Delegates to the party's state convention gave Hutchison an 843 to 792 victory over former Rep. Ray Bar-nhart of Pasadena, leader of Ronald Reagan's presidential primary campaign in Texas. Hutchison, 42, was elected to guide the party for the next two years. He is not seeking a third term in the Texas House, but is viewed as a poten-

American newspapers. The band landed in Paris on Saturday after seizing a TWA Boeing 727 jetliner in New York Friday night and ordering it on a hopscotch trans-Atlantic journey.

They asked to speak to a top U.S. official, and U.S. Ambassador Kenneth Rush went to Charles de Gaulle Airport. He was reported in the tower from which French officials were communicating with the hijackers.

Seven hours after the plane landed, the hijschers allowed one passenger suffering from a diabetic condition to leave the plane with a steward. A second steward who helped the passenger off returned to the plane, sources said.

The hijackers were reportedly armed with handguns, grenades and explosives. Their communiques and leaflets demanded independence for not let it leave the country. Its lights and engines were turned off while the hijackers opened negotiations with French authorities. The Croatians initially demanded to speak to either President Ford.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger or Rush, the U.S. ambassador to Paris. But their major demand appeared to be for proof that their lengthy propaganda statements had been published in the New York Times, Chicago Tribune, Los Angeles Times, Washington Post and the International Herald Tribune.

Facsimiles of the printed statements were wired to Paris and rushed to the airport.

During the journey to Paris, an escort plane made low swoops over London and Paris to drop thousands of pink leaflets calling for independence of Croatia.

A Canadian Transport Department spokesman in Ottawa said the leader of the hijackers was a man named Zvonko Busik and that the woman was believed to be his wife or fiance. In New York, the FBI said the hijackers would be charged with homicide in the death of the policeman.

Radio Belgrade said Yugoslavia had ordered its envoy in Washington to protest distribution of the hijackers' statements. However, the Yugoslav Embassy in Washington said it knew nothing of the protest and the U.S. State Department withheld

The hijackers signed their statement "Fighters for Free Croatia." Sources in Belgrade said they had never heard of the group.

The leaflets, similar to those dropped over New York and Chicago, were headed: "Declaration of the headquarters of the Croatian National Liberation Forces." They said in part: "Croatia is not up for bids in an international auction block but rather plays an integral part in the destiny of the world. We fight for Croatia ...

The communique, invoking the United States' fight for freedom from Britain 200 years ago, denounced the government of Yugoslavia and pressed separatist demands for creation of a Croatian state.

It was not known how the hijackers got the leaflets and their explosives through the tight security at La Guardia Airport in New York and aboard the plane, TWA Flight 355. A TWA spokesman said the normal precautions were in effect - X-raying

Newspaper finally declared educational

Teachers, principals, and staffers at The Reporter-Telegram have been enjoying whirlwind visits from a vivacious will-o-the-wisp named Beverly Dickerson in recent weeks, and her travels presage a new educational tool many of us think may be the best thing since the Blue bluebacked speller.

It's the "Newspaper in Education" program being set up by The Reporter-Telegram with Mrs. Dickerson's guiding hand as educational director, for area schools in which—as the name indicates—teachers will make use of the "living textbook" in a variety of courses ranging from the obvious English and economics and sociology to the less apparent but readily applicable areas of mathematics and art. ("The only subject I've found it's difficult to use the newspaper in is music," Beverly

There are many good reasons for considering the use of the daily newspaper in the classroom, including its broad appeal and immediacy for many students not so likely to be turned on by the tone and the traditional image of the textbook. "It's here, it's now, and it concerns things young people are interested in," Beverly explains; "things like sports, amusements, modern adventure, space flights, new discoveries and ancient mysteries..." The basic format of the simple news story (the "upsidedown pyramid" as it's known to journalism teachers) with facts presented in the order of decreasing importance, is a beautiful and practical writing style.

Nobody has time to get tired of the "book" and, with the special "educational rate" of The Reporter-Telegram, it's the biggest bargain in the bookstore.

But, of course, the main point is the overwhelming educational value of the newspaper which, through the last few centuries, has "educated" and informed more millions than most textbooks. (Even today, a recent survey shows newspaper readers are more successful and lead fuller lives than non-readers.)

Croatians: long a breed of fighting nationalists

By The Associated Press

Croatian nationalists like those who hijacked a New York-to-Chicago jetliner Friday have a long and bloody history of fighting for the autonomy of their Balkan homeland, now part of Communist Yugoslavia, including several recent assassinations.

The hijackers call themselves "Fighters for Free Croatia," a name unfamiliar to knowledgeable observers in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade, where the government firmly cracks down on Croatian extremists whenever it can.

The hijackers said in a statement that Croatia has been denied selfdetermination. They said they had hijacked an American plane because the United States "supports the colonialist enslavement of the non-Serbian nations within Yugoslavia.'

Croatia has been an area of intense nationalism since long before World War I, which erupted in Serbia, another Balkan state that is also now

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — Reversing their previous stand, a group of U.S. Military Academy cadets say they will give cadet officials — with no strings attached - affidavits in which they accused 687 classmates of honor code violations.

"They keep saying they don't believe that all this is going on," said Betler, a senior from Library, Pa., and spokesman for the signers. "We're going to give the affidavits to them and allow them to make the decision as to how they're used.'

Previously, the White House and two congressional subcommittees had refused to accept the affidavits because of the cadets' insistence that the names involved not be used for prosecution. The subcommittees have been investigating the worst cheating scandal in the academy's 174-year history.

"Neither the Senate nor the House wanted to view those affidavits in confidence," said Cadet Betler. "We still felt that people weren't willing to acknowledge that cheating is more widespread than people are saying. We wanted to bring out the scope without hurting more individuals if possible."

But he said that after consulting their lawyers, the cadets "decided at this point that this is our only alternative. We just want the whole truth out."

The cadets announced their change in position shortly after Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, superintendent of the academy, and Army Secretary Martin R. Hoffmann both criticized public release of some of the affidavits' contents.

"I am outraged by the irresponsibility and disregard for basic rights of the individual demonstrated by those who have possession of affidavits charging West Pointers with honor violations," said Berry

He said disclosure of the names of some persons implicated in the documents "ignored due process and damaged the reputations of individuals This is public conviction without trial I call it McCar-

Hoffmann told a news conference that he "would not accept any affidavits without the names of the accusers," adding, "I have only hearsay."

The honor code requires that a cadet will not lie cheat, steal or tolerate those who do. The penalty for violation is resignation or expulsion. Accused cadets say there should be gradations in punishment to fit the offense and that they are being made scapegoats for an unworkable system

Postal Service help probable

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Ford is expected to sign a bill that will provide an emergency $1 billion to the financially strapped Postal Service while barring any new increases in postal rates until

The House of Representatives gave final approval to the postal bill Friday on a vote of 276 to 33, sending the stopgap funding measure to Ford.

But Congress has put off until next year any final decision on what to do to solve the massive financial problems plaguing the mail agency. The bill sent to Ford authorizes an extra $1 billion subsidy for the debt-ridden mail agency to keep it solvent until a new study commission formulates recommendations on the postal problem. Postal officials say the extra $1 billion won't solve the agency's problem, but will merely take care of anticipated deficits and keep the service in operation at current levels. The postal service currently is getting a regular subsidy of about $1.5 billion a year. The measure bars any increases in postal rates or any cuts in mail service before the study commission delivers its report next March 15.

"This is not the final solution to the multiple problems confronting the Postal Service but it is a meaningful step in the right direction," said Rep. Edward J. Derwinski, R-Ill., after passage of the measure. "Based on the work of the study commission, the next Congress should be better able to come up with a long-term solution.

An opponent of the bill, Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Ark., argued that Congress was "passing the buck to the next Congress to solve the serious problems that persist in our Postal Service.'

Congress reorganized the Cabinet-level Post Office Department into the Postal Service in 1971, after receiving assurances that a new mail agency patterned after a private business could end postal deficits.

Instead, the Postal Service amassed $3 billion in debts during its first five years and lost a record $1.4

Liver disease found in Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) - President Josip Broz Tito has an accute liver disease and needs several weeks of treatment and rest, the official Tanjug news agency reported today. Tito is 84 years old, has led Yugoslavia since 1945 and has the official title of president for life.

Tanjug said doctors had examined Tito on Wednesday and diagnosed the disease, but the news agency did not say what the disease was or anything more about the treatment he would undergo.

Tito showed signs of the illness at the end of August, Tanjug said, when he returned from Sri Lanka, where he was one of the most prominent international leaders at the nonaligned summit

Because of Tito's illness, a visit by French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to Belgrade, scheduled for next Wednesday, has been postponed. Tito went hunting Thursday with visiting President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania and looked fit in published photographs.

Midlanders support Ray Barnhart's bid

AUSTIN - Midland area Republicans went with challenger Ray Barnhart against GOP chairman Ray Hutchison at the party's state convention Saturday

The Midland County delegates voted 60-0 for Barnhart, a Pasadena contractor Midland Mayor Ernest Angelo said he does not feel the chairmanship fight will affect the party's chances in the November general election. But he did say that he was "disappointed" that Hutchison in his address to the convention indicated that Barnhart was not capable of managing party affairs.

That, Angelo said, could produce some bitterness. But he expressed the view that the contest had stirred up interest in party ranks and "proved that a contest is helpful rather than

Beverly's mandate is to help students learn to understand the content of the daily paper better by seeing that teachers understand the widely varying viewpoints and types of information and entertainment between OESTE and the "corset ads."

(Much of the problem in interpreting the daily news lies in failure of readers to differentiate among straight news matter-such as the leading stories on the front page, editorial commentary, and individual opinion—such as is often decried in this very column.)

Mrs. Dickerson has her work cut out. But, with a degree in earth science from UTPB, wide-ranging workshops and private investigation, and personal use of the newspaper in the classroom—beginning with a school term when she adopted the local newspaper for a "special education" class because there were no other written materials available-not to mention her own ebullient gusto, I'd suggest you just hide and watch her.

And I don't want to a hear any more about the big words in OESTE. She says she analyzed a recent column and found it written on an eighthgrade level.

Dallas attorney, beat out Angleo in bidding for chairmanship of the state GOP executive committee.

The delegates here Saturday elected Robert L. Monaghan of Midland as district committeeman and named Elizabeth Rohn of Kerrville as district committeewoman. Both were elected without opposition. Monagahn is chairman of the Midland County Republican party.

The delegation conducted its meeting in an orderly fashion and without any apparent bitterness over the chairmanship. Hutchison invited Angelo to the platform earlier in the Angelo told the delegates Saturday afternoon that he had been "very proud to serve as your national committeeman" to the GOP national convention last month. He predicted success for the Republican party.

Instead of being down and out, as has been predicted, he said, "the party today is stronger than it has been for years" - because of the Ronald Reagan-Gerald Ford race.

Angelo blasted the Democratic party's presidential nominee. Jimmy Carter. He said Carter's candidacy is a "real threat to the free enterprise future of America.'

Michael Don Hobson, 24, and his wife, Cheryl Larie Hobson, 21, were charged with possession of 10 to 15 pounds of marijuana Friday at their house at 9520 Hubnick, west of the city limits.

According to police reports, the plants had an estimated value of $4,000. About 100 of the plants were nine feet tall, while the remaining 150 were between five and nine feet tall, the Odessa Police Department reported. Seven city police officers and two Department of Public Safety officers conducted the raid with a search warrant issued by Justice of the Peace Virgil Lumpee.

Charges were filed with Lumpee, and both Hobson and his wife were free Friday night on $5,900 bond each.

Upstairs, above the hotel lobby, is Dr. Watt A. Pain's dentist office. A dollar on the barrel head will get you buckled down for a yanking tooth extraction.

Nearby is an assay office staffed by a gold-tending stuffed shirt (and pants, boots and hat), which, if propped up, would make an honest scarecrow.

Along the same side of Old Fifth Street is the Square Hole Drilling Co. 'We drill gushers," the painted sign says. "(and some dusters)

Just down a piece more is the I. Will Berry Funeral Parlor. And on a vacant strip between two buildings is a dual-purpose scaffold. Nailed. bolted or otherwise affixed to the beams is the wooden sign announcing 'Hangings and Weddings on Wednesdays.

Right across the street from the funeral parlor and the scaffold is the Oil Patch Fizzlers' Plot. Among the weathering wooden "grave" markers is one bearing an epithet on Dun Ben, 1901-1939. Ole Dun Ben is thusly remembered: "A meaner cuss you'll never see. He rests in peace and so do

Some of McCamey's ghost-town store fronts have given way to the real world of commercialism. The fake bread bakery is gone now and in its place is a women's dress shop where money and style count more than what bread-baking used to be in days

Jack Howard sort of got rooked into heading up last year's celebration. His ole buddy, Dale Kluthe, who runs grocery store here, nominated Howard to ramrod the heel-kicking

"That's one of your best friends who turns out to be your worst enemy,' said the obviously-jesting Howard.

But it was work. Howard and some of his friends organized the 50th Celebration Corp., and sold stock to finance a moneymaking McCamey jubilee. Well, it was on the light-hearted side. But profit-wise, the celebration bombed

While Howard was making ready the actual fanfare, Dean Bolen was getting the town cleaned up and was sprucing up and dressing up Old Fifth Street. She saw that the unused buildings, owned by McCamey oilman W. Brown, were appropriately antiqued. Soon, the buildings' facades became early-century showplaces. "Dean, she just kind of took over," Howard said of Mrs. Bolen. "She did a fantastic job. She's a go-getter, I'll guarantee you," he said.

Mrs. Bolen got things a'going by stirring up folks. "Well, Dean's a pusher," Howard said. "She'll make you mad" to get things done right and

Howard apparently did a little pushing himself to get the celebration The McCamey celebration cor-poration hired an out-of-state firm to set up guidelines for a profit-making

"They more or less showed us how to put one (celebration) on and how to make it worthwhile." Howard said. 'They more or less told us it would make us money. . . . but it's just something that you've got to want to do bad enough.

All told, the McCamey celebrants invested about $40,000 in putting on a good show and in special ordering souvenirs.

The actual celebration included daily parades, street promenading, and a nightly play dramatizing Mc-Camey's history. The cast numbered a 100 or more

"I'd like to see a re-run (of the play's film)," Howard said. "I haven't had a good laugh in a long

The folks involved in the celebration were relieved to see it pass, said Howard, who doubles as a manager of Brown & Thorp Oil Co. here and as a justice of the peace.

"Before it was over, most everybody was . . . just plum worn to a frazzle," he said Laid to rest midway in the June 1975 celebration was a document and things-filled "time capsule." The capsule, which turned out to be a baby coffin, was buried at the corner of Burleson Avenue and Old Fifth Street. A marble stone marks the plot.

The sealed box is to be opened in the year 2000. Howard said. And the curious folks then can read about what happened in McCamey in 1975 and, probably, in the oil boom years when the town was bustling with about 10,000 souls. That's been decades ago, and today the town numbers about a third of that.

And Howard, though proud to be a die-hard McCamey booster, openly declares that he is far from ready for another celebration.

"They'll have to put a knot on my head," Howard said, to persuade hin to get taken in by another full-blown celebration.

"Sure had a lot of fun, but don't want to do it again.

After a series of hijackings in the early 1970s, the federal government ordered tight precautions at U.S. airports.

Acting on the hijackers orders, TWA had similar leaflets dropped by helicopters and private planes over New York, Chicago and Montreal. The 727 was hijacked Friday night

No other bombs have been found. The two statements that the hijackers wanted published in American newspaper consisted of a 1,600-word communique and a 2,500word declaration of independence of the Croatian people.

Quake rattles northeast Italy sons were injured by falling pieces of buildings or when they jumped out of windows in panic. An elderly man in Trento was reported killed when he fell and struck his head on a stone. In Venice, residents and tourists rushed through the narrow streets, heading into the city's squares. Some buildings were seen swaying, but there was no immediate report of damage. There was little damage reported immediately in Austria. The first tremor struck at 5:31 p.m. local time (12:31 p.m. EDT) and the second stronger one about four minutes later. The National Earthquake Information Service at Golden, Colo., said the largest tremor measured between 5 and 5.4 on the Richter scale and the smaller one a bout 4.5. According to that scale, a quake measuring 5 can cause considerable damage in populated areas, while one measuring 6 can be severe. Each increase of one number means ground

However, the seismological institution in Uppsala Sweden said the first tremor hit 5.6 on the Richter scale and the second 5.9.

throughout the South Tyrol region in the Alps bordering Austria and in the Austrian province of Carinthia bordering Italy, especially in the capital of Klagenfurt and the town of Villach.

Episcopal general convention faces turmoil over two issues

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Episcopal Church on Saturday launched its 65th triennial general convention in a state of turmoil over proposals to admit women to the priesthoood and to revise its historic Book of Common Prayer.

Both issues have stirred deep conflict in the three-million member denomination and could affect much of Christianity. Whatever the outcome, the convention was seen as a watershed in the life of the church.

Amid charges and countercharges, opposing groups pledged to maintain "mutual respect" in the aftermath. But there were many signs of entrenched and hardened difference over the matters.

The Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, the church's presiding bishop, said that in view of the strongly conflicting positions, the church must find a way to encompass both sides in order to preserve its unity.

'We are obliged to do so in order to be more responsive as a community of faith to the whole mission of Jesus Christ to a broken, divided, alienated, dying humanity," he said in an address for the opening worship service.

Among thousands gathered for the service at the St. Paul Civic Center were 912 official deputies. Half were clergy and half were laity, elected from the church's 113 dioceses. Most of the church's 235 bishops also joined in a colorful procession. The rest of the 13-day meeting will be across the Mississippi River in Minneapolis, at the Minneapolis Auditorium and Convention Hall.

The house of delegates and house of bishops together form a bicamerai church legislature, much like the two branches of the U.S. Congress. Concurrence of both is needed for

Bishop Allin urged them to face the reality of two distinct wings in the church on the prayer book and women's ordination proposals, and to allow room in the church for "one household of faithful people." His advice was characteristic of the historic tempering solutions of worldwide Anglicanism, of which the Episcopal Church is one of 22 national branches totaling 47 million people.

Their tradition, with its origins in the Church of England, has always been hospitable to diversity and draws both from Protestant and Catholic forms of worship. Indeed, many Anglicans regard their church as a "bridge" between the two ap-

Storm Kathleen starts dying out

California's desert areas

LOS ANGELES (AP) after a day-long dren-Rain from tropical ching that left at least storm Kathleen abated three dead in two states, Saturday in Southern an entire railroad out of service and a major interstate highway blocked. The storm caused millions of dollars in property and crop damage and left hundreds of homes destroyed or damaged.

The freak tropical storm was the first to hit Southern California since 1939. Some regions had more than entire average year's rain in a single

An end to the rains appeared to be nearing Saturday. The National Weather Service withdrew flash flood warnings for Southern California and portions of Nevada and Arizona.

The storm was blamed for the drownings of two persons in the little Imperial County community of Ocotillo. About half the town's 400 residents were evacuated Friday night when a sixfoot high wall of water rumbled out of a ravine and poured through the center of town.

County Sheriff's Lt. Mike Singh said "maybe 30 or 40 people are unaccounted for" in Ocotillo. Some persons began returning to Ocotillo on Saturday, but Sheriff's Lt. Bruce Anderholt stated about half the community was washed away.

The storm spilled across into Arizona, where 80 mile an hour winds were reported at Yuma. One man was killed when the storm blew a tree onto his mobile home.

Authorities said In-terstate 8 would be closed for at least a week. Several secondary roads in Southern California also were closed.

If the second lander can find some trace of organics in the rocky soil, Viking 1's findings will be less puzzling. The explanation could be that there were organics, but not within the handful of soil scooped up by Viking 1's telescoping shovel arm.

If no organics are found by Viking 2, scientists are likely to split on the issue of life on Mars, some calling the findings "fancy chemistry," others proclaiming the discovery of ex-traterrestial life.

Texas priest found slain in hotel room

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) - An Episcopal priest from Texas was found stabbed to death in his hotel room early Saturday, police said. The Hennepin County medical examiner's office identified the victim as The Rev. James Kilpatrick, 44, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church at Center, Texas.

Kilpatrick was scheduled to attend the triennial national general convention of the Episcopal Church, which opened Saturday

Police were called to the Andrews Hotel in downtown Minneapolis about 4:40 a.m. to check reports of someone bleeding and found the victim.

The medical examiner's office said Kilpatrick died of multiple stab wounds and was dead at the scene.

Vorster center of raging storm that may alter African history

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) - Ten years after his predecessor was knifed to death in parliament, South African Prime Minister John Vorster is in the center of a storm that may change the face of southern Africa.

Three months of bloody rioting against South Africa's race laws have undermined the apartheid system of separation of the races, the cornerstone of orster's policies.

The once-flourishing economy, which has made South Africa a land of prosperity for whites, is in the most critical condition since the depression of the

The white-ruled buffer states that once protected South Africa from the surge of black nationalism in central and northern Africa have nearly all been swept away. Only in Rhodesia are whites stubbornly hanging on to power, and even there a guerrilla war is escalating.

FEW INTERNATIONAL observers expect the white Rhodesian government to survive, and diplomatic efforts are being concentrated on keeping the conflict from engulfing all of southern Africa. The grim-faced South African leader, whose years in power have been marked by a mixture of pragmatism and ironfisted action against opponents of apartheid, is in a pivotal position in that effort.

He is already backing U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's strategy, designed to bring a peaceful changeover to black majority rule in Rhodesia and independence for South-West Africa, now ruled by Vorster's government. Kissinger and Vorster are to meet again this week for further discussions

His response to racial rioting at home that has left more than 300 persons dead since June, has been to threaten more police action while promising to consider "genuine grievances" of nonwhites.

