

Judges agree Election Code unconstitutional

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Three federal judges have ruled that former Minnesota Sen. Eugene McCarthy cannot be on the Texas ballot in November as an independent candidate, but they agreed with McCarthy's position that part of the Texas Election Code is unconstitutional.

McCarthy had contended before the three-judge panel Thursday that the code is unconstitutional because it allows independent candidates in all races except for president and vice-president.

The judges agreed with First Asst. Atty. Gen. Dave Kendall's argument that McCarthy was too late, and to allow his name on the ballot would disrupt the presidential election in Texas.

Kendall said McCarthy had not proved that he had community support in Texas and that he could rely on a write-in candidacy.

McCarthy's lawyer, former Rep. Don Gladden of Fort Worth, who once failed in an effort to become lieutenant governor, acknowledged that only "60 some odd" signatures had been collected on petitions supporting McCarthy's candidacy.

McCarthy told a news conference on the steps of the courthouse, however, that his lawyers felt "we couldn't solicit signatures (to get on the ballot) because of an absolute ban" in Texas.

The two-hour hearing was punctuated by Federal Judge Adrian Spears' lecture of Secretary of State Mark White for getting to the courtroom nearly an hour late.

White, a defendant, apologized and said a secretary in his office had advised him the hearing was at 2:30 p.m., an hour and a half after it actually started.

"Your secretary doesn't set court hearings," replied Spears.

"I did not know the precise hour of the hearing," said White, adding he understood he was only to hold himself available.

"Did you try to find out?" Spears asked.

"No," replied White.

White testified that if McCarthy had sought a ballot position early in the year instead of waiting until Aug. 25, there would have been time to get an attorney general's opinion.

Kendall said Gov. Dolph Briscoe might have been "prevailed upon" to call a special legislative session to handle the problem.

Asked why he didn't move earlier in Texas, McCarthy said, "Things piled up. We were short of personnel, short of time and short of money."

Normally, candidates have 55 days to collect 16,700 signatures. McCarthy told reporters it would be fair for the court to set a deadline but reduce the number of signatures required since time is short.

McCarthy said he had not worked out a platform, but he was fighting with the television networks to share time with Jimmy Carter and President Ford.

McCarthy suggested six hours, and said Carter should get three hours "because he has three different positions." Ford would need two hours, he said, because it would take him two hours to explain a position others could explain in one hour. "We can take care of ours in one hour," McCarthy said.

Nuclear Profit determination plant O.K.'d changed by Pentagon

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Lighting & Power Co. says it is going ahead with plans to construct a nuclear power plant near Wallis.

The firm had announced in September it was definitely deferring construction of the plant, 45 miles west of Houston, because of financial difficulties and a drop in projected demand for electricity.

However, George W. Oprea, HL&P vice president, said Thursday that the decision to reactivate the Allens Creek project reflects the company's improved financial condition.

The decision also is in line with the company's program of shifting its fuel base from natural gas to coal and nuclear power, Oprea said.

The plant will be the second nuclear plant in the Houston area.

HL&P is one of four owners of the South Texas Project now under construction near Bay City, about 95 miles west of Houston.

The South Texas Project is scheduled to begin delivering electricity to customers in 1980.

Allens Creek plans originally called for two 1.2 million kilowatt generating units, with the first going into service in 1980.

The company said Thursday that it will build only one generating unit with construction expected to begin in 1979. Completion is scheduled for 1985.

WASHINGTON — Brushing aside the complaint of a California congressman that the step will mean a $200 million-a-year windfall for arms makers, the Pentagon said Thursday that effective Oct. 1 it will revise its method for determining profits on defense contracts.

Pentagon spokesman Alan Woods said the new formula is intended to tie profits closely to a company's rate of investment in equipment used for defense work.

Woods said the change would reward firms which spend more of their own money on plant modernization and would penalize firms with inefficient and aging equipment.

Rep. Charles H. Wilson (D-Calif.) urged the government to postpone use of the new formula until next February so the final decision will be made by the administration that is elected Nov. 2.

Wilson said the formula, which will permit defense contractors to treat a percentage of their investments as if they were operating costs in determining "allowable" profits, would boost profits by 1 or 2 per cent.

Woods said the formula was adjusted to avoid such windfalls.

Wilson called a news conference to make public a report prepared by his staff. It charged that the new formula was the result of a "buddy system" linking major defense contractors to officials of President Ford's re-election campaign.

The congressman based much of his argument on the appointment May 12 by Deputy Defense Secretary William Clements of Robert C. Moot, then treasurer of the Ford election campaign, to head an advisory committee that reviewed the new formula.

Woods acknowledged that Clements "was in error" in appointing Moot, a former Pentagon comptroller, to the post. But the Pentagon made public the 2 1/2-page report of the Moot committee in an effort to demonstrate that it was not biased in favor of defense contractors.

The previously secret report, dated Aug. 9, urged the Pentagon to make adjustments in the proposed formula to make sure there would be no increase in "the overall profit of all contractors."

The committee was created to review the results of a one-year Pentagon study titled Profit 76. After holding two hearings and submitting its report, it went out of business last month.

Rep. Wilson said in his report that "Mr. Moot, as a former Pentagon comptroller, had both the familiarity and expertise with the problem of defense profits which a formal review of the Profit 76 study would have required."

"Yet, given his association with the President Ford Committee, his appointment as chairman of the advisory committee was, on the face of it, wholly improper."

Moot was appointed as the Pentagon's chief financial officer in 1968 by then President Lyndon B. Johnson. He served until Jan. 9, 1973, when he became an official of AMTRAK, the government sponsored rail corporation. Moot served as Ford's campaign treasurer during the primary elections and is still on the Ford campaign committee's payroll.

In making his charge of a "buddy system" between Ford's re-election campaign, the Pentagon and defense contractors, Wilson gave a sinister interpretation to a number of associations involving Clements, Ford campaign chairman James Baker and others.

"In March, 1975, President Gerald Ford and George Steinbrenner were named, innocuously enough, among the best-dressed men in America," Wilson said. "Two years earlier, Mr. Steinbrenner was chairman of the American Shipbuilding Co. and in September, 1973... (the Watergate grand jury) discovered that officials of American Shipbuilding Co. had made a secret $100,000 donation to President Nixon's political campaign while that concern was trying without success to win payment of a $6 million overrun on a government contract."

More vaccine to be ready

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON — The nation's top health officials told President Ford Thursday that the four makers of swine flu vaccine will increase the amount of vaccine they will deliver by Oct. 1, when the national program is now scheduled to begin.

The drug companies had said they will have only 20 million doses of the vaccine ready, one-fourth the amount the government expected, for the start of the program, which is already two months behind schedule.

After a 45-minute meeting with Mr. Ford, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare David Mathews said the vaccine makes "are going to revise those estimates. Those are not accurate figures."

