Brochure explains program

The most commonly asked questions about integrated cultural exchange activities for elementary school pupils this year have been answered in a pamphlet which will be distributed today or Friday to each elementary school pupil.

Superintendent of schools Dr. James H. Mailey said the purpose of the brochure is to supplement the information on the scheduling of the activities which has been provided to parents by the principals.

The brochure explains the purposes of the cultural activities which are required under the court order settling the Midland desegregation case and lists the number of activities for each grade level this year.

Questions regarding dates for the activities, how the child may be reached, lunch arrangements, transportation and safety and policy on absences are answered also.

The cluster arrangement for fourth through sixth grade for next year is outlined in the brochure.

A second brochure has been prepared for teachers who will be involved in the desegregation plan. It explains the court order and the cluster arrangement and contains information on planning for the elementary school reorganization.

This brochure will be distributed to faculty members today or Friday and will be available to other interested persons on request, Mailey said.

The brochures also will be available at the community meetings for goal setting to be held by school board alembers Nov. 23 and 30 and Dec. 2, Mailey said.

Meany says labor willing to discuss wage-price norms

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany says labor leaders are willing to discuss voluntary wage-price guidelines if proposed by President-elect Jimmy Carter, but Meany remains adamantly opposed to mandatory controls.

"I'm quite sure when the time comes we'll be ready to talk to him about it," Meany said, referring to voluntary restraints.

At a news conference Wednesday, the 82-year-old labor chief jokingly said he expects to play the role of "elder statesman" in the new administration.

Meany also said that when he has problems affecting workers, he expects "to have that problem considered by Gov. Carter when he becomes President." He added "that is the only commitment Carter has made to me - that any problems we have he will give them immediate consideration.

Sen. Robert Dole, President Ford's vice presidential running mate, often charged during the campaign that a Carter victory would make Meany the real president. Meany said Dole cost Ford votes because the Kansan came across like "a brand new Dick

The new administration's first order of business, Meany said, should be to provide jobs and turn the economy around. A tax cut may be a needed stimulus, he said. However, economic statistics issued last week raised the possibility that inflation may be more of a problem than Carter thought, forcing him to resort to special anti-inflation measures such as wage and price restraints.

Carter said during his campaign he would like to ave standby authority to impose wage and price controls, if needed, but he didn't think they would ever be used. Some of his advisers and congressional Democrats have speculated the president-elect may seek to establish voluntary guidelines for wages and prices.

Meany said "we will be there" any time Carter wants to call business and labor together to talk about curbing

Electrical shock kills Midlander

A 22-year-old Midland man was accidentially killed by an electrical shock Wednesday afternoon when an aluminum pole he was using to pick pecans with apparently touched a power line.

Lazaro Garcia Sanchez of 1107 E. Pecan St. was pronounced dead at the scene by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine. The accident happened about 2:35 p.m. at 401 W. Broadway Ave., police said.

Sanchez was in a tree approximately 25 feet above ground when the pole touched the power line.

Lupus doesn't worry her, except at night

By ED TODD R-T Staff Writer

McCAMEY - Rejection. It's unsettling, to say the least.

"If you're allergic to yourself," asked Barbara Penn, "what are you going to do?"

Worry, obviously. And, if you can muster the gumption and put on the facade, you also try to carry on as if nothing under God's blue heaven was amiss. Try.

She does and does so very well.

"Oh, I think she's got an excellent attitude," said Jay Penn, her 24-yearold husband and father of her two daughters.

"She doesn't let it get her down, except at night . . . Sometimes she cries.

"She's always doing her best," said Penn. "Of course, sometimes she's real worried about it.'

The "it" in her life is lupus. It's an arthritis-related disease termed systemic lupus erythematosus" (SLE). Its come and go. There are aches and pains and swelling of the joints; sometimes knots; a butterfly-shaped rash about the face; headaches. And, most of all, for Barbara Penn, there is fear. For now, the symptoms have subsided, abated, gone away. But they'll come back and play havoc. That's almost a certainty.

"Everybody in my immediate family has arthritis real bad," she said, without any outward glimmer of discouragement or fatalism.

"I've been in hospitals, in and out, forever (it seems) . . . for first one thing, then another," said Mrs. Penn,

During her high school days in Lubbock, she suffered from occasional fainting spells. Later, she developed headaches and rashes. She suffered from aches and pains and swelling. Knots appeared on her legs. There was, and is, more.

She avoided prolonged exposure to the sunlight. Still does. The sun's rays, somehow, caused her to have headaches. Then, too, there was the danger of breaking out in a rash.

"When it first started, I thought I was dying," Mrs. Penn said of the lupus symptoms, particularly those purple knots.

At first, those symptoms were diagnosed as phlebitis. As recently as last January, she was back in the hospital in Lubbock. Her attending physician, who had yet to diagnose the disease, told her not to worry. "He gave me some medicine and said I'd outgrow it." Tests later on indicated that the recurring disease was lupus. It af-remained. "I'm fortunate; I really am for-tunate," she said. "And (I) realize there are a lot of people who are not. Everytime I read about these people (having severe lupus symptoms), it just makes me sick inside." Lupus has been described as a "civil war within the body." The antibody system is disturbed, and the body's defense mechanism is at a loss to combat hostile forces - diseases and invasions by whatever names.

Mrs. Penn's interest in lupus goes beyond herself and her family. "I want to see something done so bad," she said. That something would be a foundation to underwrite the costly research needed to determine

"I'll never get a foundation started if I don't get help," said Mrs. Penn. And she has vowed not to give up on herself or on the dream of a lupus anybody," she said. In the meantime, Mrs. Penn is her husband's helpmate at the drive-in theater they own and manage on the northern outskirts of McCamey. They moved here earlier this year from Lubbock, where Penn was an elec-

He was grossing about $1,400 a month, but "the rat race has (had) got this old man of 24 down," he said. So, they acquired the outdoor theater, which Penn's late father, Truett Penn, had operated. It's a living, but nothing more.

"We like this country living pretty well," Penn admitted. "I do." (He's building a greenhouse for his wife. It's near their mobile home and office that fronts the more distant movie

Liking country living, too, are the Penn daughters, Amy, 4, and Tracy, ups of lupus. Not long after the Penns had settled

"He (the doctor) told my husband it was probably tension," she said. Her husband seethed over those words, she said.

"I understand a doctor's position," Mrs. Penn, on the verge of philosophizing, said. "I really do. They're busy; they have other patients to see about.

"I can understand their not knowing (about all diseases, particularly lupus), but I can't understand their not caring." Soon, the headaches faded. And

Mrs. Penn, again, returned to an outwardly wholesome appearance. "She's 5-foot-2, (has) eyes of blue, and the temper of a red-head," Penn, sportingly and affectionately, said.

Promptly and lovingly, she lit into him with a jarring slam. There was laughter. There's no laughter, nor is there any depressing grimness, when they talk of her illness. "There's hope of living a long life."

United Way falls behind schedule

United Way contributions took a big jump but fell behind schedule today as volunteers reported a total of $577,843 or 86 per cent toward the goal of $671,000.

Chairman Ron Schwisow reminded volunterers that the United Way is not just another charity but the most effective system to help people directly and personally and to make every dollar do the work of three.

Jack Seaman, area manager, received the award of merit for his employes at Northern Natural Gas for attaining 50 per cent or more Fair Share giving.

Two firms with 100 per cent employe participation were honored: Tri-Service Drilling Co., accepted by Mary Moran, and Halliburton Services, accepted by Don Narrell.

This week the "Great Moments" award for achieving the greatest increase was Hal Battle, with 96 per cent for his education section.

Hard to beat: 'Coors' meeting hall

As many clubs and organizations and groups and cliques as there are in the Basin, sometimes meeting halls are at a premium, but the one at the D. K. T. Company on U. S. 80 near the airport has a special bonus that keeps it booked year-round.

It's free Coors beer, the legendary brew that has brought lawsuits in the East by dealers clamoring to sell it and has done a brisk business in sixpacks and cases to be taken east of the Mississippi by western pilgrims.

vaults by Claude Addington, 25-year associate of distributor J. ("Shotgun") Henry, a couple of weeks ago, and I'm happy to say there is no danger of running out of Coors in the Basin any time soon. There is room for some 160,000 cases of the Colorado Coolaid in the main vault, plus another big-family-size icebox for thousands of kegs of draught Coors. The huge insulated trucks delivering the brew from Golden, Colo., back right into the antercom to unload, so the beer is never warmed from the brewery through the distributor.

It's some kind of a toper's dream. Actually, I killed three birds with one stone by visiting the Coors Hall as a guest of the Terminal Lions Club during its Ladies' Night to see and hear glass wizard Joe Pyle of Odessa demonstrate glass-blowing president of the Terminal Roarers, invited me out, and I'd seen some beginning Lions but I'd never seen any terminal Lions, so I was glad to go to the club that usually meets, of course, at the Air Terminal across the highway.

But it's a great setting for meetings and parties, and it was interesting to see and hear the secrets of the ancient art of glass work as Pyle fashioned an elephant (no political connotations, he assured us) and a swan and a worm while explaining the properties of the element that has done nearly as much as the wheel to bring civilization and comfort and health to humankind.

Pyle got into the artistic aspects of glass after being trained as an in-dustrial glass worker, and his major career involves supplying beakers and tubing and vessels of all kinds for specialized laboratory and other industrial procedures.

But he's obviously a man much enamored of his calling, which entails handling red-hot glass for hours on end, staring into the flames that make the glass malleable, and constantly rotating the raw material to keep it from getting bent out of shape. Yet he spends at least a couple of hours a day working on fanciful animals after putting out the day's industrial wear.

Man jailed in kidnaping

A 21-year-old Midland man has been arrested on a charge of aggravated kidnaping in connection with two early morning incidents this week involving 7-Eleven clerks.

The man was arrested in the 1600 block of English Drive by Sgt. L. H. Burney shortly after 5:15 p.m. Wednesday.

Formal charges will be filed and bond will be set Friday.

Early Monday, one female clerk at the 7-Eleven, 4404 W. Illinois Ave., told police a young Negro male tied her hands behind her back and blindfolded her with a sock. Police said he first told her, "You are coming with me." Then, after she was bound, he told her, "Don't come out or we will kill you.'

Early Wednesday, another clerk told officers a man entered the 7-Eleven, 1912 N. Big Spring St., and ordered her to get the keys and lock up the store because she was coming with him. After she refused he reportedly chased her around the store, then fled.

PAUL COLEMAN, left, retiring district engineer, Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, and A. Henry Pearson, his replacement, both of Odessa, were honored Wednesday noon at a luncheon given by the Highway Committee of the Midland Chamber of Commerce in the Petroleum Club. Coleman, whose retirement is effective Nov. 30, is moving to Paris, Tex.

GOP women foresee bright future for party despite election loss

By LINDA SCHAFFRINA

Despite the results of the presidential election, the Republican Party's future looks bright to two Texas Federation of Republican Women (TFRW) leaders.

Ann Bergman of Weatherford, president of the organization, and Elizabeth Rohn, district committee woman and district director of TFRW, were in Midland Wednesday to speak to the Midland Republican Women's Club.

Mrs. Bergman said the final figures are not in yet, but Republicans definitely made gains in local races in Texas which are necessary to build grass roots organizations. She noted that the participation in the Republican primary was much higher this year than in the past. "You cannot really build a two-party state until there are more people in our primary," Mrs. Bergman said. She said many persons may have been attracted to the Republican primary by this year's presidential race and the gains may be temporary. But, she said, many of those people will stay in the party.

The two women agreed that Texans ballots than in the past but said straight party Democratic voting is still a problem.

"As a relative newcomer to Texas (six years), I think that philosphically most Texans follow the Republican

Elizabeth Rohn

Party but their tradition is Democratic" Mrs. Rohn said. "If they start voting for their grandchildren instead of their grandfathers," the Republican Party will grow, Mrs. Bergman said. Mrs. Rohn said the strength of the Republican Party in this senatorial district is growing. There is now a Republican Party chairman in each of the 33 counties except Crane County, she said. "I sure do want to find one in Crane," Mrs. Rohn added. She said the first step in strengthening the party is to "have electable candidates at the local level," such as the sheriff and county commissioners.

On the role of the Republican women's organizations, Mrs. Bergman said, "I think the Republican Party is lost without them, because women do most of the work in politics."

She said women in the party in Texas have had the opportunity to participate because of the party's growth.

'We don't have very many (elected officials) in the courthouse, nor do we have the union strength," so the women's groups have a large role to fill in the state, Mrs. Bergman said. As far as the national Republican Party is concerned, neither of the women is worried.

"I think we'll pick up the pieces and build a stronger party," Mrs. Rohn

DETROIT (AP) -Seven-yearold Laura Denomie and 35 other children had just started their English lesson in Betty Mc-Caster's first-grade class. A man entered, exchanged a few words with the teacher, then shot the teacher.

"Miss McCaster was screaming," Laura recalled later. "(She) reached her hand out and tried to push the gun away but bullets hit her and she fell back against the table." Miss McCaster, 46, was fatally shot in the head Wednesday in her classroom at Burt Elementary School on Detroit's northwest side.

"We were screaming, and we all ran out of the room," Laura told police. "He shot her three or four times from this far away.' she said, indicating a distance of about five feet.

Hours later, police arrested Miss McCaster's estranged husband, Al J. Lewis, 46, on open charges.

Most classes were canceled for the rest of the day at the school, where Miss McCaster had transfered only three weeks ago because, police said, she was afraid of Lewis.

Her sobbing pupils fled the scene and clustered in the firstfloor classroom. Their parents waited anxiously in the corridor while police tried to piece together the youngsters' confused stories of what happened.

Police and school officials said a man had come to the school, inquired where Miss McCaster's

Bettye McCaster classroom was, and entered it just as she began an English lesson. Pupils said the two exchanged a few words before the man pulled a gun. When Miss Mc-Caster told one child to go to the #### Salute to Veterans!

Texas and Texans today are observing Veterans Day — on the traditional date - and it is great that the Texas Legislature saw fit to designate Nov. 11 for the observance in the Lone Star State.

The Nov. 11 date, of course, stems from Armistice Day, which commemorated the signing of the armistice ending World War I on Nov. 11, 1918. The observance later was changed to Veterans Day in honor of all those men and women who have served this nation in its armed forces.

