Thunderstorm dumps heavy rain on Midland, Basin

Midland residents awoke this morning to find streets and yards under water after a short, but heavy, thunderstorm swept through town between 4 and 6 a.m.

The National Weather Service (NWS) recorded only .67 of an inch at Midland Regional Air Terminal, but gauges in Midland had upwards of an inch in several locations.

The motion, filed Tuesday in the District Court for the Western District of Texas, Midland-Odessa Division, seeks a desegregation plan for Washington, De Zavala, Crockett, Pease and Milam elementary schools.

It asks also that the plan be submitted prior to the hearing. Justice Department attorneys gave this reason: "If the court then determines to grant the relief requested in this motion, the available options for achieving desegregation would be before the court, and an additional hearing may not be necessary.' The Justice Department's motion follows the Feb. 2 denial by the U.S. Supreme Court to hear the case. The school district was seeking an appeal of the August, 1975, decision of the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals which demanded that the Midland schools "dismantle the dual system"

Thornton Hardie Jr., attorney for the school district, said this morning, "We will file forthwith a reply to this motion requesting that it be denied where it includes a request to dismantle the situation at Pease, Milam and Crockett.

"In support of our request for such a denial, we will be reminding the court of the position of the United States in previous hearings and briefs, and point out that they have admitted, right up to this very date, that no court should require us to do what they ask in their present motion. "In further support, we will bring to the court's attention the admission of the United States attorneys in the trial of this case in 1971 (that the three schools are not the result of intentional segregation) and the admissions... in their briefs since that time, up to and including the most recent filed in January of 1976,"

By WALTER R. MEARS AP Special Correspondent

Ronald Reagan has seized star billing in the Republican presidential contest, and President Ford, suddenly second, may have to rewrite his campaign script

But there are likely to be new twists in the GOP plot before it is played out this summer. There are, after all, 16 Republican presidential primaries to go. And there could be new faces in the campaign cast before convention

Nonetheless, Reagan has for the first time established himself as a challenger who can convince the Republican hierarchy that he has a real chance of denying nomination to an incumbent president.

Even Ford's campaign manager had to acknowledge that Reagan had the advantage after making the President a three-time loser on a single primary election day. It was evident in the numbers that leader in committed Republican nominating delegates and, perhaps as important, in the momentum and credibility the conservative challenger gained with two Southern victories and an unexpected triumph

Jimmy Carter, the dominant Democrat, won overwhelmingly in Indiana and in his Georgia home. He led in partial returns in the District of Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace won his home-state primary, too. Wallace offered testament to Carter's claim that as the likely nominee he can rally Democrats around him. "I could support him," Wallace said.

While Carter was speeding his bandwagon among Democrats, Reagan was cementing a remarkable comeback by gaining 51 per cent of the Indiana vote to defeat Ford by about 15,000 ballots.

The former California governor once was on the verge of elimination money running short after a succession of early primary election defeats by Ford. He held on and turned it around - for a second time.

Ford's allies thought they had finished Reagan in the early primaries, but he upset the President in the North Carolina primary on March 23, gained strength in Southern and Southwestern GOP state conventions, and scored a remarkable, 96-delegate sweep over Ford in Texas on Saturday.

Now it is the President who is skidding, although a spokesman said Ford remains determined and convinced he will win the Republican nomination.

But an outcome that had seemed inevitable to many Republican leaders no longer looks like a sure thing. And unless Ford can quickly repair the damage by dealing setbacks to Reagan in the coming primaries, the race could begin to look inviting to some men now on the

Should Reagan build on his current advantage, Republicans like John B. Connally and Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller may see openings that didn't exist before. And that could draw more after the primary election season, which ends nine weeks before the GOP convention begins.

For the moment, the arithmetic reads Reagan. He emerged from the Tuesday primaries with 360 committed GOP delegates in his column. Ford has 292. That has not happened to an incumbent president seeking election in modern times: Rogers C. B. Morton, Ford's campaign manager, said events had given Reagan "a sudden, and I hope temporary, advantage."

He said a major factor in that turn was the crossover vote of conservative Democrats who cast ballots in Republican primaries because of Wallace's virtual elimination from their party's competition. Reagan said crossover Democratic support was a virtue, proving he would have broad appeal as the GOP nominee.

There was evidence of a substantial crossover vote in the crucial Indiana race, although it did not approach that in Texas. Alabama and Georgia also were open primaries, in which a voter could go either way. And Morton noted that there will be six more like them. He said the Ford camp will have to find a way to cope with the crossover problem, although it wasn't clear what that might be.

The contests next Tuesday are in Nebraska and West Virginia, and both those states register voters by party, which precludes primary switches.

Reagan next week's momentum. He said he thought the Texas victory helped him Tuesday. Indiana strategists on both sides said in advance that the Texas sweep would boost Reagan's showing, perhaps by five per cent. That was more than his margin of victory

The votes read this way:

Indiana With 99 per cent of the precincts counted in the Republican race it

Reagan 318,688, or 51 per cent. Ford 301,493, or 49 per cent.
That awarded Reagan 45 not healthy Republican nominating delegates;

Ford 9. The delegates were apportioned on the basis of congressional district pluralities as well as statewide showings. On the Democratic side:

Carter 411,783, or 68 per cent. Wallace 92,217, or 15 per cent. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, a dropout from the active campaign, 70,907, or 12 per cent. Carter won 48 delegates, Wallace 9, with 18 uncommitted. Democratic Sen. Vance Hartke won renomination over Rep. Philip H. Hayes. Secretary of State Larry A. Conrad won the Democratic nomination to oppose Republican, Gov. Otis R. Bowen. Georgia

With 98 per cent of the precincts counted: Reagan 124,880, or 68 per cent.

Ford 57,795, or 32 per cent. That meant 48 delegates for Reagan.

HONG KONG (AP) - New Zealand Prime Minister Robert D. Muldoon said today he was informed in China that Mao Tse-tung suffered a stroke some time ago and is "not healthy"

Muldoon spoke at a news con-ference shortly after his arrival from a one-week visit to China, where he met Mao, 82-year-old chairman of China's Communist party, plus China's new premier, Hua Kuo-feng, and other officials.

Muldoon spent 10 minutes with Mao last Friday, markedly briefer than the Chinese leader's past meetings with foreign dignitaries. Muldoon said he believes the meeting was brief because of Mao's health.

"There is no doubt he is not healthy," said Muldoon.

He said Mao appeared frail but was definitely not senile. Muldoon said Chinese officials told him about Mao's stroke, but they did not say when it occurred except that it was "some Later this morning, Danny Arthur Howell, 21, of 3702 Thomason St. in Midland, was charged with burglary in connecti on with the theft of $18,500 from Conner's Grocery & Delicatessen, 2420 W. Illinois St.

He was being held in the Midland City Jail late this morning. Bail had not been set.

Huckabay, 27, said he spied a man running along Michigan street, about a block from the grocery store.

Huckabay, a police officer for eight years, said his suspicion was aroused and he started chasing the man, who was toting a trash can and a tire tool. He was wearing leather gloves, the officer said.

After the man fell "right in front" of the patrol car, he got up and swung at Huckabay, but missed, the officer recalled. Huckabay then grabbed and handcuffed him.

Capt. Billy Ray said much of the cash was found in Howell's clothing as he was being booked in at the police department. Approximately $8,000 was in his clothing.

Robert P. Conner, owner of the grocery store and delicatessen, declined to give the amount of cash taken in the burglary. He did say, however, that money was taken from more than one place in the store.

"It wasn't an inside job; I'm satisfied about that," Conner said. "I'm pleased," he said. "I think he (Huckabay) did a super job .

Pleased, too, was Capt. Ray. "It was just good police work," he said. "I told him (Huckabay) this morning that I'm proud of his action, and I'm proud of him and of officers of his caliber." "That's a good lick for us," the detective captain said. Maj. Sid Corley, assistant police chief, described Huckabay's feat as "fantastic."

Conner this morning said the burglary of his business was the third break-in "in less than a year."

This time, entry to the business was through a the westside banquet-room door which had been pried open.

Proposed food stamp cuts draw criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Ford administration's plan to cut $1.2 billion in food stamp costs will force more than five million persons in "working poor" families out of the program, the Agriculture Depart-Shortly after the department an-incentives for welfare recipients to said more than 20 states, 60 labor

The new rules will cover current recipients starting Sept. 1. They will also require most recipients to pay more for the stamps. All will have to spend 30 per cent of their income for stamps; the average now is 24 per cent. They buy the stamps at less than face value and the government pays

Individuals and families living only on welfare, who comprise nearly 8.7 million of the total 18.8 million persons receiving stamps, would not be forced out of the program. The law bars the department from changing their eligibility by departmental regulation. Some 5.3 million of the other 10.1

million recipients, who derive some income from work, would be severed. The department said the vast majority of the 5.3 million, who come from 1.7 million families, have annual incomes averaging $6,000 to $9,000. Another 570,000 recipients who earn more than $9,000 also would be denied

But department officials contend some of the neediest recipients, including the elderly, will pay less under the new system. To cut eligibility, officials will scrap complex deduction system that lets families with income over the poverty ine use stamps. In its place, the department will limit stamps to families with income no more than $100 a month above the official nonfarm poverty level. For a nonfarm family of four, the poverty level is $5,500 a year, or $458 a month. This family would remain eligible only if its income stays below $558 a month. If the family includes someone over age 65, the government will allow a $125 deduction instead of

Things getting better if barkeep undercharges you

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) - "Last night/I spent three hours in a saloon and I know the bartender undercharged me, so there is no question things are getting better." It was entertainer Frank Sinatra, the optimist — but to a point.

Ford has had reserve delegate strength in the ranks of nominally uncommitted Republicans, including 254 delegates elected in the New York

Morton said the Ford organization will move to tie down those delegates, but that may be difficult just now. With Ford in difficulty, they may want to see some more primaries before deciding how to go. The convention is three months away, and given the new look of the Republican race, uncommitted status may look good to them.

MISD pupil plan sought

Hardie said.

In that brief, filed with the Supreme Court, Justice Department attorneys. stated, "Nothing in the court's opinion or judgement requires the school board to correct racial imbalance where that imbalance is not the result of intentional segregation."

