For Lam Mau, flying is more than a thrill and, someday, a livelihood. It's a lingering love.

Vietnamese pilot yearns to fly again

By ED TODD
R-T Staff Writer

ANDREWS — Lam Mau doesn't do much flying these days. But he's making a comeback, unlike many of his comrades-in-arms who did not survive the Vietnam War and its treacherously swift aftermath. "In Vietnam," he said, "we had to fly everyday." He was a jet fighter pilot for the Republic of (South) Vietnam.

Today, and for awhile yet to come, he's an uncommonly common worker at the Kirby-West vacuum cleaner manufacturing plant here.

Tomorrow, he's planning on piloting either a prop, prop-jet, or pure jet airplane for a business, corporation or a carrier service.

Meanwhile, he makes his living and supports a family by doing polishing work on parts at the Kirby plant. And he's investing part of his earnings in taking commercial flying lessons from Alex Shaffer, who runs the Andrews Flying Service at the county airport here.

"He'll be a real good pilot for somebody," Shaffer said with certainty.

Right now, the 33-year-old Lam is honing up on flight theory and regulations for his Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) exams.

And he's flying one of Shaffer's single-engine Pipers in again getting used to flying the basic aircraft.

After all, Lam, as a cadet, learned about flying in a light aircraft in Vietnam in the early 1960s. Later, he graduated to the subsonic Cessna A-37, a twin-jet fighter which the South Vietnam Air Force used in bombing and strafing attacks.

And he's accustomed to the quickness, speed and thrust of jets.

"It's real hard . . . to step down" from a jet and its instant responses to a light, prop-driven airplane and its drawn-out responses and slowness, Shaffer commented.

"It's kind of like driving a Cadillac and then getting on a bicycle," he said.

But it took Lam only a couple of hours (or less) of flying time to, again, get used to flying the basic aircraft.

Prior to signing up with Shaffer for some commercial flying lessons about six weeks ago, Lam had not been at the controls of an aircraft for 1½ years.

And his last stint at the controls of a jet was a lifesaving act, literally.

That was on the last day of April 1975, when Communist takeover of South Vietnam was being completed. The United States had already withdrawn its forces and support from the nation. Eisenhower's domino theory was becoming reality.

Fighter pilots like Lam were top-listed for execution by the North Vietnamese.

"(Nevertheless) I couldn't leave Vietnam, my family," Lam said. But he did.

Those pilots that could scramble to the few remaining A-37s at Saigon. Several, five or six, crammed themselves into a cockpit built for one and took off.

Lam's love of life sought survival. "I run to the airplane," he recalled, "start the engine(s), and get the backfire — no power. So, I run to another airplane."

Lam and two or three other fliers climbed into the cockpit of the attack-fighter, and wound up the two engines. But, for one reason or another, the canopy couldn't be closed.

Lam was stranded and sure to die, perhaps before a firing squad. "Everybody (was) hurried, scared, even me," Lam said.

But, on a chance, he hopped back over to the plane that he had first tried to escape in. This time, instead of backfiring and losing power, the engines began roaring and screaming. Lam and another pilot-friend took off. About an hour and 320 miles later, they found sanctuary at the U.S. B-52 base south of Bangkok, Thailand.

"I think I was the last one out," Lam said of his squadron's pilots who made the quick-paced exodus.

He was safe but worried. "I'm very sad," he recalled. "I think my wife, maybe she died." Almost.

The day before, Lam's wife, Vu

Kim Anh, and their three children, too, found refuge. But just barely.

Rocket fire was coming in on the air base where air transports loaded with refugees were taking off. But Lam's family missed out on the initial evacuation.

Soon, however, she and the three children (now, ages 8, 6 and 3½) were aboard an aging but reliable C-47.

But in his haste, the Vietnamese pilot of that twin-engine transport had failed to remove pins that locked the ailerons in place when the plane was grounded.

The overloaded plane lumbered down the runway, got airborne but not for long. The pilot had no turning control.

"So the airplane crashed right on the runway," Lam said. The pilot was killed.

"And my wife . . . wanted to kill herself. (She was) so afraid, so

Pension for Ford $100,000

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Ford will receive a total pension of about $100,000 a year after he retires from the White House, an aide said Wednesday.

Ford, who lost his bid for a full four-year term in Tuesday's close election, will receive $63,000 a year as a former President under the Presidential Pension Act, Dep. White House Press Secretary John Carlson said.

In addition, Carlson said, Ford will be eligible for a further pension derived from his contributions to the congressional retirement system during his 25 years of service as a Michigan congressman.

Fund drive accumulates $491,374

United Way volunteers reported a total of $491,374 or 73 per cent of the goal of $671,000 has been promised or collected at noon today during the fourth progress report of the campaign.

The target goal for the date was 80 per cent, making this the first report meeting in which the total has fallen short of the projected amount.

Chairman Ron Schwisow challenged his team of volunteers to try harder now that the easy money is in.

Midland National Bank received the merit award for having more than 50 per cent Fair Share giving by employees. President Tony Martin received the award.

In addition, Charles Wiesepepe of HNG and E.E. Hagen and Edward Herd of Chevron accepted awards for their companies for having 100 per cent employee participation. Chevron employees had a 42 per cent increase in sharing over last year and HNG recorded a 25.6 per cent increase.

The United Way Hall of Fame award for highest achievement toward his section goal was Jack Moore of state and local employees.

Ford's transition unsure

WASHINGTON (AP) — For Jerry Ford, like Jimmy Carter, it is a time for readjustment.

But, while Carter and his aides begin a transitional period to set up the Democrat's White House tenure, the plans of the man who will move out of the Oval Office in January remain uncertain, according to his spokesman.

President Ford is planning to take a week-long vacation in Palm Springs, Calif., and will probably leave Washington on Sunday, according to his press secretary, Ron Nessen.

Ford conceded defeat at 11:04 a.m. EST Wednesday in a telephone call to Carter in Plains and also sent a telegram to the Democrat, pledging cooperation in the transition period.

Ford's hoarse throat prevented him from carrying on much of a conversation, Nessen said, so White House chief of staff Richard Cheney, on an extension telephone, read the text of the telegram to the former Georgia governor, now president-elect.

Gerald Ford

The talk, the press secretary said, was "warm and friendly."

Then, just after noon, the President and his family appeared in the White House press room where Ford, his voice hoarse from campaigning, turned over the microphone to his wife, whom he described as "the real spokesman for the family."

Mrs. Ford, teary-eyed, read a statement saying Ford "wants to thank all those thousands of people who worked so hard on his behalf. . . . The President urges all Americans to join him in giving your united support to President-elect Carter as he prepares to assume his new responsibilities."

Then she read the "Dear Jimmy" telegram.

"It is apparent now that you have won our long and intense struggle for the presidency. I congratulate you on your victory . . ." she read.

"Although there will continue to be disagreements over the best means to use in pursuing our goals, I want to assure you that you will have my complete and wholehearted support as you take the oath of office this January."

Ford, said Nessen, was "certainly disappointed" by the election results, but he quoted one aide who said the President seemed "to feel a lot better than we do."

Prices higher again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher costs for automobiles, fuel and other industrial goods boosted wholesale prices by six-tenths of a per cent in October, marking the second consecutive big monthly increase, the government said today.

The rise was smaller than the nine-tenths of a per cent increase in September, but still was the third-sharpest monthly increase this year and by no means good news for the incoming Carter administration.

Only a decline in agricultural prices kept the wholesale price index from rising more sharply.

The Labor Department said industrial prices surged 1 per cent higher last month, the largest one-month increase since last October when they rose 1.2 per cent. These prices have continued rising at a rapid rate since last June.

Economists are usually more concerned about price trends for industrial commodities as an indication of the underlying inflationary pressures in the economy since they are less volatile than farm prices.

Farm prices were down 1.2 per cent in October after rising 1.5 per cent in September. They had declined in both July and August. Prices for processed foods and feeds also dropped in October, declining seven-tenths of a per cent.

The Wholesale Price Index stood at 185.2 in October, meaning that goods selling for $100 at wholesale in 1967 now cost $185.20. Wholesale price changes usually are reflected, after a lag, in consumer prices, although the linkage is not precise.

October's six-tenths of a per cent increase, adjusted for seasonal factors, translate into an annual rate of 7.4 per cent. In absolute terms, wholesale prices rose three-tenths of a per cent last month.

Garden City is up to its ears in Lions (Clubbers) these days

GARDEN CITY—Now that the Republican Party has worked its inexorable will in Midland County, I suppose it's again all right to say that my friend Bob Corley tipped me off to what turned out to be a delightful experience last weekend in this quiet hamlet halfway between everywhere in Oestexas.

It was the first-ever carnival sponsored by the fledgling Garden City Lions Club, and as I headed home late Saturday night it was apparent that the event would be termed a roaring success even by the inveterate roasters of the world's biggest men's service club.

Actually, Garden City is not really big enough to support the professional carnival that augmented the Lions' food and game booths, but Jimmy Hoggard, who owns the Great Southwest Shows booked out of Kermitt, told me he was glad to give the young Lions a hand and expects to return next year. (He works a lot of towns in this area with what he calls his "Sunday school" show of rides and displays and booths of chance.)

The Lions and their families constituted a big slice of Saturday's crowd, since they have a fairly incredible membership around 40 men from the small city and its territory, and they were all enthusiastic bingo players, dart throwers, ring tossers, and chili eaters. (Lion Bennie Thomason's bowls of red were aromatic and spicy but sufficiently mild to require a dash of Louisiana hot sauce for Tertingua-sated palates.)

And Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. Pete McCain and their son Carmon and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanson and son David—all up to their ample ears in Lionism—were on loan from Midland's Southside club to help improve business.

Hubert Frerich is president of the newest club, assisted by Vice-Presidents Jack Livingston, Wayne Cypert and Richard Light, Secretary John Jones, Tail Twister Larry Wheat, Lion Tamer Larry Bradford, and Directors Charles Besley, Alex Fry, Wilburn Bedner and Roy Flournoy.

The word is that Garden City tried Lionism years ago and it failed, but I'd say, from the enthusiasm I saw on all hands last weekend, they're off and running on a program that will bring many good things to their pleasant hometown while giving the men themselves a good time.

There could be more. Lion Travis Pate is trying to put together an emergency service project for the area, and I'll bet they pull that off too.

Resort city parties over gambling win

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — This fading resort city, permitted by state voters to stake its future on casino gambling, is celebrating as if it had already hit the jackpot. But oddsmaker Jimmy "The Greek" Snyder rates the chances of financial success as "no cinch."

On Tuesday, New Jersey voters approved a constitutional amendment making Atlantic City, home of the famous Boardwalk and the Miss America Pageant, the nation's only area outside Nevada to allow casino gaming.

Snyder sounded one of several notes of caution as city residents gave a chorus of hurrahs. He predicted that gambling would spread as other areas try to cash in, too — and he warned that running a gambling house is no sure thing unless you know what you're doing.

Meanwhile, New Jersey Gov. Brendan Byrne said he considers careful supervision of gambling more important than setting it up quickly. Promoters said it would be at least a year before gambling starts. And a prominent banker warned of a wave of speculation on property.

Caution was hardly the general mood, however, as hotels threw parties here and bars served up free drinks.

"I foresee Atlantic City once again becoming the greatest seashore resort in the world," said Mayor Joseph Lazarow.

"We're going to rebuild this town," vowed John Rich, president of a bricklayers union, many of whose members have been unemployed. "The skyline will change dramatically," predicted lawyer-banker James Cooper.

Jimmy "The Greek," interviewed in New York, saw it differently.

"Now that the rolling stone has been let go," Snyder said, "I'm just wondering how many other states are going to pick it up."

"Pandora's door is open... What's going to stop the places up in the Catskills (a resort area just north of New York City) from doing it?"

Atlantic City hopes to capitalize on the gambling market among tens of millions of people who live on the East Coast and are unwilling to go to Nevada.

But Snyder pointed to New York City, 100 miles north of here, as an area of potential competition. On the day the amendment was approved here, voters in New York approved a more limited measure allowing religious and philanthropic groups to raise money with so-called "Las Vegas nights."

"Everybody and his brother is going to be running a Las Vegas night," Snyder predicted. "They're going to have to open schools for gambling."

Rhodesian talks breaking down

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Rhodesian conference on black rule settled down to verbal sniping and technical talks today, with no progress toward agreement in sight.

Prime Minister Ian Smith left for home on Wednesday after telling a British television interviewer that "some of the rather stupid black politicians" were wasting the conference's time.

"We've had some stupid puerile behavior from some of the delegates," he said.

"We don't care what Smith thinks. His presence is not essential," said a spokesman for black leaders Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Nkomo and Mugabe contend that Britain, despite the Rhodesian whites' successful declaration of independence 11 years ago, should take the government away from them and hand it over to the blacks.

Foreign Minister Pieter van der Byl, left in charge of Smith's delegation, said no progress can be made until the four rival black factions stop "squabbling" with the whites and with each other.

Van der Byl was scheduled to meet black leaders today for technical talks.

In an effort to keep the talks going, British conference chairman Ivor Richard proposed the delegations skip such substantive issues as when black rule would be established and discuss instead the technicalities involved in transferring power from the 278,000 whites to the 6.4 million blacks.

The blacks are demanding to take over by next September, while Smith is holding out for a two-year transition period during which the whites would retain a veto in the government and control of the army and police.

"I am leaving because nothing is taking place," Smith said in the television interview. "It is procrastination and people are walking around the problem instead of getting to grips with the problem."

However, on his arrival in Salisbury, the Rhodesian capital, Smith said it would be premature to say the talks had no chance of success.

He also said suggestions that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger should be asked to take part in the conference were premature.

"I think he would feel he would want to get some of the groundwork cleared before intervening himself," Smith said.

Meanwhile, Rhodesian government security officials said four 122mm rockets fired from Mozambique hit Umtali, near the border 135 miles southwest of Salisbury, late Wednesday afternoon. They did little damage and injured no one, the officials said.

Rhodesian troops retaliated with mortars, and the rocket fire stopped immediately, the sources reported. Mozambique is the chief base for black Rhodesian guerrillas fighting white rule. The bombardment presumably was in response to raids by Rhodesian commandos across the border last weekend. Security sources claimed the raiders killed several hundred guerrillas and destroyed seven of their camps.

Gammage named close victor

DALLAS (AP) — Confusion in the tabulation of final unofficial returns in the 22nd Congressional District race were resolved today and Democratic challenger Bob Gammage appeared to be the winner over Republican incumbent Ron Paul by 94 votes, a spokesman for the Texas Election Bureau said.

combining the total district vote and TEB was interpreting it as Harris County's vote only, then again adding the other three counties.

Paul said Wednesday he plans to demand a recount of the ballots.

The 1977 Texas Legislature will be mostly white, male and conservative Democrat but Tuesday's election did boost the number of black, Mexican American, female and Republican lawmakers.

Labor also claimed an increase in its "friends" in the House.

Conservatives will maintain strong working majorities in both chambers and hold top leadership positions in the 65th legislature that convenes Jan. 11.

Gains by Mexican Americans, Republicans and blacks resulted chiefly from a bill passed last year under federal court order, dividing nine populous counties into single-member House districts.

Mexican Americans picked up one Senate seat, for a total of three, with the election of Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, a liberal who crusaded as a representative for better state mental hospitals and schools for the retarded.

Rep. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, another liberal, replaced retiring Sen. D. Roy Harrington.

Otherwise, the 31-member Senate's composition will remain the same.

Turnover in the House was slightly below average, with 38 new members elected Tuesday. Only one incumbent was defeated—Rep. J. L. Briscoe of Houston, a Republican chosen in a special election this year.

Eleven more House members were whipped in the primaries.

Changes in the composition of the House include:

—An increase of four Mexican Americans, from 13 to 17.

—The addition of four blacks, raising their numbers from eight to 12.

—An increase in Republican strength from the 16 members they had in the 1975 session to 18 in 1977. (Briscoe had replaced Democratic Rep. Joe Pentony, who resigned to run for the state Senate.

—A net gain of three women, for a total of 10. One of the seven women in the 1975 House, Kay Bailey of Houston, resigned earlier this year to accept appointment to the National Transportation Safety Board.

The four additional Mexican Americans came from Corpus Christi, El Paso, Lubbock and Beaumont-Port Arthur, where countywide election of representatives gave way to neighborhood districts.

Republicans made their gains in Tarrant County and Lubbock, where television sports and weather announcer Joe Robbins defeated stockbroker Roy Ward. Expected increases in Travis and El Paso counties failed to materialize.

Two of the four new black members, airline pilot Al Price of Beaumont and Leonard Briscoe of Fort Worth, won in newly carved individual districts. The present Tarrant and Jefferson County delegations are all white and all Democrat.

A labor leader said, "our friends (in the House) increased from 59 to 66."

But he said 66 votes could not be mustered for any attempt to repeal the law forbidding labor and management to negotiate contracts requiring employees to join the unions that represent them.

Labor issues include bigger workmen's compensation benefits—an issue where plaintiffs' lawyers, who get a share of such benefits join forces with the AFL-CIO.

