last off the chief port of Hodeida. Darkness quickly settled over the anchored Soviet ship, which lifted anchor the following day and steamed back into Communist waters.

The mysterious appearance of the ship from Russia helped bring to a climax a backstage drama, which has resulted in a major, unannounced shift in the Arabian world.

Remote, primitive North Yemen, because of its strategic location on the southern tip of the Arabian peninsula, has been caught in the East-West power struggle. The Russians have been trying to keep North Yemen in the Soviet sphere with blank-check offers of modern military equipment.

The United States has also offered arms through neighboring Saudi Arabia, which would put up the money.

and Saudi Arabia will pay for them. More than $100 million worth of American-made rifles, rocket launchers, tanks, artillery and other weapons will be shipped to North Yemen. Joe Spear, quoting highly placed sources, reports that the deal could include a squadron of F-5 fighter planes. The total sale could go as high as $500 million over the next five years.

What this means, of course, is that North Yemen has completed its emergence from the Soviet camp. This was not accomplished without considerable apprehension on the part of Saudi Arabia. For the seven million people of North Yemen outnumber the five million population of Saudi Arabia. Take away the royal family, women and children, one source told Joe Spear, and the Saudis have only two million men capable of fighting.

The Saudis, therefore, weren't eager to arm their more populous neighbor. They also had supported the old Imam who ruled North Yemen until his overthrow in 1962. They paid the sheikhs in the northern reaches to fight for the Imam.

The sheikhs continue to maintain considerable independence from Hamdi who would like to subdue them and consolidate his power. The Saudis wanted his promise he wouldn't do that, and they apparently got it in return for the U.S. arms pact.

The Saudis are also anxious to remove Communist influence from the Arabian peninsula before it infects their own oil-saturated sands. Getting the Soviets out of North Yemen is the first move. It will be followed by opening diplomatic relations with Communist South Yemen.

The Saudi-U.S.-North Yemen arms package probably will be administered by the Saudis. U.S. military advisers probably will go to North Yemen but only to provide short periods of specific training. The Yemeni officers are expected to receive most of their training in Saudi Arabia and Jordan.

Of course, Congress could still throw a monkey wrench into the arms arrangement. The pro-Israel members raised a hullabaloo over the offer of cargo planes to Egypt and Hawk missiles to Jordan. Now this move to arm another Arab country could cause an uproar.

But the Pentagon will impress upon Congress that it is vital to bring North Yemen into the Western camp. It occupies a strategic position in the Middle East, overlooking the narrow Bab el Mandeb Strait in the Red Sea, the route to the Suez.

The Russian ship had come and gone when the Saudi sultan paid his April visit to North Yemen, but its presence was not forgotten. As for the Soviets, whose arms ship was used against them in the backstage arms negotiations, they now face a new game on the Arabian peninsula.

INSIDE REPORT

Ingenious foreign aid horsetrading effort revealed

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — In an ingenious horsetrading effort to halt usurpation of presidential authority over foreign policy, the White House is considering this unique bargain with Congress: a compromise settlement on extra military aid for Israel in exchange for cancelling rigid new restrictions over foreign aid.

President Ford wants the worst restrictions, including the extraordinary requirement of a new human rights office to police military aid, removed from the foreign aid bill. In return, he is considering partial restoration of the half-billion dollars in extra military aid for Israel which he has said he would veto.

This election-year tradeoff carries two obvious political assets for Mr. Ford: first, an escape route from vetoing a bill which could damage him in the presidential campaign; second, at least a temporary halt to dangerous congressional encroachment on a President's foreign policy authority. The price: excessive aid to Israel, reducing pressure on the Israeli government to keep negotiating.

Congressional encroachment reached a climax in an audacious amendment by Rep. Don Fraser of Minnesota compelling the President to establish a new Coordinator for Human Rights in the State Department. This functionary would give Congress exhaustive reports on the condition of "human rights" in each of the 80-plus countries receiving U.S. military aid.

If the coordinator's report indicated a violation of "human rights" — as would surely be the case in such pro-Western authoritarian governments as South Korea and Chile — Congress could cancel the aid program by concurrent resolution. That device, requiring no presidential signature, constitutes a legislative veto that might well be declared unconstitutional in a court test. But a court test could take a long time.

Another new restriction on presidential authority in the pending bill is designed to end U.S. aid to any Arab country that requires American companies to discriminate in any way against American Jews. This, too, the President would like to remove in return for additional dollars to Israel.

This hamstringing of presidential authority is the latest sign that Congress has by no means recovered from its emotional reaction to Vietnam and CIA excesses which led to legislative curbs on the President. Rather, Congress is still moving hard down that same road.

The deal now being considered in the White House is calculated to slow the congressional onslaught, and no bait could be more seductive to an election-year Congress than the bait of more military arms to Israel.

The controversy over the size of Israeli aid stems from a major blunder by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger last February. He was unaware that President Ford had privately ruled out any extra aid money for Israel during the so-called "Transition quarter" — the three-month period between the June 30, 1976, end of the present fiscal year, and the Oct. 1 start of the new fiscal year. So Kissinger routinely approved a request by several Senators to allocate Israel $550 million for the three months.

In fact, budget director James Lynn had convinced Mr. Ford that the U.S. budget could not stand any higher allocation of military aid for Israel — or, for that matter, economic aid for the Arabs — during the transition quarter.