Mr. Ford called Mathews and Assistant HEW Secretary Theodore Cooper to the White House after learning of the delay in getting vaccine for the program's start. Although White House press secretary Ron Nessen quoted the President as saying his crash swine flu program "damn well better run right," the HEW officials said after their meeting that the President did not appear angry with them.

"He simply asked for a status report," Mathews said. The HEW secretary said he cannot understand why people are surprised that a program as large as this, scheduled to be done in such a short time, has run into problems.

"There's not evidence that I see of a snafu," said Mathews. "I believe we have done a good job in meeting the problems attendant to a program this size."

As originally envisioned by President Ford last March, close to 200 million Americans would receive protection against the possible swine flu epidemic — making it the largest public health program in the nation's history. Now because of delays in getting the vaccine and the inability so far to get the proper dosage for children, only 143 million Americans will be covered by the program.

Vaccine makers said they plan to deliver 113.3 million doses to the government by Nov. 30, an amount Mathews and Cooper said is enough to take care of all Americans they expect to want protection.

What they want the manufacturers to do, the HEW officials said, is deliver more of the vaccine early. Cooper said all adults who want it should be able to get their shots by Christmas, or "certainly by the end of the calendar year." If scientists can get a proper dose for children, they will get the vaccine by January — the peak of the flu season.

Cooper and Mathews said one reason for the delay is a legal dispute between government and drug company lawyers over when the makers are relieved of responsibility for possible suits from the use of the vaccine. Congress said the government assumes responsibility to defend law suits Oct. 1.

Single radical remains on '10 most wanted' list

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time this decade, the FBI is listing only one political radical on its list of 10 most wanted fugitives.

That doesn't mean all the others have been apprehended. Some simply have been dropped from the list, although they remain fugitives from criminal charges, and the FBI still wants to find them.

But several have been captured and brought to trial, often after years of hiding among friends in the underground. A variety of circumstances led to their capture — tips from informers, their own carelessness and sometimes nothing more than chance.

Katherine Ann Power rates as one of the most elusive of the political militants charged with crimes as a result of bombings and other violent protests during the turmoil of the late 1960s and early 1970s. She is the only radical remaining on the "most wanted" list.

She and Susan Saxe were charged in connection with the 1970 robbery of a Boston bank and murder of a pursuing police officer.

Ms. Saxe was arrested March 29, 1975, walking along a Philadelphia street. A policeman recognized her from a photograph on an FBI flyer. She is to go on trial in Boston Sept. 15 for murder and bank robbery.

After a lapse of several months, another radical on the "most wanted" list, David Sylvan Fine, was apprehended in San Rafael, Calif., after an informer tipped police of his whereabouts.

But Katherine Power has always been a step or two ahead of the authorities. FBI officials say they believe she and Ms. Saxe traveled together and lived in the same communities for a time. The officials say they have been unable to find her because, like most other political fugitives, she has been protected by friends in the protest underground, a culture the FBI has found difficult to penetrate.

Authorities say they believe Ms. Power still is in the United States, and the search continues.

Two others, Dwight Alan Armstrong and Leo Frederick Burt, were dropped from the "most wanted" list last April because the FBI, unable to find them, concluded they had fled to Canada.

Armstrong and Burt were charged with two others in the 1970 bombing of a University of Wisconsin building in which a researcher died.

The others, Fine and Dwight's brother Karleton Armstrong, have been arrested, convicted and jailed.

Among the other radical fugitives who have eluded capture are Bernardine Dohrn and Stephen Bingham.

Ms. Dohrn was removed from the "most wanted" list after most U.S. charges against her were dropped. But she's still wanted on a federal warrant for unlawful flight involving local charges in Chicago, stemming from her role in the 1969 Days of Rage in Chicago.

Bingham, radical lawyer and scion of a Connecticut political family, is wanted for murder and conspiracy.

But Katherine Power of the Creek legislative council in Oklahoma, the principal chief has been authorized by the Interior Department to spend tribal funds without obtaining the council's approval, as mandated in the 1867 constitution.

The constitution of 1867 divided the tribal government into three branches: executive (headed by the principal chief), legislative and judicial. The principal chief and member of the legislative council are elected by the tribe to four-year terms. In addition to allocating tribal funds, the council appoints the tribe's court judges.

Despite the general intention of Congress "to ultimately terminate the tribal government of the Creeks" and despite "an elaborate statutory scheme implementing the numerous intermediate steps toward that end," Bryant wrote in a 70 page opinion, "the final dissolution of the Creek tribal government created by the Creek Constitution of 1867 was never statutorily accomplished."

Therefore, the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs has legally recognized the principal chief as the sole embodiment of the Creek Nation's government, Bryant said.

Air Force Academy to conduct probe of alleged forgery ring

AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — The Air Force has ordered a full-scale investigation into a lawyer's charges that cadets have been operating a forgery and theft ring at the Air Force Academy since 1972.

A spokesman for the academy acknowledged Thursday that the Air Force Office of Special Investigations was conducting a probe.

Maj. Monte Blews, the academy's chief public relations officer, said

Thursday that one cadet forger was court-martialed and dismissed, and that another accused cadet resigned in the summer of 1975.

"Since then," he said, "there have been a few isolated cases of forgeries, but no evidence of a series."

However, the lawyer, Edward Joel Meyer, said Thursday in a telephone interview from his home in Middletown, N.Y., that at least two dozen cadets were robbed of thousands of dollars by a forgery ring that still may be active at the academy, involving at least four of its more than 4,400 cadets.

Meyer said they stole cadets' checkbooks and military identification cards and cashed forged checks in restaurants and stores in nearby Colorado Springs, as well as at the privately run Air Academy National Bank on the institution's grounds.

The attorney said he became involved after the parents of a cadet accused of forgery asked him to take over the cadet's defense from a military attorney.

Meyer's client was exonerated and returned to the academy in good standing, and the lawyer believes the young man was actually a victim of the forgery ring.

The attorney said that information he turned up in the course of defending his client was reported to the academy and that he was asked by its superintendent, Lt. Gen. James R. Allen, for all information he had on the subject.

Meyer said he sent Allen a letter last Aug. 23 detailing his charges, with transcripts of interviews with former cadets who allegedly admitted taking part in the forgery racket. He said he sent a copy to Air Force Secretary Thomas Reed.

Blews said that Allen ordered the investigation Aug. 27, the day after he received Meyer's letter.

The probe comes on the heels of a cheating scandal at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., which has raised a controversy about its honor code.

The Air Force Academy operates with a similar code, under which cadets must not lie, cheat or steal or tolerate any cadet who does.

Japan indicts secret agent of Lockheed

TOKYO — Yoshio Kodama, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation's secret agent in Japan, was indicted Thursday for allegedly receiving $275,000 from John W. Clutter, Lockheed's former representative in Tokyo, on Jan. 29 of this year.

The transaction assertedly took place just six days before the U.S. Senate subcommittee on multinational corporations exposed the bribery scandal which has thrown Japanese politics into confusion for seven months.

