Gusty winds spread cold, snow in Texas

Cold arctic air, its strong gusty winds sending the chill factor far below zero, spread over most the state Saturday blowing snow into portions of West Texas. The cold air brought chills as far south the shores of the Gulf of Mexico.

The National Weather Service issued travelers advisories for hazardous conditions for North and West

Snow accumulations of one to three inches occurred in portions of West Texas. Snow began to fall in the El Paso area during the Oklahoma

State-Texas-El Paso football game early in the afternoon.

The snow was part of a storm that had moved into New Mexico earlier in the day, the Associated Press reported.

The weather service said travel would become extremely dangerus over much of North Texas and urged that travel be restricted today.

As blizzard conditions were in effect throughout parts of New Mexico and West Texas, the weatherman predicted possible snow accumulation of one to three inches today in Midland, posssibly causing hazardous driving conditions.

Travelers' advisories remained in effect throughout New Mexico and West Texas. As of late Saturday night, traveling was discouraged through the Guadalupe Pass, which was ex-periencing high winds, fog and snow, Paso, where roads were snowpacked.

In Midland, weather conditions were expected to remain cloudy and cold with occasional snow this afternoon, becoming partly cloudy and continued cold tonight and Monday, said a spokesman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

New statistics expected to bring tax cut nearer

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) - More disappointing economic statistics may be in sight, bringing Presidentelect Jimmy Carter one step closer to recommending tax cuts or other ac-tion to stimulate the economy.

The Commerce Department will release its important index on leading icators for Octo Tuesday, and one agency analyst said the index probably will be down for the third consecutive month.

"With two or three of the components out, it is not down much, but it is definitely down," he said.

The index uses 12 components of the economy to try to determine which way the economy is headed. If it declines three months in a row, it is often thought to point to a recession. It fell seven-tenths of one per cent in both September and August.

The analyst said he doesn't think anyone is going to predict a recession on the basis of the October report but "I think there should be some concern about it." The report on November employ-nent, which will be released by the Labor Department Friday, could show unemployment up above 8 per cent, the highest it has been since last December. It was 7.9 per cent in Ocsecretary for economic affairs, said it's "entirely possible" that the year could end with unemployment at or above 8 per cent, instead of the 7 per cent rate predicted by the Ford ad-

Sidney L. Jones, assistant Treasury

He also said in an interview that the nation's Gross National Product in bably would show a growth rate of no better than the third quarter, when it increased at an annual rate of 3.8 per cent. That is below the level necessary to reduce unemployment. Jones thinks the strikes in the rubber industry and at Ford Motors in recent months have helped to push down economic growth and employment below what it it otherwise would have

Other reports that Carter and his advisers will be watching will be plant and equipment spending on Dec. 6, retail sales activity on Dec. 10 and November industrial production on

The November wholesale price in-dex will be released Thursday. Industrial production declined in September and October for the first time since the low point of the recession last year. Retail sales, which reflect consumer buying activity, also have been flat, and wholesale prices have climbed at a worrisome rate.

Some areas were still cut off, with helicopters dropping supplies and picking up the most seriously wounded. Several villages wiped out by the quake Wednesday afternoon were not reached by rescuers until Saturday.

"First there was a terrible, loud noise, then dust was everywhere and walls were falling in like playing cards. I remember hearing screams all around me, but I could do nothing. I do not even remember how I saved myself." he said.

Some reports said relief supplies pouring into Turkey from other nations still were piling up in the provincial capital of Van, 50 miles away. But officials here said most survivors at least had blankets, shelter and food. At least 40 railroad cars full of relief supplies had been dispatched by Saturday, with a round-the-clock airlift of Turkish military cargo planes running tents, blankets, food and medical supplies into Van. The United States has made 25 cargo

Carter following up on evaders

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter has assigned a key transition adviser to lay the groundwork for Carter's promised blanket pardon of Vietnam-era draft evaders, press secretary Jody Powell said Saturday.

Powell said Carter has assigned David Berg, the President-elect's liaison with the Justice Department, to begin preliminary work.

Berg will be in charge of research on what has been done in the past to offer pardons and the potential impact the Carter pardon will have, Powell said in an interview.

A clemency program established by President Ford in 1974 gave outright pardons or pardons conditioned on a term of public service work to 14,514 draft evaders and military deserters.

Carter's aides brought him up to date on the progress of selecting his Cabinet, but there was no word on when the choices would be made.

Meanwhile, Carter's spokesman would not rule out the possibility that Carter eventually may decide to call on Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to serve as a special diplomatic envoy.

Carter was given written reports on the appointment process that were prepared by his staff in the past few days. Hamilton Jordan, Carter's campaign manager, had been scheduled to brief the President-elect on efforts to narrow the list of candidates but canceled the meeting because he was ill.

It was announced also that Al Stern, 48, senior policy adviser and former deputy issues director in the campaign, and Curt Hessler, 33, another policy adviser, will attend the National League of Cities gathering at Denver on Sunday and Monday.

A spokesman said the FBI will conduct customary investigations of each Cabinet appointee but that no checks will be done without the permission of the men and women involved. Carter has indicated that refusal to grant permission would be weighed with other factors in making a final decision.

So far, Jody Powell, who will be the White House press secretary, is the only announced appointee.

Carter is being urged by Sens. Abraham A. Ribicoff, DConn., and Howard Baker, RTenn., to use Kissinger as a special envoy to continue Middle East peace negotiations.

Powell told reporters that Carter "would not feel it improper, if the appropriate occasion presented itself. to ask Secretary Kissinger for his assistance, even in some public way."

Toy-collecting couple to sell their antiques

NEW YORK (AP) - Archie and Emma Stiles, who twinkle and chuckle like Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, are selling off a treasure trove of antique toys that has eager collectors straining at the leash like Dancer and Prancer on Christmas

Most of them date from the 19th century, the classic age of American toy-making, and the more than 4,000 items are expected to fetch from $25 for "ordinary" items to $6,000 for the most "important" ones.

They will be auctioned next Tuesday and Wednesday at PB84, a sort of poor man's version of Sotheby Parke Bernet. A cast-iron model of a fourhorse-drawn carriage called a "four hand brake" is expected to draw the top price.

"Right up until last year we wouldn't sell one single toy," said Mrs. Stiles, the more subdued of the couple, while her white-bearded husband, his tufted eyebrows shading sparkling blue eyes, added they would continue collecting. But they have found that the toys, which range from dolls and cast iron banks to carousel horses and Victorian doll carriages, are taking over their house. "We'll be glad to have this money, he said, "but we'll keep right on looking for more. It's a fun business, and it's too much excitement to pass

ODESSA - A 32-year-old Odessa woman remained in Odessa City Jail Saturday night in lieu of a $25,000 bond on a charge of murder in con-nection with the death of 17-year-old Odessa man early Saturday morning. The woman, Gladys Irene Snipes, was arraigned in Justice of the Peace Harold Sligar's court and charged in connection with the death of Pat Ray Thrasher. The shooting reportedly occurred about 2:56 a.m. Saturday at the Snipes address, 501 W. May St., allegedly following a disagreement between Snipes and Thrasher, Detective Sgt. Mitch Haller said. The weapon involved was a small

The children visited the Clearwater Sun, heard a St. Petersburg Times reporter discuss the trade, and practiced interviewing on shopkeepers. Then, for three weeks, they wrote stories.

Miss Shannon compiled the best efforts into a memeographed newspaper so the children could see their work in print.

The front-page stories are tales of violence and destruction - an 18-ton bomb that knocked down the Empire State Building, a tornado, and a giant who stuffed 1,999 people into a jar.

Young Maya Kryger told this story: "A boy got hit by a car. A boy got hit and he went to the hospital and got 200

WASHINGTON (AP) two-hour stand-off between police and two armed men holding three hostages in an apartment building ended quietly when a hostage talked the men into surrendering. police said.

"This woman with her 3-month-old baby helped talk them out," Deputy Chief Maurice T. Turner said Friday night after the siege ended at the three-story apartment from the U.S. Capitol.

No one was hurt during the incident, which began when the two suspects Dwayne Dark and Andrew Dean, allegedly tried to rob two undercover officers during a narcotics sale. One suspect pulled a sawedoff shotgun, frisked the officers and took a pistol from one of them.

The pair entered an apartment occupied Patricia Elliott, 24, and her infant son, James, according to Turner. A man, James Channey, saw the woman being taken hostage by the intruders and was forced inside himself when he confronted them.

Turner said the police found out where the suspects had gone by phoning each apartment

Delegates will be holding workshops on critical urban matters such as municipal finance and economic development. And they are expected to elect Councilwoman Phyllis Lamphere of Seattle as the league's first woman president.

They also will get down to the business of lobbying by drafting a program of urban priorities that league leaders hope will influence President-elect Jimmy Carter and the U.S. Congress.

"By the end of the week, I think we'll emerge with a solid urban agenda, something we can lay on Jimmy's table and say, 'Let's get to work,' " said one league staffer.

The four-day meeting, called the Congress of Cities, is being monitored 'with interest" by several Carter representatives, a spokesman for the president-elect said Saturday.

The congress began Saturday, with policy committees to meet today and draft proposals for consideration later in the week.

Among the conference's proposals was for an immediate program of in-creased employment aid and creation of an urban development bank to subsidize economic activities in depressed urban areas.

Those matters are expected to be on the league's agenda this week as well as discussions on details of how Carter might reorganize Washington's urban bureaucracies.

The Conference of Mayors also called for greater access to the White House, something that could be achieved with selection of a mayor for a Cabinet post

Among heads of city governments who reportedly are being considered by Carter are Kenneth Gibson of Newark, Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles, Coleman Young of Detroit and Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind.

The wallet, containing a $25 war bond, a picture and personal papers but no money, was found recently when an old base hospital was being torn down at Ford Meade, Md.

"It was quite a shock hearing something about it after 30 years said Regul, a 49-year-old tool and die maker. "I'll tell you, it was kind of weird. I'd like to get it back. It's a

Joseph Ahl, base carpentry foreman, said the wallet was found by his workmen hidden in a ceiling support seven feet from the floor.

"Some of the cards and papers really were in bad shape but the bond and the picture were in really good shape," he said.

Ahl tried without success to get in touch with Regul by letter and telephone using Regul's old Philadelphia address.

Then state police dispatcher Patricia Miller read an Associated Press story about the wallet in the Lancaster, Pa., New Era. She ran Regul's name through a

Rig Count climbs

The nationwide rig count, issued weekly by Hughes Tool Co., Houston, last Mo nday was at the highest level for the year.

This is both interesting and encouraging, made even more so by the fact that Hughes officials are forecasting continued strong drilling during 19777.

The rig count its a barometer of domestic oil well drilling operations. The count reached 1,855 in the week ended last Monday, to continue at the highest level since the week ended Jan. 1, 1962, when the count stood at 1,887.

The rig total 11 week previous was 1,838, while at year ago it was

The Houston Chronicle reports that Hughes president James R. Lesch, addressing a group of security analystis in New York City, forecast that 1977's rig count will average 1,800, or an 8 per cent increase over this year.

Footage drilled, Lesch said, will rise 7 per cent to 2 01 million feet.

He said further that a reasonable degre e of energy selfsufficiency "is so vital" to the country that an effective energy policy "is a politic al necessity."

Lesch is of the opinion that Jimmy Carter should be in a better position to get a comprehensive energy legislation bill through Congress than a Republican president.

The Hughes executive is as correct as can be in his "political necessity" observation. And it is true that Carter should stand a better chance that did President Ford in getting a comprehensive energy policy bill through Congress. ST. JOHN'S JOURNAL:

Are businessmen a doomed class in U.S.?

By JEFFREY ST. JOHN Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - "The private corporation has been an enormously productive social invention," serves Michael C. Jensen and William H. Meckling of the University of Rochester Graduate School of Management, "but it is on its way to being destroyed. Large corporations will become like Conrail, Amtrack and the Post Office."

These words were written in a policy paper published last May by the Center for Research in Government Policy and Business, at the University of Rochester in upstate New York.

"Government is destroying the individual incentives which are the wellsprings of economic growth," states the paper.

"We see large corporations as one of the casualties of this process. The corporate form of organization is likely to disappear completely, but even if it survives in some form, the larger corporations as we know them are destined to be destroyed. Indeed, in a few industries we believe their demise is imminent.

These seemingly pessimistic conclusions in May are corroborated by the results of the Carter victory in the presidential election. The coalition of anti-business groups, minorities, labor, consumer environmental and urban political bosses who insured Mr. Carter's narrow victory made it clear only days after the Nov. 2 balloting that they want legislation enacted that would have the direct result of further regulating and controlling the private business sector

In fact, Rep. Al Ullman, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said on Nov. 4 that when the new Congress convenes in January he will move to "strip corporations of their tax privileges.

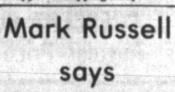

In the numerous political post-mortems conducted in this city, the most persistent criticism has been the widespread nonparticipation of business groups in the election process. The major reason given is fear of the new campaign spending laws that have severely restricted corporations while leaving labor unions and their political allies free to elect national, state and local antibusiness candidates. Many businessmen, frightened or ignorant of what they could do under the new law largely created by labor and its allies, withdrew completely from the 1976 political process rather than run afoul of the Democratic-controlled Federal Election Commission.

Otto J. Scott, author of a number of corporate histories and historical biographies, contends that businessmen have made the sam potentially lethal mistake as their counterparts in the United Kingdom.

"U.S. businessmen have accepted the British idea," notes the historian, "that politicians will save them. To believe that politicians will work to dismantle their own authority is stupid - no politician is that stupid, even if businessmen are." Scott proposes the establishment of a fund of perhaps $500 million to $1 billion to underwrite efforts in the areas long neglected by business; for example, legal, cultural and intellectual now dominated and controlled by their enemies.

Such a fund, he says, would "reach people through all avenues: plays, lectures, rallies, demonstrations, lawsuits, charges against abusers of power, petitions of recall for of-ficeholders who break their pledges; impeachment of misusers of power.

Businessmen have cowered for decades under attacks from the political left. Now, however, the direction of attacks is about to change. We have learned that one of the major themes of a meeting of conservative leaders Chicago in early December will be an all-out public assault on the business community and its policy of subsidizing liberal efforts in the arts, the media and in the political arena. Until recently business has found its most persistent defenders among conservatives and libertarians. Now even that support is slipping away.

Bicentennial gifts are still arriving from foreign countries. China has sent us a radioactive cloud.

The cloud was formed by a recent Chinese hydrogen bomb blast. Now that we've had our swine flu shots, it's time to think fallout.