The original Veterans Day somehow got mixed up in the "long holiday weekend" legislation of several years ago, changing the date to the fourth Monday in October. This was not acceptable with many individuals and organizations. As a result, legislation last year was passed by Congress and signed by President Ford, returning Veterans Day to Nov. 11. The change, however, will not become effective nationwide until 1978.

But regardless of date, Veterans Day stands out as one of the most patriotic, most significant and most meaningful of our national holidays.

And to make the observance even more meaningful, it is hoped that Old Glory today is flying from millions of housetops here and across the land as Americans recognize and express sincere appreciation to all United States military personnel who, through the years, have placed duty and patriotism above personal considerations.

There is nothing wrong with a show of patriotism at any time, but on this particular day patriotism should shine through in dazzling brilliance as citizens honor all those veterans, both living and dead, who have fought to win and preserve this nation's freedom.

It is particularly noteworthy that on this Bicentennial year Veterans Day that the United States is at peace and that not a single American is engaged in combat anywhere around the

This is something for which we can be especially thankful as we also give thanks for all those veterans who have been engaged in combat in times past. They have been willing to make many sacrifices, even life if need be, to protect their country and the American way of life.

Yes, this is a most significant and patriotic occasion. A number of special events marking the observance are being held here and elsewhere, with veterans service organizations taking the

Meanwhile, all Texans pause in a sincere salute to this nation's veterans on the traditional Veterans Day.

Chicken soup's on!

It is noteworthy that President Ford, during the last days of his campaign, found himself resorting to the most nonscientific of remedies when his voice all but gave out.

Not accomplishing much for his hoarseness with hot tea and honey, he tried what his personal physician called the "ultimate weapon" - chicken soup. It worked.

Mr. Ford thus has taken us to both ends of the medical spectrum. He's the author of the swine flu vaccination program which represents the most advanced thinking in immunology. And he's just proved again that there are some mysteries of medical treatment that yet elude the scientists.

It always has been the opinion of many that mothers and grandmothers perform some alchemy in the kitchen and the sickroom which cannot be reproduced in a test tube.

We can thank the President's sore throat for the comforting news that if the swine flu vaccine doesn't do the job, we have a second line of defense.

How's the inventory of chicken

WASHINGTON MERRY — GO — ROUND

Quiet rebellion of scientists

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON - A revolt of scientists and engineers inside the Nuclear Regulatory Commission could halt the spread of nuclear energy in this country. It is a quiet rebellion, unique in my 30 years in Washington, of nuclear technicians who are deeply concerned about public safety.

The alternatives are grim. Secret overnment studies warm that it is too late to stop the conversion to nuclear energy without painful consequences. It would mean crash programs to develop new energy sources and draconian measures to conserve existing energy supplies.

But other secret studies warn that nuclear power plants may not be as safe as their advocates claim. There is growing concern, for example, that private utilities cannot afford the high cost of repairing their nuclear facilities. Any failure to maintain nuclear reactors, of course, could lead to disastrous accidents.

The federal government may be compelled to spend billions to keep nuclear plants repaired or else abandon the whole idea of nuclear energy. But experts fear that the development of nuclear facilities has gone too far -there are now 58 plants in operation — to reverse course without wrenching repercussions.

The private utilities have been the most powerful force behind the nuclear power program. They, of course, want to develop energy that they can sell. Nuclear energy would utilize their system of grids and cables; some other form, such as solar energy, might not need wires. The political pressure from the utilities, therefore, has been strong enough to persuade the government to push nuclear energy. But government scientists, troubled over the danger of radioactive leakage, are now digging Internal documents in our possession indicate that the rebellion began in May not long after a nuclear projects manager, Robert Pollard, quit the NRC over the safety issue. The dissidents belong to the elite group of scientists and engineers who are responsible for the safety of 'everything with wires" in a nuclear reactor. Of course, reactors contain a

About 11 of the group's 25 experts are openly dissident, with varying degrees of militancy. They fear that their superiors are so committed to nuclear energy that they are ignoring the hazards. The most frightening possibility is that a "core melt" could occur, the next worse menace to a nuclear explosion.

The NRC's reactor czar, Bernard Rusche, a genial fellow with a crushing handshake, has sought to quell the rebellion. He dispatched the NRC's inspector general, Thomas McTiernan, to interview the people in the electrical instrumentation branch. Far from cowed, the dissidents told McTiernan exactly how they felt.

McTiernan prepared a 300-page report, which has been kept under lock and key. Nevertheless, we have obtained an executive summary of the document, which details the rebels' charges. They expressed fears of "random single failures" in crucial power apparatuses. They also spoke in less technical language. Some told the bosses to their faces that the NRC was too cozy with industry and that public safety was being ignored.

As late as September 10, the dissidents aired their feelings at a closed meeting of electrical instrumentation experts. Again, the talk was technical, but the underlying message was ominous. We have had access to the confidential minutes. 'The NRC,' charged the dissidents, "is being forced by industry to accept designs" which don't meet even the commission's own dubious safety regulations.

There was technical discussion, for example, of the design of an auxiliary control room. It would be dependent upon the main control room, which supposedly would remain operational even if it had to be evacuated. Yet any contingency serious enough to cause the evacuation almost certainly would damage the master controls.

It doesn't take a technician to figure out what would happen. Neither control room would operate This could result in a massive release of radioactive poisons into the environment.

Reactor boss Rusche spent an hour explaining the NRC's side of the story. There has never been an instance, he insisted, where private industry was favored at the expense of plant safety. "If the plant's not safe," he said, "it's not going to operate." He had shut down one plant permanently and two dozen for brief periods, he said.

ple to reject me. 'Companies took out advertisements urging the people to vote. and the TV stations gave free time to voter registration drives. This hurt me in the last week of the campaign. We tried to get equal time to appeal to the people to stay at home, but the networks wouldn't give it to us."

I said, "Then what you're saying is that you believe there was a conspiracy to keep the voters from staying away from the polls?"

"You said it, I didn't," Apathy replied. "I'm not saying I didn't make mistakes. I should have cared a little more as the campaign came down to the finish line. But if I had shown any concern people would have said, 'How can you be Apathetic if you're working so hard for support?"

"Some columnists and commentators have said that you were never serious about what you were doing. that you saw your role as spoiler. What is your answer to that?" I

"Lies, all lies. I wanted to give the people a choice between Ford, and Carter and myself. I believe Apathy has an important role to play in the political process. I was certain that this year was my big chance. You had two candidates that no one could get excited about. Apathy was on everyone's lips. All over the country you saw bumper stickers which said, Vote for Apathy.' Maybe I'm a Monday morning quarterback, but I think if Ford and Carter had had one more debate. I would have gotten 51 per cent of the vote, plus Oregon and Ohio

"I know you didn't win," I said. but you can take some satisfaction in knowing you affected the election."

'What do you mean?" Well, if you had achieved a large non-tournout, Ford could have beaten Carter. The polls were predicting that low turnout would favor the Republicans, while a large would help the Democrats."

'It wasn't my intention to help either one of the candidates. I was in this for myself. It was my dream that people would be talking about Apathy for the next four years. I singlehandedly turned them off on government, and I thought the voters would stay that way.'

Life for Gerald Ford never again will be the same

WASHINGTON - People wonder what President Ford will do when he's no longer President Ford. They don't want to let this good man go, and it's remarkable that some who voted for Carter say they're sorry about Mr. Ford. But for Gerald R. Ford life will never be the same. He soon takes on the role of "former President. Former Presidents are hardly private citizens. Wherever they go, people point and stare or take pictures or ask for autographs. Secret Service men will lurk about, and the presidential aura will linger.

For this reason, I suspect that President Ford will have to move from his middle-class neighborhood in suburban Alexandria, Va., to some type of retreat residence. Otherwise, the tour buses which traffic this area will be called on for a President Ford stop, and that will certainly clutter the street.

Moreover, if former President Ford remained in the Washington, D.C., area, his public appearances here would be a bore after a while and, rightly or wrongly, he would become a has-been in the very city where he spent nearly all his working life. There should be something special about a former President's coming to Washington, and Mr. Ford will sense that, I believe.

Mr. Ford says that he does not intend to vegetate after he leaves office. He shouldn't worry about that. There will be so many demands on his time that he'll spend hours turning down

He'll be invited to give speeches to all manner of groups, front for a variety of causes, participate in schemes to save the human race, travel to foreign nations anxious to host'a former President, Mr. Ford will also have two tons of mail and telegrams to respond to, and mull over the possibility of writing memoirs, though his remembrances of the Presidency will span only 30

The President's friends say that he does not want to get involved in any undertaking or job where he is tied down. While there were reports that he would like to teach at a university. such a program would likely be in the form of a lecture series. He would like to be associated with a university.

At 63, Mr. Ford is younger than his years. He does daily calisthenics, and swims and skis a lot. He is in excellent physical condition. He is also a workdriven man who likes job challenges. Given his vitality, he is going to be active in something after he leaves of-

When he succeeded Richard Nixon in the extraordinary circumstances of August, 1974, Mr. Ford was not interested in running for election in 1976. But after he was in office a few months, he realized that his would indeed be a lame-duck Presidency if he did not declare his intention to run.

and that he did Consequently, he worked hard at his Presidency, incurred the anger of congressional Democrats with a string of vetoes which he saw as necessary to hold down inflation. One result is that he takes pride in what he was able to do in the 30 months fate gave him as President. He will grow increasingly proud of that record, and his intimates feel that he will gain more respect and admiration for what he accomplished in a very difficult time, indeed. Interestingly enough, the late campaign surveys showed that people liked and trusted Mr. Ford more than they did Mr. Carter. The closeness of the election attests to that, and the fact that Mr. Carter benefited from highly committed regional and minority voting -Southerners of both races, and blacks everywhere. Admiration and commitment are two different feelings.

The late Harry S Truman once suggested that former Presidents be given a certain status in the U.S Senate so their experience and knowledge could be tapped in crucial situations Thus, former Presidents would have the privilege of visiting the Senate, perhaps even to give speeches. The Constitution does not provide any voting right for such distinguished visitors, and it wasn't Truman's idea that there should be

Somehow, we should be able to call on former Presidents for guidance and assistance in situations which try the republic. How to do it, without making the former President an awkward presence, is a real problem.

The Los Angeles Times

MINNEAPOLIS - Minnesota Gov. Wendell Anderson announced Wednesday that he will resign as governor some time in the near future so his successor, Lt. Gov. Rudy Perpich, can appoint him to the Senate seat to be vacated by Vice President-elect Walter Mondale.

Perpich has said in the past he will name Anderson to Mondale's seat if Anderson resigns as governor. Mondale has not said when he will resign his seat, but is expected to do so sometime in December to allow his successor to gain seniority over those new senators who will be taking office in January, 1977.

Mondale gained his Senate seat in December, 1964, under similar circumstances. Hubert H. Humphrey had been elected Vice President in November, 1964, with the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Karl Rolvaag, then governor of Minnesota, wanted to take the seat for himself (using the same strategy Anderson is now employing), but declined to do so because of his relative unpopularity with the voters and the enmity between him and then-Lt Gov. A.M. (Sandy) Keith Rolvaag named Mondale, then an up-and-coming state attorney general, to the Senate seat in December, allowing Mondale to gain seniority over other well-known senators like Joseph Tydings and the late Robert Kennedy of New York, who took office in January, 1965.

Anderson, 43, has been governor since 1970 and is considered highly popular statewide. He had been urged to take the seat by leaders of organized labor and close friends within his own Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) Party, which holds most major elective and appointive offices in the state. Anderson has been a strong backer of Hubert Humphrey. However, neither Humphrey nor Mondale have given any hint as to whom their own choices as Mondale's successor should be.

There was some speculation in recent weeks whether Anderson, by arranging to take the seat himself, would trigger opposition within the party because two other ranking DFL officials, congressman Donald Fraser from Minneapolis, and Atty. Gen. Warren Spannaus, also wanted the appointment.

Spannaus is a close friend of Mondale's and was his campaign manager in 1972.

Forrest Harris, a DFL party executive and strong Fraser supporter as well as spokesman for the more liberal wing of the DFL, said he doubted Anderson's move would cause serious intra-party divisions. "A lot of people in the party would like to see it play a bigger role in picking Mondale's successor," said Harris, "such as a nominating convention or statewide special election. But there won't be any wide split over this. People in the party will accept and adjust to it."

Traffic tearing up state roads

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A traffic J.C. Dingwall, Austin, state chairman survey of Texas highways shows that more than 70,000 miles of Texas' main roads and streets will wear out in the next 10 years because of a 24 per cent increase in traffic.

The survey results were released by

TO PUT THE WANT ADS TO WORK DIAL 682-5311

of The Road Information Program

"Unless road work is accelerated, Texas roads and streets will not be able to handle future traffic volume efficiently and economically," said Dingwall, who is a former state highway engineer.

He said the TRIP survey showed that three-fourths of the state's 94,198 miles of major traffic arteries should be resurfaced or rebuilt by 1986 to handle an estimated 2.2 million population growth, economic expansion and continued exodus of industry and workers to the suburbs, TRIP

The survey also predicted that by

-Texas drivers will log a total of 100 billion miles per year, compared to 80.6 billion in 1975.

-The number of cars, trucks and buses will increase by 23 per cent, from 9.7 million to 11.9 million.

One proposal to combat the dropout wave is to cut About half the Jews who have left the Soviet Union aid to Soviet Jews who prefer another country to the regardless of destination, assert that any Jew who often difficult life in Israel. The proposal has divided Soviet Jews now in Israel and led to charges that Israel is trying to force all Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union to live in Israel.

'Nobody wants to take the responsibility for telling Russian Jews they have to come to Israel or get out of the Soviet Union on their own," said one Soviet immigrant who has become involved in the issue.

Israel offers a visa to any Jew who wants to leave the Soviet Union. In recent years an Israeli visa has been the easiest way to get out. But once at the transit point in Austria, the emigre can go to any other country that will accept him, and more and more Soviet Jews are doing just that.

Up to 1972, fewer than one per cent turned their backs on Israel. From 1971 through 1975 a total of 103,300 Soviet Jews came. The biggest year was 1971, when 33,500 arrived.