THIS HAS LED his opponents to charge that he is failing to provide leadership at one of the most critical periods in the nation's history.

But to his supporters, he is a strong leader not to be panicked into hasty action, a man committed to white rule but open to some change. Vorster is expected to map out his strategy for peaceful change at home and abroad in a speech Monday — the 10th anniversary of his appointment following the assassination of Hendrik Verwoerd. When Vorster took over, there were widespread predictions that he would follow a hard-line policy to bolster white rule, with no concessions to the nation's 18 million blacks. THE PREDICTIONS were based on his five years as justice minister. Starting in 1961, he ruthlessly cracked down on opposition to South Africa's race laws. He introduced detention without trial and 'banning" - restriction on speech, movement or association. After the Sharpeville incident in 1961 in which police killed 69 blacks demonstrating against apartheid, the militant black African National Congress and Pan African Congress were outlawed and leaders either jailed or banned. Other dissidents were deported or had their passports confiscated. The tactic succeeded in dampening black opposition to white rule until June 16 of this year, when young blacks in the segregated township of Soweto, mear Johannesburg, ignited the nation's worst racial upheaval. That upheaval shows no sign of subsiding.

VORSTER ALSO SPREAD the color bar to politics in 1968, outlawing multiracial organizations to remove the threat to his government from the mixed-race Liberal and Progressive parties. In the same year, the nation' 2 million "coloreds," as people of mixed race are officially called here, lost their right to be represented in parliament.

However, in a vain attempt to get South Africa back into the Olympics in 1968, Vorster eased apartheid restrictions in sports and allowed multiracial teams. -

A limited number of hotels were opened to all races and Vorster did not oppose moves by Johannesburg and other South African cities to desegregate public

Vorster has been a pragmatist abroad. He offered friendship to countries willing to overlook South Africa's internal policies. At the height of his detente policy with black African states, he promised to move away from race discrimination.

NEWLY INDEPENDENT Botswana, Lesotho, Swaziland and Malawi, all economically dependent on South Africa, established diplomatic missions in Pretoria and accepted trade and aid from Vorster.

When the black president of Malawi, Kamazu Banda, paid a state visit to South Africa in 1971, Vorster shocked some of his hardline white supporters by being photographed with the black statesman, sitting next to one of Banda's black female aides at dinner. The same pragmatism that led him to seek detente with black nations to the north, including Liberia and the Ivory Coast, also persuaded him to back black majority rule in Rhodesia and move toward in

THE INITIAL successes of detente brought a dramatic meeting with Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, a moderate leader widely respected interdependence for South-West Africa.

The meeting came at the opening of constitutional

Urban-planned dream project ends a failure

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Twenty years after the $35 million Pruitt-Igoe housing complex opened as an urban planner's dream, the last of its 33 highrise buildings has been reduced to rubble, ending what had become a nightmare of rodents, drugs and crime.

Wrecking crews finished demolishing the last of the 11- story buildings this week on the 47-acre tract. All of the 10,000 residents who once occupied its 2,900 low-income apartments had long since moved out.

"The concept of a very large, very high-density complex filled with low-income tenants has been discarded," John G. Roach, head of the city's Community Development Agency, said in an interview. He said similar projects had met the same fate elsewhere.

"What it really boils down to," said Thomas P. Costello, executive director of the city Housing Authority, "is that we have proved we can build buildings but we still haven't proved we can manage them."

When the federally funded project opened in various stages in the mid-1950s, it was designed for low-income working families. But soon most of its tenants were one-parent welfare families, Costello said, and the buildings fell into disrepair.

"They were vandalized and the people still didn't care," he said. With repairs, the project cost the government about $1 million per year to operate.

Vandals smashed windows with stones and bullets. Winter temperatures caused water pipes to freeze and burst, flooding apartments and ruining electrical equipment, including power supplies for elevators. The entire complex took on a bombed-out look. A $5 million rehabilitation program in 1966 failed to help.

As the condition of the buildings, rent strikes and other factors drove tenants away, the area became a target for rising crime. Robbers, drug dealers and other thugs made the vacant apartments their territory

In August 1973, H.R. Crawford, assistant secretary for housing management for the Department of Housing and Urban Development, came to St. Louis in response to public pressure to announce that the complex would be destroyed. The remaining 550 families living there were relocated in other subsidized housing by spring of 1974.

Peso squeeze felt at border

TIJUANA, Mexico (AP) — Border Mexicans who grew up with the U.S. dollar are finding dealing in dollars is too expensive since the peso was devalued.

A dreary future faces families who owe dollars on credit purchases, say government officials. If the present exchange rate holds, they may have to pay 40 per cent more than they expected.

"The situation involves problems so complicated they are almost beyond imagination," said Eleutero Cacho, assistant director of the federal office for consumer protection in Tijuana

Cacho said several thousand Tijuana residents alone are paying for millions of dollars in consumer goods with prices and payments demanded in U.S. money.

The peso's value has fallen from 12.5 to the American dollar to about 20 since President Luis Echeverria announced Sept. 1 that the peso would be allowed to float free in monetary markets. For many Mexicans, especially those far from the border, it has become cheaper to trade in pesos for Mexican-produced products and goods, although luxuries and import goods cost more.

But along the border, many are no longer able to deal in dollars and many Mexicans have stopped buying in U.S. stores across the border.

"The situation in Baja California is unique in Mexico," said Guillermo Cardenas, an official in the Tijuana office of the federal Ministry of Industry and Commerce.

"People have been so used to dealing with dollars that they are now having a terrible time converting it to a Mexican economy although they have always lived in Mexico."

Cacho said in an interview that his office is trying to talk merchants into renegotiating installment contracts so they can be paid off in pesos at the previously expected costs.

A number of hotel and cafe operators in Ensenada to the south have signed an agreement to cut prices by 20 per cent on weekends and 40 per cent during the week in a move to keep business.

Rebel bishop, Pope meet

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (AP) — Rebel Bishop Marcel Lefebvre met Pope Paul VI today, seven weeks after the Vatican suspended the French prelate from his priestly functions because of his defiant rejection of change in the church.

Bishop Lefebvre smiled as he left the Pope's hilltop summer residence and confirmed to reporters that he had been received by the pontiff.

A Vatican statement on Aug. 27 had said that "the arms of the Pope are open" to receive the maverick hishon

Bishop Lefebvre received the toughest Vatican punishment, short of excommunication, that can be imposed on a bishop after he ignored a papal ban against ordaining priests at his seminary in Econe, Switzerland.

At the seminary, students are taught to disregard the teachings of the 1962-65 Vatican II ecumenical council and the changes in the Mass and other church rites that Pope Paul has decreed since then.

The bishop entered the Renaissance palace that serves as the Pope's summer retreat at midmorning.

and emerged one hour later.

Bishop Lefebvre was accompanied by one of his disciples, a French priest.

A source close to the bishop said he had arrived in Rome Thursday and first spoke with Pope Paul's aides Friday.

The source said an Italian priest and friend of Bishop Lefebvre was a middleman in arranging the audience.

Archbishop Giovanni Benelli, the powerful Vatican deputy secretary of state, reportedly attended today's unusual meeting.

Bishop Lefebvre, defying a renewed paper appeal to abstain from saying Mass, celebrated the Eucharistic rite and delivered a harsh attack against Pope Paul's church policies before a crowd of 7,000 in the open-size stadium of Jille France. Aug. 29.

COLLEGE STATION-A home burns every 45 seconds and up to 2,000 children burn to death annually. Following are two more drills offered in this series designed to teach children how to survive a fire. In the fifth part of this series, a final "rookie" examination will be offered to determine whether your children qualify as "firemen".

A drill called "Get Out Fast" trains youngsters in the importance of a quick escape. A child's first impulse in fires should always be to "get out", even though the blaze may be small, for it can become an inferno in minutes. Fire most often strikes at night while children are asleep, so the most important drill you can give them is this: Have them lie on their beds and then sound the alarm. Time them to see how long it takes to reach the meeting place outside the house. At first, let them escape the simplest RUTLAND, Vt. (AP) - way. Where can prescriptions be filled? What about eye examinations and new glasses? Find out how far you must travel for medical help in the event

Many persons do not wish to drive. Some can no longer drive for health reasons. Others want to curtail driving in the interest of economy. Is local transportation available? How often? In addition to a long wait for a repairman, you may need to pay travel time. One couple found repair costs prohibitive in their new home.

-Many people want to satisfy a long time dream when retirement comes around, by finding a remote spot where they can "get away from it all" to fish and walk. Buildings for storage

Little storage buildings, tool houses and the like, are becoming popular additions to yards, back and front, as an answer to quick storage of objects used outdoors. Often the buildings do not flatter the house on the property.

A unit should be selected that looks well with the house and it should be placed where it isn't an eyesore. A scale drawing of the property should help locate the most likely spot.

It must be determined, too, whether the building can be put where you would like to have it. A town's zoning laws might prohibit erecting the building too close to the road or a property line. If it is put on a temporary foundation, such as blocks or stones, no variance permit or building permit may be required. Check it out with the local building office. If a variance is needed, you may have to enlist the support of neighbors. They may be congenial about it, but you should choose a building that is pleasing to the eye from their vantage point. So a good deal of thought ought to go into selection of the unit.

Prefabricated buildings are available from many sources. These are usually good looking and can be trucked quickly to the property and then erected by the home handyman, perhaps with the assistance of one person. Some units resemble little guest houses with a window and a flower box and these can be quite attractive. Some designs built by local carpenters may be sturdier than the factory units. In any event, price can usually be a guide to the durability of the structure among factory built lines. Choosing a unit of lighter construction to save a few dollars may not be the best solution.

Building your own storage unit may provide more confidence in its ruggedness.

Transfer pattern for feather stitches not really necessary

By ERICA WILSON

DEAR MS. WILSON: Would you please tell me where I can obtain transfer patterns of feather stitches for pillow cases?—Mrs. Mary Osmond, Brooklyn, N.Y. DEAR MRS. OSMOND: I'm not sure there's anything like that on the market, but really, you don't need a transfer pattern for the feather stitch. It's such a spontaneous, natural, freeflowing stitch that it will be far more successful if you just take needle in hand. You can make lovely geometric patterns-zigzags and chevronsalmost unconsciously since the feather stitch makes all kinds of designs just by changing direction!

I got all sorts of inspiration for feather stitch possibilities in a marvelous English book called 'Dorset Feather Stitching' by Barbara Pass. In it, I also found an interesting bit of trivia: It seems that long ago, different kinds of feather stitches embroidered on clothes told of a person's occupation. A farmer might have some animals stitched on the yolk of his overalls, while a haymaker and a wheelwright would sport tools of their trades.

DEAR MS. WILSON: I design my own needlepoints, taking ideas from photographs, life, even the lint on my coat. I have had the desire to design kits professionally for some time and would like to know whether or not you need a license to buy needlepoint supplies wholesale from the manufacturers.—Myrna Gaddie, Chicago, Ill.

DEAR MS. GADDIE: No, you don't need a license. But you'll find that most manufacturers require minimum orders—a certain number of each item—before extending wholesale rates.

DEAR ERICA: One of my pet peeves is buying expensive and inexpensive crewel and needlepoint kits and working on them only to find myself with an inadequate supply of one or two major colors and/or an overabundance of minor colors.

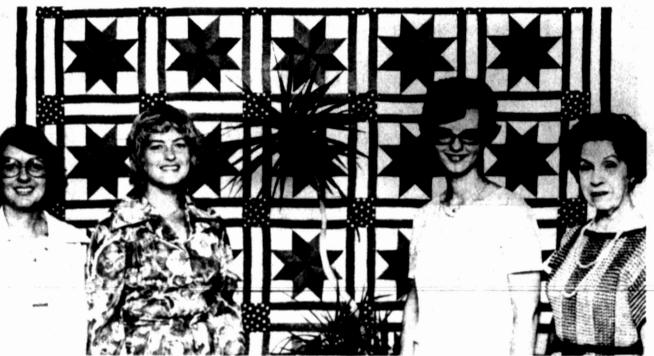

At first I blamed myself for using too much yarn while sewing, especially with the satin stitch, but shouldn't companies take into con-sideration that some people work differently than others? Sometimes, in order to remedy this shortage, have written to companies to send extra yarn. This takes anywhere from six to eight weeks and keeps me from finishing my work.

What would you do in this situation?—Miss M. Ranauro, South

Royalton, Vt.
DEAR MISS RANAURO: As a rule, manufacturers include in their kits 20 per cent overage to allow for mistakes and differences in working. The average amount of wool needed for each kit is computed by having the design worked three times by different people. You see, in order to bring out a kit at a competitive price. manufacturers must have accurate wool counts because wool is the most expensive ingredient in the kit. However, I do know how frustrating it is when you do run short and must wait several weeks before getting extra yarn from the manufacturer. It's just enough time to lose interest in

Sure-shot plantation owner foils burglary

BLUFFTON, S.C. (AP) -Two Marines, who apparently swam three-fourths of a mile across the May River to burglarize the isolated island home of a millionaire, were shot to death by the owner of the estate, authorities say.

Henry S. "Harry" Cram, a 69year-old plantation owner described by neighbors as an avid outdoorsman and proficient with firearms, fired two shots from a .38-caliber revolver, instantly killing the Marines, Beaufort County Coroner Roger Pinckney said Friday.

The men were identified as Sgt. Jon M. Adams Jr., 20, of High Point, N.C., and Lance Cpl. Lawrence R. Powell, 21, of Union Town, N.J.

A third Marine who authorities said also was believed to be involved was in custody on burglary charges. Officers identified him as Sgt. Robert L. Nunez, 34, of Trinidad, Colo., and said he was arrested in a car at Bluffton shortly after the shooting.

Pinckney said one of the dead Marines wore a rubber diving suit and the other was dressed in cutoff fatigues. He said they both had knives, one of them a Bowie knife which he described as "the largest I ever saw."

Pinckney, who said not all details were immediately available, gave the following ac-

The two men entered the modern, three-home complex through an open screen door in the bedroom of Cram's son, Peter. One man wore a stocking over his face; the other had a pillowcase over his head.

They tied up Peter and led him to his parents' bedroom.

When they reached the bedroom, one of the men stood in front of Peter and the other stood behind him with a knife at

One of the Marines said. "Peter, tell your father to throw the gun out the door."

Peter then yelled to his father that the men had knives.

Cram opened the door, his son dropped to the floor, and Cram fired the gun, hitting both Marines in the head. The coroner said the two men died instantly.

Jesse Owens, former Olympic star who won four gold medals in the Berlin Games, has expressed the sincere hope that the United states never will heed the demands of some alarmists who maintain that America must adopt the "factory" methods of communist countries in order to compete equally in the Olympics.

In urging that the present system be retained, the one-time Alabama cotton-picker said Americans only had to look into the jaded face of little Olga Korbut to realize that national subsidization isn't the answer for producing Olympic teams.

You wanted to cry for that little girl," added the star of the 1936 Olympics in Berlin. "She looked like a dishrag with all the water rung out. It was a tragic

And a 10-year old West Texas girl who is interested in gymnastics and who watched the competition in Montreal on television, asked her mother why Olga appeared so sad. The young West Texan said she also felt like crying for Olga.

Olga, incidentally, was the symnastics heroine of the 1972 Games in Munich. But at the 1976 Games at Montreal, where everyone was cheering a 14-year old Romanian marvel named Nadia Comaneci, the Soviet girl was a pale, haggard has-been at the age of 21.

She looked like a woman twice her age, and she appeared to be embittered.

"Don't try to tell me about the programs of these Communist countries," Owens said. "I looked at that East German girl, Kornelia Ender. Sure, she swept to a lot of medals. But I wondered what she had to look forward to in life after her swimming days are over."

Owens added that he recalled some of the former swimming champions in the United States, women now 50 and 60 years old, "all charming, attractive women who have found a place in the social structure. Have you ever stopped to wonder what happens to athletes who are caught in the government- operated systems of the East Europe countries? What can they look forward to?"

In answering his own question, Owens said an example might be found in the tragic career of Emil Zatopek, the Czechoslovakian who was lionized after winning the 5,000 and 10,000 meters and marathon at Helsinki in 1952.

"He disagreed with the government politically," Jesse explained. "He was stripped of his captancy in the army. He was subjected to public disgrace. Now he is digging post holes in Prague."

He went on to say that the "factory" methods of Communist countries do not fit into "our way of life. Perhaps we have won so much that we have become complacent. Our fault may lie in a decline of our dedication and determination, not the system.

WRITE ON: Gerald Ford appears ready for big battle

By VIRGIL PINKLEY Copley News Service

President Ford's acceptance speech as the GOP nominee was the best written and delivered one he has ever made.

He came out fighting. This continues to be his stance. He has cited his record, which had not received much comment until recently. He laid a challenge down to Jimmy Carter, the Democratic nominee, and asked to meet him face to face in national televised debates. Mr. Ford knows that he started a long way behind Carter. Further, that the Republican Party constitutes only 20 to 22 per cent of the registered voters in the country. It is decidedly a minority party.

The only way he can hope to be elected is to receive most of the Republican votes, a large number of conservative Democratic ones and most of the independent vote. It's a tall order, but Mr. Ford appears ready for the battle.

Now he speaks as if he really were an incumbent president, possessing all of the power, possibilities and opportunities of the occupant of the White House.

He has taken out after the Democratic Congress. Many things he says are reminiscent of the charges made by Harry Truman when he ran against Thomas Dewey and defeated him in a surprise

Over and over Truman charged the Republican Congress then im power of being a do-nothing Congress. He did not stop with a single accusation but hammered the theme again and again.

If Mr. Ford is to win, he must do likewise. The President will be well advised to list specifics when he charges that the Democratic Congress is one made up of big spenders.

He stressed the fact that he had vetoed 55 pieces of legislation, 44 of which had been sustained. He did not list what these vetoed measures would have cost the country in additional taxes and deficits. This is the sort of factual evidence he must present

When Jimmy Carter says that Mr. Ford has not provided leadership and that a newly elected Ford administration would fail to provide inspiration and to go after the key problems facing the nation the President should make him cite specific examples, backed up by facts and figures - the record.

The Democrats at this date are better organized than the Republicans. They will have heavy support from minorities and big labor. They start with a party registration of roughly 2 to 1 over their opponents. They have more

It is obvious that they are going to hammer constantly the theme of Watergate. Over and over again Fritz Mondale directly and Carter directly or indirectly will be saying, "If you want to vote for Nixon and Agnew, then vote Republican.'

Carter has said that he will not make Watergate an issue, but then he immediately refers, directly or indirectly, to Watergate and he criticizes the President for granting the Nixon pardon he did at the time he did and in the way he did.

It will be interesting to note just how sincere the men on both tickets will be when they claim they will not stress certain situations or themes and then, in a ypocritical way, proceed to do so.

It's going to be a tough, rough, dingdong battle all the way. Personally, I do not expect to see any landslide victory. It will be close and the outcome will not be known until the final ballots are counted.

The polls may continue to have the Democrats leading, but as the President said in his acceptance speech, "The only poils that count are the polls where the Americans vote on President's running mate, has stressed that when he sought reelection to the Senate from Kansas in 1974 he was steadily behind in the polls, and shortly before the voting he was 12 per cent behind his opponent. He overcame this lead to win.

Newsmen are jailed for working

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - Four Fresno, Calif., newsmen are in prison, as I write, not for committing crimes but for reporting news that offended a state judge. They dared to print news that Judge Denver Peckinpah thought should be withheld from the public.

This isn't the formal charge against them, but it is the reason they were sent to jail.

The loss of liberty for James Bort, William Patterson, George Gruner and Joseph Rosato of The Fresno Bee is a loss for citizens everywhere. For Judge Peckinpah has challenged the right of Americans to read about scandals that the courts may choose

The need for the press to occupy an adversary role was clear to America's founding fathers. That is why they made freedom of the press the first guarantee of the Bill of Rights. Without press freedom, they knew, the other freedoms would fall. For government, by its nature, tends to oppress. Let the government shackle the press, and there will be no uproar if you are taken off in the night. For no one will know. In the Fresno case, the trouble began almost two years ago when The Fresno Bee got access to grand jury testimony alleging that a city councilman had received $5,000 from a garbage removal firm. He stood to get another $20,000 more if the firm got the public garbage contract, according to the secret testimony. prejudice the rights of the accused to a fair trial. Not until the trial was ordered moved from Fresno to Oakland did the Bee publish the testimony. The editors reasoned that the voters had an overriding right to know about the alleged shenanigans behind the garbage contract.

On the other hand, the court had various means for assuring a fair trial. Not only had the trial been removed from Fresno, but the court could take proper precautions in selecting and quarantining the jury Clearly, the Bee's revelations didn't prejudice the trial. For the councilman was acquitted, although his accused briber was convicted.

The case began to recede into history, but Judge Peckinpah refused to let go. Technically, the Fresno Four were jailed because they refused to tell the judge who had showed them the grand jury transcript. This was not information the judge needed for any valid reason.

meaningless if the courts can compel reporters to divulge the sources of their information. Reporters cannot betray their sources without impeaching themselves as newsmen and losing their confidential sources. Thereafter, the newspaper would no longer be a refuge for insiders who see corruption and want to expose it, without suffering reprisals.

Such confidential informants have been behind almost every major expose of public corruption in my experience. I have had a little to do with exposing the Watergate, CIA and FBI scandals. I have written about wrongdoing in Congress, the Pentagon, labor unions and corporations. None of these stories could have been written without unauthorized sources.

