Justice lawyer seeks more information

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Yoshinori H. T. Himel, the U.S. Justice Department trial lawyer assigned to the Midland desegregation case, said in an in-terview Wednesday that only those schools which are racially identifiable because of deliberate action — de jure segregation — may be desegregated

Himel also indicated the Justice Department would not press its position that three city elementary schools should be included in any desegregation order if sufficient evidence of de jure segregation is not found.

Himel is in Midland to find more information before the department makes its decision on whether the schools - Crockett, Milam and Pease elementary schools - were intentionally segregated.

there was no action by the district to make the schools racially identifiable and they, therefore, should be removed from the court order which called for desegregation plans for those three schools and Washington and De Zavala elementary schools.

One area Himel said he is studying on this trip is the assignment of rural bus students to the three schools in question during the 1960s.

Should the department determine that bus students were assigned or reassigned to elementary schools with an intent to segregate, it could have a bearing on the Justice Department position, Himel said.

He said he and two other attorneys who were here in July looked into this area to some extent but he is now seeking more detail after "some imput" from intervenors who filed suit to block implementation of a 1971 school board plan to desegregate than anticipated, Himel said.

Washington. The Justice Department Monday

There are two separate areas of law involved in the case — liabilities and remedies — Himel said. If the school district has acted to segregate it is required to act to desegregate. Only after liability is found can remedies be studied, he said.

No decision has been made within the Justice Department yet on whether or not liability exists concerning Crockett, Milam and Pease, although no question exists about Washington and De Zavala, Himel

"There was a feeling there was enough question (on the three schools) to justify getting the sides together" for the meeting in July, he said. The department had hoped to have a decision before last week's deadline to submit plans for all five schools, but "it's been more difficult"

was ordered to reply to the three plans submitted by the school district by Wednesday, and to submit an alternative plan if it opposes the district's plans.

Himel said it is possible no decision on the three schools may be made public before the deadline and it is "a possibility" all of the information could be submitted to the court at

Asked if the department has enough data and time to design an alternative plan, should the department decide that the school district's plans are not acceptable remedies, Himel said he could not answer the question but they often do things "on a round-the-clock basis.

The major factor in any decision on pursuing the case is "whether the data to pursue litigation. It would be silly to go to court with no case," Himel said.

In discussing factors which might have a bearing on the case, Himel said community feeling for or against the current school organization has no bearing on the legality of the matter. "There's no popularity contest for remedies," he said.

It is possible, however, that com-munity attitudes "may have a bearing on whether a plan will work," and one requirement is that a plan must be workable. Himel said.

He expressed confidence that the school board would act in good faith to make any plan ordered by the court

A factor that would be considered in evaluating plans is the fairness of them. Should the court find the burden placed on one segment of the community, it could "have a bearing" on the acceptability of the plan.

The school district's majorityminority transfer policy, which allows transfer for a student from a school in which his racial or ethnic group is in a majority to one where it is in the minority, is acceptable as a remedy "to the extent that it works,"

He declined to discuss whether or not the plans submitted by the school district comply with the court's mandate to dismantle the "dual" school system.

After the Justice Department has submitted its response to the school district plans, the judge could ask for additional information, but Himel did not predict what action the court will secondary intection is infection of one person by another person. If that occurred, it would mean the disease is contagious.

While the tests continue, federal officials went to Philadelphia today to investigate environmental factors to try to determine how the disease was spread. The possibilities include drinking water, food, and pigeon droppings.

"There is a possibility that we will never find the answer," Bachman said, "but I pledge that this investigation will continue for a year or two years if it is needed to get to the ttom of it."

Jay Satz, the state's top virus expert, agreed with Bachman that the disease may never be discovered.

There were reports of the disease in New Jersey and New York, but they involved people who had attended or had some contact with the Legion convention.

The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reported Wednesday that initial tests there indicated the disease was probably the result of a virus, fungus or toxic substance. Researchers there ruled out plague and Lassa fever, a highly contagious African disease. They also ruled out most bacterial diseases.

Swine flu was said to still be a possibility, and Congress was pushing toward passage of legislation to clear the way for the nationwide swine-flu immunization program. "We cannot say it is swine influenza or say that it is not," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control. "Each day that goes by without a spread from family to community makes us rest easier that it is not swine flu. But it is still too early to say."

In Philadelphia, meanwhile, about 100 calls an hour were coming in to a hotline set up at City Hall. Spokesmen said the callers "aren't panicking, but they're apprehensive and con-

Health leaders push Congress for action

WASHINGTON (AP) - Fearful that the mysterious Pennsylvania illness may turn out to be a type of flu, health officials are pressing Congress to approve an insurance plan that would open the way for the government's program to vaccinate all Americans against swine flu.

The House Commerce Committee today was to consider the insurance plan put together after vaccine producers indicated their reluctance to continue in the government program because of their inability to obtain private insurance.

David Mathews, secretary of health, education and welfare, was to testify today before a Senate panel to describe the latest findings about the disease that has affected persons connected with an American Legion convention in Philadelphia last Subcommittee Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., says he hopes to put an immunization bill on the Senate floor before the end of this week. Rep. Paul G. Rogers, D-Fla. chairman of the House health panel, is looking toward next Tuesday or Wednesday for final House approval.

Both chairmen think the legislation should be top priority before Congress adjourns next week for the Republican National Convention.

Mummers: good, arty, but is it legal?

Honest, OESTE isn't going to be a front-page preview of Roger Southall's amusements critiques, as a general thing, but as an unreconstructed amusements editor I find myself at performances like a sleepwalking dieter at the icebox at 2 a. m., and it's difficult not to share the likes of the Midland Theatre Centre's "Summer Mummers" and the zany fun of their current "Discom-bobulated on the Delaware." (Misery loves company.)

First off, Ir! me note that they've added Thurse vy night performances (or "perpetrations", if you will) g tonight, and this would be a good time to get a table in the often sold-out American Legion hall next door to the Library in downtown Midland. (Call 682-2554 for reser-

heard anything quite like the Mummers.

The script is riotously funny and extraordinarily clever—in this case a mellerdrammer approach to the American Revolution that is refreshing after all the saccharine brouhaha of the Bicentennial egregiousness—the "olio" acts of vaudevillian routines with macabre twists are rare delights, and Art Cole's "movieola" sequences are often as good as the Mack Sennett immortals they ape.

But the spirit of the thing, on boths sides of the footlights, is what tears me up.

Having attended a quietly authentic production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" in a half-empty Globe Theater at Odessa the night before, I couldn't help but think, as I watched the giddy crowd of all ages and types of Midlanders and neighbors pack the Mummers arena, this was more like the theater of Old Will's day: bawdy, fellahin irreverent, and 100 per cent fellahin, irreverent, and 100 per cent entertaining - no "message", no

"art", no time for a serious thought. Frankly, I don't see how the principal actors such as Ron Hughes ("Yank E. Doodle"), Harry Harrison, ("Yank E. Doodle"), Harry Harrison, II ("Ichabod Clod"), Brenda Hughes "Winifred Winsome"), John Meyer ("Griswold Greenslime"), and George Volkmann ("Benedict Badbreath") live through it night after night. (They don't; most of the roles are double-cast.) Imagine trying to recite "The Charge of the Light Brigade" in the monkey house at the Brookfield Zoo during feeding time, and you have an approximation of the and you have an approximation of the technical problems encountered by

I happened to be awarded a seat between two tables of fledgling Fidryches in the Popcorn League, and I wasn't sure whether I was drinking popcorn or chewing beer by the time they held the drawing for door prizes. But, as Harry Truman said, "If you can't take the smoke, you'd better stay out of the kitchen." And I only saw one woman— obviously shamelessly sober—outraged by the audiential antics. (County Judge Barbara and husband John Culver, in the front row of tables, weathered the abuse from onstage and off without

A principal key to the whole thing, I think, is the equally long-suffering volunteer band, which uncorked some Dixieland such as I hadn't heard since the last time I was on Bourbon Street, in addition to providing wonderfully suggestive background for the stage action and the silent film clips. As with most categories of volunteers, there are supernumeraries, but the great combo I happened to hear included Alice Moxey on the eightyeight and Jesse Grimes, Virgil Gordon, Bill Walker and Mike Hankinson. (Pat Tuman, who sang and pianoed "Kansas City" for the olio, must be a regular in some allnight soul club.)

It's definitely not for the shrinking violet, the dramatic purist, or the Aggie, Democrat, or petroleum engineer who can't take a joke. (A tableful of MOJO apologists next to me gave tit for tat about Odessa jokes, though.)

But it is raising good money for sustaining the Midland Theatre Centre (and I don't dig that British spellynge, but when it's the official name you've got to use it) and helping to finance the imminent new theater out by Midland College.

(In fact, I think some of the pan-demonium is calculated, to force people to come back and try to hear more of the lines.) And, finally, it's a whale of a lot of fun if you like good slapstick and soggy popcorn showers.

SHOWERS are forecast from the Northwest to New England. Showers are also forecast for most of Florida. Cooler weather is

Convention highlights featured

Highlights of the Lions International Convention for 1976 at Honolulu, Hawaii, was the topic of Wednesday's meeting of the Downtown Lions Club.

According to President Horace Robb, convention activities got under way June 23 and closed June 30. An international parade kicked off the convention, and a presentation of the flags of each country attending was shown the first evening.

Seminars on Lions Club projects such as camps for the handicapped, sight conservation and hearing were available also for members at the convention.

Robb announced that new officers of Lions International were chosen at the convention, with Ed Flood of Amarillo being selected to a two-year term as an international director

Lions Club member Lee May then showed a number of slides taken of convention activities.

ODESSA - Six highway improvement projects in the Midland area are included in the 1976 State Highway Safety and Betterment and Farm to Market Road Improvement Program recently approved by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission.

The main lanes of State Highway 158 from four miles southeast of 1-20 to the Glasscock County line, main lanes of State Highway 349 from three miles south of -- 20 to 12.6 miles north of the Upton County line and main lanes of State Highway 2349 from 12.6 miles north of Upton County line to Midland County are scheduled to be seal coated

The project will also include the seal coating of U.S. 385 from 46th Street at Odessa to the Andrews County line, seal coating of U.S. 385's southbound lane from Andrews County line about one mile south of Andrews and seal coating of FM 703 for almost 10 miles from Winkler County line to the junction of FM 81.

Hot weather to continue

After a wet, cool July, Mother Nature has decided to let things return to normal with hot, dry weather in August. Residents of the Permian Basin can expect to see more hot weather with temperatures in the upper 90s and no rain, at least through Friday, the National Weather Service said.

Wednesday's high reached 95 degrees with the overnight low dipping to only 70 degrees.

Andrews, Lamesa, Crane, Stanton, and Rankin all reported clear skies, warm temperatures and calm to slight winds this morning.

Midland, Odessa, Big Lake and Garden City also reported clear skies. warm temperatures and calm winds.

The forecast for the Permian Basin calls for fair through Friday with hot afternoons. High Friday, upper 90s and low tonight, upper 60s. Winds will be southerly at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Southwest fares and flight schedules would also help open the rest of the state to residents of West Texas, Hoestenbach testified, noting that persons who go to the Dallas area for medical treatment often cannot afford to fly on the commercial lines that currently serve the area. And Southwest flights to Austin would make state government more accessible to the average citizen, he Ector County Judge Joe Connally also testified that Southwest fares could save county travel expenditures for its employes.

Connally cited routes from Midland-Odessa to El Paso (the site of the State Court of Civil Appeals), Dallas and Austin as especially important, adding that if Southwest is allowed to provide service to those areas, he would encourage county employes to travel by air on official business trips.