With no prospect at all for legislation—Gov. Dolph Briscoe said he will veto any new taxes—there appear to be few real liberal-conservative issues.

The biggest question will be how to divide up the estimated $2.6 billion in windfall tax revenue resulting from inflation and from higher oil and gas prices.

Medical malpractice insurance will be a holdover issue from 1975, with a majority vote to be passed forward with a 101-85 majority.

Dolly's singing stilled

(NASHVILLE, Tenn., AP)—Dolly Parton said she will make a comeback by singing at the county fair this year, but has a second throat ailment and has been forbidden to sing for the rest of the year, her record company says.

Miss Parton's shows canceled all over the country until next year, RCA records said Tuesday. The company said her physician recommended that she cancel her appearances and advised her to talk only when necessary for the next two weeks.

A spokesman for her booking agency, Top Billing, said she will miss about 25 concerts.

Yarbrough blasts bar leaders, vows to serve six-year term

HOUSTON (AP)—Donald Yarbrough, referring to the leaders of the State Bar of Texas as "ego-jerks," says he will be sworn-in as an associate justice of the State Supreme Court and "serve every day of my six-year term."

Yarbrough, defendant in at least 15 lawsuits including one to remove his license to practice law, said Wednesday, "I expect to look up during those swearing-in ceremonies and see hordes of opposition like Attila the Hun. But you better believe I will serve. The legal establishment has given their best, they took their best shot, and I beat them."

Yarbrough received more than 1.22 million votes in Tuesday's general election, compared to about 415,000 for two write-in candidates.

The 35-year-old Houston attorney was the surprise winner over Civil Appeals Court Judge Charles Burrow of San Antonio in the Democratic primary. There was no Republican candidate.

State District Court Judge Sam Houston of Denton and veteran attorney Tom Corance of Houston entered the race as write-in candidates. They were soundly beaten.

Lorraine told The AP, "I think it is a pity the governor of Texas (Dolph Briscoe) urged voters to cast a straight Democratic ticket, including Don Yarbrough. It's a pity Mayor Fred Hofheinz of Houston urged a straight Democratic vote, including Don Yarbrough."

Lorraine said, "The write-in enterprise was doomed from the day that Sam Houston announced. I decided he wasn't ready for Supreme Court and so I stayed in the race."

Houston said, "I undertook this race as a matter of duty to give the voters of Texas another chance and another choice. I am afraid the result will cause the state and the Supreme Court quite a bit of grief."

Many political observers said Yarbrough won the primary because of similarity of names with Donald Yarbrough, a long-time Texas Democratic political leader and with former U.S. Sen. Ralph Yarborough.

The State Bar filed a lawsuit against Yarbrough two weeks ago seeking his disbarment and outlining 52 grievances, including alleged acts of professional misconduct and eight violations of state and federal laws.

Of the pending lawsuits, most of them involving business transactions and debts, Yarbrough said, "I've already written them, and some of them are in court. Most of them are for money. I had to pay a lawyer $2,000 to get me out of them."

During the campaign, Yarbrough said, "The experiences I have had, I have endured, have filled me with a burning passion and sense of resolve to serve the people of this state as they elected associate justice not the hapless candidate of the legal establishment."

"I made it my mind that I would win every hour of the year term."

He said, "There's a message in more than a million votes. Lawyers are spending money doing surveys to see if the problem is that they are afraid of me. They don't know who I am, but they are afraid. I have a right to serve the people as they have elected me."

Even if Yarbrough is disbarred, he said, "I would not be a write-in candidate for another year. I would not be a write-in candidate for another year. I would not be a write-in candidate for another year."

Rainbow future unsure

INDIANOLA, Iowa (AP)—Twelve-year-old Michelle Palmer has been installed as a member of the International Order of the Rainbow. But whether she and 5,000 other Iowa members still belong to the national service organization remains in doubt.

Michelle's admission caused national officials to expel Iowa's 136 Rainbow assemblies because of an "unwritten law" banning blacks, according to one state official of the Mason-affiliated group. Michelle's mother is black, her father white.

But national officials later said the assemblies were only suspended, not expelled. They blamed the situation on the Indianola chapter's failure to follow correct procedure in nominating Michelle for membership.

Dwaine Palmer said his daughter was installed "without incident" at a ceremony Wednesday. Reporters and photographers were barred from the installation at the Indianola Masonic Lodge, and police were called to keep them off the Masons' property.

Herbert Groot, supreme inspector of the Rainbow Girls in McAlester, Okla., was unavailable for comment on the installation.

"Pretty soon there'll be another state losing its charter," she said, "then another and another, and before long, the Rainbow will be all gone."

Hawaii exerted its influence in 1976 race

WASHINGTON (AP)—Neither President Ford nor President-elect Jimmy Carter bothered to campaign in Hawaii. But as it turned out, their battle was close enough so that a few thousand votes in the islands might have given the election to Ford.

As the returns continued trickling in Wednesday, Carter held a substantial margin in the national popular vote, 40,276,040 to 38,532,630. In percentages, Carter had 51 to Ford's 48. But in the electoral college, it was much closer.

Carter's victories in 22 states, including Hawaii, won him 272 electoral votes, two more than the 270 needed for an absolute majority.

His margin of victory in Hawaii was 7,300 votes. If Hawaii's four electoral votes had swung to Ford, Carter would have been stopped two short of a majority. The nation would now be agonizing over the contents of some absentee ballots in Oregon and Ohio.

Oregon and Ohio are so close that no winners have been declared as of early today. In Oregon, Ford leads Carter for the six electoral votes by 185,300 to 484,643, or a margin of 662 votes. The final results may be known by the end of the week, when absentee ballots are tallied.

Ohio's 25 electoral votes are leaning toward Carter. He has 2,000,035 popular votes to 1,992,460 for Ford, according to complete, but unofficial, returns. But those results could change in the final canvass, which will not be held for two weeks.

Although the elections were equally close in other states, many states count their absentee ballots before the election, so the final results are known sooner.

Ford counted several fingernail victories in his list of 26 states and 235 electoral votes. He won by 130,000 votes out of 7.5 million cast in California; by 13,000 of 1.25 million cast in Iowa; by 3,000 of 460,000 cast in Maine; by 57,000 of 2.9 million cast in New Jersey; by 5,000 of 300,000 cast in South Dakota.

Some of Carter's close victories, aside from Hawaii, were in Wisconsin, 34,000 out of 2 million cast; and Mississippi, 12,000 of 735,000 cast.

The election turnout was either high or low, depending on the statistics used. About 79.4 million voted, the highest figure ever. In 1972, the turnout was 77.6 million; in 1968 it was 73 million; and in 1964, it was 70 million.

As a percentage of the voting age population however, the turnout was low, continuing a decline that began in 1964.

Only about 53 per cent of the voting age population went to the polls, compared with the record high 62.8 per cent which voted in 1960. The figure dropped to 55 per cent by 1972.

President, successor seek respite

(Continued from Page 1) called Carter in Plains to congratulate him. But Ford supporters said the President's voice was so hoarse from his campaign efforts that his chief of staff, Richard Cheney, had to relay the message. Carter, in a statement from Plains, said, "I deeply appreciate the President's call and his gracious expression of congratulations and cooperation. I expressed my admiration for him and for the strong, well-planned and effective campaign that he ran." Carter said he would take full advantage of Ford's offer of cooperation during the transition period.

In Washington, his voice barely above a whisper, Ford told reporters at the White House that in the 78 days until Carter's inauguration on Jan. 20 "there's a lot of work to do and we're going to keep on doing it." White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford plans to continue pursuing an arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union as well as peace initiatives in the Middle East and Southern Africa.

Sixth grade students excitement of three-ring circus

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

The excitement of the Big Top, complete with clowns, acrobats, animals and a parade, was created at Travis Elementary School this week as sixth graders presented a three-ring circus to their schoolmates. The 90 sixth graders at Travis, under the direction of art and music teacher Carol Hall, produced and performed the circus. The students performed in the "center ring" while slides of preparatory activities and the group's trip to the Shrine Circus were were flashed on the other two rings. The circus, like all such events, began with a glorious parade, featuring the performers and a live pony. Some of the students made realistic lions and monkeys for the animal acts and the clowns delighted the third, fourth and fifth graders who assembled Monday to see the show. The other students at Travis saw the show Tuesday. Friday, the students will present their circus to elementary school music teachers at the Texas State Teachers Association district meeting. Next week, sixth graders at other schools are scheduled to see the show. Curtis Barron caused a few grimaces with his pantomime of the problems a person can have with chewing gum. It wound up in his hair and under his shoe but, unafraid, the determined clown kept chewing to the end. Mrs. Hall said he designed the act himself. Cheryl Olson and Quentin Rideout choreographed their own musical number, too. Choreography for the other acts was done by Mrs. Hall. Tumbler, a balance beam ballerina, a human pyramid, expert rope-jumpers and several songs presented by the sixth grade chorus rounded out the program which met with the universal approval of teachers and students alike. Mrs. Hall reported.

students a behind-the-scenes look at what goes into producing a circus. Mrs. Hall said many of the children had never seen a circus before. In compositions written about their experiences, the students agreed that they had enjoyed and learned from the preparations. "We all have fun working together and doing acts together. I feel that ours will be the best circus in the world," Cheryl Olson wrote. "I know that it is hard for all the people in the circus to get their acts together. I know that it costs a whole lot of money to get all of the stuff," wrote Lisa Hopper. Several of the students had good things to say about Mrs. Hall. "I hope the circus will be real good, for other schools will say Mrs. Hall is a great teacher," Darlene Hand speculated. Dianna Sanders said Mrs. Hall deserved the credit for the production for putting it together and the principal for cooperating. Learning units furnished by Ringling Brothers Barnum and Bailey Circus were used to coordinate the circus theme with other classes. But the primary benefit of the circus production, according to Mrs. Hall, was the pride instilled in the students. She said the teachers have been amazed at the change in some of the students as a result of their being able to be proud of the job they have done. They also learned to work together, she said. Kelly Brooks, who was the show's magician, said he had learned "that you have to work in a group to perform."

The students became so interested in the project that they checked out all of the school library's books on the circus and many of them went to the public library for the first time to seek material about the circus, Mrs. Hall said. The history of the circus, which dates back to 1776, was covered in social studies classes, circus stories were included in the reading classes, games and drills in language arts classes and the students even did related math problems. During the actual production, the only adult involved was Mrs. Hall who played the piano. The students served as stage hands and coordinated the entrances and exits themselves. "Everybody has cooperated 150 per cent," Mrs. Hall said.

Vietnamese pilot yearns to fly again

(Continued from Page 1) scared," Lam said. She and the children groped around. "She wanted to get out of the (air base) . . . but she didn't know where the main gate was," Lam said. Fate intervened. She spotted a chopper. And that whirly bird flew her, the kids, and other refugees to an awaiting aircraft carrier. They sailed to Guam and to a massive, but temporary, refugee camp. There, by chance, Lam and his family were united. He sighted his wife and children just after they had disembarked the carrier.

And I saw my wife and children walking around. . . They (had) just landed from the carrier. Lucky. I was surprised," Lam said. He and the other fighter pilots had been flown to Guam earlier, on May 1. From Guam, Lam and his family were shipped to a refugee encampment in Florida. There, an Orlando businessman "sponsored" Lam, and hired him for $1.60 an hour as a gardener and maintenance man for a 200-unit apartment complex. Lam was stalemated. So, he trekked to Andrews, but not by chance. His nephew, Nguyen Tu Duc, who had been holed up at the Vietnamese refugee camp at Fort Chaffee, Ark., and some others there landed jobs at the Kirby plant at Andrews. (Andrews had a labor problem. To cure that, the city's Industrial stationed at Webb AFB, Big Spring, where he underwent training and conditioning in the altitude chamber. He was getting ready to learn to fly. Foundation sought laborers from among the refugees, Shaffer explained.) Lam and his nephew found each other through a Vietnamese-language newspaper. Nguyen told Lam about the work here. So, earlier this year, Lam and his family moved to Andrews. And he got back into flying and back into Texas. For 4½ months in 1968, Lam was jets. (In Vietnam, in the mid-1960s, Lam flew the agile but slow L-19 Bird dog. He spied ground targets, dropped smoke bombs and pulled out to allow friendly forces to make their strikes on the enemy. "It's a very good airplane," he said of the Cessna-made single-engine craft. "You can see everything" (being from the panoramic cockpit setup.) From Webb AFB, Lam was transferred to Keesler AFB, Miss., where he trained in the T-28. "It's a very good airplane, too," he said. "Good for instrument flying." The T-28, too, was a prop job. "I like to fly instruments," Lam said. "I did a good job there." In 1969, he got combat training in the jet-powered A-37 at England AFB, La. "They teach how to drop the bomb, how to shoot the rocket," he said. He returned to Vietnam in June of 1969; he was a wingman. By January 1972, he had "made" the rank of major and was chalking up the flying hours. By the time the war was over, Lam had flown about 1,000 missions and had logged almost 4,100 hours, including 1,700 in jets. "I like to fly. I love to fly," the chain-smoking Lam said in the comforts of the airport lobby. Moments later, on a "choppy" but sunny Sunday morning, Lam demonstrated his flair for flight. Lam, in the commanding left seat, went up in a Piper Cherokee 180. At his right hand was the instructor, Shaffer. And to his rear was a reporter. Lam did some maneuvering. "This is a little hairy," Shaffer said from his co-pilot's seat. "If it bothers you," he told the reporter, "let us know." Lam put Shaffer's airplane into a chandelle, an abrupt climbing turn. "Perfect," Shaffer said. Lam put Shaffer's airplane into the single-engine flying machine into the Lazy 8 pattern. "He can fly that airplane!" Shaffer declared.

Warm-chilly combination typical of fall weather

Sunny weather, with warm afternoons and chilly mornings, seem to have become the rule for November in the Permian Basin. The forecast calls for fair weather through Friday with a little warmer temperatures Friday. The high Friday should be in the mid-70s and the low tonight in the low 40s, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said. Variable winds are due to be from 5 to 15 mph tonight. Wednesday's high was 66 degrees and this morning's low was 40 degrees. Andrews, Lamesa, Big Lake and Crane reported cool and clear weather and Rankin reported warm weather this morning. A perfect fall day appeared on tap as skies were clear over the state early today, according to the Associated Press, except in South Texas where some fog was being reported. Early morning temperatures ranged from 32 at Amarillo in the Panhandle to 56 at Galveston. Other readings included 44 at San Angelo, 50 at Houston and 48 at San Antonio. Forecasts called for clear skies with temperature readings expected to reach the 60s and 70s by late today.

Election spotlights new governors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two days after the election, there already is talk of national prominence for two of the nation's new governors, Democrat John D. "Jay" Rockefeller IV of West Virginia and Republican James Thompson of Illinois.

Both swept into office Tuesday with huge record-setting electoral margins, drawing attention to themselves as fresh faces likely to be heard from again outside their states.

Thompson, for one, has acknowledged a lifelong ambition for the presidency. Nicknamed "Big Jim" because of his 6-foot-6-inch frame, Thompson beat Democratic machine candidate Michael J. Howlett by 1.3 million votes.

Asked about his White House ambitions Wednesday, Thompson recalled Nov. 15, has tried to fire his lawyers to keep them from appealing the execution.

Firing squad preferred by convicted murderer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Gary Mark Gilmore, a convicted murderer scheduled to face a firing squad on Nov. 15, has tried to fire his lawyers to keep them from appealing the execution.

It would be the first execution in the United States since June 1967 and the first execution by firing squad since 1960.

Craig Snyder, one of two court-appointed defense attorneys, said Wednesday that he would ask the court to appoint new counsel for Gilmore, but that he planned to go ahead with the motion for a stay of execution.

"There is a question, and a substantial one, as to whether he has the right personally to die on the 15th or at any time that might be set," Snyder said. Appeal of a death sentence is not mandatory in Utah.

Snyder said he and Public Defender Michael Esplin had been notified by the 35-year-old Gilmore that he no longer wanted them to represent him. But Snyder said he questioned whether Gilmore was capable of deciding what was best because of the pressures he is under.

Meanwhile, Samuel Smith, warden of the Utah State Prison, has asked the attorney general's office whether he should start recruiting a five-man firing squad.

On Monday, Gilmore, who has spent 18 years in state and federal prisons, told District Judge J. Robert Bullock that he wanted to go through with the scheduled execution "because I don't want to spend the rest of my life in jail."

"I'm just going to put talk of national leadership for a national role behind me, until I've got a handle on my job," he said. "The No. 1 lesson I've learned is you don't go anywhere else until you first have done a good job where you are."

Thompson declared that he plans to seek a second term in 1978, but he did nothing to discourage any speculation about his potential as an eventual presidential aspirant. But there are potential hazards, including serious budget problems and a possible tax increase, both issues that must be negotiated with a Democratically-controlled state legislature.

In West Virginia, Rockefeller, nephew of Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, outspent his opponent 10 to 1, using mostly his own funds, to reach the governor's mansion on the second try.

State political observers have no doubt that one day Rockefeller will move to seek a national constituency, but for now Rockefeller says he has plans only to run for re-election in four years.