Destroy the informant's assurance that his anonymity will be preserved and you have destroyed the vitals of go to jail rather than betray their

The rationale behind the Fresno jailings is that grand jury proceedings are sacrosanct and that disclosure jeopardizes the rights of the accused and the functioning of the prosecution. Some of this is valid; most of it is hocus pocus.

No institution likes to have the press snooping around; all claim it interferes with their proper function. Judge, legislator and bureaucrat afike have a hankering to do the public business in private. The trouble with this, as Jim Bort of The Fresno Bee has written, is that "a democracy cannot function in darkness.

An excellent illustration of what secrecy breeds in free institutions, in fact, is the historic perversion of the grand jury system. Grand juries originally were intended to protect the citizen against arbitrary acts by prosecutors. But under the secrecy imposed by the courts, grand juries long ago became the docile tool of the prosecutors, a vehicle for fishing expeditions and pressure tactics, the very instrument of the excesses and chicaneries they were established to President Nixon tried to use the grand jury as a device for covering up Watergate. His early strategy was to refuse to let his aides testify before the Senate Watergate Committee on the pretext that the proper forum was the grand jury.

He hoped the grand jury would be in friendly hands. He counted on the most damaging revelations being kept under seal. He envisioned that long delays and the news blackout would dampen public interest. In such a vacuum, he hoped the proceedings could be tailored to produce a lesser scapegoat. He had John Mitchell in mind, then John Dean - with the top White House conspirators safeguarded.

What went wrong? Nixon confided to Cabinet members that he abandoned the stonewalling strategy for two reasons. He was under great pressure, he said. from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R.-Ariz., not to persist in defiance of the Congress. He also cited the publication of the grand jury testimony by this column. It was no longer possible, therefore, for the White House to cover up the truth.

ST. JOHN'S JOURNAL Issue of New South versus the Free South discussed

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - "We are going to esquecepted because of Jimmy Carter," asserted the Southern writer John Egerton. "But it isn't working out right. We're giving up the virtues for the vices. The thing that I have Iways feared is going to happen; the reunion is going to take place. But it'll happen on someone else's terms."

The author of "The mericanization of Dixie" has solated the central issue when it mes to the claim Jimmy Carter has the South. Will the South support Carter just because he is a Southerner nd run the real risk of committing cultural, political and economic

Is the South to support Carter solely recause he is a native son and a self-professed "born-again" Christian thout also asking: Is he for real? Or he, instead, the agent of the Nor-ern liberals and labor union bosses ith whom he has now forged a political alliance to gain national sower? And what would be the impact in the South, nominally conservative, culturally cohesive and free from the many problems of the North?

The slogan invented by the Northern liberal press of "The New South" is misleading, particularly the as a slogan it says little while traplying much — a description of Jimmy Carter without a doubt.

New South against a "Free South." What Carter has promised the liberals, the labor unions and associates of Sen. Walter Mondale, D-Minn., can only mean that a Carter presidency implies a "New Reconstruction" with government controls and regulations of life in the South to a greater degree than already enacted by members of the Democratic-stand on right-to-work laws clearly indicates he would repeal them for the This would open up the floodgates for Northern unions and produce the same results as in cities like New

Thus, the North's terms for the South's alleged readmission into the Union — an arrogant assumption on the face of it — are to adopt the philosophy, programs and life-style that have made the Northern United States not a very pleasant place to live in and raise a family, particularly in the urban areas. I argue that Jimmy Carter is NOT a Southerner. He may have been born in Georgia and speaks with a Southern accent, but his education was as an engineer at Annapolis, which provides little that a true Southern education gives to its native sons and daughters.

Perhaps Carter, in temperament and liberal outlook, is like Woodrow Wilson, a naturalized Northerner born in the South but never civilized by its influences. Carter's mind is cast in the liberal mold. As an engineer he sees human engineering schemes of big govern-Human beings are not inanimate brick, stone and steel girders. No true Southerner would ever look upon human problems in such system-analysis fashion. But Northern liberals do — and so does Carter. Jimmy Carter's claim on Southern loyalty is because he is a Southern boy and a good, born-again Christian. But with bitter experience we have to come to know in political life that because a leader gives lip service to his nation and God is no true test of

The Southern historian Richard Weaver, in his brilliant "Southern Tradition at Bay," suggested many years ago what we might be confronted with in a Carter-type bid for the power of the presidency and his political claim on the South to achieve that end. "To betray an ideal," wrote Weaver of many Southerners who secretly make their deals with the North, "at the very moment one praises it is an ancient ruse, and some of those who talked most glibly of the antebellum South were the readiest to drive a bargain." Jimmy Carter is a liberal exponent the New South. Vote for him in November if you like, but don't be surprised if the New South turns out to be a carbon copy of the Old North.

The purpose of this letter is to attempt to clarify the situation in order that those of you who use the airport will have a better understanding of our rules and regulations and why they are

One primary and simple reason for changing our rules and making them a bit more restrictive is the increase in the number of people using the airport which results in a requirement for more automobile parking space. For example, in 1970 we had 164,000 passengers departing on the planes and about the same number arriving. In 1975 our outgoing passenger count had climbed to 236,000 with about the same number of incoming passengers for a total increase of approximately 144,000 people using the airport in 1975

We have had to accommodate this growth with only a slight increase in our public parking facilities and no increase at all in curb parking space in front of the terminal building for passenger and baggage loading and unloading. allowed a maximum 10-minute parking time at the curb in front of the terminal for passenger and baggage loading and unloading. This rule was constantly violated and it was most difficult to enforce. People were parking at the curb to await the arrival of a plane to pick up a passenger or to stand in line to purchase a ticket.

If the plane was late or if the ticket line was long the 10 minutes could extend to 20 or 30 and oftentimes

Unfortunately, the people would consider this a legitimate excuse to leave their automobiles at the curb for extended periods. This naturally deprived curb space to those persons who needed it to actually drop off or pick up a passenger and caused severe traffic congestion at peak periods on the street.

Due to the constant violation of the 10-minute limit, the shortage of frontal curb space and the traffic congestion at peak periods, we deemed it necessary to change this rule and so recommended to the city

The council approved the change to abolish the 10-binute limit and to reserve the curb space for passenger loading and unloading and that no vehicle will be left unattended. This was placed in effect in August.

We know many people do not like this rule but it works to the benefit of the majority who use the airport and it is a standard procedure at other airports across the country.

We have plans to enlarge the public parking facilities and to widen the street in front of the terminal building. This should be accomplished or underway in a year or so.

In the meantime we have installed parking meters in the lots at the north and south ends of the terminal building for public use for short-term parking only. We encourage our customers to use these lots if they are not sure of how long they may need to park their vehicles. A quarter will assure them of 30 minutes of parking time and the meters are set to take four quarters for two hours of parking if necessary. We want to assure the people using the airport that we receive absolutely no satisfaction in issuing tickets for parking violations. This takes time, costs money and creates some animosity. Our main purpose is to maintain some semblance of control over our vehicle parking problem or else we will have complete chaos. We would much rather have never have to issue a single citation but, unfortunately, this does not appear likely. We attempt to use discretion in our enforcement not hesitate in granting additional parking time to our customers if it is

For example; if someone is delivering or picking up a crippled or ill patient at Air Terminal, all they need to is make the act known to the police officer on duty and he will be willing to do everything possible to assist them. He will even escort them directly to the plane if necessary. We do not consider our traffic or parking rules to be unreasonable and it is our intent to enforce them to the degree necessary for the benefit of all of our customers. We believe that all of you who use the airport are entitled to the same rights and privileges regardless of financial status or position in the community and we will be fair and impartial in our actions. We will do our best not to make or repeat mistakes such as that reported in last Sunday's edition of The Reporter-Telegram.

Open your eyes

To The Editor:

In reference to the articles and editorial on Page 1 of the Thursday, Sept. 9 issue of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, I have the following views.

Mr. Editor, you stated that you felt Mayor Angelo was out of order in using his position to speak out against the desegregatiom case. That is fine for you to say since you can use your position to express your views on the front page of the paper and place a bold border around it. I regret to know that this is the view of the paper that we should just "GIVE IT A CHAN-

The federal government has not given the majority of the American people a chance for some time. The preamble to our constitution starts off We the people . . . " and the people of Midland got together to intervene in the desegregation suit and Judge Suttle threw out the intervention

Our congressmen stated that they were opposed to busing but to my knowledge while they have been serving (?) us they have not lifted a finger to change the situation.

"We the people . . . " need to let the federal, state and local governments be keenly aware of the fact that we are not only tired but refuse to be pushed around and forced into situations that disrupt our rights as

I don't now, nor would I ever support violent activities to oppose what is happening all across our nation and right here in Midland. However, I onder exactly what the majority can do to protect our rights in view of the fact that the courts will not hear us and our elected representatives are not working for our wishes.

You commended the school board for their efforts. I wonder if those efforts were not the line of least resistance. You criticized the mayor but I salute him for having the courage to use his office and having the courage to even oppose our great (?) federal government.

Mr. Editor, open your eyes. We have federal control of our schools, federal regulation of the major industries, federal intervention into the small businesses, federal control of speed limits and further federal control of virtually every aspect of

"We the people . . ." had better take a stand before we reach the point of the federal government controlling the size of our families and even determining who the mothers and fathers will be of the children.

Why not start that stand right here in Midland, Texas? "We the people" are not being heard. I do believe that the people can still be heard and that the unified people can raise a thunderous voice that will even shake the foundation of the White House.

If we continue to "give it a chance' and regress to a state of apathy and let the federal government continue its present course then our voice will become an unintelligible whisper.

Who has the right?

To The Editor:

I was disappointed, to say the least, at our editor's stand against the mayor on the front page of Thursday's Reporter-Telegram. I wonder if he will feel the same way when he is told he has 30 days to sell his house to a minority member because his neighborhood is not racially balan-

Who has the right to tell the children of every fourth house on the left hand side of the street that they have to go across town to school anymore, or any less, than to tell every fourth homeowner on the right hand side of the street that he has to sell to a minority?

Who gave some unknown federal judge the right to tell us how to run our schools? The Supreme Court? Vho gave them the right

It's about time we the people took back OUR right to run OUR government. If we can remove our local congressmen and senators from office for lack of support, we should be able to bankrupt our local newspaper for the same reason. Our editor certainly has a right to his own opinion, and so does our

Well, if they drive too fast, too careless and without thinking, it's probably because they rode in the car for several years with a mother and father that ignored the speed laws. We should make an all-out effort to enforce school zones, as everyone knows we certainly owe it to our

AUSTIN NOTEBOOK

It'll be Briscoe vs. League--again

By STUART LONG Austin bureau

AUSTIN - The League of Women Voters of Texas and Gov. Dolph Briscos will be the leaders on two sides of another argument between now and Nov. 2, and it will be a rematch.

Last year, the League supported revision of the Texas constitution, and Briscoe opposed it. He won, and the old constitution is still in effect.

This time, the women voters are opposing the $400 million expansion of the Texas Water Development Fund, a loan fund for cities and other local agencies to help finance water supply projects at lower interest rates than are available to most of the local agencies

Briscoe is supporting it, and he may be at a disadvantage, because the "agin" point of view is generally more popular than the "fur" point of Humorist John Henry Faulk, who retreated to Madisonville to get away from the big city life, is opposing the projects the bond money would help finance from the point of view of an environmentalist. But he is using the "tax" idea to make his no-growth suggestions have a wider appeal.

The women voters contend that projects like Palmetto Bend Reservoir in Jackson County should not be built until they are actually needed. State money is being loaned to help finance the local share of that project on the theory that buying land and paying for construction now will save millions of dollars, by getting the work done before any more inflation can take place.

There has been a lot of misunderstanding about the $400 million bond program of which something more than half has been spent so far. It is a loan fund, and the local agencies of government which borrow the money will pay it back at interest rates half of one per cent higher than the cost of interest to the state.

To get that lower rate of interest, the voters approved a guarantee on the state bonds out of general revenue, and in some cases, general tax money must be advanced to help make the principal and interest payments on the state bonds, while some of the projects are being built, with no revenue coming in as yet.

But eventually, as bonds are paid off, the state treasury will recover that money and make a profit, if the water users who live in the cities and run the industries pay their water bills down through the years.

Briscoe has selected a large citizens committee to campaign for the expansion of the bond program, and also for the second $100 million in similar bonds needed to help cities and districts finance their share of the cost of water pollution control equipment and plants. The first $100 million is nearly all loaned out, so the legislature felt that another issue should be authorized for this purpose. The League of Women Voters is not opposing these clean water bonds, and as far as is known, no public opposition has developed on them.

When the new constitution was defeated, Briscoe was one of the few openly opposing it. This time, he has the support of the other two top state legislature officers, Lieut. Gov. Bill Hobby and Speaker Bill Clayton. They were on the side of the League of Women Voters last year.

But another important factor in the campaign for and against the $400 million bond issue will be the fact that people on the line for water development are in the midst of an argument about whether the three state water agencies should be combined into two or into one agency. This keeps them somewhat at arms length of each other, and probably lessens their effectiveness at teaming up for the Nov. 2 campaign.

One argument being used against the amendment is that it will be used to bring water from the Mississi to bring water from the Mississippi River to serve West Texas. That is a false argument, since the amendment specifically prohibits the use of any of the money for developing Mississippi River water supplies. That idea was advanced some years ago, but has been put on the shelf for the time been put on the shelf for the time being because it was found to be economically infeasible by the federal agencies which studied it.

For nearly 20 years now, the water development fund has been helping build dams, water lines and treatment plants for cities on groups of cities, and no loan has been defaulted,

Whether the program continues an expands depends on whether Gov Briscoe or the League of Women Voters captures the voters minds

Poor just want out of neighborhood

(Art Buchwald was so disappointed If they agreed to pay you, what is the he wasn't chosen as President Ford's running mate that he has decided to take a few weeks off. He left behind some of his all-time favorite

One of the big debates going on in Washington is whether the poor people should have a voice in the war on poverty. Everybody has been heard from on the subject except the poor people themselves. So I decided to go out and interview a poor person and ask him what he thought about it. It wasn't easy to find one, because nobody likes to admit to being poor. Also, poor people are suspicious of strangers asking questions. They believe, and rightly so, that no good can come of it.

I finally found a man in a bar in one of the rundown sections of Washington who was willing to admit he was poor and also willing to talk

I asked him if he thought he would like to serve on a committee to see what could be done about poverty.

"Mister, if I had any ideas what to do about poverty, I wouldn't be poor." "But there is a school of thought in Washington that poor people are the only ones who know the real problems of the poor, and they should be strongly involved in the program to formulate and implement antipoverty programs." "I wouldn't serve on such a board unless they paid me," he said. "Oh, I'm sure they would pay you.

first thing you would do?"

"I'd move out of the neighborhood." "But if you did that, you would lose contact with poor people and you would no longer be able to speak for-

"Exactly. Poor people don't want to be spoken for. They just want to get the hell out of the neighborhood. Asking poor people how to win the war on poverty is like asking Japanese how to win World War II." 'You've got a point there. But there is a great deal of pressure to have poor people work out their own destinies in the antipoverty program. "Okay, then let them put everybody who is poor on an antipoverty committee and pay them all a salary. Once they're on a salary, you'll solve every problem a poor person has. And they'll all move the hell out of the neighborhood. "On the surface this sounds like a good solution to the problem, but it would put a great financial strain on the government.' "Yeah, but if you put people on salary, you wouldn't have to make welfare payments, and the poor people would pay taxes so it would eventually even itself out." "I agree," I said, "but if you put all poor people on antipoverty committees and paid them, you would eliminate poverty and there would be no reason to have the committees." "I'm not sure about that. As soon as people get a salary, they can get all the credit they want from banks and finance companies. The more you borrow, the poorer you become. As long as there are credit companies. there will always be poor people."

"It makes a lot of sense," admitted. "You seem to have thoughtthis out pretty well." "When you're poor, you have nothing else to think about."

"I wonder why the government hasn't thought of it." "Because they're afraid we'd all move the hell out of the neighborhood."

Resentment breeds needless troubles

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

We have a curious way of making needless extra trouble for ourselves by indulging resentment. Take two human stories. One concerns a reader of this column who wrote me for advice. It seems she had extraordinarily bitter feelings toward her father. I referred her to the chapter on resentment in my booklet, "What's Your Trouble?"

I did not hear from her again for a long time. Then she wrote, "I read your suggestion on resentment and tried to follow your advice. At first I did not notice any change, but as I practiced those ideas there came a time when I felt my resentment gradually going away. . . "I did not realize what a destructive force resentment is or how I had allowed it to dominate me. I think the most difficult step in overcoming it is admitting it is wrong. I had been trying to justify it, but once I admitted to myself that it was wrong," she concluded, "I got rid of it."

I recall the case of a wife who came to consult me when she discovered that her husband had been having a that her husband had been having a clandestine affair with another woman. Seldom have I seen anyone so angry. She and her husband, she kept repeating, had been married 20 years. She had trusted him. She had thought all was well between them. She could not find words strong enough for what she thought of him. He was a double-dealer. He was the lowest kind of heel.

I certainly could not condone the husband's conduct, but so self-righteous was this woman's attitude

I could find no way effectively to shut off the flow of her vitups ration.

But only for a moment. We still were not making much progress in helping her. So I decided upon a kind of dramatic method. I said to her.

Surprised though she was, she did as suggested. And I was even more surprised, because of the intensity of

Some Americans in Rhodesia want to stay, fight

By ROBIN WRIGHT Special to The Washington Post-Outlook

SALISBURY - Red Parham is one of Rhodesia's wealthiest and most prominent residents, a man who, along with brothers "White" and "Black," developed Rhodesia's tobacco industry in the 1920s.

Mary Jane Woram is a past president of the Salisbury Womens Club and chairman of a new letter campaign appealing for international support of Rhodesia's white minority government.

Dave and Mike are soldiers in Rhodesia's army, members of a special division fighting black na-tionalist guerrillas who have been waging war against the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith since December 1972.

Bruce Glenn is one of Rhodesia Broadcasting Corp.'s reporters, host of a new "Psychological War and You' weekly program on Rhodesia's rapidly escalating guerrilla war.

All five were born and brought up in the United States, and are now among some 1.200 American residents and 250 American soldiers in the troubled Southern African territory.

All five are planning to stay, despite a U.S. State Department warning issued last April to Americans in Rhodesia, advising them to leave since no official protection could be provided if their lives were endangered by the guerrilla war.

Each one feels strongly that there is a future for whites in Rhodesia where Africans outnumber them by over 20 to 1 - despite the increasing international pressure to bring majority rule to the former British col-

Woram has made this clear in a letter she drafted for distribution to families and friends in the United States. The letter appeals for pressure on the State Department and Congress to reverse their position on Rhodesia.

Entitled "A Plea from Americans in Rhodesia," the letter warns:

"Your fellow Americans living in Rhodesia are deeply concerned for the future of this beautiful country, a country which like America treasures the ideals of justice and liberty.

"The terrorists now have abandoned the pretense of fighting for democratic ideals and openly state that they want no democracy, no voting, no parliament, but will establish a socialist society amongst their people by force.

The black nationalist movements are now controlled and manipulated by their white Communist masters ... Rhodesia stands in grave peril of falling a victim of the U.S.S.R.'s expansionist goals.'

A native of New Jersey, Woram came here eight years ago with her Rhodesian husband and seven sons. Her disappointment with the new U.S. policy on Africa announced by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in Zambia last April led her to launch the letter campaign.

"We've had such bad press we felt a need to straighten people out on what's happening here, to let them know it's not a black-white race war as it's played in the papers and that there's more at stake.

"The terrorist activity is straight-forward Communist aggression. We want to urge Americans to come here to see for themselves and help prevent a tragedy, a blood-bath, a takeover by the Communists." Dave and Mike are among those Americans who have recently arrived in response to a similar appeal. Both Vietnam veterans and former Green Berets, they traveled over 10,000 miles from Indianapolis and Seattle to join the Rhodesian army after seeing recruiting ads in Soldier of Fortune magazine. Mike explained his involvement idealistically: "The West isn't doing its job. The U.S. especially isn't doing its duty. If they're too scared to fight the Communists, then people like me have to act independently. I consider it my duty to fight in Rhodesia. After Vietnam and Angola, we can't afford to lose any other countries."

He acknowledged that he was technically breaking U.S. law by serving in a foreign army, but said that none of the boys who had fought in the Rhodesian army and then returned home had been prosecuted.

For Dave, politics was not involved: "I had five contracts to choose from and this seemed to be the one with the best possibilities. These people are organized, they won't screw you like the Angolans messed up the British (mercenaries).

"If you're going to be paid to kill, you choose the employers with the lowest risks of getting yourself killed."

The conditions are not all that attractive in comparison with American army standards. They pay scale begins at $337 a month for a private and runs up to $1,194 for a maor, according to an army recruiting brochure now available at the Salisbury airport.

But the offer has so far lured more than a thousand "foreign volunteers," according to unofficial estimates, mainly Britons, Americans, Australians, Portuguese and Greeks. New American recruits are coming in

Bruce Glenn is also fighting, but on the psychological side of the war. A native of Knoxville, Iowa, who came to Rhodesia two years ago, he has become what a South African publication labeled Rhodesia's leading "Communist critic" on the air waves and one of the most outspoken optimists about the presence of whites in Rhodesia.

"I have absolute confidence that this government can hold back the terrorists. Even if the war escalates and urban terrorism is introduced, we can withstand it. This army is on a par with the best in the world.

Like many of the Americans interviewed in Salisbury, Glenn said he felt U.S. policy on Rhodesia was wrong. "They don't understand that what we have here is an ideal care of (white) people who are able to raise the standard of living among the Africans. Without us, conditions will decline rapidly."

