Saudis to use output to offset hike

DOHA, Qatar (AP) — Saudi Arabia predicted Friday that oil prices would not rise beyond 5 per cent. The Saudis said they will boost their production to thwart the oil cartel majority's decision for a 15 per cent hike.

The forecast by Saudi Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani followed a two-day meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries -OPEC - at which Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates broke with the majority and held out for a five per cent increase.

The Saudis' 8.5 million barrels daily already account for 30 per cent of all crude oil output by members of OPEC. Yamani said his country has a daily capacity of 11.8 million barrels.

Asked if Saudi Arabia will raise production to whatever level the market demands, Yamani said, "This is normal."

U.S. government officials have predicted a one-cent rise in the price of a gallon of gasoline for each 5 per cent increase in the OPEC price structure. The first effects of the price rise are expected to show up at U.S. gas pumps in late January.

The OPEC majority called for a 10 per cent increase in January and about another 5 per cent in July.

In Washington, President Ford said the 11 OPEC members seeking the higher increase acted irresponsibly and that Saudi Arabia and its lone ally, the United Arab Emirates, had displayed a "sense of international responsibility and concern.'

On a visit to the United Nations headquarters in New York, U.S.

Secretary of State-designate Cyrus Vance said he was "greatly pleased by the courageous and statesmanlike action" of Saudi Arabia and the Emirates. He added he and President-elect Carter "will be sending a message to them expressing our appreciation."

The United States had conducted an intensive diplomatic campaign to warn of serious consequences to the world economy from an oil price increase. Vance said no commitments were made to the Saudis to win their support for a moderate increase.

The OPEC majority issued a communique announcing the basic price of crude oil would go from $11.51 to $12.70 per barrel Jan. 1 and then to $13.30 next July 1 for a total increase of 15.5 per cent

A 5 per cent increase would bring the standard price to $12.09 per Yamani told reporters, "We expect the West to appreciate what we did and especially the United States." He asked that this appreciation be shown in the so-called North-South dialogue at which poor countries demand more help from the rich, and in the Arab-Israel conflict.

The crack in OPEC was the first since the organization began the hard. unified pressure that more than quadrupled oil prices between late 1973 and early 1974. The price of $2.30 per barrel before the 1973 October Middle East War and its ac-companying oil embargo rose to $10.46 by 1974. In October, 1975 a 10 per cent increase brought the price to the current $11.51 per barrel.

Yamani cautioned, "Don't be too happy in the West. OPEC continues to be strong. Saudi Arabia cannot live without OPEC and OPEC cannot live without Saudi Arabia.'

Amouzegar said the average increase resulting from the split prices will be between eight and 8.5 per cent over the year. He suggested the oil com-panies will be asked to average out the difference in prices themselves since most of the giant Western firms buy from both sides in the OPEC

In 1975 the United States imported 701,000 barrels per day from Saudi Arabia, slightly less than one quarter of the 3,212,000 barrels imported daily from all OPEC countries. The next biggest suppliers were Venezuela at 395,000 barrels, Indonesia at 379,000 barrels and Iran at 278,000 barrels.

Carter thinking Andrus for interior position

PLAINS, Ga (AP) — Presidentelect Carter met for more than an hour Friday afternoon with Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus, and there was every indication he would annouce his selection of Andrus as the secretary of interior at a news conference Satur-

Andrus, who had planned to leave the Plains area after the interview decided instead to remain at an undisclosed location in the Plains area. The Carter office in nearby Americus announced that the President-elect would hold a news conference at 9 a.m. CST Saturday

No names other than Andrus' have been mentioned recently for the interior secretary position, and most speculation has been that it would go to a western governor.

Carter has brought all of his Cabinet-level nominees to the news conferences announcing his choices. Andrus, who first met Carter when both were freshmen governors in 1970, flew here Friday afternoon and said it was "pretty obvious" that he was interested in the Interior job. He is current chairman of the National Governors Conference. His term as governor expires in 1978. Earlier Friday, Carter and Cyrus Vance thanked Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates for breaking with other oil nations to hold price increases at 5 per cent. The Presidentelect's spokesman called the outcome fair and in the common interest.

Vance, designated by Carter to be secretary of state, said in New York he is "greatly pleased." Bert Lance. designated by Carter to be budget director, told reporters in Washington: "I'm delighted that it (the increase) was at the size it was."

Carter expressed his thanks through Press Secretary Jody Powell. The President-elect spent much of the day interviewing potential administration appointees, and Powell said Carter is close to decisions on several Cabinet positions and probably will announce choices on Sun-

Simon kills tax move on benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary William E. Simon has killed a government move to collect taxes on free fringe benefits provided to employes, sources said Friday.

The government effort had triggered a heavy volume of protests from occupations as diverse as auto salesmen, airline employes and clothing sales clerks.

The government has already moved to collect taxes on the free tuition of university employes, and there is no assurance that Simon's action forever prevents taxation of fringe benefits.