Democratic U.S. Sen. Jennings Randolph is 76 and expected to retire when his term expires in 1978, but a Rockefeller aide said Wednesday the governor-elect has no interest in seeking that seat.

Thompson is 40 and Rockefeller 39, allowing both men ample time to run their states for two elected terms while building a political base for a run on the presidency.

Elsewhere, Democrats fared well in Tuesday's 14 governorship contests, and it appeared either that Carter helped a number into office on his coattails or that they helped him. Carter carried Arkansas, Missouri, North Carolina, Rhode Island and West Virginia, all of which today have Democratic governors-elect. Only in Delaware did a Republican capture the governor's mansion and the voters go for Carter.

She takes snapshots of everyone

ROLFE, Iowa (AP) — Camera in hand, Marion the Librarian has snapped her way through her Bicentennial project.

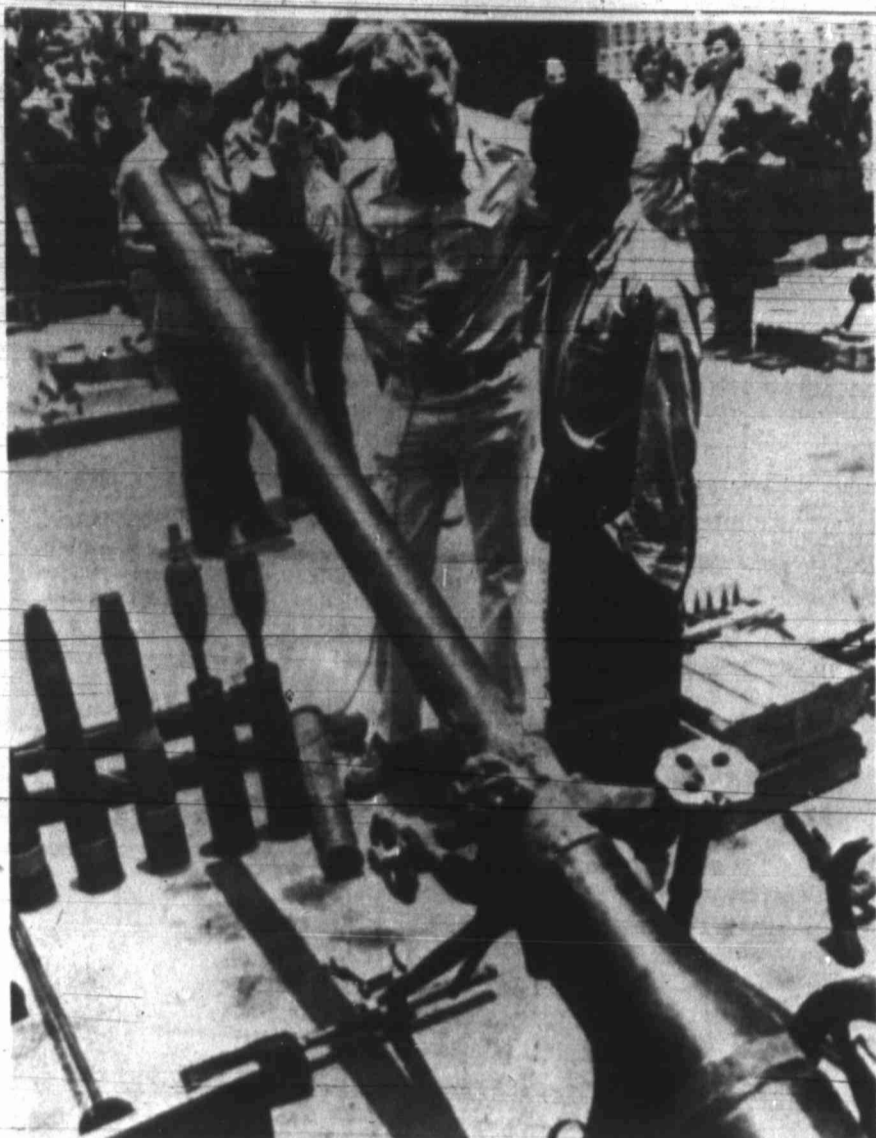

Marion Gunderson, 57, who works at the Public Library here, has nearly achieved her goal of collecting snapshots of everyone who lived in the area during 1776.

"I've gone through something like 65 rolls of black and white film and had all the pictures processed, and then with photos people have brought in, we must have between 1,100 and 1,200 faces," she said.

"I've just wandered all over town with my camera, taking pictures of people at a carnival, at a quilting party, a chamber of commerce coffee — just about anything where people gather."

Mrs. Gunderson said she got her inspiration from a similar project by a Rolfe druggist. In the 1920s he took pictures of the men living in the town at the time, and the picture albums are now stored at the library.

Moslems, Christians renew Beirut fighting

By FAROUK NASSAR

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem and Christian forces in Beirut battled through the night with rockets, artillery and tank guns in the city's heaviest outbreak of fighting since the cease-fire began two weeks ago. Hospitals and militia sources reported about 15 persons were killed and 20 wounded during the night. It was the highest casualty toll reported since the truce began Oct. 21.

President Elias Sarkis and Arab League mediator Hassan Sabri Kholi got in touch with leaders of both sides, and a Palestinian spokesman said the fighting decreased after dawn. But sporadic artillery explosions were heard well into the morning.

Kholi and the Christian president appeared to feel that the outbreak of firing did not pose a serious threat to the truce and the companion peace plan worked out by Sarkis, Syrian President Hafez Assad and Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat at a meeting in Saudi Arabia.

The public also appeared undisturbed. Traffic jammed the streets in both the Moslem and Christian sectors, and shops, sidewalk cafes and restaurants were open.

Reports from the Christian sector said regrouped units of Lebanon's disintegrated army took up positions today on the capital's northern approaches at Sarkis' orders as part of the peace plan.

The units, equipped with tanks and armored cars, also patrolled Christian forward lines in Beirut but did not try to cross into Moslem areas, which are controlled by Arafat's guerrillas.

Recent reports say Sarkis has managed to put 3,000 to 5,000 regular troops back into service as the nucleus of a postwar Lebanese army. The 18,000-man prewar army split into Moslem and Christian factions during the conflict.

'Rags-to-riches' outsider now the establishment four people would show up. Or we'd go to a labor hall that would hold 300 people, and 10 people would come.

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — He began as "Jimmy Who?" with a campaign against the establishment; now he's president-elect and will head the establishment.

Even as "Jimmy Who," James Earl Carter Jr. always said he never intended to lose.

"When I began, I didn't have much money," he says. "I didn't have a built-in campaign organization or live in a media center. I didn't hold public office. Not many people knew who I was."

But now, 22 months after he announced his presidential candidacy on Dec. 12, 1974, nearly everybody knows Carter can thank shrewd planning, appeal to a cross-section of voters and sheer hard work.

For Carter and his staff, victory is sweetest when they look back on the humiliations and loneliness.

"We had to go where the people already were because they wouldn't come when we invited them," he told a dinner attended by big-name New York Democrats. "We would invite a whole neighborhood to come to a living room, and maybe

The slight, sandy-haired peanut farmer, his family and a few volunteers "walked the streets, went into barber shops and beauty parlors and restaurants and stood in factory shift lines, farmers' markets, livestock sale barns, country courthouses and city halls, just learning about our country and letting them get to know us."

Carter billed himself as a candidate of the people, an outsider running against Washington insiders who are pawns of special interests, who've turned the government into a "horrible, bloated bureaucratic mess."

"I'm not a big shot. I'm just like you," he said again and again. Rather than emphasize issues, he stressed the need for tough management and restoring integrity, pride, openness, honesty and sensitivity in Washington.

In the same soft-spoken, preacher tones he uses to teach his Baptist Sunday school class, he kept repeating that the system of government is good, but those who run the government have lessened the respect it earns.

"I'll never tell a lie," Carter promised during the primaries.

He turned to issues in the fall campaign, but still there were few concrete proposals—no detailed blueprint for a future administration.

He called for welfare and tax reform, government reorganization and a comprehensive health care program, but provided scant particulars.

But he had a way of identifying himself with the group to whom he was speaking. He was a "worker" with working people, a "businessman" with businessmen, a "farmer" with farmers and "once a poor boy from Georgia" with the underprivileged.

"I'm looking for a job, too," he told a group of unemployed persons in Scranton, Pa.

Sometimes his efforts were seen as an attempt to please the greatest possible number of voters, no matter how diverse.

For example, he said he was personally opposed to abortion and to the use of government funds to finance abortions. But he also said he was opposed to outlawing abortions by constitutional amendment.

All these tactics prompted accusations that he was fuzzy on the issues, that he was like a political chameleon.

Carter is just as complex in his private life.

He listens to opera, reads and quotes philosopher Reinhold Niebuhr and Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, but he is a fan of the Allman Brothers rock band and country singer Charlie Daniel as well.

"He is hard to get to know," says Dr. Peter Bourne, an adviser. "He is not given to small talk, or having a beer with the boys or anything frivolous. He can take tremendous stress, and his single-mindedness is unbelievable."

Critics described Carter as arrogant, self-righteous, unbending, lacking humor and sensitivity for other people, particularly those who work for him.

His top aides said he showed those qualities on occasion, but added they are not overriding in his personality.

In the early primaries, voters were more impressed by Carter's appeal as an outsider to Washington than they were by charges against him.

But they took a second look in the later primaries and during the general election campaign. Some expressed concern that they didn't know who Jimmy Carter is or what he would do as President.

He lost some of his outsider image by aligning himself more closely with such old Democratic politicians as Chicago Mayor Richard Daley, by stumping for Democratic establishment candidates and by trying to identify himself with past Democratic presidents.

Before the Republican convention, polls were more than 30 points in Carter's favor, but in the weeks immediately before the election he held only a slim lead.

Carter was born in Archery, Ga. on Oct. 1, 1924. He decided at age 5 he would go to Annapolis. After graduating from the Naval Academy in 1946, he embarked on a nuclear submarine career, aiming to become chief of naval operations. But when his father died in 1953, he went back to his home town of Plains with his wife, Rosalynn, to take over the family peanut farm. He helped build it into a million-dollar business.

He was elected to the state Senate in 1962 and 1964. He lost his first bid for governor in 1966, and spent much of the next four years campaigning for 1970. He ran with public support from several of Georgia's leading segregationist politicians, who saw him as a lesser evil than his liberal opponent, former Gov. Carl Sanders.

But when Carter won, he announced that "the time for racial discrimination is over." Ignoring cries of outrage, he hung a portrait of Martin Luther King Jr. in the Statehouse.

He reorganized the state government, although there is argument about how effective and efficient the shakeup was. And he pushed through a number of social programs.

Carter's efforts toward the presidency began while he still was governor. He and a small group of youthful advisers, who still are his closest aides, discussed the possibility.

"It was hard for us to talk about the prospect at first," Carter has said. "It was very tentative and somewhat embarrassing. We never used the word 'president' for the first three or four months."

In 1973 and 1974, Carter used his governorship to expand his contacts with politicians, businessmen and journalists. He sought and won in 1974 the chairmanship of the Democratic National Committee's campaign committee.

As chairman, he traveled the country, meeting and cultivating union, farm and consumer officials, political and civic leaders and campaign workers, all interested in electing Democrats to Congress. The courting paid rich dividends in 1976, when he was seeking his nomination.

Carter and his aides developed a detailed plan, including decisions to run in every primary and to get early, favorable media coverage by concentrating on Iowa's January caucus, which gave the first indication of candidate strength.

Carter's victory in Iowa gave him momentum going into New Hampshire, which he also won. Then came Florida, and the Carter campaign was on its way. Even a string of late primary defeats by California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. and Idaho

Sen. Frank Church couldn't stop him.

Not long ago, Carter was asked about his life before the campaign. "I'll say this," he replied. "It was quieter then."

Less tiring? "Yes, definitely." More fun? Carter grinned. "Well, winning is much more fun than anything."

PRAYER AND FASTING FOR OUR NATION ON THE FIRST FRIDAY OF EACH MONTH throughout the Bicentennial year of 1976

Convinced that the Church's first response to the many crises facing our Nation should be a spiritual one, a "Summit Conference for Church Leaders" representing most major denominations and movements has issued a call for a Monthly Day of Prayer and Fasting for the Nation. The Conference urged the cooperation of all interested Christians in observing the first Friday of each month as a day of repentance (11 Chronicles 7: 14), a day of fasting (which is a way to "humble ourselves before God") and as a day to make supplications, prayers, intercessions and to give thanks for all that are in authority (1 Timothy 2: 1-4). This day may be observed individually in Bible study or prayer groups, or in your Church or Fellowship to the end that "our land" might be "healed" according to scripture.

DEAR ABBY

He shouldn't care about evil minds

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
 DEAR ABBY: I am a widower, age 41, with two small boys, ages 6 and 11. My wife was killed three years ago in an auto accident and because I was driving, I needed professional help to get over the feeling of guilt.

I have recently hired a young babysitter to look after the house and boys. Her name is Maria and she is a very sensible, intelligent and mature 15-year-old.

Maria's mother, who has never been married, plans to marry next month. She came to see me and begged me to let Maria live in my home because her future husband refuses to have Maria live with them after they're married. She said Maria is willing to live with me. I said I would have to think it over.

Maria is a lovely girl, but she looks like a 20-year-old woman, if you know what I mean. I fear that if I let her live here, my reputation and hers might be ruined by evil-minded people. My parish priest advised me to take her in, and not to worry about evil-minded people. My mother-in-law, who is too old and sick to look after the boys, agreed with the priest.

The boys love Maria, and I must confess that I adore her in a fatherly way. Would I be inviting trouble to take Maria in? I have more than enough money to send her to college when the time comes. She wants to be a doctor. —MUST KNOW

DEAR MUST KNOW: Maria sounds like a serious-minded, ambitious, intelligent girl. If you're certain that your attitude toward her is fatherly, don't worry about what evil-minded people think.

DEAR ABBY: Seems to me I've read a lot lately about people "dying" for a few minutes, coming back to life and living for years. I've begun wondering how many people have been buried alive, which has developed a fear in me that I might be buried alive one day. It's giving me nightmares!

Abby, who is supposed to make absolutely sure a person is dead before he's buried? The doctor or the mortician? —WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Most state laws require that a death certificate be signed by either a medical doctor or the county coroner, and the latter are being replaced in some states by "medical investigators," who must be licensed physicians. Relax. Your chances for being buried alive are zilch.

DEAR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN: Again it's come up in your column! I refer to the confusing business of the proper use of "Ms."

Why not just drop the Ms., Miss or Mrs., and simply address the person by name as I have done in addressing you? In this day of liberated womanhood and personal rights for everybody, why can't we be who we are without the gobbledygook of Mr., Ms., Miss or Mrs.?

The Mr. before a man's name is useless since it applies to both married men and single men. And to label a woman by her marital status is an invasion of her privacy. Whose business is it whether she's married, single or using the "Ms." to disguise one or the other? —FRANKLY FRANK

Dieting requires behavioral change

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

To effectually cope with the conditions of any form of behavioral modification the key must be found in the word "change." This is particularly true when applied to the effort in achieving a permanent weight loss.

Most overweight people want to lose weight, but they do not want to change what they eat or the pattern of their eating. Others want to change but they do not know how to go about effecting a change.

The first step is to acknowledge a need to change and that you have to accomplish it on your own.

Your behavior is based on personal traits and only you can decide what they will be.

Once you have committed yourself to a concerted effort to lose weight, begin your project by making a check list to determine what your eating habits are and which ones require changing.

Keep a two-week record of the following:

1. Where do you usually eat? In what room?
2. Who else is present?
3. Do you watch TV while eating?
4. Do you read while eating?
5. Do you eat standing up or sitting down?
6. How long does a meal take?
7. How is the food served? Individual portions or family style?

Do you normally take seconds?

8. What is your emotional state before the meal? Are you happy, unhappy, content, angry, frustrated?

9. What is your emotional state during the meal? Are you satisfied, hungry, have a feeling of well-being?

10. What is your emotional state after the meal? Are you happy, satisfied, unhappy, frustrated, hungry, stuffed?

11. When do you start planning the next meal? Right away, two hours later, don't think about it, dwell on it while eating the present meal?

12. Do you have any sense of guilt about the foods? I eat too much, I deserve better food? I don't deserve such good food? I should start losing weight?

After determining what your specific habits have been, and your typical response to them, realize that new and better habits must replace the old ones.

Regard the old habits as trouble makers and put them out of your life forever.

Questions may be sent to Shirley Bright Boody, Eat Yourself Slim, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

AT WIT'S END

What's difference between the trash?

By ERMA BOMBECK

I don't know about any other women, but I'm exhausted from reading novels that awaken me sexually and intellectually.

I want to shout, "Knock it off! I'm awake already!"

As I nodded over a current novel the other night in bed, my husband nudged me and said, "What are you reading?"

I blinked myself awake. "It's a sensual discovery manual that says I am consumed with self-loathing and misdirected aggressions. Is there any popcorn left or did you eat it all?"

