Gas in soil hints life possible on Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) -Unexpected release of gases from Martian soil in one of Viking 1's laboratories led scientists to express cautious belief Saturday there could be life on Mars.

Either that or peculiar chemical reactions that mimic life.

The scientists said they found much more oxygen in one of the soil sample experiments than they expected, and that oxygen may be causing reactions just like those that would be produced by living organisms.

But in that sense, chemistry could be fooling them and imitating life processes, scientists said.

Early results from one experiment in particular - called the labeled release experiment because of special tracking elements that help "label" gases — prompted cautious speculation from scientists that life may exist on Mars.

In that probe, a sample of Martian soil was moistened with what scientists call "chicken soup," a smorgasbord of earthly nutrients that were laced with radioactive tracer material.

It was hoped any Martian life forms would like the nutrients, eat them, and release the tracer gas in exhaling, as would living beings on

What scientists found Saturday were high levels of that radioactive material, indicating some kind of activity going on in the experiment. It looked like it could be metabolism, the chemical process associated with living organisms.

"There is no way we could rule out that data as being biology," said Dr. Harold Klein, who heads up Viking's biology team. In the scientific lexicon, finding "biology" is finding living

Scientists said the "obvious" conclusion was the existence of life. but repeatedly stressed the possibility of unexpected nonbiological chemical reactions causing the data.

Klein added that if what Viking found is indeed Martian life, 'Microbial life (living things too small to be seen with the naked eye) is more developed and intense than we've seen on earth."

Scientists said the unexpectedly high amounts of oxygen could come from the Martian soil itself, existing either as a gas trapped in the earth like carbonated water - or as a chemical compound released through the experiment.

But it was the presence of other gases noted through the radioactive trace elements that has piqued the interest of scientists. They expected some of the gases to be present but the higher levels of these gases indicated a biological function or chemical reaction taking place.

Scientists expected that if any life form ate the offered nutrient some gas would be released and the trace radioactivity would disclose it.

Klein said any possible Martian microbes would appear to be "more intense and developed" because when the same experiment was performed on microscopic Earthlings, their release of the tracer element in the gases created by digestion was much slower and less frequent.

Despite all the caution, the release of the tracer gas is just what scientists expected if there was Martian life and if the little Martians would feed upon the nutrients offered by Earthlings.

"If there is life on Mars, this is what periment team.

One official said that, considering the harsh environs on Mars, it was even possible that living organisms there hibernated, waiting for the right conditions before "coming back to life." Given the bonanza of water and nutrients, the little creatures would have a veritable feast, he added.

This would explain the unex-pectedly high release activity in the experiment, the rapid release of the tracer gas. But no such hibernation — suspension of life, really — is known probability of its occurrence on Mars. Scientists were eager to get on with the control experiments, in which they conduct tests in hopes of discovering whether there is indeed a life-mimicking process going on inside the probe.

The control involves heating up another portion of the sample soil, no the same soil grains given the nutrient but soil out of the same original sample, and in effect sterilizing it. The sterilization would

Members of the Greenwood school board met late Saturday night to canvass the results of the election after polls closed at 7 p.m.

Proposition one, costing $1,280,000, is for a new elementary school and auditorium. Unofficial results show Greenwood voters approved the proposal by a vote of 110 to 72.

A swimming pool and student activities center, costing $325,000, is called for in proposition two, which was.tentatively approved by a 98 to 85 margin in Saturday's election.

Proposition three, for construction of a stadium, two tennis courts, dressing rooms and a concession stand, is for $95,000, Unofficially, Greenwood voters okayed it by a 95 to 86 vote.

The same propositions had turned down in a March 16 bond election totaling $1.6 million. Voters at that time showed their disapproval of the proposals by a 104 to 70 margin.

School board president Bud Lea said the last bond issue was defeated because of a "lack of communication.

Approval of the bond issue means a tax increase of from 45.7 to 68.9 cents per $100 of assessed value, depending on whether the board chooses to retire the bonds in 10, 15 or 20 years. The tentative tax rate adopted July

Soviets drop threat to withdraw from Olympics

By JOHN VINOCUR

MONTREAL (AP) - The Soviet Union withdrew its threat to pull out of the Montreal Olympics on Saturday and then began a Sergei-Come-Home campaign to bring back the young athleté whose defection to Canada led to the Russian ultimatum.

The Soviet delegation backed off from its insistence that Sergei Nemtsanov, the 17-year-old diver who left the Olympic Village Thursday, be returned to Russian officials immediately or it would feel free to with draw from the final two days'of the Games.

Soviet officials said the decision to stay came after a meeting with ths International Olympic Committee at which IOC executives requested ths Soviet Union "not take extreme measures."

"We will participate in the final competitions and in the closing ceremonies because the IOC has asked us to," said Mikhail Efimov, a Soviet press officer.

Soon after the decision, Soviet media officials began handing out copies of cables, said to have been sent by Nemtsanov's mother and his 80-year-old grandmother. The cables appealed to Premier Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada and the IOC to return the diver to them.

"I'm about 80," read the cable from Nemtsanov's grandmother. "Sergei is my only grandson. I brought him up. I love him very much. I cannot imagine living without him. I apply to you, as to a son. with my greatest request to help him return back to his motherland as soon as possible."

The Canadian government, which

Friday night angrily rejected a Soviet charge that it had kidnaped Nemtsanov, said he is in good hands and traveling with friends in central Canada.

The cable from the diver's mother to the IOC said that "he is still under age and is not able to judge life properly. As his mother, I address to you, dear sirs, my appeal to your hearts as mothers and fathers to take all measures you can to return my son to his parents."

There was some speculation here that the letters were essentially intended for the defector, who may see them in Canadian newspapers. The Soviet officials who handed out copies of them were unable to give additional details on the athlete's family or how it was being kept informed.

Discussions continued between Soviet officials and the Canadian government, with the Canadians offering to let a Soviet official see Nemtsanov in the presence of a Canadian witness if the athlete

The Soviets said they were still holding out the possibility of reconsidering their participation in the sixteam Canada Cup hockey competition here in September. Efimov again said the Soviet Union "would take measures" if the diver is not returned, but he did not specify what they might be.

The reasons for the Soviet turnaround on the threat were explained by sources close to the Gaes organizing committee as Canada's hard reaction to the Soviet allegation that Nemtsanov had been kidnaped and the Russians' fear that drastic action would compromise, their selection as host to the Summer

Games in 1980. A Canadian Immigration Department spokesman said his agency has not heard from Nemtsanov since he told officials in Montreal on Thursday that he wanted to become a Canadian resident. He said there was a "low-key" search on for the diver, who would be told the Russians wanted to see him. An official of the External Affairs

Ministry in Ottawa said Canada "certainly would not give back the diver" even if this were a condition of continued sports relations with the Soviet Union. The Canadians have rejected the Russian contention that Nemtsanov is under-age, stressing that applications for refugee status do not have any hard and fast requirements.

At the same time, the Games' press chief, Louis Chantigny, described as "totally false" a Soviet charge that Olympic hostesses were encouraging athletes, among them the Russian, to defect. There was no comment, however, on a report that Nemtsanov had left the Olympic Village with a girl he met on an earlier visit to Another source close to the Canadian government said the Soviets seemed unable to comprehend that Nemtsanov was not the government's prisoner and that he really was traveling on his own.

Hassle scrubs new rescue plans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - Plans to evacuate wounded from a besieged Palestinian camp collapsed Saturday, Red Cross officials said, when Christian rightists imposed new restrictions at the last moment.

But Christian radio broadcasts blamed the Red Cross itself for the failure, and a group of 30 to 40 Palestinians went to the organization's hotel headquarters. In a heated confrontation, they charged that Red Cross officials had broken a promise to carry out the mercy

Saying they were relatives of persons trapped in the Tal Zaatar camp that has been under Christian attack for more than a month, the Palestinians accused Jean Hoefliger, Swiss leader of the Red Cross team, and Dr. Hassan Sabri Kholi, chief Arab League mediator, of being liars.

Hoefliger listened calmly to the complaints as the group, including some armed men, milled about the hotel lobby. Nearby, a Lebanese volunteer nurse wept in the arms of the field hospital director.

Tal Zaatar is the bloodiest single battle of the 16-month-old Lebanese civil war. The Palestinian command claims as many as 4,000 wounded are trapped in the camp's underground bunkers and another 1,400 are said to have been killed.

In a military radio report from the camp Friday, the leader of a threemember Swedish medical team in Tal Zaatar said water was running low and many were likely to die if relief did not come in three days.

Hoefliger and Kholi have tries for five weeks to obtain ironclad agreements from both sides for a cease-fire that would permit ambulances and trucks to enter the camp and bring out wounded. The only accomplishment so far has been a visit to the camp by Hoefliger and two colleagues to determine whether such a convoy could get in.

The plan was for two ambulances and five trucks to enter Tal Zaatar and bring out 40 to 50 wounded in what the Red Cross and Kholi called a "test case." If it succeeded, more convoys were to go in daily to bring out the remaining wounded.

But Saturday's truce deadline passed without any movement and after several hours of private conferences, a spokeswoman for the Red Cross announced that the operation was canceled.

She said Christian leaders, after giving apparent approval of the evacuation plan Friday, had imposed by Christian radio broadcasts to be in a buffer zone between the lines. This meant the wounded would

Summer program fills two needs

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Needs of young people for summer jobs and needs of senior citizens for help in taking care of their homes merged this summer in the summer service program.

The five-week project was designed by Marian Fisher, director of senior services for First Christian Church. Mrs. Fisher said she remembered the frustration of not being able to properly clean her house after surgery several years ago and felt that many elderly persons must face the same problem on a regular basis.

The thrust of programs for the elderly is "promoting independent living." but many of the larger programs tend to forget "the little things, like cleaning cobwebs off of ceilings," Mrs. Fisher said.

The Midland County Human Resources Center Manpower Program provides summer employment for young people at non-profit agencies and it funded the

Suspect flees jail, gives up to sheriff

A Midland man brought in on a burglary warrant escaped from the police department around 3:30 p.m. Saturday, but turned himself in at the sheriff's department four hours later.

The man was, arrested at 2 p.m., brought to the police department and placed in the holdover cell, where he was waiting to see a detective.

While in the cell, he complained of being cold. An officer opened the doorand escorted him upstairs to the jail: About halfway up the stairs, the officer turned around and the man had evanished. Police said he would have had to go past at least three persons at the foot of the stairs, but none saw him go by. Four hours later he turned himself in at the sheriff's. A sheriff's department spokesman said he had someone with him, who was going to try to help him make his bond. The spokesman also said the man said he wanted to be in jail at the county. rather than at the police station. He didn't give a reason for his preference, and he didn't get his way. He was returned to police.

HOUSE RANSACKED

The home of Edward W. Hooper, 2508 Dartmouth Dr. was burglarized and vandalized to the tune of $1,250 sometime between 11:30 a.m. and 2:15 p.m. Friday, police report.

Entry was gained by breaking glass in the front door. Once inside, the burglar, or burglars, went on a spree. The glass in a gun case was broken, and two holes were made in a wall with a shotgun. Three other holes were made with a hammer, which was also used to destroy a stereo, a dresser and three windows. Chairs were overturned, as was a bed, and potted plants were broken and scattered. Three guns worth $615 were taken.

OTHER THEFTS A television console with a record player, valued at $450, was taken from the Albert Harvey residence, 1119 E. Chestnut Ave., sometime between 6:30 and 9 p.m. Friday, police report.

Entry was achieved by removing the screen on an unlocked bedroom A mini-winch worth $325 was taken from Dotsun Datsun, 2903 W. Wall Ave., police report. The theft occurred sometime between 6:30 p.m. Friday and 9:30 a.m. Saturday, police said. The winch was removed from a pickup after cables securing it were cut. A burglary at the Gloria Lott home.

3508 Camarie Ave., was foiled early Saturday morning when the owner returned home. The suspect ran off, but police made an arrest about two hours later.

Zone changes on agenda

Two requests for zone changes and three considerations of preliminary plats will come before the city Planning and Zoning Commission during regular session at 4 p.m. Monday in the council chamber at city hall.

Gart Neill has requested a zone change from single-family to local retail at 3301 W. Cuthbert St., while Pierce, Pace and Associates has requested a zone change from local retail to multiple family in the 800 block of Scarbauer Drive, east of the Northland Shopping Center.

The commission also will study preliminary plats of the Gamblin Addition Subdivision at 4100 Midland Drive, Office Plaza at A-1 Mobile Homes on U.S. 80 West, and Plunk Addition on the Garden City Highway.

Real estate course planned

ODESSA - New state real estate licensing requirements have caused Odessa College to offer an associate degree in real estate.

The state legislature has passed laws requiring an increasing number of college hours for persons applying to the state board for licensing. Sid Streicher, dierctor of midmanagement at the college, said.

By 1985, persons must have at least 60 semester hours of college credit in real estate and related fields. In January, 1977, persons must have six semester hours. Streicher said.

Persons who already have completed real estate non-credit short courses offered through the college will receive three semester hours credit for each 45 classroom hours completed, Streicher said.

ba

Those applying by Nov. 30 must have only 30 classroom hours of real estate courses in order to receive their licenses. Streicher said.

Persons may enroll in either of two courses to be offered in the fall term. Principles of Real Estate (7 to 10 p.m. Mondays) and Real Estate Appraisal (7 to 10 p.m. Thursday nights) may sign up during regular preregistration through Aug. 13 or regular registration Aug. 23.

Gas-buying surge key to oil profits

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK

NEW YORK (AP) - The big surge in gasoline buying by American motorists this year has been a key factor behind the rising profits of most oil companies.

The increase in earnings reported this past week for April, May and June ranged from 7 per cent at Marathon Oil Co. to 93 per cent at Atlantic Richfield Co.

Gasoline is the main source of revenue for the industry, and demand for it has been strong this year - as much as 5 to 6 per cent over last year's depressed level.

Wilbur Gay, an oil industry analyst at the Goldman Sachs brokerage firm, attributes the demand to "the improving economy, a greater number of big new car sales, and increases in driving habits that reflect diminished concern over both shortages and potentially higher

With motorists eager to buy, the companies have been able to raise gasoline prices as much as four or five cents gallon this year.

Nationwide, the average retail price of a gallon of regular gasoline at full service stations rose three cents to 58.8 cents during the spring quarter, according to the Lundberg Survey, a research organization.

The industry also benefited during the quarter from new Federal Energy Administration rules that allow companies to pass on certain higher costs more quickly At Texaco Inc., the largest marketer of gasoline in the United States, profits rose 22.6 per cent to $201.2 million. Revenue was up 12.6

LUBBOCK - Sales and earnings of Furr's Cafeterias, Inc., for the first half of 1976 were at record levelsalthough second quarter earnings declined slightly from the second quarter of 1976, reports Don G. Furr. chairman of the board.

Sales during the six months ended July 3 were $30.5 million, an increase of $5.4 million or 32.4 per cent over sales of $25.1 million in the same period of 1975.

Earnings for the first six months of 1976 were $1.47 million or 66 cents per share compared to $1.36 million or 61 cents per share, an increase of 8.6 per

Sales for the quarter ended July 3 were $15.6 million, up $2.3 million or 17.6 per cent over sales of $13.3 million in the second quarter of 1975. Earnings were $744,000 or 33 cents per share compared to $807,000 or 36 cents per share in the second quarter of 1975, a decrease of 7.8 per cent.

higher prices for petroleum products and thus recover a larger portion of increased costs and expenses as permitted by FEA price control regulations.

Elsewhere in the industry, Mobil Corp.'s second quarter profits were up 9 per cent, Standard Oil of California's were up 9.5 per cent, Gulf Oil Corp.'s were up 30 per cent, and Shell Oil Co.'s were up 40 per cent.

There were some exceptions to the upward trend, including Exxon Corp... the country's largest industrial company and the world's largest oil

Although its domestic operations made money. Exxon's total second quarter earnings slipped 2.6 per cent to $595 million, reflecting its extensive operations abroad.

The economic recovery in Europe has lagged behind that of the United States. For that reason, and because of price controls in some countries, prices have not risen as fast as in the United States.

Bill may add quarter cent to gas price

WASHINGTON (AP) - A bill agreed on by congressional conferees to extend the Federal Energy Administration may increase the price consumers pay for 10 gallons of gasoline by four cents, one senator estimates.

'The compromise bill authorizes oil price increases estimated to total about $1 billion a year. It would extend the life of the FEA until Dec. 31, 1977. Its authority expires at midnight

Chairman Henry M. Jackson of the Senate Interior Committee, said the action would add an estimated $500. million to $700 million a year to consumer bills for gasoline and other petroleum products.

The Washington Democrat said he was advised that the over-all increase to consumers would average about, four-tenths of a cent per gallon of gast-line and other petroleum products.

Because the compromise measure would not be able to clear both houses of Congress and be signed by President Ford before the expiration of the agency. Ford took executive action Friday to keep FEA in

Ford signed an order transferring the functions of the agency to the Federal Energy Office in the executive department. This will allow the main functions of the FEA to continue until the legislative action is

The measure also authorizes several new energy conservation programs.

- House conferees agreed, with modification, to a number of oilpricing and energy-saving provisions added by the Senate. They were added to a House bill merely extending the FEA, which was established in 1974 to administer oil price and allocation controls and other energy

Under the compromise, the output of "stripper wells." those producing less than 10 barrels of crude oil a day. would be exempted from price controis immediately instead of the spring of 1979 when all price controls on domestic oil production are to end.

The exemption would allow prices. to rise from the current $11.63 per barrel limit to the world price level of about $13.18 a barrel

FNB establishes new development section

Development Division of The First National Bank of Midland was announced Friday by Wilbur A. Yeager Jr., president.

The new division will be headed by Harry Clark, senior vice president, who will be responsible for the activities of the Correspondent Banking Department, Economic Development Department, and the Business Development Department.

The division will handle community, customer and public

"This expansion is a part of our financial services for our customers. the community, our correspondent banks, and the West Texas-Eastern New Mexico area," Yeager said.

"Help and service are functions of the banking business, and this new division will give us a greater opportunity to accomplish these objectives." he added.

Clark, who joined the bank in 1968, came to Midland from Austin where he served six years as executive director of the Texas Industrial Commission. He will serve as head of the Business Development Department as well as the Area Development Division. In this capacity, he is replacing Jack Steel, senior vice president, who is entering private business after 13 years with the bank.

Yeager also announced the appointment of .Doug Henson, vice president, to head the Economic Development Department. Henson has been associated with the bank since 1969, and has served as a member of the Midland Chamber of Commerce MAST organization since that time. He was last year's DAA winner as the Outstanding Young Man of Midland, and is the immediate past chairmen of the Midland County Library Board

PALESTINE, Tex. (AP) -Aluminum Company of America will showed off a new wrinkle in metal making Friday at the official opening of its Anderson County Works.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe and ALCOA board chairman W.H. Krome George head the list of dignitaries.