MISD attorneys, however, based their appeal partially upon the inclusion of the three schools in the 5th Circuit's opinion.

Hardie charged that the 5th Circuit's order is unclear, particulary regarding orders for Milam, Crockett and De Zavala which were cited as "racially identifiable" after the United States filed an enrollment update.

Hardie said this morning "no judge has stated those three schools" are the products of intentional segregation. The United States attorneys, too, have admitted both Pease and Crockett opened in originally allwhite neighborhoods and the racial composition of the enrollment is the result of population migration. Milam, however, had not been men-tioned prior to the ruling last August by the 5th Circuit.

Nevertheless, in its motion filed Tuesday in district court, those attorneys contend "the burden is now on the school board to demonstrate that the remaining minority schools (Crockett, Milam and Pease) are not the product of its de jure system,' according to Keyes vs. School District

In explaining their earlier exclusion of the three schools, the Justice Department-stated: "At the time of the 1971 hearing, the United States believed that the then enunciated legal standards of school desegregation law required the United States to prove that each and every minority school resulted from school board action."

The document, however, failed to explain why the United States implied in their brief filed with the Supreme Court that they were interested only in Washington and De Zavala.

In earlier court scrimmages, both. the MISD and the Justice Department agreed on a plan to desegregate Washington, but remained at odds over De Zavala, which the MISD contends is not intentionally segregated.

When the United States appealed the district court decision approving the MISD's stance, it followed an appeal by a group of Midlanders who entered the proceedings as in-tervenors. Dr. Viola Coleman was spokesman for the group which rejected the MISD's plan to desegregate Washington, saying the proposal placed the bulk of the desegregation burden on minority students.

Informed today of the latest legal development, Dr. Coleman said, "My position remains the same. We need to try to solve the problem once and for all if we can come up with a solution that will involve two things.

"One, we've got to fulfill the requirements of the law and, secondly, (create a plan) that does not place a disproportionate part of the burden of the solution on the blacks and browns. I think this will satisfy us.'

Hardie said the MISD's reply to the Justice Department's motion will be filed "sometime next week."

The school district has been embroiled in court action with the Justice Department, acting for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, since 1970, just two years after the district initiated a voluntary citywide integration plan for secondary schools.

Since that time the issue has gone two rounds in each the district court and the appellate court. It now is within the jurisdiction of the district court for a third time.

Hardie said the case will be heard either by Judge D. W. Suttle "or some other judge assigned to the Midland-Odessa Division.

Midland man pleads guilty in drug case

Elmer Don Culp, of Midland, a 22-year-old Gonzales Perez to two 33-year-old ex-convict and one-time olice informant, Tuesday pleaded guilty to the unlawful delivery of a prescription drug and was sentenced to 10 years in prison by District Court Judge Perry D. Pickett.

Culp's plea came midway in his jury trial in which an undercover narcotics officer testified that Culp gave him 50 pills of the tranquilizer carisoprodol behind the cover of a public restroom last Jan. 4.

In turn, the undercover agent paid a third party $100 for the pills.

'Culp elected to forego the tral-byjury just before his defense attorney. Vern Martin, was to present friendly witnesses. And the defendant opted for the maximum 10-year sentence on that one offense instead of a possible life sentence had the jury convicted him and figured in Culp's two previous convictions. Culp had served prison time on a burglary conviction in 1968 and on a forgery conviction in 1971. Prosecuting the case was Dist. Atty Jim Mashburn and Assistant Dist. Atty. Rusty Wall.

In other court action, Visiting Judge E. E. Jordan of Amarillo sentenced years in prison on a burglary conviction and placed Alvin Hilton Poole Jr., 17, on a five-year probated term for carrying a prohibited weapon on premises licensed for the sale of alcoholic beverages. Jordan, a retired state district judge, is acting in the stead of the ailing Joseph Mims, Mims, 68, judge of the Midland County Domestic Relations Court, is recovering from openheart surgery

Perez, who had served prison time for the unlawful possession of marijuana, pleaded guilty before Judge Jordan to the burglary of a building here on March 23. His counsel was Eddie Garza.

In the other case, Poole owned up to the prohibited-weapon offense committed last Aug. 16. Poole's defense attorneys were Robert Freeman and John Hyde.

Prosecuting the Poole and Perezcases was Blake Hansen, assistant district attorney. Facing a jury trial in Judge

Pickett's court at 9 a.m. Thursday is Wilmar Lee "The Snake" Cobb, 25, charged with burglary. That case will be prosecuted by

Ford to study election measure before deciding whether to sign

WASHINGTON (AP) -Presidential candidates hungering for federal campaign funds apparently will have to wait a few days to learn whether President Ford will sign or veto the Federal Election Commission bill that would start the money flowing again.

White House spokesman Ron Nessen said Tuesday that Ford will spend a couple of days studying the measure before he decides what to do.

The Senate passed the compromise bill Tuesday by a 62 to 29 vote. The margin in the House was 291 to 81. Both votes were more than the twothirds margin necessary to override a presidential veto.

Ford has received mixed advice about the bill from Republican leaders in Congress.

of Pennsylvania and Sen. Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, the senior Republican on the conference committee that came up with the compromise bill, said Ford should sign it. But House Republican Leader John Rhodes of Arizona and Senate Republican Whip Robert Griffin of Michigan voted against the bill. Ford had urged Congress to enact a bill making the six FEC members presidential appointees to conform with a Supreme Court ruling that said it was unconstitutional for Congress to appoint some members.

Under the court decison, the commission lost its power to disburse campaign funds in March when Congress failed to restructure it.

Meanwhile, presidential candidates have continued filing applications with the FEC for federal matching Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott campaign funds. The latest figures showed candidates have applied for $3.77 million in matching funds. Before the cutoff of funds, the FEC disbursed $12.6 million to the candidates.

The biggest request for FEC money, $1.41 million, is from Ford. The delay in passage of the bill stemmed from a bitter partisan fight between the Democratic majority and the minority Republicans. The Democrats used the opportunity given them by the Supreme Court decison to rewrite election laws to change earlier FEC rulings.

They also gave Congress a veto power over commission rulings, a provision Republicans contend gives the Democratic majority and all incumbents a chance to reject commission opinions they don't like.

announced by the FEC on Tuesday the greatest furor among the Democrats was its authorization of the use of corporate funds to set up committees to solicit campaign contributions from workers to be donated to candidates considered favorable to corporate interests.

> Democrats included a provision in the new bill to bar corporate committees from soliciting funds from anyone other than stockholders, company executives and administrative personnel and their families. Labor committees would be limited to soliciting from union

But the compromise bill added a provision that allowed the committees to solicit contributions from

Yes sir, inflation really hit the city's parking meters as the Midland City Council hiked the price to 25 cents an hour (for five minutes or the entire 60 minutes).

Previously, one could park 12 minutes for a penny or one hour for a nickel. Meters in certain areas permitted two-hour parking for a dime. But now it's a quarter, regardless.

It will be interesting to observe public reaction to the tremendous price increase. It could be that the council jumped the price too much. Some observers consider the price unreasonably high. The extent to which motorists use or tell the story insofar as the public is concerned.

The city council's reasoning back of the price hike is understandable - to discourage allday parking by meter-feeders, thereby releasing additional parking spaces for visitors or others driving downtown for

The big question seems to be, is the new rate too high? Will shoppers or visitors or business trippers consider the 25-cent rate excessive? Time will tell.

Meanwhile, several alternate measures have been proposed, and the council has indicated it will consider them and others.

It should be pointed out also that the council adopted the measure on an experiment basis, subject to change if found to be unsatisfactory.

Parking certainly is a problem here and elsewhere these days, and the council is wise in studying the overall problem.

The council took its price hike action after having heard results of a survey conducted by the do not use the parking meters will city's traffic division which revealed that 163 vacancies existed at the time of the survey on present parking lots in the area. It also was reported that four additional lots could be made available if and when needed, providing an additional 225 spaces.

It is likely they will be needed.

The bulk of Mr. Bailar's speech is a well-known and ofttold tale. Inflation and rising costs of labor have forced reductions in mail operations even as the cost of mailing a letter or package has risen dramatically. The poorer service at a higher cost has encouraged the rise of more efficient private mail and package businesses.

Unless something is done the Postal Service will have a $1.5 billion deficit next year. Addressing this problem, Mr. Bailar is closing many of the nation's 40,000 post offices and looking at still more ways to lop expenses.

DOLLARS AND PEANUTS:

Carter-Butz squabble reveals extravagance

By EDWARD NEILAN Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - One thing is for sure: if Jimmy Carter wins the Democratic nomination and is elected president, he'll name someone else besides Earl Butz as secretary of agriculture.

Carter has said as much publicly. The point came up recently when the lowly peanut had a brief moment onstage as a campaign issue.

Everybody knows that presidential aspirant Carter is a peanut farmer. Part of his appeal is his often-stated familiaricy with farming and far-What everybody didn't know, ac-subsidies for his Georgia farm. The incident didn't do much in the way of harm to Carter's campaign, nor did it do much to change Butz' image of a shoot-from-the-hip, highly partisan secretary of agriculture.

The incident did serve to focus some attention on the controversial - if largely neglected by the public subject of subsidies to peanut farmers. By extension, the whole general area of farm subisides came up for brief examination.

subsidies so controversial is their sharp escalation. Supports for peanut growing rose from $3 million in 1973 to $150 million in 1974 and were pegged at around $250 million in 1976.

The administration supported on April 12 legislation to make changes in the subsidies program

But, an Agriculture Department peanut expert said even the changes would leave the program with drawbacks that could cost taxpayers millions of dollars.

Asst. Secretary of Agriculture Richard Bell testified before a House subcommittee weighing legislation that would extend a subsidy program but would reduce the acreage on which peanuts could be cultivated. Bell noted that the legislation lowered price support from 75 per cent to 70 per cent of parity through reduced acreage, which was a step in the right direction. But, many 'severe shortcomings' remain. Bell said the 1.2 million acres proposed for next year would come up with 750 million pounds-of surplus peanuts that would have to be disposed of at taxpayers' expense. The price tag: $90 million or so. The Agriculture Department confirmed that peanuts are now the only food commodity remaining under the old price support structures which have been done away with on other items. The Carter-Butz miniflap may have brought enough attention to the peanut subsidies to push a revision there also. The peanut program under present legislation elearly is not working," Bell told the subcommittee. "It is badly out of date. It is costing American taxpayers millions of dollars that need not be For example, the government and peanut subsidies. The point is that one of the last major extravagances of the agricultural support program has been ferreted out and brought to public attention. Sometimes political campaigns are useful, after all.