Scientists have issued their expert opinion: "There's nothing to worry about unless it rains."

This is a touchy situation for our government, since the cloud has diplomatic immunity.

Lame ducks head toward Moscow

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - A flight of lame ducks, led by Treasury Secretary William Simon, will head north this week for their last official look at the sinister, sullen beauty of Moscow.

The lame ducks, most of ther Treasury and Commerce officials aren't likely to remain in government long enough to apply whatever knowledge they may pick up in the Soviet Union. They will be accompanied to Moscow by their wives and by Simon's two sons, Billy, 25. and Peter, 23.

The U.S. embassy, according to the cables out of Moscow, is dusting off the red carpet for this final junket the Ford administration. The Washington officials will attend a conference of the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, but the embassy isn't quite sure what to do with the women.

'There are several interesting options," the embassy has cabled Washington. The cable lists various . luncheon possibilities and implores the State Department to select the most desirable entertainment. "Please advise ... preferred program," urges the cable.

The embassy is also arranging "a separate schedule for the sons of Secretary Simon. We would appreciate knowing if the secretary prefers that they be invited to the luncheon at the Sovietskaya (Hotel)."

Another possibility, the cable suggests, is "a visit to U.S. bicentennial exhibition now being held in Sokolniki Park, Moscow, for wives or sons or both.

Meanwhile, the sightseeing should silver the golden onion domes of the Footnote: The Moscow trip was scheduled before the elections and, therefore, before the officials actually became lame ducks. The arrangements had gone too far, a Treasury spokesman explained, for the conference to be postponed until the new administration takes over.

Our sources say that Simon didn't seek the trip but was asked to head the delegation because his bluntness has made him a favorite with Kremlin leaders. The treasury secretary told us he invited his sons along because there was extra room in the plane. He will pay all their expenses in Moscow mismanagement and false readiness. These confidential reports have been kept under wraps since an April 8, 1976, inspection by the Army Inspector General. The inspected units were rated unsatisfactory in every single area from weapons training to medical services.

One entire batallion "had never conducted a practice load up of ammunition,' except for one lone company that had gone through the exercise once.

Other confidential documents indicate about 20 other serious allegations were largely substantiated by Col. Joseph M. Holihen, the investigations chief.

It was alleged, for example, that one unit "was short approximately $70,000 worth of equipment." The investigative reports indicate this was a $70,000 misunderstanding that has now been resolved. But an Army spokesman refused clarification on the grounds that another investigation is now in progress.

Many essential vehicles, with missing parts, were reported as "operational." Thousands of gallons of petroleum products were also unaccounted for.

BANNED DRUG - A spinal drug, which has been banned in the United States, is being marketed across the border in Canada by its U.S. manufacturer.

The drug, chymopapin, is a surgical substitute that dissolves spinal disks. In 1975 tests, it was found to be potentially dangerous, yet no more effective than a harmless placebo. The manufacturer, Baxter-

Travenol, quietly withdrew its application, therefore, to get chymopapin approved for U.S. sales. The company nevertheless put it on the market in Canada. Canadian officials told us they don't always agree with the U.S. interpretation of tests. Baxter-Travenol explained that they presented the same test results to both countries. Different countries have different standards, a spokesman said

MILLION-DOLLAR DELAY Four years ago, the Osage Indians received a multi-million dollar land settlement from the federal government, including a $1 million educational scholarship fund for the Osage peoples. But bureaucratic bungling has held up the money, and not one penny from the education fund has yet reached the Indians.

Our investigation indicates that the delay has been caused by disputes, legal problems and red tape. A staff officer at the Bureau of Indian Affairs is finally getting around to developing regulations to govern the administration of the money. But the delay has had one advantage: about $250,000 in interest has accumulated over the last four years.

White House with little expertise on vital national security questions, he will have to rely heavily on staff advice. That may explain why this exnaval career officer is seriously considering a former Republican Secretary of Defense as a badly needed counterweight to domination by the foreign policy network.

James Schlesinger and the foreign policy network

And ROBERT NOV. AK

WASHINGTON -- The unexpected but increasingly re al possibility that hard-lining James Schlesinger may become Jimmy Carter's Secretary of Defense poses the only threat to total control in the new administration by Carter's soft-lining national security transition staff. Those transition staffers, announced and unannounced, are drawn straight from the foreign policy network of young professionals who shuffle ceaselessly between the administration, Capitol Hill, the academic world and high-priced Washington law offices. Presidentelect Carter's representatives during this interregnum, they are overwhelmingly devout believers in arms controls, detente an d reduced defense Dr. Schlesinger, fired from the Pentagon by President Ford for excessively zealous advocacy of a strong national defeanse, is obviously not part of the net work. Rather, his nomination to his old Pentagon post much more likely today than anybody dreamed possible a month ago would seriously menace the network's domination of the Carter ad-

Accordingly, the continuing mystery of how much of Annapolis and rural Georgia remains in the President-elect, will be partially solved in his selection of a Secretary of Defense. That choice will set the tone for national security policy difficult for Carter to change in the foreseeable future.

Positions in what Carter insiders call the national security "cluster" — National Security Council - are likely to be filled first Others prominent in this cluster are positioned to Schlesinger's left and are all veterans of the Kennedy-Johnson administration - including Cyrus Vance, Dr. Harold Brown, Paul Warnke and Prof. Zbigniew Brzezinski.

The impression made on Carter by Schlesinger during a two-hour briefing before the second presidential debate has been lasting. Consequently, a Carter insider who two weeks ago ruled out Schlesinger as unacceptable to liberals now considers him the front-runner. But Carter's men are worried by such an appointment on two counts: first, that the Democratic party's left wing would revolt; second, that Schlesinger would prove less moderate than he now sounds in talking to Carter agents.

The foreign policy network would prefer anybody but Schlesinger. Only he has the knowledge and determination to clean out the experienced Washington hands who dominate the transition machinery. Typical is Anthony Lake, a former foreign service officer in charge of

State Department transition. Lake,

who served under Dr. Henry

Kissinger at the National Security Council (NSC) before resigning because of the Cambodia bombing, is a plaintiff in the Kissinger wire tap case. So, even some Carter aides consider Lake a strange choice as the President-elect's emissary to the man he is suing. More significant than the indelicacy of Lake's relations with Kissinger are his soft-boiled views on foreign policy views reflected in two of his transition assistants: Dan Spiegel and Paula Stern, foreign policy aides to Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Sen. Gaylord Nelson, respectively. Also on Carter's State Department team is ex-foreign service officer Richard Moose, a Senate Foreign Relations Committee staffer whose investigations in Vietnam and Laos made him a folk hero to the anti-war movement.

Walter Slocombe, a Washington lawyer who served on Kissinger's NSC staff and is an ardent arms control advocate, is on Carter's Pentagon transition team. Slocombe is an attorney for another NSC alumni, Morton Halperin, in his wire tap lawsuit against Kissinger. While filling no formal slot, Halperin is in close contact with Lake, Slocombe and his other friends in the transition

Lynn Davis, a staffer on Sen. Frank Church's Senate Intelligence Investigating Committee, is also on the Pentagon transition staff. Another Church committee veteran, David Aaron, is in charge of transition at the NSC — where he served with Lake, Slocombe and Halperin in the early Kissinger days.

Most ominous to hard-liners is the assignment of Barry Blechman, defense expert at the Brookings Institution, as transition representative to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) in charge of Pentagon spending. Blechman has been a principal architect of the Brookings

Some of the Carter transition staffers at the Pentagon - notably Phil Odeen, a former Defense Department systems analyst, and R. James Woolsey, former Armed Services Committee staffer - are non-ideological technicians. But nowhere on the Carter transition staff is there a bona fide hard-line skeptic of detente.

Is there a Carter energy policy?

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON = Inc real tip-off on whether Jimmy Carter will be a poor, average or far better than average president will come when he decides on an energy policy. If he does nothing, look out. If he follows the lead of the Ford administration and drifts into paying lip service to various forms of conservation and stimulation of oil and coal production, based largely on forcing prices up-ward, look out again. But if he goes for mandatory cutbacks in imports of foreign oil, and mandatory forms of conservation of use, the nation might be moving toward a more realistic and workable policy.

The energy crisis is getting worse

The United States imported 15.7 per cent more crude oil and refined products in the first 10 months of the year than in the same period in 1975. The degree of dependency upon foreign oil is now 40 per cent, headed toward 50 per cent. This is a time bomb ticking away. If there is ever market, while Japanese sets have a always as near as the next Middle East war - the American economy could be thrown into chaos.

An ugly international trade war looms on the horizon over - of all things — television sets.

A committee to preserve American color television has been established under the name COMPACT. It includes the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Department (IUD), nine of its affiliates and five manufacturers of TV sets and components.

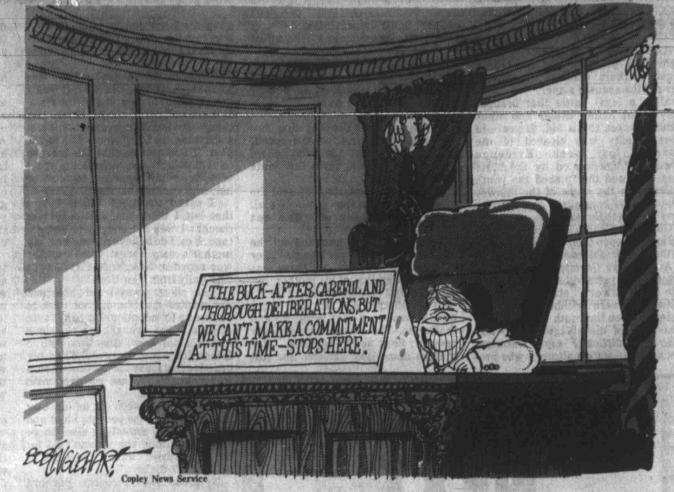

COMPACT made its first splash by filing a petition with the U.S. International Trade Commission, demanding a slowdown on imports of foreign-made color television sets. The foreign imports, according to COMPACT, have cost 65,000 American jobs already and threaten another 60,000

Japan is COMPACT's main target. For one thing, high Japanese tariffs keep U.S. sets out of the Japanese growing share of the U.S. market. You'll hear more in the future about the U.S. vs. Japan color television set

Swine flu program doubly plagued

By RICHARD COHEN The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - I'll let you in on something. Several times last week, the people who run the swine flu program here called The Washington Post complaining about the picture that accompanied the listing of vaccination center locations. It seems that the person in the picture was not smiling, and that, the callers said, tends to discourage persons from getting their shots. Wrong.

Wrong for a number of reasons, not the least of them being that people know that an injection is nothing to smile about. Sometimes it hurts, more often than not it smarts and sometimes it is followed by after-effects — in this case the lingering suspicion that you are now immune to a disease that does not exist. Better protection than that you cannot ask.

The fact of the matter is that when the swine flu program finally arrived at our office, it was the subject of in-tense debate. People consulted their doctors and received less than uniform advice. Some reported that their doctors said go ahead, while others had doctors who said the vac-

One person didn't bother to ask any doctor. He simply went around the of-fice asking people if they had ever known anyone with swine flu. Then he

It was the smile that got me. The more you thought about it, and the more you heard people talk, the more you had to realize that something had gone out of American life — our un-bridled faith in science.

I know I have lost it. I was one of those who believed — who believed that monorails, would solve our transportation problems, that atomic energy would heat our homes, that pesticides would kill pests and not people, that Vitamin C was the

People like me have not had an easy time of it recently. We were the ones who waited in vain for Kahoutek, the comet that fizzled. We pressed our noses to the window a couple of years back, waiting for the Great Eclipse to hit Washington — "a profound darkness," this paper predicted. Profound it wasn't. More recently, we confidently expected an explanation when "Legion Fever' killed 25 persons in Philadelphia. All that happened is that a hotel announced it soon would close its doors. All those are good enough reasons to lose some faith in science. With me, the process began when I noticed something about sneakers. Kids were wearing them. My son wears them. He was wearing them the day I rushed him to the doctor's office, and it wasn't until we were seated in the waiting room that I had a chance to take inventory - clean ears, scrubbled face, fresh undershirt — that I noticed the sneakers. I panicked.

Then I looked around. All the kids were wearing sneakers. In my day, no kids wore sneakers to a doctor's office. It was evidence that a parent did not care about his child's health. Sneakers were bad for your feet, the only thing worse being cowboy boots. Everyone knew they forced your toes to grow to a point.

So you wore something called Boy Scout shoes. They were sturdy, they were good for your feet and they were ugly as hell. It was a mother's idea of a shoe, and they were fitted in a shoe store that had an x-ray machine. You slipped your feet into the machine, the salesman and your mother looked through the viewer and a pointer was moved around your little green toes.

Years later, science discovered that sneakers were really all right. I just read an article about it. It's the x-ray machine that's no good. It really does turn your toes green in the long run. You don't see the machines anymore.

Well, there have been other examples of that kind of thing. For years, the late Smokey The Bear told us that forest fires ranked his God's list of sins than patricide. Turns out, we are now told, that there are good forest fires and bad forest fires. Smokey, being a bear, was not

The next blow came from a friend who mentioned in conversation that doctors no longer believe in the acne diet. I couldn't believe it. I mean, I had spent the years from 14 to 18 abstaining from Coke, peanuts, chocolate and what was then widely considered the ultimate cure - abstaining from

The latter was easy. When you're 15 and have pimples, sex is out of the question. So I dieted. I gave up Coke, which wasn't easy, peanuts, which was a cinch, but chocolate was really hard. When I heard the news about the diet. I became bitter.

Recently the Wall Street Journal provided the last straw. The ucler diet, it reported, is now passe. If my father ever sees that story he'll probably have another ulcer attack.

For years - and I do mean years he dieted, eating nothing spicy, drinking no alcohol, sipping no coffee. We suffered along with him, eating food that could just as well have been gummed and wondering why people in countries like Mexico weren't dropping like flies from their spicy diet. Now I know the reason.

There's a good side to all this. For too long, we believed uncritically in science, swallowing whole what we were told sometimes science wrapped itself in the flag and was called 'American know-how' and did things like eradicate Yellow Fever in

Years later science was used to sell us a war. The things about Vietnam, you will recall, was that it was going to be scientific - clean and surgical for us. We had helicopters that could strafe and planes to bomb from way up and defoliation agents to prune the local forests, and someone was going to build a fence the width of the country. Touch it and you were zapped. In the end, none of it mattered.