But sources said the move apparently will leave most fringe benefits untaxed for at least the near Simon's action involved two things. First, he announced publicly that Treasury is withdrawing a proposed general statement of principles on dealing with taxation of free fringe benefits. The rule would have exempted from taxation only those benefits which cost an employer nothing and which are available to all employes. Second, Simon privately killed about a dozen proposed revenue rulings which would have required certain people to pay taxes on benefits which are now tax free, sources said.

The two moves had been presented by Simon as options on the issue. But by rejecting both options, he left current tax policy just where it was. In his statement, Simon said, "I have concluded that such a general statement is not appropriate. Rather, the question of whether fringe benefits result in taxable compensation to employes should continue to depend, as it presenly does, on the facts and circumstances that

Coleman gives go-ahead to building of superports

WASHINGTON (AP) - Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. gave the go-ahead Friday to construction of the nation's first offshore superports.

Coleman, however, ordered the oil companies that will build the ports to guard against harm to the environment. He also said the companies cannot bar tankers of other oil companies from using the port facilities.

The superports, which would be located between 18 and 26 miles off the coasts of Louisiana and Texas. would allow oil importers to use the massive tankers which cannot get into conventional U.S. ports to carry oil to U.S. refineries.

Those tankers require at least 100 feet of water depth in order to operate and take nearly three miles to turn around. Most U.S. ports cannot handle any ship that draws more than 45 to 55 feet of water

Coleman said the superports would allow the United States to preserve domestic oil reserves and let it respond to an energy crisis more efficiently. He also predicted the use of the very large oil tankers would reduce the transportation cost of importing oil by up to 30 per cent.

The secretary said the economic restrictions he was placing on the port owners would "create the proper incentives and controls to ensure that these cost savings are passed through to the consumer.

Coleman found that superports would reduce the risk of oil spills during unloading, during shipment and because of collisions in harbors. Nevertheless he ordered steps taken to protect the environment and required the oil and chemical companies that plan to build the two ports to agree in writing that they would assume all liabilities from any oil spills that might occur.

The applications which Coleman approved are the only ones he has received since Congress passed the Deep Water Ports Act of 1974 that set the machinery in motion.

Any future applications would have to go through the same environmental impact studies and licensing procedures before construction could start. The decision is still subject to court challenge.

Rodriguez is leader of the Independent Workers and Peasants Central which he claims traces its roots to Mexican revolutionary Emiliano Zapata, whose slogan "Land and Liberty" was the battle cry in a 1910 revolution for land

Rodriguez said the organization does not believe in armed revolution but does insist that Mexican politics need changing.

The march originated in Los Mochis, where about 150 people camped on a roadside last Wednesday night. They started their march at daybreak Thursday, averaging about three miles an hour as they trudged along the righthand shoulder of the international highway south toward the Sinaloa state capital of Culiacan.

At that pace it would take more than a month to walk to Mexico City.
Rodriguez wore a sport shirt and slacks as he led the marchers.

He plans demonstrations in towns along the way and expects to pick up more followers as they march. He says he doesn't think, however, the total will ever reach the 6,000 or 7,000 he first predicted.

The group is protesting a recent court decision which overruled a presidential expropriation of almost 250,000 acres of farm and ranch land in Sonora state. They want the right to private land ownership reduced from the present 250 acres per person to 50 acres and demand that 1.5 million acres of rich farmland in Sinaloa be taken from private owners and turned into communal farms for 51,000

"We had assurances from the governor that neither the army nor the judicial police would hamper us," Rodriguez said. "But judicial police were around the camp threatening people. That is one reason we have no faith in politicians.

"Some of our people stayed behind because they were afraid," he added.

The band, about a dozen of them women, wore ragged clothes. Some marchers were barefoot; others wore sandals or rubber shower slippers. Some carried makeshift walking sticks. Their faces were covered with the dust of the road and the unpaved streets of this village of 1,500 people.

After President Luis Echeverria expropriated the land in Sonora peasants invaded private land in neighboring Sinaloa state hoping that those lands also would be expropriated. Their leaders agreed later to leave the land until after Echeverria left office Dec. 1 in order to assure a peaceful change of national government with the inauguration of Jose Lopez Portillo as president. A few days later a district court judge overruled the Sonora

The 640-foot Argo Merchant, with its stern settled at least 18 feet into the sandy shoal, was buffeted and rocked by waves six to seven feet high and winds approaching 30 miles an hour.

Gale warnings were posted in the area for Friday night and Saturday. Waves of 8 to 12 feet were forecast.

The tanker was evacuated Thursday night when increased flooding made conditions too hazardous, Griggs said. Four of the ship's officers and an emergency Coast Guard team had stayed on board until then. The other 34 members of the crew were evacuated earlier. Some of the cargo of heavy, industrial fuel oil, was washing or blowing overboard periodically, apparently from valves or other openings on top of cargo tanks, Griggs The amount of escaping oil was "probably minimal," he said.

The Coast Guard said an oil slick

150 yards wide extended from the tanker for at least eight miles.