President Ford and the Panama Canal controversy

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON -- After first fudging on his intentions about the Panama Canal, President Ford has managed what officials in his own administration most wanted to avoid: the impression that the U.S. is negotiating a new canal treaty out of Once the certain prospect of ultimately turning the canal over to the Republic of Panama no longer could be covered up, Mr. Ford began pounding home the point that the alternative to negotiation is a blood bath. That seriously undercuts negotiators seeking quietly to transfer control of the canal without Uncle Sam, in the wake of Vietnam, seeming again to be pulling down the In sum, Mr. Ford's handling of

Ronald Reagan's strident and inaccurate charges about the canal has been horribly botched. Besides giving credence to Reagan's theme that the President preaches hard on the campaign trail and practices soft back in Washington, it has revealed characteristics antithetical to Mr. Ford's public image: deceptive, demagogic, overheated. That is a poor omen for the long campaign ahead.

The Ford administration's position on the canal, inherited from the Johnson and Nixon administrations, is clear though not public. Mr. Ford's secret instructions to negotiators call for seeking 25 more years of operating rights and 50 years of defense rights, though the latter is more flexible and both are subject to negotiation. The question, in short, is not "if" but

Dedeption began early. Instead of trying to justify this position, Mr. Ford decided to keep it under the State Department rug through the 1976 election. U.S. diplomats talked Gen. Omar Torrijos, Panama's turbulent leftist dictator, into keeping quiet until Mr. Ford's election.

Reagan spoiled the conspiracy of silence by raising the Panama Canal issue in terms that were exaggerated, inaccurate and unquestionably demagogic. Responding at a Dallas news conference April 10, Mr. Ford made a pledge he clearly had no intention of redeeming: "The United States will never give up its defense rights to the Panama Canal and will never give up its operational rights as far as Panama is concerned.'

Was the President guilty of incompetence or outright deception? "I don't think the President was up to speed on this issue at this point in one Ford adviser told us. Translated, that means he did not know what he was talking about. But canal policy had been. thoroughly reexamined when Mr. Ford became President and Dr. James Schlesinger, then Secretary of Defense, unsuccessfully sought a harder negotiating position. Even detractors concede Gerald Ford has an excellent memory. Moreover, one close adviser had urged him to keep canal business quiet for 1976. The inescapable conclusion, then, is that Mr. Ford knew what he was doing in Dallas April 10. But reports five days later of

along with it.

Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker's testimony revealing the government's intent ultimately to give up the canal forced a new line by the President. It came April 19 in a White House interview with editors of the Texas Harte-Hanks newspapers. To break off negotiations, Mr. Ford declared, would be "absolutely irresponsible" and would "undoubtedly lead" to "bloody" incidents.

But the Texas editors persisted: would the treaty result in relinquishing the canal? "Well, you get into some of the very sophisticated areas here," the sidestepping President replied. Through the next three days of escalating rhetoric, Mr. Ford never did answer that simple question but painted increasingly ferocious pictures (with "bloody" the most frequently used word). By April 23 in Evansville, Ind., his voice rose in excited anger as he warned of "riots, more bloodshed ... and the enmity" of all Latin America if negotiations are broken off.

Actually, a different view is privately held within the military governments of Argentina, Chile and Brazil, Furthermore, the 1975 position paper of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, reluctantly supporting continued negotiations, does not back up Mr. Ford's suggestion that the canal will not be "economically justifiable" within 25 years. Nor have the Chiefs recommended sending 10,000 to 20,000 additional U.S. troops to the Canal Zone if negotiations are broken off a prospect repeatedly cited by campaigner Ford:

Rather, the Joint Chiefs have contended the canal is vital to U.S. security and suggest U.S .-Panamanian cooperation is the answer to the future.

But trust and cooperation would be doubtful with Panama ruled by Torrijos, Fidel Castro's close friend. Accordingly, military experts warn that the U.S. could not continue operation of the canal if Torrijos gains authority over the Canal Zone in Reagan's demagogic charges do not even attempt to deal with those very real questions. But neither do the President's demagogic responses. The canal, a deadly dilemma for the U.S., is made infinitely more difficult by manhandling from the President and his challenger.

Planners are also thinking of drawing on land-based U.S. tactical fighters operating from friendly ocean-area bases to block Russia's new missile-firing Backfire Bombers from reaching American fleet units at

Adm. James L. Holloway, chief of naval operations, gave glimmerings of this from a still secret, still incomplete strategy study during a Tuesday briefing.

The briefing was arranged to ex-request for a $1.2-billion increase in next year's shipbuilding budget to provide an additional five warships, including four missile-armed frigates and a down-payment on a new $2billion super aircraft carrier.

This is but the first installment of an expected five-year shipbuilding program planned by the NSC as part of a strategy to counter increasingly sophisticated Soviet naval power and naval-related air and missile forces in the latter part of this century.

Holloway indicated the Navy feels the present fleet of 477 ships, smallest since before Pearl Harbor, should be built up to about 600 ships. But he said the ultimate level will be determined by the NSC strategy study and President Ford's subsequent prehensive plan ...undoubtedly requires a great deal more than just shipbuilding," Holloway said. "It has to look at the contributions of the Air Force, it has to look at the contributions of our allies.

Holloway suggested that landbased Air Force tactical fighters might play a major role in intercepting Backfire bombers hundreds of miles before the Soviet missile-firing bombers come within range of American naval task force, convoys or amphibious groups.

'We are also looking at landbased bombardment aircraft to be employed, both in delivery of mines to block exits in Soviet main-base sortie areas as well as to make strikes on their naval bases." Holloway said.

"There was almost no difference between this and the average survival time of similar cases if untreated for 50 per cent of those the average survival was 3-4 months."

In Andover, Mass., the issues have been open classrooms and declining test scores. After a five-year battle in which some school board members were targets of death threats and garbage-throwing unhappy parents won a promise of a traditional elementary school stressing the three

In Prince George's County, Md., Phoenix, Ariz., and Montclair and Westfield, N.J., parent groups have forced the scuttling of a 5th grade social studies course which, in one of its creator's words, "questions the notion that there are 'eternal truths' about humanity that must be passed down from one generation to the

These seemingly different battles and hundreds of others are part of a deep conflict in American society over what moral, academic, political and personal values should be passed to the young. They reflect the nation's struggle to define itself after Vietnam, assassinations, racial clashes, campus protests and Watergate. It is a conflict that is tearing at the public schools, pitting parent against parent as well as parent against educator.

To some participants, the educator is the chief problem. "What we are witnessing is a sense of powerlessness - the parent has been aced out of the decision-making process," says Carl Marburger, himself the former education commissioner of New

The rise of strong teacher unions, increasing consolidation of school districts and an expanding federal involvement in education have all contributed to the feeling of parent powerlessness, he says.

Marburger now heads the National Committee for Citizens in Education, a network of about 100 parent groups dissatisfied over issues ranging from lax academic standards to an unresponsive bureaucracy. They include a Philadelphia parent "union" suing the school board for giving teachers too much power and a Columbia, Md., group that has forced officials to display new teaching materials before they can be used in

Fed by feelings of powerlessness, other groups like Marburger's have sprung up in response to such controversies as the test score dispute. One such organization is led by Jil Wilson of Kenosha, Wis., who distributes "If You Can Read, Honk" bumper stickers.

To educators, the problem is a disoriented society as reflected in the Terry Herndon, executive secretary of the 1.7-million-member

National Education Association,

"Schools have never lived in a social vacuum. The problem today is that there is no consensus among parents on what they want from schools.

In some battles the parents are winning the kind of education they prefer for their children, and in others

In Kenosha County, W. Va., a. national symbol of such disputes because of its violent textbook war of 1974, some teachers today are afraid to use any books challenged by even one or two parents.

A language arts teacher there, fearful of letting her own or her elementary school's name be used, tells how a single parent's objection blocked use of a D.C. Heath textbook series on communications.

"We have a very conservative principal. He said I had a choice between using a whole different set of books or devising a separate program for one child without making her feel singled out. I decided no one set of textbooks was worth it ...

The Heath series - adopted as the basic reading text for the elementary grades - was at the center of the 1974 assault. Fundamentalist parents complained that Biblical stories were treated as "myths" and too much material was devoted to family

The board of education later reaffirmed the books as the principal language arts texts for the Kanawha schools, but they remain unread today in many classrooms.

Other books have been kept from Kanawha children by a 20-parent screening panel set up under new textbook guidelines. One social stidues text, for example, said, "The most wonderful idea of all is the idea of religion." Protesting parents said this implied religion was created by man, not God.

Another book said, "Today most people all over the world agree that it s one of the jobs of government to see that all children go to school." Some parents saw this as indoctrinating students in a "one world government concept.

The entire series, published by Silver Burdette, was rejected. Elsewhere, the parental permission slip is flourishing as a way to try to meet all views. In Randolph, N.Y., for example, parent pressures forced removal of 150 books from a high school library. The works included Ken Kesey's "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," Herman Hesse's "Siddhartha, Norman Mailer's "Armies of the Alvin Toffler's "Future Shock," Peter Benchley's "Jaws," and four novels by Kurt Vonnegut. The books were locked in a vault, reviewed by a committee of parents and educators, then returned to their shelves with an elaborate system equiring parental permission for children of certain ages to read certain works.

But in other book-banning cases the board re-examines them and over the past few years, parents have not been given such choice.

In Brockton, Mass., J.D. Salinger's "The Catcher in the Rye" has been removed from a junior high library. The protesting parents said they were "not trying to censor anything ... just trying to hold on to moral values in

In Syracuse, Ind., John Steinbeck's "Of Mice and Men" was ordered off required reading lists and out of a high school library after some parents complained about

In Milton, N.H., Nobel prize author Alexander Solzhenitsyn's "One Day in the Life of Ivan Denisovich" was removed from a high school reading list in March after parents complained of vulgar language.