But Kissinger's approval set forces in motion which could not be reversed in Senate committees. The President did manage to persuade the House Appropriations Committee not to approve the extra money. But even to do that took a letter to Speaker Carl Albert, signed by the President April 6, threatening to veto any foreign aid bill containing extra funding for the disputed three months.

Since then, the Israeli lobby in Congress has been trying to arrange some compromise. Sen. Jacob K. Javits of New York, just back from a trip to the Mideast, tried hard to persuade Mr. Ford to agree to something, perhaps $300 million. However, stories leaked to the Israeli press — that the President actually had bought a compromise — were wrong. No compromise has been reached.

A veto of the aid bill could not conceivably be overridden. However, such a veto would be followed by passage of a bill without the extra aid for Israel but including the restrictions on presidential authority — a bill whose veto could be overridden. This course of events would leave intact for future years the insidious legislative encroachment on the President's freedom to conduct foreign policy without undue restraints.

Accordingly, a partial satisfying of Israeli aid demands, though far from the best formula for Mideast peace, could produce an overall foreign policy benefit. Elimination of the harshest of the new congressional restraints would begin to reverse the dangerous congressional usurpation of policy-making that has marked the post-Vietnam era.

ST. JOHN'S JOURNAL: Double standard on dictatorships cited

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN
Copley News Service
WASHINGTON — "Over the last two years terrible things have happened," observed the Russian author Aleksandr Solzhenitsyn in a BBC-TV interview. "The West has given up not only four, five, six countries — the West has given up its world position."

The process of surrender by the United States as a world power is only vaguely understood. For example, who can say at what point the United States lost its will to prevent South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos from being taken over by the Communists?

The refusal of the U.S. Congress to extend crucial military aid to all three nations was the critical factor that doomed them to a Communist military takeover. However, long before the surrender of Congress and the Ford administration a year ago, political propaganda paved the way for the weakening of Western resolve. It has been the failure in the area of ideas which contributed to what Solzhenitsyn calls Western "capitulations" to Communist aggression in at least six nations in the last two years.

A fresh illustration of the process of propaganda as the prelude to capitulation is at hand with the current campaign of Democratic liberals in the House of Representtatives and Senate when it comes to South Korea.

Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., and Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., have led in both houses a continuing campaign against the alleged dictatorship of the pro-Western Seoul government.

"I have been increasingly disturbed," Kennedy stated on March 24 on the floor of the Senate, "by the clear drift of the (South Korean) government toward a policy of systematic repression." Kennedy then inserted in the Congressional Record hostile editorials and news articles from several "liberal" newspapers castigating the South Korean government for its alleged dictatorial policies. Fraser did much the same in the House.

All this has a familiar ring. Back in the early 1960s liberals like Kennedy and Fraser complained that the then-pro-Western government in South Vietnam was engaging in the systematic destruction of democracy. However, the congressional liberals and some of the newspapers that now criticize South Korea seldom have unkind words for the Communist dictatorship in North Korea or the repression and brutality that have taken place in the last year in Asian nations like Cambodia, Laos and South Vietnam. And a year ago senators like Kennedy and other liberals voted to cut off military aid to South Vietnam and Cambodia, which led to the establishment of two Communist dictatorships.

This curious double standard of leading liberals in Congress and the mass media when it comes to dictators is nothing new. At its roots is what Solzhenitsyn quite accurately called a moral pragmatism. "As long as you have freedom," he asserted, "let the rest have pragmatism. Freedom is indivisible, and one has to take a moral attitude toward it."

This is precisely the problem of modern-day liberals — they have no moral attitude. Liberals like Kennedy and Fraser advocate the limitation of freedom at home of American citizens by greater and greater government, while they operate on the double standard that some dictatorships abroad are to be appeased and others are to be opposed. South Korea is to be castigated for alleged repression of democratic rule. North Korea, China, the Vietnam Reds, Laos, Cambodia, Cuba, Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union are to be dealt with by a policy of detente and tolerance.

This double standard reveals the real ruthless face of the modern liberal philosophy, camouflaged by a thin veneer of humanitarian sloganeering and lip service to liberty.

If such a philosophy is so tolerant toward totalitarianism abroad, what prevents modern liberals, in time, from imposing-at-home the same ruthless reign of tyranny that they so casually condone elsewhere?

Mark Russell says

The swine flu vaccine required to inoculate the entire U.S. population requires 100 million fertilized chicken eggs. The egg money should come out of the Defense budget, so, obviously, the chickens will be drafted.

Ron Nessen: "Mr. President, how can we determine the side effects of the vaccine?"

The President: "Roll up your sleeve, Ron."

Ronald Reagan says that people don't want some federal bureaucrat giving them a shot. Better to have a state or local anesthetic.

The Panama Canal has great possibilities as a campaign issue. We could fill it in and provide more employment than the Alaska pipeline.

Reagan is upset at the idea of Ford giving the Canal back to Panama. Ford could really blow Reagan's mind and give the Canal to New York City.

Brando's ladies always brunette

Copley News Service
 HOLLYWOOD — Marlon Brando's ladies are always the same: Beautiful and strikingly brunette. And this applies on screen as well as off.

Or at least it certainly applies to the leading lady in his most recent picture, "Missouri Breaks," and to the principal actress in his upcoming "Apocalypse Now."