"Out of county travel is a substantial item in our county budget,' he said. "Most of it goes to Austin for seminars and state meetings . . . but some of it also goes to Dallas and Houston.

Newspaper valuable aid in classroom

The newspaper can be one of the most valuable and stimulating teaching aids available for everyday use in the classroom, a group of Midland and Odessa educators was told here Wednesday.

Al Wilson, principal of Emerson Elementary School in Granite City, Ill., cited numerous teaching techniques using the daily newspaper. His audience was composed of approximately 50 principals and curriculum specialists and administrators from the Midland In-dependent School District, Midland College, private schools in Midland and The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. Wilson, who has become a frequent speaker on the role of the newspaper in education, was The Reporter-Telegram's featured speaker at a luncheon workshop held by the newspaper at the Hilton Hotel.

He told the educators that since teachers in his school, which is located in a moderate to low income suburburban community near St. Louis, began using the newspaper as a primary teaching device four years ago, the comprehension and standardized test scores of the students has risen significantly.

Wilson has received national attention for his innovative use of newspapers in the classroom. He has been the subject of a Newsweek magazine article and has appeared on national television on "To Tell the Truth.'

Wilson explained Wednesday that at his school, the St. Louis Globe-Democrat is used as the primary resource in all grades. Textbooks are used to augment the newspaper.

Prior to the use of the newspaper. classes of students at his Title I school had never shown a full year's growth after completing a school year, he With the use of newspapers, he said,

"We think this is great for a Title I school," Wilson said.

Jim Allison Jr., publisher of The Reporter-Telegram, and host for the luncheon, also introduced Mrs. Beverly Dickerson of Odessa who is the newspaper's Newspaper in Education coordinator.

Mrs. Dickerson told the principals that she will be contacting them near the start of school, and will work with them and their teachers throughout the year to arrange for teaching aids and distribution of newspapers.

The Reporter-Telegram's Newspaper in Education (NIE) program is new this year, and is a strictly optional service to teachers.

Wilson emphasized that while use of the newspaper as the primary teaching resource has been highly successful in his school, he does not advocate that step for all schools.

His purpose, he said, was to make teachers aware of the exciting and interesting opportunities to stimulate students which the newspaper

Odessa newspaper editor stands firm about story

The editor of the Odessa American says his newspaper stands behind its facts and treatment of a story that led Dist. Atty. John Green to bar permanently the American from his office.

Green said Wednesday he took the action against the newspaper for publishing what he called an irresponsible story designed to "embarrass victions.

Shooting motive still mystery

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Police say they have yet to establish a motive for Tuesday's shooting spree at the Davis mansion here that left two persons dead and two others wounded.

Armed guards surfaced Wednesday at the lavish estate of millionaire industrialist T. Cullen Davis while others were stationed at a hospital where his estranged wife lay seriously wounded.

Davis reportedly remained in seclusion after posting $80,000 bond on charges he killed his wife's boy friend and her daughter by a previous marriage. Midafternoon funeral services were conducted Wednesday for Andrea Lee Wilborn, the defendant's 12-year-old stepdaughter. Services are planned here Friday for the other victim, Stan Farr, 30, a 6-foot-9 former Texas Christian University basketball star. Davis' blonde socialite wife Priscilla, 35, who was critically wounded in the flurry of gunfire at the 181acre Davis estate early Tuesday, was reported in good condition late Wednesday.

Attendants said Gus Gavrel, 21, a friend of the Davis family, was in fair condition with a bullet Gavrel's father meanwhile filed a $3 million

WASHINGTON (AP) - There is an urgent need for legislation that would restructure traditional mortgages to make home ownership a part of the American dream again, according to testimony before a Senate panel.

At a hearing on the new mortgage concept Wednesday, a Senate subcommittee on housing and urban affairs was told that the mortgage proposal could help millions of Americans now priced out of the housing market to buy their own homes.

The panel was told the plan, contained in a bill sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Brooke, R-Mass., could nearly double the number of citizens who own cotics ring and who is Basically, the bill would allow mortgages to be Mo.,

The shooting at the elegant Davis estate occurred only hours after the latest round of legal debate over Mrs. Davis' divorce petition.

divorce suit since 1974 and reportedly were approaching the climax of a high stakes property dispute involving millions of dollars.

The Fort Worth Star-Telegram quoted informed sources as saying Davis had hoped to settle the divorce case by giving his wife $100,000 and the ultra modern mansion filled with art objects.

They said Davis learned Monday during a court hearing, however, that the price of the settlement was going to be substantially greater. The court hearing resulted in a delay of the property settlement, along with orders that Davis increase his monthly support payments from $3,500 to $5,000 and provide $27,200 to Priscilla for payments of

One source told newsmen that these sums were 'peanuts' for a man of Davis' wealth and "certainly should not have been significant enough to push him to the brink of murder.' Davis reportedly left the hearing calm and com-

Salute to 4-H team

Congratulations are in order for the popular, widely-known Midland County 4-H Club Mounted Drill Team, which resumed its winning ways at the recently-held State 4-H Club Horse Show at-Amarillo.

The young riders annexed first place in precision drill competition, and second in regular drill, competing with the very best 4-H drill teams in the state.

The Midland team perhaps is the best known unit of its kind in the state, having won five consecutive state championships, beginning in 1968.

It has brought increased fame and glory to the Tall City through its participation in state competition and at other special events here and elsewhere.

It is no wonder that Midland is proud of this noted 4-H drill team and its drill master, Kenneth R.

In previous years, competition included only one class and championships were awarded on overall drill performance. Now, two classes - precision and regular - are conducted, with the competition exceptionally keen in both.

The Arlington team, incidentally, nosed out the Midland team for first place in this year's regular drill competition.

The Midland team performed Wednesday night at the American Junior Rodeo Association Rodeo receive other invitations to perform at various events over the state this fall.

It also is noteworthy that this particular 4-H Club district, which includes much of West Texas, was the high point district of the show, which featured multiple events.

Five Midland County girls, in addition to the drill team. qualified at the district level to go to the state meet, which also is considered excellent.

They are Dana Milner, Cindy Triplitt, Martha Ann March, Christine Johnson and Peni Sue Wood.

Dana showed the reserve champion gelding and was third in Showmanship; Cindy won 5th place in Western Horsemanship; Martha Ann had 8th place in Halter Mares, and Peni Sue was 10th in pole-bending. All were in statewide competition.

4-H represents a marvelous youth movement in America and Midland County is fortunate. indeed, in having one of the finest 4-H programs, overall, to be found anywhere. Long may the 4-H-ers continue their good work, along being held at Odessa. It likely will with their winning ways.

A timely reminder

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt spoke of the "unprecendented bond of trust" between West Germany and the United States during his visit here. Yet there is an undertone of worry in his remarks.

Mr. Schmidt also felt compelled to note that it would be "catastrophic" for world peace if the United States withdrew troops from Western Europe without a corresponding reduction of troops massed in Eastern Europe under the Warsaw Pact. Obviously he is tuned in to the debate over the size of the U.S. defense budget and the recurring proposals that it be reduced by bringing troops home from overseas.

The bulk of our ground forces committed to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are in West Germany. While they are a symbol of security to the Germans, radical leftists often try to portray them as interlopers on European soil. The Foreign Affairs Research Institute also has reported that the Communists are making U. S. soldiers a target of subversion, trying to undermine their loyalty. One way or another the Communists would like nothing better than to see a weakening of the U.S. presence in Western Europe. Chancellor Schmidt has reminded Americans that for West Germany the Iron Curtain is no figure of speech. It is the iron facade of Soviet and East European armies deployed on the other side of a border.

ART BUCHWALD

It's the best job in the United States

WASHINGTON - They say it's a job that nobody wants. They say there is nothing to do. They say it's degrading and boring. And yet, as we have seen in the past four weeks, there is no shortage of candidates for the Vice Presidency of the United

If the truth be known, it is probably the best job in the government and anyone would have to be bonkers to turn it down.

This is what you get if you're Vice President of the United States. First a salary of $65,500 a year, plus a $10,000 tax-free expense account

Then you're entitled to a beautiful house on Massachusetts Avenue furnished and with a double bed fully equipped with mirrors, thanks to Vice President Rockefeller. The bed has mirrors on the front of it, the back of it and the side, so you can see if another bed is trying to pass you in heavy

You have your own seal which can be tacked onto the podium when you speak at a Rotarian or Kiwanis luncheon. You also get Secret Servicemen and a staff of office workers, in case the President asks you to write him a letter.

The Vice President can use Air Force One when the President isn't flying anywhere, and he can also sail down the Potomac on the yacht Sequoia when the President's children aren't using it

But this isn't all. If no one on the President's staff has reserved it, you can sit in the Presidential Box at Kennedy Center and see the best shows in town - for free. In recent years Presidents, who have promised to work more closely. with their running mates, have instructed guards that the Vice President no longer has to wait in line across the street with the tourists before he can visit the public rooms of the White House.

Another advantage that goes with the job is that a Vice President can go to the funeral of any head of state he wants to at government expense. He can also get tickets to a Washington Redskins game on just a week's notice. They may be behind the goals post, but they're high enough up so-that he and his family can almost see the entire field

If this wasn't enough to fight for the job, the Vice President and his wife are guaranteed at least five invitations to White House dinners a year, one of them a white tie affair.

He also can attend any large function the President holds on the White House lawn providing he doesn't get in the way of the press photographers.

But the real beauty of being Vice President is that your time is your own. You don't have to clock in in the morning, nor do you have to check outat night. If someone calls up at 10 a.m. for a tennis game, you can always make it. If a rich friend wants you to come to Palm Springs for a long weekend, there is no one who will deduct time from your vacation.

When the President goes out of the country you can sneak into his Oval Office and sit in his chair. And if no one is looking, you can even talk to Moscow on the President's hot line.

The Vice Presidency is the second highest office in the land. For this reason people you have never heard of are constantly trying to get into your good graces. offer free groceries, others will offer you cash. You don't have to take either. But if you do and you're, caught, all is not lost. You can always make a deal with the attorney general to plead "no contest," which he will happily accept so not to bring scandal on the country. Then you can go back home and become an author of fiction and, with a good agent, earn twice as much as, you did as Vice President.

Is it no wonder that so many people in this country have no interest in being President, but would give anything to be Vice President of the United States? If I ever dreamed Ronald Reagan was looking for a liberal to run with him on the Republican ticket I would have put my application in long before he ever public opinion against him. The practice he has followed of talking tough to and about the United States quite obviously has not even convinced his own countrymen.

Mexico has had to quadruple the price of its passport to $64, to keep its well-to-do people home, so great is the attraction that the United States exerts on Mexican vacationers, and the poor, the laborers who do not bother with the passport formality, are jumping the border at the rate of around two million a year, according to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

But Echeverria also has gotten involved with Israel and Zionists, with the past and present governments in Spain, and with businessmen, industrialists and landowners in Mexico and abroad

In 1975, Mexico cast its vote in the United Nations in favor of a resolution that equated Zionism and racism

U.S. Zionists thereupon proclaimed a boycott against the Mexican tourist industry and the Mexican government blamed them for a decline in its normally profitable tourist business. So serious did the problem become that Echeverria sent Foreign Minister Emilio O. Rabasa to Israel to smooth the matter over. But after press reports quoted Rabasa as having used the phrase "forgive and forget" in English in his talks with Israeli officials, Echeverria, who speaks only Spanish, fired him. "Any Mexican would prefer to die before asking pardon," Echeverria told the Chamber of Deputies.

Again, after Israeli commandos rescued the hijacked hostages held in Uganda in July, Mexico issued a statement in the United Nations that Israelis considered more a condemnation of Israel than of the Echeverria's demand that the U.N. Security Council impose sanctions on Spain after the Franco government executed Basque terrorists in 1975 also was considered ill-advised, in view of his high ambitions.