Kodama, 65, an ultrarightist convict, was indicted earlier on other counts in connection with other money received from Lockheed.

Clutter himself testified in the Senate Subcommittee hearings on Feb. 4 and 6, 1976, along with A. Carl Kotchian, former vice chairman of the aircraft firm. Both men have since resigned from the company.

Five months earlier, in August, 1975, the Senate Banking Committee chastised Lockheed for its controversial overseas payments and the company announced it had taken action to stop any bribery payoff.

Judge's ruling favors Indians

WASHINGTON — A federal judge ruled Thursday that the Interior Department has acted "wholly without the benefit of congressional mandate" in implementing laws concerning the self-governing authority of the Creek Nation.

The decision could have far-reaching effects on other Indian nations that have petitioned the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs for more tribal self-determination.

According to U.S. Dist. Judge William B. Bryant, legislation passed by Congress between 1920 and 1970 did not abolish the tribal government set up by the 1867 Constitution of the Muskogee (Creek) Nation despite the lawmakers' expressed intention to do so.

Therefore, the Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs has legally recognized the principal chief as the sole embodiment of the Creek Nation's government, Bryant said.

Blow for deregulation

With less "regulation" the purported goal of the remaining candidates in the increasingly heated presidential campaign, the Civil Aeronautics Board has provided — probably unwittingly — fuel for the deregulation drive.

Called upon recently to decide whether or not to allow direct service to Europe from 15 additional cities and to designate the airlines to fly the routes, the CAB gave Pan American World Airways, already groggy from financial ailments, a rabbit punch.

Ignoring the recommendations of its own examiner, the board refused to give Pan Am exclusive new transatlantic routes from Atlanta and Dallas-Fort Worth. The international airline must instead share service to Europe out of Dallas-Fort Worth with Delta Airlines. Pan Am was denied completely a part of the Atlanta-London service.

For years, Pan Am and America's other "flag carrier," TWA, have been the pathfinders in overseas air travel, often at crippling expense and usually under adverse political conditions.

Yet, just two years ago, the CAB turned down a subsidy request from Pan Am and TWA, ordering them instead to reduce their capacity.

Now, in its latest ruling, the CAB has opened the transatlantic competition to two more airlines — Delta and Northwest — compounding the financial ills of the "flag carriers" that brought them to the verge of bankruptcy.

Since neither Congress nor the CAB seems willing to let airlines offer the sort of convenient, economical and comfortable service the public will buy in the open market, President Ford should use his authority to reject the CAB ruling.

Both the public and the airlines would benefit from such simple justice.

Hovering on brink

Tyrants remain in power only when they can command the loyalty of the bodyguard that protects them from the victims of their tyranny. The armed forces that helped Gen. Idi Amin take power in Uganda five years ago and have been his shield are reported to be rebelling against his erratic and bloody rule. The days of the Amin government — if not of Amin himself — may be numbered.

Amin's reign of terror in Uganda has driven so many foreigners away that news of what is happening inside the country is sketchy. Half of the armed forces are said to be in a state of insurrection, and there is a revealing explanation for why Amin recently threatened to invade neighboring Kenya and then called the invasion off. His army units at the border refused to go.

The 39th president

The voters will decide Nov. 2 who will be inaugurated Jan. 20 as president.

But the Scribner-Bantam English Dictionary goes to press Sept. 15 and the managing editor has decided to follow the dictates of the Gallup, Harris, Roper "polling samples" rather than the electorate in his recording of history.

The dictionary will designate James Carter as the "39th president of the United States." The risk, of course, is his and he concedes that "some people will laugh about it" if Carter should lose in November.

We are distressed, however, at the confusion that might result when some far-in-the-future prober seeks out the reference along with old copies of the Literary Digest and the Chicago Tribune.

He will find it difficult to reconcile the presidential sequence when he discovers that Alf Landon was the 33rd president and Tom Dewey the 34th.

INSIDE REPORT:

Arab boycott battle looms in Washington

By ROWLAND EVANS and ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Ignoring warnings of a new Middle East crisis, Congress appears set on a collision course with the Ford administration by passing a new law to block any cooperation by U.S. business with the anti-Israel Arab boycott.

High administration officials who have been fighting an anti-boycott amendment to the tax-reform bill all this year fear that its real objective is to satisfy Israel's growing concern over intimate commercial relationships now building between the U.S. and Arab states.

"Until the 1973 oil embargo, Israel had us all to themselves," one high official told us. "Now the Arabs are moving in and the Israelis don't like it."

Thus, Treasury Secretary William Simon recently testified on Capitol Hill that the administration has been under "pressure to mount a confrontational attack on the Arab boycott." Such an attack would fall he said; would "harden Arab attitudes"; and would reduce U.S. influence in seeking a Middle East settlement, endangering anti-boycott progress already made. That progress has come in the area of anti-Jewish religious discrimination, once a key part of the loosely-controlled Arab boycott. But what Sen. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut — and nearly 400 cosponsors in both House and Senate — wants is a change in tax laws denying tax and export benefits to U.S. companies doing business with Arab states under boycott conditions. Their target: Arab discrimination against Israel, an enemy state.

Such economic pressures would short-circuit American companies doing Arab business (at a 1975 rate of $5.5 billion in exports) and reroute it elsewhere.

The reason is that even though Egypt and Saudi Arabia are quietly reducing the impact of the 20-nation Arab League boycott against Israel, they perceive the Ribicoff amendment as blatantly anti-Arab, dictated by pro-Israel domestic politics. Worse, they regard it as highly irregular interference in their right to wage economic warfare against an enemy (Israel).

The fact that Israel's economic minister here, Ze'ev Sher, has lobbied for passage of the Ribicoff amendment and other anti-boycott legislation, top officials suspect, is evidence of the deep Israeli fear over tightening U.S.-Arab economic links. Yet, the Israeli campaign claims a different rationale.

"Compliance with Arab boycott rules is illegal, both under in-

Detente nips crisis in the bud

By JACK ANDERSON with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — The story can now be told how the three superpowers, thanks to a word that President Ford has banned during the presidential campaign, averted a military crisis in Korea. The word is "detente."

The murder of two American officers by axe-wielding North Korean guards was the sort of incident which, in times past, might have brought the United States to the edge of a war that could have involved Russia and China.

Instead, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger asked both the Russians and Chinese to use their influence to cool the crisis. Secret intelligence reports state that both superpowers intervened with North Korea.

The pressure was too great for North Korea's militant Kim Il Sung to buck. He issued a personal statement that the slaying of the two Americans was "regretful." It was the first apology Kim has ever made to the United States.

The attitude of the Russians and Chinese raises the hope that future incidents can be defused before they develop into a war of incredible magnitude. In a typical cable, for example, the U.S. embassy in Moscow quoted the comment of an official in the Soviet Foreign Ministry.

The confidential cable quoted the Soviet as saying: "With friends like Kim, who needs enemies?" This probably wasn't the official's exact language but, rather, the embassy's paraphrase of what the official meant. But he went on to decry Kim's meddling with the balance of power.