The former is Kathleen Lloyd, a black-eyed, black-haired Californian of Basque descent who won the Hugh O'Brian acting award at UCLA in 1969 and who plays a bank robber in "Missouri Breaks" with Jack Nicholson and Marlon Brando in the starring roles.

Prior to being tapped for this enviable though rather unnerving assignment, Miss Lloyd had worked primarily in television, and it was because of her work in a TV drama that director Arthur Penn interviewed her for the film.

Lynda Carter, feminine lead in "Apocalypse Now," the brunette Miss U.S.A. of the 1972 Miss World contest, also leaped from television to her role in a Brando movie.

As ABC-TV's "The New, Original Wonder Woman" in a two-part special, she caught the attention of "Apocalypse" producers who cast her in the picture. On the verge of departure for location in the Philippines, Lynda was as calm as though she'd worked with Brando every day of her life.

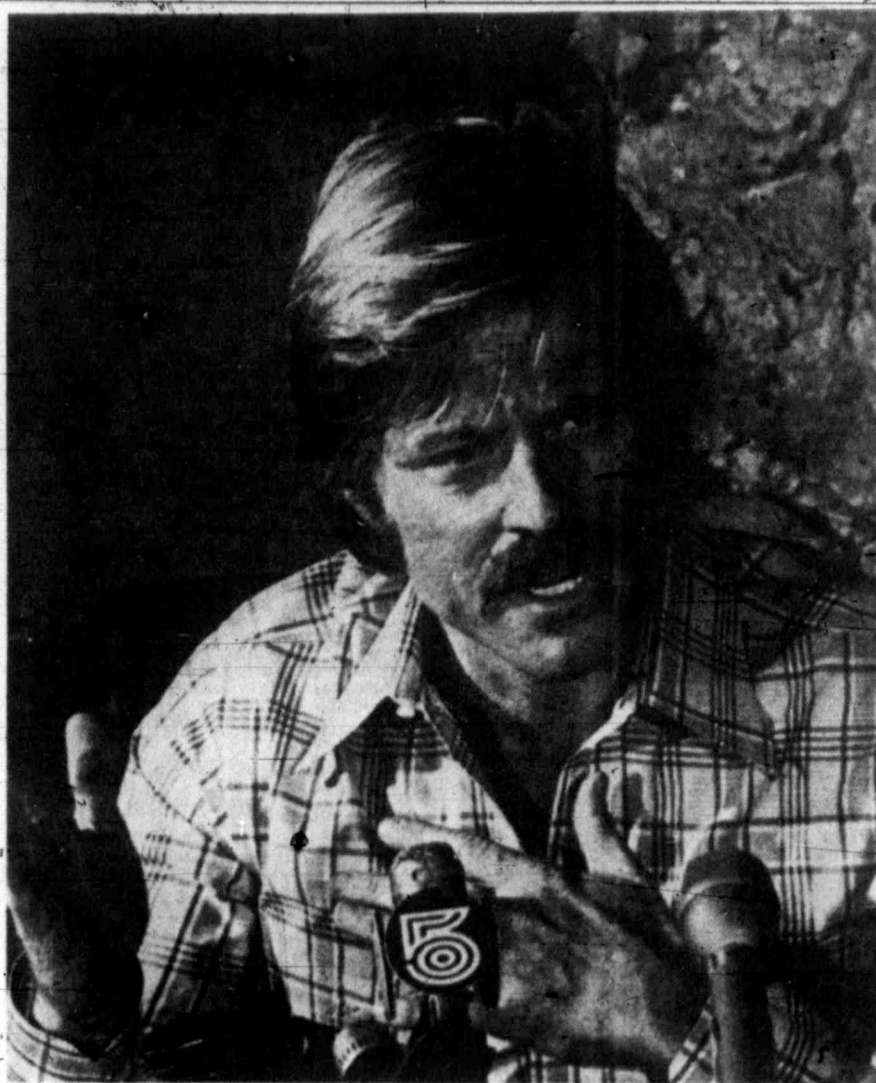

"I'm not at all nervous," she said, "but I am excited."

If she was nervous about anything, it wasn't about her impending association with a legend so much as it was about "Wonder Woman's" future.

(The network did not put "Wonder Woman" into its weekly lineup for autumn; however, the two-part special aired and may become a series when something's canceled.)

"In a way, Wonder Woman is Lynda Carter," Miss Carter announced. "She's not a women's lib character nor is she totally camp. In certain ways she's rather childlike."

"I think Wonder Woman is a super role."

ROBERT REDFORD, in his first public statements, since he was burned in effigy for opposing the now defunct Kaiparowits power project in southern Utah, defends his stand in a news conference at his Sundance Resort in northern Utah. Redford said it was time to bury the hatchet and work together to solve the nation's energy problems.

Bridges' career remains quiet

Newsday
 If Jeff Bridges ever becomes a superstar, and he might, a retrospective of his earlier starring efforts would be a marvelous idea because he's been so good in so many interesting movies that were either marginally successful or went absolutely nowhere at the box office. Despite two Oscar nominations, it's difficult to remember his credits, primarily the result of limited exposure.

With the possible exception of "Hearts of the West," which at least got a good play before it disappeared, Bridges has not gotten much mileage out of his movies over the last few years. There was "Fat City," for example, then "Bad Company" and "The Last American Hero" and "Thunderbolt and Lightfoot" (his second Oscar nomination), and finally, "Rancho Deluxe," all of which vanished after unceremoniously short runs.