Since the death of Spanish dictator Francisco Franco. Echeverria has been insisting that Mexico could not establish full relations with the new government until all political parties. including the Communists, are allowed to participate in parliamentary life. Yet Mexico has never allowed the Communist Party a place on its ballots.

Probably what most seriously troubles the United States and other industrial nations of the world is the Charter of Economic Rights and Duties of States that Echeverria proposed in 1972 and which is his chief claim to fame.

As Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has said, there is much in the charter that the United States applauds. But there are also points with which neither the United States nor the other developed, marketeconomy countries can agree. Foremost among them, perhaps, is that which would permit confiscation of foreign-owned property.

Echeverria likes to recall that 120 nations approved the charter when it was voted in the U.N. General Assembly in December, 1974. Six countries - the United States, Britain, West Germany, Belgium, Denmark and Luxembourg — voted against it. Ten - France, Japan, Holland, Austria, Canada, Ireland, Israel, Italy, Norway and Spain abstained. Nevertheless, when Mexico finds itself in financial difficulties it does not turn to the Soviet Union or the 119 other members of the tyrannical majority for help, but rather to those countries that objected to his charter's anti-capitalist, anti-business, anti-progress provisions. Echeverria himself apparently has come to the realization that his hopes of succeeding Kurt Waldheim as U.N. secretary-general at the end of the year are vain.

He told reporters in Mexico City recently that powerful interests in a world in conflict are arrayed against him because they know that as U.N. boss he would carry out a policy that favors poor countries.

Mexican newspapers, however, recently quoted the Norwegian newspaper, Morgenbladet, as saying that "there are signs to believe that the Nobel Peace Prize will be given this year to President Echeverria, for his work on formulating the principles of a new, more just economic order."

Morgenbladet was referring precisely to the charter of economic rights to which most of the free world's governments and businessmen object.

Welcome John, but what about brown-skinned aliens? first stay - nearly two years -

WASHINGTON - John Lennon, the shorn Beatle who went serious and now has heavy thoughts, recently became a permanent resident and thus eligible for citizenship. Welcome to the melange, John, though I must say that you did better than the other 7,999,999 illegal aliens everybody gripes about.

So, good luck, John, you had the money, the lawyers, and the prestigious friends to testify that you were a good sort. After fighting the feds for four years, you made it.

But what about those 800,000 nonames caught every year as illegal aliens and thumbed out of the republic? Most have brown skins, speak Spanish only and work in jobs that true-blue Americans on welfare or unemployment won't take. Could you compose a song for them?

Maybe those 7,999,999 illegal aliens threaten our way of life. Maybe the fact that the rest of the world still pants to come over here is a mixed blessing - a tribute and a tribulation at the same time. But weren't we once taught that the United States is the home of the free and the land of the brave, and that the no-names of the world had a chance to come here and make a better life?

If we have repealed that notion, then how come the rich, welleducated and privileged can get in here much easier than the no-name dishwashers, house cleaners and parking lot jockeys who must live in

I know several aliens who, like Lennon, have the wherewithal and smarts to stay on here, and do so because they feel the United States is where the action and money are. But they talk about America contemptuously, while enjoying its benefits.

A doctor from Sweden comes to mind. So does a photographer from Great Britain. A Frenchman in the restaurant business is a third. For them, the United States is a place to make out and avoid the high taxes of he enlightened social-democracies they left, and which they say are so much better than this seat of crassness.

Only a few seasons ago. Lennon was a star at Black Panther rallies, condemned the United States on Vietnam and freely lent his name to leftist causes. Well, as a visiting alien, he was exercising free speech and there's nothing wrong with that. Unlike most celebrities, Lennon had trouble.From August, 1971, when he entered the United States as a tourist, until this July 27, when an immigration judge formally granted him permanent residency, Lennon had a running battle with the government that would have dismayed any person with before ordering him to leave. INS had discovered Lennon had a hashish conviction back in England.

But Lennon's high-priced lawyers strung out appeals, good wife Yoko Ono Lennon got pregnant and then it was revealed (a blessing for Lennon) that Sen. Strom Thurmond (D-S.C.) had written the Justice Department in 1972, trying to get Lennon the hellout-of-the-country because of a claim that Lennon planned to help Yippies wreck the Republican convention. The current judicial climate in the republic is such that if anybody tried to wreck Nixon in 1972, that anybody is a hero.

So the tide turned and Lennon's deportation order was stayed. The courts ruled that a drug conviction was no reason to keep him out, and all he needed was approval of the immigration judge. He got that, after testimony by character witnesses including Norman Mailer, Gloria Swanson and Geraldo Rivera (of TV fame). Miss Swanson pleaded that Lennon means much to the youth of America.

Meanwhile, those brown-skinned, Spanish folk who apparently don't mean much to the youth of America are hustled out when caught. It seems that "liberal" 1964 immigration act, requires Western Hemisphere aliens to go home and there apply for permanent citizenship. If granted, it's on a first-come, first-served basis.

Those from the Eastern Hemisphere, like Lennon, can apply from here, and are chosen preferentially, meaning the accomplished and skilled are favored. The result is that the poor, unskilled aliens from Mexico. Latin America and the Caribbean go home when caught and probably don't return. Smart Britishers and Europeans hire good lawyers and wind up staying here. "The concept of American fairness calls for corrective action," says INS Commissioner Leonard C. Chapman, adding that the only way to keep out illegal aliens is to prohibit their employment by law. Otherwise, it's seal the borders and hunt for the 7,999,999 - which is impractical and abhorrent.

True, some brown-skinned folks wind up taking jobs other red-blooded Americans want. And true, some brown-skinned folks evade the law and stay on for years. But in a showdown, I am perversely for the brown-skinned folk willing to take dirty jobs to improve their lot, and I'm unsympathetic to the well-educated elitists who come here to enjoy the goodies while looking down their noses at our country.

WASHINGTON — The State Department rushed to defend its hiring of minorities after Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, during questioning about the department's practices by a predominantly black audience in Boston Monday night was jeered

Kissinger, who prides himself on being able to cope with any audience, was unprepared for the questions associates said, which followed his address on "America and Africa" before the annual convention of the National Urban League.

He had expected support for his new and controversial championship of black minority rights in Africa. But the primary interest of his questioners, was black rights in the State Department, and Africa.

was black rights in the State Department, not Africa.
When Kissinger was asked why there are so few blacks in the State Department, groans of derision greeted his reply:

"It serves nobody's purpose to appoint black personnel unless they meet all qualifications."

Kissinger was jeered again after he was asked why black ambassadors are sent only to African nations and replied: "Let me make on thing clear. When we assign ambassadors, we don't ask whether they're black or white."

Kissinger said, "we will give preference to black personnel wherever possible, and we are making a serious effort to increase the number of qualified blacks in the Department of State. We're dedicated to this, and we will carry it out."

list of actions taken to stimulate minority hiring.

The records showed gains, starting from a very small base, in minority employment in recent years. But the levels are still considerably below what senior officials said they are determined to achieve.

Vernon E. Jordan, executive director of the Urban League, said in an interview that he recognized that black recruitment has greatly improved under Kissinger. But Jordan said the audience reaction was "understandable" in view of Kissinger's responses.

"I think it gave him a better understanding of black feeling and black understanding of the historic assence of blacks in the State Department," Jordan

Furnishings can assist charming look of Early American decorations

By BARBARA HARTUNG Copley News Service

Q. Some years ago we lived on the East Coast and I guess I took for granted the older homes with the historical flavor they gave. Now we are living in a very plain California home and I long for the charm of Early American decor. Our bedroom, in particular, is fairly large - 17 by 20 feet — and I would especially like to create the atmosphere of Early Americana in this room. Perhaps I can do it with furniture, accessories and other touches. Do you have some suggestions? - S.D.

A. Perhaps if you take a short inventory of just what you like about Early American decor, you could repeat some of the details that would add richness to a plain room. First, would you consider adding a fireplace to the room? This, of course, would be expensive but would lend a note of authenticity to your room. You also might consider adding a beamed ceiling, depending on how low your ceiling already is. Wall paneling might be another addition to give an historic touch. Or you might consider paneling up the wall and then a chair rail. Above the chair rail you could do wallpaper if you liked.

Perhaps in the selection of furniture you have the greatest latitude and opportunity for establishing your

You will find some excellent bedroom furniture, such as Ethan Allen's tester bed, which, in itself, is an important piece of furniture with its turnings and wood frame from which a canopy is hung. And the head of the bed lends drama with its heavy carving and straight lines. Choose an authentic fabric for the canopy and bedspread. Many are available in very lovely reproductions of colors ular during the early days of America.

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to ask someone's home if the food doesn't smell right, and I couldn't believe your answer. You told her not to mention it to the hostess—just "disguise" the food on the plate, and pretend to eat it.

Abby, how could you? Don't you know that if food smells bad (especially fish), it's spoiled and therefore poisonous?

As one who has suffered from seafood poisoning, I implore you to admit that your advice was wrong. Tell people to immediately inform the hostess that the food might be inedible. It would be a kindness to the guests and certainly to the hostess.

This isn't the first time this has happened. He has asked me to go to a movie and then asked me to pay for the tickets. He has only himself to support, so I can't understand it.

I work hard for my money and Mike knows it. He also works, but he

Crewel Point stitch among best marriages

DEAR ERCA: When you mention Crewel Point, I'm not sure whether you mean that crewel done entirely on needlepoint canvas or merely as an accent to needlepoint stitches. Please explain.—Mrs. Kevin Coyne, Wap-pingers Falls, N.Y.

DEAR MRS. COYNE: Crewel Point—that wonderful combination of crewel stitches and needlepoint canvas—is in my book one of the best marriages in the needlework kingdom! It was really created to broaden everyone's thinking about the possibilities of needlepoint, and that means anything and everything

You can either add the crewel stitches as a dramatic, threedimensional accent or use crewel stitches exclusively to cover your canvas. In both cases, you can use the regular canvas mesh to keep your stitches even while you need to count them, while at other times you just treat the canvas as though it were embroidery linen, stitching along the canvas freely, as if it were a background fabric.

You'll find the possibilities endless and the combinations almost unlimited. Have fun, but don't get too carried away. Be selective, eliminating too many colors and stitches so that the overall effect is simple and sensational instead of cute and cluttered!

DEAR MS. WILSON: I'm a relatively new stitcher and am intrigued by the chain stitch I recently picked up from my embroidery manual. It's a lovely stitch to my beginner's eyes made even lovelier because it's so easy and fast to do. The design I'm now working on has a path leading up to a house. Since the chain stitches would make a won-

(Name withheld)

DEAR ANON: Chain stitch can be a terrific solid filling, but don't pack the stitches too closely, or the effect will be lost. The filling is just as effective if the lines are shaded or worked all in one color with contrasting outline. (The stitches should all begin at the same end and run in the same direction to make an extra smooth trail of stitches.)

When extra lines have to be added to broaded the shape in one place, add them on the inside, allowing a continuous line to run along the edges. In this way the joining lines won't be obvious, especially if the first stitch of the joining line is tucked underneath

Any inspirational ideas?-Mrs. Belinda Foster, Albuquerque, N.M. DEAR BELINDA: Of course, quilt books featuring applique pieces could give you a nudge in the right direc-tion, but I have a method that works 100 per cent of the time—and you can go back to your childhood while

Just start making those paper snowflakes you did as a kid: fold a square of paper into quarters or eighths, then cut away the center point and the edges in one, repeating shape. Doing a few samples just for "trial and error" will tell you how elaborate or simple you want your final design to be. If you like, you can bring out those quilt books for this method, too—getting some help with shape ideas, like star points, chevrons, triangles. chevrons, triangles.