"Only the burnt ones are left. Doesn't that upset you? All that self-analysis?"

"Not really. I have to search for the wof and warp of my own existence."

"What does that mean?"

"I'm not sure, but I'm hungry all the time."

He picked up the book and for a couple of minutes was engrossed in it. Then he put it down and said, "This reminds me, did the part come in for my lawn sweeper?"

"No, I have to check again Tuesday. Incidentally, are you reading anything I can take out of town with me next weekend?"

"What's wrong with this book?"

"Are you crazy? Do you want the entire plane to know I am being sexually and intellectually stimulated?"

"Where does it say that?"

"Men don't read all this stuff. How come women do?"

"Because we used to read trashy novels and that was bad for us."

"What's the difference between a trash novel and this?"

"Two things. The dirty words are eight-letter and it's a book club alternate."

"How much longer are you going to read? That light is shining right into my eyes."

"Just as soon as I finish the chapter on fantasies."

"You fantasize?" he asked, sitting upright.

"All the time. I have this one recurring one. I am on a train in a compartment going into the city. Across from me is a good-looking stranger. We are both reading the same book. 'Don't Let the Warrantly Run Out on Your Sex Life.' Finally, our eyes meet. He puts down his book, leans over and whispers, 'Do you understand a word of this book?' and I reply coolly, 'But of course.'"

Good night.
Good night.

McCarthy's effect on Carter campaign uncertain

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The independent presidential campaign of Eugene J. McCarthy did not deny Democrat Jimmy Carter the election Tuesday but it may have cost him five crucial states where the vote was very close. In those states — Iowa, Maine, Ohio, Oklahoma, — and Oregon — Carter either lost to President Ford or was trailing slightly with a few precincts uncounted. In all of them, the vote that went to McCarthy could have put Carter ahead and substantially shortened the election night suspense. McCarthy got about 600,000 votes in the 29 states where his name was on the ballot and his best showing was in Oregon, where he received about 4 per cent of the total votes cast. Whether all or most of those votes would have gone to Carter had McCarthy not been on the ballot is a question that can never be definitely answered. McCarthy never blinched at the possibility he might be the spoiler Tuesday, pointing out during his campaign that neither major party had a constitutional right to the White House. But Wednesday his aides insisted that there was no way of telling whether McCarthy had drawn his votes from people who otherwise would have voted Democratic. They might have come from disaffected persons who would not vote for either candidate had McCarthy not run, they maintained. "Who knows where that 2 per cent came from in Ohio?" asked Jerry Eller, McCarthy's campaign manager. "We aimed our campaign at the 50 per cent of the people who don't vote in this country, thinking they were independents who would vote for us."

Eller disagreed with the television analysts who throughout the night claimed McCarthy was taking votes away from Carter.

"Today we're getting calls from people who voted for us saying, 'God, the only thing we did was to give the media a chance to say we hurt Carter.'"

However, in the campaign's final weeks public opinion polls showed that McCarthy's name on the ballot did in fact tend to reduce Carter's dwindling lead even further.

In August, the Gallup Organization reported that in a national poll with McCarthy's name not on the ballot Carter led Ford by 56 to 33 per cent. With McCarthy's name included, however, Carter's lead dropped 52 to 33, a decline of four percentage points.

McCarthy declined to discuss the issue Wednesday, saying he will address it and other questions at a news conference on Friday.

In some of the five close states, McCarthy's vote was more than enough to make the difference, had it all gone to Carter instead.

Ford won Iowa by about 13,000 votes and McCarthy received more than 18,000. Ford led by only about 8,000 votes in Ohio, a crucial state where McCarthy got more than 58,000.

In Oregon, where only about 300 votes separated Ford from Carter, McCarthy received nearly 40,000 votes, with all but 1 per cent of the precincts reporting.

With the exception of Oregon and Massachusetts, where he got 3 per cent of the votes, McCarthy got only 1 or 2 per cent in the 29 states where his name was on the ballot. His share of the total was not as large as he had hoped and smaller than a number of elections experts had expected.

The McCarthy camp contended that its failure to have his name placed on the ballot in California and New York was a serious setback costing votes that would have given him a substantial national showing.

Overall, however, McCarthy aides contended the campaign had been a success in a legal sense in that it successfully fought 15 separate legal actions in states that began the year banning independents from the presidential ballot.

John Armor, the Baltimore attorney who coordinated McCarthy's legal assaults, said the election law changes accomplished by McCarthy's suits had opened some 10,000 Federal, state, and local offices to challenge by independent candidates in future years.

Unlike his celebrated run through the primaries in 1968 on an anti-war platform, McCarthy's 1976 campaign suffered from a shortage of money and volunteers. It was usually a one-man show as McCarthy toured the country speaking for lecture fees. Eller estimated Wednesday that the campaign had cost about $500,000.

The Carter campaign, although concerned that McCarthy might draw votes away, did not appear officially in any court proceedings to block his attempts to get on the ballot. In New York, McCarthy's losing bid was opposed by the state Democratic party and in the others his ballot suits were opposed by state attorneys general.

J. R. "Doc" Cuffman

Eric Van

Midlanders chosen for top FFA honors

Eric Van, 1975 Midland High School graduate, will receive the American Farmer Degree, the highest degree presented by the Future Farmers of America, at the national convention in Kansas City, Mo., next week.

Midland High agriculture teacher J. R. "Doc" Cuffman will receive an honorary American Farmer Degree at the convention, which begins Tuesday and ends Friday.

Van was nominated for the degree by the Texas FFA for his supervised farming program, his cooperative part-time training program and his outstanding leadership abilities in the Midland High FFA chapter.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Van of Midland.

Van's award includes a gold key and certificate presented by the national FFA organization and a check from the National FFA

Foundation to help pay travel expenses.

The degree goes to approximately one member in 700 across the country.

Cuffman has been a teacher at Midland High School for 30 years. In that time, the membership of the FFA chapter there has grown from 32 in 1946 to 250 in 1976. Over the years, 18 of his students have won Lone Star Farmer degrees and three, American Farmer degrees.

He started the agricultural cooperative training program, now the largest in the state.

Cuffman was regional vice president of National Vocational Agriculture Teachers from 1951 to 1956.

He is one of 10 teachers from Texas to receive the honorary degree this year for contributions to the FFA program.

Foreign policy issues to stagnate

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's failure to win election means key foreign policy issues that languished under the pressure of vote gathering now will stagnate during the remaining 12 weeks of Ford's lame-duck administration.

U.S. officials said the goal of Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger will be to hold things together while working to create an impression that business will go on as usual.

But there will be no new initiatives taken and no new commitments made, the officials said, not only because Jimmy Carter would object, but because few if any foreign governments will be willing to deal on crucial matters with an administration on its way out.

Kissinger himself is expected to stay in office until Carter takes over next Jan. 20, but many other State Department officials and ambassadors probably will be leaving.

Already Richard M. Helms, the former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, has resigned as ambassador to Iran. One key Kissinger aide who has labored for the secretary since 1969 is preparing to leave soon, first to take a long vacation and then to seek outside employment.

"This will be the time of the 'actors,'" said one State Department source, meaning that as high-level officials leave, they will be replaced by "acting" officials.

Mentioned prominently among those retiring early or leaving the Foreign Service are Deputy Secretary Charles Robinson, Counselor Helmut Sonnenfeldt, Under Secretary for Economic Affairs William D. Rogers and director of Policy Planning Winston Lord.

The major casualties by Ford's and Kissinger's own views will be their hopes for a new U.S.-Soviet treaty limiting offensive nuclear weapons and, on a wider plane, detente with Russia.

Because of charges by conservative Republicans as well as Carter that Kissinger was not strong enough with the Russians, the Ford administration has been dormant since last spring in negotiating a second-phase strategic arms limitation treaty.

Kissinger also canceled meetings last summer of U.S.-Soviet commissions on trade and other matters when Ford was under strong challenge for the Republican nomination by conservative Ronald Reagan, who charged the administration with being soft on Moscow.

Another important issue on which the administration has been marking time is the Middle East. The administration was reluctant to move in such a touchy area pending the election.

Carter courts Congress

By JIM ADAMS Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter is contacting the Democratic leaders of Congress with overtures of partnership and cooperation, but none of them can say yet how easy that will be to achieve or what programs it will produce.

Carter telephoned leaders including prospective House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill as his victory over President Ford became clear early Wednesday morning and told some of them he wants to meet with them soon on working with Congress.

"There is no question but what there will be a period of cooperation and partnership," retiring Senate

Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said Wednesday night. "How long it will last I don't know."

While Carter was beating Ford, Democrats were keeping their 62-38 control of the Senate and possibly increasing their 290-145 House control closer to the 295-140 Democrat-controlled House that helped push through the late President Lyndon B. Johnson's Great Society and war-on-poverty programs in the mid-1960s.

But Democratic leaders brushed aside Wednesday the question of how expansive a program the Democratic President and Democratic Congress can enact, pointing out that they haven't even met on the subject yet.

An aide to O'Neill said Carter telephoned early Wednesday morning and told the House Democratic leader, "Tip, I'm six votes from being elected President...and I'll be wanting to meet with you on working with Congress."

The aide said O'Neill has been telling people that Carter's victory will mean the days of veto battles are over and Congress' leaders can cooperate with a President "who will work with us because we know which programs will work and which won't."

But that pointed to what could become an obstacle to Democratic unity, the problem of working out who is going to listen to whom.

Government reports home eating costs rise less than eating out

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eat at home if you want to save money on food, says a new Agriculture Department look at the nation's food market.

For all of 1976, the department's Outlook and Situation Board says, prices for meals and snacks in restaurants and fast-food outlets will average about 7 per cent higher than the 1975 average.

At the same time, prices of store-bought food for eating at home should come out about 2.5 per cent higher, it said.

Large supplies of both crop-derived food supplies and meat are dampening retail price increases, the board said.

The portion of the price attributed to middlemen's costs and profits is expected to average 5 per cent higher this year than last, "well under the increases of the previous two years and a little below the rate of (general) inflation" which has been around 6 per cent.

The increases coming this winter will be due to the coffee situation, higher prices for fresh vegetables "and away from home eating," the analysis said.

The improved economy's spurring of consumer demand and the large food supplies are pushing American consumption rates to near the 1972 record, the board added. A 5 per cent rise in the amount of red meat eaten per person and a 9 per cent rise in poultry consumption are primarily responsible.

In the months of July through September, total spending for food at home and away from home rose at about the same pace, the report said.

However, compared to a year earlier, the at-home spending was up 5.5 per cent while the eating-out expense was up 11 per cent.

Motorcyclists elect officers

Members of the Permian Basin Motorcycle Club elected new officers at a Tuesday night meeting.

Ken Glascock was named president. New board members are Sonny Whalin and Bud Widner.

'Football fever' not serious, says expert

DALLAS (AP) — Eichenwald of The University of Texas Southwestern Medical School.

The girls, who fainted or became stricken while watching their football teams struggle on the gridiron, suffered symptoms of dizziness, fainting and a choking feeling in their chests. Dozens were treated at hospitals around the state earlier in the football season.

Dr. Eichenwald, chairman of the department of pediatrics at the medical school here, said most people think the fainting is caused by lack of oxygen, but the problem is just the opposite.

He said the body burns oxygen and turns it into carbon dioxide which is exhaled from the lungs. Carbon dioxide in the blood stream is one of the stimuluses triggering your breathing, he added.

The first symptom of hyperventilation, he said, is breathing faster and faster until your breath comes in pants. This rids the body of carbon dioxide in large amounts, the doctor said.

He continued that as a person's carbon dioxide level in the bloodstream falls, one loses the stimulation to breathe and faints. Once a person faints, automatic reflexes take over and they begin to breathe normally.

"The cure is reassurance — the one thing you don't usually get," Dr. Eichenwald said. "Victims may not be conscious of it, but it's a voluntary phenomenon."

He said that once one person faints, it becomes almost an epidemic. "Once people to the right of you and the left of you faint, you'll probably go down the drain, too," he said.

Pointing out that there is nothing dangerous about it, Dr. Eichenwald said, "Just don't lose your head when it happens. Everybody watches too much television and reads too much science

Burglary suspects charged

LAMESA — Four Big Spring residents were charged Wednesday with attempted burglary of a Lamesa drug store.

Bond was set at $35,000 for each of the four persons by Justice of the Peace Richard Nelson.

Police chief Lee Bartlett said the department had received a tip on a possible burglary Tuesday afternoon and received a call from a Lamesa citizen about 9:15 Tuesday night reporting a man on top of a building.

Thomas Antony Meyers, 19, was arrested in the building about 9:30 p.m. William Harley Mesker, 32, and Steven Anthony Morris, 20, were arrested about 9:45 p.m. in front of the building. Klaus Hugo Quernhelm, 18, was arrested about 11:30 six blocks from the scene, Bartlett said.

The four, all of Big Spring, were in the city jail this morning awaiting setting of bond.

Morris was paroled Aug. 26 after serving 18 months of a five-year sentence for two burglary convictions.

Top United Nations post holds mystic attraction

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—They all say it is an impossible job, a frustrating job, a back-breaking job. But once they get it, they don't want to give it up.

The job is secretary-general of the United Nations, and all the men who have held it seemed to have had a love-hate relationship with it.

The first, Trygve Lie of Norway, who was elected on Feb. 1, 1946, called the post "the most impossible job on this earth."

Yet he accepted a three-year extension of his five-year term and would have served beyond his seven years in office had not the Soviet Union in effect forced him out because of his stand against the North Korean invasion of South Korea.

The second, Dag Hammarskjold of Sweden, who was elected in April 1952, wrote in his deeply religious private diary the day he was elected secretary-general: "He who has surrendered himself to it knows that the way ends on the cross."

Hammarskjold, too, accepted a second five-year term and served 8 1/2 years in all before he was killed in a plane crash on a peace mission in Africa.

His immediate successor, U Thant of Burma, spoke of the "heavy responsibilities" of the office. Still he served two terms totaling 10 years before he retired because of illness.

The fourth and current secretary-general, Kurt Waldheim of Austria, has called the job "the most strenuous I ever had" and sometimes the "most frustrating."

But now Waldheim says he would "regard it as a privilege and an honor" if he were re-elected to a second five-year term to follow the one he will finish Dec. 31.

It looks as if he will be re-elected.

The secretary-general gets what it takes to live well — roughly $92,000 a year in salary and expenses and the use of a limousine and the use of a $1 million Manhattan townhouse.

But he scarcely has time to take advantage of the job benefits. He is too busy with the problems of a far-flung bureaucracy of upward of 10,000 international civil servants, and those of many of 145 member nations as well.

"There is no family life anymore," Waldheim said in an interview in his 38th floor office after terms years on the job. "I have to be here from early in the morning until late in the evening."

"But it's part of the job. I used to say when my wife was complaining about no family life, I said, 'You can't have the cake and eat it. You must accept the challenge.' And I always accepted the challenge. Otherwise I wouldn't have accepted this job."

"And this job is a job which only somebody can really do who is ready to accept the challenge."

Quivering custard called 'nervous'

By KAY JARVIS
Copley News Service

Harriet Beecher Stowe, 19th Century American author, wrote that in the fall, New England women baked pies by "the forties, fifties and hundreds," and made them of "everything in the earth and under the earth — pumpkin, cranberry, huckleberry, cherry, green currant, peach, pear, plum, custard, apple — pies with top crusts and pies without, pies adorned with all sorts of fanciful fluting and architectural strips."

Covered crocks in an unheated shed took the place of our modern food freezer and these stone-cold pies kept well until needed.

Many early American fireplaces had pie cupboards built into them and frozen pies were tucked in them until heated through.

Nutmeg Custard Pie

Pastry for one-crust 9-inch pie
3 cups milk
1 bay leaf
1 (3-inch) cinnamon stick
3 eggs
3 egg yolks
One-half cup sugar
1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
Three-fourths tsp. ground nutmeg
One-eighth tsp. salt

Line a nine-inch pie pan with pastry; flute edge and prick bottom and sides with fork tines. Bake in a preheated hot oven (425 degrees) for seven minutes. Remove pie shell. Reduce oven temperature to slow (325 degrees).

In medium saucepan scald milk with bay leaf and cinnamon stick. In a bowl thoroughly combine eggs with egg yolks, sugar, vanilla extract, nutmeg and salt. Strain milk over egg mixture; mix well. Pour into pie shell.

Bake in slow oven until a knife inserted in center comes out clean, about 55 minutes. Cool on a wire rack. Serve at room temperature with whipped cream, sprinkled with nutmeg, if desired.

Buttermilk Meringue Pie

One-fourth cup butter or margarine, softened
1 cup sugar, divided
1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
3 eggs, separated
One-fourth cup flour
One-half tsp. grated lemon peel
One-half tsp. ground nutmeg
One-eighth tsp. ground allspice
One-fourth tsp. salt
2 cups buttermilk
Sesame seed pastry shell (see below)
One-fourth tsp. cream of tartar
Dash of salt

In a large mixing bowl cream butter with two-thirds cup of the sugar.

Add vanilla extract and egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Stir in flour, lemon peel, spices and salt; blend well. Pour in milk. Turn into sesame seed pastry shell.