The new multimillion dollar smelter is designed to reduce by 30 per cent the electricity required in making molten aluminum

The Anderson County Works, seven miles northeast of Palestine, utilizes the world's first aluminum production cells of a method developed by ALCOA over a 15-year period, said Fred Bergeron, area manager of ALCOA's four facilities in Texas.

The plant's initial capacity will be 15,000 tons of primary aluminum a year but it is ultimately designed to produce 300,000 tons a year, which would make the East Texas plant the nation's largest aluminum smelter, Bergeron said.

Other ALCOA plants in Texas are at Point Comfort. Rockdale and Mar-

Protection movement reaches into home building industry

COLLEGE STATION -The consumer protection movement has reached the home building industry. and in some areas of Texas families may now get a warranty on their new home which protects it against major defects for 10 years.

According to Sue Young, research associate with the Texas Real Estate Research Center (TRERC) at Texas A&M University, the Home Onwer's. Warranty (HOW) program is catching on in Texas. "The first local HOW council in the state was established by the builders' association of Fort Worth and Tarrant County:" she said. "Since then.

Dallas County builders have also approved the warranty plan.

Young noted that HOW provides a buyer with protection should the bulder be unwilling or unable to meet his responsibilities.

'Under HOW, the builder is obligated to remedy defects in workmanship and materials for one year after closing. Appliances, are excluded from coverage, except for the manufacturer's warranty." added

For the first two years, the builder is responsible for correction of major structural defects and defects caused by ononcompliance with approved standards for plumbing, heating, electrical and cooling systems of the

HOW defines a major structural defect as "actual damage to the loadbearing portion of the home (including damage due to soil movement) which affects its loadbearing formation and which vitally affects or is imminently likely to produce a vital effect on the use of the home for residential purposes."

"For example," said the TRERC research associate, "if the house is built on a badly compacted fill and house subsides causing damage, the claim would probably be accepted as a major construction defect. Also, there is coverage against a collapsed roof or failure of beam joists and loadbearing walls.

She noted that normal shrinkage. defective design, materials supplied by the purchases to the builder and defects from the buyer's negligence in maintaining the home are not covered by the program. Defects in flooring, plastering and wall tiling might not be accepted as major construction defects, she said.

technical competency and ethical stringent than those of FHA or VA. The houses are subject to stop-check inspections during construction.

While the cost of the coverage (two dollars per $1,000 of the selling price) is passed on to the buyer, the resale value may be enhanced during the first 10 years because coverage is transferred to the new owner should the house be sold.

Young added, "if there is a defect

during the first two years, the first step is to contact the builder. If the builder disputes the claim or denies responsibility, a claim ($25 fee) can be presented to the local HOW council. The council will try to resolve the difference between the buyer and builder. If that fails, the buyer can request arbitration through the American Arbitration Association ($75 fee). Builders in the HOW program agree to accept the arbitrators' decision.

'This system for complaint handling is designed to assure settlements that are as fair as those obtained in court while less timeconsuming and costly," she said.

Federal Mediation and Con-Services Commissioner Harold Davis has called the Home Owner's Warranty Program a significant step and the first effort made by an industry to institutionalize mediation for settling disputes.

The Home Owner's Warranty Corp., a subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders, began licensing local and state building associations to administer the program in 1974. Legislation was enacted which permitted home warranty insurance to be offered in Texas. The Texas Insurance Commission then approved the HOW program for operations in the state.

Participation by builders is voluntary," noted Young. "Some reliable builders may elect to continue with the guarantee they have offered in the past. The local builders' association in your area, therefore, may not have implemented the program, but it has been predicted that HOW will cover the state within the next two years.

AUSTIN - Increased funds for international trade and industrial development are included in the Texas Industrial Commission's 1978-79 budget request, which contains a 19 per cent increase overall.

Executive Director James Harwell says the $1,208,886 a year request asks for $75,000 additional a year for industrial development, and $25,000 a year more for international development. Operations items would go up $100,000 annually, but the amount for community development ramains the

Sea captain returns lost balloon gondola

JERSEY CITY, N.J. (AP) - Karl Thomas, who barely survived an attempt to cross the Atlantic Ocean by balloon, has received a memento of the trip - the gondola that almost became his coffin.

The steel and styrofoam gondola, encrusted with barnacles and algae. was plucked from the ocean Wednesday after a lucky sighting by the British containership Atlantic Dart. It was returned to Thomas Friday at an informal shipboard ceremony at Port Jersey here.

"It's good to have her back," Thomas said, patting the gondola. He had last seen it June 27 when he bailed out in a raging thunderstorm 800 miles at sea. Thomas, 28, of Detroit, was attempting a Lakehurst-toParis balloon flight when he hit the thunderstorm on the second day. As he dove into the water the gondola was caught in an updraft and disappeared. Fifteen minutes later, as Thomas lay on his back in a rubber raft, it plunged out of a thundercloud into the water a half-mile away. Thomas was picked up by a Russian freighter four days later, knowing the gondola would remain afloat but doubting he would see it again.

The Atlantic Dart and Capt. Ray Woodfield of London were entitled to keep the gondola under the laws of salvage. But Woodfield said, "What am I going to do with it? ... I think its a nice Bicentennial gesture to give it to Mr. Thomas."

A reporter asked its cash value and Woodfield replied, "Don't ask me, ask him. He's the mad bloke who rode in

Ford wrote each delegate and alternate to the Republican convention saying he wants a running matewith character and experience who is not only capable of leading the country but would also be an asset during the campaign. Each person was asked to list five possible candidates in order of their preference.

The President is also seeking responses from party leaders in and out of Congress.

Meanwhile, Mondale attacked the Republican policy on farm exports in his first farmbelt speech delivered at Pierre. S.D. He said that while Presidents Ford and Richard Nixon claimed they embraced a free market system, they had undercut farmers four times in three years with embargoes on overseas shipments.

If Democratic nominee Jimmy Carter is elected president, the practice of embargoing grain shipments will end, Mondale promised.

In Washington, Sen. Bob Dole, the Kansan who is ranking Republican on the Senate Agriculture Committee, predicted otherwise.

Justice, Treasury departments battle over Interpol dealings

WASHINGTON (AP) - Atty. Gen. Edward Levi is battling the Treasury Department over U.S. dealings with Interpol, the worldwide police organization, in a feud over law enforcement responsibility.

It's shaping up as a new episode in a running feud between the two Cabinet . agencies over which one controls what law enforcement matters. Each has specific law enforcement responsibilities, but they sometimes overlap and set off fireworks

That's what happened when Levi quietly issued an order June 24 transferring the Interpol liaison office from the Treasury Department to the Justice Department: Federal law authorizes the attorney general to decide who handles U.S. dealings with the International Criminal Police Organization, which channels information about crime's and criminals to 122 nations. The United States pays about $140,000 in annual dues, 6 per cent of Interpol's total budget.

Treasury officials protested Levi's action to the White House and President Ford ordered a delay, said Assistant Treasury Secretary David R. Macdonald

"The President said basically, 'Hold on, don't do this until the Domestic Council has a chance to work with both. Treasury and Justice." Macdonald said in an inter-

Louis Sims, head of the Interpol office at the Treasury Department, "told his staff nothing is going to happen until after the election," a Treasury source said.

Macdonald said the negotiations could take several months. Treasury officials say they don't understand why Levi wants the Interpol office, particularly because the Justice Department had it from 1937 to 1950 but did little with it. The United States even withdrew from Interpol in 1950 because J. Edgar Hoover, then the FBI director, thought the organization was becoming too political.

The Treasury Department has handled the liaison function since the United States rejoined in 1958.

"I can see no logical reason why there needs to be a change," Sims

But Andrew Tartaglino, designated by Levi to take over the Interpol liaison, said Justice Department officials want Interpol because they think most criminal matters requiring international cooperation fall under department jurisdiction.

These include narcotics smuggling. alien smuggling, terrorism, organized crime, espionage and international frauds

But Sims argued that 40 per cent of the liaison work involves cases handled by state and local police.

SEOUL - Before a prominent South Korean lawyer agreed to defend accused Christian and political leaders in a Seoul criminal trial this year, he drew up his will and called a family conference. His conscience dictated that he accept the brief in defiance of death threats by the country's secret police, the Korean Centeral Intelligence Agency, and he wanted his family to understand his decision and its possible conse-outspoken in his criticism of President Park Chung Hee. Chang died last year in a "climbing accident" that raised many suspicions in Seoul. The lawyer would not comment on the attempts to intimidate him; to do so would invite prosecution under a statute forbidding "slanderous" conversations with foreign journalists. But his friends confirm the story and say it is consistent with a pattern of intimidation directed at others among the 27 lawyers defending 18 prominent Koreans accused of trying to overthrow the Park regime. Practicing lawyers and foreign experts in Seoul believe that Justice the citizen's right to a fair and speedy trial - has been perverted and abused by the present government as the key tool in a systematic campaign to crush all political opposition. They by a hint that he found particularly complain privately of vindictive laws, rigged prosecutions, forced confessions and government pressure on judges to secure dubious convictions and overly harsh sentences. Journalist Lee Pu Young, who irritated authorities by leading a reporters' strike against censorship, was arrested a year ago on the familiar charge of plotting to overthrow President Park. Lee told an appeals court he had been forced to make a false confession, and the principal government witness - excused from prosecution on grounds of insanity - said he could remember nothing of the alleged plot. goundless.' Lawyers say justice is meted out fairly in the ordinary criminal cases that make up most of the courts' calendars; the abuses arise in cases allegedly involving challenges to the government's authority.

In the most notorious example, eight members of the People's Revolutionary party were hanged in April 1975 for "attempting a violent and bloody overthrow of govern-ment." An Amnesty International report concluded that the prosecution was a fabrication, but poet Kim Chi Ha, already serving one life sentence. is on trial anew for saying the same

Although the case against the members of the People's Revolutionary party was, in the view of impartial jurists, an elaborate fraud, 15 of the defendants are still serving terms ranging from 10 years to life. Four of them, including deputy construction manager Jeon Chang II, 49, have been tortured and held in solitary confinement for two years. according to Chang's wife, for refusing to make false confessions.

The consensus of many lawyers interviewed in Seoul is that independence of the judiciary vanished, except in theory, in 1972, when the constitution which President Park promulgated under martial law gave him the right to appoint judges, from chief justice of the Supreme Court on

In 1973, approximately a third of the judges staged 'a short-lived revolt against prosecution pressure. For unspecified reasons, some 30 judges, including seven Supreme Court justices, were not reappointed.

Fear of not being reappointed on expiration of their 10-year terms or of transfer to the provinces — the fate of a judge who issued a ruling favorable to opposition figure Kim Dae Jung has reportedly rendered the judges docile and amenable to KCIA manipulation of South Korea's juryless courts. In a state where all power emanates from the president and judges see their careers at stake. one bright young lawyer said, "There's an atmosphere of terror in the courthouse that makes it useless to talk about justice.

In mid-May 1975, under the rule-by-decree powers of the "revitalizing" constitution. Park promugated Emergency Measure No. 9, a formidable law that outlaws virtually all outlets of peaceful opposition. Since then, about 150 students have been arrested and half of these sentenced.

For such offenses as distributing a declaration favoring democracy or document smuggled from Kim Chi Ha's cell, in which the poet renounced an earlier confession as made under duress, students have been sentenced to as much as 10 years. Last month, five Catholic seminarians received sentences ranging up to five years for printing and distributing someone else's poem. Habeas corpus was another casualty of the 1972 constitutional revision. Suspects are commonly held for weeks without access to lawyers or publication of arrest warrants and charges. Many Seoul lawyers believe that measures as sweeping as EM-9 are illegal, but the constitutionality of laws cannot now be challenged in South Korea's courts.

California canneries reopen; other labor disputes continue

By The Associated Press

California canneries resumed operations Saturday after 60,000 cannery workers voted to end an 11day strike that had stopped the state's fruit and vegetable harvest.

Some plants started up Saturday morning, only hours after union members ratified a new three-year contract. Other canneries contacted in a spot check said they were either in operation Saturday or planned to be by Sunday./

A spokeswoman for California Processors, Inc., said it might be midweek before all 76 plants closed by the strike were back in full operation. The canneries produce much of the nation's canned fruit.

Meanwhile, a federal judge in Charleston, W.Va., where a wildcat coal strike began, offered to dismiss $300,000 in civil contempt fines against a United Mine Workers local 'if and when' striking coal miners return to work.

In an effort to end a wildcat walkout that has spread-to 89,000 miners in Dennis Knapp also agreed to dismiss a criminal contempt suit against UMW Local 1759.

In other labor developments, a work slowdown by air controllers resulted in few delays Saturday at major airports and no breakthrough was in sight for the 102-day-old rubber workers' strike.

The California strike, which hit during the harvest season for canned peaches, pears, tomatoes and other crops, ended after Teamsters ratiffed a new contract that will boost wages by $1.60 an hour over the next three

Some 60,000 workers approved the new contract by a 21/2-1 margin during two days of voting. Results were announced early Saturday.

Freddy F. Sanchez, president of the Teamsters California Council of Cannery Workers Unions, said workers would receive an average increase of 54 cents an hour in each of the first two years of the contract, and a 52-cent boost in the third year. The pact is retroactive to July 1. Under the old contract the workers made an average of $4.93 an hour.

In the air controllers' slowdown, officials at New York's Kennedy and LaGuardia airports reported delays of up to half an hour but said they could not attribute the delays to the controllers' action. Officials of three airlines and a Federal Aviation Administration representative in Chicago said there were no significant delays at O'Hare International Airport, the nation's busiest.

The 102-day-old strike by 60,000 United Rubber Workers against the nation's tire manufacturers continued with no breakthrough in sight.

U.S. Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery Jr., who tried to settle the rubber industry dispute in Washington talks last week, told newsmen "...we are going to double our efforts next week to try to bring about a conclusion.

The talks broke off Thursday after no agreement was reached, and both sides issued statements Saturday denouncing the other's failure to negotiate.

Western travelers bare China's quake drama

EDITOR'S NOTE — One of the strongest earthquakes in modern history hit northeast China as its millions slept early last Wednesday. The outside world still has no official word on the number who died or were injured, or even the full extent of devastation. But tales of human drama have come from Western travelers and other sources inside

TOKYO (AP) At 3:40 a.m., Wednesday, July 28, Kazuharu Imai, asleep in his room in a three-story guest house in Tangshan, China, was awakened by a slight shaking of his

About the same time in Peking, buildings began to sway and in an apartment house where American diplomats and other foreigners live, pictures fell from the walls and glasses tumbled from tables. A vacationing family from Binghamton, N.Y., was awakened by the rocking of their hotel room and then they saw flashes on Peking's dark horizon.

ABOUT 80 MILES to the southeast in the port city of Tientsin, Gough Whitlam, the former prime minister of Australia, and his wife Margaret were in a hotel that suddenly split in two. A chest of drawers fell onto their

Not far from where Kazuharu Imai and eight other members of his touring Japanese technical group were staying in Tangshan, a large number of workers were down in a coal mine, as they usually are at that time of night. The Kailun coal mines, one of Tangshan's major industries, operate on a 24-hour basis.

ABOUT FIVE MINUTES after Kazuharu Imai felt those first tremors seismographs at the Japanese Meteorological Service at Masushiro; at Palmer, Alaska; at Honolulu, and at Golden, Colo., were registering a strong earthquake somewhere in China.

The Japanese meteorological agency placed it in Inner-Mongolia, a few hundred miles north of Peking. American experts at Golden put its location as somewhere in northeast China. It registered the earthquake at 8.2 on the Richter Scale, the strongest since the quake that hit Alaska on Good Friday, March 27, 1964, which registered 8.4 on the Richter Scale.

THE RICHTER SCALE is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number, say from magnitude 6.5 to magnitude 7.5, means the ground motion is 10 times greater. Some experts say the actual amount of energy released may be 30 times greater

One of the strongest earthquakes in modern history was hitting China, where on Jan. 23, 1556, an estimated 830,000 persons perished in history's worst recorded earthquake.

The Chinese later reported its focus of this new quake was 105 miles southeast of Peking. That would be in the area of Tangshan where Kazuharu Imai was.

OFFICIAL CHINESE news dispatches and broadcasts only hinted at the scope of the possible loss of life and devastation. Cuban and Yugoslav news dispatches from Peking later reported death tolls in the tens of thousands. But no specific casualty tolls were reported by any source in hit hard at the coastal city of Tientsin. but its full fury came in the region of Tangshan, a mining and industrial center of about a million people.

Kazuharu Imai, 37, recalled it all later in Tokyo.

"A SLIGHT TREMOR aroused me at 3:40 a.m.," he said. "Then it grew in intensity. I tried to get out of bed and under it. There was nothing to grasp. The roof and ceiling fell and I was buried under the debris, but somehow I managed to crawl out."

Imai called to his roommate; there was no answer. He later learned the roommate was one of three members of his group who were killed.

Kinya Toyama, 39, was in a room near Imai's.

"I tried to crawl under the bed," Toyama said. "But before I realized it was buried under debris. I don't know how long, but I was suffocating and could hardly breathe.

"Then another jolt tossed the bed and debris into the air and I managed to crawl out."

THAT SECOND JOLT possibly fatal to others — saved the life of Kinya Toyama.

The fury was shaking another hotel in Tangshan, where 23 members of a French friendship delegation were staying. According to reports from China, one of the group's women members died under a collapsing

Later, the Japanese were rushed by automobile to the airport for a flight to Peking and saw little of Tangshan on their departure, but one said later they felt "there were hardly any buildings standing."

News dispatches from Peking and other reports said the men working in the Kailun coal mines were feared trapped in their pits. But there was no confirmation of this or any official word on casualties in Tangshan.

AT TIENTSIN, the hotel where Gough Whitlam and his wife were asleep suddenly was subject to "an immense tearing around," the former Australian leader said later. Mrs. Whitlam suffered a leg injury when the chest of drawers toppled onto their bed but she was able to walk.

Whitlam said the hotel "split in half, down the middle in two halves" and that in leaving he and his wife had to step across a one-foot gap in the

"There were some people killed, but we were not told how many, Whitlam said.

the building move slowly back and fourth," Taber said. "I realized immediately we were in an earthquake. Annie and I tried to awaken Ikie, who was fast asleep. The rocking was so bad she couldn't get him properly dressed and had to put him on the bed to steady him.'

The lights had gone out and Taber opened the window drapes. There were flashes of light on the horizon — either electric transformers blowing up or fires, I couldn't tell." WITH THE BUILDING still shaking, the Tabers made their way in the dark down six flights of stairs to the 'There' did not seem to be any

Later as they were driven to the Peking airport. the Tabers got a glimpse of the capital. It was drizzl-

"Thousands of people were sitting or crouching outside their homes, but there did not appear to be any heavy damage," he said. As the family ate breakfast at the airport, a second series of shocks hit the area.

"After the first main shock, many of the people camped outside on the sidewalk in the rainfall for hours,' said U.S. Deputy Chief Dean.