Has society the right (duty?) to suppress what it considers indecent in literature? It is a question that stumps the best of our juristic minds, so who are you or I to say? We are in an area where every question suggests a counterquestion. On the one hand, censorship tends to make itself look ridiculous, thanks to humanity's repetitious habit of being shocked at how little it took to shock the era just gone by On the other hand, has the gone by. On the other hand, has the defeat of censorship on almost every front and the consequent freedom of the writer to foul the air as he pleases really brought the world any great

We shift the questions to the judges, and they go on hunting for answers. In a new study called "Literature, Obscenity & Law" (Southern Illinois University Press, $12.50), Felice Flanery Lewis gives a painstaking and very readable history of their attempt to do so. It is a story with no tempt to do so. It is a story with no real conclusion, but one of its in-teresting points is that the judges have not been gnawing at the problem as long as one might suppose. Until near the end of the 19th Century, the author reveals, the idea of banning a book for indecency was something that rarely came up.

IN AMERICA'S earliest colonial days, it was not obscenity but blasphemy that put the censors on their guard, and the penalty for blasphemy in several of the colonies was death. As an example of the kind of book deemed unfit to read, Felice Lewis, who is Dean of Long Island University's Conolly College, notes that in 1669 Thomas a Kempis' "Imitation of Christ" was banned for being papist. At about the same time, a printer in Massachusetts was fined for possessing a suggestive pamphlet called "The Isle of Pines," a tale about a shipwreck victim cast away with four women whom he shortly shaped up as a harem. But the pamphlet was seized for being unlicensed material, not for being a dirty book.

With regard to the latter, the Puritans seem to have been fairly un-

It was not until 1821 that the law cracked down on a book for going beyond the blushing point of the con-temporary community. The place was again Massachusetts, and the book was our old friend "Fanny Hill" (which stayed uninterruptedly popular as a contraband item until the U.S. finally cleared it in 1966). Not until the last quarter of the 19th Century did salacious literature really become a matter of public concern. The causes, according to Dean Lewis, were two. One was the spreading of literacy which made the right people fear the effect of naughty reading on the wrong people. The other was Anthony Comstock.

Comstock was a professional busybody who organized an anti-vice crusade after serving in the Union Army and being shocked by the widespread cussing he heard. In 1873, after zealous lobbying, he secured passage of the Comstock Law which applied to the mails and is still the means by which obscene matter is at-tacked on the federal level. It was Comstock who denounced George Barnard Shaw as an "Irish smut dealer" and initiated the action which resulted in the arrest of the producer and the two leading actresses of the first American production of "Mrs. Warren's Profession." In the climate Comstock helped to create, almost no significant writer of the naturalist school, which was just coming into prominence, was to escape the charge of corrupting the public morals.

TO BE REALISTIC about it, this did the writers no harm. When the censor struck, the author so inevitably lined his pockets thereafter that it seemed that the Authors Guild, if it knew where its bread was buttered, would be out right now picketing in favor of harsher censorship laws. Still, it was a ridiculous period in which Leo Tolstoy could be denounced by Theodore Roosevelt as "a sexual and moral pervert" for writing "The Kreutzer Sonata." Sani-ty, insofar as it was applied to the pro-blem of obscenity and the public in-terest, was to be found mainly in the curts where conscientious and wise judges strove-to meet the problem with reason.

Almost from the birth of Compresented by Dean Lewis, jurists were doubtful as to whether the regulation of morality in literature was any business of the law. The thing that initially caused doubt in the judicial mind was the nature of obscenity; obscenity was what to a person of ordinary intelligence seemed obscene. Although that judgment still seems to have a sound kernel of common sense, it was not a strong enough formulation to stand up in the courtroom. The long history of legal disputation over the banning of books has centered upon the search for an iron-clad definition of the obscene, and the argument stil goes

Dean Lewis traces the course of the battle through all the landmark legal actions. She revives in memory such storm centers of the past as James Branch Cabell's "Jurgen," "God'a Little Acre," James M. Cain's "Serenade," the great watershed case of Joyce's "Ulysses" and of course "Lady Chatterly's Lover." Accommodatingly for the prurient reader, she has quoted all the embattled passages from the books in question, eliminating the need to wallow through the books themselves.

Commission says AMPAC made political gifts

By MORTON MINTZ

The Washington Post WASHINGTON — The American Medical Association's Political Action Committee and more than 50 AMPAC affiliates around the country gave at least $5,000 to each of 51 congressional candidates in the 18-month period ended June 30, reports to the Federal Election Commission show.

An AMA spokesman in Washington said that contributions in the two—year period that ends Dec. 31 probably will top those in House and Senate primary and general elections of 1974 when the AMPACs gave more money than any other special interest

The top beneficiaries are two Texans each of whom was elected to the House this year after surviving three separate contests—a primary, a run—off and a special election. They are Republican Rep. Ron Paul, a physician who got $30,000, and Democratic Rep. Sam E. Hall Jr., who got $20,000.

A California physician, David B. Horner, a Democrat, got $25,160, according to reports made by AMPAC, but was defeated in a primary last month. Louis C. Wyman of New Hampshire, an unsuccessful GOP Senate candidate, was listed for

In addition, 16 other House and Senate aspirants got between $10,000 and $16,000 each, while 11 got between $6,000 and $10,000. All told, 138 candidates received at least $500 each. They included 93 of the 433 members of the House (there are two vacancies)

Paying out an average of nearly $36,000 a month, the AMPACs gave the 138 candidates almost $570,000 and GOP and Democratic congressional campaign committees $77,250. The California AMPAC gave an additional $28,750 to its bipartisan State Congressional Target Committee.

The AMPACs have targeted substantial sums to members of congressional committees with jurisdiction over numerous matters of major concern to the profession, including legislation for health insurance, and for the prescribing, testing, promo-tion and pricing of medicines. Since the November, 1972, elections—mostly in the 1974 and 1976 contests—the AMPACS gave a total of $220,500 to 50 of the 99 members of the House Commerce, House Ways and Means, and Senate Finance committees, a tally shows. This sum includes $95,000 contributed to 19 of the 35 members of the units' health sub-

The principal recipients:

House Commerce: Edward R. Madigan (R—III.), $12,700; Goodloe E. Byron (D—Md.), $11,550; James M. Collins (R—Tex.), $10,275; Tim Lee Carter (R—Ky.), $9,500; Henry A. Waxman (D—Calif.), $9,000, and

Robert (Bob) Krueger (D-Tex.), $8,550.

Ways and Means: James G. Martin (R—N.C.), $10,000; Omar Burleson (D—Tex.), $8,000; William M. Ketchum (R-Calif.), $7,000, and Donald

D. Clancy (R—Ohio).

Senate Finance: Lloyd Bentsen
(D—Tex.), $17,000; Bob Dole
(R—Kans.), $13,000, and Bob Packwood (R—Ore.), $8,500.

One of the AMA's health insurance. For the 1974 elections, AMPACs gave approximately $800,000 to 131 legislators listed as sponsors of its health proposal insurance Medicredit, which would continue domination of the health—care system by physicians.

This year, the Democratic Party platform endorses a comprehensive system in accord with the views of Jimmy Carter, the presidential nominee. Outlining his proposals last April, he said he would put federal controls on hospital charges and on physicians' fees. The fees would be "pre—arranged" by the government — although, he said, "not in a military or non-conunilateral, abrupt or non-consultative way."

South African police open fire on demonstrators

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire again today to break up a march of some 5,000 students in the black township of Soweto and the South African Press Association said one youth "apparently" was killed.

Police said today's demonstration had dispersed but the protesters then attempted to regroup and continue their march, chanting political slogans and singing freedom songs. At a crossroads in the Jabavu district of Soweto, police confronted the students and opened fire with tear gas and guns.

According to a reporter, Fanyana Shiburi, the police appeared to shoot over the heads of the oncoming marchers but at least one of them was hit.

"I saw him carried away by police and he appeared to be dead, although I could not confirm this," he reported.

The march, organized after a meeting at a high school, shattered the peace in Soweto after conditions appeared to be returning to normal following massive protest demonstrations Wednesday.

Besides the Soweto march, there were disturbances in Katlehong and Tembisa townships east of Johannesburg.

A mob of about 1,000 Tembisa school children was dispersed by police after a liquor store and beerhall were stoned. Gangs attacked vehicles in Katlehong.

The student marchers in Soweto were apparently heading for the New Canada railway junction, the scene of the demonstrations Wednesday, when protesters were turned back by police as they attempted to march on downtown Johannesburg.

Police have confirmed that at least three persons were killed and 18 others injured in Wednesday's

Two of the dead, unidentified blacks, were killed by police gunfire, the police said. The third fatality was a 15-year-old girl who they said apparently was trampled to death by a stampeding crowd.

The Johannesburg Star reported that the casualties occurred when the police opened fire to turn back 20,000 blacks trying to march on Johannesburg to protest the imprisonment of black student leaders.

Two other blacks were killed by a train in Soweto Wednesday, but the police said their deaths apparently were not due to the unrest.

The government reported earlier that there were no deaths, but they said 13 persons were injured.

Early today police broke up roadblocks students threw up on a main road inside the township in an attempt to stop workers from going to work in Johannesburg. Fires were reported set at schools and administrative buildings.

As the situation calmed, police roadblocks set up Wednesday to seal off the township were removed. Some 200,000 black commuters jammed trains, buses and taxis to Johanness trains, buses and taxis to Johan-nesburg. But Soweto's 192 primary and secondary schools were virtually deserted, and only teachers reported

The government announced a nationwide ban on public meetings and said "several people have been arrested in connection with the riots

The disturbances were the worst in Soweto since rioting broke out there June 16 and spread to a dozen other black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria. The known toll then was 176 dead, all but two of them blacks, and more than 1,100 injured.

Police in armored personnel

Police in armored personnel carriers patrolled Soweto all day Wednesday, dispersing roving crowds of blacks with tear gas. Police roadblocks sealed off the entire 26-square-mile township of more than one million blacks eight miles south of

The rioters stopped commuter trains, stoned cars and buses and burned the signal tower controlling trains that transport more than half of the 200,000 Soweto blacks who work in Johannesburg.

Air of normality belies Korean war threat

By SAM JAMESON The Los Angeles Times

SEOUL - Twenty-five miles from this capital, more than 1 million armed men confront each other along the demilitarized zone that has separated Communist North Korea from the anti-Communist south since the end of the Korean war in 1953.

Yet here in Seoul, the stores are bustling. Myongdong entertainment section is neon-lit and filled with spirited youths, and long lines of buses carry commuters to and from work. The air of normality belies the military threat.

More than in most countries, the visible and invisible stand in strange

Buildings of 40 stories and more rise where huts predominated only a few years ago. Factories cover the countryside, and apartment complexes dot the hillsides, testimony to the tenfold growth in the gross national product in the last 14 years.

Invisible to the visitor, however, are the thousands of workers still receiving wages short of the government-calculated monthly expenses ($136) of the average urban household.

The banter and laughter of crowds in a bar-restaurant and families climbing South Mountain for a Sunday picnic testify to the richness of

But at the same time, invisible to the visitor, Korean Central Intelligence Agency officers and in-formers permeate the society and keep constant vigil over the handful of dissidents who still dare to express critical views of the political system.

A man like Kim Dae Jung, who opposed President Park Chung Hee in a 1971 presidential election before the ex-general rewrote the constitution to concentrate all powers in himself becomes totally invisible in such a society.