But Assistant Secretary of State Philip Habib probably summarized the Korean incident best in a telephone conversation with Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y. Habib called to protest a resolution that Murphy had submitted on the Korean crisis.

"I know you agree with the display of force we put on," said Habib. "I mean, we sent a squadron of F4s from Japan, a squadron of F111s from Idaho and put the carrier Midway with five escort vessels and 75 fighter-bombers in the Sea of Japan."

"We flew over B52s and on the morning we cut down the tree, we lined up every troop and every piece of equipment on the hill so the North Koreans could see. I didn't think we could go any further than that."

Murphy agreed. "Why do you think the North Koreans sent the United States an apology of sorts?" he asked. "This is unprecedented for them."

"I think they overplayed their hand," suggested Habib. "It backfired on them. Realizing this, they had to back off a little."

"Don't you think the Russians and the Chinese let Kim Il Sung know that they thought this was a totally insane act and that they weren't about to let him start something and expected them to finish it?" asked the congressman.

"Yes," said Habib. "I think Russia and China definitely had input into the incident after it happened, but I don't think they would go so far as to abandon him. They probably told him, 'What the hell are you doing, the United States is not going to tolerate this, and you had better make some conciliatory gesture.'"

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE: Simply a question of ethics and money

By BENJAMIN SHORE Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — Is it unethical for government lawyers who have been enforcing government regulations to quit and immediately go to work for the law firms whose industry clients they have been regulating?

That question has this city of lawyers in a turmoil. As with any controversy, there are at least two sides.

On the one hand, the government needs a steady supply of hundreds of bright young lawyers to draft regulations, investigate compliance and direct enforcement — or prosecution efforts against violators.

On the other hand, the government cannot expect top lawyers to make this kind of government service a career when lucrative jobs in private firms beckon.

The problem is that these jobs beckon to certain government lawyers solely because they have developed expertise and a working relationship with particular industries or even just one major firm.

And if the Jones & Smith law firm in Washington is representing Ajax Steel in long, drawn-out negotiations with, say, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) over a controversial stock issue, then a smart move by the law firm would be to hire the SEC lawyer who has been giving the steel company fits.

The Jones & Smith lawyers representing Ajax know the SEC lawyer well because they have been adversaries.

Jones & Smith makes the lawyer an attractive offer, he makes the move, and is immediately assigned to the Ajax case.

When he calls on his former government agency to negotiate on behalf of Ajax, chances are good that he finds his new adversary to be a former government colleague who has been promoted to replace him. What kind of objective enforcement of the law can come out of this kind of relationship? It's impossible to know. But it is known that big decisions in this town often turn not on the fine points of the law but on the fine points of personal relationships.

There is another aspect to this regulator-to-regulated movement of government lawyers.

Many young lawyers take government jobs in their areas of specialization (communications, labor, securities, etc.) solely to make the key industry contacts that can lead to excellent jobs within the industries themselves or with a prestigious Washington law firm that represents a major industry power.

A few years of lawyering for the Federal Communications Commission is excellent preparation for a job representing a client before the FCC.

Similarly, the Pentagon is a good place for a senior officer to learn the weapons procurement business. But somehow it doesn't look too good when, for example, an Air Force colonel who has spent his final years negotiating and enforcing contracts with a builder of jet fighters retires and immediately goes to work for that same firm.

Could it be that some FCC lawyers deliberately stay away from any actions that could jeopardize chances of getting good job offers in the communications field?

Could it be that some about-to-retire military officers who are supposed to represent the taxpayers' best interests in weapons contracts deliberately soft-pedal enforcement of contract performance standards so as to not jeopardize chances of good civilian jobs in the industries they have come to know so intimately?

As for the lawyer question, the Ethics Committee of the District of Columbia Bar Association is considering a rule that would require a Washington law firm to drop a case if the firm hires a government lawyer who had been involved in it.

The big firms are screaming, and the government is saying quite frankly that bright young lawyers wouldn't accept government jobs under those conditions.

That's all quite debatable, as the lawyers would say, but just the fact that the local bar association is considering the issue indicates the potential for unethical situations.

Kissinger trip clouded by bad advance publicity

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's renewed involvement in Africa's racial conflicts is clouded by bickering with South African Prime Minister John Vorster and statements by U.S. officials down-playing Kissinger's chance for success.

The secretary leaves today for weekend talks with Vorster in Zurich, with an intermediate stop in London for talks with British leaders.

The focus of the talks reportedly will be the pace of the move toward independence for Namibia, the former territory of South-West Africa still occupied by the South African regime.

In addition to expressing dissatisfaction with the Namibia situation, Kissinger also will push Vorster to ease South Africa's own restrictions on blacks. A third subject will be Rhodesia where the black majority is pressing the white supremacist government.

The Zurich meetings will be the second round of discussions between Kissinger and Vorster in the last four months after years of virtually no high-level contact between the two countries.

If the secretary is able to claim any degree of progress after the Vorster talks, he will travel to Africa for meetings with black leaders and possibly another session with Vorster in South Africa itself.

The odds for Kissinger's success are hard to gauge. He has said in the past he would not meet with Vorster unless he thought progress was distinctly possible.

Nevertheless, he and Vorster engaged Thursday in some long-range gamesmanship, apparently designed to prove that nothing is settled at this point. Originally, the State Department said Kissinger and Vorster would hold a major formal meeting Sunday. But Vorster then said he didn't work on Sundays and he called off the Sunday session, saying he would see Kissinger Saturday and Monday.

In addition, Vorster issued a statement saying his government's domestic policy is "determined by South Africa itself and is not prescribed to her by any person or country from outside."

Vorster's anger and the schedule change was attributed by State Department officials to his determination to prove that Kissinger is not writing the script.

Shortly after announcing he would meet with Vorster, Kissinger relatives in Germany gave a speech to a largely black audience in Philadelphia in midweek, dictating Kissinger's sharply criticizing schedule.

After this pushing and shoving, the schedule was amended to call for talks Saturday and Monday that he would leave Zurich Sunday to visit on Sunday.

Viking 2's lander awaits 'go' signal

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Awaiting only the final order from earth, the Viking 2 lander was ready to cast off from its mother ship today and attempt America's second touchdown on Mars.

The gray, three-legged lander, loaded with life-detecting instruments, was scheduled to land at 6:58 p.m. EDT on a northern plain called Utopia.

A check of the automated lander Thursday found everything in readiness. Mission Director Tom Young declared the craft to be "in very good shape."

The only concern, he said, was a sign that the lander may overheat after landing. It is summer in Utopia. Young said a plan had been drawn up to turn off some equipment and reschedule experiments to reduce the inside heat.

Viking 2 was aimed for a landing at a site farther north and about 4,600 miles from where Viking 1 made the first successful Mars landing July 20.

Because the air in the northern latitudes has more water vapor, Viking 2's destination is believed a better spot to search for life, the main Viking task.