So when it comes to the swine flu vaccine, I find the cynicism healthy. Any program conceived by politicians and administered by scientists comes to us doubly plagued. As for me, I've had my vaccine. It was free, and there are some things that will never

By ART BUCHWALD The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Washington is in a terrible tizzy. Nobody has any idea who anybody is and there is nothing that upsets this town more than not knowing who is in charge.

It's gotten so bad that anyone who has anything near to a Southern accent is treated with deference and respect, just on the off chance he might be a member of the Carter transition team.

A friend of mine told me what happened in his federal building the other day. A young man wearing jeans, boots and a blue denim jacket walked into the building chewing on a piece of straw.

The alert guard at the desk im-mediately called upstairs. "I think it's one of 'them.

"We put in this $400,000 mail sorter, but because GSA changed the size of our forms from an S18 to a W16 we had to change the envelopes, and then make modifications in the mail sorter of $300,000. But it wasn't our fault. Here is all the correspondence on it. You'll see the overrun was not made by our department."

The boy said, "You want me to read all this correspondence?" 'No, sir. We can get someone to read it for you.

AUSTIN-Maybe old Red Berry was right. Texas might be better off as two

At least, that's what the late State Senator from San Antonio always maintained.

V. E. (Red) Berry's legislative program always contained proposals for horse-racing, and for splitting up the state.

Berry's idea was to whack up Texas into northern and southern portions, leaving the south to enjoy drinking, gambling and horse-racing, and leaving the north to enjoy not drinking, not gambling and not horse-

No one has offered horse racing thus far among the legislative proposals-but (wouldn't you know it?) other San Antonio legislators are offering amendments to allow church bingo games.

Even that rather mild, seemingly innocuous form of a game of chance has already roused the ire of some other church groups-who feel that allowing any form of gambling, for whatever purpose, is just plain

Texas gambling laws, like Texas liquor laws, are only slightly more comprehensible than Internal Revenue Service forms-but bingo games are a no-no, regardless of who is their sponsor.

Still, most policemen probably don't get too much of a thrill busting up a church bingo festival-and it produces a certain amount of irritation among the citizenry.

But whether lawmakers can win approval of a constitutional amendment to allow bingo for churches and civic organizations remains doubtful, in view of past opposition to such proposals.

But if bingo comes, can pari mutuel betting on horse racing be far behind?

Once upon a time, from 1933 to 1937 Kay Bates to be more precise, Texas had pari 3201 Durant St. mutuel betting. (In fact, Texas has had legal betting on the ponies twice this century. The other time also was for four years, from 1905 to 1909.)

In 1968, when a referendum on pari mutuel betting was carried in both Democratic and Republican primaries, Texans turned down the idea—but not overwhelmingly.

The horse racing issue remains one of the perennial issues for lawmakers, in fact. Last session, Sen. Ike Harris of Dallas had some legislation on the subject but decided to let it die quietly, and early.

But the matter may pop up again as a major effort—as it did in 1965. And it's likely to be brought up the next time the Legislature starts looking at additional or increased

Several states have decided to go with lotteries or other forms of betting as a source of additional income-in fact, there's even a new magazine out devoted to covering developments on

Proponents contend that betting goes on anyway, and that it might as well be legalized, with the state taking a cut, and regulating the operation.

Opponents contend the result would be an influx of undesirable types into the state, and the diversion of resources from more worthwhile and needed areas.

That battle, however, appears in the future, while the bingo scrap looms dead ahead on the legislative horizon. Legislators, however, won't be going into that fray with entirely clean hands, however, since the House of Representatives itself held a lottery just the other week to distribute office space.

That may not influence lawmakers-then again, it may, depending on what kind of offices they ended up with.

One thing's for sure: bingo will be a hot issue, and likely will one of the top issues in an already issue-heavy

POSITIVE THINKING

Science of a satisfying life

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

I had an interesting conference with a man and his wife on a problem of great importance to them. The wife was very troubled; she did most of the talking. The husband, though concerned, was quiet and restrained.

Finally, commenting upon his quietness in contrast to her tension, the wife said, "You'll never get any expression out of Jack. Nothing troubles him. I fuss and fuss, but he keeps right on being quiet and peaceful, no matter what."

I was impressed by his dignity, gentility and, above all, his profound calm. He was a much stronger personality than his wife. Finally I asked him how, in the face of a problem such as his, he could manifest such a spirit of imperturbability.

His answer was direct. "There's no secret about it," he said. "I have liscovered the science of a satisfying

The phrase caught my interest. This man knew what so many of us do not seem to realize, that living is a science. In a scientific age, all too few of us recognize the fact. We all know what science can do to bring a television picture out of the sky into our living rooms, to increase the egg production of hens by special feeds and culture, to move us from place to place with increasing speed. These accomplishments result from the application of certain scientific laws.

And there are laws in the spiritual realm governing living which are so exact, so precise, that if you learn to apply them to yourself you will develop powers you did not know you had. You will develop a peace you never dreamed you could possess. You can have insights far beyond anything you ever conceived. And you can solve your problems with an ease and skill which will astonish you.

It is amazing what a human being can do with himself when he learns to live scientifically. And, strangely enough, one of the greatest tools for doing this is the Bible, a book written before the word "science" was coined. For the Bible is crammed with workable procedures for meeting the problems of life. What did this quiet and composed man apply in his crisis? It was the law of keeping calm and not getting ex-cited, and of practicing faith in the outcome. "In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength."

Obviously a quiet mind is essential to a rational approach to a problem. One cannot think efficiently when the mind is in a tumult of emotional reactions. The first principle of clear thinking is quiet thinking. There is enough brain power in us to solve any problem when quietly and confidently we call upon our strength and in-

So the two things this man did were to practice quietness and affirm confidence.

In assuming an attitude of quiet confidence, regardless of how up-setting a situation may be, you set correcting forces in motion. Excitedly tell yourself that a matter is going badly, and you actually encourage that result. But keep calm and tell yourself that with God's help and your own powers things are going to turn out all right, and you definitely stimulate such an outcome.

The reason for this is simple. You are thinking and believing, and no forces are more powerful than thought and faith. By thought you apply your own inner powers to the situation, any by faith you bring to bear the vast powers of God.

Try this method for yourself, and see if it isn't "the science of a

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Winning is good

It was with much anticipation I opened Friday's Reporter-Telegram sports page (I'm a Lee Rebel football fan!) There were many ads urging the Rebs on to victory for the Bi-

District title. Also, on the sports page, I read an article on the importance of winning in American sports. Once more the bandwagon is climbed on; this particular wagon labeled negative aspect of winning in sports. It is this issue I must comment on. Which of us does not want to be a winner; whether it is as a student, mother, father, athlete, artist, sports writer or reaching a personal goal. Our country is based on individuals who desire to win; to set and reach goals of their own making.

Life does not guarantee us a win: then the test becomes a challenge to not quit but build on our mistakes. Or, we can call foul and spread our failure

In closing, I'd like to congratulate the Lee Rebels and Coach Acree on their hard work in becoming the 1976 Bi-District champs.

Mystery unsolved; who killed Barbara Gibbons?

By GEORGE ESPER

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) - More than three years ago, on an autumn night, Barbara Gibbons was killed, her son the accused slayer.

After a legal battle that brought playwright Arthur Miller and other public figures to his aid, 21-year-old Peter Reilly was cleared of the charges last week. Evidence previously unrevealed by the state was disclosed that placed the youth niles from the scene of the murder when it was committed in a cottage hey shared in Canaan.

Gov. Ella Grasso has ordered state police to reopen their investigation ino the 51-year-old woman's death.

And Joseph Gormley, chief state's attorney, says he will try to learn why the two sworn statements by witnesses were withheld from the defense when the youth was tried and convicted of manslaughter. But this may be difficult, says Gormley, because the state's attorney who pro-

"I honestly don't know," Peter Reilly said during a break from his job as an ambulance attendant in nearby Wethersfield, where he averages $125

On the day after Thanksgiving, two days after the charges were dropped, Reilly's friends at the Professional Ambulance Service threw up white bunting congratulating him.

"Congratulations, Peter!" said the printed banner in the office. "We all knew the truth. Everyone else was just a little slow."

Peter Reilly says he found out the truth about himself when he was 13 or 14 years old, why his last name was different from that of his mother, but that he didn't hate her for it.

"The difference," he said, "my mother was raped back in the '50s and that's me. The assailant was never caught. She never married. Her maiden name was Gibbons. She just

"I first learned about it when I was 13 or 14, something like that. It was a little hard to understand at the time Human beings are human beings and things like this do happen and it's just something that happened. It's in the past. It's something that I've learned to deal with. It doesn't affect my personality. What happened couldn't be helped, I guess. What else can I say.

"I asked about my father before that but I think she waited till she thought I was old enough to understand. Yes, I do believe my mother. My mother's very honest with me. She was raped in New York City. She is originally from New York.

'She never considered abortion. She wanted me. She did not want to put me up for adoption. I give her a lot of credit. She brought me up alone and it's not easy. She was both a father and a mother to me. I had my grandparents earlier in life when I was younger because we lived with my grandparents.

But then we were out on our own and she was all the parents I had and she was really something else. There wasn't anything she wouldn't do for me and there wasn't anything I wouldn't do for her."

By prosecution accounts, Barbara libbons was both alcoholic and promiscuous. When found by her son, she was nude on the floor of her bedroom with her throat slashed, her legs and ribs broken and a T-shirt wrapped around her neck.

During Reilly's trial in 1974, John Bianchi, the state prosecutor who died last August, asked the youth: "Even though you loved your mother - and I don't doubt that for the slightest minute - her actions left you pretty sad at times?"

"At times," replied Reilly. "You had to understand my mother." Looking back today, Reilly said in n interview that he loved his mother very much. 'So to speak, we were an average American family, just the two of us, he said. "She took me fishing. She taught me to fish. I had no father to take me out fishing. She taught me canoeing. She'd go out and play a game of catch with me when I was young. And she showed me how to throw a football ... She gave me everything a father could. "She did drink too much. I understand now that she did. I didn't notice it so much then because it was something I lived with day to day ... I guess she was an alcoholic. It's hard to explain, it really is. It was something she lived with and I lived with it. I don't know why she drank so much. She was a very intelligent woman. She had worked years before the murder and then she got on Reilly at first confessed to the crime, but later recanted.

"I don't really understand the state's thinking on the whole situation," he says today. "I was questioned and questioned until I made a confession that was, so to speak, spoon fed. I was saying I did it, but I didn't remember how, but the police were right. That was the way I was brought up, that the police were always right. And after a good brain-washing, I guess you could call it, I confessed to it but the time sequence and everything proved that I didn't do it. I know I didn't do it. But after many hours of no sleep, I guess

In a taped recording of police interrogations played during Reilly's trial, Lt. James Shay told the youth at one

"There are many things we can do to make this a difficult process for you. I don't want you to play any more head games with us, and if you do, we will take you and will lock you up and will treat you like an animal. pounds, has long, blond hair and wears silver-rimmed glasses, spent 143 days in jail. He was freed on Feb. 21, 1974, on a $50,000 cash bond raised by friends. Two months later, a jury convicted him of first degree manslaughter and he was sentenced to 6-to-10 years in prison. He remained free, however, on bond p ding appeals. Playwright Miller helped to focus nationwide attention on the case.

Reilly now lives with Mickey and Marion Madow, long time friends. He Gilmore is expected to ask the Pardons Board on Tuesday to proceed with his firing squad execution without delay. The Pard ons Board may grant Gimore's request or commute his death sentence to life imprisonment.

The board also will consider a petition from clergy men and residents asking that Gilmore not be executed until Utah's 1973 death penalty law is tested for its constitutionality.

Gilmore has refused to eat until he speaks with his girlfriend, Nicole Barrett, who was admitted to a Provo mental hospital Nov. 19 a fter taking an overdose of sleeping pills three days earlier in an apparent suicide pact with Gilmore.

Provo attorney Ronald Stanger, who is handling Gilmore's defense, said in a telephone interview Saturday he wants to meet with the hospital officials, who have not allowed Gilmore to telephone Mrs. Barrett.

Salt may provide

answer

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (AP) - Scientists at Texas A&M University have come up with a promising solution to the problem of root rot in cotton crops, but it doesn't involve any secret formulas.

The cure may be on your kitchen table ...in the salt shaker.

"Table salt treatment just may be the answer." said Dr. William Eickhof. a researcher at the Cotton, Inc., center in Raleigh, N.C., whose firm commissioned the research by A&M.

Specialists estimate that root rot costs the cotton industry $20 million each year in Texas, Arizona and New Mexico.

Dr. Stuart Lyda heads the research team at A&M. He observed several years ago that root rot does not occur in soil with a high salt content because it causes a chemical exchange that creates carbon dioxode, which strangles root rot

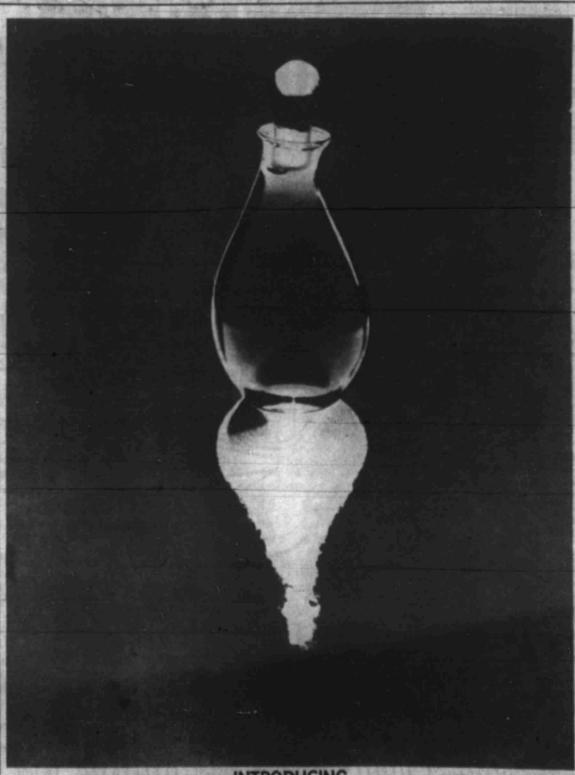

Lyda experimented with injecting some soil samples to see if it would prevent the rot. It did.

Expanded experiments are now being conducted in control plots, and one treated plot showed a rot infestation percentage of 27 per cent, compared with 74 per cent in an untreated segment.

"First we identify rotted sections with in-frared photos," Lyda said. "Then we apply up to 1,800 pounds per acre of salt after we determine that the treatment won't destroy the soil struc-ture." Lyda said the treatment costs about $30

Lyda estimated that that about 1.5 million acres in Texas are infested with the rot spores.