WALLS OF BUILGINGS in Peking cracked and a number of smaller brick buildings were reported to have crumpled.

No casualties have been reported among the 3,500 foreigners in Peking. While the Chinese had given no casualty reports, the correspondent or the Italian news agency ANSA said about 50 persons were believed to have been killed in the collapse of buildings in Peking.

Paul Hagan of Atlanta, Ga., a member of a U.S.-China People's Friendship Association group visiting Peking, said there was little confusion among the people pouring into the streets in the rain.

"People were taking shelter in the streets with their own food, blankets and other items," he said in Tokyo.

"THEY WERE WELL organized on the street level and I saw a lot of barefoot doctors (paramedics) patrolling the streets. You can tell these medical people because they carry bags with a big red cross printed on them, but I didn't see anyone who was injured."

At 6:50 p.m. (5:50 a.m., CDT) a powerful aftershock rocked the area of the predawn quake. The U.S. Earthquake Information Service recorded the magnitude of the second shock at 7.9 on the Richter scale.

By that time many residents of Peking were reported staying in shelters in open areas or clustering around the entrances of ground-floor building levels. Tall apartment buildings, many of them normally occupied by foreigners, were said to have been almost deserted.

TWENTY HOURS AFTER the first quake struck. China's official News Agency. Hsinhua, made its first mention of the disaster. It said damage "of varying degrees was reported" and gave no casualty figures.

A few hours later, a Hsinhua broadcast gave further official word, pointing up the seriousness-of the situation in the quake-ravaged region. It came two."

Most of the message was devoted to telling the people to "bring into full play the revolutionar y spirit of ar-duous struggle," and 'plunge into the antiquake relief fight with a firm and indomitable will."

But it said the quak e had "affected Tientsin and Peking r nunicipalities,' and had "caused great losses to people's lives and property, and Tangshan city, in part icular, suffered extremely serious damage and

THURSDAY NIGHT and early Friday Chinese gover nment officials again warned of possible major aftershocks, and ordered m illions of people into the streets, blown ng whistles and banging gongs to alert them.

Then on Saturday, the Chinese Foreign Ministry was ned foreigners in Peking of the poss ibility of more strong aftershocks "a vithin a day or

Ailing justice plans return WASHINGTON (AP) - Justice

Thurgood Marshall-plans to return to his office next month and be back on the bench when the U.S. Supreme Court reconvenes Oct. 4.

Marshall, who is at home recovering from a heart attack, hopes to return to work in his chambers part time in the middle of August and full time in mid-September, a court spokesman said.

Marshall, 68, was hospitalized July 4 after what was described as a mild heart attack. He returned home Saturday.

Decision favors AT&T

WASHINGT() N (AP) - A congressional subcommittee may not force the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. to turn over records that give details of secret government wiretaps installed without court warrants, a feder a l judge says.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver Gasch, in a decision Friday, said the risk of disclosing highly sensitive national security information would be too great if a lilouse oversight and investigation subcommittee was allowed to see tihe telephone company's records.

A lawyer for the House panel said the decision would be appealed. Gasch's decision sets up a classic separation of powers legal battle similar to that la unched by former President Richard M. Nixon to prevent disclosure of his Watergate

President Fordl, campaigning in

Jackson, Miss., was described by his press secretary, Ron Nessen, as gratified by the Gasch decision.

The subcommittee, headed by Rep. John Moss. D-Calif., said it wanted the records to insure that the government is not using national security as an excuse to place wiretaps on innocent Americans.

But Gasch said, "Identification of those individuals who have been subject to surveillance will point out not only the foreign agents that they are known but would be counterintelligence information useful to unfriendly countries or powers because it would indicate those agents who have not been identified by United States intelligence agencies.'

Lawyers for the subcommittee, a segment of the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, argued that their security procedures are equal to those of the government

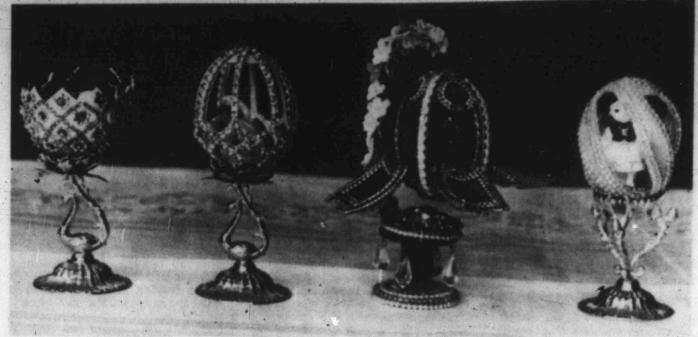

But the judge noted it would take a vote of only eight subcommittee members to release the wiretap records. In addition, he said, under House rules, each of the 435 House members could see the files.

Gasch said he was not implying that House members "will act negligently or in bad faith if they have access to these documents."

But he said primary responsibility for national security and foreign policy rests with the president.

He called the subpoena for AT&T records "unlawful and unauthorized without the prior authorization of the executive branch. ...

The Justice Department had warned there would be a serious risk of disclosure of the names of all foreign spies and double agents known to U.S. intelligence organizations if AT&T records were turned over.

Courses endangered

Permian Basin Graduate Center geology courses, offered through the University of Texas at Arlington, are in jeopardy as a result of a College Coordinating Board ruling.
UT-Arlington has informed the center that, as a result of a coordinating board ruling, courses offered here must be charged at the same fees as campus tuition, Dr. L. Glenn Neswick, graduate center executive director, said.

No provision is made for the expenses incurred in offering the graduate geology courses, about $3,000 per year, he said, and the center cannot afford to keep the program going if funding to absorb the cost is not available.

The program, a master's degree in geology, was begun last fall as a cooperative effort with the University of Texas system, Neswick said. UT-Arlington accepts courses from The University of Texas of the Permian Basin and The University of Texas at El Paso. The degree is offered from UT-Arlington.

The graduate center last year charged $235 per course, using the monies above the resident tuition to cover its expenses, Neswick said. He said eight students participated in the program last year when it was in its "embryonic stages." Even with the $235 per course fee, the program lost money, Neswick said. The center receives some private donations, which are applied to those courses which do not completely pay for themselves, but the center cannot afford to bear the full cost of the geology courses, Newswick said. "The students enrolled in the program have been willing to pay the extra expenses in order to be able to take advantage of a master's program, but the coordinating board has advised that this is no longer possible," he said.

The center will attempt to find private funds to subsidize the program and will continue to operate it "if we can afford it," Neswick said.

Voters in four states to go to polls Tuesday

By The Associated Press

Presidential primaries are over and done with, but voters in four states on Tuesday will nominate candidates for the House and two will choose nominees for the Senate.

Missouri voters will have a fourway Democratic race for the nomination to succeed. Sen. Stuart Symington, who is retiring after 24 years. They will also vote on whether to accept an amendment to allow state aid to private schools.

Four Democrats and four Republicans are fighting in Michigan for the right to succeed retiring Democratic Sen. Philip Hart. But so far neither issues nor personalities have brought much excitement to the Idaho and Kansas will also hold primaries, but there are no statewide races and voter interest is low.

Contesting the nomination for Symington's seat are his son, Rep. James Symington; Rep. Jerry Litton; former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, and

Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler.
The winner of the Democratic nomination would oppose Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, who nearly beat the elder Symington in 1970.

A constitutional amendment to allow the Missouri legislature to provide limited state aid in the form of services to the handicapped, transportation and textbooks for private school students has caught voter attention since petitions placing it on the ballot were approved in June.

Most opposition to the amendment has come from Baptist groups, while many proponents are associated with the Roman Catholic Church.

Missouri voters will also be deciding on nominations for Congress, governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, treasurer, attorney general and the legislature.

Missouri Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick has predicted 1.25 million voters will go to the polls Tuesday. If the prediction comes true, and Kirkpatrick has been accurate in the past, it would be the largest primary turnout in the state's history.

Missouri will send at least five new U.S. representatives to Congress next year as a result of Symington's and Litton's decisions to run for the Senate, and the retirements of Reps. Leonor Sullivan, William Randall and William Hungate.

There are primary contests on the Democratic side in all five districts and Republican races in four of them. Incumbents are expected to be renominated in the other five

Democrats seem assured of retaining heavy majorities in both houses of the Missouri legislature, but Republicans hope to cut into their two-third's control of the House and

Two Democratic congressmen have been trying to overtake Michigan Secretary of State Richard Austin, who apparently would become the first black Democrat ever to serve in the U.S. Senate if elected to Hart's

Michigan residents also will be voting in all 19 congressional districts, including four in which incumbents have stepped aside three of them to run for the Senate. All

110 Michigan House seats also are up for election, along with numerous local contests

The state's first black certified public accountant and first black statewide officeholder, Austin has endured charges of operating a political kickback fund through the decades-old secretary of state branch manager-patronage system. Trailing Austin in the Democratic primary are congressmen Donald Riegle of Flint and James O'Hara of Utica. On the Republican side, Rep. Marvin Esch of Ann Arbor is considered the leader. Republican George Hansen, an Idaho congressman fined $2,000 by a federal judge last year for failing to properly report his campaign finances, is in a three-way race for renomination Tuesday.

But with no statewide races,

Idaho's primary hasn't otherwise stirred much excitement. State election officials predict the turnout might be as low as 30 per cent of the 460,000 registered voters.

In 15 of the state's 35 legislative districts, there are no contests in either the primary or general elec-

Kansas citizens, for the first time since the state began holding primary elections in 1910, have no statewide contests to vote on because of a switch to four-year terms.

Only the offices of state treasurer and insurance commissioner are up for election this year. But there is no contest for either office.

The top race in this year's primary is in the 2nd Congressional District where Republicans will choose one of seven candidates to face Rep. Martha Keys, D-Kan., in November.

Miss Texas coming home

By PATSY GORDON R-T Staff Writer

ODESSA - A moment of relaxation will not come for Miss Texas Monday when she returns briefly to this Permian Basin city, her hometown, for the first time since taking the state's top beauty title three weeks

Carmen Ann McCollum. 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord M. McCollum, will arrive at Ector County Airport at 10 a.m., accompanied by her parents, her business manager, B. Don Magness of Fort Worth, and Mrs. Magness. Mr. and Mrs. McCollum will be flown to Cow Town by Air Care, Inc. of Odessa to pickup their daughter and the return flight will be made via the same service.

Miss McCollum, the first Odessa girl to win the Miss Texas title in more than 20 years, will receive the key to the city at the airport from Odessa Mayor Dan Hemphill. Hemphill also has proclaimed

September as "Carmen Ann Mc-Collum Month. The Odessa Jaycees will host Miss

McCollum at their regular noon

Commissioners to discuss map

The Midland County commissioners will meet at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday to discuss preparation of a flood plain map of Midland County. John Dovoriac of Michael Baker Engineering Co., which has been contracted by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to prepare the map, and a representative from Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office will make the presentation and luncheon in the ballroom of the Inn of the Golden West. Attendance will be by invitation only. The Jaycees sponsored the Miss West Texas Pageant, the prelude to the Miss

Texas competition. Other events scheduled include a 2 p.m. press conference at the Inn of the Golden West. This will be followed by a public reception in the Inn's ballroom from 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tickets for the reception are $3 for adults, $1 for students and 50 cents for children

At the reception, Miss McCollum will present a 30 minute saxophome performance. She will play a medley of songs, including "Yakety Sax,"
"Wabash Cannonball" and "If You Walk Into My Life."

She also will receive the mayor's proclamation and other awards. It was brought out that Miss McCollum, at the Miss Texas pageant, was the only contestant to thank her sponsor.

Since receiving the Miss Texas crown, Miss McCollum, a 5-foot-8 brunette, who measures 36-25-36, has spent all of her time at Fort Worth preparing for the Miss America-Pageant to be held in September at Atlantic City, N.J. She will represent the state there.

The week following the Fort Worth pageant, Miss Texas worked with Boots Randolph, well-known saxophonist, on stage, receiving instructions from him. She took top honors at the Miss Texas pageant with her saxophone solos.

As Miss Texas, she won a one-year full scholarship to North Texas State University at Denton. She has been attending Abilene Christian University as a psychology major.

Also during her busy schedule Monday in Odessa, Miss McCollum will participate in the groundbreaking of the new National Bank of Odessa, and will make promotionals for

Cotton insect activity said declining in Basin

STANTON - Cotton insect activity in the area is generally on the decline with the July bollworm moth flight not developing into an economically damaging level, according to a statement from James T. Lee, county extension entomologist, for Martin, Howard, Glasscock, Reagan and Upton Counties.

Reports from scout survey teams and county extension agents indicate only a few small bollworm eggs are being found in cotton and beneficial insect numbers appear to be increasing. Lee said.

Speak softly to cows

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) would do well to pull in its horns and depart the field of livestock and agriculture.

The agency apparently has a number of "bright" young writers and planners who have never been on or even seen a farm or ranch.

Yet their patronizing attempts to lecture American farmers on how to run their farms is ridiculous - almost unbelievable, if you please.

Farmers and ranchers are indignant, and properly so, at the patronizing efforts of OSHA. Some members of Congress even have denounced the OSHA work in this particular field. It certainly is time for Congress to take a serious look at the overall operations of this particular

In an apparent effort to make its confusing jumble of regulations more understandable. OSHA has published a series of booklets explaining to specific industries how the regulations affect them. Most of the government pamphlets are fairly technical, addressing the problems of major industries in their own particular jargon. But in the case of agriculture. well, the OSHA writers address the agriculturists in a manner insulting to their intelligence.

Rep. Thomas Hagedorn, Mich., said the books, prepared at a cost of almost $500,000, must have been written "for a New Yorker about to visit a farm for the first time

The booklet, "Safety with Beef Cattle." was denounced on the floor of the Senate by Sen. Carl Curtis. R-Neb., who declared the language used by OSHA to be "so childish, so trite, and so incredibly arrogant and insulting" as to leave him almost speechless.

This particular pamphlet says in large, bold print that "hazards are one of the main causes of accidents." and explains, "You can make your work area safe by finding hazards and removing fall. You could also trip over junk or trash."

The American Cattlemen's Association is "laughing with tears in our eyes," after scanning the expensive booklets.

Farmers are told, at various points throughout the booklet: "Be careful around the farm," "Wear clothes that fit right," and "If your ladder is broken, do not climb it."

The booklet advises further, regarding livestock, "Be careful when you are handling animals. Tired or frightened cattle can bolt and trample you. Be patient, talk softly around the cows."

We wonder how West Texas ranchers and farmers would react to that one. No, really, we do not wonder - we know how they would react in words which could be understood clearly even by OSHA's agricultural "experts."

Many of them already have sounded off concerning OSHA's contemplated proposal that sanitary rules presently in effect in industrial plants — like the one requiring that toilet facilities be within a five-minute walk for employes - be applied to agricultural workers as well.

It is not at all surprising that one of Senator Curtis' constituents has suggested to him that Congress declare a national holiday so that the citizenry could witness the public hanging of the proposal

Then there is the ridiculous OSHA regulation requiring separate male and female toilets for family owned and operated firms, which undoubtedly would include farms.

Perhaps indignant ranchers and farmers can get something done to curb many of the ridiculous, impractical, expensive, unnecessary, even impossible regulations and edicts issued by OSHA across the board.

And just in case there is any doubt in the minds of OSHA officials as to why their particular agency is so unpopular, it is because of just such ill-conceived and arbitrary interference as these in people's business.

In other words, Americans, generally speaking, are pretty well fed up with the whole thing.

WASHINGTON - In back of Needle and Thimble, a small Georgetown tailor shop, can be found the tiny oneroom Washington headquarters of the National Alliance of Senior Citizens.

Both the tailor shop and the senior bureaucrat who thought up that citizens' organization are operated by Curt C. Clinkscales III, a 29-year-old, befreckled redhead. His years in Washington have taken some of the magnolia out of his South Carolina accent, which is now a soft, easy drawl. But his experiences with raw politics haven't eroded his easy, 'down home'' approach.

The youthful Clinkscales claims to speak for 20,000 elderly, elusive Americans. In their behalf, he rates members of Congress and passes out Golden Age Hall of Fame awards. His operation is a political sideshow worth passing notice.

.The retired generation is more legitimately represented by the National Council of Senior Citizens which keeps a stern eye on Congress. Members who vote against the welfare of the elderly are spotted by the national council, which spreads the message to three million faithful followers.

INSIDE REPORT:

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - The chilling

evidence of disaster in Ronald

Reagan's unveiling of an ultra-liberal running mate came not from public denunciations on Capitol Hill but from private anguish of Republican state hairman Clarke Reed of Mississippi. Having just staved off a raid by President Ford's agents attempting to capture all 30 Mississippi delegates under the unit rule, Reed was suddenly disillusioned and sickened by the selection of Sen. Richard Sch-weiker of Pennsylvania. Without any guarantee of delegates from the Northeast, the Schweiker gamble had very nearly done what months of ardent courtship from the White House failed to do: turn Reed into a

Reagan's big gamble

Those who score high in the national alliance's vote tests are also inducted into the Golden Age Hall of Fame and are presented with a certificate suitable for political display

Thus the aforementioned members of Congress, heretofore condemned for their callousness toward the aged; were not cited as champions of the elderly. The new honors were bestowed upon them in the name of the National Alliance of Senior Citizens, which some elderly voters might confuse with the National Council of Senior Citizens

Rep. Steiger was so pleased that he penned a flowery letter on his congressional stationery, soliciting funds and members for the new national alliance.

And in Marietta, Ga., Rep. Mc-Donald, the freshman class clown. has benefitted from newspaper ads to announce his 100 per cent national alliance rating, his Golden Age Award and his induction into the Hall of

"Let's be honest now." proclaims the ad. "Does this sound like Congressman McDonald is again the elderly? Quite the opposite in fact Of course, Mr. McDonald's opponents never bother to bring out facts such as-

This does not surprise Clinkscales.

"Members are perfectly free to use the award in their campaign if they wish," he said. Indeed, the national alliance is endorsing a few favorites. in the name of the elderly, for election in November.

It has given its blessing, for example to Sen. James Buckley, the New York Republican-Conservative. Yet the national council reports that, out of 30 key votes affecting the elderly. Buckley voted favorably only

- Clinkscales and company have also endorsed Reps. Tom Bevill, D.-Ala., Goodloe Byron, R.-Md., Charles Grassley, R.-Iowa, and Virginia Smith, R.-Neb. Rep. McDonald, for all his ersatz honors, won't get an endorsement, Clinkscales said

He Pold us the national alliance scraped by on an $11,000 budget last year and will spend about $25,000 this election year. The money comes from donations and dues, he said. "We wouldn't take any federal funds if they offered it!"

He has supplemented his own income from the tailor shop by hiring out for short stints to members of Congress. In 1974, he worked in the campaign of Rep. David Treen, R .-La., who got a perfect 100 score on the latest national alliance rating.

Novak Evans that the Reagan-Schweiker ticket was the only hope for a breakthrough.