The lander was designed to soar through space, plunge into the thin Martian atmosphere and, slowed by a parachute and braking rockets, drop gently to the surface.

Scientists believe the landing point, about 125 miles from a large crater called Mie, is covered with thick sand dunes that should soften the landing.

Within seconds of a successful touchdown, a camera atop the lander is to take the first of two black-and-white pictures. The first photo, showing one of the three footpads resting on the surface, was to begin appearing on television screens at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory at 7:30 p.m. EDT. A panoramic view was to follow.

With Viking 2 beginning its scientific work, the Viking 1 lander began a relatively dormant period. It is still incubating biology experiments in the so far inconclusive search for life.

Viking 2 will carry out similar biology experiments, as well as measurements of the atmosphere, weather and properties of the surface material. As its predecessor did, Viking 2 will wield a 10-foot mechanical arm that can scoop up dirt and pour it into a sophisticated minilaboratory.

ABILENE, Tex. (AP)—City Atty. Richard Tulk said Thursday he wants to intervene in the general rate increase application filed by Southwestern Bell with the new Texas Public Utilities Commission.

Tulk said Thursday he will file a petition to challenge the request because he feels it is improper, and he would like to see alternatives presented.

The attorney said he is confident the commission will allow cities to intervene in its considerations.

Air Force rejection rate high

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—Air Force officials say they aren't concerned about the high rate of rejection for those who volunteer to enlist.

"We're recruiting for specific numbers and types of people. We're shooting for the high quality guy," says Lt. Col. Don Burgrabbe, director of advertising for the Air Force Recruiting Headquarters at Randolph AFB here.

Burgrabbe said statistics show that out of every 100 people who make an initial contact with an Air Force recruiter, only 20 are actually ever enlisted.

Eighty per cent either drop out voluntarily or are rejected during a tough screening program that precedes official enlistment, he said Thursday.

"The emphasis is placed on quality," Burgrabbe added.

In the period from July 1, 1975, through June 30, 1976, Burgrabbe said about 73,000 applicants were qualified to enlist.

Using the 80 per cent rejection figure, it is estimated that around 300,000 other Air Force hopefuls didn't make it in.

"We can only enlist people for which the Air Force has a specific requirement, and our policy is paying off," Burgrabbe said.

Most hopeful enlistees are trimmed during a tough, six-step screening program.

Ford to exude incumbency rest of this month

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford plans to stay close to the White House during most of this month, limiting his campaign travel to a series of relatively brief trips, according to his new campaign chairman.

James A. Baker III said there are no plans for extensive travel or extended presidential vote-hunting trips during the first month of the campaign against Democrat Jimmy Carter.

Carter is formally launching his presidential campaign road show on Monday with a speech at Warm Springs, Ga., and Labor day appearances at Darlington, S.C., Norfolk, Va., and Newark, N.J.

A White House spokesman said there would be no Ford campaign travel before Wednesday. Press Secretary Ron Nessen was to announce the President's campaign kickoff plans today.

Baker said in an interview that Ford will be doing less on-the-road campaigning this month than during the presidential primary elections.

He said the President's travels will increase later in the campaign, but that even then, his managers will seek to avoid long, wearying, multiple-speech days.

The Ford plan clearly is intended to emphasize his incumbency and use the presidential stage. Furthermore, Ford's advisers believe he is at his best when his itinerary is limited and his speeches don't come in bunches. They point to his speech accepting the Republican presidential nomination as the kind of campaign performance he can give when he has time to prepare and polish an address.

Carter has tentative plans to cover nearly 20 cities during his first five-day campaign week. It is to take him north to Connecticut, west to Chicago and south to Hollywood, Fla., with appearances in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio in between.

Ford telephoned Ronald Reagan on Thursday to ask for campaign help from the man he defeated for the Republican presidential nomination.

A spokesman said they talked for 10 to 15 minutes.

"Gov. Reagan agreed to do what he could," said Deputy White House Press Secretary John Carlson.

He said Ford called Reagan in Santa Barbara, Calif., "to solicit his advice on the campaign and to ask his help."

There was no word of any Reagan plan to campaign actively for Ford.

Carter spent Thursday at home in Plains, Ga., preparing for meetings today with his running mate, Sen. Walter Mondale. The two Democratic nominees were to discuss plans for their campaign, which formally opens on Labor Day.

Mondale was in Kansas City, Mo., on Thursday, winding up his first campaign foray, a nine-day journey from coast-to-coast.

At a meeting of the National Conference of State Legislatures, the Minnesota senator said federal bureaucrats often have been arrogant and paternalistic and that a "new, creative partnership" between state and federal governments is needed.

"The past record on federal-state relations is dismal," he said. "People do not believe that government works. They have had enough of bloated, unresponsive government."

Aliens banned on federal jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford is ordering government agencies not to hire foreigners who live in the United States.

In barring aliens from holding jobs in the federal government, Ford urged Congress to come up with legislation that will say exactly what rights aliens can exercise within the United States.

Ford's decision affects millions of aliens who otherwise might have sought federal jobs all over the country, ranging from janitors to secretaries to middle-level administrators.

The order signed Thursday prohibits government hiring of aliens "except where the efficiency of the service or the national interest dictate otherwise."

The President's decision comes after a Supreme Court ruling last June struck down a Civil Service Commission regulation that also banned permanent resident aliens from government jobs. Those barred from federal employment are foreigners authorized to live in the United States but who do not obtain citizenship.

The court's decision was based on the justices' view that the Civil Service Commission lacked the authority to enact such a regulation. But the court suggested that Congress or the President could issue such a ruling and Ford's action Thursday took advantage of that invitation.

In calling on Congress to define the rights of aliens through legislation, Ford said the Senate and the House have primary responsibility to regulate the conduct of foreigners within the United States. He urged Congress to look promptly into the issues involved.

The central question involved is whether American citizens should get first consideration for U.S. government posts.

Those who favor excluding aliens from government jobs argue that the government's first duty is to American citizens. Those on the other side argue that the government would benefit from the special training and talents of some aliens.

San Antonio recall move established

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A petition drive is underway to recall San Antonio Mayor Lila Cockrell and four council members from office.

A group of local business leaders, angered by the firing of Sam Granata as city manager, launched the drive Thursday after they made a blistering attack on the city council.

The drive is aimed at the removal of Mrs. Cockrell and councilmen Glen Hartman, Al Rohde, Henry Cisneros and Phil Pyndus, who form the majority which fired Granata 5-4.

Granata was told Monday following a closed-door council meeting that he lacked majority support to continue in his $50,000-a-year post. Thursday's public vote was a formality. No officials reason has been given for Granata's ouster.

Among those blasting the council Thursday for its action were former Mayor Charles Becker, land developer and former councilman Cliff Morton and G.E. Harrington, president of the Greater San Antonio Builders Association.

They accused the council of implementing a no-growth economic policy, violating the city charter and abdicating its power to a small but vocal and militant citizens' group.