Oddly enough, all received fairly good, if somewhat mixed, critical reviews. And in every case, Bridges received the kind of notices that lead to long, successful careers. In fact, starting with his supporting role in "The Last Picture Show," which earned him his first Oscar nomination, Bridges has been uniformly praised as an actor, and rightly so.

As a result, Bridges does not appear to have trouble finding work, but he hasn't become what you would call a household word. One of these days he's going to find the right movie, and that will change.

The point of all this is that Bridges is in a new movie, "Stay Hungry." Barring a miracle, it will do nothing for his quiet career beyond adding to the retrospective after he finds the right role. "Stay Hungry" is not even as good as some of his other forgotten efforts. Worse, Bridges seems to be repeating himself. The movie is coproduced, cowritten and directed by Bob Rafelson, who scored heavily with "Five Easy Pieces."

Priscilla now host

Copley News Service
 Having sold her interest in Bis and Beau, the Beverly Hills boutique in which she was a founding partner, Priscilla Presley is co-hosting a new television talk show now in the pilot stage and intended for syndication.

Through visits to spas and clinics around the country, the show will explore the youth, health and beauty business.

First stop will be a clinic near Santa Barbara, Calif.

The beauty business is an appropriate topic for Priscilla's consideration, since her current beau is a hair stylist.

Seems like Barbara Streisand set a trend.

'Wings' tour postponed

Copley News Service
 HOLLYWOOD — The country will have to wait awhile for the celebrated "Wings Over America" tour of ex-Beatle Paul McCartney and his pop music group. Start-of the tour has been put back to May because of a broken finger suffered by guitarist Jimmy McCulloch.

Meantime, the thousands of fans who will jam the concerts can get a preview of the performance with the "Wings" album just released by Capitol (which hadn't counted on McCulloch's broken finger).

It's been a decade since Beatlemania swept the country.

McCartney now is 33 and at the peak of his musical career as a singer and songwriter ("Yesterday," "Michelle," "My Love"). His Wings group, which includes wife Linda who is a keyboard artist as well as vocalist, has been in existence for five years. Previous albums like "Band on the Run" and "Venus and Mars" have swept to the top of the rating charts.

The latest LP — "Wings at the Speed of Sound" — is a snappy mixture of rock and ballad with a touch of disco and jazz here and there. McCartney goes all-out on "Beware My Love," a frenzied rocker, and then comes on cool and mellow with a love ballad titled "Warm & Beautiful." Linda sings lead on "Cook of the House."

Good old days not so good

Copley News Service
 HOLLYWOOD — When Mac Davis and Jan Clayton co-hosted a party for Jimmie Rodgers at the Palomino Club in North Hollywood, Jimmie was less than tactful, talking on and on from the stage about the good, old days when he, Glen Campbell and Mac were good buddies picking guitars and dreaming of stardom together.

Evidently he hadn't heard that Mac's wife, Sarah, left him to become the light of Glen's life. Jimmie's reminiscing made the audience uncomfortable and probably made Mac even more so.

On the other hand, the crowd enjoyed his recall of his old hits, "Kisses Sweeter Than Wine," "Honeycomb," etc.

Miss Clayton told guests that she'd become a heroine to her children when they discovered that (1) she knew how to drive a pickup truck and (2) she's a good friend of Jimmie Rodgers.

Among celebs applauding Jimmie's songs (though not all of his remarks) were: Michael and Paula Kelly Cole; Leslie Nielsen with steady-lady Kandi Rhodes; Gail Fisher; and Robert Colbert.

proclaimed himself a defender of the right of thousands of Egyptians to inexpensive enlightenment.

All Hussein, 65, is one of 45 owners of second hand book stalls clustered along the wall of Cairo's faded Ezbekia gardens resembling similar small businesses on the left bank of the Seine in Paris.

He makes about $14 a day selling old paperbacks, back issues of European and American magazines, medical textbooks and other exotica dating back to the British rule in Egypt when the gardens were the place to be seen.

"We are built-in inflation fighters," said the bookseller whose customers call him Am Hussein (Uncle Hussein). He was wearing the street-length robe called a galabiyah as he used a feather duster to spruce up the wares in his stall.

Recently the booksellers thought they saw the handwriting on the wall when other vendors established stalls in the same area, selling imported women's clothes, stockings, perfumes and other hard to obtain consumer goods.

The operators of these "boutiques," as they are called here, were prepared to pay the new annual rent of the equivalent of $250 the government was demanding of the stall operators while the booksellers insisted the price remain $7.50.

Police began closing down the book stalls until a wave of protest erupted, led in the columns of the city's newspapers by many Egyptian intellectuals who said the book stalls were an invaluable national asset.

"We thought the owners of the boutiques who have money were getting the green light to invade the whole wall and we would have to return to the streets where we began," said Hussein.

Hussein says he is one of the original Ezbekia booksellers. He recalls 40 years ago police chased them from the area when they first tried to set up stalls because the gardens were frequented by European aristocrats and Egyptian pasha of the time.

May's curve deserts no-hit bid

By The Associated Press
Rudy May threw a curve ball and Luis Tiant tried a changeup. The former wound up in the left field corner and broke up a no-hitter; the latter landed in the left field stands and broke up a ballgame.