They said the slick may be just a sheen over part of the distance. It was flowing southeasterly away from land. If caught by the Gulf Stream, its direction could be reversed, officials said, and some oil could pass over the northern section of Georges Bank, one of the world's richest commercial fishing grounds.

A Coast Guard plane flew over the area Friday to estimate the size of the spill and to track currents to see which way it might move.

The tanker is on a shoal in 30 feet of water 30 miles southweast of Nantucket.

The Coast Guard said the weather was a crucial factor in triving to float the tanker free and unload its cargo

Title IX makes inroads in Texas

By The Associated Press

A decision this week by Amarillo College, a small school in the Texas Panhandle, to drop four minor sports to give women comparable status in the college's major sport has highlighted the changes brought about in collegiate athletics by the Civil Rights Act.

Women's sports programs are getting more money and attention under Title IX of the Civil Rights Act, a development coaches still view with concern, at least from an economic point of view.

Title IX of stitution which receives federal aid and has been interpreted to mean also women's sports programs in colleges must be afforded equal opportunities.

The Amarillo College's board of regents voted to eliminate women gymnastics, men and women tennis and men's golf to concentrate on women's basketball, a sport which is highly popular in the area and in which the school competes regionally.

James Brandon, member of the board of regents of Amarillo College said Title IX entered into the regents' decision. Another board member Tom Fotheham, said members acted to avoid a violation of the law.

husiness manage by eliminating the four minor sports He added that women's basketball could cost about $20,000 a year meaning the school still would be saving about $40,000.

Women's sport programs are showing considerable progress at other institutions with budgets soaring and scholarships now being awarded to women athletes.

Donna Lopiano, women's athletics director at the University of Texas, said this year's budget is $238,000 compared with $128,000 last year. The figures, however, are still far below the $2.8 million for men's sports.

She said she hopes women's athletics will be self-supporting by

"I don't think that women will ever get to a win-at-all-cost philosophy.

Referring to the Title IX guidelines. she added: "They have been criticized as being too ambiguous, but i prefer to say flexible. They permit each school to come up with its own rationale, and they don't require equal spending.

At Texas Tech, a spokesman for the school said the budget this year for women's sports programs is $165,000, $20,000 more than last year. The university has six programs for women - basketball, golf, swimming, tennis, track and volleyball -The number of scholarships will go up to eight for tennis and golf and 12 each for the other sports next year. Each scholarship is worth $500.

School takes Christ out of celebration

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) - Pioneer Elementary School, with one small ficial's advice to take Christ out of Christmas.

I found that out this week when I attended the school's annual Christmas program. My two younger children, Darren, 10, and Mary 8, are students at the school.

There was no Nativity scene. No skits featuring Mary, Joseph, the three wise men, baby Jesus and shepherds.

Instead, the students marched into the school auditorium and positioned themselves on stands. They then sang several selections. Their only concession to the season was a rendition of "Silent Night." An assistant attorney general in the office of the state superintendent of public instruction had issued guidelines of holiday season school programs. It was no-Christ-in-Christmas advice, and it was based on a state constitutional provision:

"All schools maintained or supported wholly or in part by public funds shall be forever free of sectarian control or influence.

The guidelines said that songs such as Frosty the Snowman or Jingle Bills and cardboard Santas are okay.

Dangerous are Nativity scenes or the traditional Christmas carols that exception, has heeded a state of might be interpreted as prayers or contain phrases adoring Christ.

Pioneer Elementary avoided the "dangerous" phases.

Principal Bill Bowman denied that the school had been intimidated by the attorney general's guidelines. But he didn't appear to be entirely happy with the situation.

"Christmas is the celebration of the birth of Christ," Bowman said. "Whether you believe in him or not, it's still the celebration of Christ's birth, and it doesn't seem right not to have traditional observances.'

And Bowman held out hope that the traditional Christmas program may make a comeback. "The trend is to bring religion back into the schools," he said. "Not opening prayers but traditional programs.

"And if they object to their child singing a particular song for any reason, the child has the right to just stand there during the singing." he said.

But this year, except for the singing of "Silent Night," Christ was missing from my children's school's Christmas program. In no way was it the Christmas program I have come to know, love and expect. It was a choral program, nothing more.