Mayor Cockrell denied most of the charges but admitted the council has sometimes been ineffective.

Meanwhile, Ford's running mate, Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, was in Spartanburg, S.C., where he praised federal judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr., who lives nearby, and said it was "one of the great tragedies" that Haynsworth was not confirmed to the Supreme Court.

Haynsworth was nominated for the high court by resigned President Richard Nixon in 1969, but the Senate rejected the nomination, partly because of his rulings on civil rights cases.

In other political developments: —Carter's wife, Rosalynn, said in an interview that her three grown sons have told her they have tried marijuana. But, she said, "The only time I worry about my children doing something like smoking marijuana is if I thought they were slipping around and doing it and not letting me know about it."

—The House Judiciary Committee gave approval to legislation that would provide Secret Service protection to the wives of major party presidential candidates. The measure was sought by the Treasury Department after Carter and Mondale asked for the protection.

—Former Georgia Gov. Lester Maddox, the candidate of the American Independent Party, campaigned at the Flemington, N.J., fair, shaking hands and making a brief campaign speech in which he said he would get rid of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

—Rep. Charles H. Wilson, D-Calif., accused Ford's campaign treasurer and Defense Secretary William P. Clements of conflict of interest. Wilson, a member of the House Armed Services Committee, said Clements named Robert C. Moot, treasurer of Ford's campaign committee, to head a Defense Department advisory committee "whose recommendations could restructure millions in defense profits."

Charter flight costs cut by CAB rulings

WASHINGTON (AP) — New government rules will allow Americans to take low-cost charter flights to any part of the world without having to join a group or buy ground accommodations such as hotels.

The new charters, similar to those already popular in Europe, require a traveler to buy a round-trip ticket in advance. But the "affinity group" requirement is being eliminated and travelers won't have to stay for minimum periods, except in nine European countries where visitors will be required to stay at least seven days.

Tickets on charter flights traditionally have cost about half the cost of a coach seat on a scheduled flight.

The new rules issued Thursday by the Civil Aeronautics Board cover both domestic and overseas flights and will go into effect on Oct. 7.

The new rules face possible legal challenges from scheduled airlines that generally have opposed more liberal charter rules. On the other hand, a charter organization has already said it will seek a court order to strike down remaining charter restrictions.

Because the new charters, known as Advance Booking Charters, do not require passengers to belong to any organized group, the CAB ruling might lessen the lure that some travelers found in "affinity groups."

The CAB had required everyone on the plane to share an interest other than traveling. This encouraged the growth of social and occupational organizations that also traveled. In fact, some of these groups had no purpose other than to qualify as "affinity groups" under CAB rules.

Under the new rules, there is no minimum fare and charter operators will be allowed to set the fare on their own.

Countries where the European rules will apply are Belgium, West Germany, Finland, France, Ireland, Italy, Netherlands, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

To qualify for the charters, passengers will be required to buy their tickets at least 30 days in advance for domestic flights and at least 45 days in advance for European flights. Tickets will be purchased from independent charter brokers who will organize the flights.

The flights must be round trips with predetermined fixed dates for departure and return, and all passengers must travel together on both legs of the charter.

All charters must contain at least 40 people. The charter operator has the right to impose a penalty on purchasers who cancel at a time when the operator no longer is permitted to sell unsold or canceled seats.

And the operator can cancel the flight if it does not meet conditions specified in the contract.

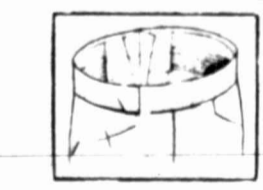

The CAB said it adopted the different rules for European destinations because those countries already have similar charters in use and the board did not want to create too much disparity between U.S. charters and those operated in Europe.

Barnes alleges the stories have subjected him to "unwarranted abuse as private citizen" and seeks $20 million in damages.

The suit was filed by attorneys Dave Nabers and George Day before 35th District Court Judge William O. Breedlove in Brownwood.

Vanity stimulates U.S. design

By MARYLOU LUTHER
The Los Angeles Times

The single greatest stimulus to American design right now is the American woman's newfound sense of vanity, according to New York designer Patti Cappalli.

Her reasoning goes like this: Since the '60s, she explains, she's been dressing young women who equated vanity with vacuous, vapid women who could conjure up a good case of the vapors on command. To these children of protest, fashion was vanity.

Designing for these committed, anti-fashion heroines was about as inspiring, she says, as dressing the Flying Nun.

"As these young women progressed as individuals — and they've been moving really fast — they seemed to discover that a healthy sense of vanity and ego is not all bad," says Ms. Cappalli.

And what's all good in the Cappalli view is that these emerging egos and vanities have brought with them a new appreciation of fashion.

"Instead of apologizing for their interest in clothes or being embarrassed about it, as they were just a few years ago, women are no longer ashamed of their interest."

This, says the designer, has stimulated American design in all areas, and it's well on its way to making America the fashion capital of the world.

"It spurs any creative person to do much more exciting things because you know you have a receptive audience just waiting to be excited."

Like the French woman has always been receptive to fashion and therefore inspiring to the French designer?

"In a way, yes. But the Parisian woman's vanity doesn't make her any less narrow than she's always been. The newly awakened vanity in the American woman is somehow more intelligent. Her awareness is not limited to clothes. It goes from her kitchen to her car."

"I was talking to a stewardess on my flight out here to I. Magnin, and it struck me that she represents the kind of enlightened vanity that is so much a part of today's fashion consciousness. She wanted to talk about fashion, and she was quite obviously knowledgeable. At the end of our conversation, she said, 'Unfortunately, there won't be any clothes in my life this fall because my husband and I are buying a house.'"

"Fashion is going to have to wait for the realtor, but then watch her go. She's my kind of customer."

Ms. Cappalli, the 37-year-old wife of Vidal Sassoon vice president Laurance Taylor, personifies the Jerry Silverman Sport customer she now designs for.

First a junior sportswear designer for Wippette in the Swinging Sixties, then the founding mother of the nation's first contemporary ready-to-wear firm. Ad-need, but that nothing is really as nice as wearing a real gold something or other."

And how will the new vanities affect her design? "It will be more feminine — absolutely more feminine. Even if I stay hard and continue making double-breasted blazers and men's vests, the colors and fabrics will make the silhouette softer. Design is getting more fluid."

THE WINE DRINKER

White Riesling greater producer

By TOM GABLE
Copley News Service

The White (or Johannisberg) Riesling is a grape that produces outstanding wines on the rugged hillsides above the Mosel, Saar, Ruhr and Rhine rivers in Germany, and it is also starting to come into its own in the New World.

Where the wines of the Mosel and other areas of Germany are usually soft and delicate, the New World Rieslings are made in styles ranging from Mosel-like to Chardonnay-like.

A few winemakers have developed such a fondness for aging wine in small barrels made of French oak that they use this technique on the Riesling grape as well as the Chardonnay, Gewurztraminer, Chenin Blanc and Pinot Blanc.