May's bubble burst three outs away from what would have been the Yankees' first no-hitter since Don Larsen's perfect game in the 1956 World Series.
'It was a good pitch, but he made a better swing,' the disappointed left-hander said. 'What else can you say. Losing the no-hitter... what the hell. But, man, what hurts is losing the game.'

After the count went to 1-2 on Otis, I said to myself: 'If you throw him a fast ball and he hits it out of here, you are a dumb pitcher. But if you go with your best pitch and he hits it, then you can accept it.'

While the Rangers opened a two-game lead over Oakland in the AL West, the Red Sox limped home in the East Division cellar.

Doland, Temple lead
Cubs past Amarillo

AMARILLO — The Midland Cubs, behind the combined pitching of Wayne Doland and Jay Temple, took a 6-1 victory over the Amarillo Gold Sox Sunday afternoon.

and scored on Umfleet's double, the only extra-base hit of the game.
Amarillo scored an unearned run off Doland in the ninth inning before the crowd of 859 fans.

Tonight, Steve Hamrick (3-0) will be throwing for the Cubs while Bill McSpadden, down from Hawaii in the AAA Pacific Coast League, will do the pitching for the Gold Sox.

Table with columns: Player, ab, r, b, bi, Midland, ab, r, b, bi. Rows include Amarello, Mitchell, Sweet, Hamilton, Wilhelm, Dulyon, Reynolds, Ashford, Craig, Wittmayer, Totals.

Managers Billy Martin said he yanked May following Otis' double because the pitcher had thrown 116 pitches and he was tired. If he hadn't had the no-hitter going I would have taken him out earlier.

Rangers 6, Red Sox 3
Burroughs' shot, his third three-run homer of the series, was Texas' third home run off Tiant, all on change-ups. Tom Grieve and Mike Hargrove connected earlier while Dwight Evans and Bernie Carbo homered for Boston off Gaylord Perry.

Ken Singleton drove in the winning run in the nightcap with a sixth-inning sacrifice fly after a grounder by the newly activated Reggie Jackson forged a tie. With the Orioles trailing 3-2, Tony Muser singled and Lee May doubled. Jackson's grounder scored Muser and moved May to third.

Indians 12-4, Angels 3-5
Veteran Jim Brewer pitched 4-2-3 in nings of strong relief and Bobby Bonds and Jerry Remy each drove in two runs as the Angels salvaged a split. The Indians took the opener behind the pitching of Jackie Brown and Tom Buskey and home runs by Buddy Bell and Rico Carty.

Yankee pitcher Rudy May pitched a no-hit game until the bottom of the ninth inning when Kansas City outfielder Amos Otis hit a double. The Royals won it in the 11th inning, 2-1.

Williams, White win Nelson golf

By TERRY WILLIAMSON

Lubbock's J. B. (Wizard) White started it and Plainview's Jack Williams ended it. After all, that's what partners are for.

White and Williams won the seventh annual Ernie Nelson Partnership Golf Tournament at the Midland Country Club Sunday by winning a playoff over Lubbock's John Farquhar and Bill Munn.

The winning team started the day one stroke behind four other teams, but White got the duo started out right with four birdies on the first four holes. By the end of regulation play, they had pulled into a tie at 205 with Farquhar and Munn, who had the best record of the day with a 65 to pull into contention themselves.

Williams calmly sank an eight foot putt on the first sudden death hole for a birdie and the Nelson title.

The Midland pair of Andy Shapira and Bill Yost, who shared a four-way tie for the lead going into the final round, finished third with a 207 total.

Three of White's four birdies came on putts of 20 feet or better. Yost lamented, 'He just knocked our eyes out quick. They played some kind of golf.'

Odessa's Ron Folk and Steve Thompson won a card playoff over Lubbock's Dub Malaise and Levelland's Jimmy Johnson for fourth place. Both teams had 208 totals.

George Tucker of Midland and Bill Cromwell of Austin, the defending champions, finished with a 216 and next to last in the championship flight.

Los Angeles Dodgers win ninth straight

By The Associated Press

It was a painful decision, but Bill Buckner made it anyway. And the Los Angeles Dodgers are within spitting distance of first place because of it.

Buckner, sidelined since Wednesday with a painful sprained left ankle, was called on to pinch hit with runners on first and third and two out in the seventh inning of 1-1 tie with St. Louis Sunday.

Cards third baseman Hector Cruz, knowing Buckner couldn't run, was playing deep. Buckner considered his ankle, then weighed the situation.

'I saw the third baseman playing back and I said, 'What the heck, it can only hurt for three or four seconds.'

Buckner dropped a bunt down the line and beat it out, surprising St. Louis and sending the tie-breaking run home. Steve Garvey added an insurance run in the eighth with a home run and Los Angeles had a 3-1 triumph, its ninth straight victory.

The Dodgers, in last place just Wednesday morning, are now only .008 behind front-running Cincinnati in the National League West.

Doug Rau, 4-0, scattered nine hits and struck out seven to notch his first complete game of the year. It was the Dodgers' fourth complete game in their last five.

Expos 8, Reds 4
Barry Foote broke a 4-4 tie with a two-run single in the 16th and Pepe Mangual followed with a two-run double for Montreal. Pete Rose hit a two-run homer for Cincinnati and Gary Carter knocked in three runs, one with a homer, for the Expos. Don Stanhouse, 2-0, was the winner and Pat Darcy, 1-3, was the loser.