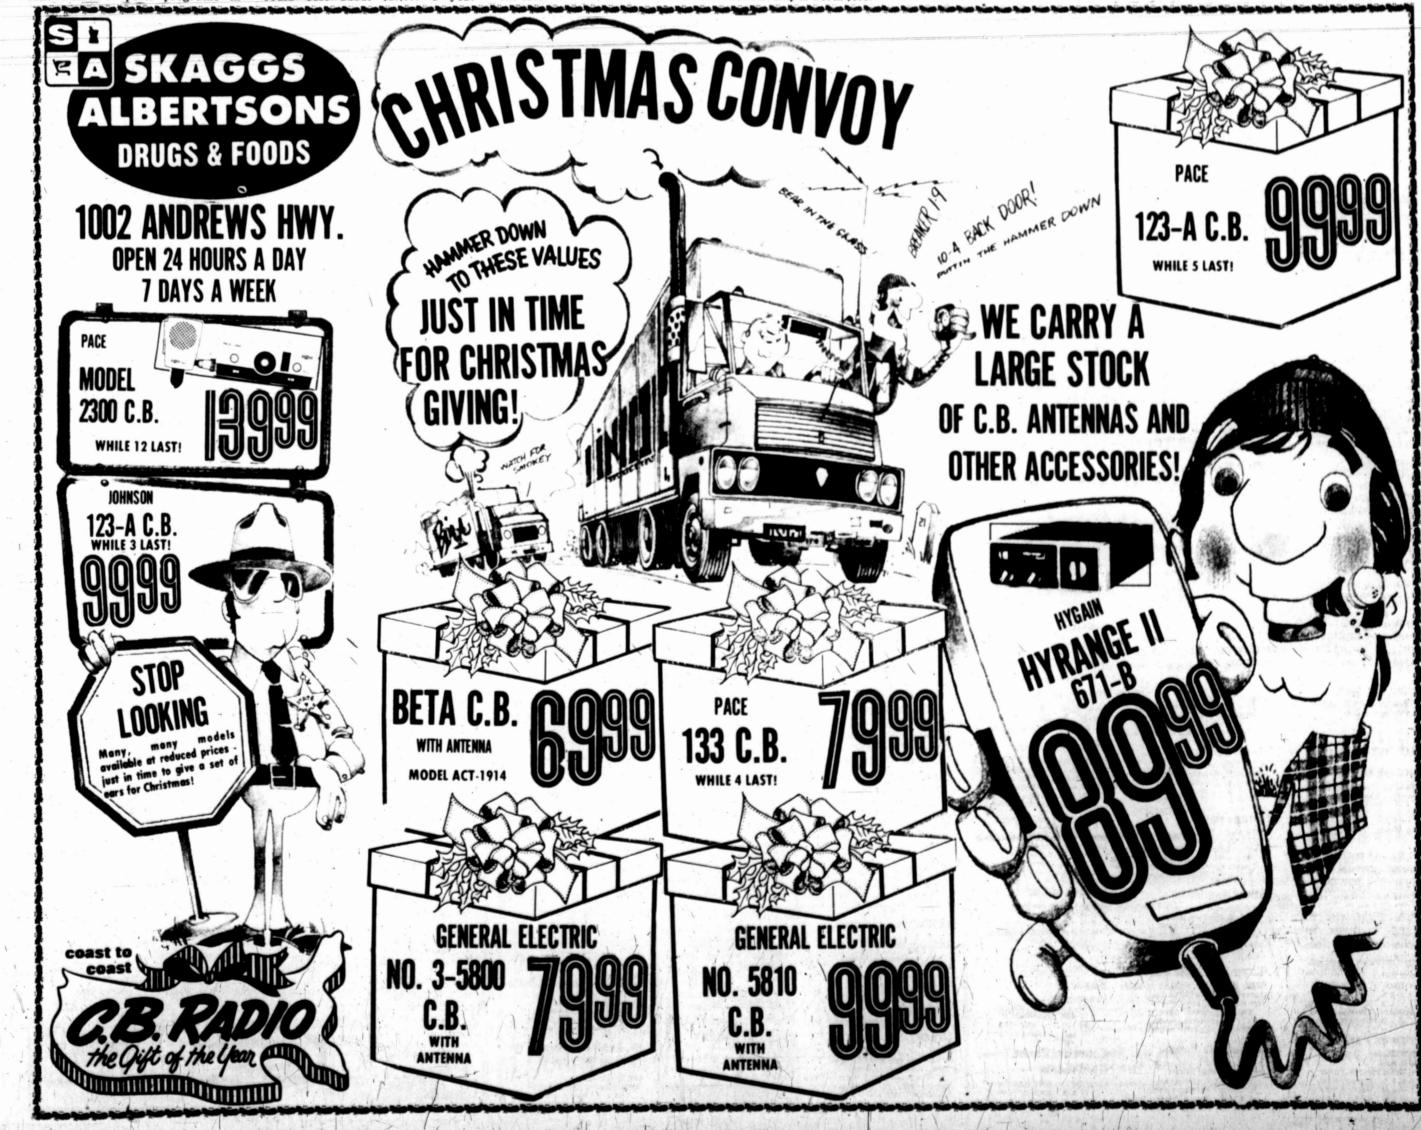

City flood prone

PASADENA, Tex. (AP) - The entire city of Pasadena, where subsidence has dropped elevation three feet in some areas over the past 12 years, now is considered flood prone, a U.S. Geological Survey official says.

Jim Bohn, a hydrologist for the survey's Austin office, has told city council all new construction must adhere to government guidelines for building elevation to be eligible for federally subsidized flood insurance

Bohn said only parts of the city were considered flood prone in surveys

Enrichment programs strengthen marriage

Copley News Service

NEW YORK - Hundreds and possibly thousands of married couples are taking time off from their domestic activities to examine their lives together and how they feel about one another. > Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews are sponsoring personal, family and marriage enrichment programs. ranging from regular weekly meetings of small groups of couples to special one-shot weekend retreats at which each participating couple privately works out their own aspirations and concerns with the guidance of specialists.