The dropout rate rose to 18.7 per in 1974 and 37 per cent in 1975. This year it is running about 50 per cent, with about 8,500 expected. than normal all across

There is general agreement that dropouts expect an easier or better life somewhere else, because Israel's economy is lagging, there is always a danger of war, there is compulsory military service, and absorption into Israeli society can be difficult.

One reported proposal by a committee of Israeli and American organizations is to restrict help given in Vienna by the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society (HIAS) to those going to Israel.

Those who would cut the aid to dropouts argue that there is no intention to force Jews to come to Israel. But they say there is a limit to the funds available, that those who choose Israel should have priority on them, and that there is no moral obligation to finance emigres looking for "a warm and comfortable spot."

They contend that the dropouts are misusing the Israeli visa for world travel and that by turning away

Gilmore wants to face death

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) - Gary Mark Gilmore, a convicted murderer who asked the Utah Supreme Court to let him "die like a man," will face a firing squad Monday barring appeals for a second stay of

The execution, scheduled for 8 a.m. on the Utah State Prison grounds 20 miles south of here, would be the first in the United States since Luis Jose Monge died in a Colorado gas chamber on June 2, 1967. There are more than 400 men and women awaiting possible execution on Death Rows across the nation. Retiring Gov. Calvin L. Rampton, a supporter of capital punishment, said he would study Gilmore's case and issue a statement today. The governor can stay an execution until the next meeting of the State Board of Pardons. That would not be until two days after Gilmore is scheduled to Gilmore, wearing handcuffs, white prison garb and red-white-and-blue tennis shoes, told the five

Supreme Court justices Wednesday: "I believe I was given a fair trial, and I think the sentence was proper, and I'm willing to accept it like a man and wish it to be carried out without delay."

The justices, in a 4-1 ruling, then vacated a stay they had granted Monday by a 3-2 vote and agreed to let Gilmore be shot on schedule.

'The stay of execution heretofore granted is withdrawn and vacated and any appeal filed on behalf of Gary Gilmore is dismissed forthwith," the court said. Gilmore's role in the case left groups opposed to capital punishment in an awkward position. But Shirley Pedler, director of the Utah chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, said her group was considering at least two possible lines of last-minute She said one was to appeal the constitutionality of the Utah law to the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled earlier this year that capital punishment was not inherently unconstitutional. The other possibility, she said, was to ask the courts to forbid use of tax money to pay for an unconstitutional execution.

Each of five volunteer members of the firing squad would earn $175.

The possibility of other litigation leading to a stay was raised by David Kendall, an expert on capital punishment for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Kendall said there were reports that Denis Boaz, Gilmore's new California lawyer, was a writer as well as a lawyer and might have a contract to write about the case. This, he said, might represent a conflict of interest.

'My client understands his absolute right to an appeal, but he does not wish to take it," Boaz told the state high court on Wednesday. "This is not a suicide pact or perverse death wish.'

But Esplin in a telephone interview after Wednesday's decision said he thinks a suicide motive "is a very real possibility" for Gilmore's recent Esplin said the convict once told him, "If they don't do it, I'm going to do it myself. I'm not going to spend the rest of my life in prison.'

Gilmore, who would be 36 on Dec. 4, was convicted of first-degree murder for fatally shooting Bennie Bushnell, 25, last summer during the robbery of a Provo motel. Gilmore said he ordered Bushnell to lie on the floor, put a pistol to his head and pulled the Gilmore, who had been on parole since April 9 from an Illinois prison, has spent 18 years in prisons for robbery, car theft and assault.

He also is charged with the fatal shooting the night before Bushnell's death of a Brigham Young University law student who worked as a part-time gas station attendant.

Utah State Prison Warden Samuel W. Smith said he has had no shortage of volunteers for the firing squad, which was last used in 1960 to execute James W. Rodgers for the murder of a fellow miner.

Utah gives condemned prisoners a choice between hanging and the firing squad, the latter a survival from territorial days and Mormon adherence to the biblical tenet of blood atonement. Gilmore has said he perfers to be shot.

Corn harvest to cool prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — This year's nearly-harvested corn crop will be a record of 6.06 billion bushels, three per cent more than expected a month ago and enough to have a cooling effect on consumer prices at least through mid-1977, according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Wednesday that the new corn estimate, based on Nov. 1 surveys, was up 198 million bushels or three per cent from the October forecast. This is up five per cent from the record 1975 crop of less than 5.77 billion bushels. Don Paarlberg, USDA director of economics, said the huge harvest "means that there will be ample supplies of meat" for consumers in the coming year. Further, he said, retail food prices generally will continue their relatively modest increase at least in the first half of next year.

FBI investigating park contracts

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The FBI is investigating $600,000 worth of National Park Service contracts awarded between 1970 and 1975 to Washington architect Aram Mardirosian, who worked on the design of the financially troubled National Visitor Center at Union Station here and the Gateway Arch visitor center in St. Louis.

The Park Service has given a complete file of its documents on Mardirosian's contracts to FBI agents, who have begun a "broad range" investigation into possible irregularities, including allegations of payments of kickbacks to public officials, according to sources in both the Park Service and the Justice

Sources familiar with the investigation said its scope includes Mardirosian's relationship with former Park Service director George Hartzog and former Rep. Kenneth Gray (D-Ill.) while the two men held government

Mardirosian said Wednesday he had not heard about the FBI investigation. "To my knowledge," he said, the matter was "still in the audit and investigation division of the Park Service. The (National Visitor Center) project is a tragedy."

Allegations that any kickbacks may be involved in the contracts have "got to be so ridiculous that it isn't funny," Mardirosian added.

Former Park Service director Hartzog said he had "heard from friends in the (Park) Service that an investigation was going on. I didn't know they were interested in anything thought they were only interested in St. Louis. I haven't been contacted by any (FBI) agents." Hartzog said he did nothing improper in connection with any of the contracts in question.

Former Rep. Gray could not be reached for comment.

Hartzog hired Mardirosian as his Park Service architectural adviser in 1969 and was still Park Service director when Mardirosian received a $286,000 contract for design of the St. Louis visitor center 16 days after Mardirosian resigned from his Park Ser-

While Gray was head of a House public works subcommittee, he lobbied vigorously against widespread opposition for legislation to help finance with federal money the miltimillion-dollar conversion of much of Union State into the National Visitor Center.

Mardirosian received a Park Service contract to take over the design of this project in 1972 under circumstances that have been called into question by the project's original ar-

The FBI began an investigation several years ago into Gray's activities in relation to construction projects approved by the House public works subcommittee, according to a source with access to Justice Department records. That investigation was stopped, however, by the late FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, who was a friend of Gray, according to the

Civil rights groups backing off from appeal of admissions case

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - In an ironic reversal, major civil rights groups are urging the University of California to abandon a program that gives racial minorities preference in admissions to one of its medical schools.

The rights groups, representing blacks and Mexican Americans, are taking this unprecedented step to avoid a Supreme Court test that they fear could jeopardize their minorityadmissions and affirmative-action efforts in education and employment throughout the country

The rights groups' fears stem from their view that a court case involving minority preference - Allan Bakke v. the Regents of the University of California — does not fully present the broad issues at stake and would be hard for them to win.

On Sept. 16 the California Supreme Court struck down the university's minority admissions program at its medical school at Davis, Calif., holding that "a quota becomes no less offensive when it serves to exclude a racial majority.'

Last week the university asked U.S. Supreme Court Justice William H. Rehnquist to block enforcement of the state court ruling, suggesting that an appeal to the Supreme Court was planned.

At least three leading civil rights groups — the NAACP Legal Defense and Education Fund, the Mexican American Legal Defense and Education Fund and the National Conference of Black Lawyers - are urging that no such appeal to filed.

A key reason, according to civil rights lawyers, is that the university did not challenge Bakke's contention that its admissions program was based on racial and ethnic considerations although its stated purpose was to increase admission of economically disadvantaged students regardless of race or ethnic background

Ralph Smith of the black lawyerst group said the Bakke case is "clearly not the strongest case for those of us who hope the Supreme Court will find these programs constitutional."

Donald Reidhaar, the university system's general counsel, said in a telephone interview that "it's been my expectation that an appeal would be filed," but that "careful consideration is being given to the requests that there be no appeal."

The California court ruling suggested that the university could still maintain special admissions for students of "disadvantaged backgrounds" but not solely for racial minorities.

Vilma S. Martinez, president and general counsel of the Mexican American Legal Defense Fund, said the fund "could live with" a program for the disadvantaged, though "we would be very much interested in monitoring it to make sure it meets the needs of minority students."

Most of the students admitted under the special Davis program have been Mexican Americans, who make up

Water proposals spark grumbling

The Los Angeles Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — A key congressman said Wednesday that water developers must abandon a "Roman canals" philosophy steeped in the dambuilding glories of a bygone era. Future water development must evolve from new technology, such as the conversion of salty seawater to fresh water, said Rep. Al Ullman (D-Ore.), chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee. "We need to speak out not just in defense of old reclamation concepts," Ullman told delegates to the annual convention of the National Water Resources

Assn. "We must move forward with the times." "What we need, rather than Roman canals, is to use the technology that's available...to develop the system of saline water conversion, weather modification and other systems that will solve our problems," he said.

"Ullman's comments were received with grumbling by many delegates.

They were interpreted by some as criticism of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, the agency that has built dams, irrigation systems and other projects in 17 Western states for more than 70 years.

And the association's chief role for nearly half a century has been to support the bureau and to promote such programs.

In effect, Ullman told the association members they were thinking too much in the past. Many consider concepts such as salt water conversion as virtual pipe dreams that may come in the future but hold little promise of solving immediate problems. Those problems primarily are getting more projects to irrigate more farm and ranch land. If many of the 600 delegates and guests were disgruntled by Ullman's comments, they could find consolation in his firm support for continued expansion of the nation's agricultural output.

Such expansion is particularly needed to build America's farm sales abroad, Ullman said. All this means the need for developing more water to grow export crops, the chairman said.

Environmental opponents of new projects, and of putting more new land into production, dispute such arguments.

Nurse Week activities conclude with banquet

Midland registered nurses continue to be recognized during Texas Nurse Week, which concludes Saturday.

It now is appropriate to remind the citizens of the Tall City they can be proud of these dedicated professional nurses of today who are more intelligent and self-confident in the many technical skills that medical and surgical advancements have brought about. She or he can only obtain these skills through many years of education and experience.

With the continuous rise in medical and surgical services and hospitalization expenses, the public is concerned that nurses know and meet a patient's right for qualified competent nursing care services.

An invitation to attend the annual RN banquet where the Nurse of the Year for both MMH and Parkview Hospital will be honored is extended to all RNs living in Midland. Those

Dapper dresser links fashion with jewelry

NEW YORK (AP) - Forget that old, torn T-shirt and wrinkled jeans, men. The Age of Elegance is here, says the Jewelry Industry Council.

Today men are as fashionconscious as women and while they may never become slaves to style, indications are that the casual look in men's wear is on its way out, the council reports. Beau Brummel is back, and he's wearing smartly tailored vested suits, fur collars on his coats and fur linings in his raincoat toppers. Shirts with ties are back, and there's a strong trend toward French cuffs to set off handsome suitings of serge and flannel. And, as with women's fashions, jewelry adds the finishing touch to and cuff links and vest chains setting off collars, cuffs and waistlines. Men's watches and watch bands are ornamental as well as functional.

apparel, with tie bars, pins, tie chains in two tones of gold, fine leather straps in reptile, and watch faces that show lapis lazuli or mosaic opai.

Diamonds - so long taboo for men, although historically male royalty only sported them — have come full circle, and are fashion-right for men, the council says. Rings, often studded with tiny diamonds and colored stones, are big and bold. Tiger's eye, cat's eye and onyx are most popular, as are individual birthstone gems. Bold, geometric and free form designs in gold give the rings a sturdy, masculine look.

Today's new tie pins are much more imaginative than formerly, and are worn on ascots as well as on ties. The dapper dresser might well choose to wear two small pins on a tie to create a theme. For example, a tiny sculptured gold retriever pin sits below a golden pheasant in flight.

Nicole's kidnaper convicted DALLAS (AP) - The saga of four-year-old Nicole Moore, kidnaped from her Dallas Oak Cliff apartment complex last May, ended Wednesday when a federal court jury took only 35 minutes to find William Robert Bondurant guilty of the abduction.

U.S. District Judge Robert Porter said sentencing will be Dec. 2.

The girl's disappearance touched off one of the largest searches in Dallas history as hundreds of law enforcement officers, neighbors and volunteers converged on the area around the apartment complex to look for Nicole.

The story took a happy twist 13 days after the disappearance when Nicole was found unharmed at the Tulane medical School in New Orleans, with a note pinned to her shirt telling her name and that of her mother, Linda Moore. She was dirty, tired and afraid, but unharmed.

Nicole had told FBI agents in Dallas after her return that she had been with a man she called "Joe." The man turned out to be Bondurant, as identified by the girl from

One of the nice things about quesswork is that it's no strain on the rain. You can just pull out a card without thingking and wait for your partner to groan despairingly.

If the line of diamonds was to singleton, South's best play was to go right up with dummy's ace. If West had led the top card of a doubleton, South's best play was to let East win the first trick.

South knew that a singleton is usually led very caickly; a doubleton, hesitantly. Since West had fired the nine of diamonds right out of his hand, declarer played dummy's ace. Now South's task was to draw trumps before West could get a ruff. He led the king of spades from dummy, and West won with the ace of spades at once. Then West had to guess how to get the lead to his part-

BIDDING CLUE

West guessed, because of the bidding, that a heart lead was best. As it happened, South won the heart, drew trumps and gave up a club and a diamond. That's when the groaning started.

If you're picking out a sympathy card to send West for his unlucky guess, save your postage for a better cause. If West refused the first trump trick, East would drop the nine of clubs on the second trump - and West would know what to lead without having to guess.

ANSWER: Bid one spade. You have 14 points in high cards and 2 points for the doubletons. This is enough for an opening bid of one in a suit. Don't bid one notrump with your total of 16 points; you count only high-card points for notrump purposes.

IRS going public

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service will soon be making public all the thousands of tax rulings it issues each year, although the IRS will not identify the corporations or individuals involved.