Bake in preheated hot oven (425 degrees) for eight minutes. Reduce oven temperature to low (325 degrees) and bake until set, about 40 minutes. Cool about 30 minutes. In a bowl beat reserved egg whites with cream of tartar and a dash of salt until soft peaks form.

Gradually add remaining one-third cup sugar, beating until stiff but not dry. Spread over filling, sealing to edges. Bake in a preheated moderate oven (375 degrees) until meringue is golden, about six minutes. Cool. Refrigerate until ready to serve.

Sesame Shell

1 cup all-purpose flour
One-third cup yellow cornmeal
3 tbsps. sesame seed, toasted (see note)
One-half cup shortening
One-fourth cup shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
1 tbsps. sugar
One-half tsp. salt
2 tbsps. cold water

In a mixing bowl, combine flour, cornmeal and sesame seed; blend. Add shortening; mix with pastry blender or fork until mixture resembles coarse meal. Stir in cheese.

Mix sugar and salt with water. Pour over flour mixture; blend to form a dough.

Roll between two sheets of lightly floured waxed paper to fit bottom and sides of a nine-inch pie pan. Flute edges.

Note: To toast sesame seed, sprinkle seeds in a small skillet. Place over moderate heat until golden, stirring constantly.

Big spenders don't always win elections

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The millionaire political candidates learned from Tuesday's voting that spending piles of their own money is no guarantee of election.

For some, however, it obviously helped. Two young scions of wealthy families — John D. Rockefeller IV and Rep. H.J. Heinz III (R-Pa.) — both dipped deeply this year into their personal fortunes.

Rockefeller used a reported $2-million of his own in winning the West Virginia primary and general elections for governor. His votes each cost him roughly $3 apiece.

Heinz put up $2.2 million for his successful primary and general election campaigns for the Pennsylvania Senate seat being vacated by Sen. Hugh Scott (R-Pa.).

For Heinz, the 2.6 million votes he received in both races cost less than $1 apiece.

The story is different, however, for political novice Merlin Karlock who made his maiden effort a run this year at the House seat in Illinois' 17th congressional district.

Karlock, a 44-year-old rich agribusinessman and bank president from Mernon, Ill., put $400,000 into the race and came up 30,000 votes behind incumbent Rep. George O'Brien (R-Ill.).

The 78,700 votes Karlock received worked out to $5 apiece. That amount is a record for one House race, according to a Republican campaign committee official.

Several other big spenders were big losers. Morgan Maxfield, a 35-year-old millionaire land developer put $280,000 of his own money running for a House seat from Missouri's sixth district.

Maxfield, a Democrat had been considered a shoo-in to replace the late Rep. Jerry Litton (D-Mo.). But Maxfield had posed as a bachelor about town in Kansas City. Suddenly he turned out to have a family in Texas — and a costly political problem.

Maxfield spent his money in a campaign trying to turn around the bad publicity his personal life had created. He lost to E. Thomas Coleman, a Republican.

Gary Familian, a 34-year-old heir to a California plumbing fortune, lost in his effort to represent that state's 27th district. Familian spent more than $200,000 of his own on the race.

In Hawaii, however, the story was different. Cecil Heftel, a 52-year-old television tycoon, successfully took the congressional seat from the state's first district after spending some $324,432 of his own on the campaign.

A 27-year-old West Virginian, Nick Joe Rahall II, who had put $280,000 into his race for that state's fourth district House seat, is ahead in a race that has not been decided.

Rahall's main opponent is Rep. Ken Hechler (D-W.Va.) who originally gave up the seat to run for governor.

When he lost the gubernatorial nomination, Hechler decided to run for his own seat as a write-in candidate, an effort that cost him at least $70,000.

Until all the write-in ballots are counted, the race remains open although Rahall held a 30,000 vote lead late Wednesday.

Two millionaire Senate candidates, who did not spend near as much as Heinz, failed in their efforts. Democrat Robert Lorber, a Rhode Island Cadillac dealer, spent $27,990 of his own in his unsuccessful race against former Rhode Island governor John H. Chafee. Part of that expenditure paid for a tough primary fight.

In Maine, Robert A.G. Monks, spent more than $250,000 in an unsuccessful challenge to Sen. Edmund Muskie (D-Maine).

A January Supreme Court decision permitted congressional candidates to spend on their own campaigns whatever they wanted.

A $1,000 contribution applied by law to all others. Despite this opening in the law, many political millionaires put little if any of their own money into their campaigns. For the most part these low or non-spenders have run before.

Howard Metzenbaum, for example, who defeated Sen. Robert Taft (R-Ohio) in Tuesday's election, is a millionaire. In the first Taft-Metzenbaum race six years ago, Metzenbaum spent a lot of his own money and it became an issue in the campaign. This year he did not.

Taft, a millionaire himself, also did not pour his own funds into his campaign.

Sen. Joseph Montoya (D-N.M.), who became a millionaire while in the Congress, used almost none of his own funds in his losing race.

Three other losers in Tuesday's election — Sens. John Tunney (D-Calif.), William Brock II (R-Tenn.) and James Buckley (R-N.Y.) — are considered rich but none spent more than a token amount of their own funds.

Two incumbent Senate millionaires won Tuesday without putting up their own money — Sen. Lowell Weicker (R-Conn.) and Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.).

Carol Keahey, 29, who challenged Rep. William J. Dickinson (R-Ala.), used $50,000 of her own money but lost.

Soviet Union woos Angola

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has cemented its ties with the leftist government of Angola in the last month through the signing of two major treaties that are unusual in Soviet relations with black Africa.

It is the first time that standard treaties — a friendship and cooperation agreement and a party-to-party agreement — have been signed with a sub-Saharan African government.

The moves come at a time when the Soviet Union is increasingly criticizing the United States for its efforts to work out a Rhodesian settlement. Angola is one of the five "front-line" southern African states seeking to bring about majority rule in Rhodesia.

The friendship treaty includes military agreements "which are being concluded in the interests of strengthening the parties' defense capabilities," but State Department sources here say it is too early to determine the extent of Soviet-Angolan military cooperation.

The Soviets have apparently taken up Angolan President Agostinho Neto on his reported insistence that Soviet aid to this country be paid for, not accepted as a gift.

Boot on call costs McCamey

One can't really blame Coach Joe Neill and his McCamey Badgers if they would like to forget the whole 1976 football season. McCamey must be situated in the land of hard knocks.

After all, the Badgers have a meager 1-7 record, and they have lost a handful of games by the narrowest of margins. It is true that they have helped themselves to some of those losses with interceptions, fumbles and such at the most inopportune times.

But Friday's 13-12 loss to Iraan is enough to make McCamey want to throw in the towel.

With 3:08 left in the game, McCamey's Raul Arana kicks a 25-yard field goal that is signaled good by the official, but then a flag is dropped and McCamey is whistled for a five-yard penalty because Arana did not have his tooth protector in his mouth. The field goal was taken away, and McCamey missed the second bid for the field goal.

THE RUB comes from the fact that an equipment penalty is a dead ball foul, not that the penalty was called. A dead ball infraction should be marked from the succeeding spot, which would be the kickoff for McCamey, and the field goal should have counted.

So, McCamey had a lead taken away from them on a misinterpretation of the rule. It may be unfair to say that McCamey lost the game because of the mistake by the officials because with 3:08 left, Iraan could have scored, and they really didn't try since they already had the lead. Iraan's purpose was to run out the clock at that point. It is also not surprising that McCamey fans feel like it cost them the game.

Keith Anderson, secretary of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Southwest Football Officials' Association and who contracts officials for games in this area, said Wednesday that the officials made a bad call.

"THE RULE on the tooth protector has been with us two or three years, and it is a simple thing in black and white. The field goal should have counted. I don't really know how it could have happened, but it did, and there is no one who feels worse than the official that made the call," Anderson said.

"Unfortunately, there is no recourse for McCamey," Anderson said. "You can't play the game over. There are a lot of officials that wouldn't have called a penalty in that situation, but the UHL wants us to be strict with that rule. It is a good rule, and has reduced mouth injuries by 90 per cent in Texas. It's just a shame that the rule was misinterpreted. There is just absolutely nothing that can be done about it."

Understandably, Neill was and is upset with the outcome and the call.

"THE UMPIRE was correct in the call he made," Neill admits. "But I think he showed little perception in making a call like that at that time."

"I went out on the field and said that they couldn't take the field goal away from us and the referee said, 'Coach, get off the field.' There should be some open lines of communication between officials and coaches. We should show respect to the officials, but they in turn should not think that we are all dumb coaches and don't know any of the rules."

"I realize that it would be impossible to overturn the decision at this date, but there should be some open lines at the time of an infraction like that," Neill said.

Neill's Badgers host Wink Friday, and he is not sure how his kids will come back after the heart breaking loss.

"OUR KIDS don't understand how things like this can happen," Neill said Wednesday. "The kids will come back. I'm sure of it."

"We've had a bad season, and this was the ultimate in our frustration. We've got too good of a team to have won only one game. We really thought we could have won our last four, and this was a real setback. Maybe young kids bounce back quicker than we old birds. I sure hope so."

It has been an established fact that the officials made a mistake. Officials often make mistakes. Still, this one hurts everyone involved. The official is sick, McCamey is sick and Iraan doesn't get the satisfaction they deserve for winning.

I don't have the answer. The game would be nothing without officials to enforce the rules. Still, it shouldn't have happened. I guess I'm sick too.

Montreal opens draft by picking Jackson

NEW YORK (AP) — The Montreal Expos opened baseball's first-ever re-entry draft today by selecting slugger Reggie Jackson as the No. 1 choice among the 24 players available.

Like the others, Jackson achieved free agent status by playing the 1976 season without signing a contract.

After the Expos made him the historic first choice in a selection announced by Charles Bronfman, the club's board chairman, Jackson was expected to be picked by 11 more teams who would bid for his services along with his old club, the Baltimore Orioles.

Jackson batted .277 with 27 home runs and 91 runs batted in after being traded to the Orioles by the Oakland A's just before the start of the 1976 season.

He has a career average of .267 with 281 homers in 10 major league campaigns.

The Expos, who had the poorest record in the National League last season, were followed in the drafting order by the Chicago White Sox, the bottom club in the American League.

The draft was to continue with the leagues alternating selections and teams picking in inverse order of last season's won-lost records.

The White Sox, represented by General Manager Roland Hemond, selected Oakland outfielder Joe Rudi. Rudi batted .270 with 13 homers and 94 RBI in his 10th season with the A's.

The Atlanta Braves followed by selecting Gary Matthews, an outfielder with the San Francisco Giants. The Braves were fined $10,000 by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn at the end of the season after being charged with tampering in preliminary negotiations with Matthews, who batted .279 with 20 homers and 84 RBI for the Giants.

The Milwaukee Brewers, the fourth team to choose a player, drafted Oakland third baseman Sal Bando, a veteran of 11 years with the A's. Bando batted .240 with 27 homers and 84 RBI last season.

Crippled Pack to face Cooper

By PAUL DOMOWITZ

The familiar sounds of enthusiasm, optimism and joy that filled the Memorial Stadium lockerroom for so many weeks since the beginning of pre-season drills almost three months ago, has subsided.

Battered and bruised, the Midland High Bulldogs, who are fast becoming known as the "Infirmary Brigade", face the monumental task of taping their injured bodies together, and facing Abilene Cooper in the Key City Friday night.

"I guess you could say the Dogs had the fight taken out of them last week," explained a low-keyed Coach Jerry Hopkins, whose unit took a bitter physical beating at the hands of Odessa.

"WE REALLY didn't expect them to be that aggressive, but they were, and they just put it to us. Dick Winder has a great football team over there."

The task facing Hopkins and his coaching staff now is a difficult one. The loss to the Bronchos squeaked that last slim hope the Bulldogs had of remaining in contention for the District 5-4A title, and the Pack's medical report may just qualify them for national disaster assistance.

In fact, the key to victory against Cooper may lie in the hands and tape of Bulldog trainer Doc Dodson. Hopkins' crew was already devastated by injuries going into the Odessa contest, and the beating they took on the W.T. Barrett turf didn't help matters.

Most notable Purple Heart recipients were two-way tackle David Rooker and the Pack's Mr. Everything, Rusty Maroney. Both had their brains jarred from reality by the Bronchos, and left the game for good in the first half.

DESPITE IT all however, Hopkins is avoiding any contact in workouts this week, and expects everyone to be ready to play Friday—God and Doc Dodson willing.

"We are takin' it real easy this week," Hopkins said, "and givin' everybody a chance to nurse their injuries."

The story of the Bulldogs' opponent, Abilene Cooper, reads like "Earthquake" or the "Poseidon Adventure". Coach Ray Overton's squad finished second to Permian in the district race last season, and was expected to challenge again this year.

But a funny thing happened on the way to success. The Cougars, plagued by inexperience at several key positions, took a nose dive, and Overton spends his free time contemplating the least painful method of suicide.

"Statistically, they are the worst team in district against the run," admits Hopkins. "But when we see them on film, they appear very aggressive. They don't look near as bad as they do on paper."

HOPKINS IS not taking the Cougars lightly, and knows what has to be done in addition to a quick patch-up job. "We're down now, and we have got to regain that fighting spirit. It's very important for us to finish with a competitive edge, and then let the score take care of itself."

So, it all comes down to desire for the Bulldogs. As Vince Lombardi once said, "the true test of a champion is trying to get up after you've been knocked down, when the ground looks like a helluva good place to lie."

NCAA probes Oklahoma State

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Daily Oklahoman reported in its Thursday editions that the National Collegiate Athletic Association is probing a list of more than 100 allegations against the Oklahoma State University football program.

The paper said most serious allegations include:

—A representative of the university's athletic interests arranging for summer school credit in 1975 for two Oklahoma State players in courses which they did not complete.

—Purchase of a car (with the title in an assistant's name) for a varsity football player's use.

—Cash offers to recruits (ranging up to $800) as inducements to attend the school.

—Rent-free apartments provided several varsity players.

—An Oklahoma State backer offering a recruit's sister an all-expense-paid education at the school to obtain her influence in convincing the recruit to attend Oklahoma State.

—Payment by two school supporters of an overdue $500 note owed by an Oklahoma State player at a Stillwater, Okla., bank.

—A school backer providing a recruit's girl friend free plane transportation from her home to Stillwater and back.

—An Oklahoma State backer offering $600 for the two season tickets a recruit would receive if he became a member of the school varsity.

Dr. Robert Kamm, university president, received notification of the probe in a letter dated Aug. 17.

carrying a detailed list of alleged infractions contained in 99 numbered paragraphs which stretched for more than 50 typewritten pages.

Some numbered paragraphs did not contain allegations, but requested the university to furnish records and information concerning various recruiting activities.

"For that reason," said Dave Cawood of the NCAA's public relations department, "it is difficult to count how many actual allegations there are in a long list. One paragraph might contain several violations relating to one incident. Another paragraph might not contain any allegations."

Oklahoma State originally was given until Dec. 1 to prepare its answers to the allegations, but received a 90-day extension until March 1, 1977.

A four-man committee is preparing Oklahoma State's reply. The committee is composed of Floyd Gass, athletic director; Norman Moore, a university vice president; Charles Drake, the board of regents' legal counsel; and Ray Chapel, faculty representative.

Kamm is in Africa until Dec. 3, so Dean Boggs, vice president for academic affairs, told The Oklahoman that he did not "know anything about the investigation itself, as far as what has been learned by the committee."

"We are obliged by the agreement we have with the NCAA, as I understand it, not to comment.

Dibbs' Grand Prix hopes jolted after upset loss

TENNIS — Eddie Dibbs, defending Bower tennis champion, was upset by Mark Cox 7-5, 4-6, 6-1 in the second round of the London tournament while Raul Ramirez beat Juan Higueras 6-7, 6-2, 6-1. The loss may have cost Dibbs the Grand Prix championship. He is currently second, 60 points behind Ramirez. Top seeded Roscoe Tanner and second seeded Ken Rosewall moved into the quarterfinals of the Japan Open of the Asian-Pacific tennis circuit. Tanner eliminated Kim Warwick and Rosewall ousted Russell Simpson. Tanner meets Jurgen Fassbender and Rosewall plays John Whitlinger in Friday's matches.

"They are trying to put us out of business," says Mike Davies, executive director of the World Championship Tennis, after hearing of plans for an enlarged 70-tournament men's Grand Prix circuit that would offer $7 million in prize money.

"It is war," said Davies. The WCT last week announced plans for a $2.5 million circuit. The WCT has operated the first four months of the year and the Grand Prix the last eight months.

GOLF — Australian Stewart Ginn shot a five-under-par 66 to take a three-stroke lead after the first round of the Melbourne International Golf Tournament. Guy Wolstenholme of England is second with a 69 and Australians Randall Vines and Roger Davis are tied with New Zealand's Simon Owen at 70.