In Levittown, N.Y., the school board last month ordered six books including Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse Five," Bernard Malamud's "The Fixer," "The Dictionary of American Slang" and "The Best Short Stories by Negro Writers" - out of junior and senior high school libraries.

Levittown's school board president, Richard Aherns, says the books were removed "for the time being" until decides what comes next. "They had no business being in a school library." he remarks. "In my opinion, they're garbage.'

Other communities have been experiencing both book-banning and a back-to-basics revolt among a vocal and growing minority of parents.

In Pasadena, Calif., the school board has ordered five books banished from classrooms in the past two years and also has established two alternative schools emphasizing basic skills, strict dress codes, discipline, rigorous homework and tough grading.

At one of these schools, Sierra Mesa Elementary, officials washed the mouths of some students out with soap for using "inappropriate" language. Nevertheless, officials say that both schools have waiting lists. and that test score averages indicate the students are more proficient in basic skills than their counterparts elsewhere in the district.

Similar schools, with varying degrees of strictness, have been set up in such diverse places as Charlotte, N.C., Jefferson County, Colo., and Miami, Fla., and parents are seeking them in numerous other communities.

The NEA's Herndon sees this backto-basics reaction to declining test scores as an understandable phase in the education cycle.

"After Sputnik," he says, "we had a consensus that we had to stress math and science and tests. The SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) score peak, which came about 1963, was a product of that decision.

"But in the 1960s there was another consensus - that technology was creating neurotic people, dehumanizing us, and the emphasis shifted to individual learning. That was accelerated by Vietnam and Watergate, with a new stress on moral education and values. But the SATs were still designed for the post-Sputnik students.

As a result, Herndon says, tests geared to three or four years of English or math are not adequately measuring the knowledge of students who often do not have to learn four years of such subjects, and parents today cannot agree on which kind of children.

Parents across the nation are insisting on a greater voice in the curriculum.

'Teachers don't have the responsibility for bringing up the child, but they are making it anyway and they are making some pretty big decisions without involving the parents," says Jean Carter of Columbia, Md.

Mrs. Carter, wife of an engineer, is a leader in the group of about 300 parents that forced Howard County school officials to put all new teaching materials on public display before any are used.

In still other areas, some parents fed up with school systems that don't reflect their own values have simply pulled out of them. For instance, Pat and Nancy Murray took their three children out of the Rockford, Ill., public school system.

"What was going on in the schools was just about nothing," Mrs. Murray says. "There was no discipline and no patriotism. The children would sit around in groups and discuss problems, but there was no guidance on what was right or wrong."

She and her husband, a high school English teacher, kept their children home during the 1974-75 school year. Then they moved to Freeport, Migh., where last fall they opened St. Jude's Academy, starting with about 60

During the Bicentennial year it seems appropriate to go back and draw culinary inspiration from early presidential menus. Foods of these early Americans are legendary and no wonder! They are full of good, natural ingredients such as milk, cream, butter, eggs, fresh fruits, berries and vegetables. And, now and then, you'll find a touch of French cuisine brought back from

Thomas Jefferson's original "Panniquaiques" used both cream and hollandaise sauces combined with whipped cream. Today's version is somewhat simpler. The dish of peas is quite similar to the original. Cloverleaf Bran Rolls use a whole grain, in typical yesteryear fashion, but a new technique

there by the early diplomats.

JEFFERSONIAN CHICKEN CREPES

1/2 teaspoon salt 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg chicken broth.

OR half and

1/2 cup whipping cream, whipped

White House desserts of the early presidents might be as simple as curds and cream or as fancy as Charlotte Russe, but most were made with cream. Charlotte Russe was created by a French chef, Marie-Antoine Careme, so called because of a French hat fashion. It was a favorite dessert of the charming Sarah Polk (White House, 1845-49), the Lincolns served it, the Van Burens liked it and Ida McKinley (1897-1901) offered a Chantilly Charlotte flavored with essence of violets. It was the dessert of 1879, according to a Virginia cookbook which published six completely different versions of it from that many Southern ladies.

We present our Bicentennial version of it

To whip cream for either of these desserts, you'll probably be buying the ultra-pasteur-ized whipping cream which has an extended refrigerator life, meaning it will keep for 60 to 90 days, unopened. This is cream which has been heat-treated quickly to 285°F., then packaged aseptically. It whips easily, especially if you use a straight-sided, small bowl and beaters that have been chilled before whipping the cream.

THE WINE DRINKER

Favorite blends can disappoint

By TOM GABLE Copley News Service

The theme of the 1976 advertising campaign for Almaden is," We're careful about where we raise our children." The children are the grapes. The "where" are massive vineyards in California's San Benito County and recent plantings in neighboring Monterey. The advertising, which resembles Herbal Essence and Seven-Up campaigns in style, then describes "Our Sensitive Child," "Our Noble Child," and so on, the former being Chardonnay, the latter,

To a certain extent, Almaden should be a very proud parent because it does produce some wines of outstanding dollar value. But just as not all children are prodigies, not all Almaden wines are something to be presented at a debutante's ball. There have to be certain limitations to quality when you produce some 35 wines and have the capacity to bottle 40,000 capacity of about 24 million gallons. Gallo has about seven times more with an estimated 165 gallons Charles Krug is on the other side of the scale, with 3.5 million. Joe Heitz has just 160,000

Almaden calls itself California's largest premium winery and this is true to some extent. It does produce large quantities of wines in a manner normally employed by the smaller quality wineries.

It does use wood aging. It has two million gallons of its capacity in small oak barrels, which impart more character to a wine than the big redwood or stainless steel tanks. Almaden also produces "jug wines" in half-gallons and gallons. Its wines are almost everywhere, so you should have little trouble finding a bottle of your favorite type.

This leads to one problem facing Almaden, Paul Masson and others in that range: your favorite wine today may not be quite the same when you go to buy it off the shelf three months later. Most of their wines are issued without a vintage date. The wines are blended for consistency. But one batch is not always equal to another. Mother Nature does not work in precise parameters, even when assisted by one of the world's most incledible irrigation systems and top enologists. The reason this brought up is because one of the finest values in white wines produced in California is a nonvintage Almaden Gewurtztraminer. It cost $2.75 but had the aroma and bouquet, good color and edge, just outside your flavor one normally associates only with an exshape; don't try to poke pensive wine from one the smaller, boutique right through the wineries. Although nonvintage, there was a date material you're stitching (1974) molded onto the bottom of the bottle. Another down because you'll pull Almaden Gewurztraminer on the shelf a few months later had another bottle code and was a great disappointment.

Almaden does its best job with white wines: Gewurztraminer, Pinot Blanc, Chenin Blanc and even the Chardonnay (which they mistakenly call Pinot Chardonnay). The reds aren't quite as good and often have a "hot nose," from certain types of alcohols.

There is also a background smell that some wine experts refer to as "the vegies," for vegetables. This same background smell characterizes wines from certain areas in neighboring Monterey County and is not necessarily a flaw, but just a characteristic.

For those who enjoy sparkling wine, Almaden makes an excellent Blanc .de Blac Champagne. Cuvee 72 is now on the shelves. It has a distinct aroma of Chardonnay grapes and is a well-made wine in every respect.

DEAR ABBY

Nervous in Albany needs suggestion

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the bookkeeper for a business that maintains a small office staff.

Our office manager (let's call him "Marvin") is a middle-aged family man. The boss's secretary (let's call her "Sissy") is a shapely young single woman.

Since Sissy came to work here, she and Marvin have been spending a lot of time together in the file roomwith the door locked.

What they do is their business, but I'm tired of covering up for them when the boss comes looking for

I think it's unfair of my co-workers to put me in this awkward position, but I am too embarrassed to even discuss it with them. What do you suggest?-NERVOUS IN ALBANY DEAR NERVOUS: Get over your embarrassment long enough to tell Sissy that the next time the boss comes looking for her, you will tell him to look in the file room under

'Marvin.' DEAR ABBY: My husband says, "Ask Abby," so here goes.

When we go to parties where there is dancing and I am asked to dance, I always accept because I love to Trust Co. for a business dance. However, my husband, who is session. a wonderful dancer and a very handsome man, just sits there.

I am embarrassed to see the wife of the man who has asked me to dance sitting while my husband sits. He says 15 in Holiday Inn. he doesn't enjoy dancing with anyone but me.

What do you think, Abby? As a matter of etiquette, should I refuse dances with other men if my husband doesn't dance with their wives? Or should my husband dance even if he guest. doesn't enjoy it?-LIKES TO DANCE DEAR LIKES: Your husband should dance with the wife of the man who has asked you to dance. He's being rude to sit.

DEAR ABBY: This is for that woman who was "going crazy" because her house was always a mess no matter how hard she worked to keep it tidy.

I have a husband, three children and two grandchildren. I always believed that a house should be lived in. My husband and sons work on motors and they get pretty greasy, but I don't care. My daughter loves to paint with oils and you can't tell the color of any towel I have between the grease and oil paint.

When my grandchildren are here, I give them the run of the place. My sister-in-law said I was crazy because last winter I put the sandbox right in the middle of my kitchen. It made sort of a mess, but the baby was quiet, and I didn't mind sweeping up the sand.

Shortly after the spotlight of national publicity hit the "VHUNTing lodge socials" afforded some of the nation's military brass by certain armament lobbyists, space agency officials issued a "clarification of regulations concerning socialization.

In essence, the "clarification" puts the clamps on space workers accepting the hospitality of people representing firms which supply the space program's hardware.

The new policy handed down by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration earlier this year in a revised edition of the Federal Register includes sections prohibiting space agency employes accepting 'any gift, gratuity, entertainment,

Following a communications satellite launch last December, RCA hosted a typical "y'all come" party — and more than 400 RCA and government officials attended.

After a March 26 launch, RCA held a similar hoedown but — on the advise of attorneys - did not invite NASA officials or members of the launch team. About 150 RCA workers and wives attended. A recent party for which hosts prepared and stocked up for several hundred guests drew about 25 festive guests.