Since 1973, Kim has been abducted from Tokyo, held under house arrest in Seoul and subjected to charges of election-law violations resurrected from as far back as 1967. Since last March, he has been jailed for asking Park to resign, an act which was interpreted by prosecutors as an attempt to overthrow the govern-ment. Seventeen others were arrested with Kim, and their continuing trial, censored out of the Korean press, also remains largely invisible.

Seven Protestant ministers and five Christian social workers were seized in a series of arrests, beginning May 25. They were held without charges and ultimately were released in early July. Not a word appeared in the Korean press. Other figures less prominent, and therefore unknown to the international community in Korea - which has become a grapevine of news - simply disappear.

Yet, for the vast majority of the 34.7 million people of South Korea who are willing to refrain from criticizing Park, considerable freedoms exist - including the freedom to criticize policies — even without comparison with the totalitarianism of North Korea.

On the surface, the visible relationship between South Korea and the United States, its principal defender, appears better than at any time since Park switched to one-man rule in 1972.

President Ford favored South Korea with a visit in November, 1974. The fall of South Vietnam spurred a new awareness of the American defense commitment to Korea. U.S. determination to uphold it was reiterated with unprecedented frequency - even with nuclear saber rattling - through 1975. Congress this year passed economic and military credit assistance for South Korea without major controversy. And Washington has steadfastly refused to have any independent dealings with North Korea, despite North Korean attempts to lure the United States

But invisibly, for the moment at least, tensions are building up bet-ween South Korea and the United States. American officials dealing with Korea both here and in Washington throw up their hands in exasperation over Park's refusal to stop throwing political dissidents in jail.

South Koreans, for their part, have been growing increasingly wary about the reliability of the American commitment to their defense.

Long, hot, dry season puts strain on watering

By TOM STEVENSON

WASHINGTON - During olonged hot, dry summer weather, it is often impractical to try to water all the plants that may need it. In such a sitution, preference shoulg be given to newly planted trees, the vegetable garden and to plants growing out-doors in window boxes, tubs, pots and other kinds of containers.

A newly planted tree of any size needs a good soaking about every two weeks during periods of little or no rainfall for the first two or three years n the new location (except during

Studies have shown over and over

Failure to do so can set the tree back considerably and be responsible for it making little or no new growth for a long period of time if allowed to dry out a few times.

Plants in containers need to be watered more often than similar plants in a regular garden because the soil dries out faster. The soil of the vegetables that benefit most from mulching. Besides controlling weeds, the mulch will conserve moisture, keep the soil temperature more even, and keep the crop clean.

A bearing fruit tree will provide a much better crop if it is watered occasionally during prolonged periods of dry weather. One good way to water a fruit tree is to place a hose near its base and let the water trickle into the soil for several hours. Watering is most beneficial during the six-week period prior to ripening of the fruit.

Attempt under way to restore secrecy aura

By GEORGE LARDNER Jr.
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Backstage attempts to restore an aura of secrecy at various government agencies have been under way on Capitol Hill for

The National Transportation Safety Board proposed a bill, for example, that would have curtailed the Freedom of Information Act at the behest of foreign governments. So far there have been no major legislative inroads on the disclosure rules established by the 1974 amend-ments to the Freedom of Information Act. The law makes government documents available, as a general rule, at public request.

But fending off changes has required a careful lookout on the part of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), and his Senate judiciary subcommittee on administrative practice and procedure.

In a brief Senate floor speech concerning the Transportation Safety Board. Kennedy said he would "continue to oppose attempts to cir-cumvent the Freedom of Information Act with provisions vague in language, overbroad in scope, or unjustified by clearly evidenced

The Safety Board bill was prompted by a recent international agreement civil aviation, the so-called "Chicago Convention" which warns against premature release of certain aircraft accident information garnered from investigations conducted by foreign countries.

The French embassy protested that the Safety Board might be unable to restrict such information in a satisfactory manner.

The solution originally proposed to Congress, Kennedy later pointed out, would have prohibited absolutely the disclosure of information obtained from an investigation conducted by a foreign state. Not even the courts could have been able to obtain the data without the foreign government's consent.

"The bill was reported out of the Senate Commerce Committee May 14, giving the board basically everything it wanted." recalled Senate subcommittee chief counsel Thomas Susman.

Texas seeks 1976 victory over Sooners

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) - The Texas Longhorn football team is not exactly the doormat of the Southwest Conference. Its worst win-loss record in recent years is 8-4.

But there's one question which gnaws at Coach Darrell Royal.

The job will be filled by an inexperienced sophomore, he said, either Ted Constanzo or Mike Cordaro, both San Antonio schoolboy products.

Royal didn't mention that he'll have back on offense workhorse junior fullback Earl Campbell. And freshman Johnny Jones, who finished sixth in the olympic 100 meter race last week, is expected to add new speed. Such strong points were not missed

In fact, his warmup shirt, a gift from a friend, said: "Stones and (a picture of Mickey Mouse) are No. 1." "There's no such thing as too much self-confidence," said the exuberant Stones as he signed autographs for hundreds of kids. "It's what you do

By GEORGE LARDNER Jr. The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Backstage attempts to restore an aura of secrecy at various government agencies have been under way on Capitol Hill for

The National Transportation Safety Board proposed a bill, for example, that would have curtailed the Freedom of Information Act at the behest of foreign governments.

So far there have been no major legislative inroads on the disclosure rules established by the 1974 amendments to the Freedom of Information Act. The law makes government documents available, as a general rule, at public request.

required a careful lookout on the part of Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), and his Senate judiciary subcommittee on administrative practice and procedure.

In a brief Senate floor speech concerning the Transportation Safety Board. Kennedy said he would "continue to oppose attempts to circumvent the Freedom of Information Act with provisions vague in language, overbroad in scope, or unjustified by clearly evidenced

The Safety Board bill was prompted by a recent international agreement on civil aviation, the so-called "Chicago Convention" which warns against premature release of certain aircraft accident information garnered from investigations conducted by foreign countries.

The French embassy protested that the Safety Board might be unable to restrict such information in a satisfactory manner.

The solution originally proposed to Congress, Kennedy later pointed out, would have prohibited absolutely the disclosure of information obtained from an investigation conducted by a foreign state. Not even the courts could have been able to obtain the data without the foreign government's consent.

"The bill was reported out of the Senate Commerce Committee May 14. giving the board basically everything it wanted," recalled Senate subcommittee chief counsel Thomas Susman.

"That would have left foreign states, the Safety Board and the airplane manufacturers — since they often participate in the investigations - with the information," Susman said. "But not passengers or families suing for damages. And not Dickering produced a much narrower, tightly drafted bill protecting only "confidential in-formation" — and then only on explicit request of a foreign government, and for two years at most. It passed the Senate July 1.

"The same thing has happened on other occasions," Susman says of efforts to wiggle out of FOI requirements. "I think Congress is standing up for what it said, that disclosure is to be the rule... Everything we've caught, we've been able to satisfy ourselves, by amendment or otherwise, that it is not doing injury to the basic prin-ciples of the Freedom of Information

The result, nevertheless, is to keep adding to the pile of laws that the Freedom of Information Act acknowledges as exempting a wide range of government records. Under the law, officials need not make public any records "specifically exempted from disclosure by

More than 60 such laws were on the books last year. Each agency seems to have its favorite, according to statistics compiled for a House government operations subcommittee headed by Rep. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.).

The Agriculture Department likes to invoke a statute prescribing confidentiality for periodic reports from "warehousemen, processors and common carriers of corn, wheat, cotton, rice, peanuts or tobocco...all, ginners of cotton...all brokers and dealers in peanuts" and other such

The CIA leans heavily on its power to protect "intelligence sources and methods from unauthorized

The Postal Service seems fond of a law permitting secrecy for "the reports and memoranda of con-sultants or independent contractors," among other matters.

U.S. golfers dominate play

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) -Go West young lady. The golfing scene is brightest there.

There's neither the money nor the competition in Europe for any promising woman to cut her golfing teeth on. And the European Women's Championship over Sunningdale's 6,174-yard, par-74 course is showing that all too clearly.

It's the Americans-and the women who have moved to the United States from overseas- who dominate the play. Like Jan Stephenson from Australia, who came in from a twounderpar 72 to complain bitterly,

"I'm frustrated. I could have played

Miss Stephenson, 24, and born in Sydney, was Australian National Champion in 1974 before moving to Palm Springs, Fla., to join the U.S. circuit. She knocked at least a stroke off her scoring average over the past two years and picked up more than $36,000 on the way.

"You don't get competition like that anywhere else," she said. "It's fierce and it's done me a power of good."

Miss Stephenson was one of only 11 omen to return subpar figures after the first round of the tournament

Wednesday. Six of those come from outside the United States—but five of them play regularly there.

By contrast the handful of professionals from Britain and the amateurs from Britain, Sweden and Italy all had scores well into the 80s and in one case as high as 92.

An exception was the surprise packet of the tournament so far—Mrs. Angela Uzielli, a British housewife and mother of two who has never been picked to play for Britain. Mrs. Uzielli, an amateur, astonished everyone with a two-under 72 to share

Leader after the first of the four rounds was Chako Higuchi of Japan, whose 68 missed equalling the course record by one stroke. She started with an eagle on the par-five first, followed with three birdies in a row and was chipping to within a few feet of the pin on almost every hole. Only a stroke behind came Silvia Bertolaccini of Argentina who moved to Houston when she turned professional a year ago. The top U.S. woman was Sandra Palmer, who shot a 71 for third after

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) - It should be dream combination-Arthur Ashe, the world's top-ranked tennis player in 1975 and Jimmy Connors, the topranked player the year

Ashe, with his fearsome serve, and Connors, with his spendid recoveries and return shots, compliment each

But it was not until an international tournament in Washington two weeks ago that the two teamed up and sent the tennis world blinking in disbelief.

For years, the two were archrivals. Ashe's criticism of Connors for bypassing Davis Cup competition resulted in a multimillion dollar suit by Connors. But all that, they insist, is history.

Ashe and Connors are entered in the doubles compeititon this week at a $100,000 international tennis tournament here, and their appearance together Wednesday was the main draw in a full day's action.

Off the court, hundreds of young tennis fans crowded around the two seeking autographs.

Raul Ramirez, who won in a thrilling match in the court adjacent to where Connors and Ashe defeated Jeff Borowiak and Ralph Norberg, admitted he was bothered by the distraction but remained philosophical. "Anybody playing next to Connors and Ashe would be bothered," he Ashe and Connors defeated Borowiak and Norberg 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

Eagles trade linebacker

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Eagles traded balky cornerback Joe Lavender to the Washington Redskins Wednesday for defensive tackle Manny Sistrunk and three future draft choices in a National Football League deal.

Lavender refused to report to training camp last week under an ultimatum from Coach Dick Vermeil, who then announced Lavender was finished with the Eagles and would be traded if possible

Lavender, 27, was the Eagles' 12thround draft choice from San Diego State in 1973. Sistrunk, 29, was the Redskins' fifth-round choice from Arkansas A&M in 1970. He was a Redskin starter for three years and has been used as a third tackle since 1973.

"I think he (Lavender) has got histhinking much more squared away now, and I'm positive he'll report and sign," said Vermeil. "That was a stipulation of the trade and Joe's

The trade included the Eagles getting a sixth-round draft pick in 1977, a fifth-round choice in 1978 and a fourthround selection in 1979.

Teton Dam: monumental man-made mistake

By GAYLORD SHAW and JOHN KENDALL The Los Angeles Times

TETON, Ida. - The bureaucrats decided in 1961 to build a dam on the Teton River. They selected a scenic canyon in Idaho's high plains for the dam and - although they knew the site presented problems - they started the federal government's ponderous dam building machine.