He also charged that the term "discrimination" had been "seized by psycho-politicians" and used in the wrong context.

"Discrimination is simply a necessary part of every human being. from his choice of food to his choice of friends. But the last 10 to 20 years the word has been completely reversed to connote a repression of black races by the white. It has been blown up out of Glenn added that he did not feel majority rule was inevitable in Rhodesia, because even if blacks came to power they would not allow majority rule. "Look at the rest of Africa. There is no semblance of democratic institutions in any black African country. What makes anyone believe

Rhodesia will be different?" But Red Parham may be the most outspoken American in Rhodesia on the subject of the white presence. "I first saw Salisbury in 1925, when it was dirt roads and temporary buildings. I've seen what the whites did for this country and I know what will happen to it if they are forced to

"Africans in Rhodesia are better off than in any other country on the continent. I hate to think about their future if the black nationalists take over."

Born in North Carolina and a graduate of Duke University, Parham said that the American government had no right to meddle in Rhodesian affairs until officials saw the situation first-hand. "They just believe everything the African governments tell them. Nobody ever comes here to see what the problems really are. They're passing judgment without hearing both sides of the story, so naturally Rhodesia is found guilty. I think that the American standard of justice and fair play would make them feel an obligation to what is going on here. They also should have a special understanding for the situation here. After all, the United States declared independence from Britain in much the same way Rhodesia did."

Fewer regulations, great savings contribute to ever-growing popularity of charter flights

OTC's.

By HAROLD D. WATKINS The Los Angeles Times

Anyone interested in travel should start learning his ABC's - also OTC's, ITC's and TGC's.

Those are the alphabetic codewords for types of air charter trips. According to many in the $70 billion U.S. travel industry, such low-cost group flights are going to play an increasingly important role in the vacation plans of Americans. Relaxation last year of U.S. air charter regulations has already spawned heavy charter travel this summer to resorts such as Las Vegas and Hawaii. Additional proposals by the Civil Aeronautics Board for even more liberalized rules could accelerate the trend.

William B. Leonard, senior vice president-marketing for Trans International Airlines, calls the latest changes "truly" revolutionary because they "will bring into the air people who would not have flown otherwise. It opens an enormous new market to the travel industry."

Even under the prior rules, which advantage of the savings in charter this, there had been a rapid percentage growth in this form of travel. The 4.3 million commercial charter passengers flown by U.S. airlines in 1975 was more than twice the 1968 total. But that still represented only 2 per cent of the total number of passengers.

Boosters point to the stunning growth that vacation charters have made in Europe as an example of the possibilities here with relaxed rules.

The number of intra-European charter passengers zoomed from 4 million in 1965 to 19 million in 1974, according to the latest data compiled by the Douglas Aircraft Co. division of McDonnell Douglas Corp. The 1974 total is a little over one-half the number of passengers carried on scheduled international flights within Europe that year.

Since 1973, there actually has been slightly more travel volume on those European charters than on the scheduled flights as measured by revenue passenger miles - the number of passengers times the number of miles flown.

Last summer the CAB elected to follow the European lead. In what may be one of its most far-reaching decisions it opened the door to a similar development in this country.

The agency approved a much more liberal type of charter rule than it had ever permitted before - one-stop inclusive tour charters (OTC's). These require a minimum daily charge of $15 for ground services, such as a hotel, in addition to the air

The OTC must be purchased at least 15 days in advance of the departure for North American trips and 30 days for others. They also require minimum trip stays depending on the destination

Such charters, as most others, are arranged by tour operators. The OTC's are available to the general public, primarily through travel

Then in February the CAB proposed what is considered an even more progressive rule — advance booking charters (ABC's). This also is based on a European concept.

The ABC's would be open to the public, but would not require ground accommodations. The proposal stipulated no minimum or maximum duration of the trip except to some European countries. However, the severely limited those who could take charter would have to be paid for 30 days in advance of a non-European trip and 60 days early for Europe.

The CAB's final decision on whether to authorize the ABC's is expected within a month after it studies the comments on the proposal.

In still another move aimed at encouraging low-cost air transportation, the board in mid-June announced it was considering allowing contract bulk inclusive tours (CBIT's). This would be a sort of hybrid, with tour charter groups traveling on scheduled rather than chartered flights.

The savings possible by using charters can be startling. For instance, the regular roundtrip coach fare on scheduled Los Angeles-New York flights is $396. And the discount summer excursion roundtrip fare on the same flights is $337.

But for $269 it is possible under the new OTC charter plan to fly roundtrip on a Trans World Airlines Boeing 707 jet and stay seven nights in the Prince George (described by Unitours, the tour operator, as a "first class" Manhattan hotel). Under a previously existing charter plan that provides air transportation only, the basic Los Angeles-New York roundtrip fare in July is $189, or more than $200 less than the regular fare. There's nothing miraculous about such savings. It's simply that the charter air fares are based on dividing the costs among a full planeload of passengers. By contrast, the regular fare is premised on having only a little over half the seats occupied on the average. Adding to the charter savings is the practice of stuffing in more seats on a charter aircraft.

Generally, the longer the flight the greater the charter savings compared to scheduled fares.

Hotel rates on charter tours are usually lower than an individual can get for himself. Tour operators normally get big discounts because of the large number of rooms they can

Much of the previous growth in charters came in the late 1960s and early 1970s with affinity charters, one of the first types allowed by the CAB.

Basically these must be arranged by some type of organization established for purposes other than traveling at low cost. An individual must be a member of the group for at least six months before he is eligible for the charter.

For a number of years, the CAB has been under pressure to make charters more widely available. This has come from consumer groups as well as the supplemental airlines such as Leonard's TIA. Certificates for these carriers require them to specialize in

But the agency gave ground grudg-ingly because of its concern over the welfare of the scheduled airlines.

In 1966, it did authorize inclusive tour charters (ITC's), but even the CAB concedes that the restrictions it put on them have limited their popularity. For example, the ITC rules require a minimum of three different overnight stops at least 50 miles apart, compared with the participants failed to satisfy critics. simpler one-stop requirement for the

A lawyer for the children, all Mexicans, had pleaded with the board to view the issue in a "humanitarian and moral light."

It is, Alfredo Saenz said, a case of the "haves and havenots."

"The children will not disappear by being turned away from the schools." said Saenz. "They will remain and they will remain uneducated." Saenz argued that Houston school trustees had gone "far beyond their constitutional powers" in using federal immigration laws to determine who can go to school free.

"Bilingual Chicano children have never been a burden to this society," he said. "Should schoolhouse doors be closed because one child is more expensive to educate than another?"

The school district's lawyer, Kelly Frels, said a 1975 Texas law specifies that only Texas residents and "legally" admitted aliens are "entitled to the benefits of a free public

The law would have to be declared unconstitutional for the board of education to let the illegal aliens go to school free, Frels said.

He said most of the children seeking free schooling are 10 or 11 but have applied to enter the first grade, because they cannot speak or write

He said estimates have placed the number of illegal alien children in the Houston Independent School District at between 4,120 and 5,626. It costs $1,485 per student per year to educate a child, he said, and if 5,000 illegal aliens were admitted to classes, it would cost taxpayers more than $7 million a year.

"I'm not being callous by talking about how much it costs," Frels said, "but there is only so much money to go around. If that money is used to educate illegal aliens, it deprives our citizens of money for services for

Houston trustees voted to require the aliens to pay to go to school, and state education commissioner M.L. Brockette upheld the trustees' decision July 9. The board voted unanimously to affirm Brockette's BARCELONA - The young. heavy-limbed bull that Pepita Rios had chosen for her second kill of the day surged through the gate and onto the sandy floor of the bullring. A frown crossed Rios's face as she assessed the bull's wary alertness and his refusal to charge the cape directly.

"I knew then it was a bad bull," she said apologetically after the fight, her ninth and most disastrous as a professional. "He had been 'touched' (given practice in fighting) and was older than he should have been.

Her assessment proved to be painfully accurate. The bull caught her three times, tossing her into the air and then snapping a tendon in her left heel as she lay on the sand after the third tumble.

"You belong in the house, not in the bullring!" an irate male spectator shouted as Rios struggled to her feet and picked up her sword. Limping badly, she thrust the sword three times between the bull's shoulders before the animal, and Rios, were delivered from their mutual agony.

Aristocratic and independently wealthy, in her late 20s, Rios is is one

Their efforts have provoked varying degrees of amusement, astonishment and hostility in a profession that is perhaps the peak of machismo. It is a profession where the ultimate compliment for valor and skill is a crude reference to the possession of male genital glands.

'Most of the crowds have not been nasty," Rios said. "They come expecting us to be bad, and they are surprised and happy when we show we can fight. But it is still hard to get older people to admit this, that the world is changing in many ways."

"All the promoters care about is money, and we draw larger crowds now than beginning men fighters. Maybe they come for a laugh, but it is entirely serious to us."

high art is not entirely an outgrowth of the world-wide women's liberation movement.

Women fought bulls on foot in Spain until Generalissimo Francisco Franco won the Civil War in 1939 and limited female participation in bull fights to the secondary horseback role of weakening the bull for the matador.

But the government's decision last year to authorize women to fight bulls on foot does reflect a change in attitudes toward women in this conservative society. Male prejudice, lower salaries for doing the same work and their own inhibitions have kept 2 million eligible Spanish women out of the labor market, economists report. Now they are beginning to find their way out of the house and into jobs.

A successful effort by the few women now in the bullring would have a major impact on this movement. The Corrida's emphasis on valor before the threat of death is perhaps the highest expression of what this society sees as masculine values.

"Basically, I do this because I enjoy said Pepita Rios, to whom bullfighting seems to be the equivalent of, say, stock-car racing in this country. Pepita Rios did graceful cape work with her first bull, but could do nothing with the second one, which she claimed looked as if it had reached the age of 18 months instead of the one-year limit set for bulls fought by Novilleros.

"I guess bullfighting is more dangerous for women than for men. because the men have more physical strength," Rios said later. "But bullfighting is an art. Women can be much more graceful. And if things go well, you don't need all that strength. Today, I could have used it.'

Ford tough with facts political career is any guide, the format of the coming debates with Jimmy Carter plays more to Mr. Ford's strengths than to his weaknesses.

"He's good with facts, he can spit them out," says the Rev. Duncan Littlefield of Grand Rapids, moderator of several of Mr. Ford's debates with congressional opponents. "His solidity is impressive in a debate. He's lousy in creating a mood, he's terrible as a speaker, but in a straight one-to-one deal, he's hard to beat. He's rocklike. He comes out and states facts. His very lack of inagination is itself a

This summation is nearly identical to the one given by old friends, former colleagues, and aides who have seen Mr. Ford at close quarters in college, Congress and the White House.

Their almost universial opinion is that Mr. Ford is an inept platform speaker who talks in a monologue and usually fails to inspire an audience. But there also is common agreement that the President is effective in question-and-answer situation because he conveys factual information in a sincere and believable manner.

The "debate" formate between Mr. Ford and Carter is in fact a modified press conference, the forum where Mr. Ford performs at his best. A reporter will ask a question, with a reply of up to three minutes permitted. Then a reporter can ask a followup question, with up to a two-minute reply. Finally, the opposing candidate can comment for up two minutes.

Mr. Ford has been debating for 20 years - ever since he first appeared in the fire barn in Standale. Mich., to debate a Democratic opponent named

Many of Mr. Ford's supporters of that time do not even recall this debate, believing instead that his first debate was two years later with Richard F. Vander Veen, the present congressman. Local newspaper files of this event have been lost.

But Maury DeJonge, the political reporter for the Grand Rapids Press who covered the debate, remembers that Clay began it by "bringing everyone out of their chairs" when he cried, "Peace, peace, but there is no peace."

It was Clay's way of dramatizing the unsettled situation in the world, which then, as now, included tension along the Korean armistice line. Mr. Ford, as De Jonge recalls it, stuck to his record as a five-term congressman. In the November election he won with better than two-thirds of the vote.

Vander Veen, a Democrat who won an upset victory on Feb. 18, 1974, to fill the congressional seat after Mr. Ford became vice president, held a single debate with Mr. Ford in 1958. Accounts in the Grand Rapids Press show it was a friendly affair, with Vander Veen declaring that Mr.

Ford is "a fine fellow personally and a hard worker."

Carter mad at strategy

By The Associated Press

Jimmy Carter, haunted by anti-abortion protestors and weary after a week on the road, appears increasingly annoyed by President Ford's refusal to leave the White House for the campaign trail.

Carter returned home to Plains, Ga., on Friday night, ending an 11-state tour in which he was shadowed and sometimes drowned out by protestors

But the Democratic presidential nominee declared his initial campaign trip a success after five days of speeches, handshaking and a colorful fireworks and flare-lighted parade through the streets of Chicago.

WASHINGTON — If President Ford's past revolved around such bromides as Mr. Ford urging According to the newspaper account, the debate "faith and confidence in management, labor and the community." Vander Veen replied with an appeal for diversification of the Michigan auto industry.

Mr. Ford also held perhaps a halfdozen debate-type encounters with William G. Reamon, whom he defeated in three successive elections from 1960 through 1964. And he held televised debates with Jean McKee, his Democratic opponent in 1970 and 1972. In all of the general elections Mr. Ford won with better than 60 per cent of the vote.

None of these debates necessarily offers a guide to how well Mr. Ford will fare against Carter in Philadelphia's Walnut Street Theater on Sept. 23. In most cases, as Vander Veen puts it about his own encounter, "Ford treated the debate as if nothing much was riding on it, and he was right." Reamon, considered an accomplished trial lawyer, believes that Mr. Ford won consistent re-election on his district service record and popularity, not his forensic skill. "I don't think anyone ever considered Jerry Ford the Demosthenes of the Republican party," said Reamon. "He was a pleasant guy and I liked him, but he was not a good speaker. If he had to depend upon his stump talents to win, he would never have been

This reputation as a poor speaker is what concerns Mr. Ford's backers as he approaches the debates with Carter.

A Republican colleague who observed Mr. Ford on the House floor for many years was unimpressed by his ability in partisan debate, comparing him unfavorably with predecessor Charles Halleck.

"Jerry was simply not effective as a debater," this colleague said. "He's wooden, usually. When he tried to be dynamic, he stumbled over his words."

Harold S. Sawyer, a veteran of Mr. Ford's first campaign in 1948 and the GOP nominee against Vander Veen this year, said that "the first good speech I've ever heard Jerry give was the acceptance speech (at the GOP convention), and it was superb.

"He's reliable with facts, and his judgment is good," said Sawyer. "But I worry about his articulation and presentation. Jerry is extremely effective in a small group with eight or 10 people. But on the platform or on the tube, he has a bumbly-fumbly delivery." John P. Milanowski, a Grand Rapids lawyer and

Mr. Ford's first aide in the House, is a former high school speech teacher who coached Mr. Ford on his Milanowski says that Mr. Ford was "a monologue - he found it difficult to gesture and he talked in one platform as he did in person. Other speech coaches have been making the same point ever since Mr. Ford reached the White House.

But if the President is faulted for his delivery, he is given high marks for his ability in an informal give-and take setting. Observing this, with all his criticisms, Milanowski believes that Mr. Ford "is going to eat his opponent alive because he'll be in the kind of situation where he's in command of his material and can respond to questions."

Jerald F. terHorst, the columnist and Ford biographer who served as the President's first White House press secretary, also believes that the debate

"If it comes to handling a set of facts or marshaling information in his head, he does a good job," contends terHorst. "He has almost an innate gift for the retention of data."

Beyond his ability in question-and-answer situations, his sincerity and his mastery of figures. Mr. Ford has another quality likely to serve him well against Carter — a consistent and well-disciplined competitiveness.

Inexperienced debater Carter to be prepared

By HELEN DEWAR The Washington Post

ATLANTA - Not since the shy, studious farm boy from Plains, Ga., successfully defended the proposition that "Gone With The Wind" was nothing but trash has Jimmy Carter made much of a mark in debating.

"We got assigned the wrong side of that argument but we won anyway." recalls Billy Wise, who was Carter's high school debate teammate when they won so many encounters that the teacher retired them from competition to give others a chance.

That was about 35 years ago. however, and Carter - as a military officer, farmer, businessman, legislator, governor and even candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination - has seldom gone before the public in the kind of nose-to-nose confrontations that he will have with President Ford starting on Sept. 23.

Carter is disciplined, quick-footed, self-confident and articulate in parlaying questions from reporters, which is what he and Mr. Ford will be doing in the so-called "debates," which will actually be more like joint press conferences tailored for

But he is used to having the stage to himself, rather than sharing it with a rival who also happens to be the President of the United States, with all the aura and expertise that office

According to political colleagues dating back to his days in the Georgia state Senate in the mid-1960s, Carter's forte has always been meticulous preparation, detailed knowledge of his subject matter and earnest sincerity - rather than any particular rhetorical gift or special grace with words. It is a description that also fits Gerald Ford.

In this sense, the challenger will be playing to the incumbent's strength, although Carter aides are quick to point out that Carter's mental agility and facile use of language could help neutralize his rival's inherent advantage, especially if he can gracefully maneuver the President into a defensive posture and keep him

"Frankly, Jimmy is not a great debater," said Bobby Rowan, a colorful former state senator from Enigma, Ga., who came to the Georgia legislature with Carter and has been both friend and foe. "But he was always prepared, so much so that he was often over the heads of the rest of them, and he was more sincere than anyone. He'll come across more sincere than Socrates, Demosthenes or any other of those great debaters."

State Senate Majority Leader Al Holloway of Albany, Ga., figures that Lester Maddox, the feisty segregationist and Carter opponent who served as lieutenant governor while Carter was governor, shares some credit for sharpening Carter's debating skills. "Having a four-year running debate with Lester Maddox would equip anyone for just about anything," said Holloway.

Debates have never been part of the Carter formula for political success although Carter readily accepted Mr. Ford's invitation to debate and he has used the question-and-answer format with considerable skill and success in solo performances in the past.

During his victorious campaign for the Georgia governorship in 1970, Carter joined a dozen or so other Democratic primary candidates in joint appearances but they were "pretty low-grade entertainment" and Carter "appeared to be barely enduring them most of the time,' according to one observer.

He was leading former Gov. Carl Sanders going into the runoff primary and rejected a bid by Sanders to debate, prompting Sanders to buy 30 minutes of television time for a mock debate with an empty chair, which "mainly served to make Carl look silly," according to a reporter who covered the campaign.

Carter made several joint appearances with Republican candidate Hal Suit in the fall, but no one paid much attention because Carter had, in effect, won the race in the runoff primary. Suit recalls tripping Carter up on tax exemptions for peanuts, the Carter family business, but few others claim to remember the event.

Searly in the presidential primaries, Carter appeared with other candidates for speeches or question-and-answer programs, but there were sometimes as many as seven or eight of them clamoring for attention and once again Carter appeared mainly to endure. "Putting it politely," said Carter press secretary Jody Powell, "They (the forums) did not have much effect.'

Throughout the primary campaign, Carter preferred — and excelled in — solo appearances in which he gave short thematic speeches and then took questions from the crowd, often turning hostile questions to his own advantage and underscoring the rapport he was trying to achieve with individual voters.

This same technique served him well as governor when, confronting a legislature that was skeptical of his bureaucratic reorganization plan, he took the unusual step of coming before the House and Senate and submitting to questions on the plan for several hours. The plan ultimately was adopted.

There has been a little "poormouthing," as one campaign aide conceded it to be, about Carter's disadvantages going into the debates — a game that the candidate himself played last week when he asserted that, because of the President's 27 years of experience in Washington, a tie in the debates would be tantamount to a Carter victory. But there is also a kind of gritty confidence in the man, born in the days when no one took him seriously and nurtured through the times when many people said he would defeat himself for the nomination. At least publicly, Carter aides dismiss some observers' lingering doubts about the breadth of his knowledge of national and international affairs.

Yarbrough might resign

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) - Don Yarbrough, an apparent cinch winner of a seat on the Texas Supreme Court in November, has hinted he might not stay on the court for a full six-year

"It may be that I don't use all of my ticket. I may pull the bell and tell the conductor I want to get off," he said Friday in a speech to the Travis County Junior Bar Association.

Yarbrough refused, however, to say might not fill out the term if he is elected in November.

Yarbrough won the Democratic nomination last May, but two write-in candidates are opposing him in November as a result of the disclosure that he has numerous civil suits against him and is under investigation by a Houston bar grievance committee.

Many political observers feel Yarbrough won the nomination and those of former governor can-didate Don Yarborough and former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

Yarborough, 35, said it was "almost as if cosmic forces have brought all this to pass.'

He said that although he supports a free press the media is "dangerously near the idea that public figures are fair game. And when open season is declared on any species, it soon becomes endangered.

Dallas citizenry guided peaceful desegregation

By BRYAN WOOLLEY Special to The Los Angeles Times

DALLAS - Three weeks ago nearly 18,000 of Dallas' 140,000 school children, in response to a federal judge's desegregation mandate. climbed quietly into buses and rode to newly integrated schools not too far from their homes. Another 11,000 students voluntarily rode buses to schools outside their neighborhoods and became, whether Anglo, black or Mexican-American, "minority" students. Except for minor logistical errors - students failing to find the right bus, or drivers losing their way along unfamiliar routes - the first weeks under the desegregation order have been as unspectacular as the beginning of any school year.

The reaction of some was disbelief that such a smooth transition was occurring in Dallas, which has the largest public school system in Texas.

"People have asked me if this response is real," a U.S. Department of Justice observer said a few days later. "It is real. We've seen cities all over the country grapple with busing. This is unparalleled.