"I think it is unfortunate that a rule is applied to something like a launch party which is designed really to show appreciation for hard work and extra performance," said Phillip Schneider, president-elect of RCA American Communications Inc.

"In parties like these, we are just trying to say thank you, we are not trying to buy anything. I agree there

"I think it is wrong to accept or give large gifts. But I think there ought to be a reasonable interpretation. I think a launch party is beneficial to the maintenance of espirit de corps in a group where we are trying to develop an integrated team, not just a collection of contractors," Schneider

It's hard to find space agency workers who will knock the new restrictions publicly.

A number of engineers contend that the parties and other associations with contractors are harmless.

"I don't feel it is right. There is no way on this earth that I could help get anyone a contract if I wanted to," said one engineer who asked to remain

"The people who would have told headquarters to go to hell 10 years ago are now running scared because of the scarcity of positions in the space business, and in jobs in general," said a long-time NASA observer.

Robert Pickard, space agency spacecraft project manager at Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., was one of the few officials willing to comment publicly on the restrictions. He called the rules

Kennedy Space Center director Lee Sherer considers some of the changes "unfortunate."

"Launch parties are traditional and have had a very good effect on keeping the team concept," Sherer said. "But the conflict of interest pendulum has swing to a considerably different side than what it was. Giant university's free tuition policy in danger

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) - The city's widely acclaimed university, with an enrollment bigger than the population of Des Moines, Iowa, is struggling to survive a financial crisis with its quality and benevolent reputation

Everything about the City University of New York or CUNY, with an enrollment of 270,000, is down - its morale, its size, its budget and its admissions applications.

CUNY's proud policy of open admissions — a guarantee of college for' any graduate of a city high school — is gone and the long-revered free tuition available to any city resident is in

"The kids who go here have to have degrees that are still worthwhile," a CUNY spokesman says.

Its graduates, who are represented on the faculties of many of the world's most distinguished universities, include some of the richest, the most famous and the most successful in--dividuals living today. Among them are Mayor Abraham D. Beame; Dr. Jonas Salk, who helped wipe out polio; composer Ira Gershwin; novelist Bernard Malamud; Nobel Laureate Robert Hofstader, and entertainer Zero Mostel. For the qualified, a free education there has always been a right of living in New York City. Even academic competence was no requisite for admission in recent years, under an open enrollment program that has now been altered by the city's fiscal

New admissions criteria require an 80 per cent high school average or a ranking in the upper third of a student's class for admission to the senior colleges. A 70 average and rank in the upper three-fourths are now needed for acceptance in a community college.

Admissions data at CUNY shows that this change in policy will be partially responsible for a freshman class next fall that will be about 40 per cent smaller than the one which entered last September.

Instead of automatic admission to college, students who are unqualified under the new system must first enter a remedial program with CUNY....

"It's a hell of an experience," says Chancellor Robert J. Kibbee. "It's more fun to build institutions than to tear them down, although it takes a good deal more care and thought, I guess, as you decelerate than as you accelerate. As chancellor, Kibbee has persuaded the Board of Higher Education - in effect, CUNY's trustees - to merge, close and limit some of the university's schools.

Before the faculty tentatively agreed on a new contract foregoing salary increases until 1978 and deferring two weeks' pay, he had also been forced to schedule his staff and faculty for a four-week payless furlough at a saving of $32 million. The new contract saves $14.7 million.

"The future of City University is reduced scope," Irving Polishook, president of the faculty union, said. 'My hope is that reduced scope will not be irretrievable." Now engaged in negotiating this year's and next year's faculty contract, he adds:

"The imposition of tuition would be irretrievable. That would change the nature of the university ... It would no longer be a university of opportunity for the people of the City of New York. It would be a university for the people who could afford to pay.

Mayor Beame has steadfastly opposed imposing tuition, preferring instead to recommend that the state, which has its own university system with mandatory tuition, spend more for CUNY, assuming the costs of its senior colleges by 1978.

Kibbee, saying he would "do almost anything" if "it gets down to saving the university," refuses to impose tuition without a commitment from the state and the city to fund CUNY at acceptable levels, no matter how much tuition is raised.

Tuition, he says, is the price of getting enough money to maintain the university's quality. But no one who counts has been willing so far to demand that price, which carries with it a political surtax of certain public outrage.

Upstate legislators, whose constituents pay tuition at the State University, urge it. Local legislators shun it, and Gov. Hugh L. Carey says it is an option to be studied.

The result is that Kibbee and his university are in the middle - between the hurricane of imposing tuition and the earthquake of over-spending its budget. The chancellor and Board Chairman Alfred A. Giardino say the university is working in the dark, with no guidance from the city and state as to how much money to expect from

"Everyone is playing chicken in the sense that they want everyone else to do something first," Kibbee says. 'The history of last year has been a history of moving targets. From one week to the next, the university would not know what its budget was.'

The state and the city each contribute 40 per cent of the budget, and the rest comes from tuition and fees. The fees average about $150 from each of the roughly 184,000 New York City residents who are undergraduates paying no tuition. Almost everyone else pays tuition comparable to that in private schools.

Ironically, if tuition is ultimately imposed, CUNY students will be eligible for state scholarship money solely on the basis of need, just as students at state universities now are. One way or another, Kibbee says, the state will be subsidizing the univer-

For this academic year, the city originally certified a $662 million budget for CUNY. But, when the fiscal crisis hit, the Board of Higher Education finally adopted a $587 million deficiency budget.

The $87 million gap was funded by increased fees, higher graduate tuitions and across-the-board cuts that result in layoffs, a hiring freeze, bigger classes and bigger teacher workloads. The city then ordered another $32 million cut at the beginning of the school year, amounting to $55 million with the loss of state matching funds.

The university also doubled its application fee, to $20. Together with the uncertainty percolating through CUNY, the fee is thought responsible for a sharp decline in admissions applications.

Prune sparingly, experts advise

By TOM STEVENSON The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Many experts believe a young tree should be pruned as little as possible. This is because pruning tends to slow down growth of the

The leaves produce the food of the plant and when you remove a healthy leaf you remove a food

The foliage on a branch does not produce food only for that branch. It also supplies food for growth of trunk and roots. To hasten increase in trunk diameter, permit leaves and lower branches to grow on it for several years.

However, if the young tree has structural weaknesses, they should be corrected early in its life. The one that needs immediate attention is the Y-

Another structural weakness is branches too close together. This is not particularly serious during the early years and can be taken care of later on.

The Y-crotch results from too narrow an angle between the trunk and a main limb growing from it. As they grow, both the trunk and limb increase in diameter and finally they start to press against each

Instead of the union of the two becoming stronger each year as it would if they were at right angles to each other, a weakness develops. In a wind storm the Y-crotch may split wide open.

An easy way to prevent or eliminate a Y-crotch is to remove the limb soon after it is evident that it will become a structural hazard. If taken off while quite small, the pruning wound should heal rapidly.

Silver maples are examples of trees prone to Ycrotches. It is one of the reasons these trees are not recommended for planting around the home. If a branch on a tree is 2 feet from the ground, 50 years later the center of the branch still will be two is rapid. feet from the ground. But because it will have increased in diameter, the distance between the branch and the ground will be less.

If two branches, each about the diameter of a pencil, are spaced about a foot apart, the spacing may seem adquate. But when they each increase to six inches in diameter, the spacing will be much less and they will be too close together.

This should be taken into consideration when selecting the permanent branches of the young tree. Branches between the ones that are to form the permanent scaffold can be left on for a time to speed growth of the tree while it is young.

But they should be kept subordinate by shortening them if they tend to outgrow the permanent ones. A long branch tends to dominate a shorter one. The growth of the branch depends upon the amount of foliage it has exposed to light. By shortening the long branch, the shorter one is able to outgrow it.

A serious structural weakness exists when several limbs come from the different sides of the trunk at near the same height. They are weak and tend to reduce movement of nutrients and moisture to the top of the tree above them. These elements which move upward through the bark tend to go into the side branches and the top does not receive its share. If a young tree is growing crooked, this can be corrected while it is still small. The best time to attempt it is in the spring.

Use the pressure of your hands to straighten the trunk. This will rupture the cells on the inside of the curve. Stake the tree after bending. Healing usually

If there are two curves in the trunk, straightening is best done in two stages. Correct the lower one first, and do the other the following spring. Do not permit unskilled workers to prune your young tree. It is almost as sensible to allow someone with little training to fix your teeth as it is to have an unknown handy man tackle the pruning Of course, the tree will not die from faulty pruning and no pain is inflicted on it. But it may be changed from an attractive specimen to a stylized, unlovely

New Hampshire Pine Tree Riot first challenge to British rule

By KARLSWANSON

WEARE, N.H. (AP) - Three years before the Minutemen fired the "shot heard round the world," a band of woodsmen from this southern New Hampshire town struck their first blows against British rule.

On April 14, 1772, the men forced their way into tavern rooms rented to a king's sheriff and his deputy and nearly beat them to death with

The event has become known as the Pine Tree Riot.

The trouble began earlier that year when woodsmen illegally cut into the king's prized lots of white pine. The logs, as straight and true as most Englishmen had ever seen, were stored in several mills in the Weare

Since 1690 the white pines in New Hampshire had been reserved for masting ships of the Royal Navy. They were coveted for their size and strength by the Bitish government. which claimed them for the exclusive use of the Crown.

The colonists, however, wanted the trees themselves for use in building and furniture making. Thus were drawn the lines of conflict in one of the earliest acts uniting the people of New Hampshire against King George.

When British authorities discovered the store of logs, the mill owners were ordered to show cause why the timber should not be confiscated and the

Returning to Weare, Blodget sent his former employers a letter explaining that as the new deputy surveyor he would have to enforce the law; but he would be loath to turn on his neighbors "unless obstinate or notorious offenders" should force

Blodget ordered the cutters to pay a fine, and 17 of them agreed. Only the men from Weare held out.

On April 12, Sheriff Benjamin Whiting, accompanied by a deputy, went to Weare to arrest the recalcitrants. The next day he arrested one offender, Ebenezer Mudgett, and ordered him to post bail. Whiting then retired to a local inn for the night.