To keep Reagan's strong right flank intact, his agents on Sunday night began placing calls to supporters around the country to give them the unwelcome news. To soften the blow, they neglected to mention Schweiker's 100 per cent AFL-CIO voting record and increasingly soft line on national security policy and, instead, declared him a blood brother of Reagan opposing gun-controls and abortion. Some important Reaganites in still contested Southern delegations gamely accepted the strange ticket. Gov. James Edwards of South Carolina grimaced but went along. So did Richard Obenshain, the Virginia conservative leader. Roger Milliken, South Carolina textile millionaire and ardent Reagan supporter, was even a little enthusiastic: "What I've found out about Schweiker makes me feel this was a very good move.

Most important was Sen. Jesse Helms, an uncompromising conservative whose support for Reagan in North Carolina prevented Mr. Ford from clinching the nomination last March. Reagan personally telephoned Helms at 9:05 p.m. Sunday. Helms noted the hour because "I wanted to record for posterity the exact time. I received the shock of my life." Shocked though he was, Helms went along and stood beside Schweiker at Monday's news conference.

But in Mississippi, Reed proved less cooperative. Long courted by the White House (for example, as one of the few politicians invited to the Queen Elizabeth state dinner), Reed resisted the impulse to leap on the Ford bandwagon. While doubtful of Reagan's prospects. Reed last week decided he would not be the conservative who finally did in Ronald Reagan. Thanks to Reed, the Ford delegate raid on Mississippi was turned back Sunday.

It was also Sunday that Reed was told about Schweiker. Busy with keeping his delegation officially uncommitted, he failed to perceive what the news meant. When it sank in Monday morning. Reed was so outraged that he nearly endorsed Mr. Ford then and there. On second thought, he arranged conferences with fellow Mississippi conservatives, all in a similar state of shock.

Reed's intense emotional reaction suggests an immense miscalculation in the Schweiker ploy. The Reagan campaign has been a struggle against the seedy Republican establishment by spirited outsiders, nourished by belief in their more elevated devotion to principle. Their indispensible morale was shattered when Reagan broke his promise to name a likeminded Vice President

A case in point was Rep. Steve Symms of Idaho, a doctrinaire young conservative and one of the few Reagan delegates in Congress. For months. Symms has braved Republican cloakroom taunts by Jerry Ford's old buddies. What he could not brave was his Sunday night notice about Schweiker. ("I thought it was some kind of practical joke.") Lamenting that "I'm sick." Symms is still for Reagan, but now without enthusiasm or hope

The only possible antidote to such disillusionment would have been a visible delegate bag from Pennsylvania and elsewhere in the Northeast. But the early reaction there was tepid. While Reagan agents talked privately of 30 or even 60 delegates resulting from Schweiker. only a tiny fraction of that seemed possible.

However, the priority task for the Reagan campaign last week was not pulling delegates away from the President in Pennsylvania but keeping them in Mississippi. Considering the depth of disillusionment by Carke Reed and his colleagues. that made the odds on Reagan's desperate gamble very long indeed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Look at communism

To The Editor:

We have now celebrated the fourth of July, and I think the celebration from coast to coast showed in a great sense the average American's patriotism which is fine. I believe that 99/100 of the American people are patriotic, even though a little lazy on keeping up with their nation. I think it would be good to review what communism is.

Webster's 20th Century dictionary says: Communism is the economic system or theory which upholds the absorption of all proprietary rights in a common interest, an equitable division of labor, and the formation of a common fund for the supply of all the wants of the community; the doctrine of a community of property, or the negation of individual rights in property

I think we have people in this country even pushing for more than this. In a communistic nation they MAKE people work.

Now let's consider some of the freedoms we have lost in the last 50 years. Through HEW we have built a bureaucracy that has all but eliminated our states rights and put them in the bureaucratic hands in Washington. We have federal education rules:

 Busing for forced integration. 2 — Legalizing the right of individuals to plan sedition or be outright revolutionary and not being able to touch them because it might interfere with their civil rights.

3 - Letting our courts get into the legislative business. - Having stiff anti-trust legislation against companies but none against labor organizations. 5 - Listening to men like Ralph Nadar, the self-acknowledged expert on everything.

6 - Letting non-taxpayers vote inbond elections and loading taxpayers down with bond issues.

So many rules by HEW are not laws but rules by bureaucrats such as Title IX whereby all schools have to provide facilities whereby all females are equal to males, and prove that an 80-pound girl can lift as much as a 300-pound man. Other freedoms that we are in danger of losing in the coming twelve months:

1 - The right to keep guns. 2 - Government controlled health insurance for everyone paid for by the taxpayer. 3 - Guaranteed income whether you work or not.

4 - Forced union membership. 5 — Common sitis picketing.

6 - Elimination of tax exemptions on charitable contributions and doing away with the tax free status of our church buildings.

7 - Land use laws telling you what sort of hoe to use and how deep to dig. (LANDOWNERS - Look at the definition of-communism - you are about to become share-croppers.)

Some constitutional amendments 1 - Any bill that goes to the floor of Congress should stand on its own feet

- no amendments. 2 - Any law that goes before a federal judge should be either constitutional or unconstitutional and sent back to Congress - no legislating by the judge.

3 - There should be a record kept on each law passed showing how our particular congressmen voted - this record should be published.

Want more jobs? Cut taxes 50 per cent and all red tape on big corporations and you will have them.

I hope that all patriotic Americans that celebrated the birth of their country will keep their patriotism burning at least through November and clean out our Congress of the people that are wrecking our nation with red tape and silly rules.

Column refuted

Mr. Jack Ander 250's column of July 6 is a tedious repetition of inaccurate and unsubstantiated allegations, embellished for effect with the usual uncalled-for personal references to President Somoza of Nicaragua. While the limitations of space here

clearly preclude any detailed response, Mr. Anderson knows perfectly well that his past allegations have been challenged and con-

Now, among others, he seeks to discredit the "Las Americas" housing project, apparently oblivious to the fact that this was one of the remarkable achievements of the Nicaragua Government in the immediate post-earthquake period. The $3 million dollars warm-heartedly given by the U.S. Agency for International Development and the American people helped my govern-ment to build no less than 11,400 dwellings in the record time of 90 days to house 60,000 homeless. been dumped in this area. The city promised us when they put the "No Dumping" signs up, as soon as the people quit dumping, that they would bring a bulldozer in and push all the trash in the pit and cover it over. So we are all hoping that will be done real soon.

An improvement

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the City of Midland for putting up the "No Dumping" signs at the caliche pits on Bentwood and Holiday Hill Road. This has been a long hard process for the people in this area to get the dumping stopped

If you drive down West Cuthbert, you can see why we have been upset.

This is such an eyesore to our residential area. People have dumped trash within a few feet of the curb.

Now, with the signs up, anyone caught dumping in this area will be fined.

There is not a park in this area for several miles. The only place for the children to play is in the streets or to walk to the school grounds, which are not within walking distance for the little children.

If the owner of this land was just going to sit by and let his land be used as a dump ground, I wonder why he wouldn't let the city make a park out of it. There have been beautiful parks made from dump grounds in Odessa. Andrews and Hobbs.

And in Andrews and Hobbs they even made small lakes out of the pit areas. That would be such an addition to our area and this part of town if we could get something done to this piece of land. Everyone in this area would be willing to help in anyway we could to get something done.

If anyone thinks there is not a dump ground inside the city limits, they can just drive by and look at this ugly site and it makes you wonder how we as citizens let this thing go as long as we did without standing together and getting something done. But it still cannot be ignored until it is completely cleared.

Ambassador of Nicaragua Washington, D.C. On gun control

To The Editor:

In regards to Sam Pendergrast's article on Friday, July 23, on gun control: I believe that he (Sam) had received a letter from a John D. Savage stating the rate of murders in Great Britain compared with that in the United States of America.

If we are going to compare figures and statistics, let us compare Sweden's crime rate per capita with anybodys. Swéden's crime rate is so low it goes unrecorded even though it is national law that every able bodied man be issued a handgun by the government. So you see it does no good to compare countries with other countries. Big deal - who cares what other countries' crime rates are when ours is so high.

Gun control will do exactly what it . says, control guns, not crime. Gun control has already flopped in Massachusetts, a state with very hard and mandatory laws on handguns.

It is typical of a big city magazine to back a gun control bill and show biased articles that, if gun control is ever passed, will definitely infringe on my constitutional rights. But let the federal government try to curb or push aside freedom of the press and they just flat get beside themselves

And finally, I feel, to have "crime control" we need judges that lay down stern and hard sentences to those felons and habitual criminals. A reinstatement of a mandatory death penalty to those convicted of murder, rape, child molesting or child abuse and 30 years mandatory for armed robbery, no parole.

Sure, our jails and prisons would be overcrowded, but I would feel better knowing they were crowded and not walking the street.

WASHINGTON — When Ronald Reagan announced that he had chosen Sen. Richard S. Schweiker of Pennsylvania as his vice presidential candidate every political pundit rushed to his typewriter. But before I wrote anything, I went to see my Guru who lives in a cave on the 13th hole of the golf course at Bur-Thing Tree Country Club. After giving him a bowl of golf balls and a silk Pucci scarf, I sat at his feet and said.

He replied, "Why not Schweiker?" Schweiker is a liberal. Reagan is a conservative.

"Why Schweiker?"

"And Jimmy Carter is a peanut farmer.' 'What does that mean, Master?''

"Yu Jo once said, 'When a politician gets into bed with another politician he makes a strange bedfellow."" 'Then you think Reagan and Schweiker are strange bedfellows?' "Yes, but Tuan-mu-Tz-u said, 'One does not always go to bed to sleep. Sometimes there is something in the bed that two people are seeking."

'What is that, Master?' "Chung-sun HoChi asked his students, 'Why does someone who believes something get into a political bed with somebody who believes something else?' When no one knew the answer Chung-sun Ho-Chi flunked the whole class.'

'What was the correct response?' I asked. Because there are things under the bed no one in this universe could

New River debate: lobbyists vs. people

WASHINGTON - The New River, which has been flowing through the hills and bottomlands of Eastern Appalachia for an estimated 100 million years, may soon be destroyed by the House Rules Committee. Not. as old as the river, assuredly, but often as changeless in its direction, the committee will soon vote on whether to allow the House membership to consider legislation that will save the river. Until now, it has been the American Electric Power Company that has been seeking the New's destruction, by constructing dams for a power project that the company says is justified. But fears now exist that a dam cemented by the politics of the Rules Committee may doom the river in ways that the power company arguments have failed to

The solidity and breadth of this support is uncommon in land disputes, but in this case the compelling arguments for saving the river go far beyond any mindless downwith-the-power-company reaction. Instead, it is clearly seen that too many other values will go down if the project is sanctioned.

The arguments of the lobbies there's an energy crisis and jobs are at stake - deserve to be heard, as they have been repeatedly. And rejected repeatedly.

Supporters of the New River legislation are now worried that the committee will again put itself in the pocket of the lobbyists.

Austin's rumor mills keep grinding

By BILL KIDD Austin Bureau

ever dream of.'

AUSTIN - Unlike the mills of the gods, the mills of rumor do not grind slowly, nor necessarily exceeding

Political rumor mills especially are high speed devices, requiring large input and output. And here's a sample of what Capitol rumor mills are cranking out on state politicos:

Comptroller Bob Bullock's reported gubernatorial, announcement apparently was premature. Bullock was quoted as having made up his mind to run; Bullock says he said he "sure would like to run," but he hasn't made up his mind definitely "There's not any public clamor for me to run," he acknowledges. Bullock says he's not quite sure he wants to live in the kind of glass-house which governors dwell in. If he does run, it will be entirely his decision, and not influenced by what anyone else decides, Bullock says. He also reports that it is true that he will be having a fundraiser later this year - and it won't be called an appreciation dinner: "I'm going to call just what it is, a fundraiser."

The possibility of a Bullock-Briscoe race is at least highly entertaining. given Bullock's phrase-making ability - although in the slogan department, "No New Taxes, Part III." probably has first in shibboleth honors.

Janey Briscoe's statements to the effect that "we're" running has some speculators looking to her as a gubernatorial candidate, a la Ma and Pa Ferguson. Unlikely, but a good rumor - given some slight substance by Mrs. Briscoe's work in organizing the First Lady's Volunteers Program, beautification work, etc. Attorney General John Hill is getting quite a few applications from persons hopeful in working in his campaign for governor - but Hill says he hasn't decided if he'll run for re-election, run again for governor or go into private law practice.

Hill has been telling his staff he knows he needs to come to some sort of decision by early next year or sooner - but beyond saying he'll "probably" run for office, he's not

One short-lived rumor had Hill and Briscoe meeting to discuss Hill as a Senate candidate, but with the other rumored candidates, including Board of Insurance chairman Joe Christie, such a possibility is more remote than

Speaker Bill Clayton is being rumored for Congress or the lieutenant governor post, but since Clayton seems to have secured support for his Speaker's spot to 1980, he may be inclined to await developments.

Lieutenant Gov. Bill Hobby is rumored to be looking longingly across the rotunda himself, toward the gubernatorial position

And so it goes, on and on. Other of the more interesting rumors in circulation are regarding possible contenders for the attorney general's post, with Austin Rep. Sarah Weddington, Beaumont Rep. Pike Powers, and former Speaker of the House Price Daniel Jr. among those named.

One report has Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong as a possible contender for the AG spot - he's already been mentioned for governor.

More than likely, reasons one veteran Capitol observer, "everybody and his dog" will be filing in 1977. And in view of Jerry Sadler's performance and Gus Mutscher's oomeback, don't count anybody out.

POSITIVE THINKING

How to have an interesting life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

Living is the most interesting thing you can do. There is nothing quite like it; you ought to try it sometime! The truth is that many people never have - even though they walk, sleep and eat. Not until you begin practicing the simple, basic principles of living will you have those experiences that make life worth living.

It is actually sad and pathetic that so many people find life a dull. lackluster experience. They go through the same old routine day after day without vibrancy or excitement or fascination. They get into ruts and drag along in these ruts day after day, year after year.

Once years ago in upstate New York I saw a sign put up by some sort of philosophical farmer. It read, "Choose your rut carefully, you will be in it for the next twenty-five miles." Lots of us seem to have chosen ruts and stayed in them altogether too long.

One such rut is that of routine; the same old thing day in and day out with little or no variation to increase the interest factor. That ought to be broken at any cost. Do something in a different way for a change. Eat something different for breakfast. Discuss a new topic with your wife. Walk to work down a different street. Even that little difference will do something to you. In getting out of your rut, be innovative: imaginative, adventurous. Don't be afraid of doing something that may be perhaps a bit dangerous. You can't expect to enjoy an interesting life unless you are willing to take some risks. People occasionally ask my advice about taking on a new job or reaching out for a new career. 'Who am I to tell you?" I usually reply. "All I know is that I would certainly take a new job and branch out in fresh activity if I found myself in a blind alley."

"But I don't know whether I can make a go of it," is the often-heard objection.

My standard response to that objection is, "You'll have a powerful lot of fun finding out." When there is no risk and adventure in your life, its most-exciting quality is lost.

Another important factor in making life more interesting is to forget yourself. The person who lives within himself all the time can be pretty dull The other day I noticed a man on an airplane. He was reading a book called, "Peace of Mind." He put the book down and looked out the window for a while. Ltook the opportunity to ask him if he liked the book "Yes, indeed," he said. "This author tells you to forget yourself, not be dominated by self thoughts.' "Have you found peace of mind?" I

"No," he answered, "but I've been trying to find it by reading books about it.

He ope of up and started talking about himself. "You see I'm always afraid I'm going to have a heart attack." He went on to tell me that he was an insurance adjuster and had handled so many death claims that he had become frightened by the number of men of his age who were experiencing heart attacks. "The doctor says that my heart is in good condition but he told me that if I don't forget this obsessive concern about myself I may indeed have a heart

"If you really want peace of mind,"
"my doctor said," 'you must learn to forget yourself. You can do that by losing yourself in helping the people you contact in the course of your work, people into whose families death or troubles has come. Help them by giving them some faith and courage to take up life again. If you do this, you will forget your own troubles. and you will be released from fear. Then life will become really great."

Life can be a thrilling experience. You do not need to go along with dullness, dissatisfaction, apathy. Get out of your rut, be adventurous. Forget your obsessive concern. Don't be afraid. Live life and enjoy it.

Dozens of changes-some sweeping and others more subtle--are targeted for the area, where U.S. Dist. Judge William M. Taylor Jr. has ordered 28,000 black students to attend 24 allblack schools. Taylor said students would need to be bused too far to adequatly integrate the area.

There will be marked attempts at all grade levels to incorporate black literature, music and art into the curriculum, according to Yvonne Ewell, who has officially assumed the newly created post of assistant superintendent for the all-black subdistrict. Ewell is the older sister of a public school teacher in the Hobbs, N. M. for a number of years.

The new emphasis begining this fall in the area will be on giving black students more options and offering them new images and models, ones different from those carried through social institutions and mass media. Ewell said." The black experience is not poverty, undereducation, drugs and bop music" she added.

The overall focus will be on three areas: creating a climate for learning and at the same time affirming the black experience, getting the greatest possible parent and community participation in the schools and creating a well-oilded instructional delivery great quotes: 'It is sad that emerging African nations have bittered their taste of independence with misguieded use of new power. To deny their skilled athletes the opportunities of youth by competing against those of all other nations was a cruel error judgement". Felix R. McKnight.

More Black Experience: "We have no such things as two races. There are two groups of people, one having African ancestry and the other not. There is no such thing as an American black race. We have all sorts of combinations of people, including Orientals, so our society is diverse and complex. This is a great thing. This country has tried to take these diverse peoples and work out a relationship among them". Dr. Margaret Mead, anthropologist, author, traveler and sage.

The Bellringer's vac-tion in Central and East Texas is winding up and within a few days, will be headed for the great Western Plains and West Texas in particular.

Really one cannot really appreciate what West Texas and Southeastern New Mexico has in the way-of summer climate until he gets to Big D and environs:

It is 85 now at 10 a.m. in Big D believe it or not, Natives don't seem bothered however. I sup-pose one can get used to any type of climate if you live in it for sometime. Until later, see you in West Texas and Peace.

LEWISTON, Maine (AP) - A critically injured explosion and fire victim has been transferred to the Brooke Army Medical Center for further treatment.

Police say they believe the fire at the home of David Svenningsen, 31, of Camden, was caused by arson.

The Central Maine General Hospital here said Friday that Svenningsen was sent to San Antonio, Tex., for specialized treatment.

The hospital said he had second and third degree burns over 60 per cent of his body,

One really bright spot in the cotton picure was the low levels of insect activity noted in most fields.

A large number of bollworm eggs deposited on cotton around July 19 failed to hatch in great numbers due to cool nights and showers washing the eggs off the stalks so that damage was held below 8 percent in most fields checked this week. Very few new eggs were observed so farmers can look to the next several days, at least, with cautious optimism.