The IRS handles about 30,000 rulings a year. In the past, the IRS revealed most rulings only to its agents or to corporations and taxpayers who sought guidance on a specific tax

The House Ways and Means Committee, which wrote the disclosure requirement into the new tax law, expressed concern that "the private ruling system has developed into a body of secret law known only to a few members of the tax profession.

"Additionally, the secrecy surrounding letter rulings has generated suspicion that the tax laws may be used by the 'influential' to their advantage, and that the tax laws are not being applied on an even-handed basis," the committee said.

The new disclosure policy is expected to begin by March and generally requires the deletion of names in public material. Traditionally, where the IRS felt a ruling or piece of technical advice was of general interest, it made its position public in a formal ruling without identifying the parties involved. It did that 626 times in 1974. The rest of the rulings it kept secret.

One controversial letter ruling came in International Telephone & Telegraph Corp.'s 1969 merger with the Hartford Fire Insurance Co. The IRS ruled that Hartford's stockholders did not have to pay taxes on the appreciated value of their stock in exchanging it for shares of IT&T.

In 1974, following tention focused on the merger by opponents, the IRS changed its mind and ruled that the shareholders would have to pay taxes that IT&T estimated would cost them $30 million. The issue is still being disputed by the company.

Congress was also prodded into action by a suit brought by Tax Analysts and Advocates, a nonprofit research institution.

A federal court in Washington, D.C., ruled last year that the letter rulings were public information and ordered the IRS to make public all letter rulings, including the names of the parties involved, issued since passage of the Freedom of Information Act in

Open records defended

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Open Records laws help to improve the credibility of government by allowing people to see problems as they really exist, according to Atty. Gen. John Hill.

Hill defended the laws, calling them "the best insurance for a truly open government.

"Many people think the open record laws are designed primarily for the press' benefit and are a burden on the agencies and boards affected,"

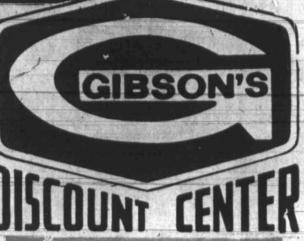

"This is far from the truth. It is a shortsighted view and we want to change this attitude," he added.

Hill spoke at a meeting of the San Antonio Media Freedom Forum that includes Women In Communication Inc., Alamo Business Communicators, Advertising Federation, American Women in Radio and Television, Sigma Delta Chi and the Armed Forces Information

Council. "Governmental problems are highly complex and if governmental action is hidden, people tend to believe the worst," Hill

Here's Carter staff

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) -The new palace guard at the White House, as the presidential staff has been known in the recent past, is almost certain to be built around the Georgians who helped Jimmy Carter get there.

But Carter has vowed and his present and future aides have confirmed, they are not likely to build any "magnolia curtain" around the new president that cuts off access to him.

Furthermore, Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, has said that Carter will not have a chief of staff, a person who would "exercise authority over all the other staff members."

Carter has said he will maintain direct contact with his Cabinet members, Congress and others, but simple mechanics should still leave a great deal of power in his right hand

No appointments have been announced, but those who know Carter and his friends say those who will have the best access to the presidential ear are expected to be those who had the candidate's ear. They also say the men and women who helped Carter make it will not be left out.

A couple of reasons are given, one that Carter will repay their loyalty as he did in past campaigns, and secondly that these are the people whom he has confidence in.

Here are some thumbnail sketches of the men who will help shape the new administration and are likely to be in it:

-HAMILTON JOR-DAN. He is almost certain of a top political job. Jordan managed the Carter campaign for president as successfully as he did the one for governor of Georgia six years ago.

Jordan was executive secretary to Carter as born in Charlotte, N.C., and raised in Albany, Ga.

—JACK H. WATSON
JR. He is Carter's transition chief. Born in El Paso, Tex., and raised in Pine Bluff, Ark., Watson, 37, attended Vanderbilt University on a scholarship. He earned a degree in English and philosophy, was president of his fraternity and several honor societies and was voted the outstanding male graduate of 1960.

-JODY POWELL. The new White House press secretary is all but certain to be Powell. At 33, Powell was expelled from the Air Force Academy for cheating after three years. He then went to graduate school at the University of Georgia when he first became interested in Carter and began writing him.

— G R

SCHNEIDERS. nonGeorgian, Schneiders is a former Washington, D.C., restaurateur who became Carter's appointments secretary in the campaign. He appears to be headed for the same ti-tle in the Carter administration.

- S T U A R T E . EISENSTAT. He is the favorite to be Carter's chief adviser on domestic matters. Eisenstat, 33, is an adopted Georgian. He was born in Chicago and graduated from the University of North Carolina and Harvard law school. He is now partner in an Atlanta law firm.

Eisenstat served on the White House staff of President Lyndon B. Johnson and was research director for Hubert Humphrey's 1968 presidential campaign. - ZBIGNIEW BRZEZINSKI. He is a favorite to be Carter's top foreign affairs adviser. The job also would carry the title of director of the National Security Coun-cil. Brzezinski also is being mentioned for secretary of state.

-CHARLES KIRBO. Kirbo was raised in south Georgia and began practicing law in Bainbridge in 1946 and was recruited by the King and Spaulding firm in 1960. His clients include General Motors and Coca

Roast duck elegant, but beware fat

By DARLA WELLES

Copley News Service One bad experience with roast duck can eradicate a person's appetite for that particular breed of fowl for life.

Bucks — at least the domestic kinds Tare fatty birds, given to a rather inactive life-style and to considerable overindulgence in whatever it is that ducks eat

As such, if the cook doesn't do something to eliminate that excess fat, the end product will be far from a culinary triumph. It will be, in a word,

1 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour

½ teaspoon salt

2 cups MILNOT

2 cup nut meats

1 cup cook

4 teaspoon cinnan

1/4 teaspoon nutmeg

The methods for draining the fat vary. One method is: Wash the duck inside and out and dry it thoroughly with paper towels.

Lay the bird breast side down on a cutting board and pierce the skin all over the back with a fork, the tip of a sharp knife or a small skewer such as those used for trussing the bird. Perforate the skin uniformly and thoroughly, concentrating on the areas around the neck, tail and wings where the fat is thickest.

Then put the duck on a rack in a roasting pan and roast as directed in the recipe, basting occasionally with dry white wine to help draw the fat

Another method is to roast the duck on a rack for two and one-half hours at 350 degrees, then remove it from the oven, prick the skin all over and increase the oven temperature to 500 degrees. Return the duck to the oven and cook, turning frequently, an additional 10 to 15 minutes to brown the skin and draw out the fat.

Follow carefully one of the plans for draining the fat and you're on your way to a meal that will be a gourmet's delight with less effort than you could have possibly imagined.

ROAST DUCKLING A L'ORANGE 2 four- to five-lb. ducklings Salt and pepper

1 clove garlic, peeled and cut crosswise into halves One-half cup dry white wine One-half cup orange marmalade 2 tbsps. butter or margarine

1 (thirteen-and-three-fourths oz.) can condensed chicken broth One-half cup orange marmalade One-fourth cup dry white wine One-fourth cup orange juice 2 tsps. cornstarch 2 tsps. lemon juice

2 tbsps. slivered orange peel

If frozen, let ducklings thaw according to package directions. Heat oven to moderate (350 degrees). Remove giblets, necks and livers from ducklings. Reserve livers for sauce; if desired, reserve giblets and necks for soup stock. Remove and discard excess fat. Wash, drain and pat dry with paper toweling.

Rub cavities with salt, pepper and garlic. Fasten neck skin of each to back with a skewer. Tuck tail ends into cavities. Tie legs together and tuck wing tips under ducklings. Prick skin generously to release fat.

Place ducklings on racks, breast side up. Roast two to two and one-half hours or until legs can be moved easily, basting several times during roasting and removing accumulated drippings about every 30 minutes. Remove ducklings from oven and spread surface with marmalade. Return to oven and continue roasting for 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, prepare sauce. Melt butter in a skillet. Add duckling livers and saute until lightly browned. Remove and chop livers. Add chicken broth, marmalade, wine, orange juice and cornstarch blended with lemon juice. Cook, stirring constantly over low heat for 10 minutes or until sauce bubbles and thickens. Stir in chopped livers and orange peel. Transfer ducklings to a heated platter. Remove skewers and twine. Garnish, if desired, with watercress and orange slices. Reheat sauce if

Makes six to eight servings. CANTONESE ROAST DUCK 1 four- to five-lb. duck

1 garlic clove 2 scallions

2 slices fresh ginger root 1 cup chicken stock 2 tbsps. medium,dry sherry 1 tbsp. soy sauce

2 tsps. sugar 4 cloves star anise 4 tbsps. honey 1 tbsp. vinegar 1 tbsp. soy sauce

1 cup heated water

Parsley Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Meanwhile, wash the duck inside and out, prick the skin on the back and season lightly with salt.

Mince the garlic, scallions and ginger root. Combine these in a pan with the stock, sherry, soy sauce, sugar and anise.

Bring the mixture to a boil over medium heat, stirring frequently. Let cool five minutes.

Sew up or skewer the duck's neck to make it leakproof. Place the bird upside down in a large bowl and ladle the seasoned liquid into the cavity. Then close the cavity at the neck to make it leakproof, too.

Set a rack in a roasting pan containing about two inches of water. Put the duck, breast side up on the rack and roast 20 minutes. While it roasts, blend the honey, vinegar, soy sauce and water.

Reduce oven heat to 325 degrees and baste duck with the honey mixture. Roast about one and one-half hours more, basting with the mixture at 15-minute intervals. Turn bird once or twice for even browning, being careful not to pierce it and let the fluid leak out. (Use wooden spoons or wear rubber gloves and do it by hand.)

When duck is done (the leg will move easily in its socket) remove from the oven and place in a colander set in a bowl. Let stand for about 15 minutes to cool slightly. Then snip the thread or remove the skewers sealing the body cavity and let the seasoned liquid drain into the bowl below. Carve bird and arrange on a serving platter, spooning hot liquid over all, Serve hot with rice and stir-fried vegetables.

Bicentennial cookies made with molasses

By CECILY BROWNSTONE AP Food Editor

John Adams, second President of the United "General Washington always States, wrote: asserted and proved that Virginians loved molasses as well as New Englanders did." To help celebrate our Bicentennial in culinary fashion, here's a version of Brownies - America's favorite cookie bar - using that early American ingredient. Although these Brownies have rich chocolate flavor, molasses gives them a deliciously different taste.

BICENTENNIAL BROWNIES

1/2 cup flour, stir to aerate before measuring 1/2 teaspoon baking soda ¼ teaspoon salt 21/2 squares (21/2 ounces) unsweetened chocolate

1-3rd cup butter or margarine 2 large eggs

1 cup sugar 1-3rd cup light or dark molasses 1/2 teaspoon vanilla 1 cup coarsely chopped walnuts

Line the bottom of an 8 by 8 inch cake pan with wax paper; grease paper. On another sheet of wax paper stir together the flour, baking soda and salt. In a small saucepan over low heat, stirring often, melt together the chocolate and butter. In a medium mixing bowl beat the eggs until thickened and lemon color; add sugar, molasses and vanilla and beat to blend. Add chocolate mixture and beat to blend. Add flour mixture and beat to blend. Stir in walnuts. Pour into prepared pan. Bake in a preheated 350- degree oven until edges come away slightly from pan - 40 minutes; a cake tester inserted in center will NOT come out clean. Place pan on a wire rack to cool for 15 minutes. Turn out onto rack; remove paper; with another rack turn right side up; cool completely. Remove to a cutting board; with a sharp knife cut into four 2-inch strips, then cut each strip into four 2inch squares. Store tightly covered. Makes 16.

Chafing dish cookery turns you into tabletop artist

Few culinary techniques can equal the elegance, entertainment and excitement of chafing dish cookery. Whether it be the meal's main event or a flambeed dessert, guests are always fascinated by a dish prepared tabletop before their eyes.

Simple chafing dish recipes can turn even the most ordinary cook into a gourmet maestro. Just to be prepared. Set out all the necessary ingredients at arm's length and have the recipe written out on a card if you think you'll need it.

Another good tip is to use Sterno canned heat fuel. Sterno is totally safe and its flame is easily controlled, an important point when creating special dishes at the table. And each 2 % ounce provides 45 minutes cooking time so you won't have to keep checking the flame. Keep an extra can handy for keeping dishes hot on a buffet

Novices as well as tabletop pros will find Flank Steak Flambe an interesting and enticing main dish meal perfect for a romantic dinner for two. (Work by soft candlelight for the most dramatic effect.)

Puerto Rican cookery from the Old World

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

The people of Puerto Rico, who have about a million settlers in New York City alone, have made a number of contributions to the cookery of this country.

It apparently began when American tourists who visited the beautiful Caribbean island about a thousand miles southeast of Florida acquired a fondness for the tangy specialties served there. Travelers returning from vacations there complained that few restaurants on the U.S. mainland served these delightful dishes, many adapted from the Old World.

Because of its historical background, Puerto Rico is a land of sharp contrasts, combining the best of Spanish and American culinary art. Over the centuries, simple dishes originally prepared by the Indian inhabitants of the island have been enriched by the skills of descendants of the early settlers and by African slaves brought over to work in the sugar fields.

Puerto Rican delicacies are legion. One I like is a succulent, dumplinglike dish known as banana pastilles. Here is the recipe

1/2 pound vegetable shortening or lard 3 ounces paprika 1/2 pound diced pork, raw 1/2 teaspoon chopped garlic

1 pinch oregano 1 teaspoon capers 1 sweet pepper chopped 2 pounds green bananas ½ pint milk Salt to taste

For filling, melt shortening and add paprika till it becomes red. Add pork, saute 1 minute then add garlic, oregano, Tabasco, olives, capers, sweet pepper, potatoes. Cook 10 minutes, strain and save fat. Peel and mash bananas to make dough, adding milk, salt and half of the reserved fat. Spread 1 tablespoon melted fat over center of wax paper measuring 12 by 12 inches. Then spread 3 tablespoons of dough atop melted fat. In the middle of the dough place 3 tablespoons of filling. Fold over completely, covering the filling and making a pastille. Wrap this with a second piece of wax paper. Repeat performance till all ingredients are used. Put 2 pastilles together and tie with string. Repeat with the rest. After wrapping all pastilles, place in boiling salted water and cook 1 hour.