FOOTBALL — "This team isn't working together," declared Houston Oilers quarterback Dan Pastorini in announcing he wanted to be traded. "I had high hopes when I came here (1971) that we'd build something, maybe a dynasty. We haven't built anything." Against Baltimore recently, Pastorini criticized a teammate on the sidelines after the Oilers had dropped eight passes. "Anybody that's competitive is going to get mad when things aren't going right," says Coach Bum Phillips.

Texas fullback Earl Campbell did some jogging as the Longhorns worked out for Saturday's game with Houston, but Coach Darrell Royal said Wednesday he was not counting on the Tyler rose for action against the Cougars.

Bengals improve running attack

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals Coach Bill Johnson believes his team's running game is improving enough to balance the passing attack, "but game conditions dictate what you will do." The "dictators" in Monday night's nationally televised National Football league game will be the powerful Los Angeles Rams, specifically the defensive front four: Merlin Olson, Doug France, Larry Brooks and Fred Dryer.

"In my association with San Francisco, the Rams had a group they called the 'Fearsome Foursome.' In my opinion, this group is stronger," Johnson said Wednesday.

Johnson, whose Bengals have a 6-2 record and lead the American Conference Central Division, said he does not think of the game against the National Conference West leaders as a playoff preview.

University to open new Payne Theater

AUSTIN — The University of Texas-Austin will officially open its new Payne Theater Friday night. The theater, named for the late B. Iden Payne, internationally-known Shakespearean director who was a distinguished member of UT's drama faculty from 1946 to 1973, is incorporated in a two-level, $4.5 million addition to UT's drama building. The project involved approximately 52,000 gross square feet of new construction in addition to about 7,000 square feet of remodeling of the drama building. In addition to the theater, the new space has increased the area for the drama department's dance and costume design facilities. Also included are a multi-media lecture room and several seminar rooms and service areas.

through Nov. 20 with a production of playwright Tom Stoppard's "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," directed by Stephen Wyman, assistant professor of drama. A special dedicatory performance of "Hamlet" is scheduled Sunday, honoring the memory of B. Iden Payne. The invited audience will include regents of the UT System, UT administrators, and alumni and supporters of the drama department. Featured speakers at the dedicatory event will be two former students of Payne at UT — Barbara Barrie, now starring on Broadway in the Neil Simon hit, "California Suite," and Vernon Weddle, a successful professional actor on the West Coast. The project architect for the theater and drama building was the Dallas firm of Fisher and Spillman, with the firm of Jean Rosenthal Associates of Orange, N.J. serving as theater design consultants.

ENTERTAINMENT

But it is the Payne Theater that occupies the center stage spotlight. Just as Payne was uncompromising in his standards for young actors, the designers have not compromised on the technical equipment that will give drama students a broad range of experience in learning the varied crafts of theater. Acoustically designed for the spoken word, the theater features 18 rows of sloped continental seating providing excellent sightlines. UT drama officials agree there is not a bad seat in the house. The intimacy of the theater is assured, in that it is only about 60 feet from the apron of the stage to the back row.

The theater stage itself (including wings) is 102 feet wide and 38 feet deep, with the actual acting area being 32 feet wide. Fifty-seven lines of complex rigging suspended from a grid 71 feet above the stage hoist scenery upward into an 85-foot stagehouse. The forestage area can be hydraulically lowered or raised to provide an orchestra pit, or a thrust stage. Located over the back of the theater is a lighting and sound control room containing sophisticated electronic equipment that can be programmed to "remember" light cues at the punch of a button. UT's drama department will use the new theater for its major productions. This season, the department is experimenting with presenting its major shows in repertory, offering two shows on alternate nights during a given time span. Shakespeare's famous "Hamlet" will be Friday's opening presentation. The production is directed by Prof. James Moll. It will alternate in performance

UTPB plans novel readings

ODESSA — Readings from a new novel "The Spring Tour" by its author Peter N. LaSalle, visiting professor of creative writing at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin, will be featured in the second of three Writers' Forum "Evenings" Thursday at 8:30 p.m. at the college. The event, in classroom 358 of the main campus, is open to the public free of charge. Stan Williams of the Odessa College literature faculty and Patrick Dearen, a writing student under LaSalle, will read from novels they have written. An informal discussion will follow the program. The last of the "Evening" sessions will be Dec. 2 at the same time and place.

Globe resumes 'Opry' series

ODESSA — The Globe Theater resumes its popular "Brand New Opry" entertainment series with a show Saturday night. The "Opry" series showcases Permian Basin country and Western music talent by providing area vocalists and instrumental groups with a chance to perform before live audiences in a professional theater. The shows are held on Saturday nights in the regular intervals between productions. The upcoming show first in three weeks since the Globe opened its current "Story Theatre" production, will feature talented young performers from showman Happy Shahan's "Alamo Village" at Brackettville. Shahan has brought performers under contract to him at Alamo Village to Opry shows in the past. Among the headliners will be Dotsy, a 23-year-old, blonde, blue-eyed charmer who has scored with her renditions of "Storms Never Last" and "I'll Be Your San Antonio Rose." Joining her on the program will be another popular singer from Alamo Village, Mark Forbus from Midland. Forbus, currently being groomed for stardom on the country-Western circuit, also is achieving success as a songwriter. Still other featured performers in the upcoming show will be Tami Whitmore of Crane, who has performed in numerous "Brand New Opry" shows, and Peggy Walker, Judy Platek, Suzie Raff, Darla and Jackie Krepps, and "Texas Twisters," an ensemble composed of Mark McCord, Jeff Huckabee, Steve Galloway, Chris Harris and Calvin Wallen III. Tickets for the big show will go on sale at 6:30 p.m. Saturday at the Globe box office, priced $3 for adults, $2 for students and senior citizens, $1 for children under the age of 12. Students at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin will be admitted free with identification.

Hillery moves near Ireland presidency

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — The way appears cleared for Dr. Patrick Hillery, European Commission Market commissioner for social affairs, to be declared the next president of the Irish Republic by acclamation. Hillery, 54, was nominated by the Fianna Fail party to succeed President Cearbhall Ó Dálaigh, who resigned last month. On Wednesday, the ruling Fine Gael and Labor parties decided not to nominate candidates to oppose Hillery in a national election that would have been held Nov. 24.

Aging Lansky escapes trial

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The Justice Department has decided not to appeal a federal court's dismissal of an indictment against Meyer Lansky, alleged financial wizard of the underworld. Lansky, aging and ill, had been indicted here in 1972 on charges of conspiring to conceal about $36 million in casino earnings from the Flamingo Hotel. U.S. District Court Judge Roger D. Foley dismissed the indictment Sept. 30, saying Lansky's health appeared to be worsening. A year earlier, doctors told Foley that Lansky was too ill to stand trial. Last week, the U.S. attorney's office filed notice that it would appeal the dismissal. But Asst. U.S. Atty. Richard Wright said Wednesday that a Justice Department representative later told him to withdraw the notice. No reason was given for the order, Wright said.

Circus plans Sunday show

The International All-Star Circus, one of the nation's most popular traveling shows, brings its new, bigger, "better-than-ever" entertainment package to Midland to unwrap in a single performance here Sunday afternoon.

The 3 p.m. presentation will be in the County Exhibit Building on U.S. 80 East. Tickets will be for sale at the doors before performance time. Circus officials this year are promising the most thrilling show in the circus' 11-year history, describing it as an action-packed magic mixture of sight and sound, capturing the hearts of children and reviving the enthusiasm of adults. Star circus performers and wild animals from all over the world will join in recreating the color, the flavor, the magic of circuses of yesteryear.

The circus is the most traditional form of family entertainment in America, and the International All-Star Circus brings all the glitter, glamor, thrills and excitement of an old-fashion "Big Top" extravaganza at the same time presenting the show in the cleanliness and comfort of a modern building, sponsors of the performance here point out. The sponsoring organization in Midland's Elks Lodge No. 1826, with proceeds to benefit the lodge's benevolent programs and projects.

Choral debut set for new director

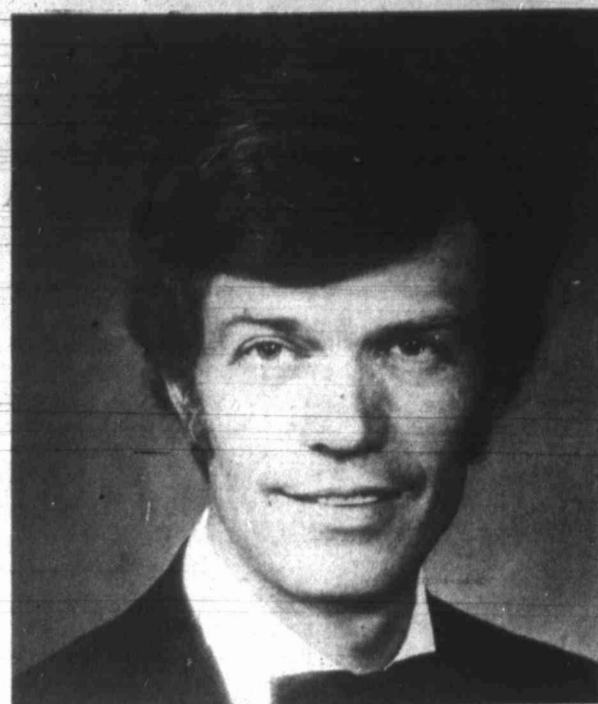

Richard Clark, newly-appointed director of the Midland-Odesa Symphony's Chorale, will be on the podium for the all-choral programs scheduled next week as the second concert pair of the orchestra's 1976-77 season.

The concerts, featuring works by Handel, Vivaldi, Haydn, Hemberg and Menotti, are scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday in Odessa's Bonham Junior High School, and 8 p.m. Tuesday in the auditorium of Lee High School here. Season tickets will be valid for either event and, in addition, single tickets may be purchased at the doors in advance of each concert.

Clark, who joined the music faculty of The University of Texas at the Permian Basin this fall, came here from a teaching position at the University of Washington. He attended Whitman College and Eastern Oregon College, graduating from the latter school in 1964 with a B.S. degree. He received a master's degree in musicology and history in 1971 from the University of Oregon. He has had specialized study with the eminent British conductor Denis Stevens at the Vienna Choral symposium, as well as special study at the Liederkrantz Seminars and at University of Oregon summer festivals. Show biz cliché comes true for 19-year-old ballerina

NEW YORK (AP) — The star at the last moment steps down and her stand-in steps up. That show business cliché actually happened recently to Leslie Browne.

Miss Browne, a 19-year-old member of the New York City Ballet's corps de ballet, replaced Gelsey Kirkland, the star of the American Ballet Theatre, as one of the four major characters in a much-publicized movie, "The Turning Point."

She got the role when Miss Kirkland bowed out because of tendonitis, a tendon inflammation common among dancers.

The movie, written by Arthur Laurents and directed by Herbert Ross, is about two middle-aged women who started out together as ballet dancers. The character played by Anne Bancroft has devoted herself to her career, while the character played by Shirley MacLaine has become a housewife.

Miss Browne plays Miss MacLaine's daughter, who is an up-and-coming ballet star, Mikhail Baryshnikov, the famous Russian defector hailed as the heir-apparent to Rudolf Nureyev, portrays Miss Browne's boyfriend.

How does the young dancer feel about the big break?

"I'm excited. I never even dreamt of it," says Miss Browne dutifully, but it's clear she is less than overwhelmed by her overnight stardom. She is a sophisticated show business child whose parents are former ballet dancers and to her, footlights and greasepaint are as familiar as breakfast cereals. Besides, she isn't at all interested in becoming an actress.

"I want to dance and dance only," she proclaims. "Just plain acting is not what I want. It's okay, but I'd rather act through movements than through my voice and my facial expressions."

The 5-foot-4, 95-pounder with her light brown hair, green eyes, long neck and milk-white skin, looks the typical classical ballet dancer that she is.

She was born in New York, but grew up in Phoenix, Ariz. Her father, a former American Ballet Theatre soloist, still operates a dance school there. Her parents are divorced and her mother works as a travel agent in New York.

Miss Browne returned here a few years ago to attend the Professional Children's School and the School of American Ballet, the official school of the New York City Ballet. Within a year, George Balanchine, the school's faculty chairman and ballet master of the City Ballet, picked her to join the company and she made her debut in "Symphony in C."

She obtained a leave of absence this summer from City Ballet to work on the movie, originally as Miss Kirkland's stand-in, and also to play a small role. She got the job through her parents, who are long-time friends of Nora Kaye, one of the movie's associate producers and a former prima ballerina of the American Ballet Theatre. Miss Kaye is married to director Ross, who is also the movie's co-producer.

Exhibit announced

AUSTIN — More than 175 silver objects from Argentina — ranging from swords and stirrups to necklaces and chalices — are in a new exhibit in the Michener Gallery of The University of Texas-Austin. Titled "Silverworks from the Rio de la Plata, Argentina," the exhibit will remain on view through Dec. 3.

Drawn from collections in two Buenos Aires museums, the silver pieces are on tour of the U.S. in commemoration of the nation's Bicentennial. The show is being circulated by the Smithsonian Institution.

Created during the 18th and 19th centuries by artisans in Spanish colonial territory that included what is now Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Bolivia, the objects represent cultural and social aspects of life in the Greater Argentine area known as the Rio de la Plata or "River of Silver."

TRUMPETER-BAND LEADER DANNY DAVIS brings his famous Nashville Brass group to Midland High School auditorium tonight for a performance for members of Midland Community Concerts Association and their guests. The 8:15 p.m. event will be followed by an informal reception, open to all concert-goers, in honor of the visiting musicians.

Schools to bear less cost

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Figures released in conjunction with Gov. Dolph Briscoe's school finance plan indicate that school districts in the Midland area will bear a reduced share of the cost of the Foundation School Program under Briscoe's proposal.

The Briscoe plan is calculated with the state assuming 90 per cent of the program cost and the school districts assigned the Governor's Office of Educational Resources estimated property values.

The computer printout shows that Midland Independent School District would receive a total of $10,940,900 in state aid for 1977-78 under Briscoe's proposals, an increase of $2,480,300 over a hypothetical base year.

The base year incorporates 1975-76, and 1976-77 costs figures as those costs would be calculated under present law.

The printout itself warns that "the values, methods and data are recommendations and estimates, and are subject to change."

While it was not immediately clear just what the figures could mean to the 1,100 school districts in the state, it is certain that the figures will be the focus of attention from now through the next legislature of many educators, and local taxpayers who have been urging the State to assume greater responsibility for funding education.

Other area districts and their projected state aid are: Greenwood ISD, $152,900, up $104,700; Ector County, $14,773,700, up $4,316,400.

Johnson conviction affirmed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The attempted murder conviction and life sentence of Edgar Johnson has been affirmed by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Johnson, who was appealing from a Midland County conviction, was assessed life because of two previous felony convictions. Johnson filed a brief in his own behalf, saying error occurred in the trial court twice through improper argument of the prosecutor and the trial judge's comments on the "weight of the evidence."

The appeals court, however, pointed out that no objections were raised either time in the trial court and stated that nothing was presented for review.

"We have carefully examined the record and find the appeal to be without merit and wholly frivolous," the court said.

Fervent backpackers 'loving the trail to death'

By PETER H. KING

POINT REYES NATIONAL SEASHORE, Calif. (AP) — Moss-covered Douglas firs, leafy ferns and California buckeye grass form a gantlet of green, defining the trail of rich brown dirt.

Turkey vultures, warblers and woodpeckers soar overhead. The gurgling Santa Maria creek is heard but not seen.

It's a wet and dreary weekday in this bastion of nature on the coast north of San Francisco. But the dismal weather has failed to dampen an increasingly prominent feature of the wilderness scenery — backpackers.

In the space of two hours, 11 backpackers troop by a hiker who had hopped for something like solitude — shuffling examples of a leisure-time pursuit that has attracted thousands, spawned a million-dollar industry and posed a threat to the very countryside that lured it.

"Not only the terrain, but the wilderness experience is being eroded," the National Park Service states in a leaflet distributed to hikers at Wyoming's Grand Teton National Park. "Soon conditions may be little different from those we wanted to leave behind at the roadhead."

From the Pemigewasset Wilderness in New Hampshire to Point Reyes here, a new breed of backpackers is giving the wilderness a workout.

—In 1966, Point Reyes was visited by only 1,505 backpackers, park records show. By 1973, the number had risen to 32 thousand.

—Use of the John Muir Wilderness in California more than doubled between 1965 and 1975, according to U.S. Forest Service figures.

—The number of backpackers using Utah's Wasatch mountain range increases five to six per cent each year, a Forest Service recreation planner estimates.

—A single trail in the Pemigewasset Wilderness was hiked by more than 40,000 persons in one year, forcing the Forest Service to place restrictions on camping and campfire use.

—At some points on the Appalachian Trail, a 2,000-mile scenic corridor which cuts through Eastern mountains from Georgia to Maine, hikers pass every 20 seconds.

"People are loving the trail to death," laments an official.

Backpacking, sport of the hardy and curse of the tenderfoot, has blossomed into a $200 million-a-year business. As a result, purists now complain about the cascade of footfalls and the loss of the days when the challenge of backpacking, as one veteran hiker put it, was to "leave the wilderness just as you popped your last raisin into your mouth."