To those whose image of Dallas was formed during the 1950s, when the city's name was synonomous with rightwingism, or during the 1960s, when the national news media seemed to hold the city more responsible than Lee Harvey Oswald for the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, the peaceful acceptance of such a massive and sudden change was surprising.

But Dallas is a different city now. The old apostles of rightwing conservatism, such as H.L. Hunt and Gen. Edwin Walker, have died or faded away. Many old family-owned national and multinational corporations, and many of the city's seats of economic power are occupied by newcomers from California and the East. And the growing power of Texas in particular and the "sun belt" in general in national political affairs has replaced the old paranoia with new self-confidence. "When you get right down to it," one newcomer said, "Dallas just isn't as provincial as Boston or Louisville."

More specifically, though, the success so far of the new Dallas busing plan is attributable to two facts: The judge's order was written almost entirely by representatives of the community itself, and the city's leaders are determined to make it

School desegregation is not a new problem for Dallas, nor for U.S. District Court Judge William Taylor Jr., whose duty it is to see that it is done. The city began integrating its schools under a court-ordered stairstep plan (one grade at a time) in 1961. By 1967, after further goading by the federal courts, at least token integration had been achieved. But in 1970, Dallas blacks and Mexican-Americans again filed suit, claiming that the system still included 85 onerace schools and was still violating Judge Taylor agreed and devised a plan that bused 7,000 junior and senior high students - most of them of the minority races.

Both the plaintiffs and the school district appealed. During the four years that passed before the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans ruled in the case, busing became a political football in the city. business leaders refused to rally to the support of the judge or the schools, the school administration was paralyzed by uncertainty and many white city dwellers, fearing the unknown, fled to the suburbs.

Taylor's plan. Taylor, in turn, quickly rejected several alternative plans offered by the school board and other groups. In December, he went before the Dallas Alliance, a broad-based group of government, civic and business leaders, and warned that Dallas was in for trouble if the city's leadership did not assume a positive role in the crisis. He challenged the leaders to use the desegregation suit as a means to improve the educational system, and this time he won the support he had failed to get in 1971. The alliance appointed a committee composed of leaders of the city's three largest ethnic groups -Anglos, Mexican-Americans and blacks - to draw up a new plan for the court's consideration.

The powerful attraction of the plan, which was accepted by Taylor last March and implemented with the opening of school on Aug. 23, is that busing and desegregation are only one aspect of it. It actually requires a major overhaul of the entire school system and anticipates that significant improvement and equality of public education in Dallas will discourage further "white flight" to the surrounding suburbs, despite the Taylor's order slices the Dallas independent school district into six pie-sliced subdistricts radiating from the downtown area. About 18,000 children in grades 4-8 are bused to schools near the center of three of those subdistricts. The busing is divided among the three races in about the same proportion as districtwide enrollment - about 36 per cent Anglo, 50 per cent black and 14 per cent Mexican-American.

In an ambitious attempt to tailor each child's education to his specific

"magnet" schools, an off neutral ground away from racially identifiable schools. Although enrollment in these schools is voluntary, the school district pays for the students' transportation and racial balance is one of the criteria for acceptance into these programs. Four "magnet" high schools provide specialized education in business and management, creative arts, health professions and transportation technology - all important areas in Dallas' economy and job market. Three schools for seventh and eighth graders specialize in environmental sciences, the classics and career exploration. This last is a sort of preparatory school for students who later may attend the magnet high schools. Five magnet schools for fourth through sixth graders specialize in an individually guided curriculum, basic academic skills (the "three R's), foreign languages and communication, the Montessori teaching method and an honors program for highly gifted children.

These innovations, plus other basic reforms in the standard curriculum and teaching methods, have captured the imagination of thousands of parents who might otherwise be organizing boycotts and demonstrations. The ultimate success of the Dallas plan will depend on the school system's ability to deliver what it has promised

So far, the Dallas experience corroborates the recently reported findings of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission - that desegregation works peacefully where communities and community leaders want it to-And although Taylor's order has been appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court by three Dallas chapters of the NAACP - on grounds that it still leaves racially identifiable schools in one black section of the city - Dallas and

Finally, in July 1975, the Fifth its school officials remain optimistic. Circuit Court threw out most of Judge For the U.S. Supreme Court recently ruled that some racially identifiable schools are permissible if the school district is making a genuine, good-faith effort to desegregate. The Fifth Circuit Court turned down an NAACP request for a stay of Judge Taylor's

> If the present racial peace and community support continue for a few years, the odds are good that Dallas and its citizens might make their new school system what Superintendent Nolan Estes is saying it will become-"a model for the nation."

Strict South Korean chief plays on fears

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) - By day the streets of this city rebuilt from the rubble of war are clogged with cars assembled in South Korea. High-rise buildings poke through the smog. Shops and restaurants bustle with people. By midnight, however, a stillness falls over the city and the same wide streets are crisscrossed with roadblocks manned by soldiers who enforce a strict curfew.

The soldiers, armed and in battle trim, are a reminder of what the government says is the darker side of the South Korea reality - the threat from the Communist North, and it has used this fear as grounds to deprive citizens of basic civil rights, according to South Korean and Western sources.

The nation presents a picture of economic vitality combined with political repression. The past 15 years have brought remarkable industrial expansion together with harsh measures that have all but silenced critics of President Park Chunghee.

Intellectuals, clergymen and opposition politicians are in Seoul's Sudaemun Prison.

Criticism of the political system is a criminal offense and for those accused of it, habeas corpus - a writ preventing indefinite detention without trial - and other-legal rights don't exist.

'President Park hears from his advisers that if he doesn't clamp down, there would be students rioting in the streets," a Western diplomat said. "He exhibits a degree of insecurity which is unwarranted.

Critics and supporters of Park both agree, however, that South Korea has experienced unparalleled industrial growth during his regime, and the average Korean's lot has never been better than under the stern army general-turned-politician.

In terms of real growth, the South Korean economy expanded at an annual average rate of 10 per cent over the past 15 years.

Since Park came to power in a military coup in 1961, South Korea has developed from an economy based predominantly on agriculture and fishing, which utilized 80 per cent of the labor force, to an increasingly industrialized one with more than half of the country's workers engaged in manufacturing and service industries.

With increasing wages and a dropping birthrate, the average Korean has benefited, said a Western diplomat specializing in economic affairs. In the past 15 years, the population growth rate dropped from 2.9 per cent to 1.7 per cent in this nation of 35 million people.

The annual per capita income, a gauge of economic performance, nearly doubled in the past five years from $266 in 1971 to $531 in 1975, and the government predicts it will top $600 this year. The 1975 annual per capita income in the United States was $5,800. The average monthly wage of miners and factory workers increased in the past five years from $37.99 to $96.72.

Every month, Park holds a "performance meeting" with Cabinet ministers who report on how the economy actually has done against their earlier forecasts.

"The fact that the highest authority in the nation asks about performance is a tremendous incentive to perform," the diplomat said, adding that South Korean officials "have planned well and accomplished what they set out to do.'

"The people in general obviously are energetic," he went on, "A very good labor force. They have a greater productivity rate than workers in Hong Kong or Taiwan. And therefore, even with higher wages here, over the same year the cost per unit of manufactured goods is less in South

A Korean critical of Park's political policies nevertheless credits him with much of the country's economic

'Because of Park, for the first time South Korea has a long range goaloriented policy," he said

Born into a poor rural family, during the Japanese control of Korea, Park advanced through the Japanese-run education system, and when few Koreans were permitted to attend a university, his academic performance won him admission to college and later to a military academy in Japan. At the end of World War II, Park was an officer in the Japanese Imperial Army. Critics often say his political thinking is more characteristic of prewar Japan than contemporary Korea.

"Park makes no attempt to be charmismatic leader," a U.S. observer of Korean affairs commented. "He's a stern, upright Confusicianist who brooks no opposition.

"Whenever he needs an excuse for repression, the North Koreans provide it," he added.

Supreme Court has changed

By W. DALE NELSON Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The justices of the Supreme Court are not known to the public in the way senators and cabinet members are. They do not appear regularly on television. They seldom give press conferences. Their speeches usually deal with arcane legal subjects.

Yet as much as anyone they shape the pattern of life in America. And because of a recent shift in the court, the justices are shaping America far differently than the court did less than a decade ago.

When former President Richard M. Nixon was elected in 1968, the Supreme Court, under the leadership of Chief Justice Earl Warren, was expanding Bill of Rights protections for both accused criminals and lawabiding citizens.

Now, many legal scholars believe, there has been not just a slowing down of this process but a change in direction under Chief Justice Warren Burger particularly in the court's last

During that term the justices upheld capital punishment as a penalty for murder, ruled that defendants may be sentenced to jail by judges not trained in the law, permitted arrests in a public place without a warrant, approved zoning laws that single out X-rated theaters and bookstores for special restrictions, permitted military commanders to bar political campaigning on their bases, and ruled that laws may not be struck down as discriminatory merely because they have a disproportionate impact on members of one race.

The justices also handed down decisions that make it more difficult, in various ways, for persons claiming violations of their constitutional rights to sue in federal courts.

In the term beginning Oct. 4, the court will consider a number of other cases involving an individual's rights.

One is that of a convicted Iowa murderer. Robert Andrew Williams. The court has been asked to overturn or sharply curtail its 10-year-old rule that a confession by a suspect in police custody may not be used against him unless the suspect had been warned in advance of his constitutional rights

The case illustrates the tendency of this court, unlike the Warren court, to accept for review criminal cases in which the defendant prevailed in the appealing. The Warren comore often chose to listen appeals by defendants

Williams was convicted of the sex slaying of 10-year-old Pamela Powers of Des Moines, Iowa, on the day before Christmas, 1968. The Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned his conviction because remarks made to him by a policeman, in an automobile without an attorney present, led Williams to show officers where the girl was buried. Iowa officials are asking the court to rule that the only test for omission of a statement as evidence should be whether or not it was given voluntarily.

During his presidency, Nixon said the court had "gone too far in weakening the peace forces as against the criminal forces." He called for strict construction of the Constitution. And he appointed four men to the court who agreed with him.

"In retrospect, President Nixon's staffing of the Supreme Court has probably been more effective in terms of his own claims (getting the decisions he wanted) than any other single act of that administration.' Prof. William Van Alstyne of the Duke University Law School said in an interview.

"In many areas of the court's work - criminal procedure, the First Amendment, equal protection, and others - the difference between where we are today and where we were at the close of the Warren era is marked and inescapable," says Prof. A.E. Howard of the University of Virginia Law School

The change began with the appointment in 1969 of Chief Justice Burger, then a federal appeals court judge in Washington, D.C. Nixon was attracted to Burger because of his strong law and order decisions and his off-the-bench criticism of the liberal Warren

The second justice named was Harry Blackmun, a college math major who considered studying medicine. But he chose law and eventually rose to the bench of the U.S. Court of Appeals before his appointment to the high court in 1970.

Nixon rounded out his court appointments in 1972 with the selection of justices Lewis Franklin Powell Jr., 68, and William Hubbs Rehnquist, 51.

Powell, a wealthy Virginian and former president of the American Bar Association, is perhaps the most moderate, or centrist, of the four. Rehnquist, who was an assistant U.S. attorney general when appointed to the court, is the most conservative of the justices.

The turning point in the development of the Burger court occurred on May 22, 1972, the date of the first major criminal decision in which all four Nixon appointees participated. In that ruling, the court held 5 to 4 that states may let less-thanunanimous juries convict persons of crime.

Joining the four Nixon appointees in the majority was Justice Byron Raymond White. 59, who has continued to side with them frequently in criminal cases, perhaps reflecting his experience as deputy attorney general before going on the bench. White, a former All-American football player and Rhodes scholar, was appointed by President John F. Kennedy in 1962.

Since 1972, the court has expanded the authority of police to search people without warrants, narrowed the circumstances in which a criminal suspect must be warned of his legal rights, and restricted the power of state prisoners to challenge the way evidence used in their trials was obtained

Powell recently made the unusual move of speaking out publicly on the trend of the court in criminal law. In a speech at an American Bar Association meeting, he said the court was evolving "a sounder balance ... between the rights of accused persons and the right of a civilized society to have a criminal justice system that is effective as well as fair.'

In another area, the court has tended to diminish the Warren court's expansion of the procedural rights of citizens affected by government actions. Take, for example, the cases of Norma Grace Constantineau and Edward Charles Davis III.

Mrs. Constantineau lived in Hartford, Wis. On Jan. 23, 1969, the police chief had notices posted in all retail liquor outlets in the city forbidding them to sell Mrs. Constantineau any beer or liquor because of her "excessive drinking." She was not warned that her name was to be posted, nor was she given a hearing. The Supreme Court ruled in 1970 that this violated a constitutional obligation to provide notice and a hearing 'where a person's good name. reputation, honor, or integrity is at stake because of what the government is doing to him.'

Davis' story began in somewhat the same way, but ended differently. Davis was a photographer for the Louisville. Ky., Courier-Journal and Times. In June, 1971, he was arrested by a department store house detective on a shoplifting ge. He pleaded inn the charge was placed in an inactive file. In December, 1972, Louisville police included Davis name and picture in a flyer they distributed to storekeepers identifying "active shoplifters."

Shortly after this the charge against Davis was dismissed. He sued, charging a violation of his constitutional rights because of damage to his reputation.

Last March 23, the Supreme Court ruled 5 to 3 that Davis had not been entitled to a hearing or notification before the police included him on a list of shoplifters. The court said that unlike Mrs. Constantineau, who had lost the right to buy liquor in Hartford, Davis was not deprived of any right he previously had. Although he could sue in state courts for libel, the justices said, the Constitution did not protect him from harm to his reputation. The dissenters called the decision "frightening for a free people."

Only two of the Nixon justices had been appointed when the Constantineau case was decided. They dissented. All four of them were on the court for the Davis case and they voted in the majority. Joining them was Justice Potter Stewart, like White a swing justice whose vote often makes the difference in close cases. Stewart, 61, was named to the court in 1958 by President Eisenhower.

In the Davis case, the court did not overrule its earlier decision but simply "distinguished" the two cases arguing that the old rule did not apply now because the circumstances were different.

In two other cases during the past term, the justices overruled decisions of the Warren era. They did so in holding that there is no constitutional right to picket in a privately owned shopping mall. The court also struck down the extension of federal wage and hour standards to state and local government employes.

The latter ruling dramatically demonstrated the court's increased reliance on the 10th and 11th Amendments to the Constitution, which limit the powers of the federal government in relation to the states.

Not all of the court's actions. however, run counter to the rulings of the Warren era. The court has desegregated private schools, struck down restrictions on news reporting of criminal cases, overruled abortion regulations, and imposed stiff penalties for job discrimination. Any of these decisions could have come as

Kissinger help may not work in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Prospects for peaceful and lasting settlement of the racial crisis in southern Africa appear dim despite the high-powered U.S. initiative in the Many political and diplomatic observers in South Africa, where racial violence continued to claim lives this past week, are skeptical that the negotiating skills of U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will be able to stem the tide of conflict.

Kissinger flies to southern Africa on Monday.

The stakes are high in a region coveted for its mineral wealth and its vital geographic location between the Indian and Atlantic oceans.

Kissinger is trying to roll back growing Soviet influence in the region by ending Soviet-backed guerrilla wars in Rhodesia and South-West Africa, also called Namibia, and by bringing racial harmony to South Africa.

The United States, while advocating guaranteed rights for the white minorities, is pushing for black majority rule in Rhodesia and South-West Africa and stressing the need for comprehensive change in South Africa.

Rhodesia, where 270,000 whites rule some six million blacks, is afflicted by the most explosive situation and perhaps the most difficult to resolve. Prime Minister Ian Smith has been defying demands by Britain, the former colonial ruler, to bring about black majority rule for over a decade.

His country is now embroiled in an escalating hit-and-run war with black nationalists operating from bases in Mozambique, Zambia and Tanzania and armed with Soviet guns. billion bushels

Kissinger hopes to persuade the whites to bow to black demands in return for a $1.5 billion package guaranteeing their assets and the promise of massive American economic aid after black rule is established.

But many observers in the Rhode-sian capital of Salisbury doubt Smith will accept what they call a "sellout." In any case a sharp four-way split in the black nationalist movement makes negotiations problematic. Kissinger apparently hopes South Africa, on which Rhodesia relies almost entirely for trade, will pressure Smith into an agreement. But South African Prime Minister John Vorster has ruled out any economic sanctions in consideration of his ultra-conservative white elec-

The black nationalist movement in Rhodesia is so sharply divided that many observers in neighboring Zambia believe if the whites eventually abdicate, a major civil war in the country is inevitable.

The presidents of Zambia, Tanzania, Mozambique, Botswana and Angola, who met in Tanzania last week, again failed in continuing efforts to unite the competing factions in the black nationalist movement.

The five black nations themselves are divided on how to approach Rhodesia.

But not even Don Paarlberg, chief economist for the Agriculture Department, tried to pretty up the damage of August in meetings with reporters Friday after release of the Crop R-porting Board's latest estimates, based on Sept. 1 field

'August weather treated U.S. farmers unkindly," he began, and then he ticked it off:

-Corn down 5 per cent in a month, the yield down to 82.8 bushels an acre from 86.2 bushels last year, with losses averaging three bushels an acre nationwide and up to eight in Iowa and five in Illinois.

-The four major feedgrains of corn, barley, oats and sorghum combined, 184 million metric tons, virtually the same as last season.

-Wheat, 2.139 billion bushels, a record by five million bushels thanks to better prospects for durum. -Wheat and rice combined, the world's major foodgrains, 64 million metric tons, 1 per cent below last

-Soybeans, with the supply situation already the "one of tightest" on the market, 1.27 million bushels, down 70 million bushels from a month ago and 16 per cent below 1975.

—All oilseeds, 40 million tons, a drop of 13 per cent from last year. "If weather is normal for the rest of the year," he said, "overall crop production for 1976 will be third largest in history, exceeded only by the crops of 1973 and 1975." A month ago, Paarlberg was emphasizing an incoming "secondlargest harvest in our history."

Continued stress on the crops in the north-central states caused the drops, as summerlong pockets of drought persisted.

For consumers, the message of the report is that USDA may have to make a "modest upward adjustment" perhaps 1 per cent — in its current expectation that retail food prices will rise 3 to 4 per cent in the first six months of 1977 over the first half of this year, Paarlberg said. Farmers, he insisted, "are not in trouble." Those who have grain to sell should see some marginal boosts in the market prices for their crops, which have been substantially pulled down by the sheer magnitude of the production this season.

Those in the drought areas will be helped by USDA relief programs, he "Had the crop been the huge one foreseen on July 1, there might have been real price distress for farmers," Paarlberg said. "Had it been as poor as the dought-stricken crop of 1974, there might have been price distress

With the sometimes ill-disguised flavor of rivalry between economists, he noted that the soybean crop is better than thought a few days ago by Conrad Leslie, an agricultural statistician and crop analyst whose reports frequently joggle the commodities-futures markets.

On corn, however, Leslie estimated it would be 5.98 billion bushels.

The National Corn Growers

Association, on the other hand, said at the beginning of the month it foresees a 5.59 billion bushel crop which would be below last year's output.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most extensive wind damage since the mid-1950s struck the Great Plains last winter and spring, setting up none-too-good soil conditions for the pockets of severe drought that hit the north-central states, this summer, the soil Conservation Service reports.

Field reports between November 1975 and May 1976 showed that 6.2 million acres, more than 90 per cent of them croplands, were damaged in the 10-state area. That's 63 per cent more acres than during the same period a SCS records from the 352- county survey show that the last time wind broke the five-million-acre was 1956-57, the second of two years of extensive harm to about 10 million acres. In the 1954-55 erosion season, as SCS calls it, more than 16 million acres were hurt.

Although weather scientists at SCS and elsewhere here are reluctant to talk about "cycles" for anything without a century of statistics behind them, the SCS wind-damage chart does show that the previous peak was in the mid-1930s — again 20 years back and again starting with two years of damage in the five-millionacre nieghborhood.

In the agency's glossary, land is considered damaged if enough soil has been removed or deposited to subject the acreage to further erosion, to materially lower yields or "to impair its capacity to produce."

In some additional cases - two million acres worth - crops or ground covers were destroyed without damage to the soil. SCS also noted that some farmers increase their vulnerability to wind damage by excessively tilling the soil, overgrasing livestock or inadequately cover ing the fields.

Kansas had the highest percentag gain in damaged acres — 907,28 compared to 81,676 the year before Oklahoma and Nebraska had seven t nine times the damaged acreage of year ago. Texas' nearly 1.6 million is the harmed column amounted to the largest single entry but it was decline of some 400,000 from las year's total.

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union reportedly plans to use most the grain it imports this year rebuild stocks and help boost is livestock sector, but it also importing sizeable amounts of meat for its citizens.

An Agriculture Department report this week showed Russian purchase this year of 132,700 metric tons debeef, pork and mutton—54 per cent it from New Zealand and Australia.

Bradley return today

CALVERT, Tex. (AP) Tom Bradley, son of black sharecroppers, left a farm near this Central Texas town some 51 years ago. He was to return Sunday as the mayor of Los Angeles, to be honored at a Texas-style barbecue.

"The opportunity to have Mayor Bradley back in his hometown for the people to express appreciation for his accomplishments is a privilege and honor," said Cooper Wiese, the mayor of Calvert.

Wiese will act as Bradley's host during the festivities.

Bradley graduated from UCLA, where he was a track star, then joined the Los Angeles police force in 1940. He retired as a lieutenant in 1961 and received his law degree from Southwestern University. He began his policital career in 1963 when he was elected to the first of three four-year terms on the city council. He was defeated for mayor in 1969, but rode a 97,000 plurality to victory in the next election.