One insect that has found the cool, moist nights to its liking is the aphid or plant louse. Aphids are small, delicate and more or less pear-shaped insects very small in size, most species being 1/32 inch or

The life histories with the involved life cycles and relationships of many species are intriguing. Much variation is found in the bioloby of aphids. However, there are certain general biological facts that may be applied to the group as a whole. Aphids usually reproduce parthenogentically (a sexual reproduction) and by giving birth to living young (ovoviviparous reproduction).

With some exceptions, males and eggs of aphids are unkown in the southern states. In the North, aphids reproduce in the spring and summer as they do in the warmer climates; but with most species a generation of true sexual forms, males and females, appears in the fall.

These forms mate and the females lay black, shining, overwintering eggs which hatch the next spring. Aphids have the highest reproductive potential of any insect.

For example, under greenhouse conditions the cotton aphids may complete a maximum of 51 generations in a year with each adult producing about 85 young. Aphids are normally held in check by natural factors. The more important of these are adverse weather conditions such as low temceratures and beating rains, fungus diseases and insect predators and parasites. The most beneficial insect enemies are lady beetles, syrphus fly larvae, aphis lions, and small wasp-like braconid parasites of the subfamily Aphidiinae.

The greenbug is a pale yellowish-green aphid that can be quite damaging to grain sorghums and small grains. This week Charles Neeb, extension entomologist and Dr. George Philley, extension pathologist were in Midland County making a survey and observing results of greenbug resistant grains sorghum hybrids trial plantings established as a part of the Extension Crops program.

The green bug damages plants two ways. First by sucking plant juices and secondly by injecting toxins into the leaf surface which causes destruction of leaf tissue and whole leaves. Grain sorghum that is in the head or bloom stage has moderate to heavy infestations of green bugs in fields spot checked, over the county. Some dying of lower leaves is seen.

An interesting thing noted about the greebug resistant lines being tested in close proximity to the susceptible lines is that not too much difference is noted in populations actually present on the leaves. The difference is that the reistant lines are not affected by the toxins which the greenbug injects.

Good populations of beneficals and predators were noted in all fields and it may be that no control measures will be needed. However, producers are cuationed to keep close watch on populations and damage. On sorghum larger than pre-root stage, treatments should be applied when greenbug numbers are sufficient to cause death of more than two lower normal sized leaves.

Home gardens fall prey to various species of aphids also. Numbers of telephone calls have been received asking about control measures for aphids on such plants as tomatoes, watermelons, cantaloupes, corn, peas and other vegetables.

The two insecticides malathion and diazinon are the most effective for aphid control in vegetables. On most crops these can be safely used within 1 to 5 days of harvest depending on the vegetable.

A lot of gradeners get into problems trying to control aphids with the insecticide carbaryl (Sevin). Sevin is a weak aphicide at best and continual use of this material for worms and caterpillars can, in fact, increase aphid problems.

Child star image upsets State

WASHINGTON - "We are sick and tired of the image of Ambassador Shirley Temple Black now projected as little more than a former Hollywood child star," says one exasperated State Department official. "We wish the press would lay off that line."

The new U.S. Chief of Protocol and former representative at the United Nations and most recently Ambassador to Ghana is described by her associates in diplomacy as "a thorough professional who does her homework."

For her own part Ambassador Black does not mind having her career as Shirley Temple brought up, and has razzed the press for its insistence on refering to her as "a former child movie star." "Secretary Kissinger is a former child and so is President Ford," she once reminded a group of reporters in Ghana.

Shirley Black gave up her movie career in 1949 at the age of 21. That was the year she was divorced from her first husband, actor John Agar Jr. They had been married when she was 17 and had one child. In 1950 she married Charles A. Black who was then in the Navy. He subsequently became a successful businessman and marine biologist. Black will join his wife'here this weekend.

Now 48, Shirley Temple Black is not only exereising her diplomatic skills, but is boning up on her interior design talents for the Washington apartment the Blacks are subletting on Massachusetts Avenue. She obtained a license as a professional interior designer in California in 1954. On a recent California trip she chose carpets and drapes. Furniture will come from California and Ghana.

The Blacks' two children, Charles Jr., 24, and Lori, 22, will stay in the Blacks' California home where Shirley Black's parents live with a housekeeper. Son Charles is thinking of going to graduate school. Lori Black is now in college — but her mother declines. or security reasons, to say where.

Her oldest daughter from her first marriage is erself married and living in Ghana. The Blacks, who owned a house in suburban Bethesda, Md., when they lived here years ago, are

Cherry Jourdel, a dance hall girl. Most Of these parts require strong singing voices in addition to acting talents. In addition, the musical offers a number of smaller speaking parts, and there are parts for male singers as well as female dancers. According to Playhouse director Enid Holm, no parts will be filled until after the tryout series is concluded. Additional information on the musical and the upcoming auditions may be obtained from the theater office, 362-

"The Oldest Living Graduate" is one of three plays in Jones' "Texas-Trilogy" which will be presented on Broadway beginning in early fall. The trilogy has had a highly successful limited run at Washington's Kennedy Center this summer.

Jones is making "Graduate" available to MCT royalty-free for the benefit production. He will come to Midland for the opening performances.

The Theatre Centre box office will open Monday morning to accept seat reservations for the four per-formances of "Graduate." The special production is not part of MCT's regular subscription season, and reserved seat tickets will be $4. Mail orders may be sent to Midland Community Theatre, P. O. Box 4847, Midland 79701.

"The Oldest Living Graduate"

centers around Col. J. C. Kinkaid, the oldest living graduate of a Galveston military school, and the scheme of the old man's son to turn a portion of the colonel's ranchland into a resort. The son and his ambitious wife Maureen reckon without the old man's tenacity and strong will, however.

Mike McLaren is in the pivotal role of the cantankerous old colonel, with Charles Sutton and Douthea Shaner as the son and daughter-in-law. Other cast members are Coila Morrow and Bill Shaner as the Sickengers, friends of the younger Kinkaids; James Buchanan as the commandant of the military school; Gary Askins as Mike Tremaine: Craig Stanford as a military academy cadet, and Kathy Kerth as nurse Claudine Hampton.

The play is recommended for mature audiences because of the "colorful," frequently strong language in the diaglogue.

World Eucharistic Congress to open

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -Thousands of people converged here from around the earth Saturday for a world festival of faith to show God's caring presence among humanity and its needs for "bread" - physical and spiritual.

An estimated million Roman Catholics from many nations and colleagues from other churches were expected for the eight-day 41st International Eucharistic Congress which opens today.

Among the dignitaries on hand to welcome him Saturday at the airport were John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia and the Pope's U.S. delegate, Archbishop Jean Jadot of Washington, D.C.

A huge, two-mile parade through the city will mark the open celebrations today, following a solemn afternoon liturgy led by Cardinal Knox at the Cathedral of Sts. Peter and Paul.

The opening day, like each of the others, is centered on one of the contemporary human hungers - the first one dealing with the hunger for God. "It is a paradox of our age of abun-

But that's how it was planned.

"You won't see any dramatic change in his position" as a result of the briefings. Eizenstat said in an interview. "But they accomplish their purpose: to focus his attention on the range of options available to him and what consequences those options would have.

"He was given a complete background in each area so he would have as much information as possible," Eizenstat added. "The goal was not to come up with specific decisions on how to handle issues, but to expose him to varying points of view." And that's how Carter wanted it, the Atlanta at-

New try slated in flu impasse

WASHINGTON (AP) - A new effort will be made this week to give a shot in the arm to the government's troubled swine flu immunization program. which is bogged down over insurance protection for vaccine manufacturers.

The insurance industry was given a Monday deadline to report progress on its discussions of ways to furnish the manufacturers with $50 million in coverage and to report to Secretary David Mathews of Health, Education and Welfare, Mathews is scheduled to forward his own recommendation to

The government's plan has been to purchase 215 million doses of vaccine, at about 50 cents a dose, to immunize most Americans against a possible swine flu outbreak similar to the 1918-19 pandemic that killed 20 million persons.

Closed-door negotiations with insurance, pharmaceutical and public health officials Friday failed to produce agreement on a liability insurance package for the four drug companies that have expressed reluctance to sell their vaccine to the government without a buffer against injury claims.

gram makes it difficult to insure. Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla., broke a deadlock a week ago when he called all the parties together before his House health subcommittee and won agreement from the manufacturers to keep producing vaccine and from the insurers to work out liability

One of Sir Walter's descendants finally makes it

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) - Sir Walter Raleigh, if you recall your history, sent expeditions to colonize the New World, but never made it himself.

It wasn't that he didn't try. It's just that Good Queen Bess (Elizabeth I) wanted Sir Walter close at hand, an exercise in jealousy which proved futile, as Raleigh eventually married one of the queen's courtiers

But four centuries later, one of Raleigh's descendants finally made

He is Lord Lothian, who was in this country in connection with the Bicentennial. When he set foot on Roanoke Island he was the first of Raleigh's lineage to actually visit the site of Raleigh's doomed "lost colony," which vanished without a trace almost 400 years ago.

Lord Lothian's visit to this tiny island just inside the sandy islands known as the Outer Banks, came 389 years after his ancestor tried and failed to establish a permanent English colony in North America.

Raleigh's second and final attempt at colonization for the Crown in 1587 ended in the stranding of over 100 men, women and children on Roanoke Island two full decades before the successful colonization attempt at Jamestown. But Raleigh's colony vanished from the island and from the pages of history without a trace.

Lord Lothian, a former British Cabinet member, found things on Roanoke Island a bit more pleasant than Raleigh might have found them. Instead of hostile Indians, he found a welcoming delegation and the press. Instead of battling his way through mosquito-infested pine and live oak forests, he was whisked by car across the island. After a visit to the Elizabethan Garden and to the site of a fort built by Raleigh's soldiers in 1585, the Fort Raleigh National Historic Site, he lunched on shrimp salad and avocado at an oceanside

Instead of being stranded on the island for years without communication from Mother England, he boarded a plane supplied by the State of North Carolina, and was whisked back to Raleigh, the state capital named for his ancestor; then home to Chelsea via Washington.

But some ghosts of the past did rise to haunt him, in a figurative manner At the Waterside Theater, where the people of Roanoke Island stage the outdoor drama "The Lost Colony," annually, Sir Walter's descendant met Sir Walter himself, or a reasonable facsimile thereof.

The facsimile was a young actor from Montgomery, Ala., Stephen A. Carlson. Carlson plays the role of Sir Walter Raleigh in "The Lost Colony," written in 1937 by Paul Green to commemorate the memory of Sir Walter's ill-fated band of colonists.

Lord Lothian, a genial type, donned Sir Walter's (Carlson's) hat, and toyed around with the prop sword, all in the spirit of publicity.

Carlson (Sir "Walter) bowed low, and joked about his imitation of an English accent.

As the two men talked they were buffeted by the same strong chilly northeast wind that may have prevented several rescue expeditions from reaching the stranded colonists.

which runs through August 28.

Only the wind and the mystery of the fate of the hapless men, women and children remained.

California antismog officials may change Alaska oil route

California antismog officials block construction of a tanker terminal for Alaskan oil, the oil may be shipped through the Panama Canal to the Gulf Coast for awhile

That was the message Federal Energy Administration chief Frank ve Tom Quinn, chairman of the California Air Resources Board, an FEA spokesman and Quinn reported Friday.

Zarb met with Quinn and other state officials in San Francisco Thursday to discuss Quinn's objections to a Standard Oil of Ohio proposal for a tanker terminal in Long Beach.

Quinn, an appointee of Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., says the state ARB will refuse to issue a permit to the oil company unless the federal govern-

Without those restrictions, Quinn says, fumes from the tankers would wreck efforts to reduce smog in the Los Angeles Basin.

Oil from Alaska's North Slope is scheduled to be ready for shipping in September 1977, federal officials say. They say the Long Beach terminal

But Quinn said he and Public Utilities Commission member Leonard Ross, another Brown appointee, asked Zarb to consider another alternative, selling some of the oil to Japan.

Zarb said overseas sale of the oil was barred by law, but agreed to study the question anyway. Quinn said. California no longer needs the oil as it did when the law was passed, the state official added.

He also said Zarb reported that the Coast Guard was working on regulations to restrict the "purging"

Fewer rigs dig more oil wells

By MAX B. SKELTON AP Oil Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - Oil and gas explorers are using fewer drilling rigs this year but drilling a larger number

During the first six months of the year the domestic industry completed about 20,000 wells while using an average of 1,561 rotary drilling rigs. During the same 1975 period the rig average was 1,615 as only 17,600 wells

Ed McGhee, executive vice president of the International Association of Drilling Contractors, says part of the reason for this year's trend can be found in a more stable labor situation in drilling operations.

"The key factor, however, is probably the reduction in deep-well drilling," McGhee said. "Deep-hole rigs are stacked in West Texas, New Mexico, and the Rocky Mountain McGhee said a rig grinding away on an 18,000 to 20,000 foot natural gas prospect adds one number each week to the active rig count.

"By year end, however, it probably has put only two numbers into the well completions column," he said.

"This contrasts with the mobile unit punching down 6,000 -foot wells. Only one number shows up the rig column each week, but 20 to 30 wells are added to the year's completions total."

McGhee said that through June contractors had reported no renewal of interest in deep well prospects. Most of the deep tests, he said, involve only natural gas potential and producers are discouraged over prospects for deregulation of federal wellhead price controls.

In its midyear report edition, the Oil and Gas Journal forecasts the industry will drill 41.317 wells with an average depth of 4.661 feet this year compared with 39,097 completions and a 4,566 foot average last year.

The Journal said the 1976 results were being obtained through greater productivity from each rig.

"In the drilling business, the barometer everyone watches is the rotary rig count," the Journal reported.

"During the first four months of this year, the decline in the count raised questions about well forecasts. But in the past few weeks this count has passed the 1,500-rig mark again and with the usual seasonal upturn in the making, the industry should have no trouble acheiving its forecasts this

In its midyear outlook report, World Oil magazine made an upward revision in its 1976 forecast, saying the industry would complete 41,451 wells, 1,907 high than had been forecast in January.

"First half statistics indicate much improved productivity in terms of hole drilled per rig and wells com-pleted per rig." World Oil reported.

"Better drilling rates may be attributed to use of the best available equipment-older rigs were stacked and more new, highly mobile rigs were available-better trained and paid manpower, operations in 'fast' drilling areas, and elimination of most supply shortages."

The publication attributed the rig count decline in the first six nonths of the year to industry uncertainty prompted by the extension of oil price controls and congressional failure to deregulate wellhead prices for interstate natural gas sales.

The bellwether is gasoline demand, according to a special mid-year report in the weekly business magazine's July 26 issue. Gasoline usage is expected to hit more than 7 million barrels daily, a 5.2 per cent

That's a record, and marks a sharp recovery from 1974's post-embargo low of 6.57 million barrels daily, the World-wide petroleum demand also is gaining. Western Europe will use more than 13.9 million barrels daily this year, a 5 per cent increase which reverses declines of 6.6 per cent in 1974 and 6.5 per cent in 1975. Japan will use about 5.3 million barrels daily, also a 5 per cent jump halting a two-year slide.

American refineries are expected to meet the record demand with unprecedented runs of 13.2 million barrels daily this year, up 6.2 per cent. That's well within capacity. which will climb more than a million channel additional supplies into the interstate stream and encourage producers to step up their hunt for The commissioners also reasoned

that higher prices would cause some consumers, such as big industrial plants and others, to switch to other types of fuels and that it would make everyone more conscious of the need to avoid wasting energy supplies.

No one on the commission made any guarantee that the new approach would work, certainly not overnight. But what they did say, in effect, was that energy costs are rising and undoubtedly will continue to rise and that to ignore this fact of economic life would be unrealistic.

Here, then was the course of action

It boosted the national price ceiling from 52 cents to $1.42 for gas from wells started after Jan. 1, 1975, and to $1.01 for gas from wells drilled during 1973 and 1974.

This is immediately interpreted by some as almost tripling the cost of the gas to the consumer. The fact is, it did no such thing

For one thing, the wellhead price paid to the producer is only a part of the final price the consumer pays. The remainder goes for the crosscountry transportation of the gas and for the cost of distributing the gas inside a city or town to the residential and other users. FPC's action last week affected only the wellhead price, not the cost of transporting or distributing the gas.

Furthermore, the amount of gas eligible for the new prices is only a fraction of a transmission company's total supply of gas. Most of its gas comes from producing areas that were found and developed long before 1973 and that gas was contracted for at a much lower price. (The national price ceiling for "old" - pre-1973 - gas is 29.5 cents.) The immediate impact on the consumer, therefore, will be relatively mild, averaging around $6 to. $25 a year higher for the homeowner, depending on whether he lives in a warm or cold part of the nation and depending on how much gas he consumes. Even this amount, when multiplied by the millions of gas consumers, adds up to a tidy sum. The FPC estimated the total for the first year at $1.5 billion. However, it also pointed out that the government would be the biggest beneficiary. getting about 55 cents out of each dollar increase in taxes. Higher costs, including cost of materials and labor. will consume another 25 cents, leaving the producer the remaining 20 cents of each dollar to help finance his hunt for more gas.

FPC also pointed out that even at the higher price the consumer will be paying, he will still be getting a bargain by comparison to other possible sources of supply.

For example, the cost of synthetic gas is much higher, as is the cost of gas imported in liquefied form from overseas, or even natural gas shipped in by pipeline from Canada. It is a bargain, too, compared to the equivalent energy in a barrel of im-

All in all, the FPC decided on the new price levels because it had become convinced that was the common sense thing to do.

It remains to be seen whether Congress, the courts and the public agree. If so, this nation may be on the verge of an all-out effort to solve its energy supply problems by the simply expedient of developing its domestic resources to the fullest extent

It's actually an old-fashioned idea: An attempt to let the law of supply and demand work. Not entirely, of course, because that would mean total price decontrol and the nation or at least Washington - does not appear willing to go that far yet.

In the meanwhile, the bold step by the Federal Power Commission last week is a reasonable fascimile of the law of supply and demand in

2 million federal pensioners laugh at inflation

By PAUL E. STEIGER

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - While most retired people have watched in dread over recent years as the flames of inflation have licked away at the purchasing power of their pensions, one select group of retirees has been able to watch the conflagration with equanimity, even pleasure.

That group consists of 2 million retired federal workers. Not only have they been protected from inflation - many of them actually have profited from it.

The reason is a little-known provision of federal law: the socalled 1 per cent kicker.'

Under it, every time the cost of living rises 3 per cent or more, each federal pensioner's monthly check is increased by that amount, PLUS an additional percentage point. Thus, if consumer prices rise 3.5 per cent, the checks are boosted 4.5 per cent.