The enrichment programs do not involve counseling. They are not therapy. They are not designed for couples who are in trouble; rather they are for those who, while they are doing all right, want to find even more in their relationships.

True, some of the one million couples who are estimated to have entered the enrichment process in the last 15 years have found themselves in marriage counseling as a result, but for the most part enrichment has been the direct effect.

Dr. Herbert A. Otto, chairman and president of the National Center for the Exploration of Human Potential in San Diego, Calif., and one of the pioneers in the marriage enrichment movement, has brought a number of opinions and experiences together in a published symposium on "Marriage and Family Enrichment, New Perspectives and Programs.'

seems appropriate for a man with the driving personality of Henry Kissinger. Nevertheless, it rode with him to his meeting with other foreign ministers of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels - probably his last trip abroad as the U.S. Secretary of State.

Mr. Kissinger will be a little less lame than the imminent close of the Ford administration implies. For one thing, he will doubtless be he bearer of some insights into what Western Europe can expect from the Carter administration. His lengthy meeting with the president-elect soon after the November election probably added to his reading of the likely priorities of a Carter foreign policy. Also, Mr. Carter and his nominee for secretary of state. Cyrus R. Vance, have not repudiated many of Mr. Kissinger's assessments of foreign affairs, even if the Kissinger style of personalized diplomacy is probably on the way

Mr. Carter has stated publicly that he wants to strengthen U.S. ties with NATO. While Mr. Kissinger may or may not be able to add to that with any specific hints of how such a policy would be carried out, he will doubtless be able to serve as a messenger in the other direction. That is, his lame duck status will not prevent him from carrying back to Washington, for the ultimate benefit of Mr. Carter, the views of Europe on what the United States can do to make the NATO alliance stronger.

European members of NATO preceded the meeting with a declaration that U.S. and

The term "lame duck" hardly Canadian forces are still indispensable to the defense of Europe. This goes without saying. however, and mentioning it now may have been prompted by Mr. Carter's known inclination to view the cost of maintaining U.S. forces overseas as a possible target for reducing the defense

> In fact, the European ministers may have wanted to impress on Mr. Kissinger that they have been managing to increase their defense spending in spite of their economic problems, and that they hope Mr. Carter's first defense budget will reflect the same defense priorities found in Mr. Ford's budget for the current year. Throughout NATO there is a growing awareness that detente with the Soviet Union is not producing the anticipated grounds for reducing force levels in Western Europe's defense.

Indeed, the arms build-up on the eastern side of the Iron Curtain now stands as the most troublesome factor in a NATO strategy which only a few years ago was counting on a mutual reduction of NATO and Warsaw Pact forces to emerge as a parallel with an agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union limiting strategic missile deployments.

While the strategic arms talks may yet bear fruit, the NATO-Warsaw Pact negotiations have shown little or no progress, while the Russians have been investing heavily in conventional arms in the meantime. This development has helped rekindle the spirit of NATO, which had been flagging because of many problems within

Billy's no Jimmy

Anyone who feared a Carter political "dynasty" was in the making now can breathe easier. following the election at Plains, Billy Carter, the presidentelect's brother, couldn't put together enough votes to unseat Mayor A.L. Blanton.

From this distance, one hesitates to do much political analysis, but since this was the second time Billy Carter ran for mayor and lost, one could venture to say there may be something wrong with his political style. One rule in the primer for candidates is that you do your drinking in private. Another is that you show up at church whether you want to or not. Billy Carter broke both of

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE:

Carter has tough job on offshore oil deal

By BENJAMIN SHORE Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - One of the many national issues tugging at Jimmy Carter's sleeve trying to get his attention as soon as he takes office next month is the problem of getting states to accept offshore oil and gas production as necessary to reduce U.S. dependence on foreign oil.

When he was campaigning in Louisiana just days before the election, he said it was unfair for the Gulf states to "bear the burden" of offshore and onshore production facilities "that other states refuse to bear."

Whether that was simply a bid for the oil-state vote or a statement of Carter energy and environmental philosophy remains to be seen.

But it is clear that as President for the remainder of this decade, Mr. Carter will have to exercise tough national leadership in meeting this problem head-on.

It is also clear that coastal states cannot hold off forever their participation in a national program to expand energy sources.

There are three basic energy challenges facing coastal states: - Those with known offshore oil and gas resources must proceed now with planning that assumes those resources will be tapped and that onshore facilities will be necessary. Deep-water ports capable of handling supertankers must be built generating plants could become feasible, especially if their location eliminates public resistance to plants built near inhabited areas. As Mr. Carter knows, Congress has

- Floating offshore nuclear passed two laws that would appear diminish a president's influence over what coastal states permit to be done off their shores.

A 1972 law gave the 30 coastal states (including those around the Great Lakes) the responsibility for planning the protection and use of their 20,000 miles of coastline. While the law directed the states to consider the economic need for development. It also required attention to conservation.