News of the sheriff's arrival had spread through the town. At a meeting that night in Mudgett's house, the colonials decided to post their compatriot's bail, but not in a form the sheriff would relish.

When dawn broke on April 14, Mudgett roused Whiting, claiming he had come with his bail money. The sheriff, still in his nightclothes, opened the door to his room, and 20 men, their faces blackened and switches in hand, pounced on him and

The deputy, awakened by the commotion, locked the door to his room. Not to be denied, the woodsmen ripped their way in and beat him.

Others prepared the lawmen's departure. Their horses, with ears cropped and manes and tails clipped, were brought to the scene and the king's men were forced to mount. They were sent on their way with "the sound of jeers and shouts ringing in their ears," one account reads.

Arriving in Derryfield, now the City of Manchester, Whiting summoned the aid of the British militia. Armed with muskets, the soldiers marched to Weare, but the rioters had long since fled to the forest.

Whiting, his wounds still smarting did not let the matter rest. He finally caught one of the rioters and sent him

Propaganda war swells along Sino-Soviet border

By ROBERT C. TOTH The Los Angeles Times

ALMA ATA, Soviet Union - "Come on, everyone, eat up," the boy commanded in mock seriousness as he dug more baked potatoes from the campfire ashes. "Got to build up your strength to fight.'

"Fight who?" laughed a girl in the clear sunshine of the high mountain slope. The rest of the Pioneers (Soviet scouts) smiled in anticipation of some happy banter.

'You know, over there," replied the youth, pointing his charred stick toward the majestic Tien Shan mountains rising sharply to the east. "Just a .couple hundred kilometers, two hours by fast car, them," he joked.

The smiles faded quickly, including his own. The kids — gregarious, hospitably sharing their Sunday picnic with a couple of foreigners who had wandered by - abruptly realized that China is not a funny subject. And in recent months it has become increasingly less funny here.

A marked rise in the shrillness and volume of Soviet propaganda against the Chinese has occurred since the turn of the year. It has been particularly inflammatory in the local press which serves the Turkic national groups here, Kazakhs and Uighurs who have millions of countrymen across the frontier in the Sinkiang Uighur autonomous region of China

Recently, for example, a Pekingtrained physician, Dr. Bari Mukhilisov, wrote in "Sosialistik Kazakhstan" that the Chinese had turned hospitals in Sinkiang into "experimental laboratories."

Chinese nuclear weapons tests in Sinkiang "led to numerous leukemia cases" among the indigenous (non-Chinese) population, Mukhilisov further asserted in the Kazakh-language

Three years and four days later other colonists would take up arms at He fled Sinkiang almost a decade Lexington in opposition to the Stamp ago and the conditions he described Act, the Sugar Act and excessive duties on tea. For the people of New dated back to as early as 1958. The Soviet decision to publish his attack Hampshire - who relied on lumber now can only be part of a deliberate for their livelihood - the pine tree law new effort to portray the Sinkiang had already proven to be oppressive Chinese as racists as well as Maoist deviationists.

Two weeks earlier, an article in "Rural Life" claimed there was 'popular unrest in Sinkiang'' in which the Uighurs and other national minorities were continuing their centuries-old struggle for "liberation" from the Chinese.

"A campaign of pogroms and ter-ror" was launched during China's 1966-1969 Cultural Revolution, it said, and "mass repressions to which the Uighurs, Kazakhs and other people were then subjected continue to this

"Apart from open persecution of the local population," according to the article, "Chinese authorities are also carrying out mass resettlement of Chinese into Sinkiang and forceful assimilation of the local people." Incoming Chinese get the best farmland and pastures, it said, Chinese construction battalions are really an army of occupation, Uighur cultural and art monuments have been demolished, and ancient Uighur manuscripts burned.

The most vicious anti-Chinese propaganda came on a one-hour television "documentary" shown in prime time across the Soviet Union in February. Called the "Wall of Fear," it claimed that all Chinese are oppressed by Maoists but the most brutally oppressed were the ethnic minorities in China.

"They started taking our children away from us," recounted a wrinkled Uighur woman on the program. "We appealed to the Chinese authorities, begging them to leave our children...we stood in the square waiting their answer. That's when they began shooting us down with machine guns. They shot right into our midst. Some were killed outright, others wounded. People groaned and crawled in blood ... and the children, so

The reason behind the sudden upsurge in bitter, racialist rhetoric is not obvious. But, conceivably, the Kremlin sees in Peking's leadership turmoil, which also began in January with the death of Premier Chou Enlai, a potential opportunity developing in Sinkiang.

Soviet strategists, according to Moscow contacts, have long held that China will break up after Mao Tsetung's death into a series of provincial fiefdoms with minimal control from Peking. In such a case Moscow naturally would want to reestablish influence in Sinkiang, which before World War II was virtually a Soviet

There have been reports that Moscow would like Sinkiang turned into a buffer state (to be called East Turkestan) run by Uighurs. Western sources say the Soviets back groups here like the Uighir National Liberation Committee in Exile and the Free Turkestan Movement which want to throw Maoists, if not all Chinese, out of Sinkiang.

In the border disputes following the Sino-Soviet split 15 years ago, it was the Ussuri and Amur River regions near Vladivostok to the east that made news in the West because of the armed fighting that both sides admit occurred there in 1969.

But here along the Sinkiang frontier, serious incidents occurred earlier and later in what, because of the minority groups being on both sides of the border, is a potentially more flammable situation.

In 1962, during a single month in the spring, more than 60,000 persons, mostly Uighirs and Kazakhs, crossed from Sinkiang into the Soviet Union, the Soviets say. At least some were encouraged to flee by the Chinese (free transport to the border), and the Soviets claim the Chinese hoped Soviet guards would shoot down the visa-less refugees and provoke a major clash. The Soviets also say many of the refugees had been evicted from areas later turned into the Sinkiang nuclear test range.

In all, more than 100,000 persons fled Sinkiang from about 1955 to the end of the 1960s, according to deputy editor Turdahun Nazarov of the Uighir language newspaper Communism Turgi.

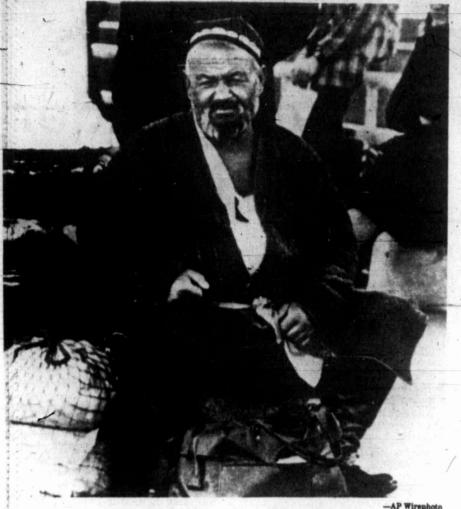

"They were not all Uighir and Kazakh," he said in an interview, "but also many Uzbeks, Tatars and russians. Many who came had been born here and some still had Soviet passports.

Christian College of Brownsville, Tex., failed to make a $100,000 down. payment for the Prescott College campus by Monday's deadline, canceling the sale, Charles Johnston, bankruptcy referee, said.

Donovan Speaker, Phoenix lawyer for Trinity, said failure to meet the deadline did not preclude negotiations on a new offer. Trinity's original offer was $4.7 million for the defunct liberal arts college in West Central Arizona.

Trinity ceased operations after a restraining order was obtained by the state of Texas, which charged the school with failure to confirm with accreditation standards.

Speaker said in court that a "major financial institution" had agreed to guarantee the $4.7 million offer from Trinity but it would be "up to Trinity

Ronald Warnicke, lawyer for a mortgage trust that has nearly $4.5 million in claims against Prescott College, objected to the proposed sale. He contended that Trinity showed no evidence of financial responsibility.

Trinity also missed an April 26 deadline for making the $100,000 down payment but filed a motion with U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Edward R. Davis to clarify the time limit allowed for coming up with the earnest money.

Johnston said the 10-day time limit began April 15 when Davis gave tentative approval to the purchase offer. Carter keeps telephones jangling

By BILL BOYARSKY The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - The telephone rang one night at the Last Chance Liquor Store in McComb, Miss.

"Hello," the man on the line said "I'm Jimmy Carter."

The former Georgia governor, in his usual efficient manner, was hustling votes for the party's national convention. He was calling Mrs. Alyene Quin, the liquor store owner, who had been elected as a delegate pledged to Sargent Shriver, the party's 1972 vice presidential nominee who has dropped out of this year's race for Presi-

"I told him I haven't committed myself," she said. That was all right. Carter would call back.

Telephone calls like this have become an important part of the Democratic presidential race since Carter's big victory in the Pennsylvania primary.

Pennsylvania changed everything. It finished off the campaign of Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington, who was a weak second and announced Saturday he would no longer actively pursue the nomination. It wiped out the hopes of Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota that Carter could be stopped in Penn-Sylvania and the national convention deadlocked. With tears in his eyes, Humphrey announced he would not fight for the nomination. Pennsylvania meant that the Humphery-Jackson wing of the party. dominated by organized labor, was without a candidate and left - in the words of one union leader - "in a-state of stunned chagrin. Now only three men stand between Carter and the nomination — Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California, Rep. Morris K. Udall of Arizona and Sen. Frank Church of Idaho.

But all three have major liabilities. Thus the importance of Carter's phone calls. For sometime, even before he emerged as the front-runner, Carter spent many evenings telephoning peóple who were elected as uncommitted delegates - or, like Mrs. Quin, were supporting someone who had dropped out of the race. Often Carter ignored messages to

Some big state contests are ahead. But Carter does not fear them any more after Pennsylvania. Now he intends to collect, as quickly as possible, the votes of the Jackson delegates and those who backed the other losers - Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, Shriver, Sen. Fred Harris of Oklahoma, Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania. And he is making the same effort for the large bloc of delegates who were elected as uncommitted.

He faces opposition in this effort. Organized labor and various older party leaders - the so-called party regulars — have always been suspicious of the candidacy of this once-obscure former Georgia gover-

In Pennsylvania, labor leaders are urging uncommitted delegates and those pledged to the dropouts to stay off the Carter bandwagon, at least until the national convention July 12.