In the years that followed, the Bureau of Reclamation edged inexorably toward a disaster. It failed in early geological explorations to discover the extent of the site's flaws. It underestimated a critical aspect of design. It exceeded its own operational guidelines. It encountered serious problems during construction but didn't view them as signs of potential danger.

Once they were convinced that technology and engineering could overcome nature's faults, the bureaucrats never reconsidered the decision to build the dam at that site.

It turned out to be a billion-dollar, man-made mistake, a disaster that could have been avoided.

At 11:57 a.m. on June 5, the dam collapsed. The earth-and-rock structure, 305 feet high and 3,200 feet wide, had been completed eight months earlier. Its reservoir was nearly full - 80 billion gallons of water stretching 17 miles up the canyon, a mass of water which, by one estimate, had the potential destructive power of an atomic

On a sunny summer day six weeks ago, that destructive power was

THE EMBANKMENT started leaking on its right side, and soon large sections of the dam crumbled, sending a great wall of water roaring down the canyon into the plain below.

The surge of water spread seven miles wide, at places 15 feet deep, at times traveling a mile a minute. Before its force dissipated 75 miles downstream, the flood was blamed for 11 deaths, a figure which could have been hundreds of times higher had the dam burst at night and the people not had two hours' warning.

The flood ripped through half-adozen towns and cities; it stripped topsoil from 100,000 acres of rich farmland and covered thousands more with several feet of silt; it destroyed or damaged 4,000 homes, 250 businesses and 3,500% farm buildings; it killed 13,000 head of livestock; it ruined the treasured possessions of thousands of families. Damage estimates now stand at $1.17 billion. But in human terms, the losses defy calculation. How, for instance, can a value be placed on the 22 years of sweat Kyle Carter spent to improve his farm near

"We'll be in debt the rest of our lives trying to get back something we already had," he says. "We lost about everything you can lose except our lives, and we're thankful for those.

Carter, a stoic man, contemplates the 22 years of sweat, then tries to find a brighter side. "You know what makes you feel a little better?" he asks. "If you was all alone, it'd be terrible. But when you look around and see your neighbors sharing it with you, it's a little easier to handle.

As Carter and his neighbors share the task of trying to reclaim a life's lost work, experts are poking at the remains of Teton Dam like autopsy surgeons trying to determine the cause of death

TWO SEPARATE panels, one a state-federal committee and the other a special Interior Department review group, have ruled out an act of God, such as an earthquake, as a cause. Their inquiries are centering instead on human causes, such as faults in construction, inaccurate calculations or a lack of calculations by the dam's designers and engineers.

It will be months before the panels make their final report. As the official investigations proceed. The Los Angeles Times examined hundreds of government records and conducted dozens of interviews to document these facts:

-In the final days before the dam failed, the reservoir was being filled three to four times faster than the one-foot-a-day rate specified by the dam's designers as the standard necessary to allow for safe inspections. A week before the collapse, boaters were warned off the reservoir for fear the rapidly rising water might cause landslides

-One reason the reservoir was filling faster than originally planned was that the main tunnel, designed to carry 2,500 cubic feet per second (cfs) through the dam's left abutment, was not operational. Its interior was still being painted, and its control gate had not been wired up. This meant that the smaller auxiliary tunnel in the right abutment was overloaded, sometimes carrying more than its 850-cfs design capacity. After leaks developed June 5 in the right abutment and the dam's right side. workers sought frantically to open the main tunnel. The dam failed before they could.

-Two months before the dam broke, a Bureau of Reclamation geologist who was monitoring groundwater observation wells in the right abutment reported that the "rate of the rising water table ... is more than 1.000 times that calculated for predicted movement of water..." He surmised that the cause was a "pressure response" and not the actual travel of water.

-But the geologist couldn't offer a more precise analysis. Teton had no piezometers, instruments widely used by dam builders to measure water pressure. For instance, when the Army Corps of Engineers built an earthen dam in a similar geological structure 20 miles from Teton, it set up a network of 49 piezometers.

—A YEAR BEFORE the disaster. another bureau geologist and a groundwater specialist warned of "a potential hazard" in the possible exposure of the dam's embankment to hgh-velocity seepage, especially because of the presence of fissures and other foundation voids in close proximity of the embankment. This June, 1975, memo also said that because of "the subsurface complexity of the area ... unforeseen conditions should be expected."

-Man-sized caverns, voids and 'unusually large' fissures were discovered during excavations on the right abutment in February, 1974. In the ensuing months, half a dozen other fissures were found in an area near the right abutment. These were not filled because they were considered to be outside the contractor's work area.

-The bureau's program for sealing the foundation areas of the dam with a mixture of cement and sand, called grout, was the most elaborate and complex in its 74-year history. Slightly more than 5,757,000 cubic feet of cement and sand was used to form three underground "grout curtains." This was more than twice the 260,000 cubic feet the designers had estimated, but the dam's builders saw the overrun as a sign that the grouting program had succeeded. The Interior Department review panel, however, suggested that "the necessity for treating many bedrock cracks and joints and backfilling against irregular surfaces and steep slopes provides the possibility that failure developed in this manner through some patch that did not receive the desired treatment. -Investigators, as well as some bureau officials, wonder whether the dam's design was adequate for the difficult site. For instance, the Interior Department panel said in a preliminary report released Friday that it had "identified a number of aspects of design and construction of the dam that might have contributed to the development of internal erosion and rapid failure.

-No independent review is routinely made of dam sites selected by the bureau, which has constructed 300 dams in 17 Western states. One former agency official suggested that most of the favorable sites in the West had been used and dams are presently going up on "secondary sites." Dr. Marshall Corbett, geologist at Idaho State University, thinks that probably the biggest problem we have in the Teton Dam" is site selection. He told a congressional subcommittee hearing in Idaho Falls last month that he believed Teton Dam should not have been built "at that location.

-But once the Teton project was recommended by the bureaucracy 15 years ago, it seemed to be carried along on its own momentum, spurred by economic and political pressures. When the momentum "gets up to a critical speed, even the discovery that there's somethign wrong, fundamentally and basically wrong, is not enough to stop it," said Rep. Leo J. Ryan (D-Calif.), whose House subcommittee is investigating the

FOR A STRUCTURE containing 10 million cubic yards of earth and rock. Teton DAm failed with startling

The men who helped build it could do little but try desperately to plug the growing hole in the downstream embankment or watch helplessly and finally flee for their lives if they were below the canyon's rim.

Leaks were first noted downstream from the dam two days before the failure. One, flowing at 60 gallons per minute, was plotted at about 2,000 feet from the dam's base. The other flowed at 40 gallons per minute and was about 1,500 feet from the bottom of the dam.

The next day, the day before the dam failed, a third leak developed about 300 feet from the toe of the dam between it and the bottom of the spillway on the right abutment. It flowed at about 20 gallons per minute.

The project construction engineer. Robert Robison, measured the leaks and wrote a memo to his bosses at the bureau's Construction and Engineering Center in Denver. Robison, a square-jawed, plainspoken man, promised in the memo he mailed June 4: "I'll keep you advised."

The next advisories came sooner than anyone had expected. Shortly before 10 a.m. the next day - June 5 - bureau officials in Denver and Boise were informed that major leaks had developed at Teton Dm.

Notice of two leaks had been given at 8:30 a.m. at the dam site. Water spurted at two cubic feet per second about 900 gallons per minute from the rock at the junction of the downstream slope of the dam's em-bankment and the right abutment. It was about 132 feet below the crest of the dam.

THE SECOND LEAK, gushing at 50 cubic feet per second - roughtly 22,000 gallons per minute - was at the downstream toe of the dam at the right abutment. Water flowing from the abutment rock was moderately dirty, an indication that some erosion was taking place.

The leak which killed the dam developed at about 10 a.m. It was at about the same elevation of the earlier two-cfs leak, but this time water under pressure was flowing from the dam's embankment, about 15 feet from the right abutment.

At first, the leak was about 15 cfs. but it grew rapidly as embankment material was carried away. A cavern was formed, and "piping" began as embankment material was erorded internally and transported by water flowing through the same channel. A whirlpool developed at 11 a.m. on the reservoir side of the dam, and bulldozer crews worked quickly to push sand, gravel and rock into it in hopes of plugging the hole which created the swirling waters.

At the same time on the downstream side of the dam, two bulldozer crews tried to stop the growing hole in the same way. At 11:30 a.m., they abandoned their 'dozers and watched them fall into the cavern.

At 11:57 a.m., Robison wrote later. The dam was breached and a tremendous wall of water surged through the opening.

Theories abound on the cause of the collapse.

The state-federal panel of experts, headed by Los Angeles consulting engineer Wallace L. Chadwick, blamed the failure on "piping." It offered tentative suggestions on how it might have happened, essentially suggesting that massive seepage found its way through or around the dam's grout curtain or traveled through the dam's impervious core or between the core and the right abut-

The Interior Department group also cited the grout curtains but raised the possibility that the material used for the dam's core - "brittle and easily eroded" silt - might not have been adequately protected from the reservoir's water.

Several months from now the investigators may know specifically Stolen equipment found what killed Teton Dam, or they may not. It may be that nature will continue to guard the secret in that fractured, fissured, caverned right abutment. Or it may be that evidence of the cause was washed away with the 4 million cubic yards of the embank-

THE DAM SITE is in a region with a violent geological past.

It is 40 miles southwest of Yellowstone National Park, where geysers and earthquakes tell of the earth's continuing internal tumult.

Tetons, a snowcapped range formed 100 million years ago by a massive buckling of subsurface rock.

Known as the Snake River Plain, the region has a Zone 3 seismicity rating - the worst. Subterranean faults traverse the reservoir area. Some nearby wells produce water measuring a steamy 120 degrees, an indication that hidden cracks go deep toward the earth's core.

Through the eons, the Teton River carved a meandering steep-walled canyon into the plain, eating away at the layers of heavy, hard volcanic rock and looser, unconsolidated sediment.

The Shoshone Indians came to the region centuries ago to hunt and fish. They were followed by the mountain men, who trapped for beaver in the stream. Then in the 1870s, the Mormons came.

They found a harsh and unfriendly land - cold winters, searing summers, frequent dust storms. Except for the narrow canyon floor, they found the land was too arid to grow much more than sagebrush. But they found, too, that the soil was fertile mountain loam which, irrigated, would produce bountiful crops.

So they built their churches, then they built crude irrigation systems to tap the Teton's life-giving water.

It was the beginnings of an agricultural economy dependent upon water for survival. The farmers formed irrigation districts to build canals and dig wells to water their crops of potatoes, grains and alfalfa. But sometimes wells had to be dug 1,000 feet deep, and sometimes even then found no water.

As early as the 1930s, the farmers began talking of damming the Teton to store irrigation water. Their talk translated into political pressure, and Idaho's elected officials began pushing the Bureau of Reclamation and Corps of Engineers to study possible reservoir locations.

STUDIES WERE MADE sporadically for nearly three decades. Finally, with the economic and political pressure mountain, the two agencies in 1961 completed a threevolume review of possible projects on the Snake River Plain.

One of the recommendations: a major dam on the Teton River at a site selected "in the interest of securing optimum storage characteristics." It was the same canyon site at which the dam was eventually built, but even the 1961 study foresaw problems. There is, the report said, "a chance that overall losses of potential pool water through certain zones in the reservoir wall rock could be considerable. This problem will require careful study. The problems weren't mentioned.

though, when the joint study was used three years later as the basis for congressional authorization of Teton Dam. Harold Arthur, chief of design and construction at the Denver center and thus the official ultimately responsible for the bureau's dams, recently explained how the process works. A congressional authorization, he said "is our words coming back at us. In other words, we proposed to do something and build something at a certain place, and ... we draft the authorization language in most cases. So the authorization is a mere reflection of what we propose to do.