Have Sauce Mixture ready and at hand. Skin, bone and dice (about 14-inch) the raw chicken breasts: mix with the soy sauce and let stand for 15 minutes. In a 10-inch skillet heat the oil; add chicken mixture; stir-fry fast, using moderate to high heat, until opaque and cooked through - a few minutes. Add water chestnuts, celery, mushrooms and scallions; stir-fry fast for a few minutes. Add Sauce Mixture: stirring constantly, cook fast until thickened and any excess liquid is reduced; chicken and vegetables should have only a light coating of the thick sauce to bind them together. If used, turn the almonds into a small bowl. Arrange the three containers on a tray. Eaters remove the lettuce leaves, spoon portions of the chicken mixture into the centers of them and fold over or roll up to enjoy in pick-up fashion. If the almonds are served, eaters sprinkle them over the chicken mixture before rolling it in the lettuce leaves. (Instead of serving the head of lettuce whole you may, if you prefer, separate the leaves and arrange them around the edge of a shallow bowl, putting the container of chicken mixture in the center.)

Sauce Mixture: In a small bowl thoroughly stir together 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon chicken bouillon granules, 11/2 teaspoons cornstarch and 2 teaspoons chili powder. Stir in 1/2 cup hot water, keeping smooth. Add 1½ teaspoons minced ginger root and ¾ teaspoon minced garlic.

Simmer soup slowly or mix it up in minutes

By KAY JARVIS Copley News Service

Although Americans tend to get most of their soup out of cans or packets, there does seem to be a renewed interest in prolonging those last scraps of meat or poultry carcass into yet another meal. And soup is a nourishing way to do it.

It would be only honest to say that the potful of soup made from scratch is not necessarily less expensive than one combining canned soups.

In the following recipes, you have a choice. That leaves the decision up to the cook as to whether she will opt for the slow simmer on the back burner or the hum of the can opener.

Celery comes not from celery seed

By WILLIAM RICE The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - If you plant celery seed, you won't get celery. The small, brown seeds come from a relative of the celery we eat. It, too, is grown commercially and such is the demand that celery seed is imported from France and India to supplement production in California.

Celery seed is ground and mixed with salt to become celery salt. It is processed to yield an oil that turns up in soap, food products and perfume. And it is used whole as a condiment for humans and birds.

The seeds, so small they seldom are crushed, combine well with tomato juice and tomato dishes, add a distinct touch of potato, macaroni and other salads and often find their way into soups and pickling spices. In addition to producing a small, concentrated echo of the taste of celery, the seeds deliver to some eaters hints of parsley and nutmeg. In the following recipies they are combined to good effect with cabbage and, of all things, celery.

SAUTEED CABBAGE

1 head (about 1 1-2 pounds) Green cabbage 1 bay leaf

2 tablespoons butter or bacon dripp-1 small onion, or 3 scallions, finely

chopped 1-2 teaspoon celery seeds Salt and freshly ground pepper

1 tablespoon white wine vinegar Pull off outer leaves, quarter cabbage and cut out core. Steam or simmer over or in boiling, salted water with a bay leaf added until just tender, about 10 minutes. Drain and let cool, then cut across the wedges every half inch to produce shredded cabbage. Heat butter in a skillet. When it bubbles, add onion and cook until soft. Add cabbage, celery seeds, salt and pepper. Stir and cook until cabbage is heated through. Add vinegar and cook to blend flavors. Serve with almost any red meat or fowl. Choose another vegetable with veal or fish.

removed and trimmed top and bottom 3 tablespoons butter 11-2 cups beef bouillon or stock

BRAISED CELERY
2 heads of celery, outer stalks

1-2 teaspoon celery seed 1 bay leaf 1-4 teaspoon thyme

2 springs parsley Freshly ground pepper Cut across celery every 2 inches.

Use 2 or 3 leaves with this dish and include remaining leaves in a green salad. Heat 2 tablespoons butter or enough to coat bottom of a skillet. Add celery pieces and toss until color begins to deepen. Pour in bouillon, add remaining ingredients and simmer celery until tender, 8 to 10 minutes.

Remove celery, parsley and bay leaf with a slotted spoon. Reserve celery. Turn up heat and boil juices until they are reduced enough to become syrupy. (This happens faster in a wide-bottomed skilled than in a pot of smaller diameter.) Return celery to heat through. Season with several grinds of pepper, taste juices and adjust seasoning with salt if needed. Serve portions of celery, then, off the heat just before serving, stir remaining tablespoon of butter into sauce and pour over celery.

"DAVE CAME into my office today and said he's got a lot of personal problems and feels he can't play," Auerbach said. "He was quite adamant about it. I asked him to come back and talk to Levin and he did.

"He has his own personal reasons and there's nothing we can do about

"Dave told Red he'd like to get away and do some thinking," Levin said. "This has nothing to do with money, contracts or anything of that nature. He asked for a leave of absence and it was granted."

"We had no inkling at all." Celtics veteran Jo Jo White said. "I don't know what it was, but it was totally his decision. But the show must go on

Instant replays?... just smoke screen

It made good reading, but the National Football League never really gave it a serious second thought. That was made acutely apparent Sunday.

Remember last season and all that flak about instant replays to study controversial decisions by officials? The idea was to study the replay and if the striped shirt blew one to rectify it immediately in the name of fair play, justice and the bookies.

A controversial call on a pass reception in the final moments of a Washington-St. Louis game last year. unleashed an avalanche of demands for the replays.

This, despite the fact that it wasn't until Monday night, after two days of studying instant replays in slow motion, that it was finally announced that, sure enough, the official goofed on his split-second decision.

EVEN SOME less responsible among the coaches argued in favor of the replay idea, contending it was the only practical means for eliminating errors. The reasoning was about as imaginative as some of their offenses.

Well, Sunday the classic situation for rectifying a mistake arose in the Oakland-Chicago game. One of the Bears scooped up a fumble caused when quarterback Ken Stabler was sacked behind the line and, as was his right, ran for a touchdown. In all probability, the score would have nailed down a Bears' victory.

Only trouble was, the official whistled the ball dead at the spot of

The official knew he blew the call, literally and figuratively, as soon as he tooted his whistle. So did the players and the opposing coaches.

NOTHING WAS done to rectify the error, although if there was ever an instance where a wrong could be righted with a minimum of fuss' this

The incident just emphasizes how much foolishness all that talk about instant replays last year really was. Chuck Heberling, 50, a secretary for the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association, was the official who exhaled when he should have inhaled.

So far, the National Football League seems to feel it was an honest mistake. Heberling just blew it, and he admitted it candidly," excuses NFL Commissioner Pete Rozell. "It's a shame. Even Jim Finks (the Chicago general manager) told me he respected Heberling for acknowledging his mistake."

Art McNally, supervisor of NFL officials, seems to go along with

"HE'S A good referee. It was a human error. You don't crucify a guy for a single mistake.

It's beautiful to forgive. No suspension, no investigation, just a 'mistake," huh? No check to see if something more devious were involved. No check to determine whether the official even knows his Just leave the shadow of doubt.

It's not exactly fair to the fans or to the official involved is it or the Chicago Bears, who could be cost a place in the playoffs by the "defeat."

Nature lovers fight Olympics

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) - To an environmentalist from the Sierra Club, current plans for the 1980 Winter Olympics may mean the beauty and isolated character of the Adirondacks may be "lost forever."

But to a local official, the Games mean "life, jobs, the ability to conin this picturesque but economically depressed northern New York area.

The widely varying views were aired Wednesday at an all-day hearing on the draft environmental impact statement for the Games, prepared for the U.S. Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration. With planning well underway, the biggest issues are whether the Games will provide the economic boost as claimed, and whether their staging will harm the natural beauty of the largest wilderness area in the Eastern United States.

THE IMPACT statement, which serves as a kind of environmental "full disclosure" document on the over-all plans and effects of the public for comment, then approved by the federal government, before any of the $49 million appropriated for the Games is released.

The Sierra Club, a national conservation group, strongly attacked the impact statement with the charge that "the beauty and isolated atmosphere of the High Peaks area of the Adirondack Park may be lost forever if present Olympic plans go unchecked.

Seven area teams will be shooting for the three remaining football playoff berths this weekend in what could be the biggest knot unraveling experience this year.

District 2-AAA will be decided in a one-game stand in Andrews Friday when the undefeated Andrews Mustangs play host to the Monahans Loboes, both 4-0 in district play. The winner will move to the AAA bidistrict round next week against 1-AAA winner Perryton.

The game will feature the league's top two rushers in Andrews' Booger Brooks, who has 906 yards this season, and Monahans' Eric Branham, who has 819 yards. Monahans' Tracy Lisman is also the league's leading scorer with 88 points while Branham is second with 66. Brooks stands third with 60 points. Andrews is 9-0 on the season and No. 8 in the state while Monahans is 7-1-1, losing only to Snyder, a team that Andrews beat ANDREWS, WHICH has had backto-back 2-8 seasons behind it, them, is seeking its first playoff appearance in five years. Monahans has not been in the playoffs in three years.

Both teams are tops in the league in offensive production, with Andrews holding a slight edge with 318.1 yards per outing. Monahans has averaged 311.6 yards.

So, the game may be determined on defense where Andrews has the decided edge this season. The stout Mustang defensive wall has allowed only 116.1 yards to the opponents on any given Friday night while Monahans is fourth in the league, giving up 222.3 yards per contest. It should be a battle royal.

The undefeated San Angelo Lake View Chiefs can nail down the 3-AAA playoff berth by defeating Lubbock Dunbar tonight in Lubbock. There is one slight problem, however, since Dunbar can also share the league crown and earn the playoff berth against Brownwood with a victory. The winner tonight is the benefactor.

THE DISTRICT 7-AA berth is also up for grabs Friday with Ozona holding the edge. Ozona can win it all by defeating Sonora. The only problem arises if Ozona loses, and then a three-way tie is possible with the flip of the coin to determine the playoff representative. Kermit and Sonora each have one league loss. Kermit can share the title with Sonora and Ozona with a victory over Crane Friday and a loss by Ozona.

Things are already cut and dried in the area's three Class A loops. Rankin sewed up the 6-A title last week by defeating Marfa and will meet Seagraves in the bi-district round next week. Seagraves won the 5-A title with a 20-14 win over previously unbeaten Plains last week. Rankin prepares for the playoffs with a home encounter against Van Horn Friday while Seagraves tangles with hapless Mason, who has already won the 9-A playoff berth, meets Reagan County Friday in what could have been for the league championship. The Owls, however, gave Mason the playoffs last week when Reagan County dropped a 23-19 decision to Junction.

McCAMEY AND Stanton also end long seasons Friday. McCamey ends their first year in Class A in a contest against Marfa. The Badgers are 1-8 on the season. Stanton, 4-5 on the year, hopes to break even against Shallowater on the home field.

* Lamesa ended their season last week in a 12-0 loss to Lubbock Estacado to finish 5-5 for the year.

This week's area games listed by districts.

DISTRICT 2-AAA: Monahans at Andrews, Fort Stockton at Pecos, Seminole at Odessa Ector (Saturday).

DISTRICT 3-AAA: Lake View at Lubbock Dunbar (Today). Sweetwater at Lubbock Estacado. Snyder at Brownfield, Lamesa open.

DISTRICT 7-AA: Kermit at Crane. Sonora at Ozona.

DISTRICT 5-A: Shallowater at Stanton, O'Donnell at Seagraves, Plains open.

DISTRICT 6-A: Van Horn at Rankin, McCamey at Marfa. Wink at Clint, Iraan open.

DISTRICT 5-A: Mason at Reagan County, Junction at Menard, Wall at Bobert Lee, Eldorado open.

Lee band part of writer's life style

I'm very well aware of the fact that there are some important area games slated for this weekend, but there is one item that I must get out of the way before the current football season comes to a cloae.

That item concerns the ranking of high school bands. I rate the Midland Lee band as the best in the state.

Now before Midland High band members and fans get all upset, I would like to mention the fact that I am no expert in this field. I've never tooted a horn, and when I was young. I picked up a football instead of the drums. The only thing I know about bands is what my wife tells me-she was once a drum major.

It must also be noted that I've never seen a halftime performance by Lee or Midland High. It seems that I'm always traveling the wilds of West Texas on Friday nights.

THE FACT is that I really have no right to make a rating decision, but I can't ignore my observations. After all, the Lee band is part of my life.

The reason I select Lee as the top band is because I live right behind Lee High School, and if sheer work makes a band good, then Lee is tops.

They dutifully wake me up every morning before the sun has a chance, and if I'm home during the day, they play for my lunch. Sometimes they give me music during the evening news, and that makes Walter Cronkite and Barbra Walters bearable.

The Lee band is also an unending source of entertainment for my twoyear-old daughter Shane. Everytime the Lee bandeers take to the practice field. Shane wants to go into the alley and watch. The Lee band facinates her, and as a dutiful father, I've spent hours on end watching the Lee band practice.

LEE ALSO has plenty of volume. The Lee drummers and tuba players are great as fallen plaster and rattling dishes in the house can attest. Shane, Daddy and Momma will hate to see the football season end. It will be rough going back to that old alarm clock, making fewer trips to the alley with Shane and eating without free stereo music.

With all the work the Lee band puts in. I was worried for a while that they were violating some of the University Interscholastic League rules. After all, Coach Jim Acree would be run out of the state if he worked his football team the same hours. Fortunately, I can find no rules that have been violated by the band, and the only injuries have been puckered lips.

The only thing I'm missing is seeing Lee march in a real game's halftime.

I'll miss them again this week since I will be in Andrews Friday night. Such is the life of a sports writer.

I APOLOGIZE to my area readers for spending so much time talking about the Lee band, but Lee band director Van Ragsdale has a super bunch of kids. I feel that I know everyone of them. Van runs a taut ship, but the kids seem to respond. I'll bet they'll be out there tonight. John Phillip Sousa would have been proud.

Since there is no space left for the picking game, just let it be known that pick Andrews, Lake View, Ozona Mason, Stanton, Kermit and Marfa to come away with victories this week.