The three active candidates will try to stop Carter in some of the remaining primaries.

Church takes a crack at him in Nebraska May 11. Udall will try in Michigan May 18. Brown will go after him in Maryland May 18 and in California June 8.

Church got into the race so late that it is difficult to see how he can raise enough money and put together the complete organization needed for a successful campaign. Nebraska also is a farm state, the kind of area where Carter has run well:

Church's Senate committee hearings on the Central Intelligence Agency were supposed to make him a national figure and the liberal choice. But the hearings did not bring him as much attention as he expected.

and Church is a liberal, running in a time when voter surveys show that a substantial number of Democrats now call themselves moderate or even conservative.

Udall is putting all of his money and staff into Michigan. "We're going to roll the dice," said campaign aide

Paul Tulley. "One good shot.",
Tulley said he hopes Carter will be slowed by the combined attacks of Udall, Church and Brown.

"He'll be busy in Maryland with Brown, busy in Nebraska with Church, busy in Michigan with us," Tulley

And he said "there is a whole new

But in previous elections, Udall has shown a limited ability to win that blue collar Jackson constituency. although he had some success in such areas in the New York and Wisconsin

Television advertisements helped him get some of the blue collar vote in Wisconsin. Tulley said he would like between $150,000 and $200,000 for Michigan television. But in Pennsylvania, the campaign ran out of money, and with Udall's third place showing in that election, fund raising will be difficult.

Brown is the great unknown. Large, friendly crowds and friendly press coverages greeted him in Maryland, and those familiar with Maryland politics said Brown's Roman Catholic religion should help him

The state is heavily Getholic, and in one of his stops Brown visited a church. But did people look on him as a curiosity or as a serious contender for the Presidency?

If Brown manages a respectable showing in Maryland, and Udall and Church fail, California will be the last chance to stop Carter.

Carter is preparing for a major campaign against Brown to beat him in his own state. Brown, high in the popularity polls, is likely to be better financed than Carter, who must spend money in many other states.

It could be one of the most interesting contests - two men who have run on an antigovernment platform, Brown, the ascetic Jesuit with a gloomy outlook on life, and Carter, the deeply religious Baptist who believes the country, like sinners, can

BATTLE SCENE Plays same, money differs

BY TED BATTLES

The Midland Cubs were guilty of the kind of sins you could only see in the minor leagues Friday night in the final game of their series and homestand with El

There was one play where the whole infield congregated around a perfectly placed bunt. The bunter took note of the gathering and saw second base as deserted as the Mojave so he Later with a runner on second, a batter singled to center, the first baseman cut off the throw and then watched, seemingly hypnotized as the batter sauntered into second as the second baseman screamed, to no avail, for the ball.

Fortunately, it was cold and few witnessed the embarrassing incidents.

SATURDAY NIGHT as we entered Arlington Stadium for a game between two American League contenders, it was with the confidence that we wouldn't see similar silly mistakes, not on this level.

Boston's Bernie Carbo, the game's first batter, hit the first pitch to left center for a legitimate single. Everybody ran out to take the relay and no one covered second. Carbo skipped to second, thought about third, but decided not to press his luck.

There were 22,486 witnesses.

During the games Saturday and Sunday, we also saw enough to wonder why Mike Umfleet is playing third base in the Texas League and Rico Petrocelli is playing third base in the American League On the basis of Mike's play in the El Paso series and Rico's play against the Texas Rangers, there's no comparison when it comes to the

IT WAS a strange series for Arlington. Not only did the surprising Rangers sweep four straight from the American League champions, but they did it with the kind of power that normally is associated with something cozy like the old Polo Grounds or Fenway Park.

Usually, the prevailing winds paralyze home run hitters at Arlington, but a strange stillness pervaded the area over the weekend and it became a game of home run or no count.

Tom Grieve and Jeff Burroughs hit a couple of three run jobs to top Fred Lynn's solo shot in Texas 7-1 victory Saturday while Sunday Dwight

Evans and Carbo gave Boston an early three run lead, but the Rangers came back to win on boundary belts by Grieve, Mike Hargrove and Burroughs again.

Although the gaps in the schedule this early in the season prevent a team from developing a rhythm the Red Sox struck as a team that may take all year getting over last year.

THE RANGERS, on the other hand, are off to the kind of start they were hoping for and with Oakland no longer the big bad bully of the west, Texas appears as capable of winning as anyone.

One of the primary concerns before the season was the pitching, Could Nelson Briles and Bill Singer come back and what about Gaylord Perry? There's never been any queation about ability of the reformed spitballer; but 36 is the brittle age when a pitcher can lose it all at

Singer, may be lacking the old time zing in his fast ball, but he was still good enough to six hit the Sox Saturday. And Perry ran into four hit trouble in the third, when he surrendered three rans on the homers, but for the other eight innimgs his fastball and slider marooned the Sox on

'IT'S EARLY yet, but even the trade the Texans made with Boston during the off season. sending Ferguson Jenkins to the Red Sox for outfielder Juan Beniquez and little known pitcher Steve Barr, looks good.

Fergy is 1-3 while Barr has one three hitter to his credit, but can't crack the starting rotation. Beniquez gives the Rangers a long sought glove in center, one that came in handy in the ninth inning Sunday, Inserted as a defensive replacement in the late innings. Beniquez made a diving catch to rob Carlton Fisk of a double into the hole and end the game.

Luis Tiant wasn't at his best for Boston Sunday, but the whirling deversh of deception nevertheless is a delight to watch. We never threw-Toby Harrah the same pitch or speed Sunday and the Ranger shortstop was s study in frustration at the day's end,

"It was funny because we couldn't touch anything else he was throwing up there," said Grieve. "He had great stuff, expect for that slow curve. Normally that's a pitch he just wastes...But he got it up. He just hung it out there and we burned him on it everytime he threw

If it hadn't been for that, he and Perry might still be at it.

Flyers, Islanders triumph

Battered Boston and fiesty New York have one thing in common-they are a loss away from the National Hockey League season's end.

The Philadelphia Flyers hold a 3-1 edge over Boston and the Montreal Canadiens have an identical advantage over the New York Islanders in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semifinal playoff series.

Philadelphia clipped the Bruins 4-2 Tuesday night for their third straight victory while New York stav-

"I thought we played well enough even though we didn't do any hitting," Philadelphia Coach Fred Shero said. "Boston was keyed up in the first period:

Then they lost some key players and that didn't RIGHT WING Bobby Schmautz was the most seriously hurt of the Bruins, suffering a broken left knee cap. Wayne Cashman, another right wing, also was taken to the hospital with damaged ligaments in his left knee while center Jean Ratelle suffered back

"It all boils down to one game for us."

Reggie Leach tied Montreal great Maurice Richard's NHL record of scoring in eight consecutive games and Orest Kindrachuk tallied the decisive goal to lead Philadelphia's victory.

"THEY DESERVED to win tonight," Cherry said of the Flyers. "They played a better game."

Terry O'Reilly scored both Boston goals in the pening period, sandwiched around a score by Philadelphia's Mel Bridgman. Leach tied it at 2-2 in the opening minute of the second period and Kindrachuk's goal.at 2:59 of the final session moved the Flyers in front to stay.

'They hit us (for goals) right off the bat in the second and third periods," Cherry said. "That really hurt. And, once again, we missed too many chances. Joe Watson scored the final Philadelphia goal.

"IT'S BETTERSto be up 3-1 than down 3-1, but I've been in hockey long enough to know you have to win four-and there's no sense gloating until you do

Jude Drouin of the Islanders, a former member of the Montreal Canadiens, scored two goals and an assist against his former mates. Defenseman Denis Potvin added a goal and two assists and Bill Mac-Millan had a goal.

Down 4-0, Montreal came back in the third period with goals by two goals by Guy Lafleur before Lorne Henning ended the scoring with a 150-foot shot into an CINCINNATI (AP) - Archie Griffin, turning his too bad tomorrow but I'll be tight the day after back on a better offer from Canada, Tuesday signed a long-term contract with the Cincinnati Bengals that reportedly makes the two-time Heisman Trophy winner the highest-paid member of the National Football League club.

"The dream is to play in the NFL," said the 5-foot-9 tailback who has been hailed by Coach Woody Hayes as the greatest player in Ohio State's rich football history.

"I'm not a millionaire, but I'm happy: I'm anxious to get started. I didn't want this contract thing hanging over my head," said Griffin, disclosing that he spurned a two-year, $290,000 contract from Montreal of the Canadian Football League.

Griffin, one of Cincinnati's two first round draft choices, signed after a heated negotiating session that "got pretty tense," according to his brother, Jim, who assisted in the contract talks. Mike Brown, assistant general manager of the

Suns must show more muscle under boards

OAKLAND (AP) - The Phoenix Suns must assert some strength under the boards if they are to give the Golden State Warriors a serious test in their National Basketball Association playoff series

And the way Rick Barry was shooting in the series opener, a 128-103 Warriors' victory Sunday, presents the Suns with a dilemma. He shoots from far outside, and that means Garfield Heard or I have to stay close to him and can't help out much under the boards," said Curtis Perry, the 6-foot-7 forward, analyzing a problem the Suns face again tonight in the second game of the best-ofseven semifinal series. The Warriors had 21 offensive rebounds in the opening game, compared to 11 for Phoenix, and outrebounded the Suns over-all by a decisive 55-45 margin. Golden State centers Clifford Ray and George Johnson combined for nine offensive rebounds, converting several into points.

Barry didn't give his big team mates too many opportunities, however. He made 17 of 31 field goal attempts while scoring 38 points.

"I still think that either Gar or Curtis is capable of doing a decent defensive job on Barry," said Suns Coach John MacLeod, who took his team home for two days of practice after the Sunday game.

Barry had better success from 25 feet than from 25 inches in the runaway victory.

"I wanted to try driving early in the game, and I got under so easily I couldn't believe it and blew two straight layups," Barry said.

DALLAS (AP) - It won't rank up there with Babe Ruth's famed home run shot or Joe Namath's Super Bowl prediction but stubby Harold Solomon told you so.

"I'm playing the tennis of my life and I'm going to beat Ashe," the 5foot-6, 130-pound Solomon proclaimed 24 hours before he met World Championship of Tennis defending champ Arthur Ashe.