"People have more time," says Tommy Winnett, author of "Backpacking for Fun," one of 33 works published by his Wilderness Press. "New highways have made wilderness areas much nearer in driving time. Lightweight, durable backpacking equipment is widely available, and dehydrated and freeze-dried foods have been developed.

"But the main reason is that city life has begun to drive us crazy," concludes the 55-year-old Winnett, who started backpacking as a Boy Scout. "The worst thing about a backpacking trip for me is the car noise I have to endure to get to the mountains."

Gene Rose, a veteran backpacker from Fresno, Calif., attributes a large measure of the sport's popularity to the environmental movement.

"But there are as many reasons why people have taken to backpacking as there are backpackers," he adds. "I like to take photographs. Others are into fishing, or like the challenge, or are botany buffs."

George Rudolph, majority stockholder in Donner Mountain Corp., says the trails get busier as equipment gets lighter.

Rudolph, 68, has been in the business since 1935, when the majority of "backpacking" was done by skiers who toured the slopes with crude equipment sold by a handful of retail shops.

"Where it used to take a 60 pound pack for a two-week trip," he says, "it's now down to 30-32 pounds. It makes it more fun and easier to do. The packs are lighter and carry more comfort items."

According to one retailer, the cost of completely outfitting a backpacker from scratch has risen from $200 to $350 in just a few years.

"It's terrible — there are too many people," laments Theodore Dierks, who operates a backpacking outlet in Berkeley. "They've pushed out what I call the 'circle of disaster.' You now have to travel three days to get away from people once you get into the mountains."

"They've used up all the wood; fished out the streams and lakes; and pounded the crap out of the place."

As a result, forest managers are becoming increasingly concerned about preserving the delicate ecology of the trails.

"We're having some fairly serious impacts," says Ned Therrien, information officer for the White Mountain National Forest in New Hampshire. "There's some serious trail erosion, loss of vegetation and problems with the disposal of human waste."

Many trails have strict quotas placed on their use. Here at Point Reyes, for example, there's a two-month waiting list of people who want to make weekend reservations for one of the park's tightly controlled backpacking campsites.

At Yosemite National Park in California, backcountry use has tripled in the past 10 years while total park use has increased by just 15 per cent, according to a report by Dr. Jan van Wagendonk, National Park Service researcher.

Wagendonk notes that park managers, "faced with the problem of a deteriorating wilderness resource and experience," decided in 1972 to initiate a program of backcountry management that included use limits.

Briscoe implores Reed

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Gov. Dolph Briscoe Monday mailed a letter to Secretary of the Air Force Thomas C. Reed, urging the continued use of Webb Air Force Base at Big Spring, saying the "impact on the region if it's closed would be far-reaching."

"Surely you would agree," Gov. Briscoe wrote, "when 7,668 individuals constituting 19.1 per cent of Howard County's population are affected, and when the EIS (Environmental Impact Statement) report itself concludes that a minimum of 6,239 persons would leave the county—there is a major economic and social impact! Knowledgeable and authoritative sources in Howard County believe these estimates to be on the low side."

Gov. Briscoe cited the projected unemployment rate from the EIS report would raise the unemployment rate to 2.8 per cent to 12.9 per cent, he said, "well above the national average."

"More than 25 per cent of the consumer spendable income of Howard County would be lost," he said, again citing the EIS report, and an estimated decrease in the Howard County total regional output of $49.7 million annually should the base close.

"Equally important is the consideration of what the Air Force stands to lose," Gov. Briscoe continued. "The fixed assets at Webb Air Force Base are valued at $128 million, and replacement costs would be several times that amount. This includes a new hospital, new airman's dining hall and new bachelor airman's quarters for a combined cost of almost $6 million. Weather conditions and ideal air space circumstances combine for optimum air operations, and relations between the local community and the Air Force have been outstanding."

"I most respectfully urge that the foregoing and all other pertinent factors be carefully considered in the public hearings and in further review consideration on this vital matter. Please keep me closely advised of all developments," Gov. Briscoe concluded.

Last month, Gov. Briscoe said he would investigate locating some state agencies at Big Spring, possibly on the air force base, if Webb AFB closed down.

ODESSA — The juvenile justice system will be the topic of an address to the American Society of Criminology in Tucson, Ariz., Friday presented by Dr. Clyde B. Vedder, visiting professor of sociology at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. He will participate also in a panel discussion on juvenile criminal justice.

Auto repair involves communication

Most automobile repair problems between a customer and a dealer really are communications problems, according to Bill Rogers, Texas Automobile Dealer Association president.

Rogers, owner of Rogers Ford Sales in Midland, made the statement here Wednesday at a fall workshop involving more than 40 Permian Basin auto dealers.

The dealers met in a morning session and luncheon at the Midland Hilton to keep abreast of highway legislation, government regulation of the automotive sales industry and legal trends of interest to dealers.

To aid the communication problem between consumer and repairman, Rogers the members, the association has developed a mediation panel called Autocap (Automotive Consumer Action Panel).

In two years the mediation panel has been a great success, having solved 90 per cent of the more than 300 cases brought before it without legal action, said Gene Fondren, executive vice president of the Austin-based dealer association.

Fondren urged dealers to band together into more effective lobbies to help stem the tide of increased government regulation into the industry.

Although the consumer legislation now being considered for the industry is well-intentioned, most is unreasonable, poorly thought out and will ultimately cost the consumer more money if adopted, Fondren said.

Among those Fondren rattled off as falling in this category were:

- A proposal to require a $5,000 bond for each repair done in a garage.
- A rule that would allow prospective buyers of new cars eight hours of solitude to decide if they should "buy or steal" a car and three days after purchase to drive a car from coast to coast.

High-priced legal settlements on consumer items benefit a few and ultimately cost all consumers more, he said.

He urged consumers to be aware that consumer safety features must be looked at from a cost benefit standpoint. The safety bumper and the proposed air bag are not worth their costs, Fondren said.

Woman doctor enjoys nurturing function

NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Cyrille Halkin laughs when she recalls walking down the hall of a Manhattan hospital as an intern back in 1946.

"Some of the elderly men didn't know what to call me, so they'd yell out 'Gollie,' 'Nursie,' and I was startled. I wasn't used to hearing this."

Now that she's known as Dr. Halkin, the pediatrician, and as the first woman vice president of the New York Medical College, things have changed a little, she says.

Over the last 30 years she became a wife and a mother, and in a light moment adds that she only recently discovered that she's an "earth mother" of sorts.

The "earth mother" concept might sound odd coming from a college vice president, but Dr. Halkin says that's how she approaches her job:

"I just really like people. I think of my work as a doctor and as a person as an all-embracing effort. Reaching out, nurturing, healing ... from the basic family unit up through the work of the medical college and the lives it touches.

"This is why I chose pediatrics as a specialty. My personal bent is towards nurturing."

Dr. Halkin, who says she "long antedates the women's lib movement," was one of a dozen women to graduate from the New York Medical College in 1945.

"From then on, I made a commitment to not only participate in medicine to the best of my ability, but also to use my assets as a woman. The sensitivity, compassion and a little more thoughtfulness that I think women have are a great help in medicine," she explains.

The women in her family were achievers, she adds. "They never stopped along the way. And I've always felt that anything a man can do, I can do too."

Dr. Halkin officially became vice president for development at the college in January, 1976. Working on the executive level, she notes, "is still people to people. It's just on a larger scale."

The 54-year-old physician says her job is to help develop plans for the medical school in two areas — its city campus in Manhattan and the suburban Valhalla, N.Y., campus.

She has her own private practice and has been teaching at NYMC since 1949. Her new role as college vice president adds more hours to her working day, but Dr. Halkin states that "the only problem that presents is finding a place to park the car."

Families on move advised to take look at schools

CHICAGO (AP) — "Schools remain the single most important factor in a family's choice of one community over another when people are looking for a new home," says Dr. Kenton E. Stephens, an educational specialist with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW).

Recent Census Bureau figures indicate that about half (46.5 per cent) of all U.S. households move every five years. An estimated 500,000 of these moves each year are job related and many involve families with school-age children, according to the head of a nationwide organization of real estate brokers.

"We recently surveyed a number of leading educators to determine ways in which the quality and style of a community's school system can be best evaluated," says William A. Ellis, president of RELO, a home referral service made up of 850 brokers who specialize in family relocation services.

Many of the educators queried agree that parents are concerned about quality education but caution that too few know how to assess a school system properly, Ellis reports.

HEW's Stephens, former superintendent of the Oak Park, Ill., public schools, says that "compatibility" is the single most important quality to look for in any school system.

"People should seek out schools that reflect the particular set of values they hold," he advises.

"You can find a school system that is completely oriented towards high academic standards, for instance, but this approach may de-emphasize the humanistic qualities some parents consider important for their children. If, however, a family wants academic excellence to the exclusion of all else, parents should look for scholastic emphasis in choosing the school community," Stephens suggests.

To properly gauge schools, Stephens encourages parents to talk with teachers, principals, and with some of the people in the community. He also advises checking into the availability, quality and scope of programs — music, art, dance or automechanics — that are important to parents and their children.

Dr. Donald Thomas, formerly a school superintendent in Illinois and California, and now head of the Salt Lake City, Utah, system, comments, "The extent to which parents are encouraged to participate in a school system can be an important key in evaluating a community's schools."

Dr. Thomas also recommends that home shoppers look at the adult-student ratio in the schools. "Most people consider the student-teacher ratio, but this leaves out an important element," he says. "Aides, volunteers, tutoring by high school students, utilization of experts from industries, professions and business are all important resources that a progressive school system can call on to provide quality programs.

"There is another quality that marks a superior school," he says. "That's the system's ability to identify students who are having trouble keeping up and its ability to provide extra services for these children. I would ask school officials to discuss programs for gifted and exceptional children and for underachievers."

Ellis says RELO's survey of educators found other questions parents should ask to evaluate school systems:

- What percentage of graduates go on to higher education?
- How much does the school district spend per pupil?
- How do the schools rate on national achievement tests?

Kimble, Irion fields gain new producers

A confirmation well has been completed in a Kimble County field and two Irion pools gained extenders.

Alamo Natural Gas Co., Midland, has completed its No. 7-93 Johnson Ranch as a second Strawn gas producer and 3/4-mile southwest extension to that pay in the Doreen field of Kimble.

Calculated, absolute open flow was for 62,000 cubic feet of dry gas daily, producing natural from open hole at 1,046 feet, where 4 1/2-inch casing was seated, and 1,050 feet, total depth.

A reentry operation, it originally was drilled by Barron Kidd and Cherry Brothers as No. 2 Johnson. Wellsite is 586 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of M. A. Kadie survey 92, abstract 983, six miles southwest of Junction.

Wellsite is 586 feet from north and 330 feet from west lines of M. A. Kadie survey 92, abstract 983, six miles southwest of Junction.

The project gauged a calculated, absolute open flow of 4.18 million cubic feet of gas per day, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 15,371-1. Distillate gravity is 63 degrees.

It is producing through perforations at 7,000-7,118 feet, after the pay zone had been acidized with 1,000 gallons and fractured with 52,000 gallons and 38,000 pounds of sand.

Total depth is 7,814 feet, and 4 1/2-inch casing is seated at 7,305 feet. It is 828 feet from south and 1,245 feet from east lines of section 7, San Antonio Ditch Co. survey.

The Tom Ketchum (Canyon) field of Irion gained its fourth gas well and was extended 3/4-mile south with completion of TEX, Inc. and Gwen Weiner, Fort Worth, No. 2 Busby.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 2.250 million cubic feet of dry gas per day, producing through perforations at 7,450-7,498 feet, and the pay was acidized with 3,000 gallons.

Wellsite is 860 feet from south and 500 feet from east lines of section 3081, block 28, H&TC survey, 11 miles northwest of Mertzon.

Spraberry gains test

Frank W. Cole Engineering of Dallas staked site for No. 1 J. T. Midkiff, a 9,000-foot project in the Spraberry (Trend Area) of Midland County, 22 miles southeast of Midland townsite.

Location is 660 feet from north and east lines of section 48, block 39, T-4-S, T&P survey.

Also, Gulf Oil Corp. plans to reenter and plug back to 9,300 feet for tests in the Spraberry (Trend Area) at No. 2 Mrs. O. P. Buchanan, et al. former Devonian producer in the Azales field of Midland County.

The old total depth is 11,488 feet, at the project which spots 660 feet from north and west lines of section 30, W. M. Baldrige survey, abstract 1014, 10 miles east of Midland.

Hara named show head

TULSA — James E. Hara, president of Skelly Oil Co., Tulsa, has been elected president of the International Petroleum Exposition & Congress, Inc., by the IPE and directors.

He succeeds Randolph Yost, president since 1970, who will remain on the board of directors.

THE IPE directors also set the actual date for the next International Petroleum Exposition as No. 5-9, 1979 in Tulsa.

It was announced in May that the IPE, which was started in 1923, would from now on be held every three years instead of every five years.

Hara joined Skelly in 1948 as a staff attorney in Texas. He was elected executive vice president in 1963 and moved up to the presidency in January 1975.

Winkler test flows

HNG Oil Co., Midland, No. 2-21-3 University, Winkler County scheduled wildcat, 1/2 mile southeast of the one-well Guinar (Atoka) gas field, flowed gas at the rate of 1.2 million cubic feet, with an unreported amount of condensate, no water, from the Atoka.

Flow was through perforations at 12,719-12,723 feet, natural. An earlier test flowed gas at the rate of 1.4 million cubic feet per day, plus three barrels of condensate per hour, for six hours, on a 10-64-inch choke.

Total depth is 13,085 feet, and plugged-back depth, 13,025 feet. Operator ran 4 1/2-inch casing to 11,278 feet.

Location is 990 feet from north and east lines of section 3, block 21, ULS, five miles northwest of Wink.

Space agency serious about satellite energy

By FRANK MACOMBER Copley News Service

A few months ago there was a brief hoopla over a space science proposal that planet earth could use satellites to pull electrical power from the sun and thus help ease the global energy shortage.

But it was a story which somehow was discarded by most of the public as another "pie in the sky" panacea for our energy shortcomings. Indeed, the accounts seem to have all the trappings of science fiction.

Nevertheless, the federal space agency is dead serious about this idea, possibly because if it should succeed, NASA's existence would have been worthwhile even without its triumphs in the field of manned space missions, communications and weather satellites, etc.

The man who apparently is ramrodding the voltage-from-space project is Ralph I. LaRock, director of NASA's Energy Technology Applications Division in the Office of Energy Programs in Washington.

Electricity for homes and industry from outer space? Not only is it possible but entirely probably soon after the 21st Century begins, according to LaRock.

He says NASA, the aerospace industry, the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) and several other organizations already are studying a proposed Satellite Power System.

LaRock sees it as a series of satellites spun into orbit high above the earth and always in the same position in relation to one particular spot on the globe: (To achieve that "stationary" position, the satellites must be launched to an altitude of 22,300 miles, so they travel at the speed of earth's rotation and thus appear to be stationary.)

Each satellite would draw energy from the sun with its huge field of solar arrays or panels and convert it to electricity. In turn the energy would be transmitted by microwaves to a conversion plant on earth for distribution to industrial and residential consumers, LaRock explains.

One NASA study projects a cost to the consumer of 4.5 to 5 cents per kilowatt-hour — a rate competitive with the predicted cost of conventionally produced electrical power by the turn of the century.

"We need to do our homework from now until 1979," says LaRock, "so we will have a good understanding of what we need to do in the way of technology advances in the 1980 to 1990 period, to be ready for the development phase from 1990 to the year 2000."

"This is a long-term program, and it's like the Chinese proverb that says if you want to travel 1,000 miles you must take the first step. These satellites will be 22,300 miles out in space, so we should take the first 22 steps now."

NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala., is doing much of the research on the Satellite Power System, with help from the Boeing Aerospace Co.; AEC, Inc.; Grumman; Raytheon; E. D. Little; and the Aerospace Corp.

Still, the White House and Congress have not yet been sold entirely on this project, so funding has been slow.

Charles H. Guttman, manager of the Marshall Center's solar power satellite team, says limited dollars for the project so far require all the help possible from other NASA centers, other government agencies, universities, industry, and scientists in and out of government.

As for technical problems in the way of a satellite power system, LaRock believes that by 1990 these will be solved and "a few solar power satellites could be operating by the year 2000."

Eventually, a fleet of them could provide enough endless power to provide a significant share of the earth's energy needs, LaRock and some other NASA scientist-engineers believe.

D. D. Feldman Oil & Gas, operating from Los Angeles, Calif., has scheduled No. 1 Texfel Petroleum Corp. as a 7,600-foot wildcat in Scurry County, 16 miles northeast of Snyder.

Drillsite is 2,710 feet from north and 2,940 feet from east lines of section 619, block 97, H&TC survey, 1 1/2 miles southeast of the Fuller, East multipay field.

The Garza prospector is Resources Investment Corp. of Midland No. 1 Oklahoma-Connell, a 3,300-foot try to be drilled six miles east of Post.