The Wente Bros., using grapes grown in Monterey County south of San Francisco, sometimes produce two different styles from the same winery: a "Spatlese," or wine made from later picked grapes, at $6.25 or so; and a regular bottling, at about $4. Both are from the 1974 vintage and offer a chance at sampling a clean, crisp Riesling in the regular bottling or a more lush, deeper-colored wine with higher viscosity and heavier body in the late harvest wines.

Stag's Leap Wine Cellars, which recently won top honors against some of the best French wines with its Cabernet Sauvignon, also produced two Rieslings from the 1974 vintage: a regular bottling and one labeled "Birkmyer" vineyard. Both are clean, well-made wines and sell for about $4.75, although availability is limited in some areas in the Eastern United States. The two are distinctly varietal, lighter in color and long on the palate. The 1975 regular Napa Valley bottling should be on the market soon and is as promising as its predecessors.

The Burgess Cellars' 1974 Johannisberg Riesling ($5) offers a nice balance of wood and ripe grapes in the aroma and bouquet and lingering aftertaste to go with a deep flavor.

It seems somewhat higher than the others in residual sugars but this Napa Valley wine has the natural fruit acid balance to go with it. These acids are what give wine some of its feeling of substance in the mouth. Water would be at one end of the acid scale; grapefruit juice, unsweetened, at the other.

The thing to look for in a White Riesling is a light-to-medium straw color, a fragrant, fruity aroma and a depth of flavor that shows some of the complexities of the grape. It should be a wine worth holding in your mouth, not just swallowing, as you might do with a cheap wine made from a lesser white grape. A good Riesling goes well with lighter foods, milder cheeses and sunny afternoons in late summer or early fall.

Figures refute Guest assertion

AUSTIN (AP) — Spending by the Texas Democratic party has exceeded donations by $19,657 since Jan. 1, the party's official financial statement shows.

The party's statement to Secretary of State Mark White, required by law, shows income of $136,728 and expenditures of $156,385 through the period ended June 30.

Fort Worth Star-Telegram correspondent Bob Bain reported that the party pulled down a news release on Wednesday that quoted chairman Calvin Guest as saying the party had never strayed from the "black side" of the ledger during his administration.

In the release that finally came out, Guest said he had whittled the party's debt from the $150,000 he inherited in 1972 to $110,000.

Guest said fund-raising efforts in the 1973-76 period had raised $433,331.

"From these profits, we've been able to conduct our ongoing party business and still make significant reductions regularly on our overall deficit. I feel a keen responsibility to keep financial affairs in order and operate on a sound fiscal basis," Guest said.

Guest is opposed for re-election by John Henry Tatum of Lufkin, who has drawn after the Star-Telegram questioned that party finances a campaign issue.

Joe Bishop, manager of Bain's story said a Guest's re-election campaign, said the initial statement had never been cleared for release.

He said the apparent discrepancy between the unreleased statement and the financial report filed with the secretary of state was "a matter of semantics."

One reported expenditure was $10,000 to the Austin law firm of McGinnis, Lochridge and Kilgore "for professional services."

Party treasurer Harold Figg said the $10,000 was paid for the firm's work in 1974 on two cases. One was a challenge by National Com-mitewoman Billie Carr to the state party's affirmative action rules.

Midland public schools release attendance marks

Midland public schools this year had 15,636 students the first week of classes.

Elementary schools had 7,549 students enrolled, junior high schools 2,681, ninth grade schools 1,402 and high schools 4,004 students.

Greenwood Elementary School had 144 students and its high school, grades seven through 12, 140 for 284 students altogether in the district.

Klondike schools started the year with 300 students enrolled, 143 in elementary school and the remaining 157 in junior and senior high school.

Ector County schools this week had 22,025 students attending classes, 11,456 in elementary school, 5,584 in junior high and 5,005 in high school.

Lamesa schools had 3,104 students in attendance. High school accounted for 973 students; middle school, grades five through eight, 974; fourth grade school, 240, and grades kindergarten through three, 917.

Attending classes in Glasscock County were 301 students, 199 in elementary school and 102 in secondary school.

Rankin began the year with 452 students enrolled, 180 in grades kindergarten through four, 136 in grades five through eight and 136 in high school.

Crane schools had 1,112 students — 532 in elementary school, 271 in middle school, grades six through eight, and 309 in high school.

Seven hundred thirty four students started school in McCamey this year, 274 in grades kindergarten through four, 257 in grades five through eight and 203 in high school.

The first day of classes in Andrews saw 2,067 students in attendance, with 1,410 in elementary school, 416 in junior high school (seventh and eighth grades) and 839 in high school.

Stanton schools started the year with 867 students attending, 337 in elementary school, 293 in junior high school and 237 in high school, grades nine through 12.

A total of 6,140 students have been attending classes in Big Spring, with 3,062 in elementary school, 3,026 in secondary schools and 52 special education students.

O'Donnell schools showed a total enrollment of 597 students, 322 in elementary school, 110 in seventh and eighth grades and 165 in high school.

Sands schools have 296 students, 81 in high school and 215 in grades kindergarten through eight.

Reagan County schools started the year with 836 students, 400 in elementary school, 196 in middle school and 240 in high school.

Final enrollments in many of the school districts will be higher as new students enroll after the start of school.

School tax data can be inspected

AUSTIN (AP) — School tax data gathered by the Governor's Office of Education Resources at the direction of the legislature can be inspected on request even before the final report is completed, Atty. Gen. John Hill said.

Gov. Dolph Briscoe asked for Hill's legal opinion, which has the force of law.

Hill noted that the Office of Education Resources had been asked for copies of field reports from assessors and appraisers it had hired to make the study of property values in each school district.

Also subject to disclosure, Hill said, are "completed reports from contractors and taxpayers (utility) concerning the productivity and market value of agricultural land, and the market value of mineral, industrial and utility properties" and "all computer printouts which display specific data for subject districts."

It was Hill's 140th opinion in response to inquiries about the effect of the Texas Open Records Act.

Two sharing lead in World Series of golf

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Dave Hill sought outside help to cure his driving problems. Japanese Takashi Murakami solved his own woes off the tee.

Both methods were ultrasuccessful. The two straightened out their shots so well they forged three-under-par 67s Thursday for the opening-round lead at the $300,000 World Series of Golf.

"I've had a couple of weeks of hooking the ball. Jack Tuthill (PGA tournament director) and Frank Chirknian (CBS-TV producer here) helped me out," said Hill.

"Jack told me I should just raise my chin a little. Frank tried to get my legs moving. It worked. I only missed two fairways all day," added the 39-year-old American.

The first time Murakami, 32, looked down the 400-yard, parfour first hole at Firestone South, he asked, "Is this a par five?"

Aside from his eagle three on the second hole, Murakami conceded he struck an errant driver the first four holes. "I was trying to hit it too hard. I quit pressing on the fifth hole," he said.