Solomon's prediction drew a lot of laughs because he had beaten Ashe only once in eight previous tries and barely made it into this tournament in the last week of the season.

5, 3-6, 6-1 and 6-3 in the quarterfinals Tuesday night as the chase for the $50,000 first prize began. "I was confident but I still got so nervous I had cramps in my legs at one point," said Solomon, a former All-American at Rice University. "I told you I could win. Bring your lunch for the next match because you're going to see ground shots, ground shots, and more ground shots.' Ashe, 32, and the current Wimbledon champion, will be seeing ground shots in his sleep.

"I missed balls a 14-year-old could hit," said the shaken Ashe, head in hands. "After a while it got embarrassing. I even missed a forehand volley of all things."

Ashe said "My game was flat but you have to give credit to Harold. He passed me well.

The usual power-hitting Ashe even resorted to dink shots to try to throw the hustling Solomon off his game. Solomon retrieved every ball and returned the favor time after time to the frustrated Ashe.

Ashe had entered the tournament, which ends Sunday with the finals on national television, with five victories in eight WCT events. Solomon had only one tournament victory.

"I thought I could beat him using those little dink shots because theyworked against him three years ago in the French Open," said Ashe who has bankrolled $200,000 this year. "The theory was to make him scramble for the ball and get-him out of position. Obviously, it didn't work.'

Solomon said "Players usually try shots like that when they get tired.' Ashe denied that fatigue in the twohour, three-minute match had anything to do with the outcome. "I just hit shots that I'd hit anytime, but they were bad," said Ashe.

Houston to face Whalers

HOUSTON (AP) - The Houston Aeros and the New England Whalers open their best-of-seven World Hockey Association semifinals series here tonight with an emphasis on goal tending.

Aeros Coach Bill Dineen likely will return to his all-star goalie Ron Grahame, who took a rest last week while his backup Wayne Rutledge, wrapped up Houston's quarterfinals series against San Diego with a 3-2

Whaler Coach Harry Neale appeared to have no problem at all with Bruce Landon going into New England's quarterfinals series against Indianapolis, but Landon was injured in the first game and it took outstanding performances by Cap Raeder to whip Indianapolis and gain the semifinals.

"HE PLAYED all the games against New England this year and did pretty well," Dineen said of Grahame who was 4-2 against the Whalers, including a 5-0 shutout. "We'll probably see Ronnie start in his series as well.'

Raeder stepped in for Landon against the Races and registered two shutouts and compiled a 2.08 goalsagainst average.

'I admire the kid," Neale said. 'He's cocky, but he is a hard worker in practice. The other guays respect him. There isn't a player on the team who doesn't believe in him. He's quick and he stands in there.

Dave Bristol, in his third stint as a major league manager, this time with the Atlanta Braves, is learning once again that the life of a big-league skipper is not an easy one. "You die a little bit in games like this." said Bristol after his Braves blew a three-run lead and dropped their eighth consecutive decision, an 8-7 loss to the St. Louis Cardinals in 12 innings Tuesday night. The Braves' current losing streak is the longest the club has gone through since the franchise was moved from Milwaukee to Atlanta a decade ago.

The Braves erupted for six runs in the second inning and led 7-4 after three, but couldn't hold on. They came within one out of victory, but St. Louis tied the score with two out in the ... the third, the final three on a homer ninth and then won it in the 12th on a run-scoring double by Ted Simmons, his fourth hit of the game.

"SOMETIMES YOU just have to reach down and get something extra and close the gate," Bristol said

St. Louis reached Atlanta starter Phil Niekro for a pair of runs in each of the first two innings. But the Braves erupted for their biggest inning of the season, scoring six runs in by off-season acquisition Jim Wynn.

ATLANTA ADDED another run in the third on an RBI triple by Darrel Chaney, But as Bristol said, the Braves couldn't close the gate.

Niekro hit Bake McBride with a pitch in the fifth inning and balked him to second. He scored on Simmons' single. A solo homer by Simmons in the eighth made it 7-6, then with two out in the ninth pinch-hitter Mike Anderson doubled and Lou Brock followed with a runscoring single to tie the score.

McBride, who had homered in the first-inning, singled in the 12th and came home with the winning run on Simmons' double.

Beatle makes successful return

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) - Paul McCartney made his long awaited concert return to this country Monday. night-his first United States stage appearance in more than 10 years—as he and the Wings opened the U.S. leg of their world tour before a sellout crowd of 14,000 at Tarrant County Convention Center.

Smoke filled the stage and bubbles cascaded from the ceiling during the opening number, the theme from 'Venus and Mars' before the satinclad McCartney, backed by wife Linda on keyboards, Denny Laine and Jimmy McCulloch on guitars, and Joe English on drums, started a long set of rock and roll with "Rock Show"

It was McCulloch who delayed the tour a month by breaking a finger on his playing hand, but he was showing no ill effects.

The group was backed by a four-during the show-a youth who rushed on stage to shake hands with Paul. He was quickly ushered off by security men. Over-all, the audience was generally quiet, with only a few of the female screams so prevalent his last time around.

McCartney, switching from guitar to piano, coordinated a blend of material that ranged from his days as a Beatle up through most of the Wings

He drew ovations for "Maybe I'm Amazed," from his solo album the Beatle Rocker, "Lady Madonna" and two fine acoustic ballads McCartney soloed on-"Blackbird" and everyone's favorite, "Yesterday."

The unquestioned show stopper came with the Wings' James Bond theme, "Live and Let Die," which featured explosions, smoke, strobes and lasers in the best 007 tradition.

Public television finds itself running into problems

By JOEL DREYFUSS The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The dissension between public television, whose mandate is to be all things to all people that commercial television is not, and minority groups, who view public television as a reclutant agent for a more truthful expression of their experiences, has often dried up. But Gloria Anderson, the only black woman on the 15-member Board of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting is optimistic. "For the first time, we have a full committee on minorities and women, and the other board members are becoming interested in the problem. There are a number of positive signs to support Anderson's optimism: -CPB has set aside $800,000 for the development of minority oriented programs. Four pilots have been funded and the best one will get $500,000 for a full season.

The National Public Affairs Center for Television, which merged with WETA recently, added the first black professional to its staff.

The black input into an independent medium that was intended to serve all the people came out of crisis. When Martin Luther King Jr. was assassinated in 1968, black employes of WNET in New York demanded the creation of a black program. The result was Black Journal."

At that time they had a good show," says Horace Jenkins, an early producer of the program who is the new consultant at NPACT. "Maybe 75 per cent of the black cinematographers, editors and producers today came out of that show." The program's magazine format became a prototype for black programming.
"All the local stations developed black programs and decided to put $500 into them and get local brownie points," Jenkins says. "All the black producers became back-door producers and they worked under the worst conditions."

Black programs in both commercial and public stations were plagued by inexperience and a lack of funds. "Even when Black Journal was filmed, Jenkins recalls, "we weren't allowed more than $6,000 per show Film costs $1,500 a minute, so you never came up with the kind of quality that their top producers got.'

Austin student wins in Rotary essay contest

Editor's note: The following essay was a winning entry in a contest conducted by the Downtown Rotary Club of Midland as a part of Free Enterprise Week. The contest was conducted among students throughout Midland schools. Top winners received plaques and cash with which to purchase a share of By RIM WATSON

To me, the American free enterprise system stands for the quality of life and work any American can make for himself. In America, as in no other country, a man can choose his career as he wishes and work it the way he wants.

He can answer three questions of production: What to produce? How to produce it? For whom to produce it?. He has the right to answer these questions in his own judgement with little or no leadership from the

The American labor force has the undisputed privilege to work where, how and when they want. All citizens, rich or poor, male or female, black or white, native or foreigner, have this privilege in the United States to make their own decisions about their work and to be able to still have a chance for work if they fail the first time.

I think to live under a government which makes your decisions for you would be like being under a band of slavery. If my father were told where he would work and when and for whom with little or no voice in the decision, I think he would not be a very good father or a man that could be looked up to. In the American system, though, there is a major way for men to work into positions that can be looked upon with pride.

In America, the free enterprise system works so as to keep competition high, quality good and the work force the best. In knowing this, a person can be assured by a little bit of comparison shopping that he is getting a good product. The system also keeps monopolies and oligopolies from occurring with just a little bit of government discretion.

The system also helps those who do not have a good education or are handicapped. In America today,

Winning play to be performed

The cast of "The Resistable Rise of Arturo Ui" will perform their awardwinning one-act play for Midlanders tonight before traveling to Austin to compete in statewide competition Saturday.

The play, a product of the Midland High School drama department, will be performed at 8 p.m. in the school's auditorium. A small admission fee will be charged.

According to James Buchanan, drama coach, the play is ranked as one of the top eight in the state. It already has won on three levels of University Interscholastic League (UIL) competition and has garnered 18 acting awards.

Buchanan said this year will mark the first time in 16 years a high school play from Midland has advanced to state competition.

After returning from the statewide match, the cast will present their play at Angelo State University, where they have been invited to perform.

many underprivileged persons can find a good job. A person also has the right to quit a job and study to start in a different career. The American sustem works so well as to keep labor at a high level of education for each career and so that the most eligible has the job.

I favor this system because under it I can choose the career I wish to pursue, and when I am ready to work will be able to work it in my own judgement. I may become and entrepreneur or work for another person. If I become dissatisfied with a job, I can study for another career or change to a similar job. I would also have the right to join a union of my choice and to participate in its activities and to be recognized as a part of it. I could show my dissatisfaction with a job or company by a strike or by speaking against it. Or in the other case, if I were an entrepreneur, I could be assured that no physical damage or libel damage would be done.

Drugs cause early aging

NEW YORK (AP) - Old before their time is the way physicians describe young persons who use "hard" drugs from three to five years.

"In fact, you can't trust your eyes." said Dr. A. Everette James, chairman of the department of radiology, Vanderbilt University Hospital, Nashville, at a science writers' forum here on "The X-Ray Picture on Drug Abuse."

"One has to inspect their records and medical history," said Dr. James, "because the physical appearance of amphetamine addicts often suggests that they are much older than their chronological age."