Location is 467 feet from north and 660 feet from west lines of section 54, block 5, GH&H survey, 1 1/2 mile southwest of the Arlene (San Andres and Gloria) field.

James P. Dunigan, Inc. of Abilene has staked site for a 7,500-foot search in Irion, 14 miles north of Mertzon. It is No. 1-32 Field.

Location is 660 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 32, block 10, SPRR survey, 3/4 mile northeast of a 7,300-foot failure and two miles northwest of the Thomand

Wildcats bolster Permian Basin operations

Operators last week scheduled 141 oil and gas projects in the Permian Basin Empire.

The total jumped 39 from the 102 sites staked two weeks ago in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico.

Last week's tally included 39 wildcats and 102 development tests.

Eight counties on the East side of the Basin, under supervision of Texas Railroad Commission District 7-C topped the list in exploratory tests filed, with 22, while eight are slated for the South Plains area, and four were staked in the Midland RRC sector. Five ventures are scheduled for New Mexico.

The Midland RRC office again topped the list in field tests with 44.

Carter's transition team prepared

WASHINGTON — Now that Jimmy Carter has what he wants, he will spend the next 11 weeks deciding what to do with it.

Some decisions apparently have been made already.

The Carter White House will not have a single chief of staff, but will instead have five or six top-ranked people reporting directly to the President, according to Greg Schneiders, who has served as Carter's campaign chief of staff.

Carter will have top-ranked advisers in categories of national security, domestic policy, appointments and administration, press, the Office of Management and Budget (which will be a White House staff post of highest rank, rather than being outside the White House staff), and a political liaison specialist dealing with both Congress and state officials.

Since August, Carter had a team of 11 specialists quietly drawing up policy alternatives on government reorganization, foreign policy, the economy, the environment, business, labor and community development.

Carter's transition team, headed by Jack Watson, 37, an Atlanta lawyer, will begin presenting those policy alternatives to the President-elect this week. The largest and most urgent of the presentations is a giant looseleaf notebook filled with proposals for the fiscal 1978 federal budget. A member of Carter's staff says the notebook contains a series of policy alternatives on every major spending issue that could come before Congress next year.

The urgency in making budget decisions is that the new federal budget must be submitted to Congress on Jan. 17, three days before Carter takes office. Therefore, of necessity, the work will be done mostly by President Ford's administration. To put his own imprimatur on the budget, Carter will have to be ready early in his term to begin making substitute spending proposals.

Carter will begin preparing those substitutes early, assigning at least one economics expert to a transition office inside the Office of Management and Budget. Similar transition offices undoubtedly will be set up in each of the executive branch agencies, to be paid for out of a $2-million transition budget approved by Congress.

Carter said Tuesday night that if elected he would take a week off to rest in Plains before opening a transition headquarters in Washington in "a couple of weeks." The plan calls for Carter to spend about four or five days a week in Washington and to spend his weekends at home in Plains.

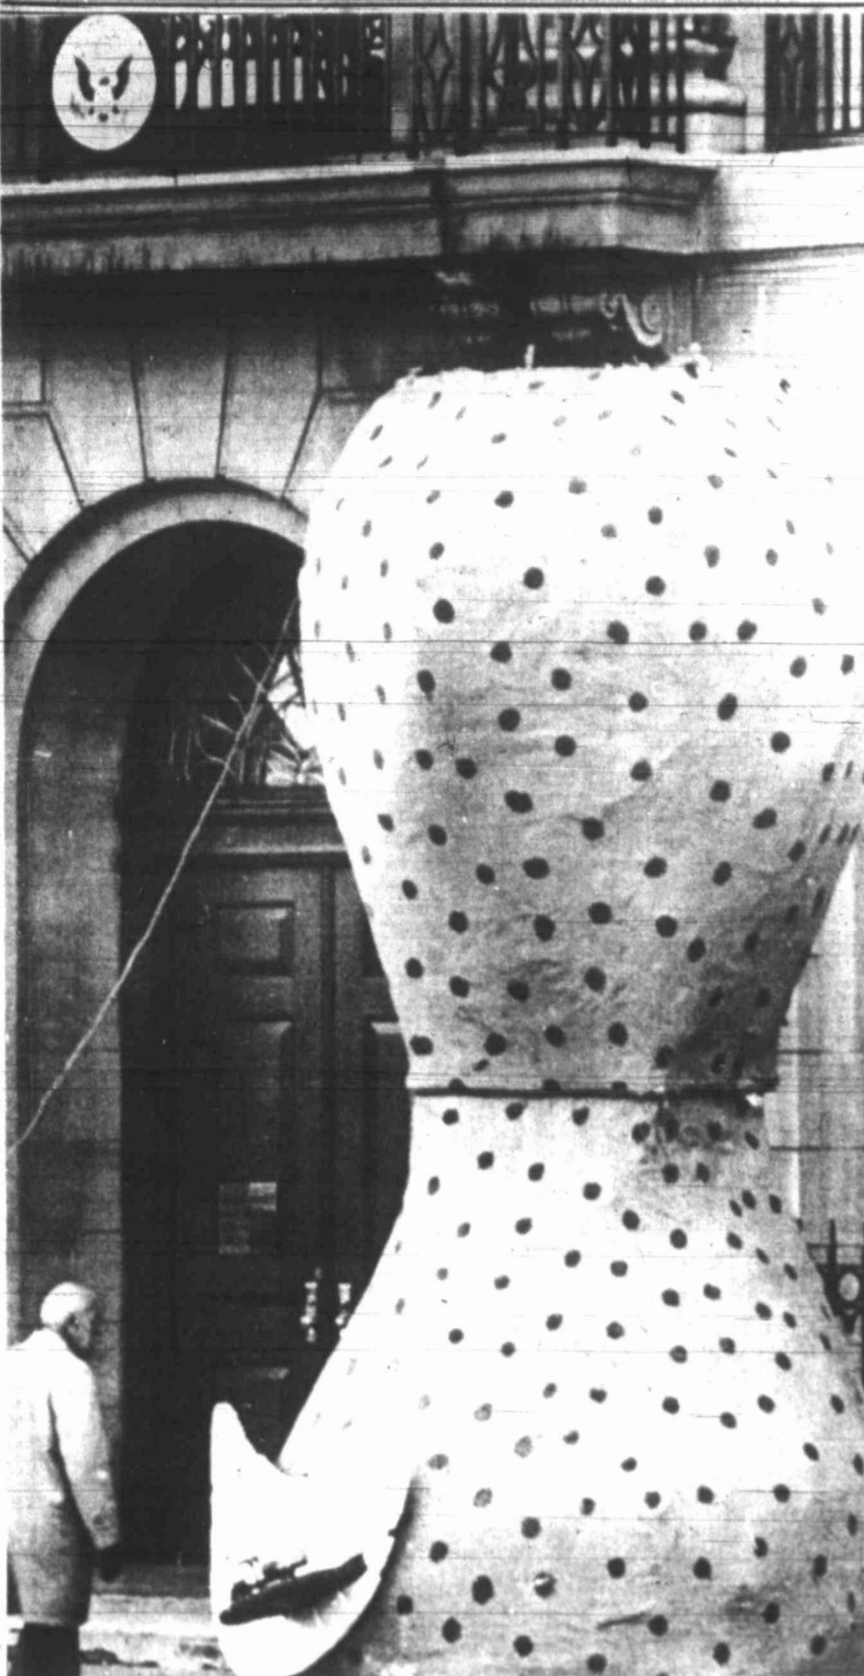

Schneiders, who is Carter's personal aide, said that appointments to the administration and the filling of Cabinet posts probably will be made one at a time rather than saving them for one final, televised spectacular at which the entire Cabinet would be presented to the country en masse, as Richard Nixon did following his election in 1968. In the first few weeks, there probably will be few administration appointments with the exception of the naming of key people to the White House staff.

Carter's top adviser, Atlanta lawyer Charles Kirbo, has said flatly he will not go to Washington, but if Carter presses him, he may find it impossible to resist. Among the most likely to be considered for Washington assignments are Watson, campaign director Hamilton Jordan, press secretary Jody Powell, campaign treasurer Robert Lipschutz, campaign issues co-ordinator Stuart Eizenstat, Frank Moore, the campaign's liaison with Congress, Schneiders, and Pat Anderson, a novelist-cum-speechwriter.

Among the tasks undertaken by the transition team was a review of each of the 147 federal laws that will expire next year to determine which Carter should attempt to renew and which should be allowed to die. The intent of each law and the cost of administering it were prime factors in the team's consideration. Also under review are every treaty and international trade agreement in which the United States is involved.

The Carter transition team has been at work since last summer but has received little publicity. Carter aides kept the transition work under wraps for fear the public would think the Democratic nominee presumptuous for starting transition work so early.

President bows out with touch of class

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Gerald Ford and his family will live in the White House for nearly three more months, but they said an emotional good-bye to it a few minutes after noon Wednesday, an hour after the President called Jimmy Carter and conceded defeat.

With his voice reduced to a near whisper and dark circles spreading below his puffy eyes, Ford stood and listened as his wife, Betty, read a telegram to Carter, acknowledging it was all over.

"I believe that we must now put the divisions of the campaign behind us," the brief message said, "and unite the country once again in the common pursuit of peace and prosperity."

"Although there will continue to be disagreements over the best means to us in pursuing our goals, I want to assure you that you will have my complete and wholehearted support as you take the oath of office this January."

The message had already been read to Carter in a private telephone call, and the country knew beyond any doubt that it had elected a new President.

All that was left of Gerald Ford's political career was for him to go through the required ritual of publicly admitting defeat. And, the man who lived with the reputation of a stumblem in the White House bowed out as he bowed in two and a half years ago — with a touch of class.

After Mrs. Ford read the telegram, they stepped down from the podium, and with their four children, worked their way through the packed pressroom, shaking hands and chatting with reporters.

It was an emotional moment. At first, Ford seemed to be struggling to retain his composure; his wife was noticeably nervous, and their daughter Susan, 19, stared straight ahead, her eyes brimming with tears.

White House employees and political associates who had campaigned across the country for him throughout the autumn applauded with gusto as the family walked through the corridor from the Oval Office and into the bright television lights. When it was over, several secretaries sat at their desks and sobbed for the first time since the vote count began moving inexorably toward Carter.

Ranking campaign aides expressed disappointment that they hadn't won a state or two in the Deep South, but they vowed they would not second guess the President, themselves, or their strategy.

Ford went to bed about 3:15 A.M. Wednesday, just before the television networks projected Carter the winner, still hoping he might awake, like Harry Truman 28 years ago, to find the tide had turned.

But when he arose at 8:30, Carter had already claimed the victory.

And by then, campaign chairman James A. Baker, deputy chairman Stuart Spencer, White House chief of staff Richard B. Cheney, and political pollster Robert Teeter had almost finished a state-by-state review of the returns to see if a glimmer of hope was left.

There was none, and about 10:00 a.m., they told Ford he had lost.

He drafted the telegram to Carter, then walked down the hall to his doctor's office for 20 minutes of treatment to his throat, wracked by day after day of stump speaking. When he got back, he called Carter, spoke briefly in his hoarse whisper, then asked Cheney to read the new President-elect the telegram of concession.

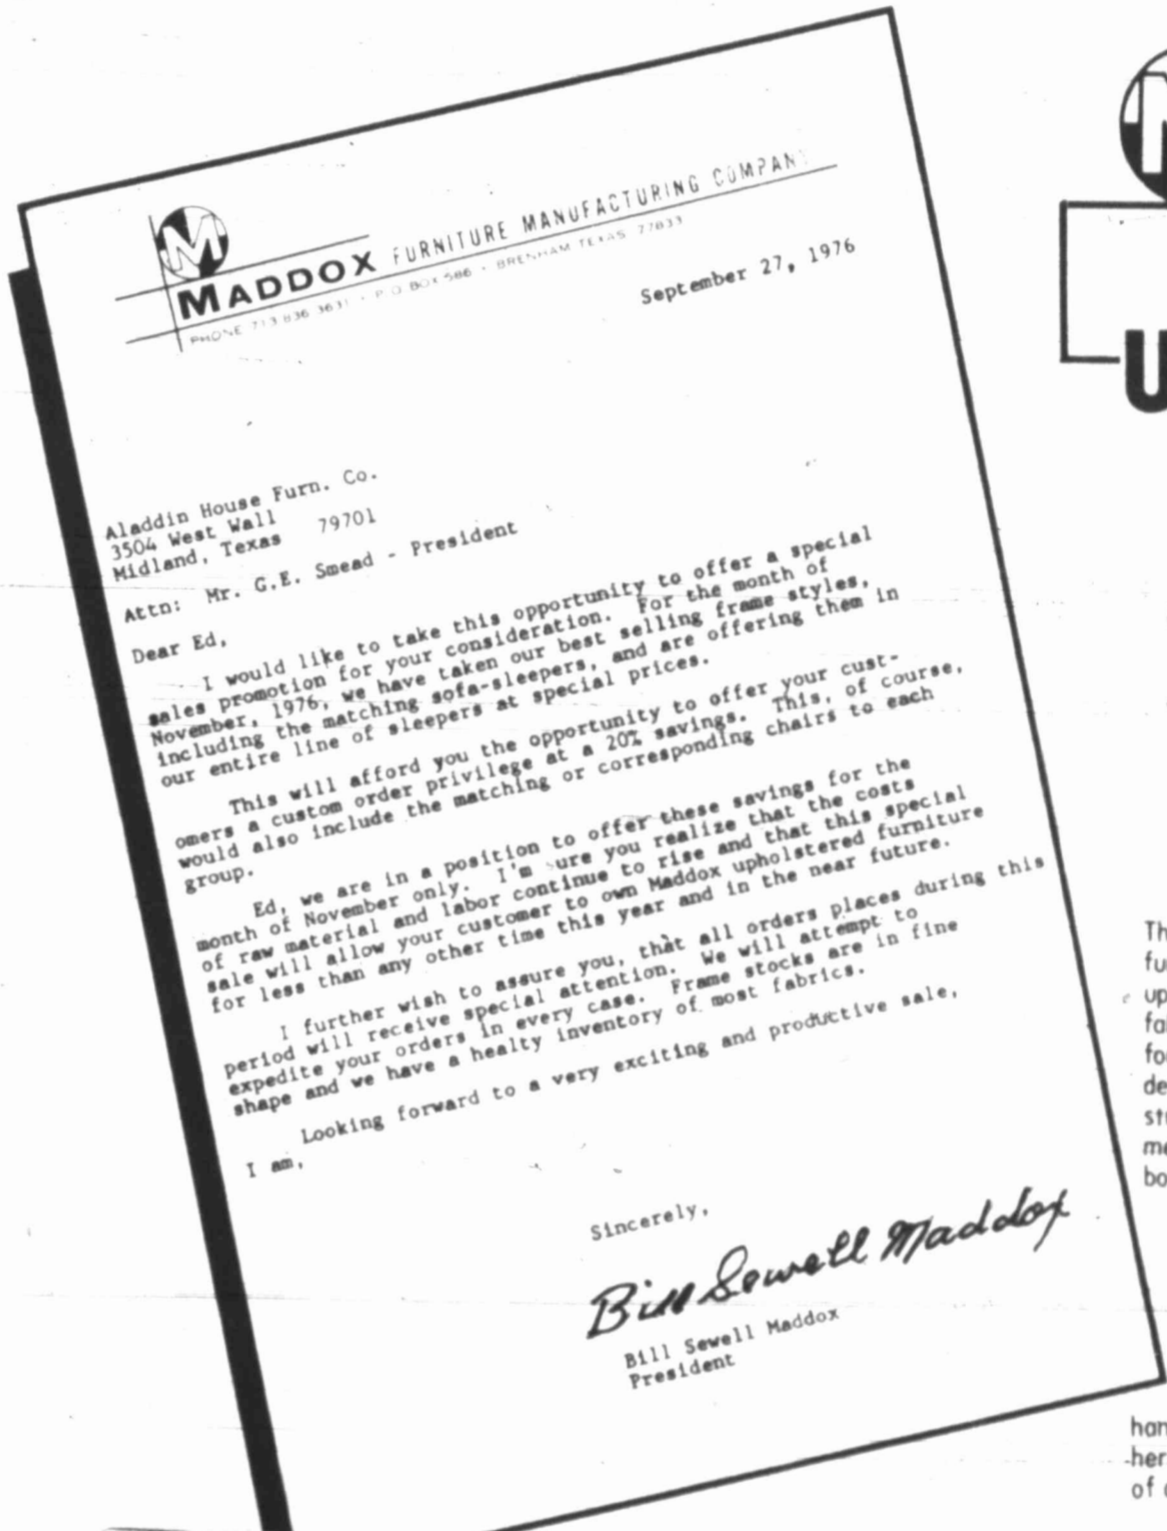

Wednesday afternoon, Ford worked for a few hours alone in the Oval Office before having a quiet dinner with the family.

He planned to leave next weekend for a golfing vacation in Palm Springs.

But for the first, incumbent President turned out of the White House since Herbert Hoover in 1932, there was still much to be done. There was a state of the union message to be prepared for delivery to Congress just before Carter's January 20 inauguration.