DALLAS (AP) -Public health officials considered asking for federal aid to conduct mosquito spraying after a sixth victim of St. Louis encephalitis was confirmed Saturday.

The disease, also known as "sleeping sickness," is carried by the Culex mosquito.

Officials said the latest confirmed case is a 56-year-old Grand Prairie woman, hospitalized in satisfactory condition.

No Dallas-Fort Worth area deaths directly attributed to the disease have been reported.

Dallas health director Dr. Lowell Berry said federal help would be needed to conduct an aerial spraying campaign like the one used in an SLE epidemic here in 1966. During that epidemic, seven persons died and another 100 were hospitalized.

"If it gets much worse, we will have to ask them to come in and advise us on what further measures can be taken,"

Brown patch seen in lawns

Scattered showers brought more rain to the West Texas area the past week. The pattern was continued hit-and-miss with amounts ranging from less than one-half inch total to three amd four inches in scattered locales.

This is a point in time whin the benefits of a rain to agriculture can be mixed.

Forage crops and rangelands can benefit, but moisture coupled with reduced sunshine and temperature can interfere with the normal maturity of cotton, the major cash crop in the area. Some small grain seeking is establishing nicely with the timely rainfall for that operation.

The production and sale of Chlordimeform, an agricultural insecticide used in the U.S. primarily to control insects in cotton, has been voluntarily halted by the two firms marketing the product. This action was taken because preliminary toxicological findings by company scientists indicate that chlordimeform may cause malignant tumores in a certain strain of laboratory mice when the animals are fed high daily doses of the chemical over the major part of their expected lifetime.

These preliminary findings are contrary to the results of previous long term studies in rats and dogs. There are no indications or reports that the product causes tumors in humans. The insecticide is marketed in the U.S. under the trademark Galecron and under the trademark Fundal.

Both are being recalled from distributors, dealers and growers. In the meantime, distributors and dealers are advised not to sell the product nor should the growers and applicators use them.

Chlordimeform is not a persistent product and does not accumulate in man or the environment. The insecticide is used only in agriculture and is not formulated into any household or home and garden

The firms are taking this action as a precaution until all studies are completed and results analyzed.

The spokesmen emphasized that the new data "are preliminary, not conclusive, and based on incomplete laboratory tests in mice, a species which is regarded as being susceptible to the development of tumors. These mice were fed high daily doses of the chemical for an extended period of time.

With the onset of fall's cool temperature and rainy weather homecomers may have problems with brown patch disease in lawns.

Brown patch which occurs on St. Augustine and Bermudagrass is caused by the fungus Rhizoctonia solani and occurs in late spring and fall. This disease is characterized by three different typer of symptons in turf. One is a circular pattern of dead grass.

The second type of symptom occurring on grass is a diffused type of pattern of which small diffused patches of grass will turn brown. This is the most common symptom I have noted in West Texas.

The third type is where individual leaf blades turn yellow in turf; this is usually the way brown patch shows up in U Floratam St. Augustine grass. In all three instances, both the blades and leaf sheaths may be easily pulled from the stolons because of deterioration in the attachment area. Stolons (stems) often ramain green. Disease development occurs most rapidly whin air temperatures are between 75 and 85 degrees when free moisture is present. Several fungis are cleared for use in controlling brown patch.

These include Benomyl which is available as Turfside 1991 and Terraclor PCNB which is available in liquid, granular or wettable powder form. Maneb with coordinated zinc ion is available as Terraclor has a half life of 30 days and generally is effective throughout the growing season. The other available materials need to be applied on . a regular schedule, generally from 10 to 14 daily intervals.

Women fall out of love faster than men today

By ELEANOR HOOVER The Los Angeles Times

WASHINTON - Women today fall out of love faster than men at the end of an affair, says a Harvard psychologist after watching the progress of 231 college couples who have dated for two or more "Women seem to find it somewhat easier to break off a relationship when it seems necessary," says Dr. Zick Rubin. "Men, on the other hand, find it terribly difficult to cope with the ending of a relationship," a reversal of what is thought of as the usual pattern.

"If men were more in touch with their feelings, this might not be the case," Rubin adds. He acknowledges the change was due in part to the great social upsets which have occurred in women's roles over the last few years.

Rubin, who outlined his findings at a symposium of the American Psychological Assn. here this week, is using couples in the Boston area for his study. So far, 20 per cent have married, 35 per cent are still dating or going together and 45 per cent have broken up. The study is still going on.

"The best kind of divorce is the one that happens before marriage," Rubin says. But that appears to be difficult for many couples, and some seem to have to get married in order to break off the relationship — by divorce.

"In many relationships," says Rubin, "couples may be aware of serious strains but nevertheless find themselves unable or unwilling to break up before marriage. The desire to break up is seldom mutual. Women are more likely than men to perceive problems in premarital relationships."

Some strains which augur an eventual breakup are unequal involvement on the part of participants, age differences, educational goals and discrepancies in intelligence or physical attractiveness.

Rubin also reports that couples were more likely to stay friends when the man was the one who wanted to break up than when the woman was.

Rubin concludes that "although the psychic costs of 'uncoupling' before marriage is often substantial, by doing it then, couples can spare themselves the much greater costs of breaking un afterwards."

Reflecting on the Black Press: Excerpts from one of the first editorials from the pen of R.H. Reid Jr., recently elected editor of the A.M.E. Recorder, official organ of the African Methodist Episcopal Church: "Great Church of God, you have elected me your editor for the next four years. It seems to me that promised you the most improved paper in its long and colorful history of more than one hundred and forty years. That is, indeed, a Big promise. However, I expect this periodical to be so much improved that we may soon double its circulation!

"The quality and content of the Recorder must be that which will make it a desirable commodity the most sought paper in the church's history: yes, at the Youth Congress, the Layman's meetings, at church revivals, in the state meetings, district conferences, at all out seminaries, the midyear sessions, in every annual conference and in the homes of all our families and kinfolk who may perchance belong to other denominations. "I as the new editor must not only be a dreamer, but a practical general public relations promoter to the extent that this newspaper's circulation will be reflected by showing up in every hamlet, township, subdivision, village, town, countryside, city, and in all other communities in America where our people live and work, since it was the first black newspaper published by blacks in America. academic centers across this country are sending in subscriptions for their institutions. The Christian Recorder is an international newpaper and we have some great ideas for the overseas circulation and distribution.

Sharing the Brown Experience: Four years Benjamin nandez organized and headed a national Hispanic raising drive for President Nixon. He is founder and chief of the Republican National Hispanic Assembly. which recently was given affiliate status with the Republican National Committee by G.O.P.s in Kansas City. He will be the first Mexican-American with a seat on the Republican National Committee.

This organization raised almost a halfmillion dollars and Nixon got some million and a half votes from Chicano that fall, more than any other Republican in history

With great ex-pectations, Fernandez and his colleagues from the Hispanic committee waited for the job offers. Nothing happened, according to our sources.

"We were dropped like hot potatoes" said Fernandez, in a recent inter-view. "When the jobs were passed out for administration "they to the white Anglo-Saxon males, like always. They didn't care.'

The vehicle for creating an Hispanic power base within the GOP will be the Hispanic assembly, which already has 100 chapters in Texas and California. Fernandez is is asking the Ford reelection committee for a $300,000 budget to recruit Hispanic party workers and to organize voters for this fall. There are about 16 million Hispanics in the United States and they are the fastest growing minority of the population. Fernandez is a millionaire financial consultant from Chat-sworth, Calif. and one of the first Mexican-Americans to gain a toehold in the national Republican party. Chimes: The most prominent black Republican from Pennsylvania at the recent Convention in Kansas City was William T. Coleman, head of the Transportation Department of the U.S. Government. A bellringer writes: "Remember if you don't vote you don't count. Register now". Good advice.

Cotton prices advance

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of active cotton futures advanced this past week after a Department of Agriculture report predicted an even smaller cotton crop than the department had predicted in August.

No. 2 contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange were up 125 to 421 points, following losses of 107 to 359 points a week earlier.

The volume of trading for the fourday week was estimated at 1.377 million bales, for a daily average of 344,400 bales. This compares with 1.607 million bales and a 321,500 daily average for the previous week.

Open interest reported by the New York Cotton Exchange as of Thursday was 2.809 million bales, an increase of 400 from the preceding Friday.

Strength in the soybean market, which often moves parallel with the cotton market, was seen as another factor in the week's advaces, however, were held in check somewhat by reports of beneficial rains in the Delta and some central areas, meaning that the crop there will not be lost because of drought.

It's ulcer season for buyers

By ALEXANDER AUERBACH The Los Angeles Times

"You know what season this is? It's ulcer season, that's what season it is," laments the head of an Eastern retailing chain.

There's plenty of reason for him and other merchants to be gulping Gelusil, for this is the time they must plan their strategy for the rest of the year. Given the way consumer spending boomed early in the year, flattened out after Mother's Day and

Credit Bureau to become computerized

Credit Bureau Services of Midland within the next 12 to 18 months will join a computerized national credit reporting network, the first system of this type in the nation.

Chilton Corporation of Dallas and Trans Union systems Corporation of Chicago recently linked their credit reporting networks, creating CrediNet, which will connect credit bureaus in about 90 markets across the nation. This combined message system will cover more than 40 per cent of the consumers in the United States.

Credit Bureau Services of Midland is a division of Chilton.

Credit information between most reporting agencies can only be processed by telephone or mail, a procedure which can be both costly and time-consuming for the credit grantor and the consumer, according to the executives of both corporations.

to the executives of both corporations.

The computer link-up will allow credit grantor customers, such as Credit Bureau Services of Midland, to gain access to reports containing uniformly assembled facts presented on the same format with which customers are now familiar, the executives noted.

picked up again a few weeks ago, their job is fraught with peril.

FIRST NATIONAL MOTO

Like other businessmen, retailers watch key economic indicators — employment statistics, disposable personal income, housing starts and so on. Trouble is, all of those have improved fairly steadily through the year, and gave no advance warning of the downturn during the second quarter. So, even though these indicators continue to move up, many retailers don't quite trust them.

To complicate merchandising plans still further, consumers are not reacting very predictably to sales promotion efforts. Some retailers cut prices sharply early in the summer when sales lagged, only to encounter a lethargic response. Yet, while passing up these bargains, shoppers have been quite willing to pay top dollar for high fashion, luxury goods.

Because of the lead time needed to place orders with wholesalers and manufacturers, retailers must soon decide how heavily to stock their shelves for the crucial fall and Christmas selling seasons. If they overstock, they could be stuck with stale goods. But if they don't buy enough, they could lose sales to competitors who did lay in the inventory. Hence the ulcers.

Michael Hecht, executive vice president of the Broadway Stores division of Carter, Hawley Hale, Inc., Los Angeles, said that his chain, like most, "had an excellent first quarter," while things flattened out later. "We have a lot of theories on why that happened, but no real answers.

"Historically, when the auto business—is good, retailers also do well. But that hasn't been happening lately, and we don't understand why. There's a lot of money in the economy, but people aren't buying the way we'd expect "Hecht said way we'd expect," Hecht said.

In Boston, Mordechai Schafman, general merchandise manager of Filene's, a unit of Federated Department Stores, Inc., Cincinnati, said his stores are "doing extremely well in the better, higher priced lines, far better than last year." In the moderate and lower priced lines "the momentum is just not there," he says.

Arnold Aronson, president of the Bullock's division of Federated in Los Angeles, agrees that his customers are looking for new fashions, not just cut prices on familiar merchandise.

"Things have gotten better since the beginning of August, primarily because of the newness in the merchandise for early fall," Aronson said. Designer-label women's sportswear is selling well, despite high tickets, as are men's vested and European styled suits.

Both Sears, Roebuck and Co., and Montgomery Ward are respected in the retailing industry for their ability to forecast consumer behavior. But any merchant who doubts their projections can readily find a doomsayer.

One of the gloomiest at the moment is Albert Sindlinger, a maverick economist based near Philadelphia who each week polls a panel of consumers to gauge their willingness to spend. While consumer confidence was up early in the year, "our data showed that May was the peak, and it's been down since then."

The one area of high confidence, says Sindlinger, is among the very wealthy. Their free spending, he believes, has fooled other forecasters into believing a broad recovery is under way. "I say we are in the third month of our next recession right now, and don't even know it yet." Unlike most economists, who expect employment to rise steadily, Sindlinger believes that the number of employed Americans has peaked, and unemployment will soon increase.

"The first reaction of my (retailing industry) clients to my reports was not to believe me, but now many of them do," says the crusty forecaster. "The ones who do, won't get caught with a lot of inventory on their hands. The ones who don't will go bankrupt."

There's probably not going to be that kind of a rush to the bankruptcy courts, because even retailers who never heard of Sindlinger or his pessimistic forecasts are reluctant to stuff their warehouses in anticipation of high sales.

Safeway to produce commercials, ads here

Safeway Stores El Paso Division has announced it will be producing a series of newspaper ads and television and radio commercials in the Midland-Odessa area from Sunday through Wednesday.

Robert Livesay, division manager, said a film crew of six from Dallas, plus personnel from Mithoff Advertising, will be involved in the production of the commercials. Safeway representatives will be headed by division advertising manager Roy Donmoyer.

In addition to using a Safeway store in the Midland-Odessa area as a location for the filming, Livesay said that Safeway employes from Midland, Odessa, Carlsbad, Hobbs, Alpine, Marfa, Pecos and Fort Stockton will be involved in the commercials. They will also be featured in the newspaper ads which are part of the campaign.

Employes from Midland to be part of the commercials are Don Spears, Tommie Hudgins, Terri Scott, Vance Bundy and Troy Hunt.

Nationally known cinematographer William M. White will be leading the film crew, as will Michael Apsey, who's won several national awards for audio-production.

Safeway's "You're The One That Counts" campaign was begun last March and developed to be tailored for individual markets using local employes and area residents.

Livesay said, "Since the concept applies to every store in our division, we felt that it was important to include people in our commercials that live in the various cities where we have Safeway stores."

Economists awaiting capital spending 'boom'

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK

NEW YORK (AP) — Economists have been waiting for months for industry to begin increasing its spending for new plants and equipment.

Such capital investment is considered vital to continued economic growth. It would provide more jobs, leading to a higher level of consumer spending.

And it would expand the capacity of businesses to supply their products, thus preventing future shortages that bring higher prices.

Whether the long-awaited capital

Whether the long-awaited capital spending boom has started was still in doubt this past week. And one group of economists said a boom isn't likely soon, and may not even be necessary.

The Commerce Department released its latest survey on capital spending plans. Polled in July and August, businessmen said they anticipate spending $121.2 billion this year for new plants and equipment.

That's not as much as it seems, considering a 4.5 per cent rise in capital goods prices in the six months ended in August.

And it indicated little change in spending plans since the previous Commerce Department survey in April and May, when businessmen said they planned a 7.3 per cent increase this year over last.

Meanwhile, economists at Citibank, the nation's second largest bank, said in a report this past week that the economy has enough production capacity without a new surge in capital spending.

"While capital spending is likely to trend up, a boom isn't about to happen — at least over the next 6-12 months," they said in the bank's monthly economic letter. "And it really doesn't matter..."

Although capital spending has slacked off in recent years, its rate of growth in the late 1960s was great enough to offset the recent decline, the bank said.

"What deterioration there has been in capital investment in recent years is cyclical in origin, and has not — with the exception of petroleum and some metals — resulted in any significant shortfall in the capital stock needed to keep the economy growing."

The supply shortages and doubledigit inflation of 1973-74 were not the result of a lack of industrial capacity, the bank said.

"They were the result of a unique set of economic circumstances that stimulated demand in a way that is unlikely to be repeated in the foreseeable future."

These circumstances include a big upsurge in worldwide money supplies in 1971-72 that touched off the high demand for goods, and U.S. price controls and dollar devaluations that boosted the demand for U.S. goods abroad.

Elimination of classification by sex on insurance policies urged by report

By Bill Kidd Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Elimination of classification by sex from insurance policies has been urged to the State Board of Insurance in a report submitted by Rep. Sarah Weddington of Austin.

The study was prepared by E. Ann Christian, an attorney on Weddington's staff, with "contributions and endorsements" from a number of women leaders, including Judith Guthrie, president of the Texas Chapter of Women's Equity Action League; Jane Hickie, Austin Women's Center; Martha Smiley, president, Texas Women's Political Caucus; Cathy Bonner, Austin Committee on the Status of Women; and Patty Boydston, Texas Nurses Association.

The board's staff is taking a look at the study— and Chairman Joe Christie says he expects a hearing on it to be set within the week.

The study argues that classification by sex "ought to be completely and fundamentally prohibited."

"Elimination of this particular type of classification may deprive the insurance industry of an instrument of expediency, but at the same time it would provide maximum protection to the individual, who would then be grouped according to some class having a direct relation to the insurable interest," it continues.

For example, the report says, it makes more sense to classify people on the basis of whether they are smokers or non-smokers than whether they are male or female.

Other points in the study involve revision of maternity coverage, and coverage for pregnancy and its complications, and a greater recognition of women's role in the economy—both as a worker and as a homemaker.

The proposals, if adopted, should mean a number of changes in the way policies are now written.

oct. 27 has been set as the tentative date for a hearing by the Board of Insurance on adjustment of the worker's compensation rate.

Efforts are underway to firm up the agenda.

Worker's compensation is coming in for considerable attention just now, with the House Judiciary Committee looking at legislation for the next session of the Legislature, including bills to raise maximum benefits from $91 to $135—two-thirds of the averages weekly wage in Texas ($203).

Just what effect that will have on rates isn't certain, the committee says.

Meanwhile, the Texas Association of Business (formerly the Texas Manufacturers Association) is touring the state with its own worker's compensation proposals, and says the road show is getting good reviews.

The TAB is proposing increasing maximum weekly benefits to $84, and allowing the Industrial Accident Board to accelerate payments to a worker "to be sure he can live on the income and have access to the best possible medical care."

Under the TAB's proposals, lump sum settlements would be eliminated, allowing future benefits in the event a disability recurrs; physical and vocational rehabilitation would be provided; employers would be permited to self-insure their worker's compensation risks; attorneys fees would be set at a maximum of 15 per cent of a settlement; and "fraud and repeater claims" would, hopefully, be stopped by eliminating payments to claimants who lie about prior injuries or diseases.

TAB Vice President James W. Yancy, Jr., says the problem with the present law is that Texas employers are paying out $650,000,000 in premiums a year—and insurance companies say they aren't getting enough—and workers say they can't live on the benefits provided. (The law sets the rate at two-thirds of his average weekly wage, not to exceed

Looking at all that, Yancy says, it's obvious some changes need to be made in the law—and the people the TAB has been talking to indicate they agree, he adds.

The economy in Texas is strong and getting stronger, but inflation is still a serious threat, says the Texas Business Review.

Most indicators show that Texas is ahead of the overall national pace of economic recovery, from employment through construction and farm prices.

The unemployment figures for June showed 6.1 per cent of Texans out of work as opposed to 6.3 per cent in

While this figure was heartening, economists pointed out that the consumer price index will probably hold steady on a course that would finish the year with a six per cent increase. This figure was an im-provement over 1975's nine percent increase, but the six per cent rate of inflation "cannot be other than disastrous over an extended period of time," the magazine said.

The overall surge in the economy was attributed to an increase in consumer confidence. This increase showed up in construction, capital expansion and farm prices.

The construction industry has overcome a decline in nonresidential building to register an overall 34 per cent gain in permits issued over 1975.

Capital expansion was also reported on a solid upward course, but a curtailment of funds nationally could alter that situation. Some restraints on the money supply have been reported, and a slight increase in interest rates was "assured," the magazine said.

If such increases remain slight, the forecast would call for continued improvement of business conditions despite a continuation of inflation.

Spending for durable goods was in good shape, with new orders ex-ceeding shipments, creating a backlog of orders. That backlog, which economists call a healthy sign, was nearly 30 per cent above the figure for June 1975.

Farmers' prices were reported up 11 per cent from last year; prices paid by farmers rose only five per cent during the same period.

Texas retail sales figures were not available, but indicators from sample districts showed that a healthy gain could be expected.

Panamanian ship seized

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) - The U.S. Coast Guard has ordered a Panamanian cruise ship, the S.S. Vera Cruz, to remain at anchor near here until state investigators can determine why the ship tried to leave port without clearing customs. The ships owner, Bahama Cruise Line, Inc., Friday cancelled nine cruises from two Texas ports and blamed the current political climate in Texas for the cancellations.

That move came after the ship owners learned state law enforcement officials planned to seize gambling equipment aboard the vessel, according to a restraining order and injunction petition filed in 122nd District Court.

Bahama Cruise Lines secured a temporary restraining order to prevent officers from taking the gambling equipment and an in-junction hearing was set for Friday before State Dist. Judge L.D. Godard.

But when the haring started, the vessel owners said they no longer would seek injunctive relief.

The Vera Cruz departed Pier 15 in the Port of Galveston about 15 minutes before the Friday hearing was to begin, reportedly to stand off shore until the legal issues were

But following the hearing, the Coast Guard ordered the Vera Cruz to remain berthed off the Bolivar Peninsula near here until state investigators determine why the ship abruptly left without clearing

The Ferguson Medal is presented each year by the Society to recognize the best technical paper on any phase of petroleum engineering written by an SPE member under the age of 33. The award-winning paper for 1976, entitled "A Regression Approach to Estimating Gas In Place for Gas Fields," was published in the October, 1975, issue of Journal of Petroleum Technology. In his paper, Rossen presents a new approach that applies nonlinear regression analysis to observed pressure and production history to obtain reliable estimates of gas in place and other reservoir properties.