He said producers in New Mexico have inadvertently brought root rot under control by using irrigated water with natural salt in it.

SAN ANGELO - Christmas came one month early for Arlington Sam

Houston Saturday. Robert E. Lee's Rebels gave the Texans three big gifts in the Class AAAA regional football playoff game and then went on to lose a 38-13 decision in a game that was marred by roughhouse play in which a free-for-all broke out in the third period.

If it wasn't bad enough, game of-ficials finally called the game to an end with 18 seconds still left on the scoreboard clock.

Thus, the Rebels' 1976 season comes to an abrupt ending and Sam Houston moves on to the quarterfinal round against Lubbock Monterey next

Lee made more mistakes than it had all season long and chose the wrong outfit to pull them on as the Texans broke open a 10-7 game with a 21-point outburst in the third period to put the game completely out of reach.

Lee drove 76 yards in 15 plays to take the lead. Crowell had runs of five, 19 and eight yards and quar-terback Brad Wright hit Crowell with a key 12-yard pass to the Texan 17.

The running of Crowell and Wright moved the ball down to the Sam Houston one where Crowell banged over. Jerry Moore's point gave Lee a 7-3 lead with 1:32 left in the opening

The Rebs seemed to be fired up and held the Texans at bay, but had to give up the ball and tailback Kenneth Jackson gave Sam Houston its initial first down of the game when he broke on an 80-yard TD scamper. Marlow split the uprights and that made it 10-7, the closest that Lee was going to come the rest of the bitterly-cold day.

Donny Colbert helped turn away Lee on its next posession by picking off a Wright pass and tight roped his

Baylor nips desperate Frogs in wild finish

The downtrodden Horned Frogs put

Bayuk passed for two touchdowns and Baylor almost gave the game away in the fourth quarter on a classic boner.

This set the stage for the wild fourth quarter. Shofner ended his reign at TCU with a 2-31 record and officials called a Tuesday press conference to announce the new coach, expected to be Tulsa's F.A. Dry.

TCU GAVE an indication from the very start that it meant business when defensive back Darryl Lowe in tercepted a wayward Jackson pass in the numbing 37-degree cold. That set up Ray's first field goal.

The tough Bayuk unreeled a 35-yard run the next time TCU had the ball and the Horned Frogs drove 78 yards for a touchdown to make it 9-0. Ray shanked the extra point wide right.

Baylor came back, but turned down a point-blank field goal that almost proved to be the Bears' undoing.

They drove to the Horned Frog three yard line, where Coach Grant Teaff decided to go for the touchdown on fourth down. Blair was hit hard at the line of scrimmage and fumbled to end the scoring threat.

Ricky Wright intercepted a Jackson pass and appeared to have a sure touchdown when he fumbled the ball in the open field. However, the muff didn't keep TCU from scoring as Wells worked free on a third and 10 from the Baylor 19 for a touchdown to give TCU a 16-7 halftime lead.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) - Don 'Duck' Williams' 18-foot jumper with 18 seconds to play in overtime gave Notre Dame an 80-79 basketball victory over eighth-ranked Maryland

Notre Dame went ahead 71-69 when Toby Knight hit two free throws in the closing minute of regulation play. The Terps made it 71-71 with six seconds left when sophomore Larry Gibson tapped in a missed shot by Steve Sheppard.

In overtime, Maryland scored the first basket, but Notre Dame tied it 73-73. Then Sheppard hit one of two from the line to give the Terps a onepoint lead. Notre Dame reganed the lead but Maryland freshman Bill Bryant hit a sixfoot jumper, was fouled and converted for the three-point play, making it 77-76.

The Irish's Bill Paterno put Notre Dame in front again with an 18-foot jump shot. That basket was countered with 42 seconds remaining when Brad Davis scored on a 17-foot jumper, giving the Terps the 79-78 lead. Williams then gave the Irish the victory.

In the first half, the lead changed hands 14 times. Maryland at one point was behind 10 points with 13 minutes left in the half. In the next five minutes, the Terps tied the score 17-17, then went ahead 19-18. From then on, the Terps and the Irish swapped leads until Notre Dame hit two at the

Rebels pop EP Austin in Tall City finals

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

Mike Denny saved his best for last, and teammate Billy Ray Ennis cagers overcame a pesky El Paso Austin squad, 59-53 at the Reb gym Saturday night, and captured their third Tall City Tournament title.

Denny, the big 6-5 postman for coach Paul Stueckler's unbeaten Rebs, was hardly noticeable in his team's first two tournament wins, but in Saturday evening's finale, the big guy tossed in 20 points, blocked seven Panther shots, dominated both the offensive and defensive boards for all of 32 minutes.

Ennis, who hit for 26 points in Lee's quarterfinal victory over Amarillo Tascosa, and 24 in the semi-final conquest of El Paso Burges, finished up the two day event with 14 against Austin, as the 6-2 senior was a unanimous winner of the tournament's Most Valuable Player award.

Both Ennis and Denny were named to the all-tournament team, along with their teammates Roy Lee Smith, and Bobby Alexander. Others making the squad were Bill Spradling, El Paso Parkland; Craig Dunn, Midland's outstanding senior postman; Duane Gilbreath, Tascosa; Frank Reyes, Del Rio; Mike Rapisand and Lewis Holden, El Paso Burges; and Richard Hernandez and Ernesto Serranoi of runnerup Austin. Del Rio was given the tournament's Sportsmanship Award. Coach Don Humphrey's Midland High team, which made it to the semifinals by beating Parkland in their Friday night opener, lost a pair Saturday, and had to settle for fourth place, behind Burges, who beat the Bulldogs 61-52 in the consolation finals.

The title game started out like a laugher, as Denny began his heroics early, hitting the Rebs' first three buckets, as they jumped out to a 14-3 lead. Denny, Ennis, and Alexander totally dominated the offensive boards in the opening quarter, and got two, three, and even four shots at the

The Rebs extended their lead to 11. at 16-5 with 2:05 left in the period, before Austin's guards began to find the range from outside, and closed the gap to 18-11 by the time the quarter

Denny knocked home 10 of those 18 Lee first period points, and Bobby Alexander added six more.

The second period was no different, as Denny tipped in a missed Ennis shot in the first few seconds, and Roy Lee Smith hit two from the corner to open up a 24-11 advantage.

With not a single player rising above 6-1, Austin found itself like a group of pygmies in the land of the giants, as the period wore on, and they just couldn't stop Denny.

They tried boxing him out as time wore on, but the versatile cager just began throwing them in from the 8-10 foot range. A pair of Denny jumpers near the two minute mark of the opening half gave the Rebs a 13 point, 28-15 lead, and only a late Panther rally, cut it to 11 at the half, 32-21.

Austin may have been outsized and outmanned, but they didn't show it in the opening minutes of the third period, as the Panthers drilled home three baskets in a row, and cut the margin to 32-27.

But the Rebs awoke from their brief sleep and cold shooting spell, and managed to keep at least a seven point cushion between them and Austin for the remainder of the

In the closing minutes, it was Lee who caught fire this time. Denny hit a jumper at the two minute mark, and then excited the crowd a half minute later with a reverse layup that made it 42-31.

Austin's Serranoi, who was a oneman show for the Panthers in the quarter, connecting for eight of his team's 12 points, hit a jumper with :59 remaining, but Lee guard Mike Wallace answered with a long distance number of his own, and Lee led after three, 44-33.

The Rebs took Austin for dead as the fourth quarter began, and that was a mistake. Battling and scrapping, the Panthers and Serranoi took advantage of some Lee turnovers, and narrowed the gap to four, 51-47, with 3:40 left.

Then, it seemed Austin would get another break, when Denny apparently traveled with the ball. But the officials didn't see it that way, and Donny had himself another haskel

Even the National Collegiate Athletic Association has difficulty keeping track of the lawsuits in which it is involved. The NCAA estimates, however, that it spends an average of $1,000 a day on litigation.

The reasons for this litigation-spawned so often in past years by NCAA actions aimed at major conference schools like Alabama, Minnesota and Oklahoma—go beyond the work-a-day routine of big college

Many close to the litigation, on both sides, see it as a social trend.

"WE'RE ALL becoming more and more involved in these legal en-tanglements. It's happening everywhere," says Wayne Duke, commissioner of the Big Ten Conference, where Minnesota currently is suing the NCAA after the Gophers were put on indefinite probation over the eligibility of three basketball players.

Generally speaking, I think administrators of sports programs, collegiate and pro, are very much concerned that much of our athletic affairs are handled through legal means," says Duke.

"I think it all goes back to a very prophetic statement, ironically enough made by a Big Ten attorney, after I had suspended two University of Minnesota basketball players.

"He looked the judge in the eye and said, 'It'll be a very sad day, indeed, when we have to build every basketball court next to a federal court."

The NCAA currently is involved in at least five lawsuits. But new actions spring up almost by the day, in local and state courts. Some suits began years ago and lay dormant now.

IN 1972, the NCAA spent $129,000 in legal fees involving litigation against it. In 1973, the amount went up to $191,000, and in 1974, skyrocketed to $418,000. The amount was $376,000 last year, and in the first six months of 1976, the NCAA spent $182,000, according to figures confirmed by several sources. "It's happening in all quarters," says Dave Cawood, public relations director of the NCAA. "It's the trend. "We're spending an enormous amount of money to defend our rules. And they are being upheld, so they're just as valid now as they've ever been, and there's more case law to than we ever have had before." The NCAA never has lost a court battle. It has lost on the local level, but thus far the higher courts have support the rules, because of the suits, backed up the NCAA. "Three of our actions now are in state courts," Cawood said, 'and that's where we're most likely to lose, and that's why it costs us so much." One of the suits in state court was brought by the University of Oklahoma, seeking to stop an NCAA regulation limiting the size of coaching staffs. Last month, the State Supreme Court ruled in favor of Oklahoma. But the NCAA undoubtedly will appeal to a federal court.

BY THE nature of our legal system. these lawsuits have made adversaries of the NCAA and its member schools. Admittedly, there has been talk of pulling out of the NCAA and forming alternate organizations.

While no one seems to really expect a mass exodus from the NCAA, a move now afoot to form a Collegiate Football Association belies the seriousness of these sentiments.

Some of the most vocal criticism of the NCAA and most loyal support of the CFA has come from the South.

"Obviously, there are differences within the NCAA among its membership," says Southeast Conference Commissioner Boyd McWhorter, a prime mover in the CFA. "And, as you well know, a good many of our problems seem to revolve around the sport of football. Until these problems are solved, we are going to continue to have our differences."

MCWHORTER HAS been credited in the past with favoring an NCAA pullout. He denies it.

"I've been misquoted on this so many times. I have never made a threat-I don't have the power to make a threat-to pull out of the NCAA.

What I have said in the past has been more in the way of a prediction-reorganization has to take place," says McWhorter.

McWhorter says the CFA, which meets Dec. 20 in Dallas, was formed to work within the framework of the NCAA "to make us more effective in roposing legislation and lobbying for

He adds that while some legislation passed by the NCAA in the past has "-been well intentioned, it basically has applied to only 75 or 80 institutions. Nobody but these 75 or 80 institutions has had to cut back, but a lot more than those 75 or 80 have voted for the

The legislation to which McWhorter referred would include rules like the size limits on coaching staffs and limitations on athletic scholarships.

"There was a proposal from the West Coast some time back," says Mc Whorter, "that bowl and television revenues be divided among all NCAA schools. Of course, it wasn't passed, but many people in the South said if it

"I'm not ashamed to admit that in our section of the country, which has been called a football factory, the sport of football has provided revenue for every institution in the SEC to expand and improve its overall athletic program."

IT WAS this concern that prompted perhaps the most famous action taken against the NCAA ... Alabama Coach Bear Bryant's suit to do away with squad size limits.

In the summer of 1975, an NCAA special convention recommended squad sizes be limited to 48 for away games and 60 at home. Bryant filed

Marsh ups lead to seven

MIYAZAKI, Japan (AP) — Australia's Graham Marsh, seeking his fourth victory in Japan this year, holds a seven-stroke lead Saturday after the third round in the $200,000 Dunlop Phoenix golf tournament.

The 32-year-old Marsh put together rounds of 66 and 69 for a three round total of 200, 16 under par, matching the 72-hole tournament record established last year by defending champion Hubert Green of the United

Graham had four birdies on the front nine and four more on the back nine with a bogey for a 32-33 card on the 6,986-yard, par-72 Phoenix Country Club course.

"The turning point came on the fourth and fifth holes where on both occasions I landed in the trees," Marsh said.

"I could easily had bogeys. Instead I parred the fourth with a great wedge shot and then birdied the fifth with my seven-iron which landed six-feet from the pin.

"That gave me the confidence I needed, which was evident especially from the eighth to the 11th holes where I birdied all four," he added.

Amy overtakes Donna

MANILA (AP) - Amy Alcott of the United States played aggressive golf here Saturday to win the $100,000 Far East Open Invitational LPGA championship here with a five-underpar 67 in the final round

The 20-year-old 1975 rookie of the year from Santa Monica, Calif., pocketed the $15,000 top prize, and an additional $1,000 for the day's best score on the par-72 Manila Golf and Country Club course.

Donna Caponi Young of Los Angeles, the second-day leader of the 54-hole tournament, missed a fourfoot putt on the 18th hole and the chance to play in a sudden-death match with Miss alcott and settled for the second prize of $11,000. Young's three-day score was fourunder-par 212. She also won an additional $1,000 for the best score of the day Friday, and a Dodge car for driving closest to the pin on the 162yard par-3 16th hole.

Beverley Klaus, 30, of Encino, Calif., scored the only hole-in-one during the tournament and won $3,000 follars for her effort on the par-3 162yard 11th hole.

Tied for third and earning $5,266 each with a 216 were South Africa's Sally Little, Joanne Carner of Lakeworth, Fla., and Taiwan's Tu Ai-

Jane Blalock, Highland Beach, Fla., was fourth at 217 while Hollis Stacy of Hilton Head, S.C., took fifth with a 218.

Trailing Mrs. Young by four strokes going into the final round, Miss Alcott charged the greens with her second shots and counted on her deadly putting to birdie five holes and parred all the rest enroute to her 34-33-67

The two were tied when Miss Alcott birdied the 18th hole and tournament officials prepared to stage a sudden-death playoff, starting on the 16th.

Mrs. Young, in the last flight following Alcott, had to birdie the last hole to win. Her second shot landed on the soft edge back of the green, leaving a lump of mud on the ball. Putting downhill, the mud on her ball caused it to stop four feet short of the hole. Mrs. Young missed the second putt and had to settle for the bogey and second place.