Regents to receive OU report

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - The University of Oklahoma Board of Regents apparently will go behind closed doors Thursday to receive a university report on allegations against the OU football program.

Dr. J.R. Morris, vice president for university relations, confirmed Wednesday that the report probably would be made in secret.

"Although not an agenda item, a verbal report will be made to the regents on the findings of an internal investigation of newspaper allegations made againt OU football coaches," a university release said. "It will be presented by Dr. J.R. Morris and Dr. J.O. Dean, vice president for university relations, who were directed

A win at North Texas State on Saturday can pro-"We lack killer instinct," Bowden said. "I've got one of the nicest group of kids I've ever been duce the Seminoles' best season since 1972.

Bowden, however, described the Eagles, 5-4 and ing the final period last Saturday to edge Southern with four consecutive victories, as "about as good as Mississippi, 30-27. Some fans called the comeback anybody else we've played except Florida and Oklahoma." He said he considers a victory Saturday very important, but he also is looking ahead to next year. The first-year coach at Florida State said he is concentrating on recruiting his kind of players to fill gaps in the Seminole team.

"I WANT to build a program that would be the type that mothers and dads would want their sons to go to," Bowden said. "If we have a good recruiting year, there's no doubt we're on our way."

NEW HAVEN, Conn. - Yale Bowl, 2 years old and seating 70,874, is one of the greatest places in America to watch a football game. It is a magnificent stadium.

If you are disturbed by the professional aspects of college sport at Ohio State, Michigan, Oklahoma, University of Southern California and most big colleges, an afternoon at the bowl might prove to you that Old Eli retains a sense of perspective in its football program.

But, even at Yale you might have mixed emotions - and learn a bit about how things have changed over days in New Haven and a fancy publicity brochure gives hint that the Old Blue might be wishing for better

The brochure, for instance, notes that Yale has won more games than any other collegiate team - 681. It has scored more points than any other team, over 20,000. It has outscored opponents by over 13,600 points over 103 years. It has more undefeated seasons than any other team - 29. It has had more Hall of Fame members (25) than any other school. But, those were the good old days and although some Old Blues may yearn for their return, that is not

YALE TODAY wouldn't provide high school level opposition for Michigan, but there were grander likely to be. The Ivy League simply is not that commercial. Clint Frank, 1937 Heisman Trophy winner at Yale, reflected remotely on this recently.

FRANK IS the greatest college player this onetime sportswriter ever saw or ever expects to see and he noted a truism of today's commercial aspect in college football.

"There must be a $2 million or $3 million difference between winning the Heisman now and back when I did," he said. "I didn't make a cent from my Heisman."

There are other differences at Yale and colleges like it. The day of this visit there were only 14,309 spectators scattered among the 70,874 bowl seats. The interest seemed greater in the fancy tailgate sandwich, hamburger, steak and booze pregame five on his own 15 he ordered a fake parties than in the football game.

The Old Grads were disturbed not a whit by the fumbles and by the low grade of football. They did want to see Old Eli run up the score and when it became 31-6 Yale, they were crying

THIS ISN'T much purer than Michigan's Bo Schembechler's remarks after a 42-10 win over Michigan State. "We gave them 10 points," Schembechler moaned. "We didn't score in the first half when we should have. We should have been leading 35-0 at the half."

But, Brown's Coach John Anderson did something refreshing - at least for those of us who think football should be fun. With fourth down and punt and pass. It failed, and Yale got the ball and went in to score. Anderson's explanation? "We felt things were getting a little dull and we'd just give the game a little excitement." Yale football and Big Ten football have other differences. There are more fumbles in Yale Bowl. Along with college pennants, the souvenir hawkers even sell political banners

THE BANDS are sloppier in dress and in music - and that's a shame. Hot dogs are tough to find - nobody seems to understand how to make

One page of the publicity brochure perhaps tells more than anything else. It includes a pronunciation guide for names of the Yale players. The Old Blues are not sure they like this because it tells them Yale no longer is a lily white institution of blue blood names. The new names include Spagnola, Skoronski, Nadherny, DeCusati and this year's most famous Yale name — Pagliaro.

John Pagliaro, out of the Housatonic River mill town of Derby, Conn., makes the Old Blues think of national football fame. Five feet eleven at 189 pounds, this lad has the swivel hip running style that might remind one of Clint Frank, even O.J.

HE IS a junior and he will be one to watch in 1977 — and the smart pro scouts are watching him.

Pitt's Tony Dorsett tops the Heisman Trophy candidates.

Dorsett gets Heisman nod, but Bell better pro pick

Copley News Service

If it's a vote for the Heisman Trophy, my guess is himself up to his maximum size. that Dorsett will win convincingly. If you're talking It would be no surprise to see Bell playing at 230 about pro potential, Bell's my man. Let me explain... pounds — or more — in the NFL.

White has yards between now and the end of the season that his done an amazing job of filling in for Bell this season. career record never will be broken. Any way you look at it, Dorsett has to be the Heisman choice.

THE NATIONAL Football League covets both players but scouts generally prefer Bell. The edge comes mainly in size. Bell is 6-2, 218 pounds and no Tony Dorsett or Ricky Bell...which one would you more than a step slower than the 5-11, 190-pound Dorsett. At his present weight, Dorsett has built

However, some scouts have doubts abou Dorsett, on the other hand, burst onto the national to the pro pounding. There are no such misgivings

As things stand now, Bell's right near the top of pro shopping lists. Dorsett's in the top 10.

The record alone should assure Dorsett of the DORSETT, BY the way, comes off a bit too cocky Heisman Trophy. Add to this the fact his Pitt team is in the quotes attributed to him. Jets may move to New Jersey

NEW YORK (AP) - The New York Jets could move their National Football League team to East Rutherford, N.J., the Daily News reported in its Thursday edition,

The newspaper said the Jets could follow the New York Giants to the Jersey Meadowlands, about a 20minute drive from midtown New York City.

The reason for the possible movewhich is only a possibility-is the stranglehold the New York Mets' baseball team has on Shea Stadium, home of both the Jets and the National League Mets.

According to their lease, the Mets

Monday, Mets' directors turned down the Jets' annual plea to be allowed use of the stadium during the baseball have exclusive use of Shea Stadium from the first day of spring training to the last day of the World Series, even if the Mets are not in the Series. On

The Daily News said the Jets based their latest plea on the competitive imbalance they suffer by having to play so many consecutive games on the road, both exhibition and early season; inconvenience to their fans, who must freeze in those late-season home games, and economic loss to the city from games that must be played elsewhere.

More than 1,300 people are hired for each game, representing a payroll of at least $50,000. In addition, admissions tax revenues to the city and state are close to $45,000, rent to the city is $50,000 and parking fees are about $8,000.

The Jets do not share in revenue from parking and concessions at Shea.

Giants Stadium in the Meadowlands seats 16,000 more than Shea and will offer a more attractive lease, the newspaper said.

"This authority would welcome any professional football team, especially the Jets, if they were available to play here," said Jack Krumpe, executive director of the Jersey stadium authority.

The Jets were not represented at Monday's meeting. Asked his reason for the refusal to allow the Jets to play before the baseball season ended. M Donald Grant, board chairman of the Mets, said:

"The same reasons as in the past The lease calls for no (football) games in baseball season. We prefer the natural turf, and you're taking 4too much of a chance of damaging

"CERTAINLY, it is frustrating sometimes," she said during a break in a whirlwind series of television and newspaper interviews aimed at rectifying the situation, "but it's just that few people know we exist.

Friends jokingly suggest that Odessa High School quarterback Darrell Shepard brought Odessa Coach Dick Winder out of coaching retirement.

MILK GROUP

Many of today's diets are low in calcium because we don't use enough calcium-rich foods, such as milk and cheese, in our diets. Growing children need calcium to build bones and teeth, especially during teen years, when children are growing fast. Adults, too, need calcium even though they're not building bones and teeth. Each day, adults lose some calcium and must replace it. Calcium helps clot blood when you cut or injure yourself; it helps keep all your muscles in good shape so they can . especially the heart muscles

Milk is our leading source of calcium. It also provides high-quality protein, riboflavin, vitamin A (if milk is whole or fortified), and other nutrients. Protein in milk builds and repairs body tissues, helps the body fight infection, and supplies energy. Eight ounces of fresh whole milk has about 160 calories; the same amount of skim milk has only 90 calories.

Foods Included in the Milk Group: Milk: fluid whole, evaporated, skim, dry, buttermilk. Cheese: cottage, cream, cheddar type, natural or processed. Ice cream. Yogurt.

Recommended Amounts: Some milk daily is urged for almost everyone. Recommended amounts in terms of 8-ounce cups (or glasses) of whole fluid milk are: children under 9, 2-3 cups; children 9-12, 3 or more cups; teenagers, 4 or more cups; adults, 2 or more cups; pregnant women, 3 or more; nursing mothers, 4 or more. Part of all the milk may be fluid skim milk, buttermilk, evaporated milk or dry milk.

Cheese, ice cream and yogurt can be used in place of part of the milk. The amount of any of these it will take to replace a given amount of milk is figured on the basis of calcium content. On this basis, examples are: 1-inch cube cheddar-type cheese equals 1/2 cup milk; 1/2 cup cottage cheese equals 1/2 cup milk; 2 tablespoons cream cheese equals I tablespoon milk; 1/2 cup ice cream equals 1/2 cup milk; I cup plain yogurt equals I cup milk; I cup fruit-flavored yogurt equals % cup milk

Ribicoff recommends peace role for Kissinger

The Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM - Henry Kissinger should be appointed as a special envoy to continue peace-seeking moves in the Middle East, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D-Conn.) said Wednesday.

The senator - co-chairman of a delegation of senators studying nuclear power needs and dangers in the Middle East - told a news con-

"Personally, I would recommend that the President-elect, in view of the importance of this area, in view of the special trust that Arabs and Israelis have in Henry Kissinger, in view of the deep knowledge he has of the entire subject, I'd hope Presidentelect Carter would designate Henry Kissinger as a special envoy to begin negotiations between the Arabs and Israelis toward more movement in the peace area."

Some of the members of the 13-man delegation traveling with Ribicoff endorsed his plan and several said they would back it if Carter agreed. Ribicoff said he had discussed the plan before with no one except his

He said he would not bring the matter up with other leaders in the Arab countries to which the delegation plans visits - but that if they commented on the suggestion he would pass their views along when the group returns to Washington.

Ribicoff made his comments at a news conference held by himself and four other members of the factfinding group, who represent a number of powerful senatorial committees. Ribicoff is chairman of the Government Operations Committee. He and Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. (R-Tenn.) are chairmen of the touring group.

Their tour of Israel has been marked by an unwillingness on the part of Israeli officials to allow the American party to view a secret atomic research center at Dimona — or to say if Israel possesses nuclear devices.

Thursday, the group will visit Amman, Jordan and then go to Cairo and Tehran before returning to the United States via London. It is expected they will meet with King Hussein of Jordan, President Sadat of Egypt and the Shah in Iran.

Kissinger should be asked to continue his peace-keeping role because of the pressures of time, the dangers of war and the unusual rapport he has with leaders in the confrontation states of the Middle East, Ribicoff

"Any other person besides Henry Kissinger would take at least a year to get to know the Arab leaders and Israelis personally." Ribicoff said, "I don't know anybody in the world who could do a better job on this than Secretary Kissinger."

He said the President-elect's new secretary of state would have abundant work in dealing with detente, the new leadership of China, Rhodesia and other problems - and that no one worthy of the job should object to a continuing role for Kissinger. Appointing him would give President-elect Carter a chance to show he wishes a bipartisan foreign policy, Ribicoff said.

He added: "Henry Kissinger is the most ad-of any nation." Sen. Dale Bumpers (D-Ark.), told reporters: "It occurred to me before. agree 100 per cent with Sen. Ribicoff." Sen. Baker said: "I think mired statesman of the entire world,

...I am pleased he made this suggestion and I look forward to seeing the reaction to it." Sen. Howard W. Cannon (D-Nev.) was less enthusiastic: "It would be disastrous for a secretary of state to wait a year before getting into the problem. But I'm not prepared to say

Sen. Ribicoff has a helluva good idea

he (Kissinger) is the only one who policy shifts without "thorough consultations." He said: "If those new considerations include someone with the obvious skill that Secretary Kissinger has shown he should certainly be used." Sen. Wendell H. Ford (D-Ky.) agreed that if it were decided Kissinger was the man to work for Mideast peace "I think he should be

Ribicoff said he had not discussed the Kissinger plan with Israeli officials during the four days the senators have been in Israel. The panel of lawmakers is considering energy needs and requests by Israel, Egypt and Iran for U.S. atomic power generating plants. But they touched on nuclear arms, as well

Asked if the committee members had asked Israel if it had nuclear weapons - as a CIA report has been quoted as confirming - Ribicoff said the question had been brought up a number of times and the Israelis had never answered. What did they say this time? he was asked. "They said that Israel would never be the first ones to introduce nuclear weapons and capacity into the Middle East," he said.

Election delays treaty

The Los Angeles Times

MANILA - The election of Jimmy Carter to the presidency of the United States indefinitely delayed a new American base agreement with the Philippines - thus once again extending the desultory talks dating back 20 years.

"I suppose you could call these the longest negotiations in our history," a rather weary American official said.

"If President Ford had won, an agreement probably would have been signed in a few months," he added. 'Now the Philippines will want to get a personal handle on Mr. Carter. That could take a year or even more."

The delay, however, is hardly embarrassing to either party. Philippines President Ferdinand E. Marcos probably will use the time to raise his price what already promises to be a package deal involving hundreds of millions of dollars. Meanwhile, the Philippines already has tacitly agreed that the two mammoth installations - Clark Air Base and the Subic Bay naval station - remain vital to the strategic balance of power in the western

Despite a lot of testy public rhetoric that often has clouded the talks, the negotiations always have gone on in private with exquisite courtesy and a lot of diplomatic hypocrisy, smilingly acknowledged by both sides. This is not a Panama Canal situation with violence implied if things do not get moving. After 20 years, both sides know the rules by heart.

There was some sense of urgency in Manila after the collapse of South Vietnam in April 1975. With the victorious North Vietnamese making bellicose propaganda about American bases everywhere and in the Philippines in particular, President Marcos felt an evident need to make his country less vulnerable to such attacks.