Padres 4, Pirates 2
Left-hander Randy Jones stopped Pittsburgh on six hits to raise his record to 5-1. Doug Rader belted a three-run homer and Willie Davis got the other run home with a triple for San Diego. Richie Zisk drove in both Pirate runs with a double and sacrifice fly. Doc Medich, 1-3, was the loser.

Cubs 6-6, Giants 5-5
Jose Cardenal was a one-man gang for Chicago in the opener with six hits, including a two-run homer, four runs batted in and the game-winning hit, a run-scoring single in the 14th inning. Derrel Thomas and Marc Hill homered for San Francisco.

In the nightcap, pinch-hitter Randy Hundley's sacrifice fly drove in the winning run for Chicago, ending more than seven hours of baseball. The Cubs loaded the bases in the 11th on singles by Rick Monday and Champ Summers and a walk.

Phils 8, Braves 2
Mike Schmidt's two-run double in the second and RBI singles by Tommy Hutton and Ollie Brown in the ninth highlighted a pair of four-run innings that carried Philadelphia past Atlanta and into first place in the National League East. The Phils have won seven straight games on the road and the Braves have dropped seven straight over-all. Jim Kaat, 2-1, won it and Andy Messersmith, 0-2, lost it.

Astros 5-4, Mets 4-7
Larry Milbourne's run-scoring single in the ninth gave Houston the first game, ending New York's win streak at seven games. Milbourne also had an RBI-single in the fifth when the Astros chased Mets' starter Mickey Lolich with four runs, two of them on a double by Enos Cabell. Ed Kranepool homered for New York.

The Mets got even in the second game on the strength of a four-run sixth-inning rally. Dave Kingman, Jerry Grote and Del Unser singled in a run each in the inning and Bud Harrelson got another home with a squeeze bunt. Unser and Wayne Garrett hit home runs for the Mets and Cliff Johnson hit one for the Astros.

Angry citizens protest jet noise

B. FEAVER
The Washington Post — From coast to coast in neighborhoods and communities located around airports, angry citizens have been harassing the U.S. aviation establishment with their increasingly effective demands for relief from the thunderous din of jet airplanes.

In addition to the well-publicized legal efforts to stop the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde from landing here, citizens are suing airports throughout the nation seeking an end to or compensation for the noise they already endure.

Responding to this pressure, many airports are implementing or considering curfews on jet flights and other operating restrictions, and the federal government is considering whether to require U.S. airlines to modify their noisiest jet engines at a cost estimated at $1 billion.

"I think the debate over the Concorde was just a tiny piece of the overall aviation noise problem," said Charles Elkins, the Environmental Protection Agency's deputy assistant administrator for noise abatement. "We've been working on the problem for years and I think it's going to explode. People are not going to wait much longer for the federal government" to control noise.

Officials from all segments of the aviation business — pilot groups, airport operators, airline representatives and the Federal Aviation Administration — agree that a serious noise problem exists, and they agree they must do something to alleviate it.

But they don't agree on how strong the medicine has to be or who should pay for it. At a time when a quiet, new jetliner can cost more than $30 million and the price of modifying noisy older engines may be $1 billion, many major U.S. airlines say they are in financial trouble.

There are also questions about whether airplane noise should be reduced at the source — the jet engine itself — or through new flight procedures, runway quotas and curfews that would reduce the impact of noise on people living around airports.

These questions are complicated by issues of legal liability. If the federal government assumes control of quotas and curfews and other local noise regulations, it could lead to the reversal of a Supreme Court decision that holds the local airport operator continues, citizens are responsible for noise suing. The Airport Operators Council International found in a recent survey that mish-mash of differing pending noise suits and conflicting local against the nation's airport restrictions would airports total $779 million evolve that could in requested seriously hamper air transportation.

The Los Angeles Department of Airports

recently settled for $21 million a noise suit brought by five area school districts. It has paid out $2 million in other claims in the last five years and spent another $136 million buying up noise-affected real estate around Los Angeles airports to avoid still more suits.

San Diego's airport has imposed a curfew on jet flights between midnight and 6 a.m. In New York, the port authority has provisionally banned supersonic Concorde flights, while from John F. Kennedy Airport, owned and operated by the FAA, has Board of Supervisors is a "voluntary" curfew on trying to do the same thing at Dulles Airport,

Fishing village yields archeological treasures

The Washington Post — WASHINGTON — An Indian fishing village where life was stopped in its tracks by a mud slide about 500 years ago has provided an unprecedented wealth of archeological treasures, according to a report in the May issue of the Smithsonian magazine.

The report was written by Professor Richard D. Daugherty of Washington State University, who is leading a dig of the village of Ozette on Cape Alava in Washington State — the westernmost point in the continental United States.

A sudden mud slide buried several houses under a protective layer of clay thick enough to preserve the kind of perishable items that usually don't survive — wood implements and artifacts, for example.

Hearsay... allegations... opinions...

BUT NOT FACTS

Attacking Southwestern Bell has been a popular pastime for more than a year.

A report prepared for the Senate Subcommittee on Consumer Affairs provides the latest example. The Subcommittee was formed in December, 1974, to investigate allegations made against Southwestern Bell concerning political contributions, electronic surveillance and rate making.