Rossen is a senior engineering specialist for Exxon, where Exxon in 1972 after earning a BS degree in chemical engineering from the U. of Illinois and MA and PhD degrees in chemical engineering from Princeton University.

Feist added to division

Bass Enterprises Production Co. has announced the addition of Gary Feist to the Midland Divison staff in the position of senior production engineer.

Contract awarded

Seaway Pipeline, Inc., recently awared a contract to The Ortloff Corp.'s Gulf Coast Division for the mechanical and structural installation of the dock facility of the Seaway Freeport Terminal.

The tank terminal, located near Jones Creek, will have the capacity to store approximately 3.2 million barrels of crude oil.

The dock facility is designed to accomodate three tankers or two tankers and a barge simultaneously. The oil received at this dock will be fed into Seaway Pipeline, Inc.'s crude oil common carrier pipeline system extending from Freeport to Cushing, Okla., supplying crude oil to refineries in the Midwest.

Harvey J. Page, vice president of the Midland-based Ortloff Corp. who directs the Gulf Coast Division, indicated the dock facility is expected to be operational this year with construction work under the direction of Hubert Lawson.

Service awards made

Atlantic Richfield has presented service awards to two long-time employes in its Midland offices. George P. Nathman, supervisor of special projects, engineering department, has completed 35 years of service, and Harold T. Frost Jr., senior engineer, special projects, in the Permian District, has worked for the firm 30 years. Nathman joined ARCO in 1941 in Odessa, and has worked in Longview, Dallas and Midland in various engineering assignments. He has been in his present post since April, 1975. He is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma with a B. S. degree in chemical engineering. Frost, who has been in his present classification since 1973, has a B. S. degree in petroleum engineering from the University of Tulsa.

He was employed by ARCO in Dallas in 1946 and worked in Longview and Houston, and in Franklin and Lafayette, La., before moving to Midland in 1956.

Amoco to reopen Michigan gas well

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Amoco Production Co.'s natural gas well near Williamsburg should be reopened and ready for production by Sept. 25, according to a company spokesman. The state issued a permit for the drilling Thursday.

The well has been plugged since an April, 1973 blowout and subsequent gas eruptions which forced 88 families to flee their homes.

The drilling permit was issued by the Department of Natural Resources after the state and Amoco compromised on a $500,000 indemnity bond to cover any possible future damages caused by the reopening of

The state originally had demanded a $1 million indemnity bond, but Amoco officials, charging that amount was excessive, said they would keep the well closed rather than pay it.

State officials have been eager to reopen the well because they fear building gas pressure could cause another blowout

DNR Deputy Director Wayne Tody said Thursday that under conditions agreed upon by the DNR and Amoco, gas eruptions are "unlikely" but there is no "absolute assurance" against a repeat blowout.

Requirements Amoco must meet before and after opening the well are outlined in an environmental impact statement that took more than a year to prepare. Included is a contingency plan the company must follow in case of another blowout, and an evacuation

Wayne Tiller of Amoco said the company plans to start reopening the well Sept. 15 and estimated the process would take 10 days.

Before removing the concrete plug that has kept the well closed since 1973, however, the company will test the casing or piping and the cement already in the well to make sure they can withstand gas pressure without another blowout, Tiller said.

Checks for gas leaks also will be done by Amoco and the state Public Service Commission. Water samples will be taken in the Williamsburg

After removing the concrete plug and a mud plug, the company will drill 300 feet into the reef and install more casing to the bottom of the well.

Throughout the reopening process, the Michigan State Police will continuously staff an emergency communications post at Williamsburg to handle any emergencies.

Scot seeking reputation as trans-Atlantic actor

NEW YORK (AP) - "I went to London to make a reputation," says Ian Richardson. "Now I want to become a truly trans-Atlantic performer. In order to consolidate any kind of image, I think I'll have to stay at least five years."

On the other hand, the gifted Scottish actor has many interests besides acting and hesitates about the hazards of overcommitment. It took him six months, for example, to accept the stellar male role in Broadway's currently thriving revival of

"My Fair Lady." Before the musical went into production, management insisted that he agree to a two-year contract as Henry Higgins, the acerbic speech expert who transforms a cockney flower girl into an elegant belle.

Richardson isn't a new talent in town, but prior visits have been sporadic and limited. A dozen years ago he was the titular victim in Peter Brook's searing spectacular, "The Persecution and Assassination of Jean-Paul Marat as Performed by the Inmates of the Asylum of Charenton Under the Direction of the Marquis De Sade." Other protean incarnations here have included most of Shakespeare's kings and Chekhov's

Always looking for new challenge and highly fastidious about doing roles only when "I feel I am ready in my soul, in my heart, in my confidence and in my professional ability," the tall, erudite performer won't ever do Marat again, or a good many other parts.

His presence in New York, in fact, stems in part from a desire for a sabbatical from the portrayals that have made him a leading member of the Royal Shakespeare Company.

He joined that notable organization in 1960, moving from supporting to feature to lead roles as the Shakespearean canon revolved through five-year cycles.

Among his biggest successes was Richard II — "which I was asked four times to do." The last time, following "a minor nervous breakdown" three years ago at age 39, Richardson said

The only role he would like to tackle again is Hamlet. He did the prince of Repertory at 26, "and the part sticks rock crowds in my gullet."

Richardson's wife is an avid book collector. When getting ready to enact Henry Higgins "I didn't actually have to cross the threshhold of our large Edwardian apartment" to amply background the character created by George Bernard Shaw.

ENTERTAINMENT

Higgins is "85 per cent Shaw - or to be more correct - Shaw as he himself wanted to be seen. He created a persona for himself which was as alien to him as a performer's role in a play." The rest of the character was based loosely on a phonetics professor whose work intrigued the peppery dramatist.

His theatrical instincts came to the fore at age 14 when it was his turn to give the Armistice Day declamation in church.

"The history master wrote a letter to my mother saying 'we have made an error. Your son is not a musican, he's an actor. "Her reaction must have been complete horror, because she didn't confess the letter and its advice for

The son recalls being sent off with an aunt to a series of drama matinees. At the first performance he chewed his school tie to bits.

New version of 'Beatlemania' appears

The Washington Post

It's been 10 years since the last concert tour and nearly six years since the acrimonious break-up. But The Beatles juggernaut, which has already earned more than $200 million, is back - and with it a refinanced version of Beatlemania.

Vintage pictures of the group have recently turned up on the cover of Rolling Stone and a dozen other music publications all over the world, but the most obvious sign of the continued interest in Paul McCartney, John Lennon, George Harrison and Ringo Starr is the album "Rock 'n' Roll Music."

Backed by a $750,000 promotion campaign, this double-record, $10.98 list price Beatles issue has sold 2 million copies in 11 weeks. It has also prompted the return to the charts of three other Beatle albums. turned a 1966 album track called "Got to Get You Into My Life" into a hit single, and won a new generation of pop music listeners over to the "Fab

That, however, may be only the beginning. In the works now are plans to release more Beatles albums. perhaps including previously unissued material that some people at Capitol Records are calling "Sgt Pepper's Part II.

A play about the group, starring four Beatle lookalikes, is in rehearsal, and is scheduled to go on Broadway some time this fall.

And on Long Island, meanwhile, a 28-year-old Beatles fan has formed "Let It Be: The International Committee to Reunite The Beatles, Inc." Spurred by a promoter's offer to pay $50 million for a Beatles reunion concert that would be broadcast worldwide material was packaged, promoted and marketed, an opening act no one has petitions and raising money since early June, hoping to make a counter-offer of $50 million plus $1 to The Beatles on June 5, 1977 — the 10th anniversary of the release of "Sgt. Pepper's."

Even the Russians are getting in on the act. Melody Records has purchased a license from EMI Records, the parent company of Capitol Records, to release Paul McCartney and Wings' "Band on the Run" album. Martin Finch, EMI's controller of international licensing, is in Moscow this week to discuss the design of the Wings record and to negotiate the possible release in the U.S.S.R. of up to half a dozen Beatles albums, available now only on the black market

But it has been in England, where the phenomenon started in the first place, in 1962, that the resurgence of Beatlemania has been strongest. When all 23 of The Beatles' original singles were reissued there this spring, the record charts were overwhelmed: Five different Beatles singles reached the No. 1 slot, and at one time all 23 were in the Top 40.

That was precisely what Paul Watts, general manager of the EMI's United Kingdom division, had hoped would happen. When The Beatles' contract with EMI expired on Jan. 1, 1976, giving the four musicians no further control over the way their shows of the decade in Texas has opened at the garde art, the paintings of the impressionist and postimpressionist traditions that greatly influenced the development of fauvism. But the short-lived fauvist movement irrevocably changed the course of art, leading to modern acceptance of arbitrary color, distortion of forms and the spontaneous application of paint to canvas. The new Kimbell exhibition contains paintings by each of the principal Fauve artists, including particularly important works by Matisse, Andre Derain and Maurice de Vlaminck. There are also major paintings by Georges Braque, Raoul Dufy, Kees van Dongen, Albert Marquet and Henri Manguin. Paintings by the precursors of Fauvism, including works by Claude Monet and Vincent Van Gogh, Piet Mondrian and Wassily Kandinsky, also are on exhibition as part of the Fauve show. Augmenting the collection is a canvas from the Kimbell's permanent collection, "The River Seine at Chatou," by Derain, plus works by Derain and Dufy from the John A. and Audrey Jones Beck collection of the Houston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Fauve show is the most important to be offered at the Kimbell since the museum presented the collection of impressionist and post-impressionist paintings from the USSR in 1973.

The Fauve show was first seen at the Museum of Modern Art, where it drew record crowds, and it has since traveled to selected art museums in the United States. It has come to Fort Worth from Los Angeles. This will be its final showing before the works in the exhibition are returned to their owners. The Kimbell Museum is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday each week, and from 1 to 5 p.m. each Sunday. Admission to the public is free.

Overregimented Army another American myth

The Washington Post

ABERDEEN, Md. - Far be it from us to pass informed judgment on the Army. Our football knees kept us from serving. But we have read Catch-22 and seen Sgt. Bilko, and have always suspected that this business about Army life being overregimented had some truth to it. Never, according to the cliches, would the Army consider the human side of its soldiers, its equipment or its mission. By The Book, Standard Operating Procedure, Regulations aren't those Army phrases, one and

Well, scratch another myth. The Army is more concerned than ever with human actors, and is spending more money than ever analyzing them ($7 million this fiscal year). The setting is the Human Engineering Laboratory at Aberdeen Proving Ground in northeastern Maryland. What 191 people do there is fascinating, effective, difficult, essential and, above all, practical. They think and tinker with a purpose, and much of what the HEL is discovering will have applications in civilian life.

We had been told to ask for Building 400, one of dozens on the 75,000-acre proving ground. "Can't miss it," the military policeman on the main gate assured us. "It's the one with the tank in front of it." Slightly jarred by this. we were literally jarred when, as we were getting out of our car, a mortar exploded in a field across the road, perhaps 200 yards away. Five Army men walking the other way didn't even look up. Shelling, we soon learned, is SOP at Aberdeen. It's where all the Army's new weapons and material are tested before being put into general use.

By contrast, the innards of the HEL were peaceful and college-like, although the walls shook every time a shell landed nearby. In short order, we found John D. Weisz, HEL's brisk. dedicated director for the past 22

"If you want to boil it all down. we're concerned with the soldier in the field," Weisz told us. "We're trying to be sure the man is thought of in the mud, the snow, the rain,

Toward that end, HEL is running about 80 experiments at present. Only four are new this year. That is an indication of how long it can take when generals, as they often do, lob large questions at HEL. For instance, in 1960, HEL was asked how much noise an individual soldier's ears can stand in several situations and with or without several kinds of equipment. It to deliver a definitive answer. And one of his men, George Garinther, is still trying to answer the question as far as tank noise is concerned.

A walk through HEL's eight buildings revealed a smorgasbord. In one room, a soldier sits in a hush in front of a radar screen. On it are a bewildering web of green blips, some of them moving. Weisz explains that this is a new model, developed at HEL, of the control panel that can detect or call in SAM missiles.

In the next building, Robert Lambert is fiddling with the com-puters that are the heart of this oculometry experiment. It features a small, very dark room, in which a subject sits. Behind one wall, a movie camera projects rear-screen images.

George Garinther's anechoic (no echo) chamber was the strangest room we encountered. Inside it, with the door shut, we felt as if we were inside a pineapple. Weird, pointed slabs of a spongy, sound-killing material protruded from all four walls and the ceiling. On the floor was a stereo speaker. All it plays are the strains of a tank chewing up turf at 30 miles an hour. That is much louder than a sports car or many aircraft, Garinther told us. His job is to figure out ways to protect the ears of men inside a tank without making it impossible for them to hear radios, incoming fire or each other.

Gerald Hudgens, a research psychologist, is running HEL's newest project — an inquiry into whether female soldiers are menstruation. The project was ordered last spring when women were preparing to enter West Point for the first time. It is far too early for conclusions, Hudgens told us, and it will be a big task, he said — very little previously published material has even considered the question.

HEL has highly specific concerns, too. In connection with an upsurge of women in the Army, the lab has been assigned to discover ways to design a pack with straps that do not press down on a female soldier's breasts. Recently, the lab helped test a new standard-issue helmet. It has a continuing responsibility to test gear for those assigned to the Arctic. And it has recently finished studying the way the Army prepares its repair manuals. Recommendation: use lots

Austin 'passes' Tech to victory

LUBBOCK-With Tommy Duniven starting at quarterback and Rodney Allison as an impatient and more than uate backup, the last guy on the field Texas Tech expected to pass them to victory was Jeff Austin.

Unexpected but grateful recipients of Austin's generosity were linebacker Thomas Howard, weak safety Greg Prazier, cornerback Eric Felton and Gry McCright, the ex-Midland Lee Rebel who is listed as a linebacker but played mostly down lineman against the 255-pound per man Colorado line.

AUSTIN COOLED off the second half with only Godfrey Turner intercepting, but it was unproductive.

This may have been the Big Eight's third best team, but the Buffs didn't impress a Jones Stadium opening game record crowd of 44,132 as a team that could even finish in the top six in the SWC. But then Big Eight teams never have been particuarly successful against Tech, now only 3-13 to be exact.

This is only the second meeting between Tech and Colorado, and while Tech won that one in 1962, neither team recalls it with any particular fondness. It was Tech's lone success in a 1-9 season while Colorado was 2-8.

chances in the second quarter that could have given them a comfortable lead. Tony Franklin missed a 39-yard field goal and Shipman fumbled at the Tech three-yard line on the final play of the first half.

In the fourth quarter, with highlytouted freshman runners Curtis Dickey and David Brothers in the lineup, the Aggies reached the Gobblers' seven-yard line before backup quarterback David Walker fumbled the ball away.

DALLAS (AP) — Versatile Arthur Whittington scored three touchdowns on a run from scrimmage, a punt return, and a pass reception to lead Southern Methodist to a 34-14 college football victory over Texas Christian Saturday and make Ron Meyer's debut as Mustang coach a success.

The Southwest Conference game was the season opener for both teams and marked the 18th straight year that TCU has lost its first SWC game. The previous 17 losses were to Arkansas.

TCU's touchdowns came on a 22yard pass in the second quarter on a 22-yard pass from quarterback Jimmy Dan Elzner to split end Mike Renfro and in the fourth quarter or twoyard plunge by Tony Accomando.

SMU was the consensus preseason pick to finish last in the SWC although TCU has won only two games in the past three years. Wesson, in his fourth year as starting quarterback for the Mustangs, engineered the 59yard first quarter scoring drive with several key plays. The 160-pound senior hit freshman tight end Robert Fisher for 15 yards, ran 10 yards on a fourth and two situation and threw 16 yards to Whittington to the fiveyard line before

TCU tied the score midway through the second period on a short 43-yard drive set up earlier by a 38-yard punt to the one-yard line by TCU's Cameron Young. On Elzner's 22yard touchdown pass to Renfro, the junior quarterback was hit hard as he threw the ball and Renfro had to wrestle it away from SMU defender Gary Pickens at the one before falling into the end zone.

SMU had another good chance to score in the third quarter when Young fumbled a low snap on an attempted TCU punt. SMU reached the 19-yard line, but three straight penalties

Razorbacks cop 33-16 victory over Utah St.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas halfback Ben Cowins, a 190pound sophomore, turned in the two big running plays that finally subdued a gutty Utah State, 33-16, Saturday

Cowins broke for 21 yards on third and 19 to keep a 77-yard scoring drive alive after Utah State had closed within five points, then ran 18 yards for the Razorbacks' final touchdown, slamming the door on the Aggies.

His scoring burst came one play after free safety Larry White intercepted a pass and returned it 52 yards. A personal foul at the end of the advanced the ball to the Aggies'

Arkansas then hitched up its offense and began feeding the Aggies a large dose of Cowins, who finished the night with 126 yards in 16 carries.

The Razorbacks disdained the pass on third and 19 at the Arkansas 44 and called on Cowins, who responded with a 21-yard gain. Six plays later, Micheal Forrest rambled six yards for his second touchdown. Cowins gained 55 yards in the 12-play drive.

Utah State was supposed to be a mere workout for the Razorbacks — a chance to sharpen timing, prepare for Oklahoma State. The Aggies, beaten 45-10 last week by San Jose State, decided to gamble on defense and had as many as nine players on the line of scrimmage. Arkansas threw only seven times, and, as a result, Utah State was able to contain the Razorbacks' attack much of the time. Ron Calcagni, Arkansas' sophomore quarterback, did manage to hook up with tight end Charles Clay on a 55-yard scoring pass that made it

The Razorbacks also kept their offense relatively simple to ease the pressure on Calcagni, only the third true sophomore to start at quarterback for Arkansas during Frank Broyles' 19 years as coach.

Utah State managed only 23 yards rushing, but did throw with some success. Hipple and quarterback Keith Myers completed 18 of 37 passes for 202 yards. Arkansas' secondary underwent some personnel shifts after cornerback Howard Sampson injured an ankle and strong safety Bruce Mitchell was ejected for a personal foul. In the Aggies' first scoring drive they benefitted from 40 yards in penalties against Arkansas. The Razorbacks had 13 penalties for 112 yards during the game and jumped offsides numerous times.

Chicago trips Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Pinchhitter John Summers smashed a three-run homer in the 12th inning, snapping a tie and lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 4-1 victory over the faltering Philadelphia Phillies Saturday.

The loss was the 13th in 15 games for the National League Eastern Divison leaders, who lead the Pittsburgh Pirates by just four games. The Pirates beat Montreal 4-3 Saturday.

Summers, who had only two home runs coming into the game, cracked relief pitcher Ron Reed's first pitch deep into the right field seats. Reed, 8-5, had given up consecutive singles to Manny Trillo and Joe Wallis to open the 12th. After a sacrifice, Summers, pinch-hitting for relief pitcher Bruce Sutter, 5-3, broke the tie.

Chicago starter Ray Burris, after chicago starter Ray Burris, after yielding an unearned run in the third, retired 13 straight Phillies before pinch-hitter Tommy Hutton broke the string in the eighth. Hutton, hitless in his last 10 at-bats, opened with a double. After a fielder's choice and a popup, Mike Schmidt walked but Greg Luzinski grounded into a forceout.

Before leaving in favor of Hutton, Philadelphia's Tom Underwood gave up eight hits in eighth innings, the only damage coming on Rick Monday's solo homer in the first.

Underwood, who struck out seven in every inning but two, working out of trouble several times. Burris left with no outs and two runners on in the 10th, having yielded six hits, walked three and struck out four.

The effort was highlighted by a pair of long first-down runs by junior back Dave Riley. He scrambled 19 yards and 17 yards in a three-play span to get West Virginia out of a hole deep in its own territory. Easley took it from there, carrying five times once West Virginia got to the Villanova 10.

For The Moment, a full brother to Honest Pleasure, took the lead on the outside coming into the stretch and held off the even-money favorite in the stretch drive. A 70-1 outsider, Western Wind, finished third, 14 lengths back of Banquet Table.

For The Moment, son of What A Pleasure, trained by LeRoy Jolley and ridden by Eddie Maple, ran the seven furlongs in 1:231-5 and paid $8.20, $3.80 and $3.20. Banquet TXABLE, RIDDEN BY Jean Cruguet, returned $3.20 and $2.80. Western Wind, ridden by Darryl Montoya, paid $5.40 to show.

The crowd of 28,738 saw Native Trader finish fourth in the field of 10. He was followed by Smashing Native, Bartender's Pride, Star Spangled, Ahoy Mate, Heidee's Pal, and Winterlock, who held a three-length lead after an opening quarter in 224-5.

Each of the starters carried 122 pounds.

Maple said that For The Moment "broke well and was running closer to the pace than I expected. He was running on his own in the backstretch but when we straightened out in the stretch and got the lead, I had to go to work on him because he's green and tends to loaf when in front."

As for the favorite, Banquet Table, Cruguet said, "I hit him a few times at the quarter pole and he went after the horse in front but just could not go by him.

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - Freshman Hoppy Langley kicked a 34-yard field goal in the fourth period Saturday night to give Mississippi's once-beaten Rebels a 10-7 Southeastern Conference upset over sixth-ranked Alabama.

NFL appeals ruling on college grid draft

By BRUCE LOWITT AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - The National Football League, citing a "further judicial inroad on its ability to maintain a balanced level of competition," said Saturday it will appeal "at least portions" of a federal court ruling which declared its college draft illegal

Last Wednesday in Washington. U.S. Dist. Court Judge William Bryant declared the league's draft in violation of antitrust laws, calling it a group boycott by the 28 clubs. NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle made the announcement of the league appeal.