Since that time. however, the winds in Southeast Asia again have gently shifted. The once nervous states of Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore and Indonesia have not become immediate dominos. The emergence of pragmatic leadership in China following the death of Mao Tse-tung has had a clarifying effect. The Peking government openly wants a strong American presence in the Pacific to counter the Soviet Union's increasing

Meanwhile, sky rocketing oil prices, the world economic recession and even worse money troubles at home have emphasized to Marcos the bottom line dollar value of the American

Since there never was any serious consideration that the Americans might be asked to withdraw, the negotiations now more than ever are concerned with nuts and bolts, not sweeping strategic begun taming the first of the Amazon's giant tributaries in a $2 billion project to supply power to the nation's rapidly awakening north.

Tucurui dam, three miles up the turbulent Tocantins river from this Amazon basin town in the state of Para, will produce 3,960 megawatts roughly twice the total of Egypt's Aswan Dam - in its first phase. There is provision to double its capacity later.

(Brazil already is building what is called the world's biggest hydroelectric project, Itaipu, in the south, to produce 11,000 megawatts.)

Tucurui will supply power for the development of the world's greatest known deposit of iron ore, 17 billion tons at Carajas, where Brazil and United States Steel plan to invest $3 billion. Carajas is about 300 miles southwest of here.

It also will power bauxite development in the jungle 700 miles west of Belem, where Brazil and a group of (ALCOA), the Aluminum Company of Canada (ALCAN), and American Power from Tucurui also will light up the city of Belem at the mouth of the Amazon and be channeled into the grid that fees the new industries in Brazil's North East states.

Luiz Antonio Guido Rios, 29, resident engineer and superintendent of the work here, says Tucurui will involve building a main dam wall 16,000 feet long. eighty per cent of it will be earth-filled rock wall. The rest, including the spillway and the powerhouse, will be of reinforced concrete. At its highest point, the wall will be 440 feet above the riverbed. Most of the contracts still are to be Tucurui was planned by Centrais Eletricas de Norte do Brasil (Eltronorte), a subsidiary of the national power enterprise, Eletrobras. Location studies have been going on 10 years, with the final decision taken only two years ago.

Since then, a flood of workers and engineers have transformed the region and made a boom town of the sleepy old settlement of Tucurui.

Bulldozers first moved into the jungle in October, 1974, to cut the first roads. To date they have cleared thousands of acres and the coffer dam, inside which the spillway and the powerhouse will be constructed, already is well advanced.

Heavy machinery is arriving directly from the United States and Canada and by a 2,000-mile road haul from Sao Paulo in the south of Brazil. A port is being built here to handle the mountains of material and equipment that will be used. At peak activity the project will swallow up 1,000 tons a day of cement alone.

Adequate supplies of sand and rock are available locally, but all other materials will come from hundreds, or even thousands, of miles away.

Last year a village was built for the first 350 technicians and their families and single quarters for hundreds of workers. Already 1,500 men and many families have moved here.

At its peak in 1978 the project will employ 6,000 men. They and their families will swell the population of Tucurui by 40,000. Two years ago it was only 5,000.

The dam project, plus the building of the Transamazonica Highway which passes close to tucurui and the discovery that land here is superb for cattle raising, have all played their part in the explosive development.

SPRY GEORGE MEANY, lenying plans for any immediate retirement, smilingly told a Washington press conference that he expects to play the role of "elder statesman" in the Carter administration. Meany is president of the AFL-CIO.

Meany says labor can't claim Carter win

The Washington Post

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - George Meany, the 82-year-old president of the AFL CIO, told a press conference Wednesday that organized labor could not claim credit for Jimmy Carter's victory on Nov. 2.

"In a close election you can point to any number of factors" that could have determined the result. Meany said. He added that the labor vote for Carter was big but noted that minorities, particularly blacks, had given the president-elect large margins as well.

Meany said Carter had made only one commitment to him in return for organized labor's active support in the campaign - a promise to give "immediate consideration" to any

Sharper heart test foreseen

problem that Meany might bring to his attention.

Meany said he hoped Carter would take account of labor's views when he choses a new secretary of labor. He specifically praised John T. Dunlop, who served for a year as secretary under President Ford before resigning in protest over Ford's veto of the common site picketing bill, which would have reorganized labor relations in the construction industry and allowed unions to picket an entire construction site over a dispute with a single subcontractor.

Meany said Dunlop was not the only person he would recommend for the job. "I've got some names in mind," he said, but he would not reveal them.

He said the AFL-CIO would formulate a legislative program at the winter meeting of its executive council, scheduled for February. The council also met Wednesday, after which Meany met the press.

Asked what role he would like to play in the Carter Administration, the patriarch of American labor paused for a moment, then quipped: "elder statesman.'

He recently said publicly that he had begun to think about retirement and reiterated that statement Wednesday. But he said: "I feel quite good, thank you. I feel better this past week" - i.e., since election day.

Asked if he might announce retirement plans at the February meeting of the executive council, Meany said, "no."

When questioned what labor's attitude would be if the Carter Administration proposed voluntary wage and price restraints, Meany would only say he was ready to discuss the subject. "We're very, very wary of any kind of wage and price controls," he said, but he noted that labor had cooperated with the efforts of previous administrations in this area.

Meany said he hoped the Carter Administration would move quickly to stimulate the economy and create more jobs. "He's got a tough job," Meany said of the president-elect.

"He's still got Arthur Burns (chairman of the Federal Reserve Board) as a burden." Meany said labor might back a tax reduction early in the year as a means of accelerating the economy.

Dr. H. Bryan Brewer of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute said that scientists in Britain, Hawaii and Sweden have found that

"merely measuring total blood cholesterol is no longer adequate" to

'LDL," meaning high density and low density lipoproteins. It may be beneficial to have a high level of the first and a low level of the

Brewer, chief of the Heart Institute's molecular disease branch, explained that many doctors now measure two fatty blood elements cholesterol and triglycerides - to help learn who may be more likely to develop blood vessel and heart

Both are lipids or blood fats. They are the blood's two major lipids, but both are actually bound in the blood stream to the protenins called lipoproteins.

Seventy per cent of the cholesterol in the blood is found in the "LDL" or low density lipoprotein. "When your doctor measures your cholesterol he is mainly looking at the LDL," Brewer said. But a measurement of the LDL itself would be more precise. Another 15 per cent — a key 15 per cent it seems - of cholesterol is found in the HDL or high density lipoprotein.

Here, it appears, the higher the HDL level, the less atherosclerosis (or artery clogging) and the less heart disease. The lower the HDL level, the more artery trouble and heart disease.

What HDL may do, Brewer said, is remove cholesterol from blood vessel walls and take it to the liver to be removed from the body.

"It's possible that the beneficial Orange County court at effect of exercise on the heart is really that it increases HDL," Brewer said.

A new and potentially important geological process — areas where the rocks on the earth's surface actually burn and alter their structure — is being investigated by researchers at Scripps Institution of Oceanography in La Jolla, Calif.

The scientists have identified five places in Southern California where the earth erupted in almost spontaneous combustion in the past and could again in the future.

The researchers believe this process, which has been spotted in many places around the globe in the last few years, may represent a secondary but major process in the formation of the rocks making up the

Their studies also may present major physical and chemical problems for oil companies contemplating the extraction of oil from large oil shale deposits by burning the shale at its geological site.

The scientists involved are Dr. Miriam Kastner, a geochemist and mineralogist at Scripps, and Dr. Y. K. Bentor of the Department of Geology at the Hebrew University in Israel. Bentor is at Scripps on leave.

A preliminary report of their investigations appeared in a recent issue of Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The idea that rocks can burn is not new, Kastner said during a recent interview. Clinker deposits found in coal beds are evidence of this, she years ago with Bentor and his discoveries of areas of rocks that had been physically altered by self-combustion in areas of Israel. Since that time, she said, other such greas have been identified in Jordan, the Soviet Union, Iran, India. Australia and Canada.

The studies by Kastner and Bentor represent the first such finds in the United States.

Kastner said the five California areas located so far include Grimes Canyon and Virgines Canyon in Ventura County and three other separate sites in Santa Maria and Santa Barbara counties.

These areas, she said, are all part of a geological structure called the "Monterey Formation." This formation, she said, was probably formed in the seas and deposited on the continent some 15 million years ago.

The sedimentary structure, she said, apparently was rich in organic substances created by living marine organisms and included bituminous matter, coal and oil.

This fuel, Kastner said, set the stage for future burnings. Just how these burns got started, she isn't sure. They may have been touched off by lightning or slow oxidation processes,

However, once started, she said, they probably continued until they either ran out of fuel or oxygen.

New burns, she said, could be started in the same or similar material even today. She noted an area in northern Canada near the Arctic Circle called the "Smoking Hills" which has been burning probably for 150 or 200 years. A few years ago, she said, some cliffs in England began to burn spontaneously, an event that lasted only a few weeks.

Kastner and Bentor estimate that in the areas they investigated the earth burns reached temperatures up to 1,600 degrees Celsius. That's enough to melt and deform the rocks, she said, and possibly even create lavalike flows

In the process, she said, a wide variety of minerals are formed.

The minerals provide the rocks with a strange beauty, lining them with vibrant yellows, reds, pinks and

In fact, one of the sites is actually a quarry which sells the rocks for ornamental purposes. The findings of the scientists, however, also pose some potential problems for oil firms that are considering extracting oil from shale formations by burning them on the

For example, Kastner noted, the burning of the shale could spread to surrounding rocks. The vaporization

she said, could lead to the weakening of the rocks and large-scale collapse

Inaugural committee cancels request for gasoline donations

By JAMES L. ROWE JR. The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Officials of the interim inaugural committee did some exploratory testing last Friday with five major oil companies to see if they would donate gasoline to the inaugural preparations and festivities.

Wednesday, after a report of the Friday meeting had appeared in an oil industry newsletter, Jimmy Carter's appointees to the inaugural committee cancelled the request.

Oil company officials who attended the meeting said they were led to believe that the committee would need between 30,000 and 40,000 gallons of lead-free gasoline. At 60 cents a gallon, the retail cost of the fuel would be between $18,000 and $24,000.

set production mark most oil it has pumped in any month. Oil companies are also buying more oil because they are stepping up their refinery runs, partly to beef up stocks of "burning oils" like heating oil and heavy fuel oil. U.S. stocks of "burning oils" are now equal to a 62-day supply, down from a 100-day supply a year ago. Colder weather this winter could dwindle these stocks in a hurry, forcing oil companies to replenish them before winter weather sets in.

Still another reason for higher oil purchases is the chronic shortage of natural gas, which forced many industrial gas users to turn to oil furnaces last year. These factories are now buying oil to heat their plants something they did not do a year ago

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. - President Ford has 59, block B, HE&WT decided to ask for a net $8-billion tax reduction as survey, 41/2 miles part of his final budget proposal to Congress, acsoutheast of Sonora, cording to top presidential aides. The proposal will call for balancing the budget two years ahead of Sawyer (Canyon) - President-elect Jimmy Carter's schedule.

Greenspan followed Ford off the tee Tuesday at the Thunderbird Country Club near the President's vacation residence. Ford, his lime-green golf shift sweaty from a lesson, chatted briefly with reporters before taking to the course for the third day in a row. Greenspan and budget director James Lynn outlined in interviews some of the major actions Ford has taken and will take during his desert stay. "I think the budget will reflect very clearly the differences between Ford and Carter's approaches to balancing the budget and the major issues involved," Lynn said. During the campaign, both Ford and Carter pledged to balance the federal budget, which has had record deficits during the last eight years. Carter promised to end deficit spending in the budget he will present to congress in January 1980. But Ford aides said the President would propose that a balanced budget be submitted in January 1978. It has been almost political tradition for the chief executive of an outgoing administration to leave the incoming president of the opposition party a controversial budget surplus or plans for a balanced budget. By sharp bookeeping tactics, Dwight Eisenhower left a small surplus for President John Kennedy and President Lyndon Johnson pulled one off before turning the reins over to Richard Nixon. Eisenhower, for example, delayed for a few months

On Thursday, the Office of Management and Budget is expected to disclose that the current federal budget deficit is $50.6 billion. A major reason for the rise, White House officials said, was an overly optimistic revenue in the form of more individual and corporate section 177, block E, tax payments that had been predicted by the congressional budget resolution. Under Ford's plan, there would be a substantial McElroy — Gulf No. 915 reduction in next year's budget deficit by cuts in the $145-billion HEW budget, along with other cuts. A $135-billion budget proposed by the Pentagon will probably end up at $125 billion or $21 billion more than current defense spending. As promised during the campaign, Ford's taxreduction plans would involve a $10-billion cut, much of it for middle-income taxpayers. But the effective reduction on all taxpayers would be less because of an estimated $2-billion increase in Social Security payroll taxes.

wide variety of decisions that would confront any Included will be a list of 70 issues spanning the range of government actions that will be affected by budget reductions. "I think this section will outline the real differences of opinion in the areas of federal spending," Lynn said. It also will question Carter's claims that growth in federal revenues will be adequate to balance the budget and produce future budget surpluses.

Lynn cited a recent Brookings Institution study that says that five years from now such a surplus would be only $27 billion, a figure based on the assumption that there will be no major tax cuts. Carter has promised major tax reforms that include across-the-board reductions for most taxpayers.

NEW YORK (AP) —Cotton futures No.
2 were 85 cents a bale lower at midday.
Some long liquidation followed Tuesday's government estimate of 9.9 million bales for the 1976 cotton crop, brokers said. The projection was about in line with most expectations and was thought to have caused some selling of contracts.
The average price for strict low middling 1 1-16-inch spot cotton declined 48 points to 78.13 cents a pound Wednesday for the 10 leading markets, according to the New York Cotton Exchange.
Midmorning prices were 35 cents to 85 cents a bale lower than the previous close. Dec 82.00, Mar 82.85, May 83.00.

Market posts

gains
NEW YORK (AP) -The stock market posted some spotty gains today, bolstered by bargain hunting at its lowest level in 10 months.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, down 42.05 in the past six sessions, was up 1.41 at 925.45 by noon time on Wall Street.