The report makes charges based on sweeping generalizations and reaches conclusions not supported by facts. Opinions, hearsay and unsubstantiated charges made during Subcommittee hearings prevail.

We want the record to show that despite the gross generalities of the report, the investigation itself...the portions dealing with facts...show:

- No evidence of illegal wiretapping condoned by the telephone company.
- No evidence of improper bookkeeping.
- No evidence of falsifying facts in rate cases.
- No evidence of violations of the Texas election code regarding voluntary, personal employee contributions to political candidates.

Earlier drafts of the report were prematurely publicized in newspapers without benefit of approval by the Subcommittee.

We responded to all of the allegations and innuendos in the report in two letters to the Subcommittee chairman. We'll limit our comments here to the three major items... political contributions, electronic surveillance and rate making.

Political Contributions

After many investigations, there is no evidence that illegal political contributions were made. The report cites no evidence and even admits no corporate monies were involved. Here's an excerpt from testimony given at the hearing:

Senator: "Let's be clear, now. It's a felony punishable by five years in the penitentiary, or five thousand dollars fine for a corporation to make contributions."

Investigator: "Uh-huh."

Senator: "Now, does your investigation reveal, or not, as far as your conclusions are concerned, that there is a violation of the law as far as these contributions are concerned?"

Investigator: "No, it does not."

Despite this, the report implies guilt and calls for a continuing investigation of Southwestern Bell employees. In a significant and definitely related decision, the Missouri Public Service Commission unanimously concluded there was no evidence of illegal political contributions by Southwestern Bell. The charges were the same as those in Texas and the source was also the same. The decision followed a year-long investigation.

Electronic Surveillance

Privacy of communications is fundamental to our business. Every employee is required to read and sign a code of ethics which clearly states the law and the company policy, covering wiretapping and eavesdropping. Penalties for violators are severe. They are fired.

The report erroneously states that the usual methods of wiretapping require assistance from someone within the telephone company. This simply is not true — as hearing testimony confirmed.

Patrick W. McCann, identified as a convicted wiretapper in the report, testified before the committee on May 13, 1975, how anyone can wiretap:

Senator: "Now that type of wiretap can be accomplished without any information from..."

McCann: "Like this is accomplished very easily by the lay person. Usually, anyone could do this. An 8-year-old child could do such a tap on a line."

This fact was not mentioned in the report. McCann also testified he has placed such taps without any information from the telephone company.

The charge that individual Bell employees sometimes might have cooperated in illegal surveillance is true. The fact omitted from the report was that employees who wiretap are fired for doing so.

These employees are acting outside the scope of their employment when they violate our strictest rules on the privacy of communications. The isolated incidents of misconduct do not warrant any conclusion that patterns exist. This information was known by the Subcommittee's investigators, but the report downplays these pertinent facts.

Rate Making

The Subcommittee's report renews shop-worn allegations about rate making. It implies that since rates of return can be computed in different ways this is manipulation of data. We do look at earnings several different ways for comparison purposes...and so do our regulators.

The report attempts to cite the opinions of one rate consultant as if it were some empirically developed fact. This just isn't true. He has his opinions about the laws and accounting methodology. Our lawyers and accountants have theirs.

Everybody doesn't always agree. There are many approaches to rate making, and there probably always will be.

In hundreds of Bell rate cases throughout Texas and across the country, our rate making formulas have been examined by hundreds of professional consultants and regulatory staffs. Never before have we been accused of being deceptive.

One thing is clear. There is no dispute about the facts we present in rate cases; even the Subcommittee's consultant acknowledges this. The report goes into issues which are proper for regulatory bodies to decide. These issues are prescribed by statutes, court decisions and the Constitution. We follow the laws of Texas in Texas rate cases. We will continue to do so.

Continued Cooperation

The Subcommittee has investigated us for 16 months. We have been investigated by numerous other agencies. Possibly no other company has been investigated so thoroughly. We will continue to cooperate with any legitimate inquiry, as we have in the past.

However, we will no longer refrain from confronting those who accuse us. We will not remain silent. We intend to be heard when accused. We owe that to our customers, employees and owners.

Domes, abandoned mines to become deposit vaults

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Salt domes and abandoned salt mines would become petroleum safety deposit vaults from which the nation could make energy withdrawals in emergencies, under a recently announced Federal Energy Administration plan.