Though controversy would erupt later, the Teton bill sailed through Congress without a dissenting vote.

"I am pleased to say that this project has the endorsement of the business community, the farm com Sen. Frank Church (D-Idao.) told his colleagues in 1964. "It has enjoyed bipartisan support in the Senate. It has the approval of the governor of the state and of both of our representatives in Congress. I know of no important group in Idaho that has taken a stand against it." One selling point: In 1962, the Teton River caused extensive flood damage.

But six months later the region was so parched that a drought disaster was declared

Teton Dam would break that cycle, its supporters said. Besides, the farmers figured, with ample irrigation water the value of their land could double

Years later, when Rogers C.B. Morton was interior secretary, he considered killing the project for en-vironmental reasons, but couldn't find any backing from Idaho's power structure for such a move. "The bureau people were pleased with it." Morton recalled recently 'And the farm community needed the water. That was one of the real basic factors, the economics of the water."

After "we stiff-armed it for a while." Morton approved the opening of bids on Oct. 29, 1971.

Police nab armed man at mansion

FORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) - Fort Worth police say a man arrested outside the Cullen Davis mansion! carrying a loaded pistol has agreed to appear in misdemeanor court on a charge of possessing a weapon.

The 40-year-old man, who also carried 24 extra rounds of ammunition, was arrested about 2:30 a.m. Wednesday, police said.

Officials said the man drove to the residence in one of the most elegants sections in Fort Worth and said he; wanted to offer his condolences to the family in the wake of the double homocide and wounding of two other persons that occured there early

The man said his daughter was an aquaintance of Jackie Wilborn, 16, Mrs. Davis' son by a previous marriage.

Mrs. Davis was one of two persons wounded at the shooting at the palatial mansion.

Police said they jailed the man for investigation of unlawfully carrying a weapon and Capt. J.W. Tindall said the case would be presented to the district attorney's office.

The man was later released on his own recognizance.

Police said they noticed the smell of alcohol on the man's breath and he admitted he was carrying a gun in the glove compartment of his car and offered to let police search the vehicle.

Police said when they did they found a loaded .32-caliber pistol, the extra ammunition and a three-section folding picture frame with photographs of Mrs. Davis in a bikini.

HOUSTON AP - The FBI says it will seek indictments from a federal grand jury in connection with the recovery of five tractor-trailer rigs and heavy construction equipment. The FBI said the rigs and equipment, stolen in North Carolina, were recovered Tuesday in an abandoned warehouse in southeast Houston.

Robert R. Franck, special agent in charge of the Houston FBI office, said the stolen property was valued at more than $250,000. He said the rigs and equipment were stolen in the Charlotte, N.C. area in late June or early July. No arrests have been made on the case.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) - Leona Williams, believed to be the only woman to record an album in a prison, marvels at her reception.

"They were just fantastic," Miss Williams said about the inmates at California's San Quentin prison where she recorded "San Quentin's First Lady." 'They were more receptive than the average audience," she said. "I never thought about an encore. I started to walk off the stage and they stood up and applauded until I had to come back for an encore." The idea to record at the prison came from Merle Haggard, who spent time at San Questin from 1958 to 1960 for burglary and escape. Miss Williams is a

Maryland county gets double dose of tax increases

By JOHN F. LAWRENCE The Los Angeles Times

In Montgomery County, Md., a suburb of the nation's capital, property owners got hit twice last year — by a 13 per cent increase in assessed property values and a 34-cent jump in the tax rate. Result: The entire county governing body was voted out of In Atlanta's Fulton County, the average homeowner saw an assessed value jump of 25 per cent this year, three times the increase of recent past years. Now the county is appealing a court ruling challenging its assessment practices. Sharply higher assessments are the pattern over much of the nation the past year or so, a Los Angeles Times survey shows. The resulting protests are putting pressure on state and local officials to find alternative sources of revenue. "Inflation has caused these high (assessments) and I don't see it getting any better," said Ralph King, assistant assessor for San Diego County. Assessed values have been going up more than 13 per cent a year there. "Everything increased on a high market in a depressed economy," remarked William Lee Roberts, tax commissioner for Fulton County, Ga.

Roberts put his finger on a key element in the current property tax controversy. Real estate values have risen rapidly in recent years, in good times and bad. This reflects the high rate of inflation generally, the extra high rate of inflation in homebuilding costs and the bid-up in scarce prime residential lots.

Faced with these high market values, tax assessors have no choice but to carry out their duties and raise the assessed values. And while the assessors often bear the brunt of homeowner complaints, it is the spending measures approved by state and local legislators rather than assessed values that determine in the end how much taxes homeowners have to pay.

Unfortunately, the pressures on local government to spend have intensified and thus the inflation in property values simply serves to bail out hardpressed city and county budgets.

In Atlanta's Fulton County, for instance, a 25 per cent jump in assessed values could be translated into a sharp cut in the tax rate - the amount of tax per unit of value — if local government spending could be held in check. The tax rate is lower this year — but only 7 per cent lower. Assessment practices vary by state and city, with some keeping up yearly with the climb in market values but most lagging well behind and reassessing each individual home maybe only once every three to five years or longer.

Where property owners haven't felt the bite of a current reassessment, however, this has been a year of bad news from city hall on the tax rate.

In Philadelphia, assessed values are up only moderately this year, but the tax rate has been increased 29 per cent. Thus, even a person with a $40,000 house that didn't go up in value will pay $1,235, an increase of $280. Neil W. Burd, secretary of the Board of Revisions of Taxes, expects the big jump in the rate to stimulate a good many protests from homeowners trying to get their assessments

San Francisco went through a major property reassessment a year ago, so this year's boosts won't amount to much. But a spokesman for Mayor George Moscone believes the tax rate could go up as much as $2.00, which would put it at $13.50 per $100 of assessed alue. A homeowner with a $40,000 house already was paying $1,150 in annual property taxes, among the highest of the cities surveyed. A $2.00 jump in the rate would add $165 more.

The property tax burden varies f. om city to city, as the table below shows.

Annual taxes paid on a home with a market value larger cities and their suburbs with costly inner-city. transportation and educational problems, while fastgrowing cities like Houston are still low by com-All of which serves to add to property owner anger. In Georgia, the state supreme court is being asked by

Fulton County to overturn a lower court ruling challenging the county's authority to reassess one community without reasessing the entire county each year. A decision is expected next month. Fulton County tax commissioner Roberts contends an adverse ruling would leave the county unable to collect sufficient revenues. "We'll have to cut the county budget and I don't begin to know how we'll ever do it.' A county delegation to the state's General Assembly is looking for a way to keep assessments

In Meridian Township, just outside East Lansing, Mich., the first full reassessment in three years took place this year. The result was about a 22 per cent jump in property taxes. "People were really burned up." recalled George Fritz, township supervisor.

"They hadn't heard from us in three years. Then, suddenly, they were told their taxes were going up. There was a lot of fist shaking and finger pointing. At one time, the assessor feared for his life.' A meeting set for the 250-seat township hall in March to hear complaints had to be moved to an elementary school with seating for 800.

Heavy reliance on property taxes to support local government is under attack in a number of places. Last spring, the New Jersey Supreme Court declared that the method being used to educate children was unconstitutional. In short, said the court, wealthy school districts were better able to support education than poor ones. A similar ruling is hanging over California. But in New Jersey, the legislature already has moved to correct the situation. The answer: the state's first income tax, which will offset much of the property tax going to schools. Property owners will get an average $200 rebate on property taxes. Schools had to close for eight days this summer until the income tax was approved. In Fairfax County, Va., just outside the District of Columbia, 58 per cent of the county's revenue comes from property taxes, and those taxes have been rising about 10 per cent a year. Local officials "are very aware of the need for new sources of revenue." said James MacDonald, director of Budget and financial management. Pressures on property tax owners have been growing. While price inflation generally has amounted to about 75 per cent since the mid-1960s, per capita property taxes of the nation's major metropolitan areas have risen 100 per cent and in some cases much more.

know whether there was any "dynamite" in the material, Mr. Ford should take into consideration the Democrats' focus on Watergate as a campaign issue and their deter-mination "to drag Ford in by innuendo or anything else."

Cohen said his caution to the White House "has nothing to do with Connally's trial.

"He was acquitted and he's ab-solutely right on that," Cohen went on. "I don't think we should go back and question the judgment of his jury. He has been vindicated under our system. But we don't want to see a McGovern situation where the President picks a running mate and facts come out that would be detrimental to his chances. The justification for the pardon (of Nixon) was to put Watergate behind us. If you put Connally on the ticket, it seems to me you just bring it back.'

Connally, in the Post interview insisted he was doing nothing to seek the vice presidential nomination or encourage others to seek it in his behalf. But the decision to go on the attack against his critics had all the earmarks of an indirect campaign to improve his position in Mr. Ford's that is being repeated today.

The seminar, Herring told the oil and gas men in the Midland Hilton Inn, is "to make it as easy as possible for you to put your leases, your wells, your plants and your other facilities into compliance with the rule."

That rule describes methods of testing for hydrogen sulfide in wells

Six-month drilling activity slump ends

TULSA, Okla. - United States drilling activity has reversed a sixmonth slump and is expected to remain strong for the rest of the year. An Oil & Gas Journal survey found drilling contractors optimistic, but doubtful that 1976's average daily rig count will match 1975's 1,659.

Last week's rig tally was 1,632, up 14 from a year ago and far better than April's total of 1,457, An in-depth report in the Aug. 2 issue of the business magazine says the oil industry apparently has returned to its patter of spring drilling doldrums followed by an upturn for the rest of

In spite of lower activity, 18 per cent more wells were drilled during the first five months of the year, compared to the same period a year ago.

The American Petroleum Institute

reports completions were 17,235. Total footage was 14 per cent higher at 77 million feet.

Wildcat completions didn't follow, the API says. The tally through May was 3,751, a gain of only two per cent. Wildcat footage rose less than one per cent to 21.5 million feet. The Journal says these figures show that a substantial part of drilling budgets is going for shallow, inexpensive development wells that require less time and money to drill. Many drilling contractors cut their rates this spring to attract business. And many contractors contacted by the Journal said they have noticed a strong, recent surge in bid requests.

But the contractors have no uniform explanation for the increase in drilling. Some say the oil companies have just adjusted to the idea rate increase by the Federal Power

Commission. One major oil company based in Houston said it is holding drilling at last year's level due to "political uncertainties" — government regulated prices, proposed tax changes, and the possibility of an oil company divestiture bill. California scored the highest gain in rig activity, up 17 rigs to 89. Hardest hit has been West Texas and the Rocky Mountains area, the Journal

Operators blame the Rocky Mountains slowdown on a large increase in paperwork and procedures required for operating on federal lands, which cover a third of the mountain states.

The Independent Petroleum Association of Mountain States has launched a campaign to eliminate unnecessary steps and speed issuance of drilling permits. It has appealed to the Department of Interior, Federal Energy Administration, and Commission on Federal Paperwork.

Association president R. W. Prewitt Jr. of Denver says federal paperwork and delays have "gone beyond the bounds of reason." One operator says it takes three times the people to prepare 65 per cent of the paperwork to "stake" a well as it did two years

The Journal finds another problem is a recent government requirement that leases must be surveyed for archaeological and cultural evaluation before drilling can begin.

Early in 1975 near that South Plains town, a family was overcome and killed by low-hanging clouds of the poisonous gas that seeped from a nearby pumping jack.