The second law, passed earlier the year, appears to acknowledge the conservation planning. It simply helps states pay for more planning and assists them in meeting problems.

For example, studies of the environmental impact of the North Sea's oil production discovered the offshore rigs themselves were no problem. The impact came along Scotland's coastline, where massive environmental and social problems now require huge amounts of money to handle.

The direct environmental effect d Alaska's pipeline is minimal compared to what the project has done to the economic and social fabric of the

Yet Delaware, for example, has decreed that no deep-water port will be built in the state.

If every state takes that approach the nation will be cut off from the bul of petroieum being shipped around the world. The residents of mid-Atlantic state are screaming about the Department of the Interior's go-ahead last August to oil companies to drill for the precious reserves known to be there.

With the nuclear energy program bogged down, with foreign producers about to hike the price, and with Americans seemingly unable to accept conservation voluntarily, it is going to take a strong President to develop and implement a national energy program.

He must whip into shape the government's shamefully inefficient energy agencies, he must bring Congress into the huddle to coordinate signals and he must win public sup-

Mr. Carter at least has gotten off to a good start by meeting with congressional leaders and governors, especially a delegation of Northeastern governors.

He will have to get all three policy making levels - his own administration, Congress and the states talking and working together immediately if the national energy independence he has called for is to become a reality in time.

The Country Parson

by Frank Clark

WASHINGTON - Behind a small wooden hut, guarding the entrance to Kentucky's deadly Scottia mine, hangs a single green wreath. It is not a Christmas decoration, but a grim memorial for the 26 men who died in the mine last spring. They were victims of two terrifying explosions, which ripped through the mine. The disaster, like many before it, could have been avoided. For the Scottia mine is a monument to broken federal mine safety laws.

By JACK ANDERSON

and LES WHITTEN

We sent our roving reporter. Hal Bernton, into the coal fields to find out why the mine safety laws aren't better enforced. He found that the federal mine inspectors are underpaid, overworked and harassed.

They crawl through miles of narrow, damp passages, checking roof supports, measuring methane gas levels and checking air ventilation. Their reward is likely to be a churlish reception, perhaps even physical violence, fror the ruggedmine operators.

Complained one inspector: "You can make more money roofbolting the mines than you can as an inspector. What incentives do you have to crawl into every damn doghole? You are subject to constant abuse wherever "You like to think you might have saved some daddy from getting killed. But merchants blackball you. And when you serve an order on an operator, he may draw his pistol and send his dog after you.

The physical danger is a real problem. Attacks on mine inspectors aren't uncommon in the brawling mining towns of Appalachia. Yet Congress not only neglected to make it a federal crime to assault a mine inspector, but the victimized inspectors are required to pay their own

The salaries are also poor. One first 10 months as an inspector. I earned only $5,100. I worked three months as a coal miner and earned The inspectors also complained that their condemnation orders are constantly fixed by their superiors who negotiate at the upper levels with the mine operators. "You start - out as a regulator." grumped an inspector. 'but soon you become the regulated. The operators go to your higher-ups."

Since 1970, the inspectors have discovered literally thousands of safety law violations and have levied over $66 million in fines. Yet the Interior Dept. has been able to collect only $29 million.

HEMISPHERE REPORT:

Latin American squabbles continue to threaten unity

By WILLIAM GIANDONI Copley News Service

In Latin America, the Marxists seem to have an advantage over everyone else. They can overlook their personal, regional, even national problems in interests of furthering the revolution. building socialism or whatever may be the goal of the moment. On the other hand, non-Marxists appear unable to overcome bilateral jealousies, or to wipe memories of wars long lost from their minds, or sacrifice nationalistic ambitions and join forces against a common enemy. Of course, the problem is simpler for the Marxists than it is for the democratic and anti-Marxist coun-

For all practical purposes, there is only one Marxist government in Latin America, that of Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba. The others that call themselves Marxist or Socialist are mini-republics that became independent with the breakup of the British colonial empire in the Western Hemisphere. Neither by virtue of population, area, strategic importance nor, even, language do they qualify as Latin nations. Cuba, of course, is a satellite of the Soviet Union. As Castro has said repeatedly, without the support of the Soviet and the Socialist bloc, Cuba would not have survived as it is. As a Soviet puppet, Castro is spared the task of making the big decisions. Such as the missile crisis with the United States in 1962 and Cuban intervention in Angola and elsewhere in Africa in this decade are decided in

Elsewhere in Latin America. though, it appears at times that most countries are more concerned with relatively petty issues that estrange them from neighbors than with, say, the matter of regional security including international terrorism and

The Marxists are well aware of the fact and seek to play one country off against another to try to insure against regional or hemispheric cooperation: Recently, for example, Pedro Vuskovic, the Chilean exile who was President Salvador Allende's economy minister, wrote in the Mexico City daily, El Dia, that despite the many similarities in their internal policies, the dictatorships of the Southern Cone are showing growing incapacity to agree to the terms of their reciprocal relations and of the projection of their foreign policy."