Mrs. Young said, "My putting just left me in the back nine."

Miss Alcott said, "It's funny, but Donna and I live 20 minutes from each other in California and we have had to come out here several thousand miles away from our homes to fight it out in but the university appealed to the 10th Circuit Court.

Atlantic Coast Conference Commissioner Robert James believes much of the litigation results from "a change in NCAA policy that they ... not declare students ineligible" but instead rely on the schools to do that."

"When we have to act here. generally some friend or the parents say, 'Well, we're going to take you to court.' And certainly that's their privilege." Invariably, that suit also involves the NCAA.

"If everyone had their wishes, the NCAA would not have punitive powers," James says. "But if we come into a problem area and decide, 'Here is a good way to resolve this problem, the first thing a coach does is question whether it will disadvantage his team. If it does, then he says, 'Let's make it an NCAA rule and impose it on everyone."

Rick Rojas captures X-country

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Rick Rojas, a member of the U.S. Pan-American team representing the Colorado Track Club, won the National AAU cross country championship in a record time of 30 minutes, 23.8 seconds for the 10,000meter Belmont Plateau course in Philadelphia's Fairmount Park Saturday.

Rojas, of Los Alamos, N.M., broke the course record of 30:58 set a week ago by Paul Stemmer of the Nittany Valley Track Club in winning the Middle Atlantic AAU title.

Stemmer appeared headed for the national title when he led by at least 75 yards for more than a mile, but his pace proved too much for him and he finished 36th at 31:16.

Rojas, who was 48th last year and 12th two years ago, took a lead halfway out and withstood a closing challenge by Terry Cotton, of the University of Arizona, who finished second in 30:26, 10 yards back.

Jeff Bradley of Reading, Pa., finished third in the field of 550 at 30:27. Kirk Pfeffer of the Jamul Toads club was fourth at 30:33 and Barry Brown of the Florida Track Club, fifth

Cowboys lasso Miners, 42-13

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) - Coach Jim Stanley of Oklahoma State says he is not pleased with his team's performance Saturday after the 14th-ranked Cowboys ended their regular season with a 42-13 victory over Texas-El Paso.

"I was glad to get the win," Stanley said. "We're always happy with a win, but I was not too proud of our performance.

The Tangerine Bowl-bound Cowboys rolled up 450 yards total offense but lost one of two fumbles and had two passes intercepted. A total of 67 yards in penalties also were stepped off against Oklahoma State. Stanley cited a lack of enthusiasm on the part of his players with being the reason for his satisfaction. "Both teams played hard," he said, "but neither played with any real enthusiasm. Our conference season was over and we evidently just didn't get up for this game."

Stanley even registered some iispleasure with quarterback Charlie Weatherbie's performance although he logged a career-high rushing mark of 180 yards and scored one touch-

"I was glad to see Charlie get the 180 yards, but I don't think we executed especially well at quarterback," Stanley said.

Stanley said the defensive play of the Miners dictated the running efforts by Weatherbie.

Miller entered the game needing 235 yards to set a Big Eight rushing mark. He fell short, gaining 110 yards and three touchdowns.

It was USM's second straight win after nine defeats. TexasArlington wound up the season at 5-5.

Garry got 127 yards on 23 carries to end the season with 1,236 yards. That eclipsed the 1952 record of 1,191 set by Hugh Laurin Pepper and gave Garry 2,461 yards in three seasons.

Texas-Arlington's Derrick Jensen set a new Southland Conference season rushing record, finishing with 1,266 yards.

The Texas Mavericks opened the scoring when Elmo Simmons dived one yard for a touchdown five minutes into the game.

In the second quarter the teams traded field goals. USM marched to the Maverick seven yard line shortly before the half but missed a field goal try as time ran out.

Southern kept the momentum moving into the third quarter. Malachi Henry returned a Texas put 44 yards and a few plays later Garry scored from the one.

The high-strung Majors needed the weekend to "loaf and not get too ambitious" after Pitt wrapped up a 11-0 regular season. Pitt's last perfect rally record came 58 years ago over an abbreviated four-game schedule and Majors and his friends celebrated into the wee hours, uncorking a bottle of champagne in memory of each of Pitt's 11 victims.

But he was still playing it coy on the subject of his rumored return to Tenssee, where he was a star tailback in the 1950s and then spent three years as an assistant coach. Tennessee Coach Bill Battle quit under fire last Monday and Majors' name topped the list of candidates before and since.

"I have not been contacted by anyone from Tennessee. Right now, I plan to be at Pitt next year, but does anyone know where they'll be tomor-row?"

All Majors will say is that he has to be in Pittsburgh around Dec. 10 to begin preparation for the Sugar Bowl. The Panthers will train in Biloxi, Miss., beginning Dec. 21 and move to New Orleans Dec. 26.

Bengals strive to crack Pittsburgh's steel curtain

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cint cinnati Bengals will try to crack "The Steel Curtain," and clinch the American Football Conference Central Division title Sunday, ending Pittsburgh's two-year reign as world champions and knocking the Steelers out of the playoffs for the first time in

The high stakes battle of Super Bowl contenders is expected to attract largest football crowd in Cincinnati history, some 60,000, for the nationally-televised 4 p.m. EST kickoff in temperatures forecast for about 40 degrees. "We could find ourselves on the sofa, watching the playoffs and thinking we're the best team in the league," said Steelers' linebacker Andy Russell. "That would be horrible.

Pittsburgh, 7-4, enters with a sixgame winning streak, while the Bengals, 9-2, have won five in a row since a 23-6 setback to the Steelers.

loss would leave Cincinnati fighting for its life. The Bengals, who have won three consecutive come-from-behind battles, would have to beat Oakland and the New York Jets on the road to keep hopes alive for a wild card berth.

The Bengals, who have won 22 of their last 26 games at Riverfront Stadium, are fighting a psychological as well as physical foe. Pittsburgh has beaten Cincinnati nine times in 13 meetings during their seven-year rivalry, including the last four.

Veteran tight end Bob Trumpy rejects talk that the Bengals have been intimidated by the Steelers, but he agrees that Pittsburgh has something special going.
"Things you're able to do against other teams don't work against the Steelers. It's a useless feeling," said

"They've won two Super Bowls.
They have an air of confidence that almost-winners don't have. It really

Cincinnati has had its trouble containing Franco Harris, the bull sized fullback who rushed for 882 yards this season. Rookie quarterback Mike Kruczek is expected to start again for Terry Bradshaw, who has been slow to recover from a back

Cincinnati has been buoyed by new-found running game which produced its best effort in several years, 269 yards, in last week's 27-24 victory over Kansas City. And recent addition Coy Bacon, with a remarkable 21 sacks in 11 games, has enemy quarterbacks scrambling for HADL REPLACED Pastorini three games ago against Cleveland when Pastorini suffered a rib injury. Pastorini has recovered sufficiently to return but Coach O.A. "Bum" Phillips says Hadl has earned another start against the Falcons.

"Dan doesn't have as much experience as I do," Hadl said. "We're good friends and we've talked about this but Dan is at the stage in his career where he has to learn patience. He's got to let other people earn their paychecks. He can't try to do it all

"I remember when I was at San Diego, I was always trying to win games with the big play. It doesn't work that way. You have to take what you can get.'

The Oilers have shown offensive im-provement under Hadl's direction but their losing streak has continued. They now are 4-7 for the year, the same as Atlanta, which has registered upsets the last two weeks against San Francisco and Dallas.

THE FALCONS are led by quarterback Scott Hunter and former Texas A&M running back Bubba Bean, who leads the team in rushing with 417 yards on 112 carries.

Conservation emphasis expected in early Carter administration

By CLYDE LA MOTTE Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent

WASHINGTON - It's quite likely that conservation of energy is going to get considerably more emphasis in the early stages of the Carter Ad-ministration and the new Congress than will be given to efforts to increase domestic energy supplies. One reason for this is that some of President-elect Carter's energy advisors during the transision stage, including David Freeman, advocate a slow-growth or a no-growth concept regarding energy consumption. Environmentalists also favor the conservation approach.

It remains to be seen, however, what techniques will be used to persuade or force people to hold energy fuel consumption to a minimum.

There will be the usual proposals for improving insulation of old homes and other buildings and for requiring certain insulation standards in all new construction. There will also be new construction. There will also be talk about the need for further reductions in automobile sizes and weights and for more energy-use efficiency in electrical appliances and so forth.

It's uncertain, however, whether prices and taxes will utilized to dampen energy demands. Such a move would no doubt be opposed by consumer groups and others.

President-elect Carter has indicated his willingness to let prices play a role. For instance, he has promised to support legislation to deregulate the wellhead price of new natural gas. He has also said that higher prices would provide addi-tional incentive to producers, thereby adding to supply as well as slowing down demand.

Many in Congress will contend that fuel prices are already high enough, so increases should not be permitted. The would encourage conservation by other means, including enforced use of restrictions by government if necessary.

The resolutinon of the conservation problem will provide a clue to the new Administration's approach. That is, it will indicate whether marketplace factors will be utilized or whether more direct governmental involve-ment will be called for.

The mood of Congress on this issue will get an early test. The Ford Administration is plannoing on sending to the new Congress as soon as it con-

A Draft Environmental Statement

on the Sohio Transportation Co-proposal for development of a crude oil transportation system from Valdez, Alaska, to Midland, has been for review," said Hastey, "at BLM offices, selected libraries, and county

Mexico, along the route of the proposed transportation system."

venes a proposal for removing price controls on gasoline. (It has already removed controls on other petroleum products.) Congress will have 15 days in which to reject this action — a vote against it by either house would kill it.

There will be a effort to delay a decision until after the new President is sworn in January 20. In fact, it's possible that Carter people may request the Ford people not to propose the decontrol, and the White House may agree not to do so.

The service station price for gasoline in most areas has consistently run below the maximum price allowed by Federal Energy Administration regulations. This stems from the fact that the gasoline market has been soft because ample gasoline supplies have been available. This is pointed out by industry officials and others who contend there would be no big price increase under decontrol; probably no price increase at all.

Advocates of continuing controls counter this by saying that if marketplace prices are below price ceiling levels, no harm is done by leaving the controls in place.

What it boils down to is that one side chafes at controls and the paperwork they involve, plus the fact that "Big Brother" is looking over their shoulder, while the other side contends that energy companies will take advantage of the concern about domestic supplies to "gouge" the

The price issue will be debated anew when gas legislation is considered by Congress.

The prospect for passage of a deregulation bill is brighter than it has been in a long time, but even if a decontrol bill is passed it may have strings attached.

In the first place, decontrol will most likely be restricted to natural gas from new wells, leaving "old" gas under Federal Power Commission control

But there will be efforts, too, to provide a narrow definition of "new" gas so that the amount to be deregulated will be small. This could be done, for example, by ruling that new gas to be deregulated must come from newly-discovered formations and not from

RRC chairman asserts contingency plan need

HOUSTON (AP) — The chairman of the Texas oil and gas regulatory commission says the nation could find itself in very desperate straits unless it develops contingency plans to meet another disruption in foreign oil supplies.

"I think our nation must recognize not only the possibility but the probability of the disruption of sup-lies we now depend upon from the Middle East and from other areas." said Jim Langdon, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission.

We must develop realistic contingency plans to meet any disruption which is more probable than just merely possible. It is very likely to happen. It can happen any time."

Langdon said little progress has been made since 1972 when the commission said it was time for the nation to stress technology and develop other energy sources such as tar sands, shale oil, gasified and liquefied coal, solar energy, and nuclear power.

"Well, we've got a bunch of ration stamps, meaning we're going to require longer lines at service stations," Langdon said.

"Now, that a hell of a damn poor contingent plan in my judgment. I think we can do better than that. I think the people of this nation deserve better than that."

It was in 1972 that the commission placed the Texas crude oil allowable on a 100 per cent production factor the first time. The state's once healthy excess producing capacity had

Langdon made his remarks in discussing the commission's recent action of backing away from the 100 per cent factor for the first time in 56 months by placing the December factor at 99 per cent.

The cutback amounts to only 7,500 barrels a day. Daily Texas output exceeds 3,200,000 barrels a day.

But Langdon contends the small cutback is important in that it underscores the point that domestic oil production continues to decline at a time it should be on an upward swing.

Langdon said the commission suspects the prolonged stay on the 100 per cent factor may have damaged me of the state's best wells. Stated another way, this means the commission and its engineers suspect the long runs at maximum rates may be curtailing the lifetime of the wells and, possibly, curtailing the ultimate amount of oil the wells could produce under a lower but more efficient rate.

"If they are damaged or we think they are, we will probably continue to cutback on allowables until we find, the level at which the damage ceases to occur," Langdon said.

Langdon said environmental restrictions have been placed on the ment of some energy sources such as oil shale.

"Part of the national policy should be establishing a reasonable balance between cost and dependability and by dependability I mean energy resources that are available to us that cannot be unilaterally cut off by some Arab nation or others," he said.

"I mean energy we can dpend upon that is produced right here in the United States and a balance between all these accomplishments and the protection of our environment. I think we can establish this type of balan-

Langdon said other producing states are experiencing similar rates

"Texas is not unique," he said.
"New Mexico's capability is depleting rapidly. Louisiana, I think, has lost production much faster than Texas. Oklahoma is scraping the bottom of their oil barrel.

Langdon said Texas expects to continue to be a factor in the nation's production of energy even though it is time to let other areas know the state

Some of the increase can be traced to companies who are using up drilling budgets before Jan. 1 and some of it is reaction to the new $142 per thousand cubic foot gas price. But as one operator told the weekly business magazine, "We won't really know the breakdown until January."

The Journal says others feel the year-end boom is unually inflated because many oil companies were slow to spend drilling money earlier in the year due to uncertainties over governmental legislation and regulation. Now they're trying to

Hughes Tool Co. officials predict the rig count will peak at 1,875 in December, and decline much less than normal in the first quarter, most likely to the 1,675-1,700 level, the

The officials also told the Journal the average could be 1,800 for 1977 as compares with 1,660 or so for this year. That figure is still far below the all-time peak in 1955 when active rigs averaged 1,686.

Drilling contractors contacted by the Journal were optimistic that seasonal depression won't occur in 1977. Independent oil operators generally agreed.

The Journal says major companies also plan to boost exploration and drilling budgets next year — subject to braking action if energy policy under the Carter Administration should trend in the wrong direction.

The heavy drilling pace indicated oil companies won't have any trouble reaching the Journal's earlier forecast of 41,817 well completions this year, the most in more than a decade, according to the Nov. 29 issue of the magazine.