To the Ford Administration, Congress's General Accounting Office and many outside analysts, the kicker provision is an egregious loophole

conferring unique special privileges

on a single group of pensioners.
"It,s manifestly unfair," argues
Rep. Brock Adams (D-Wash.), chairman of the House Budget Committee. "It's unfair to the millions of nonfederal retirees who don't receive such a benefit. And it's unfair to the taxpayers who have to

To retired federal civilian and military personnel and their families, however, the 1 per cent kicker is a cherished benefit, one which they are prepared to use their considerable muscle at the polls to defend. And with a fierce effort, they have brought themselves close to winning its retention for at least another year.

In his January budget message to Congress, President Ford recommended wiping out the provision. In its May resolution setting preliminary spending and revenue targets for the coming fiscal year, Congress assumed that legislation repealing the provision would be enacted.

But a massive letter-writing and lobbying blitz by organizations representing present and future pensioners has blunted the en-

Congress for killing out the benefit. Four times in the last six weeks, the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee has failed to muster the quorum needed to vote on measures to eliminate the kicker.

Despite the committee's failure to act, proponents of such a bill have pressured House leaders to schedule a vote on the issue Monday, but only under a special parliamentary procedure requiring a two-thirds vote for passage. If that move fails, the matter is probably dead for this year.

The kicker provision was installed in 1969. It drew little attention then, because inflation was relatively modest and costs were not great. As inflation has mounted, however, that has changed. In the seven years since the kicker went into effect, it has added $5 billion to the costs of federal retirement programs. Meanwhile, the disparity between retired from federal service has become increasingly dramatic.

the lot of most retirees and those

Most private pensions are not adjusted for inflation at all. Social Security and a few nonfederal pension programs (primarily in state and local governments) call for regular adjustments to catch up with in-creases in the cost of living. None, aside from the federal plan, calls for regular boosts in excess of the inflation rate, according to a recent survey of 1,800 pension programs.

By contrast, since November, 1969, monthly checks to federal retirees have been boosted 71.7 per cent, compared with a rise of less than 52 per cent in the U.S. Labor Department's consumer price index.

Defenders of the kicker mount several arguments in behalf of its retention.

In the first place, they say, the kicker was installed because there is a five-month delay between the time the cost of living rises 3 per cent or more and the time the pension boost actually shows up in retirees' checks. In the meantime, they argue, the cost of living continues to rise - often by as much-as, or more than, 1 per cent.

Second, defenders of the kicker say, the delay in inaugurating cost-ofliving increases means that, calculated month by month, the pensions of some federal retirees that would be necessary to maintain the purchasing power they had when they first retired.

For example, officials of the 250,000-member National Assn. of Retired Federal Employees here have calculated that a federal worker who retired in February, 1973, with a $400 monthly pension would have had that monthly check increased by 27.8 per cent two years later, somewhat above the 23.1 per cent increase in the cost of living over that period.

But because of delays in implementing the pension increases, the association notes. the retiree's total pension income over the two years would have amounted to $10,999 - 1.2 per cent less than the amount necessary to keep him strictly even with inflation over the entire period.

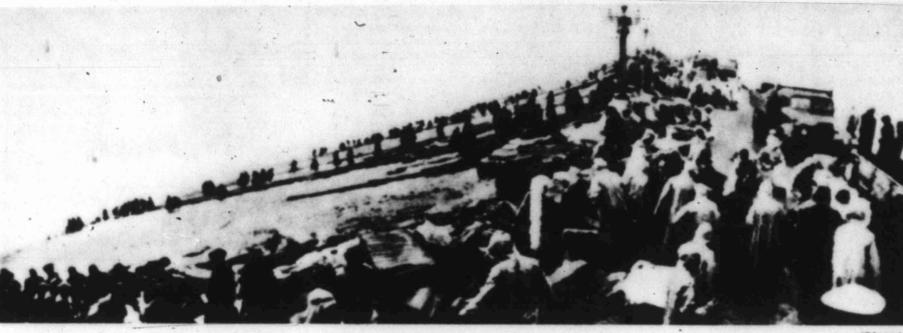

Critics of the kicker acknowledge that these arguments have some validity, but only with respect to pensioners who have been on the rolls a relatively short time. The longer a person has been retired, the further ahead he is likely to be, particularly in periods of rapid inflation. With mathematical magic, the 1 per cent

extra increases rapidly begin mounting up, compounding on one another like interest owned a loan

Thus, if the National Assn. of Retired Employees had carried through its example for another year, it would have found its hypothetical pensioner arready ahead of the game and gaining fast.

Furthermore, said R. E. Shelton, a GAO official who worked on the agency's study of the d per cent kicker, all this analysis leaves out another, lesser known provision under which employees who retire from federal service the day before a cost-of-living pension increase is due to take effect - an increasingly popular practice - receive the full increase PLUS the previous cost-ofliving boost. Consequently, they may start off retirement with pensions as much as 10 per cent higher than called for by their years of service and peak

This provision may turn out to be almost as costly as the 1 per cent kicker, Shelton said. The GAO report recommended its repeal, but so far there has been no serious move in Congress to take such action.

Congress working on earthquake program

By BARTON REPPERT

WASHINGTON (AP) - Congress is putting final touches on legislation to create a fullscale, coordinated program aimed at reducing earthquake hazards and developing the capability to predict quakes accurately before they strike.

Passage of the legislation appears virtually assured in view of concern over this week's major earthquakes in northeast China, disasters elsewhere around the world and the possibility of a sizable quake in southern California.

The Senate adopted without objection in May a bill to expand current U.S. earthquake research activities, while the House is finishing work on a similar measure to set up a "comprehensive national program of earthquake hazard reduction.

In addition to predicting of quakes, the program would call for steps including improved building construction methods, coordinated

Main provisions of the House are similar to the alreadypassed Senate measure, authored by Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif.

Tim Lynch, an aide to Brown, said he expects that the House bill can betailored so it is acceptable to the Senate without a formal Senate-House conference, thus making final congressional passage of the earthquake legislation likely before the end of August.

However, Lynch noted that it was still uncertain what kind of reception the bill will get at the White House.

Chinese huddle while awaiting predicted quake

TOKYO (AP) - On sidewalks, in parks and on public squares, millions of Chinese sweltered through Peking's 95degree heat Saturday, slept in tents and lean-tos and waited for a new earthquake.

What happened to millions of others caught by Wednesday's major tremors in the cities and countryside of Hopeh Province in northeastern China remained largely unknown to the outside world. But Chinese refugees from Tangshan, a city of one million people near the epicenter of the quakes, said many had met a 'disastrous fate." according to Japanese news reports.

More than 80 per cent of Tangshan's buildings collapsed, the reports said. The Swiss Embassy in Peking messaged home that by "the most people were killed Wednesday. The Peking correspondent of one Japanese newspaper quoted Chinese sources as saying it was "the biggest natural calamity in several hundred years in China. Bulgaria's charge d'affaires in Peking, Dobri Donchev, was told by a senior Chinese Foreign Ministry official it was feared that one million persons might have been injured or killed by the quakes, Bulgaria's government news agency BTA said its Peking correspondent reported:

BTA said the official told Donchev that "all previous earthquakes were nothing in comparison. The Peking government has not announced official figures on casualties and damage. It is known that the quakes caused extensive damage to the city of Tientsin, with four million people China's third largest, and some damage in Peking, just 80 miles Chinese authorities warned

Saturday of possible strong af-tershocks "within a day or two" in the same region, according to Japanese reports. They said the new tremors rnight reach 7 on the Richter scale, strong enough to cause further rnassive damage.

Foreign offers of aid continued to pour into Peking, and the Chinese government continued to decline

Two bitter adversaries of Communist China offered help or condolences. The Nationalist Chinese Free China Relief Association said it would ask the International Red Cross to forward relief supplies to the mainland. The Soviet government sent a note of condolence to the Chinese. In declining other offers, the Chinese have said it is their policy not to accept foreign aid.

Systematic efforts, luck solve bus case

By MIKE DUNSTAN

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) - Investigators credit informants, chance and old-fashioned detective work for the roundup of three men in the daylight kidnap of 26 children and their school bus driver.

"It hasn't all come easily," said Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins. "It's taken a lot of hard-nosed investigative work, a bit of luck, and the public's help to get where we are now."

The mass abduction unfolded quickly July 15 from first reports of the missing school bus to the realization in this tiny Madera County farm town that its children had been kidnaped for reasons unknown.

The investigation spread quickly from Chowchilla to northern California, Nevada, Idaho and Canada, but it would be 15 frantic days before the low-key apprehension of the last of three young men from the wealthy communities on the peninsula south of San Francisco - Frederick N. Woods and James Schoenfeld, both 24, and Schoenfeld's 22-year-old brother, Richard.

THE FIRST BREAK in the case came within hours of the children's disappearance when a Madera owner's son, Frederick N. Woods. County sheriff's deputy spotted the hijacked bus shrouded by bamboo in a dry slough 4 miles south of

By nightfall, deputies had found tire tracks and authorities throughout the state were alerted that a light truck or van was apparently used in the kidnap. Early the next day, a Friday, an important clue came from a woman who gave authorities a description and complete license plate number of one of two vans in which she had seen suspicious-acting drivers. The license number matched a partial number

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your present setup bores you and you and to tackle something new but this would be bad for you. Not a supplied by another woman who reported seeing two strange vans the day of and prior to the abduction.

A widespread search was launched to find the vehicle and its owner, and the case burst wide open Friday night as the jubilant message bulletined across the country - the children and bus driver had been found alive and unharmed in a buried moving van at a Livermore rock and gravel quarry.

NOW INVESTIGATORS could learn some details of the seemingly well-planned abduction. The children and bus driver also provided the first descriptions of the kidnapers and descriptions of their vehicles - including a partial license plate number that again matched those of the other in-

Other breaks came the next day. Security Eve Patrol, a private firm which guards the Livermore quarry, told authorities that three young men were questioned in mid-November 1975 when they were reportedly caught digging a trench in the quarry with a bulldozer.

The only name recorded in the incident was that of Investigators that same day searched records in Sacramento and found a van matching the license number from informants and one other that had been registered two days before the abduction under a ficticious name and address.

WITHIN HOURS, the two vans were traced to an Oakland military surplus supplies dealer who reportedly said he had sold the vans to one of his regular customers - Woods.

By Sunday, authorities had run a check on Woods' criminal record and found he had been arrested at Downieville in Sierra County with two friends, James and Richard Schoenfeld, for allegedly stripping an old auto.

The three pleaded guilty to a lesser charge, were fined and given one-year's probation, which they all successfully completed.

On Monday, Canadian authorities reported that Schoenfeld had been turned away at the border July 19 while trying to enter Cascade, Canada, from Washington State. Authorities said he admitted to Canadian border guards that he had a criminal record and was carrying three handguns and a rifle-

AS CLUES PILED up, authorities obtained a search warrant for the Woods' family 80-acre estate on the San Francisco Peninsula.

During that search and others, authorities found a van similar to the one in which the kidnap victims were imprisoned, a gun collection which Wood had kept, and dozens of junked automobiles that Woods and the Schoenfelds reportedly tinkered with.

The San Francisco Examiner and the Oakland Tribune have quoted sources as saying a note demanding $5 million ransom was found at the estate, and the Redwood City Tribune quoted sources as saying authorities found the names of all 27 kidnap victims scribbled on a paper bag at the Woods estate. Another source confirmed the report to The Associated Press.

The kidnap victims told investigators they were each asked their name and age before being forced DAY into their underground prison, but bus driver Ed Ray said he never saw the names being written.

During a search of a San Jose warehouse, rented in Woods' name, authorities discovered two vans believed to have been used in the abduction and a car painted completely black.

LATE IN THE AFTERNOON July 23, authorities were surprised when an attorney walked into the offices of Alameda County Dist. Atty. Lowell Jensen to surrender his client, Richard Schoenfeld.

The search pressed on for the two remaining suspects, with confirmed sightings of James Schoenfeld in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, and Washington State. There was no sign of Woods.

In another surprise, James Schoenfeld was spotted July 29 in the San Francisco Bay area driving a van with Idaho license plates. Police chased-and caught the van in Menlo Park, 25 miles south of San Francisco. He was arrested without a struggle.

Later, William Gagen, James Schoenfeld's at-torney, said the youth had planned to surrender to authorities later that same morning.

The next major break came five hours later when Canadian authorities in Vancouver, acting on an FBI tip, captured Woods at a post office. Again, the suspect gave up without a struggle.

RICHARD SCHOENFELD pleaded innocent Wednesday in Chowchilla to 43 charges of kidnaping and robbery. He is at the Alameda County Jail in James Schoenfeld and Woods both face arraignment on the same charges this week. James Schoenfeld is at the Alameda County Jail in Oakland. Woods, now in custody in Sacramento, is to be turned over the Madera County authorities on Monday for arraignment in Chowchilla Roil for each man has been set at $1 million is the new manager of the Oasis Club and he is very anxious to meet all Midlanders. Carl hails from San Antonio and has been here only a short 2 months but already brags about the Permian Basin area like a native.

For a fun evening the Oasis Club has "Happy Hour" daily from 5:30 to 7:30. and for a dinner treat for the entire family Carl suggest you try one of more of the food specialities: Shrimp, Fresh Catfish, Steak, Mexican Food. You'll love

Come out soon! Meet Carl, order your favorite food and beverage and enjoy it in a most pleasing atmosphere.

Americans fly to 400 meter relay win

MONTREAL (AP) — The United States won the men's 400-meter relay in the Olympics Saturday with Millard Hampton and Steve Riddick running two blazing legs at the end. John Walker of New Zealand won the 1,500-meter run, which could have been the glamor race of these Games.

The American relay victory was the fourth straight U.S. gold medal in this event over the past 16 years but the winning time of 38.33 seconds was just short of the world mark of 38.19 set in the 1972 Games.

Leadoff runner Harvey Glance of Auburn University got off to a comparatively slow start but then got moving before passing the baton to Johnny Jones of Lampasas, Tex. Jones ran a strong second leg but Hampton, of UCLA, really turned it on in the third leg and Riddick, of Philadelphia, gained two or three yards on the handoff and zoomed home like a rocket ahead of East Germany and Russia, the silver and bronze medal winners.

Flyweight boxer Leo Randolph, a high school student from Tacoma, Wash., used accurate punching tok win a gold medal, with a 3-2 decision over Ramon Duvalon of Cuba. Duvalon suffered a costly penalty point for butting in the 112-pound class

John Peterson of Comstock, Wis., won the gold medal in the 180.4-pound class of freestyle wrestling, outpointing Mehmet Uzun of Turkey 13-5 in the final match.

East Germany, benefiting from a brilliant anchor leg by Barbell Eckert, won the women's 400-meter relay in 42.55 seconds. West Germany was second, the Soviet Union, third.

This was supposed to be one of the greatest races of all time, a match between Walker and Bayi, who have split the only two races they have run against each other. In the second one, in the Commonwealth Games in New Zealand in 1974, Bayi beat Walker and set a world record of 3:32.2. Walker ran the second fastest 1,500 in history in that race and finished second.

That set up what would have been an Olympics dream race. But Bayi never made it to these one of the 27 African nations which pulled out of the Olympics to protest racial segregation in South Africa. Observers at the stadium felt that Bayi would have been 10 yards out in front of the pack shortly after the start of Saturday's race. That would have forced the others to keep up despite the rain. As it was, no one seemed to want the lead and Walker didn't have to make his move until the backstretch in the last lap.

He started his big move at about the same place he would have had to start it against Bayi, but the pace of the race probably would have been five seconds faster if the Tanzanian had seen in it, and a world record could have resulted.

"If Bayi wants to call himself the best in the world, he's got to get out and face me," Walker said. But reports from Tanzania early this week indicated that the Tanzanian government would prevent BAYI FROM RACing Walker in the Dream Mile Triple, the first race of which is scheduled for Aug. 4 in Philadelphia.

Ivo Van Damme of Belgium ran second Saturday and Paul Heinz-Wellman of West Germany was third. Rick Wohlhuter of Chicago was sixth. Another political battle marred the Olympics Friday and Saturday when the Russians threatened to pull out if Canada did not return a 17-year-old diver who defected. Finally the Soviet delegation decided to stay in the Games after the International Olympic Committee pleaded with them.

THE FATE of the diver, Sergei Nemtsanov, was still uncertain. Canadian officials said he was traveling with a friend in central Canada, but said they would ask him the next time he showed up if he would like to talk to Soviet officials with a Canadian observer on hand.

A Canadian Immigration Department spokesman said there was a low-key search on for Nemtsanov. But an official of the External Affairs Ministry in Ottawa said Canada "certainly would not give back the diver' if this was a condition of continued sports relations with the Soviet Union.

"He is free to do what he wants," the spokesman said.

THE RUSSIANS contended Nemtsanov was too young to make such a decision for himself and produced letters they said were from his mother and grandmother begging the Canadians to send him home.

Russia won three of the five gold medals awarded Saturday in the men's 1,000-meter canoe and kayak races. Sergej Petrenko and Aleksandr Vinogrodov won their second gold in the canoe doubles. Sergey Nagorny and Vladimir Romanovsky took the kayak doubles and the four-man team nipped the Spanish boat in the fours race. Matija Ljubek of Yugoslavia won his country's first gold medal ever in Olympic canoeing in the singles final. Rudiger Helms of East Germany took the kayak singles. Americans won no medals in the boat

Dwight Stones of Huntington Beach, Conn., clears the high jump bar in his first attempt Saturday at the Montreal Olympics.

Whiteside holds slim edge in R-T city meet

By Bruce Campbell

Steve Whiteside's obsession with 68s earned him a one-shot lead over defending champion Steve Cromwell after 36 holes of the Reporter-Telegram City Golf Championship at Hogan Park Saturday.

Whiteside, as he did in the opening round Friday, came in with a threeunder 68 to stand at 136 going into the final 18 today. Cromwell also shot a 68 to go along with a previous 69 for a

With their 68s, Cromwell and Whiteside tied for medalist honors and the medalist trophy will be decided today when the pair tees off with Terry Lester at 1:27 p.m.

Lester, who shared the lead with Whiteside after the first round, shot a one-under par 70 Saturday to be at 138 and a sole posession of third place going into the final showdown.

ROYCE WOOLARD, who shot another even par 71, was in fourth at 142 while Hal Hutchens was fifth at 143. Hutchens skied to a two-over par 73 Saturday after shooting a 70 the opening day. Also in contention are Michael Courter at 145 and Pat Shaunessy at

Whiteside took sole posession of the lead when he birdied the second hole but Cromwell moved into a shortlived tie with a birdie of his own on the

But on the seventh Whiteside regained the lead with a par while Cromwell recorded one of his two bogeys of the day.

The leader increased his lead on the eighth with one of his four birdies of the day but Lester also birdied the hole to remain one stroke back of Whiteside.

Things remained the same on the leader board until Lester bogeyed the 12th to go two strokes behind the pacesetter.

CROMWELL moved into a tie for the lead after 14 when he birdied the 13th and Whiteside got his only bogey of the round on the 14th.