He pointed to the visits the chiefs of the Latin American military governments have been making to each other's capitals without, he said. managing to work out joint positions on foreign policy matters or resolve the problems existing between their own countries Vuskovic blamed the United States for keeping the Latin countries from coordinating their positions, alleging that the United States finds it easier to deal with its hemispheric neighbors on a bilateral basis, that is to say one at a time, than as a group. Of course, other critics of U.S.

policy toward Latin America, at other times, have complained that the United States was wrong in treating Latin America as a bloc. They insisted that in so doing the United States ignored the very real differences in economic, social, and political development of the Latin countries

Vuskovic seized on the jealousy that Argentina showed when Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and earlier President Nixon sought to pay special tribute to Brazil as one example of the centrifugal forces at work in Latin America. He also mentioned Argentina's concern over Brazilian 'penetration" in Bolivia. The Chilean did not mention. perhaps because it would have weakened his argument, that the Brazilians were moved to speculate that Argentine President Jorge Videla's recent visit to Bolivia may have been an attempt by Argentina to counterbalance Brazilian influence in Paraguay.

Another source of tension is the negotiations that have been going on between Chile, Bolivia and Peru over the possible restoration of an outlet to the Pacific to Bolivia. The problem dates back almost a century to the War of the Pacific in Peru and took territory from both of them. The loss was greater on Bolivia's part because Chile wrested the port of Antofagasta away and left the country landlocked. Chile initially suggested that which Chile beat both Bolivia and Bolivia trade it an Andean area on their border for a corridor to the sea that would have run along the frontier between Chile and Peru. Peru countered, however, by pointing out that under terms of the treaty it signed with Chile none of the territory taken as a result of the War of the Pacific could be surrendered without Peruvian permission. Recently Peru has come up with a proposal that would involve administration of part of the corridor by all three countries.

The suggestion amounts to a Peruvian request that it share in the sovereignty over part of the land lost to Chile last century, and it can be expected to slow what progress Chile and Bolivia were making toward solution of their problem. But just as the military govern-standing problems that are revived periodically to make it difficult for them to cooperate with each other, so do the civilian regimes. None of the situations appears worthy of the diplomatic energy, the patriotic fervor or the newspaper ments in South America have long-uninvolved foreign observer. But they all are most-pressing issues to the countries and peoples concerned and they do serve to keep Latin countries fired up against their space devoted to it, at least to the BIBLE VERSE

Enterprise costing Alaska paper

By WILLIAM ENDICOTT The Los Angeles Times

ANCHORAGE - Seven months ago, Katherine Fanning, a publisher of the Anchorage Daily News, was celebrating a Pulitzer Prize.

Her feisty little newspaper had just walked off with journalism's most coveted award for its series of articles on Teamsters Union domination in Alaska. The future looked bright and she was hoping for an upturn in advertising and circulation.

Now, however, two of the three reporters who worked on the Teamster series are gone, her news staff has been trimmed to 12 from 21 and, a few weeks ago, she published a front-page appeal to Daily News

"The owners and employes of the Daily News would like to frankly share a problem with you, our readers," she wrote. "The newspaper is facing a severe financial crisis. We need substantial community support to continue.

In 1974, the morning Daily News entered a joint operating agreement with the entrenched afternoon newspaper, Robert B. Atwood's Anchorage Times, in a move that was supposed to snatch the News from financial disaster.

Instead, things went from bad to worse, compounded by the fact that Alaskans - grown accustomed to the Times' don't-rock-the-boat style of conservative journalism - were not comfortable with the aggressive reporting of the Daily News.

Stories such as the Teamster series and regular consumer columns appear to have hurt more than they

"It would be a good story to say the Teamsters put the pressure on advertisers after our series," Mrs. Fanning said, "but I can't say they did."

Nevertheless, an Anchorage attorney who is close to the situation but who asked not to be identified said the Teamsters and their boss, Jesse L. Carr, were very much a part of the Anchorage Establishment and Carr had close ties to Atwood's Times.

Carr sits on the board of directors of the National Bank of Alaska, whose president, Elmer Rasmuson, is Atwood's brother-in-law, and the newspaper has suggested editorially that Carr would make a good governor for Alaska.

'The word didn't have to go out officially," the attorney said. "It was understood. If you're a friend of Jess, you didn't patronize the Daily News.' Mrs. Fanning did admit that much of the Daily News' reporting "was not understood here.'

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

For instance, after a front-page story on grocery pricing practices, a major market and drugstore chain stopped advertising in the News.

Jamie Love, who heads the Alaska Public Interest Research Group, said the business community looked on the Daily News as "a pinko rag," largely because it had the temerity to question Alaskan growth and development, including construction of the trans-Alaska pipeline

"We didn't oppose the pipeline." Mrs. Fanning said. "We just took our time endorsing it. And some elements in the community thought that was an anti-growth attitude. We've just taken a wait-and-see attitude on a lot of development.

Rumors are rife in Anchorage that Atwood, Carr and their friends are trying to squeeze the Daily News out. but there is no clear evidence to that effect.