The Journal says also, that no serious shortage of drilling crews, rigs, or material has resulted yet

HOUSTON - Amoco Production Co., as operator for a group composed of Amoco, Mobil Oil Corp. and Union Oil Co. of California, said it has begun development drilling from the first of three offshore drilling and production platforms the company will set in the High Island South Addition of the Gulf of Mexico off Texas.

DALLAS - John H. Douma, president of Sun Oil Co. (Delaware),

Drilling has commenced on an 8-pile, 18-slot platform, on High Island South Addition Block 531 located in about 200 feet of water some 90 miles off Galveston. Two other platforms of similar size will be set on adjacent blocks 536 and 537, mid-1977.

Amoco has already drilled five exploratory wells on the tracts.

Amoco, with 50 per cent interest in the tracts, Mobil with 35 per cent, and Union with 15 per cent, paid over $119 million for the three tracts in the May, 1974, federal offshore lease sale. The companies paid $22.8 million for Block 531, $37.6 million for Block 536. and $58.9 million for Block 537.

While the announced three platforms are Amoco's first as operator off Texas, recent figures indicate that of the some 18 platforms actively drilling in that area, Amoco owns interests ranging from 12 to 50 per cent in 10 of them.

Bishop becomes problem

The Los Angeles Times

UMTALI, Rhodesia -War has come to this small city on the Rhodesia-Mozambique border, the first population center to feel the effects of the armed effort by black nationalist guerrillas to take over the white-minority government.

Recent mortar and rocket attacks by Sovietsupported insurgents in Mozambique have failed to panic Umtali's 36,000 blacks and 8,000 whites, and few families have

But there is a major war-related issue that has seriously upset Umtali and has divided its people. It concerns Irish Catholic Bishop Donal Lamont, 65, a resident here for 30 years and one of the most controversial persons in Rhodesia.

While supervising both white and black staffs of a string of medical missions and schools in the heart of the insurgent country north and south of Umtali, the defiant bishop has become an outspoken critic of the government of Prime Minister Ian Smith. And in October, he was brought to trial here on charges of failing to report the presence of black terrorists and of instructing his mission workers not to report them either.

Pleading guilty, he read before the court a three-hour statement of justification

"I deliberately defied the law," he said, "because I, like many of my colleagues, cannot reconcile my Christian principles with the racist legislation in Rhodesia."

The judge sentenced Lamont to 10 years in prison. On Nov. 3, the Sunday after the sentencing, Pope Paul VI publicly hailed Lamont as "an One Pair Love Seats by Maddox. intrepid defender of human rights, equality Apricot & Champagne patterned and fraternity in a country subject to jor black population by the government of the white population."

Lamont has appealed the sentence. It is considered likely that the government's final decision will be to revoke his Rhodesian citizenship and deport him.

Whatever the outcome the Carmelite father remains beloved by some, hated by others. He is the symbol of "white realism," a Catholic

"I get threatening and foul-language phone said in an interview on girls. The area is where most of the mortars hit during the first attack on the city but there were no injuries. The barrage apparently was intended for the nearby army barracks but missed.

Lamont said he had not appeared with friends in Umtau's most prominent hotel for 10 years. "I don't want to have them included in any abuse which might be directed at me," he said.

The charges that led to the bishop's conviction involved the Avila Mission north of here, where in April, May and June nursing sisters were ordered by guerrillas to provide them with medicines. The guerrillas warned that if their presence were reported the mission would be destroyed.

Lamont was on a trip into the area at the time. He instructed the sisters to meet the guerrilla demands and said that he would take the responsibility for not reporting the incidents to authoriteis. The medicines provided were for treatment of malaria and other tropical | 1 group Bamboo oriental style

"But I had decided long trimmed, 74" high, 30" wide, 14" deep. Avila where my duty Reg. 319 lay." Lamont said.

Treasury's Simon jetting off on taxpayers' fuel

WASHINGTON - Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, the Ford Administration's most outspoken critic of excessive government spending, left for Moscow via London Friday on a trip that will cost U.S. taxpayers $131,500.

Accompanied by a government par-ty of 42 others, including his wife, two sons, four wives of other officials and more than a dozen Secret Service agents, Simon's mission is a brief speech to a non-official Soviet-American trade group.

The Simon entourage, using an Air Force jet, is stopping Saturday and Sunday in London, where Simon will talk to British Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey. After the Moscow visit Simon will unload some of his party in Washington, then con-tinue on to Mexico City.

These were to the Mideast, Jamaica, Paris, other European cities, and Mexico, all on official business.

The current trip, complete with a retinue of aides, secretaries and other assistants, is in a manner and style that has become routine for Simon.

But the mission, according to the Treasury's own explanation of what the secretary will be doing, seems to have no official purpose. The final leg of the trip, to Mexico City, is for the inaugural of a new president. But Simon is not on the official list of American respresentatives to the in-auguration released Thursday by the White House. He is scheduled to go as the personal guest of the incoming Mexican president.

A Treasury press aide conceded Friday that the department has not issued any press release or announce"we didn't have enough specifics for an announcement."

Treasury aides here stressed the importance of a continuing discussion of trade relations with Russian officials. But they acknowledged that although the Simon trip to Moscow had been planned for at least a year, the body he will address, the U.S.-U.S.S.R. Trade and Economic Council, is strictly a business-oriented private organization.

A Treasury spokesman also said that Simon would meet "high Russian officials." The only one cited is Nikolai Patolichev, Soviet Foreign Trade Minister, who, like Simon, is an honorary director of the council.

Another Treasury official labeled the trip a "junket" but said "it would be demeaning (to The Washington Post) to write a news story about it." He argued that "it doesn't seem much different from other junkets, especialloan to help it over its economic crisis.

In a telephone interview before leaving Washington, Simon explained the London segment this way: "It's a long trip to Moscow. You have to put down somewhere, and London is as good a place as any."

On his arrival in London Friday night, Simon said in response to a query, "It is important at this point in time to review matters of mutual concern (with the British government)."

He also said that "it is obvious that there are those who believe that the problems of the world will disappear during the transition period in the United States.

"Unfortunately, this is not the case. The many international initiatives that are under way can not be placed in limbo. It is with this in mind that I am traveling to Great Britain, the cant part of the current British a detailed official agenda, could have negotiations for a multi-billion dollar important conversations with foreign government officials that could turn out to be important later on.

The number of persons on the current Simon trip is roughly com-parable to the size of the party for others he has made in dealing with international economic problems. For example, he took 45 with him to Manila in October for the annual sessions of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund.

For the economic summit session in Puerto Rico last June, the Simon group numbered 43. For an unofficial monetary conference in Amsterdam in 1975 (following anofficial series of talks in Paris), the Simon party numbered 33. As that group strolled into the Amsterdam Hilton - having filled a bus from the airport - European officials gaped in amazement. The Simon party always includes a sizeable number of Secret Service

Allies, rivals rebuke U.S. for Vietnam veto in UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. allies and rivals joined forces in a 124-1 vote with only three abstentions to rebuke the United States for its repeated refusal to let Vietnam into the United Nations.

Only Britain, West Germany and Israel abstained Friday, and the United States cast the lone negative vote against a General Assembly resolution that rejected as trivial U.S. arguments against admitting Viet-

The measure declared Vietnam fully qualified for membership and demanded that the Security Council reconsider its application.

The United States vetoed Hanoi's application Nov. 15 in the Security Council, arguing that Vietnam was not humanitarian enough for U.N. membership because it has failed to account for 800 Americans still missing in action (MIA) after the Vietnam War.

"Whatever problems it may have at this particular time in accounting for the Americans ... are trivial in comparison with the great causes that are being discussed here this morning," said Sri Lanka's ambassador,

T.D. Kanakaratne, who introduced the resolution as chairman of the nonaligned group.

But U.S. Ambassador William W. Scranton made it clear that another attempt to admit Vietnam would meet another U.S. veto. He said the United States will continue to insist that Hanoi "provide all the information in their possession on the missing in action and they will return to us all recoverable remains of our dead."

Vietnam's U.N. observer, Dinh Ba
Thi, said the MIA issue has not been resolved because of "the attitude of the American government, which has shown no serious desire to solve this problem. The Vietnamese insist the MIA issue must be negotiated in con-nection with their demand for U.S. war reconstruction aid. American and Vietnamese officials have begun meeting on these issues in Paris. The large vote for Hanol reflects a widely held feeling at the United Nations that Vietnam, after its long struggle for independence and unity, deserves to be admitted to the world

The United States vetoed the admission of North and South Vietnam a unified nation, but a vote was put off the council had refused to consider an application from South Korea.

Vietnam subsequently reapplied as on Aug. 11, 1975, on the grounds that until after the U.S. presidential elections, when it was believed that the MIA issue would be less likely to prompt a veto. Many U.N. diplomats expressed surprise at the U.S. veto

Instrument' abortions called safest

ATLANTA (AP) - Abortions done by removing fetuses with instruments are "thought to be fraught with hazards," but are actually safer than two other currently used legal methods, a federal official says.

Dr. David Grimes, abortion surveillance officer for the Center for Disease Control, said Friday that a CDC study which concluded that the instrument abortions are the safest of the three constituted a "major turnaround"in medical thought.

The four-year study was conducted at 32 institutions with 80,437 women who had been pregnant 13 to 24 weeks. at the time of their abortions. It focused on three methods currently used for abortions - intra-amniotic prostaglandin, hypertonic saline injections and instrumental abortion, and removal of the fetus through the vagina.

Previous studies indicated that the intra-amniotic method was safest, followed by saline and then the in-strumental method, known as dilation and evacuation (D&E), Grimes said. But the new study showed that the instrument removal method was safest, he said. It also showed that the saline solution method is 'significantly more safe" than the intra-amniotic prostaglandin injections, he said.

The study is the largest one done to date, but it is not the basis of a "positive recommendation," Grimes said. "This is going to cause another look at the current practice. It does suggest that we need to set up large clinical trials to consider the safety of the methods."

For the study, 15 major com-plications that an abortion patient could suffer were considered, he said, including death, convulsions, hemorrhage and pneumonia.

The women studied generally were young, unmarried, pregnant for the first time, and free of pre-existing medical problems, Grimes said.

Drought plagues Brazil

IRECE, Brazil (AP) Maria de Conceicao and her small son, who was naked except for a T-shirt, sat with their backs against a mud shack. They stared forlornly at the highway and waited for rain.

It has been a year since their family garden has had regular, cropsustaining rainfall. "When it rains, my friend," the woman said, "it won't make us rich. It may bring my husband back but it won't build a school for the boy."

Maria's husband left for Sao Paulo, about 900 miles to the south, to find work and hopes to return when the rains come to his potentially rich agricultural region in the center of Brazil's drought-ravaged northeast.

The woman and her family, and thousands of other poor farmers, are the first victims of the current drought.

It has mobilized vast work relief projects to keep subsistence farmers on the land and a new class of commercial crop growers from going bankrupt.

Irece, 300 miles west of picturesque Salvador, is in the center of the Sertao, the semi-arid region of cattle and sagebrush which development economists here compare to sub-Saharan Africa. It has become an important bean-growing area in the past decade supplying most of the cities of the northeast.

The area's productivi-ty, brought about with government-financed tractors and fertilizers, is viewed as one escape from the poverty which has bred mass migrations to the industrialized south and radical cries for land reform.

With a population of 32 million and a land area 1.5 times the size of Texas, Brazil's northeast is the largest concentration of poor in Latin America. In the 1960s it was the spawning ground for peasant leagues and demands for land reform which prompted U.S. aid projects under the Kennedy Administration's Alliance for Progress program. The cyclical droughts, which have occurred recently in 1958, 1962 and 1970, have forced the migration of millions of farmers to other parts of the country, to Sao Paulo, the industrial megalopolis and to governmentfinanced farm colonies in the

Amazon to the west. In the Irece "microregion," as it is called farmers have already lost one bean harvest as many as 1.5 million bags in 1970 — and will lose another if sufficent rain does not fall before the February harvest. But there is no panic in the town - just an air of expectancy about the

The manager of the local branch of the federal bank, Roque Jose de Brito, said, "If it doesn't rain, we'll just find a way to keep making the loans until it does. We're not going to foreclose any mortgages. The government doesn't want to own any farms. It just wants the farmers to

Economists say politics involved in steel hike

Border town

uneasy METULLA, Israel (AP) - Tour buses and tanks mix uneasily at this town on the Israel-Lebanon frontier, a border that manages to be tense and touristy at the same time. The tour buses grind up the road from Tiberias, past newly stationed Israeli armored troops. The closest town to Metulla is Qiryat Shemonah, where Palestinian terrorists based in Lebanon killed 18 Israelis in 1974.

"Is this a tense area?" a middle-aged woman from Milwaukee, Wis., asked nervously when her group arrived at the border fence on Thursday. A rain-soaked throng of Druze people from Lebanon provided the tourists with a colorful distraction from the tanks, armored personnel carriers and nfantrymen they had seen along the road.

The Israeli government does not permit tourists into what it considers dangerous areas. Scores of foreign visitors are allowed to trek daily to Metulia, the nor-thernmost settlement in Israel, to view the with the "good fence" policy through which Israel gives humanitarian aid to the people of south Lebanon.

But some tension has developed along the 69-mile border between the two nations during the past two weeks as Syrian troops forced an end to the Lebanese civil war between Moslems and

The Syrians, who make up the backbone of an Arab peacekeeping force, have said they plan to move into southern Lebanon to stop sporadic battles between Christians and Moslems. Israel has said it will not tolerate Syrian troops or Palestinian guerrillas in the area, once used as a base for guerrilla raids across the border.

Israel reinforced the border with more troops and tanks, and Jerusalem proposed that a "local gendarmerie of armed villagers" or regular Lebanese army troops enforce the truce in southern Lebanon.

A government source said Friday that Israel did not expect a direct answer, but added, "nobody expects a conflagration at the border.'

Sources in Beirut said Lebanon's president has offered a compromise under which Syrian troops would move into southern Lebanon but would stay 10 to 12 miles from the Israeli border.

Defense Minister Shimon Peres said Thursday the people of southern Lebanon were well equipped to protect themselves. He also said Israel would help pave some roads in southern Lebanon so the Lebanese could continue to use the "good fence" during winter, which set in this week with heavy

WASHINGTON (AP) - A civil liberties group wants the House committee investigating the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr. to look into the death of Black

By CHARLIE GREEN MIDLAND COUNTY AGENT

Damp mornings and cloudy days cut down on harvest time for Midland area cotton producers this past week. Producers are staying in the fields every minute possible trying to complete the 1976 harvest to minimize weather market risks. The cotton harvest in Midland county is estimated to be about one-third complete.