Losers held a slight overall edge on gainers, however, among New York Stock exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said selling pressure had eased and buying interest had picked up a little with prices of many big-name stocks down substantially from their latesummer levels. But they also noted continuing concern, based on most of the recent evidence, that the economy would turn in another uninspiring showing in the fourth quarter.

Chrysler was the most active NYSE issue, off % at 17. On Wednesday the company announced plans to close down two assembly plants for a week.

The Big Board's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks rose .09 to 52.99. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .22 at 98.35. Volume on the NYSE set a sluggish pace, totalling only 5.68 million shares over the first two hours against 7.94 million in the like period Wednesday. Brokers noted that banks in everal areas of the country were closed in observance of Veterans Day.

General Motors, which began offering rebates to counter slow sales of some small cars, dipped 1/8 to 68% in active trading.

Legionnaire's hotel intends to close soon

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The 72-year-old Bellevue-Stratford Hotel will close its doors Nov. 18, a victim of ruinous business declines stemming from ast summer's still unsolved legionnaire's disease.

"The Bellevue-Stratford has found it impossible any longer to withstand the economic impact of the worldwide adverse publicity which has been associated with the 'legionnaire's disease' even though no investigative agency found any link whatsoever to hotel operations," William Chadwick, hotel vice president, said in a statement given to

"Despite the lack of credible evidence that any causal factor existed, the continuous public reports linking the hotel to reports of the illness has been ruinous to its business," Chadwick said.

"The average cash loss for the last 90 days has been $10,000 per day, adding up to aggregate losses in the order of $1 million for the period of adverse publicity," the statement said.

The hotel was the headquarters for the ill-fated state American Legion convention July 21-24 following which 29 persons died and 151 others became ill from a mysterious disease.

The Bellevue recently has hosted a number of

Life-supported woman dies

DENVER (AP) - A pregnant woman, the subject of an unusual medical debate concerning the 15-week-old fetus she carried, is dead. Doctors at Colorado General Hospital used life support machinery for more than 48 hours after 29year-old Linda Culbertson was critically injured in an automobile accident on Monday.

While the machinery kept Mrs. Culbertson technically alive, doctors pondered the ethical, legal and medical questions of trying to keep her alive in the hope they could some day deliver her baby.

When they decided their effort had no chance for success, they made plans to terminate the extraordinary life support. Before they could do so, Mrs. Culbertson's heartbeat, and that of the fetus, stopped. "It was the judgment of our medical staff that nothing could be done to preserve a viable fetus,' hospital spokesman Eric Munson said after a team of surgeons, obstetricians and pediatricians had reached their decision. The decision to terminate the life-saving effort was reached with the consent of the woman's husband. Vaughn. The couple's only child, Shannon, 6 months. suffered a fractured skull in the auto accident and was listed in good condition today by spokesman. Family members have declined to discuss the case publicly.

Doctors had said the fetus could not be removed from the women's body until the 20th week of gestation and until it reached a weight of 500 grams,

The American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology in Chicago told hospital officials the case was without precedent.

by Ms. Karen Irving, 25, who was charged with disorderly conduct. Her attorney took to court newspaper and magazine pictures of Vice President Nelson Rockefeller making the same gesture to a group of demonstrators.

"This isn't illegal," the attorney, Janet Stockard, said Tuesday. "We are going to get this case to trial and get a decision so that we can have some volving the slaying of a sort of policy and police will know that they can't arrest people for this."

Officers failed to appear in court Tuesday

In their report the officers said they saw Ms. Irving talking to a man on ble witness in the case of the sidewalk, and one of Paul and Mary Cantrell, the officers waved from the passing car.

Space dreams to be realized, professor says

In terms of man's migration into the frontiers of space, dreams for the 22nd century will be reality during the final years of the 20th, said Dr. Harlan J. Smith, chairman of the Department of Astronomy at the University of Texas in Austin and Director of the McDonald Observatory at Fort Davis.

Profits soaring into the 100 billion dollar a year range will be reaped from the conversion of solar energy in space for use on earth, Smith predicted to a spellbound luncheon of the Midland Downtown Lions Club Wednesday

This unlimited supply of sun power gleaned in the 100 per cent efficient space atmosphere will be beamed down to earth via microwaves in a pilot project sometime during the 1980s using techniques already proven successful on tests of a smaller scale he said

Man will inhabit the moon in large underground settlements resembling small cities by the year 2020, Smith said, and will be engaged in mining operations for the construction of transtellar space vehicles for moon launching.

The mining and smelting of rich moon ore reserves for earth uses will be made feasible by a launching device called a lunar mass driver which would plop large chunks of refined metals to designated earth locations with practically zero shipping costs.

"Man will move into space because he has always gone where there are new frontiers," Smith said. Nationalistic motives of self defense will be another factor, but the greatest inducement, he said, will be the tremendous profits in terms of solar energy waiting to be reaped from the skies.

Bringing the club members back down to earth, Smith showed slides of the 107 inch reflector telescope at the McDonald Observatory. Among the 100 research projects currently underway in the observatory is a LASER beam that is bounced off reflectors left on the moon by astronauts. The results of these tests are used to calculate such diverse topics as the origins of the universe and the degree of continental drift on earth

In conjunction with the observatory, the University of Texas also operates a radio telescope near Marfa, Smith said.

Tory Glen Harris was named the club's Firefighter of the Month for November. A 10-year veteran of the Midland Fire Deptartment Harris is a certified emergency medical technician, an instructor in first aid, advanced first aid, and mouth to mouth breathing. Harris, age 33, is a lieutenant with the department and the father of two children.

'Square meal' egg selling well

The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES - The egg. as we all know, is a whole day's work for a chicken.

Why then would anyone tamper with it? Why did Stan Pargman do this?

What it all boils down to is that after 200 years, this civilization has produced a square egg.

"It all began last spring when Pargman came here from Miami and met with our buyer," Martin Tilem. divisional merchandise manager for the Mayo Co., recalled Tuesday. "He had this idea and showed us a few drawings."

The concept was for a square egg. When asked what possible value this could be, the promoter pointed out that up until now a salad had to be presented by a hostess pretty much without whole

"An oval egg tends to move about on a plate." the merchandise manager explained.

Pargman got the go-ahead for production, the department store got an exclusive contract until Christmas, and last Friday the advertisements for the $6 device were run.

They sold out in just about one day. Tilem was shocked. Shell shocked. "It's unbelievable!" he said ecstatically. "We've stocked another 1,000, and 5,000 more will arrive Friday. So for those of you who have finished wasting money on pet rocks, here is another squandering opportunity. The Square Egg Maker is of cube-shaped lucite, three-and-a-half inches high, and works this way: A warm, peeled, hard-boiled egg is placed into the chamber. The top is screwed down, compressing the egg, and the device must then be stored in a refrigerator for about six minutes.

When the top is unscrewed, what remains is a square egg, the way God meant it to be

The merchandising gang in the store played around with such approaches as the fact that salt won't fall off a square egg, that it will amaze the neighborhood chickens, and that it goes well with contemporary furniture. They settled for calling it s square meal.

Technological people prefer new leader

The Los Angeles Times

As the first President-elect since Herbert Hoover with formal training as an engineer, Jimmy Carter will take office at a time of general malaise among the nation's half million research scientists and

To be sure, the nation's research community is better off than it was in the late 1960s and early 70s. when a combination of stagnating growth in federal support for science and technology and high inflation put physicists and aerospace engineers on the unemployment rolls from Massachusetts to California.

Unemployment in the research community is below 1 per cent today, and in the two years of the Ford Administration the slump in federal research support has bottomed out and begun a gentle recovery. Federal support, budgeted at $23.5 billion this year, is the main sustenance of the American scientific juggernaut.

Even so, a recent survey by the National Science Foundation found a continuing undercurrent of concern that the nation's research enterprise is losing its historic vigor.

In universities and federal laboratories alike, according to the survey report, there is deep concern that the government is overemphasizing applied research with a potential short-term payoff at the expense of the kind of basic science that wins Nobel Prizes and ultimately determines the ability of American industry to compete in an increasingly technological world.

Industrial research managers, for their part, pointed to a number of declining indicators to argue that outdated patent, antitrust and tax regulations are stifling technological innovation on a nationwide scale. The decline in fundamental research is also a serious concern in industry.

Whether any President can reverse these trends is open to question. And it is far too soon to predict whether Jimmy Carter will develop the kind of special affinity for scientists and other academics that John F. Kennedy had.

Nevertheless, a number of leading researchers are hopeful that Carter's background will make him more conversant not only with their problems but with such global issues as energy supply, food, arms control and economic development - all issues in which technology forms a large part of both problem

Although Carter does not have an advanced degree, about half his undergraduate education at Annapolis was devoted to science, mathematics and engineering courses, and he spent one semester taking introductory graduate courses in nuclear physics and reactor engineering at Union College in Schenechtady, N.Y. This, plus practical experience gained in the Navy, led one commentator in Science magazine, a leading research journal, to conclude that Carter's self-description as an engineer was "apt enough.

In any case, researchers seem generally pleased, whatever their ideological lenings, to have someone moving into the White House who can speak their language.

"It's nice to have a President-elect who'd had two years of calculus," observes Lewis M. Branscomb, a former head of the National Bureau of Standards the new is vice president and chief scientist of IRM Corp.

Branscomb, who organized a science advisory group for the Carter campaign, adds that his own contacts with Carter during the past year left him with the impression that "he's very, very bright, and his experience should give him a better understanding of technology than other recent Presidents have had.'

Similarly, Harold Brown, the president of the California Institute of Technology and a member of the Carter campaign's science, defense and foreign policy groups, came away convinced that Carter "is really interested in science and technology.'

There are, moreover, indications that a Carter administration may bring important changes to the way the government spends its billions on research and development - at least, if comments by the President-elect, published shortly before the election, accurately reflected his views. In response to questions submitted in writing by two of the nation's largest scientific organizations the American Physical Society - Carter said he foresaw "a great opportunity to rebalance expenditures" so as to place more emphasis on basic research and less on large technological development projects.

Besides putting new emphasis on basic research, Carter said he would give higher priority than the Ford Administration had to certain fields of applied research - especially those fields "likely to be of long-term economic importance" or those touching on health, the environment and the nutritional quality of the world's food supplies.

Court grants mother second chance in court

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A young $88-a-week sales clerk who claims she was tricked into signing a paper giving up her baby must have a new trial, the Texas Supreme Court ruled today.

Both a Houston juvenile court judge and the Corpus Christi Court of Civil Appeals overruled Peggy Rogers Broussard's attempt to regain her son, Scott, from Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Searles of Houston.

Mrs. Broussard, then a single 22-year-old cosmetic sales clerk, and her baby moved in with the Searles in September 1974, when her son was 11/2- years-old. Shortly afterwards, she moved into her own apartment and signed a paper purportedly relinquishing her parental rights.

Mrs, Broussard was allowed to visit her son until Christmas Eve that year, but Mrs. Searles refused to allow further visits.

Mrs. Broussard said the baby was sick when she signed the paper. She said she thought the document merely gave temporary guardianship to the Searles so they could obtain medical attention for him.

The Supreme Court noted that the juvenile judge had withdrawn the case from the jury and dismissed Mrs. Broussard's request to set aside the termina-

In its 7-2 decision reversing the lower courts, the Supreme Court said the court had "abused its discretion in dismissing" the case.

Mrs. Broussard, the high court said, had introduced "evidence of extrinsic fraud in the trial court sufficient to raise a fact issue before the jury asto whether" the Searles had lied to get her to sign the papers giving up her baby.

The Supreme Court sent the case back to the juvenile court of Judge Criss Cole.

Ellen Corby and Richard Thomas — the "Grandma" and "John-Boy" of "The Waltons" of television - are top news in Los Angeles today.

Changes loom in television family series

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Television's "The Waltons," like a real life family, is having to cope with illness and change.

Ellen Corby, who plays "Grandma" on the popular series, suffered a stroke Wednesday and was reported in stable condition.

Richard Thomas, who stars on the CBS show as 'JohnBoy," announced the same day that he would not return next year. His five-year contract with Lorimar Productions expires in January.

Miss Corby, 63, a three-time Emmy winner for her role, will be written out of episodes filmed during her recuperation, said a spokesman for Lorimar.

"Those shows will reflect the fact that Grandma is in the hospital," said Ira Teller, a spokesman for the producers. Grandma was hospitalized earlier this season during one episode.

Fifteen shows for the current season have already been filmed and seven remain to be made.

As for Thomas, "His contract is up," said Teller. "Richard does want to leave 'The Waltons' and try his talent in other areas. That does not mean Richard might not come back as a special guest on special The final show for this season has John-Boy

FDIC cancels future coverage of Manges bank

RIO GRANDE CITY, Tex. (AP) — The president of the First State Bank and Trust Co. of Rio Grande City refused comment today on reports that depositors were making withdrawals from the bank because accounts were no longer insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. 3

Bank president Frank Anderson, however, admitted that "we've had some withdrawals."

He referred questions about the bank to lawyer Allen Wolf, but said he did not know where Wolf could be reached today.

Asked for comment on reports that depositors were standing in line outside the bank when it closed Wednesday, Anderson refused to comment.

"The FDIC is spreading all kinds of rumors and we've asked our lawyer to look into them." Anderson said. Anderson said there were persons standing in line at the windows when the bank closed, but angrily denied that they were lined up outside the bank.

Asked if the withdrawls were substantial, Anderson angrily said "I've said all I'm going to say. Charles M. Pickett, regional counsel for the FDIC at Dallas, said the FDIC has terminated FDIC insurance on all future deposits at the Rio Grande City bank which is controlled by secretive South Texas rancherbanker Clinton Manges of Duval County. The bank was closed today because of Veterans

Earlier, the FDIC had been critical of the bank's policy of making loans to persons described by the federal agency as "insiders.

Frank Anderson, president of the First State Bank and Trust Co. of Rio Grande City, said the bank withdrew from the FDIC voluntarily because of what he called "so much darned interference from the FDIC." Pickett noted that all deposits in the bank as of Wednesday would be covered for up to $40,000 would be covered for two years by the FDIC. At the end of the two-year period, he said, all FDIC insurance at the bank would be terminated. The FDIC estimates that about 90 per cent of the $17 million deposited in the bank is covered by insurance, Pickett said, Wednesday.