- But history repeated itself as Cromwell shot himself out of the lead the next hole with a bogey five. Lester, who had also gained a stroke on the 14th, fell back to two again when he also bogeyed the hole.

Lester proceeded to lose another stroke to both Whiteside and Cromwell when he bogeyed the 16th but he finished with a charge by birding both the 17th and 18th while Whiteside and

Cromwell came in with a birdie and a par respectfully.

A sixth on the par-five opening hole proved costly to Hutchens, who had a two-over 38 on the front nine but equaled Whiteside's even par 35 on

WOOLARD EQUALED his consistency of the day before touring both sides of the 6,320-yard, par 71 course in even par. Woolard had four birdies for the round but that was offset by two bogeys and a double-bogey on the Shaunessy and Courter, both of whom shot 72s on Friday, couldn't quite keep up their opening day pace. Shaunessy shot a 74 while Courter came in with a 73 recovering from a 38 on the front nine.

A tight struggle was developing in the first flight of the tournamemt which opened play Saturday along with the second and third flights.

WARREN TEICHMANN shot a 76 to take the first flight lead but a trio of players, Jerry W. Davis, Tom Pickering and David Koening were right behind at 77 and another five

In the third flight, Melvin F. Mattina held a three-stroke lead, over John Hill with a 84. Play will start at 11:20 a.m. today with titles at stake in all flights. An awards banquet will be held tonight at 8 p.m. at the Ranchland Hill Country Club. J.F. McAdams will be the guest speaker and trophies will be awarded to all champions.

Covert, Murphy combine to muffle Midland Cubs

BY TED BATTLES

Lefthander George "Heat" Riley made his Texas League debut and looked pretty good for five innings. Unfortunately, he drew Mark Covert as a hill opponent and was simply overmatched.

In squaring his record at 5-5, Covert, a seventh year pro from Boulder, Colo., had a no-hitter going through five innings, a two hitter through seven when the Cubs finally scored and a four-hitter cooking when Mike Murphy came on in the eighth to get the game's final five outs.

Covert probably wouldn't have needed anybody's help, except that he walked nine batters, five in the seventh and eighth and it's a little habit like this that probably is keeping the 24-year-old righthander out of the majors.

WITH A major league fastball (89 mph compared to Randy Jones' 73 mph hummer), Covert mainly needs to develop consistency, which is the problem of so many hurlers at the AA

Riley, a 6-4, 19-year-old from South Philadelphia, joined the Cubs as a replacement for Dave Geisel. Earlier this season, George fired a no-hitter at the Fort Lauderdale Yankees.

He dueled Covert until the fifth when Jim Riggleman singled and scored on an infield grounder after Riley's wild pick off throw to first allowed the Traveler off throw to first

A three-run sixth in which Tito Landrum doubled to start things probably sewed it up for the Travelers who were closing out the Texas League series with a 7-2 win at Cubs

A couple of walks loaded the bases and Nick Leyva, the hero the night before with a three-run homer, hit a two-run double. Then Riggleman made it 4-0 with a double.

THREE MORE runs in the seventh chased Riley and left the Cubs behind 7-0 before they managed to scratch. Mike Bialas opened the Traveler seventh with a single, Covert was hit by a pitch and Bernie Beckman relieved Riley. A walk, sacrifice fly. walk and single by Oberkfell brought on Gary Junge, who finally got Riggleman to ground into a double

After scrounging around for a shutout spoiling run in the seventh, it looked like Midland might take advantage of Covert's wildness in the eighth. Bill Huisman singled and Ed Putman doubled against the wall in center for the run. Covert fanned Mike Gordon, but walked Scott Thompson and Earle Chew to load the

In came Mike Murhpy to throw one pitch and get Bob Hrapmann to wrap into a double play.

Mac McLendon captures Pleasant Valley lead

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) - Veteran Mac McLendon charged in front with four birdies and then turned conservative in protecting a one-stroke lead over surging Lee Elder Saturday after 54 holes in the $200,000 Pleasant

Valley Golf Classic. McLendon parred each of the final nine holes after seizing the lead to finish the third round with a fourunder par 67 and a 54-hole total of 204, nine strokes under regulation for the distance on the 7,119-yard Pleasant Valley Country Club course. Elder, who tuned up for his visit by playing a friendly game with President Ford last Sunday, started the third round two strokes off the pace but quickly made up ground. He had six birdies and one boegy in his 66, sending him into the final round with a score of 205.

Bob Menne, a former club pro in nearby Andover, and Bud Allin joined in the birdie spree to remain in close contention. Menne equalled the tie with Menne. Rex Caldwell, a second year pro tourist, and Ben Crenshaw, the leading money winner on the circuit this year, managed no better than par 71 and slipped from a share of the 36hole lead. They reached the 54hole stage with 208s, locked in a tie with Bruce Lietzke, who had a 68, and Tom Jenkins, who had a 69.

LOUISVILLE (AP) - Twelfthseeded Dick Stockton earned a berth in the semifinals of the $125,000 Louisville International Tennis Classic Saturday with a 6-4, 6-2 upset of top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of

Stockton's opponent Sunday will be fourth-seeded Harold Solomon, a 6-2, 6-4 winner over Chile's sixth-seeded

The other semifinal will feature eighth-seeded Stan Smith against Poland's 13th-seeded Wojtek Fibak. Smith defeated third-seeded Raul Ramirez of Mexico 3-6, 6-3, 6-1 while Fibak beat Pafaquay's unseeded Victor Pecci 6-2, 0-6, 7-6.

In doubles competition Saturday. Byron Bertram and Pat Cramer of Australia defeated Dick Crealy and Buster Mottram of Great Britain 6-3, 8-3: Ross Case and Geoff Masters of Australia defeated Tom Gorman and Bob Carmichael of Australia 6-3, 6-0, and Colin Dibley of Australia and Sashi Menon of India defeated Mark Edmondson of Ausstralia and John Marks of Great Britain 75, 4-6, 7-6.

"I'was able to serve and volley with Vilas with a great deal of success," said Stockton. "I tried very hard to keep the ball in play and wait for my opportunity. I was very successful on the important points.

"I was able to hold my serve all during the match, while Guillermo had trouble with his," Stockton ad-ded. Stockton broke Vilas' service four times during the match, three of the breaks coming in the second set.

Smith, meanwhile, went to the net to score his win over Ramirez. Smith's strong attack in the last two sets caused his Mexican opponent to make several mistakes.

"I played a good game to start off the second set, and after that I just kept attacking the net," said Smith. "He made some errors and I took advantage of them."

United States never accepted cage defeat

MONTREAL (AP) - Somewhere in the United States today there are a dozen teenagers in different towns and cities, practicing to perfect their basketball skills.

They don't know who they are. No one knows who they are. But in 1980, they will be known to the world. They will be gathered and given the mission of defending America's Olympic basketball gold medal.

It won't be easy

THE BASKETBALL gold has been considered Uncle Sam's manifest destiny in the Olympic Games. The victory of the American team at the 1976 Games was the eighth time in nine Olympics that the United States has won the title. The exception was the 1972 Games at Munich, when the Soviet Union won a controversial onepoint decision that the United States has never quite accepted.

Many Americans attached a revenge motive to the 1976 tournament-a chance to meet and beat the Russians for the gold they believe they should have won in 1972. And it is true that half the Soviet players in Montreal played for their country in

BUT THE United States players-the Scott Mays and Adrian Dantleys, the Phil Fords and Quinn Buckners-didn't share that revenge motive. They were kids nobody had heard of in 1972. They didn't feel involved in that disappointment.

And that is just the point. Many of the players on the teams that lost to the Americans at Montreal will be involved in Moscow in 1980, just as they were involved at Munich.

The Yugoslavian team which bowed to the United States in the gold-medal game had four players from the 1972 team. The Montreal tournament's high scorer, Ed Palubinskas of Australia, was the second-high scorer at Munich. Puerto Rico had eight players with Olympic experience. Italy had nine. Czechoslovia had six. more new faces to go against the career "students" who populate the national teams of many other countries in the Games.

Coach Dean Smith thinks America should give itself a better shake in the basketball competition. One way might be the creation of a national team that could play together longer than the six weeks Smith had to construct this team.

'It will be tougher for us in 1980," said Smith. "Those European teams are getting better and better."

The national team concept might not work in the United States because of NCAA and pro ball pressures. But Smith does think America should consider using the coach of the national championship college team and his five starters as the nucleus of its Olympic team.

THE OLD familiar faces were everywhere in Montreal. They included sharpshooters like Jiri Pospisil and Kamil Brabenec of Czechoslovakia; center Dino Meneghin and playmaker Luigi Marzorati of Italy; guard Butch Lee of Marquette, playing for Puerto Rico, and ex-Brigham Young star Kreshimir Cosic with Yugoslavia. But the young, talented American squad overcame them.

In the opening game, the United States defeated Italy by 20 points, in impressive performance in a game which they led by as many as 30 may have caused a bad case of overconfidence against Puerto Rico, and it almost cost the Americans dearly. They escaped with a one-point victory and their biggest soare of the tourna-

NEXT CAME Yugoslavia and another scare, although not so severe. Smith's team trailed by three points at the half and the three centers. Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Hubbard, had 11 fouls among them. But May and Dantley rallied them to what became a decisive victory that clinched a medal-round semifinal berth for Uncle Sam.

America completed the preliminary round with a five-point victory over Czechoslovakia in a game the United States led by 17 with 31/2 minutes to play.

IN THE medal round, the United States played its best basketball of the tournament, which, after all, is the way you would want it. After Yugoslavia had ended chances of a Soviet Union-United States rematch by beating the Russians, Uncle Sam wiped out Canada to gain the goldmedal game.

It was really no contest, with Dantley's 30 points leading the Americans to a one-sided victory and the gold they had come to get.

MONTREAL (AP) — The belong to the handful of high schools American athlete had been beaten by and perhaps the colleges which have rowing programs.

In those universities, rowing takes a back seat to the major American sports, like football. "Give me the split ends and the halfbacks, and I'll give you a championship crew," says Harvard Coach Harry Parker, who coached the American women's eight to a bronze last week. As it stands now, Parker looks for big kids who aren't quite good enough to play football. He teaches them from scratch.

A generation ago, that type ofdsystem was good enough to produce medal-winning crews for the United States. It is not any longer. "We've stood still and the competition keeps getting stronger," said Parker.
The "secret" of the East Germans is simple. They put the same sort of effort into rowing and most other Olympic sports that the United States expends on swimming. They do it for both men and women. Gold medals

THE EAST Germans and other eastern European nations have governments which can make the decision to have world-class programs in Olympic sports. Obviously, they have done so.

Just as obviously, the liberal democracies of the world have not kept up. Australia failed to win a gold medal this year. Britain, which produced the world's four-minute miler, won just a single bronze medal in

Miss Comaneci's rise was the story of these Olympics and will doubtless continue to be the story of gymnastics for the next four years at least. Her coaches say she will not hit her peak until she is 19, and only two things could prevent her from continuing her domination of the sport-an injury or a lack of interest.

Meanwhile the mighty Russian team found a new star to replace aging Ludmila Tourischeva and phlegmatic Olga Korbut. Nelli Kim, a personable 19-year-old black-haired beauty from the Central Asian city of Chimkent, got the only other perfect 10s of the competition in winning the vault and floor exercise.

MISS TOURISCHEVA, who planned to retire after the Games, lost her all-around title to Miss Comaneci, then surrendered her position as the No. 1 Russian woman to Miss Kim. Elegant and a deadly serious competitior, she wept on the medal stand after finishing second to Miss Kim in the floor exercise

Miss Korbut, 21, who managed a silver in the balance beam for her only individual medal here, smiled bravely and said she would return for the Moscow Games in 1980. But no one believed her.

The men's competition was submerged by the dramatic efforts of Comaneci & Co. A brilliant performance by Soviet strongman Nikolai Andrianov went largely unnoticed. Andrianov, 24, won the allaround gold and three of the six individual apparatus events.

Montgomery's bat tips Yankees, 4-2

BOSTON (AP) - Bob Montgomery homered and had a perfect day at the plate, powering the Boston Red Sox to a 4-2 victory Saturday over the New York Yankees in the first game of a day-night doubleheader.

Boston was scheduled to pitch Reggie Cleveland, 4-5, against Jim Catfish Hunter, 12-9, in the nightcap. Montgomery, playing in place of the injured Carlton Fisk, also had a runscoring single and a bunt single in helping Ferguson Jenkins, 10-8, pick up his 201st career victory in the nationally televised day game. Butch Hobson, called up from the minors to play third base for the Red Sox, had an RBI triple for Boston and also scored a run.

Yankees starter Ken Holtzman, 8-7, took the loss. He left with the bases loaded in the seventh inning, and the Red Sox sacrificed in a run off -NEW ORLEANS (AP) reliever Dick Tidrow to cap the - Pittsburgh rolled up a scoring.

HOUSTON (AP) - Jose Cruz scored both Houston runs and went three-for-four at the plate as the Houston Astros trimmed the Atlanta Braves 2-1 in the first game of a doubleheader Saturday.

Houston starter J.R. Richard, 12-11, checked the Braves on four hits in pitching his eighth complete game of the season.

The Braves scored in the first on a walk to Jerry Royster, a stolen base, an infield grounder and Houston catcher Ed Herrmann's passed ball. Houston tied it in the first on a single by Cruz, a stolen base and Rob Andrews' RBI single off losing pitcher Dick Ruthven, 11-9. The winning run for Houston came home in the sixth on Cruz' double, a wild pitch and Herrmann's fielder's choice.

Reds 12, Padres 1

CINCINNATI (AP) - Seldom-used Ed Armbrister drove in three runs with four hits to power the Cincinnati Reds to a 12-1 victory over San Diego Football League Saturday night as Fred Norman won his 10th game with a fourhitter.

Armbrister, a 202 lifetime hitter who was 4starting for right fielder Ken Griffey, boosted his batting average to 425 with his night's work that included his second and third career home runs.

Norman, 1-2, lowered his National League earned run average to 2.27 as the Reds widened their West Division lead to 91/2 games over runnerup Los

Tribe 2, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE (AP) - Jim Bibby and Jim Kern combined on a sixhitter and Frank Duffy's fourthinning RBI single provided the winning run as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 2-0 for starter Bert Jones in in the first game of a twi-night doubleheader Saturday.

Duffy's single to left scored Buddy Bell, who had walked and moved up on another walk to Ron Pruitt. The Indians added an unearned run in the eighth with the help of two passed Middleweight Mike balls.

Bibby, 7-3, needed relief help from Kern after giving up two hits in the

Birds 5, Tigers 4

BALTIMORE (AP) - Aurielio Rodriguez drove in three runs with a homer and double, powering the Detroit Tigers to a 5-4 victory over Baltimore Saturday night

Rodriguez hit a-two-run homer in the second, his seventh of the season. With the score tied 3-3 in the sixth, he doubled home a run and then scored on a single by Bill Freehan.

Winner Dave Lemanczyk, 3-2, retired three consecutive batters after a run-producing double by Doug DeCinces pulled the Orioles within 5-4. in the sixth, and then gave way to John Hiller who hurled the final three innings. Jim Palmer, 14-9, was the into center field. He scored on a sacrifice fly by Thurman Munson. The Red Sox went ahead 2-1 in the second when Hobson tripled home Bobby Darwin, who had singled, and scored on a wild pitch by Holtzman.

The Yankees tied the score in the fourth when Mickey Rivers slapped a single to center, driving in Graig Nettles, who had singled to open the inning. Montgomery's homer, his first of the season, snapped a 22 tie in the fifth inning. It landed in the netting above the left field wall.

Jim Rice drove in three runs to lead the Red Sox to a 6-4 victory in the nightcap. Boston had 12 hits.

A's 6, Minnesota 5

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) -Dan Ford's two-run homer in the seventh inning lifted the red-hot Minnesota Twins to a 6-5 victory over the Oakland A's Saturday.

Oakland jumped off to an early 4-0 lead, but the Twins rallied to post their fifth consecutive victory and their 10th in 12 games.

Oakland's Joe Rudi doubled twice. drove in two runs and scored two for the A's.

Phillies 2, Mets 1

NEW YORK (AP) - Reserve catcher Johnny Oates belted a tworun double in the fifth inning to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 2-1 victory over the New York Mets Saturday

Oates, subbing behind the plate for the injured Bob Boone, doubled his season total of runs batted in when he drove home Ollie Brown and Garry Maddox, handing Mets starter Jon Matlack, 10-6, his fourth consecutive Larry Christenson, 10-5, started for the Phils but was forced to leave the game in the sixth inning because of a recurring back problem. Ex-Met Tug McGraw took over with two out in the sixth and blanked the Mets the rest of the way to pick up his seventh save.

Cubs 6, Cards 2

CHICAGO (AP) - Bill Madlock's tie-breaking double, his third hit of the game, and rookie Wayne Tyrone's two-run pinch-single featured a fourrun uprising in the eighth inning Saturday that gave the Chicago Cubs a 6-2 victory over the St. Louis Car-

Joe Wallis and Jose Cardenal singled off loser Lynn McGlothlen, 9-10, before Madlock doubled to crack a 2-2 tie. After an intentional walk loaded the bases. Tyrone singled off reliever Al Hrabosky.

George Mitterwald delivered the final run with a sacrifice fly.

Steve Renko, 4-6, went the distance for the Cubs, scattering nine hits. It was his first complete game of the

Giants 6, LA 3

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Bobby Murcer drove in three runs, two on a first-inning home run, to lead the San Francisco Giants past the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-3 Saturday. The Giants reeled off five consecutive hits and scored four runs in the opening inning off Doug Rau, 10-7. John Montefusco, 10-9, went the distance for the victory, limiting the Dodgers to 11 hits.

Murcer's 14th homer of the season came after Marty Perez doubled and Gary Matthews singled to produce the first San Francisco run. In the second, Murcer was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded to drive in another run.

Expos 7, Pirates 6

PITTSBURGH (AP) - Tim Foli's double and three Pittsburgh errors helped Montreal score two runs in the eighth inning and give the Expos a 7-6 victory over the Pirates Saturday

Foli's double off loser Bob Moose, 3-6. scored Larry Parrish and Earl Williams, who were safe on errors by Willie Stargell and Moose, Al Oliver bobbled the ball in center field for the third error of the inning and the Pirates' fifth in the game.

The 200-pound Morris, the game's leading rusher with 62 yards on 18 carries, capped St. Louis' 85-yard march with the opening kickoff.

New York tied it 7-7 in the second quarter when Joe Namath capped an 80-yard drive with an 11-yard pass to David Knight. On the last play of the opening half. Bakken kicked a field goal of 47 yards, then added the decisive 24-yarder in the second half to offset a Jets safety and a 24-yard field goal by Pat Leahy.

Cards quarterback Jim Hart, who played only during the opening series, completed four of five passes to set up Morris' touchdown smash. Namath completed eight of 11 passes before leaving in the second period.