Cold weather can be a killer to landscape or garden plants if proper precautions are not taken. Cold weather plant care includes protecting plants before frost sets in and during frost and caring for damaged plants after severe weather.

Protecting plants includes a knowledge of the various plants and the climate for the area.

Only hardy plants should be used as shade trees and foundation planting. Tender plants should be used only as fillers or in entryways and along

Tender plants receive the best protection when planted in locations with a southern exposure and under tree branches or overhanging eaves. Conditioning the soil for a frost attack is another precautionary measure. This is best accomplished by reducing nitrogen fertilizer applications starting in

Reducing the water intake will also help plants to harden their root system and become better prepared for cold weather.

However, keep soil moist at the onset of freezing weather as moist soil holds more heat. When frost is imminent, cover exposed plants during the night with burlap or plastic covers and remove them during the daylight hours. All plants in containers should

Another way to protect plants from cold weather is to cover the root system by mounding or mulching with straw, grass clippings, bark or similar material. Such a mulch should be six to eight inches.

If a plant is damaged by frost, pruning may help But delay the operation until early spring so as not to expose any new growth to another attack of cold

Hardy plants such as evergreen trees should be kept watered to protect them from leaf and root burn that may occur durning cold wather. A little time spent in protecting plants during cold weather can be well worth the effort.

For agricultural producers having their soil tested, each soil sample should represent up to 40 acres of cropland. However, a recent survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture showed that the national average was 144 acres for each sample tested in 1975 and the Texas average was almost 630 acres per sample. This low rate of sampling in Texas points up the need for more soil testing.

Two to four years is generally often enough to sample for routine soil test except under high annual fer-tilization and intensive production. Fall is a good time to take soil samples. Sampling early allows adequate time to get results and enables producers to make plans for obtaining fertilizers need ed for next year's crop. For taking soil samples a spade or sampling tube, unclean plastic bucket, soil sample boxes and information sheets are all that is needed Instrucions for sampling as well as additional information on soil testing are available from any

County Extension office. Information hseets are provided for both soils for field crops and lawn and gardens. A representative sample should be taken form each field or area on which information is needed. Problem areas should be sampled separately.

For a unique idea this year, why not select a living Christmas tree for your home or apartment. With all of the emphasis on improving our environment, why not utilize a living Christmas tree this holiday

Of course, a living Christmas tree will cost perhaps twice as much as the same size cut tree, but you have "living" investment, and a perpetual reminder of the Christmas just past

When choosing your living Christmas tree, select species that are adapted to the area.

Good trees for west Texas include Deodar Cedar, Arizona Cypress, Austrian Pine, and Japanese Black Pine. Other trees that would make attractive Christams trees include, Yaupon holly, Japanese, Yew, Burfordi Holly and Cherry Laurel.

admittance by a security guard.
But nothing seems to dissuade these professional gunmen. They have gotten better with time. At the Regency, they apparently registered as guests, and simply waited in their hotel

About 4 a.m., the five men rang for the elevator on the 16th floor, subdued the elevator operator, descended to the lobby and took over for the hotel management. They were dressed for the role. The two men who replaced the night manager and his assistant wore tuxedos. The others were in modest brown suits, similar to the uniform of the other hotel employes.

The only difference was that they wore guns, tucked in their waists, and simply opened their coats to expose them when they wanted cooperation. A sixth man was admitted from the street. He wore workclothes and carried the tools to open the safe deposit

"Any guests that came into the hotel after that were politely met and ushered into the cocktail lounge on the south side of the building," says Lt. Edward O'Connor, head of the city's robbery unit, with a weariness born of having seen it all before. In the cocktail lounge, the scene was calm, and the guard ever polite. When a new guest arrived, he was ushered to a seat, given an ashtray if he smoked. Cokes, ginger ale and water were dispensed to the victims from the hotel bar.

Meanwhile, back at the cashier's counter, the new night manager and his crew meticulously went through the card file, selecting certain boxes by the name of the guest. Given the number, the workman would then break it open and the contents were dumped into three valises open on the

One man, usually the brains, will know where the other gang members live. He'll call them, give each an assignment, and then they go out and do the job, splitting afterward.

AUSTIN NOTE BOOK

Major confrontation on rates shapes up

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN - Once again, a major confrontation on interest rates appears to be shaping up for the Legislature, as comsmer loan companies prepare to try, try again to get an increase in rates

In 1975, Sen. Bill Patman of Ganado spearheaded opposition to SB 69, the bill by Sen. Bill Moore of Bryan to increase rates.

Despite pleadings in committee from experts who surgued the changes are needed to allow the industry to provide loans to co asumers who can't get funds from oth er sources, the bill died without comin g to a floor vote.

Now the House Financial Institutions Committee las recommended that interest rates on such loans be increased - but with out recommending a specific figure. The committee also voted to raise the ceiling on loans regulated by the Office of the Consumer Credit Commissioner from $2,500 to $5,000.

Consumer loan companies and their supporters argue that they are pro-viding credit for persons who otherwise would be unable to receive credit or who would be forced to turn to illegal loan sharking operations for

Opponents contend the rates are high enough - or't oo high - already, and that borrower's find themselves on a "credit hook," being unable to pay off loans, which a are renewed over and over, in order to obtain service charges. Too often , they argue, loans are made to person is who shouldn't be given credit — and higher interest rates would only encorage companies to take greater cha nees with uncredit-worthy applicants.

But there's no a rguement that the loan companies hat /e been hit with increased operating costs in recent years, with some classins pulling out of Texas, ownerging with other lenders.

The result of in creased cost, the lenders say, is that the smaller com-increase are used to make automobiles and consumer goods including appliances, but how the retail prices of those items will be affected was not immediately known.

Following National Steel's price hike announcement, the Council on Wage and Price Stability said in Washington it had been directed by the White House to begin a study of the increases. The council has no power to order the steelmakers to roll back prices, however.

National, a major producer of flatrolled products, said the increases would cover only part of its increased costs, and asserted that sheet product prices have lagged behind prices on other steel products. National said the increases would be effective Dec. 1.

Also announcing price hikes were Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., Armco Steel Corp., Inland Steel Co., and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co.
The timing of the move surprised some industry observers, since the chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., the largest producer, had said earlier this month that any price changes would come next year.

If the market sustains the increases, their effects on the economy will be left for President-elect Jimmy Carter, when he moves into office in

Carter, meanwhile, sought this past week to quiet speculation that he is strongly considering a tax cut to give the economy a boost.

Antiquities committee says oil interest low

By LARRY SPRINGER

AUSTIN — For some months now the Texas Antiquities Committee has been over a barrel—an oil barrel.

Attempts by the panel during the past few nonths to assure that off-shore drillin, and pipeline operations do not disturb or destroy underwater archeological sites have drawn little participation from the oil and gas

Last spring the committee, faced with a roomfull of hdustry lawyers, placed a moratorium on its archeological accordance of the spring of the cheological survey recuirements for drilling or laying pipelines off the Texas coast.

Exceptions to this moratorium included the continued survey requirement for sites where ship-wrecks have been detected through electronic scans or where historical documents indicate the vessels may

Committee members believe the oil and gas industry should finance an overall, one-time survey to establish the locations of possible archeological material and locate those site on maps so they may be avoided. Some members of the industry have concurred in the suggestion of an overall survey, but balk at bearing the cost of such a project. They say, instead, that since the preservation of these sites is in the public interest, the public should bear the cost.

Committee staff members estimate the price tag for an overall survey would be in the range of $5.7 million.

with those industry members who have expressed a continuing interest in the problem and—while still high center on the issue of the overall survey-committee members have asked their staff to draft proposed rule changes for consideration at a

The committee agrees that the rule changes would be only an interim solution to the problem, but would serve as a compromise between the committee's existing rules requiring an extensive survey for individual drilling and pipeline projects and the industry's desire to eliminate such a requirement altogether.

Committee members propose to eliminate much of the eletronic survey equipment required for underwater archeological scans, requiring only a limited magnetometer survey and the use of a positioning system accurate within plus or minus 15 meters.

Also proposed is the elimination of the requirement that an archeologist be on board the survey boat during the magnetometer scan. However, a qualified archeologist would have to eventually analyze and refine the rough magentometer data before it is sent to the State Archeologist.

The 600 meter survey for each well would be reduced to a scan 100 meters in all directions from the well head. The pipeline scan would remain at 100 meters either side of the proposed

Waters of less than five or so feet in depth may be dropped from the required survey area and committee chairman Dr. Fred Wendorf suggested that some back bays where historical ships could have never sailed may be eliminated entirely. It also was suggested that once those areas could be defined where surveys might be necessary, the survey requirement could be announced as each state tract comes up for lease. This would avoid any "surprises" for the lease holders who are prevented from drilling due to 11th hour survey requirements. Carl V. Getti of McMoRan Exploration Co. said he believes the compromise proposals will get the attention of the industry and encourage their participation at the public hearing on the rule changes.

"I think that if everyone is aware you're trying to come up with reasonable rules and not trying to shove our aces in the mud, then you'll See 2 new attitude," Getti said.
Yet, Getti said he could not be certain that someone in the industry might not decide to take the committee to court and try to have the Texas Antiquities Code thrown out.

"We're being optimistic," State
Archeologist Curtis Tunnell agreed

'there are some who would rather fight than survey." Wendorf pointed out that if the industry were to decide to take the matter to court, the committee might

A second example given by Pyrczak is this message found on many nonprescription drugs, though its wor-ding varies slightly from product to product and from brand to brand:

"If pain persists for more than 10 days or if redness is present, or in

This message, Pyrczak said, could be understood with ease only by someone who reads at the college level. He suggested this change to bring it down to the fourth-grade

McFall says money went into 'office account'

By SCOTT ARMSTRONG MAXINE CHESHIRE

WASHINGTON - House Majority Whip John J. McFall (D-Calif.) said Friday that $4,000 he received from South Korean businessman Tongsun Park was deposited with cash from other Washington lobbyists in an "office account" used for interest-free loans to McFall and members of his McFall admitted at a Capitol Hill press conference that he had received $1,000 in cash from Tongsun Park in November, 1972, in addition to $3,000 he had already acknowledged receiving in hundred-dollar bills from a messenger for Park in October, 1974.

The Washington Post also has learned that a former associate of Park has told the FBI that an aide to McFall received a third delivery of cash from Park in late 1974 or early

In an interview with the Post after his press conference McFall denied that he or any member of his staff received a third payment from Park. The $1,000 and $3,000 "contributions" from Park were put into the 'office account' along with several thousand dollars from eight Washington lobbyists for the air-transportation industry, the California wine institute and other interests, according to McFall and one of his

McFall, the third-ranking House Democrat, said the fund was used to pay office and political expenses, as well as to make interest-free loans to himself and his staff members. McFall said the loans to himself, which he said were repaid to the fund, helped to pay his California income tax, his children's college tuition and the cost of a car for his daughter.

At his press conference, McFall, who is a candidate for majority leader, the No. 2 post in the House, presented an extensive accounting of his office finances to support his state-ment that the money from Park and the lolibyists was used properly. However, in his interview with the Post, McFall acknowledged that there is actually no documentary evidence to prove that the evidence to prove that the cash deposited in his "office account" at the National Bank of Washington is the same money that Park gave him.

He has "only the testimony of the fellow (McFall's administrative assistant Raymond F. Barnes)...that he made a particular notation at the time and that this is actually Park's money," McFall said. "How do you corroborate a bank account?"

Barnes said he deposited $2,400 of the $3,000 in hundred-dollar bills received from Park in 1974 in the office account in five separate deposits of $500 or less spread over the next seven months, because "I didn't real-ly want to call too much attention to the office account..." for fear a bank employee might think it improper. Barnes said he had no explanation for why he had not made other large deposits — the account's original deposit of $5,045.89 or five subsequent deposit of $5,045.89 or five subsequent deposits of $1,000 or more — in similar amounts of $500 or less.

"We were going to hire a big-shot accountant to reconcile the account," McFall said, "but he couldn't certify to anything (because the records were too poor), so we decided we can do it ourselves." do it ourselves.

Barnes said the only record he kept of the transaction was a scrap of paper without any mention of Park on which Barnes noted each of the deposits plus the diversion of $600 to two petty-cash accounts.

According to McFall, the question of what became of the money from Park arose when a Post reporter called Barnes about it last month. At the time Barnes denied that McFall received any money from Park at any time, or that any deliveries of cash had ever been made in either McFall's congressional office or his majority-whip office.

On the day following his re-election this month to his 11th term in Con-gress McFall told a reporter for his local California newspaper, the Modesto (Calif.) Bee, about the $3,000 payment from Park and then discussed it further with the Post.

At least 22 present and former congressmen are currently under federal investigation of allegations that they and other U.S. officials were given cash, campaign contributions, jewelry, furniture, vacations and other gifts by Tongsun Park and other South Korean agents to influence U.S. policy toward the regime of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Tongsun Park allegedly has spent beteen $500,000 and $1 million a year since 1970 carrying out his part of the purported influence-peddling scheme, which was first discussed, according to 115 intelligence. to U.S. intelligence sources, in a meeting between Park Chung Hee, Tongsun Park and others in late 1970 in the Blue House, the presidential mansion in Seoul.

The question of a third contribution from Tongsun Park to McFall arose when a former Tongsun Park associate told The Washington Post, and later the FBI, that he had delivered an envelope filled with cash to an aide in McFall's office sometime in late 1974 or early 1975.

McFall revalued Friday the silverplated tea service he acknowledged receiving from Tongsun Park at a party in McFall's honor when he became House whip in January, 1973.
Three weeks ago McFall said he estimated its worth at $100 to $150.
Friday he said his staff had checked and found it would have been worth "about $500."

Congressional office accounts are not official government accounts, according to a deputy House clerk, and therefore can contain money from any source. if a congressman uses any of the money for personal pur-poses, he must report it on his income

Real Estate Today

By DON HARVEY REALTOR

PERSONAL OR REAL PROPERTY?

When a home is sold, the question often arises: What stays with the house as part of the purchase and what property goes with the buyer?"
Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. The problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently annexed to the real estate? Is it intended to become part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Usual fixutres might include:

lighting fixtures, etc. It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of the real estate.

soothsayers. Such is the case with James Robertson, a Briton whose prominence is growing alongside Britain's foundering economic condition. He is now a lecturer and author on thoughts of social change and restructuring of government and industry to meet human needs. His previous experiences lend credence to his self-professed heresy.

in other times.