Lurking behind the two surprised leaders were the game's big shots in search of the $100,000 first prize.

Jack Nicklaus, winner of four previous Series titles and nearly $389,000 on Firestone South alone, fashioned 68 for third place.

Raymond Floyd, the Masters champion, was next at 69. Tom Watson, the defending champion; last week's American Classic victor David Graham, J.C. Snead and Buddy Allin matched par-70.

At 71 were U.S. Open champion Jerry Pate, Hale Irwin, Hubert Green and Lee Trevino.

Ill fortune continued to dog Johnny Miller. Just recovered from a hand injury in a motorcycle accident, the skinny blond was assessed a four-shot penalty for 76.

Miller carried an extra club, his boy's putter, for 15 holes. "It was down inside the bag. I didn't know it was in there," he said.

Ben Crenshaw, the year's leading tour money-winner, was deeper in arrears at 78, last in the field of 20. He scrambled to one double bogey and six bogeys.

Hill and Murakami seemed stunned they were leading such a glittering field.

"I was 4,000-to-1 to win and 2-to-1 to withdraw," cracked Hill, who strung together six birdies in a 15-hole stretch. "I never have had the ball in play and scored so low here."

"I had an unhealthy feeling I might go for 80. This course is very long for me."

Murakami knows only "good morning" and "good evening" in English. He spoke through an interpreter, former Ohio State University catcher Ty Kawata, a Japanese importer-exporter.

"I'm surprised I'm leading. I will try not to be uptight the rest of the tournament. It probably will hit me tomorrow," said the winner of 14 Japanese tournaments. He was No. 1 money-winner on the Japan tour last year with $140,000.

Murakami, a master scrambler, saved six pars with putts of 10 feet or less. Besides the eagle, he collected three birdies and two bogeys.

Nicklaus was steady. He birdied both par fives and parred the rest, saying, "It was a day of managing myself around the course. I was uncertain of some shots I hit."

Floyd, the Firestone South record holder with 268, raised his eyebrows that eight players matched or broke par.

"I thought par would be a good round. It turned out to be very mediocre. I guess it shows the caliber of the field," he said.

Brewers down Midland Clubs

BY TED BATTLES

Chuck Rogers was shooting for his 12th win at Cubs Stadium Thursday night and if it hadn't been for Gary Gray, he would have gotten it, too.

Gray hit a three-run homer in the fifth and then a game-winning triple with two out in the 10th to knock in all the runs as San Antonio edged Midland, 4-3, in 10 innings in the opener of a season-ending five-game series.

The Brewers victory kept alive the battle for third place in the Texas League West. The Cubs, by winning Thursday, could have clinched at worst a tie, but the Brewers crept to within two games of third with the win and Midland still must face John Poloni, 11-7, the former Arizona State ace and one of the TL's better pitchers, Saturday night.

Jaramillo singled and Gray hoisted a majestic 0-1 pitch over the left field barrier, a drive that probably carried 400 feet, for his 19th homer and 104th RBI of the season.

"It was a slider that broke over the plate," explained the third year pro from Laplace, La.

GRAY, who last year hit 18 homers and knocked in 96 runs at Anderson, S.C., in the Rookie League, had a chance to make it 4-0 with Rudy Jaramillo on second in the eighth, but Rogers fooled him with a curve and he bounced out to second.

"In the tenth, I hit a fast ball," Gray added. Drilled into the right field corner, the liner scored Jaramillo, who was on as a result of a force out after Reedy singled, from first.

"No, I don't usually hit Rogers like that," said Gray, who attended

STEVE HAMRICK, 11-10, who has won his last two starts will try to give Midland some breathing room in tonight's 7:30 tilt when he faces the Brewers Jim Clancy, 5-7, in the 25-cent beer night tilt.

Rogers skirted the precipice of trouble through the first four innings, giving up at least a hit an inning, and finally looked like he might have an easy inning when he retired the first two batters in the fifth.

Then, Jerry Reedy and Rudy

Amarillo posts 4-3 victory over El Paso

By The Associated Press

Rick Sweet's run-scoring single in the 10th inning enabled Amarillo to beat El Paso 4-3 Thursday night and take a two-game lead over the Diablos in the Texas League West.

Steve Mura, 4-2, went the distance in Amarillo for the win while Fred Kuhalua, 1-2, lost in relief.

The Giants now need two wins over El Paso to clinch the division.

In other Texas League action, San Antonio edged Midland 4-3, Shreveport beat Arkansas 4-2 and Jackson at Lafayette was rained out.

In Midland, Brewers designated hitter Gary Gray had a three-run homer, his 19th, in the fifth and won it with a run-scoring triple in the 10th.

Glen Bright, 2-3, got the win and Chuck Rogers, 11-16, absorbed the loss.

Joe Hernandez had a two-run triple in the eighth for Midland.

In tonight's games, El Paso is at Amarillo, San Antonio visits Midland, Shreveport hosts Arkansas and Jackson is at Lafayette.

Captains relief pitcher Chet Hunter came on in the seventh to pitch three innings of one-hit shutout ball. He is now 6-3. Shreveport is only percentage points behind Jackson in the TL East.

Shreveport's first run was a solo homer in the fourth by Harry Safewright. Arkansas' runs came in the sixth on singles by Jim Riggelman, Ken Oberkfell and Manny Castillo. Ryan Kurosaki got the

Ruidoso awaits Futurity

RUIDOSO DOWNS, N.M. (AP) — If you have a yearling quarter horse some year that you're sure is going to be a world beater and $2,000 you're looking for a great return on, then maybe the All-American Futurity is for you.

That's the minimum it would take to put a horse owner in the position of spending some Labor Day thinking about how to spend the $300,000 his horse had just won by winning the All-American Futurity quarter horse race.

The 440-yard sprint for 2-year-olds, run annually on Labor Day at Ruidoso Downs, carries a gross purse of $1 million with another $30,000 available for nomination and breeding awards.

The process of building the huge purse, which Ruidoso Downs' officials say is the largest in the world, begins almost 20 months before the race.

For example, horse owners began looking over their stock and pocket books in January of 1975 to decide if, and how, they wanted to try to get into the 1976 All-American that is on tap Monday.

All owners, regardless of the method they used to nominate their horses, then must pay a $750 entrance fee to get into the trials.

All of the nomination and trial fee money, which was $1,536,375, was combined with $25,000 from the race track and $55,400 in interest for a total of $1,646,475.

From this, $1,030,000 was earmarked for the 1976 All-American Futurity.

'Mad Stork' thinks CSU will have 9-2 season

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Keith King, the "Mad Stork," may be eating crow if his bold predictions for the 1976 Colorado State University football team don't materialize.

Steve Krum, a walk-on as a freshman, and junior college transfer Paul McWilliams form a solid linebacker duo.

The Rams have been first in the WAC in pass defense the last two seasons, and King sees no reason it won't be three straight, helped by what he calls "an awesome front line."