It is hard enough to get up by 11 o'clock on a Saturday morning, much less get up for a standing ovation. But sleepy-time standing ovations from the bleachers used to be as much a part of Wrigley Field as the ivy on the walls and the public address an-nouncer who had been around since the megaphone era.

By JOHN SCHULIAN The Washington Post

The ovations were for Ernie Banks, the Chicago Cubs' home-run hitter. who happened to be as quaintly charming as the ball park in which he played. Banks would doff his royal blue cap and bow from the waist, and I would stand there amazed that so much excitement could come out of the tranquil ritual of batting practice.

I had to learn quickly to get ready for the next surprise, because that was the way the blood in Wrigley flowed during the three seasons that blessed fate made me a bleacher dweller. Just about the only thing I never saw was a man dancing with his wife. I suppose you find such rare couples in other parts of Chicago, Chicago, that wonderful town.

THE HOUSE That Chewing Gum Built always seemed to be rescuing me from one certifiably miserable form of existence or another. The first was graduate school at Northwestern.

After a winter as a prisoner in the library, I excaped for the Cubs' 1968 home opener. What made it worthwhile was a tipsy gendeman who traveled from the left-field bleachers to the right-field bleachers by tight roping along the top of the ivycovered wall. If Wrigley were one of those new cookie-cutter stadiums, the wall wouldn't have been wide enough for him to get a good toehold.

Probably I should remember more about the Cubs that season, since they were almost as good then as they are bad now. But I was too busy being charmed by a ball park that has no lights because P.K. Wrigley thought baseball was meant to be played in the sunshine

My trips began with an El-train ride that featured a gravel-voiced conductor barking, "Addison Street, Addison Street. Everybody out for Cubs park." Then there would be a stop at a stand on the street behind right field where elephantine hot dogs came wrapped in caraway buns and smothered in slices of tomato and

AT $1 a ticket, the bleachers filled so rapidly that an hour before the game there was only standing room left beneath the manually operated scoreboard in center field. That was where the gamblers perched. They bet on everything from pitches to when the grandstand shadows would cover the mound, and they passed on the wisdom gleaned from having watched Roy Smalley Sr., Bob Ramozzotti and Dee Fondy, as well as Tinker, Evans and Chance.

Only Pap Pieper, the antique PA man who died last year, had consumed as much of Wrigley's history first-hand. Indeed, he was part of the history. It takes a pure-breed Cubs' fan to explain that Pieper gave the crowd "the correct starting lineups" because at one time, the scorecards sold at the ball park had carried a layman's idea of the starting lineups. Of course, in those days the Cubs were so pitiful that it did not really matter who played. But by 1969 things were different. The opening game proved that. The beloved Banks homered his first two times up and, in the 11th inning, Willie Smith won it with a pinch homer. If someone named Willie Smith had come to bat in the same situation five years before, the bleacherites agreed, he would have taken a called third strike.

I WAS witness to this momentous occasion because the Army had been nice enough to station me at Ft. miles north of Chicago. My first sergeant thought I was downtown at the federal building at a technical writing course. But what he didn't know never hurt him. I'm sure he wouldn't have approved of the company I kept in the bleachers. They called themselves the Bleacher Bums. They wore yellow hardhats, screamed a lot and drank so much that beer sales in the bleachers were finally outlawed. No. matter. They just increased their pregame intake at Ray's Bleachers, a

Ray Seales admits luck

MONTREAL (AP) - Sugar Ray Seales, the only U.S. boxer to win a gold medal in the 1972 Olympics, says Leo Randolph is so young he must have had "a little luck even to make the team."

Randolph, 18, a senior this fall at Wilson High School in Tacoma, Wash., surprised his fellow Tacoman by making the finals for the gold medal Saturday night against Ramon Duvalon in the 112-pound class.

"I knew he was a good fighter, but he's so young," Seales said Friday. "The fighters in the Olympics usually are older and more experienced.

"And I don't want to take anything away from him, but he had to have a litle luck even to make the team at his age. Young fighters just usually don't Seales went professional after his victory in Munich. Today he is the middleweight champion of North He praised Randolph's determination and age, calling the 5foot-5 fighter "young in age but old in experience. "He had it in his heart that he was going to win a gold medal before he came to Montreal, and he just might do it, the fighter he is," Seales said. Seales arrived just in time to see Randolph's semifinal victory by a decision over Leszek Blazynski of

"I talked to him a little bit after his fight Thursday night," Seales said, 'and I told him what I thought he was doing wrong.

"He's lunging with his left jab. He needs to straighten that out, and I also suggested to him that he bite his mouthpiece when he throws his right. That makes it come in a little harder-at least it does for me.

Tennessee eyes toreign players

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - The University of Tennessee basketball team is trying to recruit two Olympiccariber foreign players, says Coach Ray Mears.

Mears declined to identify the players, but said both played in the Olympics or in the pre-Olympic tournament in Hamilton, Ont.

"We have a shot at two foreign players, and one of them is 6-foot-11. Mears told an alumni meeting Friday

Earlier this week. Mears was in Montreal and watched Tennessee player Ernie Grunfeld help the United States win the gold medal in men's,

"He said he had learned a lot from layers like Scott May and Adrian Dantley, especially May, about working and that he was coming back to Tennessee and lead this basketball Sheridan, Ill., which was perhaps 40 "team to a national championship." Mears said.

saloon in the shadow of the hulking green scoreboard.

At times the Bums seemed as hard on enemy teams as Billy Williams' line drives or Ferguson Jenkins' slider. They haunted Willie Davis with the name of a one-night lady friend. The Pirates played Willie Stargell at first base rather than have him wade through the hot-dog buns bombarding left field. Pete Rose was driven to distraction by the Bums' chant, "Rose is a fairy, Rose is a

THE ONE Cub to incur the wrath of the Bums was Ron Santo, who had a disturbing penchant for hitting into double plays at the wrong time. Otherwise, the Bums and the Cubs had a love feast. They played catch with an old softball in batting practice. Dick Selma, a livewire relief pitcher, led cheers from the bullpen during games. And all the while, the Bums sang, "Gimme that old-time Durocher," as if Leo the Lip, the Cub's manager, were some kind of

The singing stopped when the Mets, who had suffered just a short while, ran off with the pennant that was sup-posed to be the Cubs' first since 1945. I don't think the Cubs recovered from that, but their fans in the bleachers did. Came 1970 and they were as nutty

I was playing out my last few months in the Army by then, and each trip to Wrigley was a little more special

BY RANDY ISENBERG

Bobby Bumpas led all bowlers in this week's league action at Air Park Lanes, rolling games of 245, 214, and 196 For a blistering 655 series.

Jeff Jamieson, bowling in the Adobe Oil League on Wednesday nights, rolled the high game of the week, a 249.

This is the second week in a row that bowlers in the Adobe Oil League have had the top score. Last week Bobby Gleason rolled a 250 game.

For consistency, Carmen Boyce Friday rolled games of 205-205-195 for a 605 series. Carmen, one of the city's top women bowlers, also had a 226 game and 581 series on Tuesday night in the Ladies Trio League.

OTHER TOP scores during the past week: Bowling in the Elcor Mixed League, Pat Edwards, 231 and 614 series; Ralph Gillitee, 229, and Dolores Patten converted a 5-6-10 split. Adobe Oil League: Bobby Gleason, 202; Jeff Jamieson, his first 600 with a 623. Ladies Trio: Gladys Meredith, 211. Mop and Broom League: Cliffa Hogue, 204.

Special events: Top scores in last week's Gold Bond Stamp Spree were: Cliffa Hogue, 218; Bob Bumpas, 217 and 214; Lilian Naquin, 212 and 180; Bob Fielding, 209; George Loranc, 207. Bobby Bumpas has five strikes in a row for 100 stamps and he converted the 3-10 split for 100 stamps. Cliffa Hogue had five strikes in a row for 140 stamps and Dot Fielding had five straight strikes for 140 stamps. Lilian Naquin's five strikes in a row brought 140 stamps and she also picked up another 100 stamps with a 5-10

MIKE PARKER converted the 5-10 split and 3-5-6-10 for 100 stamps.

In Sunday's Silver Dollar Silverama, Joy Castleman rolled scores of 223-197-183-603. H.N. Stephens, Joy Castleman and Glenn Castleman each hit the strikepot for $10.

PGA has to fight for place

By FRANK MACOMBER Copley News Service

With all the hoopla over the Masters and the U.S. and British Opens each year, the Professional Golfers' Association Championship seems to get lost in the shuffle.

Yet the PGA is the touring pros' very own tournament. Most of the pros rank it right up there with the other three major tournaments. Somehow the public never has been convinced.

Few tournaments have the history of bizarre episodes that has followed the PGA for its 58 years of existence.

THIS YEAR 1975 defending champion Jack Nicklaus will be at the Congressional Country Club in suburban Washington, D.C., Aug. 12-15 to make it two in a row if he can. Jack has won four PGA titles.

But getting around to the bizarre. the zany and the oddball, the first PGA championship in 1916 produced the only champion in history who had to defend his title twice to make it stick. After he nosed out Jock Hutchison, one up, in the September classic that year, Long Jim Barnes noted he already had won the PGA earlier in the season when he won the astern PGA title. Until then it had been recognized as the national PGA Championship.

A few years later, in 1926, Leo Diegel, always a foil for fate's little pranks, lost to Walter Hagen in the final match-play round at Westbury. Conn., when everything seemed to go

HE TRIED to steer a putt around a half-stymie and wound up by knocking Diegel's ball into the hole. (The PGA no longer plays stymies.) On the next hole he ran into a similar situation and did it again. That was all she wrote for Johnny Farrell that day.

And who can forget the 1966 PGA tourney at Akron, when the then 54year-old Sam Snead, already three times winner of the title at match play, held the medal-play lead after 36 holes. But then his putter turned into a writhing snake and he wrote golf history by changing over to a croquet style of putting. His performance led to a rewrite of the rules of golf by the U.S. Golf Association outlawing the technique. Sam still putts facing the hole, but with the ball out in front of him to abide by USGA rules.

THEY WERE all even going into the 16th hole, where Hagen's 35-foot putt appeared to die at the lip of the cup. When Diegel bent over to examine the ball it fell into the hole. This so annoyed Leo that he missed an easy putt to drop back.

On the first hole of the afternoon round (it was a 36-hole match in those days) Diegel's ball overran the green and rolled under Hagen's parked car. Walter moved his auto and Diegel's next shot rolled into a rut left by the wheel. After three futile swipes, Diegel picked up in disgust. Hagen finally won, 5 up and 6 to play.

Diegel was involved in another weird one in 1929 when he beat Johnny Farrell, 6 up and 4 to play, in the PGA final at Los Angeles. This time Farrell was the patsy

BUT THE 1969 PGA outing at Dayton, Ohio, produced the most incredible incident of all - a wild melee on the 10th green staged by a band of black militants protesting South Africa's racial problems. Target of the demonstration was Gary Player, a South African who at the time was pushing Ray Floyd for the third round lead.

If that wasn't enough, at the 13th hole a woman in the gallery rolled a plastic ball in front of Player just as he was about to putt. Yet Gary hung on stubbornly to card a par 71. And he hounded Floyd through the final round the next day all the way to the 16th, where Ray rammed in a 35-foot birdie putt to open daylight between him and the gutsy little South African.

This year could be another MGM spectacular at Congressional, as, the tour's Whiz Kids compete with the veterans and a flock of foreign challengers - again including Gary Player - over a rolling course where the temperatures and the humidity are almost sure to be in the 90s. T

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y. (AP) - The world's most valuable cavalry beats its annual retreat to this Adirondack foothills resort Monday as softball team beginning Saratoga Race Course opens its 109th thoroughbred season.

For the last two years, the nation's oldest thoroughbred racetrack has broken records for attendance and betting. Traditionally the most popular feature is the Travers, the nation's oldest stakes, which gets its 107th running on Aug. 21.

Saratoga officials are hoping the 4-mile Travers will produce not only big crowds, but what the Triple Crown the high 80s or low 90s ip races did not-the name of the top 3- golf, plays a better-than-

SARATOGA also is known as the proving ground for 2-year-old horses. The best stables bring their most promising young stock here each year, and the juvenile division gets its first serious chance to run. Six stakes races have been set aside for the 2-year-olds, as well as a host of allowances, all pointing to the $75,000-added Hopeful on closing day, Aug. 28.

Among the older horses, Foolish Pleasure, Lord Rebeau and Forego, the trio that finished so closely in the Handicap Triple Crown, heat the field nominated for the $75,000- added Whitney Stakes on Aug. 7.

After losing to Foolish Pleasure in the Brooklyn, Forego picked up extra weight and defeated his rival in the Suburban. Now the big gelding, twice Horse of the Year, may face the Whitney's 11/8 miles with a load more suitable for a harness racer.

THE SPA IS one of the few major tracks that still offers steeplechase racing. Aqueduct and Belmont Park dropped their daily hurdles events in 1971 and sent the jumpers back to the stately exile of the Carolina hunt

It does not cost much in purses to support the tailgatepicnic crowd. At $20,000-added, the Lovely Night Handicap is the cheapest New York stakes of the year, and the secondrichest jumping event in the United States.

But the hurdles races, though interesting to watch, are not well played by gamblers, and the tracks prefer to run an event that will garner more money at the pari-mutuel windows.

A SECOND $20,000 jumping purse. the New York Turf Writers' Cup, is slated for Aug. 26, and there is at least one chase on the calendar every day except Saturdays.

MONTREAL (AP) - Okay, Bruce Jenner, now that you have proved ourself the best all-around track and field athlete in the world, how are you at swinging on vines?

Have you practiced the lines, "Me Tarzan, you Jane" lately? "

This event, climaxed with the 1,500meter run as dusk was settling over the massive Olympic Stadium, was marked by high drama.

Needing the best clocking of his life to reach the 8,600 pedestal—his goal— Jenner ran the metric mils in 4 minutes, 12.61 seconds.

After he crossed the finish line, his pretty stewardess wife, Chrystie, her eyes filled with tears, had to be restrained by three security men from leaping over the barrier onto the track. She distracted the guards enough to permit a young man carrying a small American flag to hurdle the barrier.

"I saw this guy running toward

Hayes admits Spartan turn-in

CHICAGO (AP) — Woody Hayes, Ohio State's controversial football coach, grabbed the spotlight at the Big Ten's kickoff football luncheon by admitting he turned in Michigan State last fall for recruiting violations.

Warming up to the task, the crusty dean of football coaches spoke Friday about baseball drawing its one billionth fan this weekend, about the integrity baseball had displayed since the Black Sox scandal, and harked back to the days of Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis.

"Last fall I sat up to watch the greatest World Series I've ever seen and for me to do that during the football season is something," said 'ayes. "There was no question the two teams were playing to win. It was integrity all the way through and we have to keep the same integrity in our Hayes then looked up and down the speakers' table and said "If someone gets out of line, we have to put them back in line. If I catch any of you cheating, I'll turn you in.

"Did I turn in the team that cheated in our league?" said Hayes, obviously referring to Michigan State. "You're damned right I did and I'll do it

Michigan State recently was found guilty of 34 recruiting violations by the National Collegiate Athletic Association. Head Coach Denny Stolz and several assistants were forced to resign and several top players have been barred from playing various amounts of time including this season's opener against Ohio State.

Darryl Rogers, the new Michigan

State coach, was the second speaker after Hayes made his admission and said, "I want to thank Woody for turning us in. Otherwise I wouldn't be

Everyone, including Hayes, laughed at the remark. Rogers went on to make a few more uncomplimentary one-liners about Hayes and the Ohio State coach's expressions went from smiles to a jutjawed glare.

Later, the Big Ten coaches were split into shifts, with one group going to one room for radio-TV interviews and the others into a large room forpress interviews.

It was learned that while Hayes was in the radio-TV room, he got into personal arguments with Bob Page of of WJR of Detroit and Ed Ronders, sports editor of the Michigan State News, a campus publication.

BY REX WORRELL Hogan Park golf pro

There have been some outstanding rounds of golf played at Hogan Park this month, such as Terry Lester's 63, Billy Sitton's 66, Les Opperman's 10 birdies in 27 holes, Bob Canady's 71, and Glen Woodruff's 24.

Dan King scored a hole-in-one, but George Vannaman has outdone everyone in the outstanding round department this month. What George did was go out and score a round of 34-39-73. why so outstanding?

Well, George happens to be 73 years young, and not many people can boast that they have scored their age. This happened to be the first time George accomplished the feat, but you can expect him to duplicate the feat many more years to come, since he is really a fine player. Out congratulations, George.

IN HIS first major league managerial job. Martin won the American League West in 1969 with the Minnesota Twins, who had finished seventh in a 10- team league one year earlier. In 1971, he brought the Detroit Tigers home second in the AL East and won the title the following season. The Tigers had finished fourth in a sixteam division in 1970

In 1974, he took the Texas Rangers from the 6973 cellar to a second-place finish behind the Oakland A's.

Last August, he inherited a thirdplace Yankee team which hadn't won anything since their dynasty crumbled in 1964 and has them comfortably out in front of the AL East. But now that everyone is conceding sudden return to prominence than

down to the end," he says. "But it's.

"The last two months I was an observer," he says. "I didn't like the execution on the field and I didn't like what was going on in the clubhouse.

"On the field, the execution and discipline was very poor. They missed the cutoff man all the time, so often it was unbelievable. And they were bringing every Tom, Dick and Harry into the clubhouse. It was chaos.'

MARTIN IMPROVED the execution by stressing fundamentals every day during the abbreviated spring

"We didn't miss a day. We worked on fundamentals even on days we played a game. They're playing together as a team, that's the biggest improvement. Last year they were a bunch of individuals.

And he also cut down on the number of locker room guests, as well as barring members of the media from the clubhouse and dugout 20 minutes before game time. The TV and radio also goes off during those 20 minutes.

"Discipline has got to start in the clubhouse," Martin says. "You can't have a country club clubhouse. Last year, the game would start and some of the players would come out to bench an inning later. Now, the players fine each other if they're not out there for the anthem and the guys who aren't playing aren't complain-ing and moaning. That's the way it is with a winning club."

THE DEALS have helped, of course. The Yankees needed a center fielder because of Elliott Maddox' knee injury and pried Rivers plus pitcher Figueroa from California for Bobby Bonds. They also wanted a shortstop or second baseman, but when no shortstop was available they set their sights on second baseman Willie Randolph, a highly touted Pittsburgh farmhand.

The Pirates wanted Doc Medich and our reports on Ellis were good, so we made the deal," Martin says.

The manager's discipline extended even beyond the clubhouse. Martin laid down rules concerning haberdashery and coiffures.

When I came here, no one wore a shirt and tie on road trips," he recalls. 'A couple of guys came on the plane looking like girls. All I ask is that when they go from one town to another they dress like we think representatives of the Yankees should dress. After they get to the hotel they can dress like they want.

Martin's martinet rules usually are followed and, despite some expected griping, so were these

'There was no static," he says. "There was no objection. I simply said, 'If you don't wear a shirt and tie,