The TRC seminar today will host another group of oil and gas men. Hank Krusekopf, assistant director of the TRC Midland District, and Tom Melville of the TRC San Antonio district office.

The incidence of hydrogen sulfide is heaviest in wells brought in in the San Andres and Fusselman Fields in West Texas, in the Smackover Field in Northeast and East Central Texas, and in the Edwards Field in South Central Texas.

Contract awarded

HOUSTON-Rowan Drilling-U.S. division of Rowan Companies, Inc.has announced it has been awarded a contract to perform operations in the oil shale research and development pro-gram of the U.S. Department of Interior Bureau of Mines.

The firm will drill and case a 120inch diameter shaft to about 2,400 feet in the Piceance Creek Basin of Rio Blanco County, 27 miles southwest of Meeker, Colo.

Rowan will assemble a new rig in Odessa, Tex., to fulfill the contract. The rig will be adaptable to conventional oil and gas drilling of smaller diameter wells to depths of 35,000 feet. Drilling and casing of the shaft, the first in the Basin, is anticipated to begin about Nov. l, and is estimated to require 10 months for completion.

South loses a finesse to the king of clubs and eventually loses the spade finesse as well. Down one. South should hold up his ace of hearts at the first trick. If hearts are continued, South can take his ace and ruff a heart in dummy. Now he can take the spade finesse.

West takes the king of spades and can shift to diamonds, but dec larer plays safe by taking the ace of diamonds, drawing trumps and then resuming the diamonds. By the time East can lead clubs South would take the ace of diamonds and try the spade finesse. By the time East cold get around to leading clubs, South would not need that finesse.

OLD GARBAGE is causing a problem at Midland College. Dr. David Norton, assistant to the president, said water from irrigation seeped through improperly compacted soil and caused decomposition of garbage in an old sanitary land fill beneath one of the entrances of the college. This decomposition caused the area to sink and workmen are digging out the garbage from the landfill. The large hole will be filled in with dirt and the garbage buried on the back side of the campus.

Mississippians give Schweiker cool greeting

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - Rotald Reagan's final preconvention campaign tour is off to an unsteady start after his liberal running mate, Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania, received a cool reception in Mississippi.

While Reagan and Schweiker headed for New York and New Jersey today where they hoped to pry loose some uncommitted and wavering Ford delegates, Reagan's Mississippi state campaign leaders conceded that the former California governor may have lost some support from the state's delegation with the selection of Obviously 10 or 12 days ago it was a Reagan delegation, and I cannot make that claim now. I still think it is winnable, but certainly it is a fairly tough proposition," W.D. "Billy" Mounger. Reagan's Mississippi state chairman, said Wednesday.

"It's hard to say if we held our own. We may have lost one or two (delegates)," said Swan Yerger, Reagan's chief delegate hunter in President Ford's campaign leaders optimistically predicted they will win a majority in Mississippi. Under the state's "unit rule," that could mean a unanimous 30 to 0 vote for Ford, possibly enough to put him over the top at Kansas City for the nomination.

But both Ford and Reagan supporters said they expected no move to formally abandon the delegation's uncommitted status until the Mississippi delegates caucus at the Republican National Convention opening Aug. 16.

In the Associated Press delegate survey. Ford has 1,100 of the 1,130 delegates needed for the nomination; Reagan has 1,029. There are 130 uncommitted delegates, including 30 in Mississippi. The AP tally includes only those delegates legally bound or publicly committed. Reagan made his first public appearances with Schweiker on Wednesday in Jackson at an airport rally and a joint news conference. Then they held several hours of private meetings with Mississippi and Alabama delegates. Schweiker was praised by many of the Mississippi delegates after the private meetings as a likeable, friendly person. But one delegate after another both Ford and Reagan backers - complained that Schweiker was too Schweiker, however, said at the news conference that his liberal voting record has been overstated. At the news conference, Reagan said he picked Schweiker as his

In a move that may soon be moot, Justice Court Judge Howard C. Green scheduled a preliminary hearing Aug. 26 for James and Richard Schoenfeid and Frederick N. Woods.

During a 45-minute hearing Wednesday in a heavily guarded courtroom in this Central California farming community, acting Madera County Dist. Atty. Charles Hoffman said it was likely that the bizarre case would be presented to the new county grand jury for indictments.

Such a strategy would avert the necessity for the state to expose its evidence in open court at a preliminary hearing, thereby sending the case directly from the closed grand jury to Superior Court.

Libertarian candidate airs views on talk show

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - Roger Lea MacBride's tie was loose and his voice rough from days of work as the Libertarian Party's candidate for President of the United States. Finally, Putnam said, "You are so highly idealistic that I am emotionally drawn to you." Putnam had signalled his audience that MacBride was all right. The visit was a success.

MacBride, 47, a round faced, shrewdly practical man, was in Los Angeles Tuesday and Wednesday for talk show appearances, a reception, a banquet and a press conference. He is the standard-bearer of the Libertarian Party, a group that is neither liberal or conservative. It believes that government should keep its hands off of businesses and in-

"The only tolerable activity undertaken by governments, as far as we are concerned, is the protection of individual rights against violence," a party pamphlet says.

That means there would be no antitrust laws, or big agencies to regulate phone companies, bus lines, railroads or airlines. Nor could the police jail homosexuals for engaging in a relationship that both consent to. There would be complete freedom for broadcasters, newspaper publishers and pornographers. Government aid would be abolished for the poor and the big corporations. And in foreign affairs, said Mac-Bride, "we ought to adopt the position of a giant Switzerland.'

MacBride, in an interview, said most Americans would have thought such radical views outlandish several

But since then, he said, the nation has gone through the Vietnam war, Watergate, recession and inflation.

He said he has found that voters are hostile to the Democratic and Republican parties and "are more tolerant and willing to listen to other

"Hope springs eternal and my running mate and I would like to invite you to the inaugural ball in January." MacBride told a news conference Wednesday. But he added "it is unlikely."

He said, however, that the party had grown from an organization that was on the ballot in only two states in 1972 to one that is officially on thd ballot of 15 states for the 1976 election and has hopes of qualifying for 40 states, including California.

The party has undergone somechanges since its founding in a Colorado home in 1971. In the early days, it was dominated by ideologues who argued like scholars over government's role in every facet of

As a boy, MacBride's father introduced him to Rose Wilder Lane who wrote the "Little House on the Prairie" books. She was something of an early day libertarian who taught MacBride "we ought to conduct our own lives." When she died, she left MacBride the rights to the books. NBC bought them and they became the basis for the "Little House on the Prairie" television show, which MacBride helped produce.

By 1972, MaeBride had moved to a farm near Charlottesville, Va., and was friendly enough with Virginia Republicans to be appointed a presidential elector - one of those who were to go to the Virginia statehouse and cast pro forma votes for Richard M. Nixon and Spiro Agnew, who had carried the state.

Instead, he voted for the Libertarian Party candidates, John Hospers, a University of Southern California professor, and Theodora Nathan of Oregon. He said he could not abide Nixon's philosophy, which conflicted with his own libertarian

"I became sort of an instant folk hero," he said. Invitations to speak came in from Libertarian Party groups and soon party members were asking him to run for President in

Facing defeat this year, MacBride is looking toward the 1978 Senate races, where he hopes the party will be able to field some strong candidates, and the 1980 presidential election. And he is looking far beyond that, to a day when, he said, the Republican Party will fade away, torn apart by the ever present conflict between antigovernment conservatives and the party liberals. "I don't think there will be three parties," he said. "There will be two, the Democrats and the Libertarians.'

Morton 'not clear' on his campaign role

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - President Ford's campaign committee faces an overhaul immediately after the Republican National Convention, and chairman Rogers C. B. Morton said it is "not clear" what his own role will be in a fall campaign.

"Maybe some new leadership over here would be stimulating," Morton said Wednesday. The campaign chairman said he is one of the authors of a series of proposals now before the President that would strengthen and expand the committee if Mr. Ford wins the GOP nomination. One key proposal is that Air Force Secretary Thomas Reed, who directed Reagan's re-election campaign for governor of California in 1970, be brought over to the Ford committee in a high-ranking

"He would be a great catalyst in bringing the Reagan people and the Ford across the country together,"

The Ford committee has been criticized for speaking with too many voices and for operating without a coordinated national political plan to meet the Ronald Reagan challenge. Campaign committee aides in turn have sharply criticized top White House officials for purportedly failing to understand the political consequences of presidential actions. Both political aides and White House staff members privately have complained that the President himself has failed to insist on organized direction of his campaign effort and has permitted a variety of aides, cronies and political operatives to speak for him in conflicting ways. Now, Mr. Ford is being urged to show in a firm way that he is in charge and that he intends to run a coordinated campaign. William E. Timmons, a former Nixon administration aide who will head the Ford campaign's convention operation in Kansas City, said a series meetings with Republican political leaders is scheduled in kansas City on Friday, Aug. 20, the day after the close of the GOP convention. Timmons said those invited to the meeting will chosen from "across the board" of Republican leadership and will include Reagan supporters.

He said he has also recommended that the President announce any changes in his campaign organization for the fall campaign while in Kansas city in an effort to portray "a positive image of a man who is in charge.

Such an approach could mean a new assignment for Morton, who has assured the President that he will served in any capacity that Mr. Ford 'feels comfortable" with, including his odl post as White House liaison with the campaign committee.

Aides at the White House and the campaign committee emphasized that Mr. ford had reached no final decision but predicted that Morton probably would stay on as chairman. They also said it was likely that Reed would be brought into the campaign. alhtough the names of two Texans, Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements and Peter O'Donnell, also were mentioned for organizational Reed said that his attention has been occupied by defense matters and that he did not consider it likely he would change jobs, although he has discussed the matter with senior campaign officials.

Morton is well-liked by the President, popular on Capitol Hill and respected for his past services to the Republican Party.

But since he was called over to the President Ford Committee on March 21 as an emergency replacement for Howard (Bo) Callaway, he often has found himself in the position of explaining "what he really meant" by some statements previously made.

The most celebrated of these came on May 11, when Morton said in reference to his job: "I'm not going to rearrange the furniture on the deck of the Titanic He spent most of the next week explaining that he didn't mean to be comparing the Ford candidacy to the ill-fated British luxury liner which hit an iceberg in 1912 and sank. Fifteen hundred people died.

Morton found himself explaining again Wednesday, but on an issue where his original remarks seemed more easily defensible. On Tuesday, at a meeting of reporters who were called in to discuss activities at the GOP convention, Mortin was asked whether he thought that Mr. Ford had the convention "locked up." "I don't think there is any lock up available to either side." Morton replied. "We think we're going in with a positive margin. We are confident we are going to win it on the first ballot. We haven't seen any measurable slippage (in Ford's strength) since the Reagan-

Schweiker deal, but we've seen some softening on the other side." When a published account featured only the comment saying that there was no lock up, Morton appeared to be contradicting the claim of his own committee that Mr. Ford now has the 1,130 delegates needed for the

The Ford campaign's minor blunders continued yesterday even as the President was meeting with 34 delegates and alternates to the convention from Virginia.

In addition, a check of the PFC's claims in South Carolina showed only one delegate shifting from Reagan to uncommitted, a change that was recorded by The Post Tuesday. Two of the other delegates mentioned by the Ford committee said they remain committed to Reagan, while the fourth delegate could not be reached.

Checks in other parts of the country also showed that one Ford delegate in Ohio and one in Iowa had shifted to uncommitted, while a Reagan delegate in Missouri also now claimed to be uncommitted. By the end of the day. The Post's delegate count gave the President 1,109 votes (one less, than on Tuesday), Reagan 1,029 (one: less than on Tuesday) and 121 uncommitted delegates (two more than