The genial Robertson spent almost 20 years in "big government and bigbusiness." First as an adviser to the cabinet and as a special consultant assigned to reforming the civil service system and then in Parliament. No easy tasks. Then, he went to business and industry as a consultant assigned to streamline and make these huge institutions more efficient.

Now his energies are committed to decentralizing what he terms "the worn-out" concepts of big business and big government.

There was no "blinding con-version," he explained in an interview. It just happened, on his search for efficiency for his clients, that he "became aware that this was not the thing I was looking for. It was a completely different concept."

Robertson explained the basis of his thoughts in the terms of the British

"Most of the leaders are prisoners of the system. They try to settle disputes that are couched in old, conventional ways of thinking, I just happen to be working on alternative solutions. My views are unor-thodox...and for the most part unaccepted," he smiled.

He views the British situation as a box - "the levels of public expenditure, taxes and government borrowing have pretty well reached a

He sees one side of the restraint as unemployment. Britain's rate of unemployment is 5.5 per cent "which is very high at home, and politically very unacceptable in-

Another side is the public hue and cry over taxation. Again, politically a sticky wicket. The third side of the box is inflation.

In 1975, Britons suffered inflation rates as high as 25 per cent, but this year it leveled at 12 per cent — which is the highest rate the United States experienced in recent history. The fourth side of the box, said Robertson, is Britain's dropping pound and its balance of payments

"Using old terms, thinking in conventional means, there's no way out of it. What I'm suggesting is altering the terms in the discussion. We have to rethink the concepts of economic growth and full em-ployment. Do they really mean a better society?"

In business, he sees trends toward industrialized democracy, where the worker, or worker's representative has a part of all decision-making from financing the corporation to deciding a new plant site. In England, where the labor unions are vastly powerful, this is taking place now.

Another thing he sees in the future is a new work ethic. People "applying their talents toward their own and societal betterment" may give way to paying those with the "unpleasant or necessary jobs more than, say, a lawyer who sits behind a desk."

A London writer said of Robertson's theoretical society: "The idea is attractively simple. All we have to do is discard our inbred attitudes toward power and money...Not so simple."

Japan only maritime nation without accord

WASHINGTON (AP) - Japan is now the only major maritime nation without an accord with the United States on the new U.S. 200-mile fisheries zone.

At the same time, U.S. officials signed a reciprocal fishing agreement with Mexico in Mexico City.

The United States is extending its fisheries zone from 12 to 200 miles effective March 1.

Japan, which harvests an estimated 15 per cent or more of its catch within 200 miles of U.S. shores, has opposed the extension.

U.S.-Japanese negotiators will renew fisheries negotiations in mid-December. U.S. officials have expressed optimism that Japan will change its position because of a growing global consensus in favor of the 200-mile zone.

Some 30 nations, including Mexico, have declared extended fishing zones. Congress voted this year to extend the U.S. zone in response to complaints that highly efficient foreign trawlers were exhausting some fish stocks off U.S. coasts.

The Soviet Union also was on record in opposition to the expanded U.S. zone when bilateral negotiations began last week.

Some U.S. diplomatic sources interpreted the agreement as a Soviet attempt to avoid an early confrontation with the administration President-elect Jimmy Carter.

Meet Chessie, the mascot of C&O Railroad

Chessie has quite a history, for a cat. She was originally done as a copper-plate etching by Guido Gruenewald, the well-known Viennese artist. A lover of animals, Gruenewald was especially fascinated by cats and kittens. Using the difficult technique of copper plating, he produced scores of prints of his family's pets in enchanting poses. One of the etchings—a sleeping kitten in bed—was seen by an officer of the railroad, and before long, Chessie became America's sweetheart.

Her fan mail reached movie star proportions. Requests for her picture poured in from every part of the world. Thousands of admirers sent her gifts, from catnip mice to crates of oranges and cantaloupes. In fact, over 40 years later, Chessie still receives birthday cards on September 1, the date ahe became C&O's official mascot in 1933.

the passenger business, one presumes the freight that is carried sleeps like a kitten, too.

The very first time I saw Chessie, I felt she was just begging to be done in crewel stitches, so I did her on a background of white linen and stitched her with soft grey wools and a touch of pink for her nose. Admittedly smitten with Chessie myself, I decided that she would be perfect as a door pillow, too, with the legend, "Please Do Not Disturb."

In miniature size, she was perfect (purrrfect?), stitched in cotton floss with a backing of pink felt to match her nose.

As you can see in the illustration, Chessie is made up of very simple lines and very few, too—so she's a wonderfully fast project. (Made all the faster, I might add, if you put the linen into an embroidery frame as you work.) As you stitch, be particularly careful of her expression, for just the wrong stitch in the wrong direction will make purring Chessie look like she's about to pounce!

The eyes, nose and mouth are the most important, so it's a good idea to work them first. Then, do the ears and face, working in from the outside toward the features, directing the stitches as the fur grows. Designers sheathed the walls of a small room with leather-like vinyl fabric and added visual interest with brass nailheads and divider strips of stainless steel.

The doors of a bedroom closet were removed and the area utilized as an alcove for a vinylcovered sofa which could be a sleeper sofa in your room. These designers added a lounge chair and some occasional tables and etagere in shiny chrome and glass. The room was one of delight and had much decorating flair. Wall coverings in vinyl are available in dozens of different colors so you are unlimited in your choice of a color scheme.

NEW YORK (AP) - Low cost services for the prevention and early detection of cancer is the goal of a model program being carried out at the nonprofit Preventive Medicine Institute-Strang Clinic here.

Called Canscreen, the program begins with a confidential questionnaire covering symptoms, personal habits that may affect health, and present and past personal and family medical histories. This is followed by a number of painless laboratory tests and a physical examination by a specially trained

Then a health counselor reviews with the patient cancer and recommends steps that can reduce these risks. If additional tests or procedures are warranted, Canscreen makes arrangements for the patient to obtain them. his or her risks for develop

Among the cancers screened for are cancer of the mouth and throat, thyroid, skin, stomach, kidneys and bladder, colon and rectum. Also, for men, cancer of the testicles and prostate; and for women, cancer of the breast, cervix and uterus.

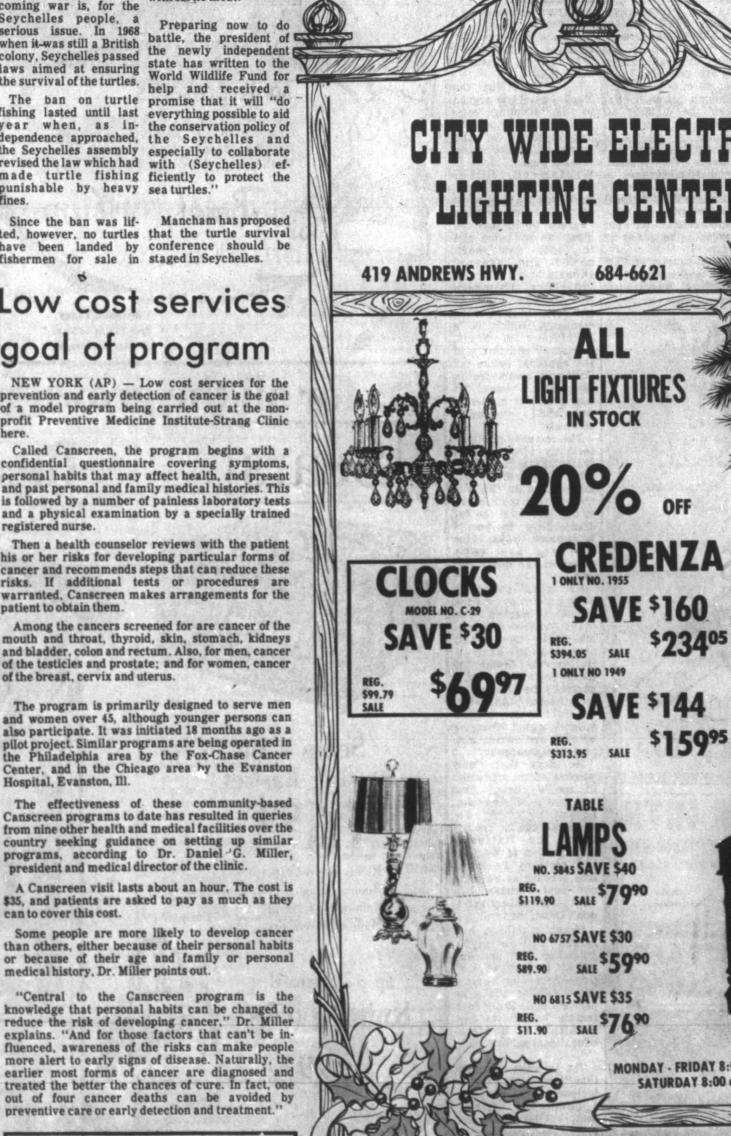

The program is primarily designed to serve men and women over 45, although younger persons can also participate. It was initiated 18 months ago as a pilot project. Similar programs are being operated in the Philadelphia area by the Fox-Chase Cancer Center, and in the Chicago area by the Evanston Hospital, Evanston, Ill.

from nine other health and medical facilities over the country seeking guidance on setting up similar programs, according to Dr. Daniel G. Miller, president and medical director of the clinic.

A Canscreen visit lasts about an hour. The cost is $35, and patients are asked to pay as much as they can to cover this cost.

Some people are more likely to develop cancer than others, either because of their personal habits or because of their age and family or personal medical history, Dr. Miller points out.

"Central to the Canscreen program is the knowledge that personal habits can be changed to reduce the risk of developing cancer," Dr. Miller explains. "And for those factors that can't be influenced, awareness of the risks can make people more alert to early signs of disease. Naturally, the carlier most forms of cancer are disgnessed and earlier most forms of cancer are diagnosed and treated the better the chances of cure. In fact, one out of four cancer deaths can be avoided by preventive care or early detection and treatment."

U.N. BUFFER ZONE, The Sinai - After nine months of operation, the supervisors of the American-run surveillance system between the Egyptians and Israelis say it effectively prevents the type of war which spread through the desert in 1967 and 1973.

One thing it cannot prevent, however, is the intrusion of the thirsty nomadic bedouin.

The Sinai Field Mission (SFM) system was built at a first-year cost of $30 million to separate, safely and dispassionately, the armies of Egypt and Israel, and it probably will keep tanks out of historic Mitla and

But what about camels?

"Our sensors pick up the sound of the tread of camels' hooves," an SFM official said.

He showed the kind of mark they make on a graphlike tape that records every footfall in key areas of

"We can tell they are camels from the speed, which is shown by the spacing of the ticks on the papers," he said.

No one is supposed to be in the 20-by-10-mile rectangle around the two passes without permission from the U.N. Emergency Force (UNEF), which enforces the terms of the American-sponsored Egyptian-Israeli Sinai accords of 1975. Currently the force is composed of a battalion of Ghanaian soldiers.

But by the time the U.N. outfit gets to the site of the footfalls, the bedouins usually have disappeared.

Explaining the 1975 Sinai accords to the bedouins is something everyone forgot. Technically they are citizens of Egypt. But the Sinai nomads have little understanding of such matters, and the Egyptians do not warn them that they are entering the world's most closely scrutinized piece of desert.

"There's a group that's been camped just below

"There's a group that's been camped just below the southwest corner of the zone for two days now," said Nicholas Thorne, a U.S. State Department of-ficer who is in charge of the SFM.

"We're watching for them. It's the end of the dry season, and they're coming up from the south, looking for water. There's water along the old path used by the pilgrims on their way to Mecca."

He pointed on a map to points about six miles apart between the parallel, east-west passes. "We've had 30 to 40 in a week, much more than before," he said. U.N. headquarters in Jerusalem says that previously there only had been that many in a month.

There are about 7,000 bedouins in the Sinai in 11 nomadic tribes. Most of them live along the Mediterranean coastal plain. Previously administered to by Israel, most were turned over to the care of the Egyptians when the Israelis withdrew last year from buffer zone areas. The ones wandering into SFM territory are those living in the southern Sinai.

Each time the SFM's three outposts report the presence of bedouins, troops of the Ghana battalion

Two technicians at a time operate the recording devices, which monitor sensors in the pass below, on 12-hour shifts. They also have a telescope powerful enough to count the notches on a fence post at 18 miles, and an electronically enhanced "starlight scope" which makes night seem like day.

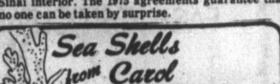

For their reassurance, there is a Ghanaian U.N. platoon 100 yards away. For further reassurance, there is a gun case containing two .12 gauge shotguns and two AR-15 automatic rifles.

"There is a round in the chamber of each weapon," says the sign. "In case of life-threatening situation, break the glass, put the safety in the fire position,

WASHINGTON - In 1970, the town of Willingboro, N.J., was a virtual model of racial integration: 88 per cent white, 12 per cent black.

But in the next three years, 3,000 blacks arrived and 2,000 whites departed — changing the ratio to 82 to 18. And the first expressions of concern emerged as "for sale" signs began increasingly to dot the

To help deter panic selling and white flight, the townspeople decided to prohibit homeowners and realtors from erecting "for sale" signs on residential property.

Despite its noble intent, the prohibtion stirred a legal controversy that finally has reached the Supreme Court.

The justice have agreed to decide whether the town's sign restriction — preventing even a homeowner from posting his own sign in his front yard - violates the constitutional right to freedom of

A decision could have wide impact. According to the National Assn. of Realtors, an increasing number of communities — as diverse as Baltimore, Gary, Ind., and Shaker Heights, Ohio - recently have adopted similar sign prohibitions.

And if the Court decides such restrictions go too far in inhibiting individual rights, a new milestone will be reached in the extension of constitutional protection to commercial forms of speech.

The township is staunch in its defense of the sign to see which homes were for sale. ban, saying its intrusion on freedom is only minimal. "They treat the symptom of the problem - the panic that follows with the introduction of the first minorities into a community," says Edward Holmgren, executive director of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing. "But they can have disadvantageous aspects. In an all-white neighborhood, for example, there can be an agreement not to use for sale signs as one method of retaining its all-white character. Willingboro, a community of about 45,000, was not always racially integrated. Its development took place mainly in the 1950s when Levitt and Sons, Inc., began building moderately priced homes for middle class families. But in the early stages, the company refused to sell to blacks — a policy that finally was prohibited by court order in 1960.

Later a human relations commission was formed and racial integration was promoted actively by the township. However by 1973 the racial balance was changing so rapidly that officials became concerned that Willingboro might soon be transformed from an integrated community into a black ghetto.