The Arab oil embargo was that kind of emergency. "If we had had 150 million barrels of crude in domestic storage two years ago during the embargo, we could have replaced half the shortage as faced," said Frank Zarb administrator. FEA hopes to have that much crude oil stored in salt caverns along the coast of the Gulf of Mexico by the end of 1978 at a cost about one-sixth of similar storage costs above ground. How would it work? Louisiana has 130 known salt domes jutting out of the marshes and bayous along its coast, like giant bubbles risen over thousands of years from depths up to 20,000 feet in the earth's rocks. Others are located in east Texas and in northern Louisiana. Forced up from the depths by earth pressure, the lighter salt emerged as domes, huge plugs roughly circular in shape and from a few yards to a mile across at the top. Geologists theorize that the domes were created through a folding process - salt, with its greater plasticity, moved through other rocks. Some of the salt domes have caverns caused by extraction of salt through desalination - putting water into the dome, taking out brine and drying out the salt. Some have been abandoned after the salt was removed. "The cavern would contain brine," said an FEA geologist. "We would force the brine out by pumping in oil, and when we wanted the oil, we'd pump water or brine back in." Domes with no caverns could be hollowed by what the geologists call leaching, pumping in water and then oil. "The oil could be pumped in while the leaching is going on," said the FEA spokesman. "The oil would float on the brine. We would pump out the brine from the bottom, leaching as we go." FEA has its eyes on abandoned salt mines which contain enormous rooms at various levels, some of them 75 by 75 feet, extending up a 100 feet or so. With the mines, FEA would pump in the oil and pump it out when it was needed. FEA plans to get the oil to the domes and mines by existing pipes, new pipes, barges and small tankers. The coastal marshland contains hundreds of producing oil wells connected by their own pipe systems to major distribution networks. With congressional approval, FEA would spend $300 million in fiscal 1976 to buy these kind of oil storage facilities. Zarb estimated five to 10 salt domes would be needed. But, environmental impact must be approved, so FEA officials said they probably would prepare impact studies on a couple of dozen sites in order to assure getting the lesser number.

Former Midlanders promoted by Drilco

Two former Midlanders are among three recent promotions announced by the Product Engineering Department of Drilco-Division of Smith International, Inc., at Houston. Sam Crews, who joined Drilco in Midland in 1961 as product engineer, has been appointed to the newly-created position of director of engineering, and Wendell Dixon, who started his Drilco career here in 1962, has been named chief product engineer. Crews was engineering manager before his promotion. He now will devote his efforts to long-range planning of all engineering functions. Dixon, who was an inspector trainee when he joined the concern in Midland, was promoted from chief product engineer. The other promotion was the elevating of Ed Bailey to chief product engineer. Bailey was new product development engineer. He has been with Drilco since 1974.

Explorer is testing

I. W. Lovelady, Midland, No. 1 Smith, Nolan County wildcat, one mile west of Blackwell, swabbed 23 barrels of load water and 30 barrels of new oil in 10 hours, from the Ellenburger. The recovery was through unreported perforations, in a 4 1/2-inch liner hung from 4,452-6,378 feet, after washing with 250 gallons of mud acid. A drillstem test in the Ellenburger from 6,290-6,326 feet recovered 254 feet of 48.5-gravity oil and 186 feet of heavy oil- and gas-cut mud. It is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 249, block 1-A, H&TC survey, one mile west of Blackwell. Jake L. Hamon of Dallas was running 5 1/2-inch casing to 12,257 feet, total depth, for completion attempt at No. 2-B University, south offset to Devonian production in the Block 7 field of Martin County. A drillstem test, open four hours, from 12,129-12,257 feet, using 3/4 by 1-inch chokes, reversed out 100 barrels of oil, 23 barrels of water cushion and 14 barrels of condensate and mud. The sampler had 1 cubic foot of gas, 1,900 cubic centimeters of 44.2-gravity oil. Location is 660 feet from south- and east lines of section 12, block 7, ULS, 30 miles north of Midland.

Can city hall claim plants?

WASHINGTON (AP) - Does federal law make it possible for city hall to take over a local private electric company's dam and power plant? It probably will take years for the Federal Power Commission and, ultimately, the federal courts to provide the answer. But a number of towns, counties and public utility districts can be expected to watch as Bountiful, Utah, and Santa Clara, Calif., try to take over hydroelectric power plants run by giant utilities. Under a 1920 law creating the FPC, Congress said licenses must be issued for construction and operation of hydroelectric dams and power plants on navigable streams. Congress limited the licenses to public and private power companies to 50 years, with this kicker: public utilities and local governments can apply for the private license operation at renewal time. Licenses have been expiring - largely in silence - since 1970. The FPC says it is woefully understaffed and generally has opted to renew licenses on a year-to-year basis, pending a thorough review at some future date. The eventual review is to be as thorough as the investigation at the time of the issuance of the original license. An additional six FPC staff positions are in this year's budget to help tackle the license tasks.

Discoveries final

Pay openers have been finalized in King and Rannels counties. A new pay, the Tannehill, has been opened in the Anne Tandy field of King County, with completion of Taubert, Steed, Gunn & Medders of Wichita Falls, No. 9-NA S. B. Burnett Estate, 17 miles southeast of Guthrie. The well was completed to pump 75 barrels of 36-gravity oil daily, with gas-oil ratio measuring 150-1. Production was through perforations at 2,632-2,638 feet. Drilled to 5,900 feet, it has 4 1/2-inch pipe set at 5,882 feet, and is plugged back to 5,130 feet. Tests in the Strawn did not indicate commercial feasibility. Location is 1,200 feet from south-west and southeast lines of section 2, block X R. M. Thomason survey. North American Exploration Co. of Abilene, No. 2 Brookshier has been reclassified to open Dog Bend gas production in the Talpa, Southwest field of Rannels County, 12 miles east of Ballinger. The calculated, absolute open flow was for 435,000 cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 110,000-1. Hydrocarbon liquid gravity is 48 degrees. The well is producing through perforations at 3,155-3,165 feet. It was completed as the oil opener last June, for 15 barrels of oil daily, through the same perforations. Total depth is 3,535 feet, and 4 1/2-inch casing is seated at 3,300 feet. It spots 800 feet from north and 1,800 feet from east lines of section 39, GH&H survey.