Bryant's ruling was the third major courtroom setback for the NFL in recent years. In 1974, a federal judge in San Francisco ruled the standard player contract illegal. And last year, a federal judge in Minneapolis did the ranked Pittsburgh turned a pair of interceptions into quick second-period touchdowns and Tony Dorsett tormented Notre Dame again by rushing for 181 yards as the Panthers rolled to a 31-10 victory Saturday, handing the Irish their first opening-game loss in 13 years.

Pitt quarterback Robert Haygood scored twice on one-yard dives just two minutes, 11 seconds apart early in the second quarter after Notre Dame's Rick Slager had passes intercepted by LeRoy Felder and Jeff Delaney in Irish territory.

Meanwhile, a swarming Pitt defense led by tackle Randy Holloway stiffened after Notre Dame stormed 86 yards on 11 plays following the opening kickoff.

Slager, who completed all three passes on the drive for 52 yards, threw 25 yards to tight end Ken MacAfee, giving Notre Dame a 7-0 lead with less than five minutes gone.

However, Dorsett, who stunned Notre Dame with a record 209 yards as a freshman in 1973 and eclipsed that with 303 a year ago, quickly swung the momentum to Pitt.

On the Panthers' first play from scrimmage, he burst through the right side for a 61-yard gallop to the Irish 23. Five plays later, he tied the score 77 with a five-yard dash around right end.

In four games against Notre Dame, Dorsett has rushed for a record 754 yards on 96 carries. He rushed 22 times Saturday.

The Irish were hampered by poor field position throughout the first half. Early in the second period, under a strong rush from tackle Don Parrish, Slager threw a fluttering pass which Felder picked off at the Notre Dame 30 and returned to the two. Two plays and 36 seconds later, Pitt led 14-7.

The Irish, getting desparate early, ran one play for a two-yard gain after the ensuing kickoff. Then Slager fired over the middle directly into the hands of Delaney at the Notre Dame After Haygood passed 11 yards to Gordon Jones, Dorsett circled right end for seven and left end for 14 more and a first down at the one. Haygood promptly leaped across for his second touchdown, making it 21-7. Notre Dame's only other points came on a school record 53-yard field goal by Dave Reeve late in the half.

But shortly after Long's field goal, he uncorked a scintillating 28-yard sprint to the Notre Dame eight after breaking several tackles at the 25. Sub quarterback Matt Cavanaugh notched the remaining eight yards to

A capacity crowd of 59,075, plus an ABC-TV audience that covered most of both coasts and the midwest, watched Notre Dame self destruct the few times it had favorable field position. Once, Reeve missed a 44yard field goal attempt and another time Al Hunter was unable to hold Slager's poor pitchout and lost the ball at the Pitt 42.

Oklahoma State takes advantage of Tulsa errors

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) - A penetrating Oklahoma State defense led by mammoth tackle Phillip Dokes forced a rapid succession of Tulsa turnovers in the third quarter as the Cowboys rebounded from a 6-3 halftime deficit to defeat the Golden Hurricane 33-21 in a regioally televised football game Saturday.

The Cowboys scored 23 points in a span of less than eight minutes and appeared to have taken command with a 26-6 lead at the end of the third period. But Tulsa, keyed by the passing of quarterback Ronnie Hickerson, wouldn't quit, scoring two touchdowns in the final quarter.

Dove season has slow start to 8-6 win

BY GREG AKINS

Rain has caused the dove season to get off to a slow start this year, but it s really nothing to complain about since there will be plenty of opportunity to go hunting.

The doves are in very good shape and we should be getting back to some good shooting condition around the tanks as soon as the weather drys up. A good maize or sunflower field would probably be your best producer of birds right now.

It has been announced that five designated areas at Amistad Lake will be opened for hunting with required permit. The permits will be free, and can be obtained at the entrace to the hunt areas, Ranger stations and launch ramps. This permit must be in the hunter's possession, and they require a new permit each day that you hunt.

DOVE, QUAIL and waterfowl

hunting is allowed with a shotgun. Deer hunting is allowed only with long-bow and arrow. No rifles or shotguns with slugs will be permited.

Camping is not allowed in the hunt areas, but there are plenty of nearby campgrounds. Further information can be obtained from the National Park Service headquarters, located on Highway 90 West.

I have been asked to announce that the hunter safety course being offered by Gene Campbell is full, and he can no longer accept amy more applications. At this time, I don't know of any other such courses in our area.

Since it is not a requirement for hunting in Texas, there doesn't seem to be much interest in furnishing enough of these courses. The classes are taught by volunteers, so the number of classes offered is dependent upon having someone qualified to teach them

I THINK we should make the course mandatory. Twenty other states have. Youngsters, who receive the proper training, will be better and safer hunters now, and in the future.

Anyone wanting to do some channel cat fishing might talk to Gus Sanders of Midland. I don't know whether he will divulge any secrets, but I know he can bring in the catfish. Gus just recently returned from fishing down on the Rio Grande, and weighed in 18 channel cat, totaling over 100 pounds.

Pardee is survivor over grid, cancer as Chicago Bear coach

·By JOHN SCHULIAN The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Jack Pardee has been an Aggie, a Ram, a Redskin, a Blazer and a Bear. But most of all he has been a survivor.

He has survived cancer, George Allen, the World Football League and the youthful transgressions of the Chicago Bears.

If it weren't for the glory Pardee won as a linebacker in Los Angeles and Washington, his life would be the worst Aggie joke that ever came out of Texas A&M.

The Bears may have the solution for lifting the 40-year-old Pardee above tragicomedy; certainly they owe it to him after last season, when they spoiled his debut as a head coach in the National Football League with an underwhelming 4-10 record. Now the Bears are stronger and more savvy, the winners of four of five preseason contests. Even if they don't make the Super Bowl their private property this season, they are going to bruise the opposition.

It probably would be asking too

Doubleheader washed away

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Saturday's scheduled doubleheader between the Los Angeles Dodgers and the Atlanta Braves was cancelled due to rain, a spokesman for the Dodgers said.

It was only the fourth time since coming to Los Angeles in 1958 that the Dodgers have had to cancel a home game, and the third time this season. Friday night's game with the Braves was also rained out.

The clubs will try to squeeze in the missed games by playing two consecutive doubleheaders, on Sunday and Monday.

Sunday's probable starters are Doug Rau, 14-10, and Don Sutton, 18-9, for the Dodgers. Going to the mound for the Braves will be Frank La Corte, 2-9, and Phil Niekro, 14-11.

On Monday, the Dodgers' Rick Rhoden, 11-3, and Burt Hooton, 9-13, will go against Dick Ruthven, 13-14, and Roger Moret, 3-3, for the Braves.

much to expect Pardee to know how to react. What he has done is put his foot in his mouth, crepe-soled coaching shoe and all, which is no small trick for a normally tight-lipped Texan.

He accomplished this by suggesting that his athletes, particularly the easily overlooked linemen, would play better if they knew their families would be rewarded for good performances with trinkets like color television sets.

Johnny Carson would be overjoyed to have a monologue get as many yuks as Pardee's shoulder pad incentive plan has. Paul Harvey, the caustic wit of the Midwest, gleefully wondered whether the Bears would also give away their material possessions for inferior performances.

Pardee, a kindly, balding mesomorph with eyes of cornflower blue, has done little during the hubbub except grit his teeth and wait for it to die down. He is a survivor, remem-

For example, he had to think about getting back to the Rams. George Allen, who would show up as the team's head coach two years later and claim Pardee as his unofficial protege, would have liked that. 'Nobody works himself or his players harder than George," Pardee says.

ANNAPOLIS (AP) - An 18yard pass from quarterback Bert Kossup to split end Mark Twitty and a 25-yard burst off left tackle by fullback Jeff Greczyn gave Rutgers a 13-3 football victory over Navy Saturday.

Navy was leading 3-0 with about half a minute left in the first half when Kossup capped a 62-yard march by dropping the ball into Twitty's hands a couple of steps in front of the goal

The drive, which put the Scarlet Knights ahead to stay, was set up when Navy fullback Larry Klawinski had the ball jarred from his hands at about midfield. Rutgers defensive back Don Harris finally recovered the fumble at the Navy 38 after a mad scramble by both teams.

The Scarlet Knights added an insurance touchdown on the final play of the third quarter when Greczyn slipped through left tackle, bounced off one Navy defender and then raced into the end zone untouched.

The Midshipmen, who picked up only one first down in the first quarter, came alive the first time they got the ball in the second period.

"THIS IS the same Pittsburgh team, the same defense. They're the toughest. We know we'll have to beat them, maybe twice, to get to the Super Bowl, but it's no grudge match," says Oakland quarterback Ken Stabler.

The Raiders have good reason to treat this as a grudge match. The Steelers have beaten them the last two seasons in the American Conference title game, winning 16-10 last season on a frozen field in Pittsburgh.

Oakland has lost Tony Cline, Horace Jones and Art Thoms, three of last year's defensive line starters, plus fullback Mary Hubbard and a few others through preseason injuries. "People all over the country are writing us off because of injuries in the defensive line. I admit we've got problems right now, but I guarantee we're going to find the answers," said Raiders owner Al smile about going into their opener in Houston it's that they finished with a better preseason record than the Oilers. Tampa Bay managed to win one game.

But Houston defensive end Elvin Bethea is looking ahead. "We're not 0-6 anymore," he said. "We're 0-0.".

THE BUCS are also looking ahead - way ahead. "We have upgraded for the future even if it means downgrading for the present," Coach John McKay said of his accent on youth. "It will take a couple of weeks to get our new players into our system.

"We played competitively in the preseason. Now we want to be better after the 14th week of regular season than we are for the first week. There's no reason we can't be competitive this year."

Coach Jack Patera is likewise thinking optimistically as his Seahawks take on St. Louis after a 1-5 exhibition record. "We can't go out and play with the feeling that we're an expansion team," he said. "We never think we won't win because this is our first season. Instead, we're beautiful dreamers.

"In this league, there are good players and great ones. I think we have a lot of good players, and I don't know how many great ones. If you start with people with a right attitude. you will wind up with a winner. Whether that's in two years, two weeks or whatever, it will come.

BALTIMORE HOPES to continue its sensational string of regularseason victories, the last nine last year, which propelled them to the AFC East title. Steve Grogan hopes to show New England's fans that he can. fill the shoes of quarterback Jim Plunkett, gone to San Francisco. The Rams are the consensus pick to run away with the National Conference West crown, but the Rams will have to start against Atlanta without quarterback James Harris, out with a broken thumb. Ron Jaworski is his replacement

The Giants unveil their own new runner, Larry Csonka, and a revamped defense against injuryriddled Washington, Minnesota quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who aleardy owns a spate of NFL passing records, goes for a few more this year and hopes New Orleans' secondary will help him along.

The Jets, with New Coach Lou Holtz, is virtually a new squad, but Joe Namath is still around. And for Cleveland, Paul Warfield is back.

st 250 that when girls get to be 19 or 20, they begin to lose their enthusiasm for actual cheerleading. So I suggested six high-school squads to add more color and enthusiasm. "For many of these girls, cheering in front of all those people and on TV is one of the highlights of their lives. You ought to see their eyes when they walk into the Coliseum for the first time.

From the Rams' birth in 1946 until 1970, a baton-twirling group known as the Ramettes was their identification squad. Wearing Ram outfits, they were showcased at halftime. They assumed some rah-rah duties during the game. All without pay.

NOBODY IS sure exactly what killed the Ramettes. Some say it was the advent of women's lib and a new sophistication for the American female. Some say the Los Angeles area had become so spread out the girls could not get together to practice. Some talk of dissension and disenchantment with management.

Whatever, enthusiasm - and excellence - waned. "But having cheerleaders at a football game is something people take for granted," says Hibbard, who is paid to coordinate Ram cheerleading. "I'm sure if you asked most Ram fans after the game if they noticed the cheerleaders, they'd say no. But take them away, and believe me, they'd Gabe Bartold, Ram entertainment director, believes his is the toughest task in the NFL.

"Remember, this is Hollywood and the fans are very demanding - as quick to boo as to cheer," says Bartold, who gets between 50 and 100 calls after every home game critiquing his production. "They love the highschool groups. They've grown to expect the variation, the precision and the All-American pizzazz these girls give them Sunday after Sunday.

"SURE, WE could put together a group of showgirls like Dallas has you know, the gorgeous dolls with half their rear and front ends sticking out. But if they couldn't do any more than the Dallas girls did when they were here last January (he demonstrates with a loose two-step) they'd get booed off the field."

But at home and on the road, the Cowboy "cheerleaders" are big time. The 500, aged 19-23, who try out for 32 spots may not be too interested in leading cheers. But they are still attracted by pro football players and post-season career opportunities.

"YES, WE'VE done away with the meganhone bit," says Jim Skinner, the Cowboys' director of entertainment, 'fand the response from our fans have been unbelievable. Why, there's more action on the sidelines (where the girls are performing) than on the field.

Hearings scheduled on highway projects

ODESSA - Two public hearings on major highway projects in the Midland-Odessa area will be held Wednesday and Thursday, according to the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

The first hearing is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Midland City Hall council chambers. Bill W. Jones, highway department public affairs officer, said the session is to discuss development of a north arterial loop road around Midland's urbanized area.

The proposed route is to extend from the junction of FM 1369 and U.S. 20 west of Midland along the western, northern and eastern edge of the city to intersect with U.S. 20 east of Midland.

Jones said the project, requested by both Midland city and county officials, contemplates construction of a four-lane divided facility throughout the limits of the project and will be developed in various stages. Access to the ultimate route will be controlled by placing interchanges at intersections with highway routes and arterial streets with continuous frontage roads throughout the limits of the project

A minimum of 300 feet of right of way will be needed for development of the project, which will generally follow routes of other existing facilities, Jones added.

BEJACKIE STONE and ABTHUR EVERETT

YORK (AP) — In the nearly ers since she was born, Joanne shold seemed forever destined to just another face in the crowd, nefly glimpsed, quickly forgotten. "She has been a quiet child since irth," recalled her mother, Cargaret Bashold, back in Kirtland, hio, a suburb of Cleveland. Joanne graduated from the Kirand High School in 1970 and Prinipal Raymond Jorze remembered r as "very quiet, serious, inospective, an average student, massuming." That was how Joanne led her life: quiet, reserved, serious, selfufficient, not one to make friends, oticed fleetingly if at all. A neighbor ound her on one occasion "sad, but inging a little song.

Then, in a moment of horror on a unny Labor Day morning last week, Foanne Bashold's carefully knit cloak anonymity was ripped aside. Her ixday-old infant daughter, home from the hospital only 12 hours, was igrn apart and partially devoured by ier starving pet German shepherd. canne had obtained the dog for rotection.

"This thing happened because of a whole series of tragic events." said awyer Elliot Cook, assigned to Joanne's case by the Legal Aid Society after she was charged with riminal negligence in the baby's eath.

Joanne Bashold was born Oct. 12. $51, into a Roman Catholic family in Reveland, one of five sisters. In Cirtland, she grew into a pretty, brown-haired girl about 5 feet, 2 inthes tall.

She left home at the age of 21 and ame to New York, arriving Jan. 14,

"She wanted to be on her own hat's why she went to New York.' aid her mother.

Like a million young girls before er, Joanne's arrival in New York went unnoticed. She reportedly corked as a chambermaid in a Setskill mountain summer resort for out a year, then moved to anhattan.

Last October, Joanne got a temdrary job through a Seventh Avenue ecement agency. And in that same onth she became pregnant.

She was to tell welfare workers ter that she did not know the name the baby's father. She did not tell em the child had been conceived in course of a rape. She later told awvers that she was in ct impre Jacoby a rapist. 'She wanted that baby very much,' id Cook. "Even after she had been ped, she chose not to have an ortion, but to have the child." Last May moved into a $120-a-onth two-room kitchenette apartent at 319 E. 105th St. in a Spanish arlem block that police called one of worst in the area. She lived on the top floor of a Rapidated six-story tenement, its allways spotted with dried human crement, its fetid air reeking of fine. In her apartment was a wooden dding chair and a brown rug, the um total of her furnishings.

When asked why she lived in such a un-down area, Joanne was quoted as aying it was the best she could af-

It was in May also that Joanne quit r temporary job because of her dvancing pregnancy. She tried to get pemployment insurance, but was arrived away as ineligible because she quit the job.

Last June 21, Joanne applied for elfare and, after a week's instigation and verification of her egnancy, she became another latistic among 1.1 million relief ients.

Joanne was given an initial check r $149.80. Subsequently, she was lotted $270 a month, about $50 above e average because of her regnancy

In explaining the failure of the epartment of Social Services to llow up on Joanne's case at least to extent of providing her with a crib lat might have saved her child's life, spokesman said: "It's against the law for a case

orker to visit a client's home cause of the civil liberties issue. less the client requests it. "Now, after her hospitalization or fore, she could have come into a inter — we haven't seen her since one 28 — and said: 'Look, I'm down my luck. I've spent money getting eady to have a baby, or whatever. I seed a social worker to come visit me Look at my surroundings and see at my needs are.' A case worker recommend more furniture."

But apparently Joanne was unlling to push herself forward, even her hour of greatest need. "She didn't make friends," recalled

'I told her that if she had any pain anything to tell me and I'd call the lice for her. Then I asked her if I suid do anything for her and she said . She was really tired and worried." Mother neighbor, teenage Gloria mehesi, recalled of Joanne:

"She used to come home with her eyes all red, her head hanging down. She looked sad. I never talked to her, and I never saw anyone visit her. Sometimes she'd take the dog out. Sometimes she would come back sad, but singing a little song.'

The dog was Joanne's four-monthold, 15-pound female German shepherd, with whom she shared her mean apartment. She'd gotten it from the SPCA when she moved to East 105th Street, hoping it would provide her protection.

"Joanne did not abuse the dog," a Legal Aid source said. "But she was not able to provide sufficient food."

Her time at hand, Joanne entered Bellevue Hospital Sept. 1 and later that day bore a daughter, Carra, described by the hospital as "a normal, full term baby girl.'

Meanwhile, the dog was left behind in the apartment, unfed.

After the baby was born, Joanne was interviewed in the hospital by a social worker, who asked if she needed anything. She thought a bit and told the woman: "Well, I could use a crib for the baby."

Arrangements were launched to obtain a crib through Catholic Charities.

A hospital spokesman said the baby appeared to have jaundice, an interruption of the body's normal production and distribution of bile. But medical experts said this is common in new-born infants due to immaturity in liver function. It is a condition said to correct itself usually during the first week of life.

By last Sunday, Bellevue spokesman James Walsh said 'Joanne was getting itchy to leave.''

He said the baby was being tested to determine if the jaundice might present a serious problem and that the results still were being processed at 4:30 p.m., normally the deadline for discharge of patients.

Joanne was asked to leave the baby overnight, Walsh said, but insisted on taking it home with her Sunday. He said she was told she would have to wait for the jaundice test results. when they came back negative she was told she could leave with the baby.

By the time, the 5 p.m. closing hour for the property room had passed. Joanne's possessions were locked up for the night. Among them, according to Walsh, was $100 in cash. Joanne said she'd come back next day and retrieve them.

Joanne breast-fed her baby at the hospital, then had dinner herself. An aide got her a cab, and Walsh said the hospital gave her $5 for fare. The infant was wrapped in hospital clothing and a blanket.

"The nurses' described Joanne as a shy, withdrawn girl, but she appeared very self-sufficient," Walsh said. "If we suspect a woman will not take care of her baby, or will neglect her baby. we are in constant contact with the Bureau of Child Welfare..'

A Legal Aid source presented a different picture, saying:

'Joanne expected to stay in the hospital until at least Tuesday. At 5 p.m. Sunday she was told she would be leaving the hospital. They said they had no reason to keep her but she couldn't get her property. Joanne never once indicated that she wanted to leave the hospital. When she left she had $6 with her.

"Why would anyone want to leave a place where they had good care, a bed to sleep in, food, and go back to an empty tenement with no food or furniture, knowing she and her baby would have to sleep on the floor? Joanne was told to leave the hospital."

At any rate, mother and baby went back to East 105th Street and that night slept on the rug on the floor. Nearby, starving, without food for six days, its ribs clearly visible, the Corman shenherd spent a restless FOR RECYCLING 15¢ PER POUND

At 7 a.m. Labor Day, Joanne told police, she set out for Bellevue to pick up her possessions. She said she left the baby behind because it was a cool morning and she was mindful of the child's jaundiced condition. She put the infant on the rug on the floor, with the dog nearby

"From everything I've heard, I really believe that she left the baby with the dog for protection," said

Bellevue's Walsh. But Manhattan Dist. Atty. Robert Morgenthau was to say later: "She could have taken the baby to the hospital with her. Other parents take their children with them when they don't have someone to watch the child.

Joanne said the Bellevue property office had not opened when she got there and that she returned home, arriving about 8:30 a.m. after borrowing 50 cents in bus fare from a policeman she encountered.

Inside the apartment, Joanne was confronted with a scene of horror. The baby's mutilated body lay on the floor, parts of its missing, and blood dripped from the dog's muzzle.

The mother ran down the six flights of stairs and located a telephone. The first response was a police radio signal 10-54, denoting a person in need of medical attention. This was followed by the terse report that a child had been eaten by a dog.

One of the first officers on the scene was Bill Connolly, a big, red-haired, freckled cop with bright eyes and a quick smile.

"What happened?" Connolly and his partner, Al Dwyer, asked Joanne when they met her outside the apartment.

"The dog ate my baby." replied.