Atwood strongly denies any such intent and told Editor and Publisher magazine recently, "If I wanted to kill it, I could have done it a long time ago...It would be very easy to get rid of the morning paper, but we chose not to.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times, Atwood said he was "interested in helping her (Mrs. Fanning) but I don't think it's right for meto undertake to subsidize her.

Atwood said it was "just wrong" to suggest he was trying to put her out of business. "We wouldn't have a joint agreement if we wanted to do that." The agreement was made possible under the Newspaper Preservation Act of 1970, which, in effect, exempts newspapers from antitrust laws if one of the two papers in such a merger is found to be failing.

The Daily News-Times agreement. under which the Daily News retained control over its news and editorial content, was the first such merger under the act.

In exchange of Atwood's agreement to make the deal, however, the Daily News had to turn over its lucrative Sunday edition, which was accounting for half its revenue, to the Times and surrender control over advertising and circulation.

The unexpected result was that the Times continued to grow and now has a circulation of 47,000, but circulation of the Daily News plummeted from a high of 26,000 for its Sunday edition to a daily distribution of 14,000. Advertising also fell off.

On a normally heavy advertising day last Thursday, the fat Times hit Anchorage newsstands and doorsteps with 96 pages, but the thump of the Daily News would hardly waken a light sleeper. It was only 28 pages. Circulation is beginning to creep back up, but Mrs. Fanning said the newspaper's losses still exceeded $500,000 a year and could no longer be subsidized by her family.

After Mrs. Fanning made the paper's economic problems public, there was considerable community response, resulting in creation of a volunteer group called the Committee for Two Newspapers, which is attempting to help the paper boost its circulation and advertising.

The Bristol Bay Native Corp. chipped in with interim financing to keep the paper operating at least through mid-January. Bristol Bay and several other native corporations are looking into the possibility of buying a minority interest in the paper.

Bristol Bay is one of 13 regional corporations established by the Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act to administer nearly $1 billion awarded by Congress to Alaska Eskimos, Indians and Aleuts in compensation for their aboriginal claims to much of the state's land Mrs. Fanning and her late husband, Lawrence Fanning, bought the Daily News in 1967 from Norman C. Brown and set out to publish what Fanning called "a daily experiment in journalism.

Cities can pick courses

ODESSA - Residents of Andrews and Mc-Camey will have a chance to select which courses they want from the Odessa College extension programs in community meetings during January. The meeting in Andrews will be at 7 p.m. Jan. 6 in the adult continuing education building McCamey's public school speech auditorium will be the site of a Jan. 10 meeting, set for 6:30 p.m., at which time residents may choose their course selection.

Extension courses in the past have included English, government, history, psychology, sociology, math, speech, business and law enforcement coureses, Dr. Miles Eckert, dean of student development, Eckert said each extension center may choose any course from the college's available offerings as long as the requirements of the Texas State Coordinating Board concerning size of class are met and a qualified instructor can be found.

The Coordinating Board requires an average of 15 students per class, Eckert said.

Billions of dollars are being spent at this time of the year to buy friends and loved ones presents. I certainly have made a handsome constribution to that awsome total. And I do not begrudge one cent of anything spent to express to others my love for them. For indeed, this is what "Christmas has come to me an to me. A time of year for just that! Every now and then I hear someone say, "Lets put Christ BACK in Christmas." But that is a strange note to this scribe who has spent the biggest part of his life as a student of the Bible, because you cannot read about CHRISTMAS anywhere in the Bible. And most of the so called "Christmas stories" are not ex actly as the Holy Bible reveals them.

In the first century A. D. Christians were never in structed to celebrate any time of the year as the birth of Jesus. The Bible does n ot tell us the birthday of Jesus Christ. t is the work of man and December 25 is no more a sacred day than June 19, or at to other date you might pick from the calander.

However, suppose that this is the birthday of Christ and we set out to celebrate it. How would we do it? Some folks would go to church and sing songs of praise, and hear a sermon on the virgin bir th. This might well be the last time that the Saviour's name crosses their minds until another year passes. Others get together and drink stong drink until they make utter fools of themselves in their drunken stupor as they celebrate the birth of Him who declared that all themselves in the last which have well. drunkards will have their part in the lake which burns with fire." Others celebrate the birth of Christ with their manger scenes in store windows and shopping malls as they get folks in the mood to four their wares, while most of the large merchants are me inbers of a race who deny that Jesus

All are names used to identify various groups of animals, as in a pride of lions. The other words identify a knot of toads, an exaltation of larks, a crash of rhinoceroses, a iabor of moles and a pod of seals or whales.

For children and adults who weren't sure what to call these groups and don't know what others might be known as, the answers are at a new exhibit opened last week by the National Geographic in its Explorer's Hall.

One of the first challenges is to find the animals. Visitors enter the exhibition through simulated forests and jungles and are confronted by photographs of animals hidden among trees and foliage that are their natural camouflage.

Appropriately, the display is called, "Oh, Say Can You See?"

The theme runs through the show. As the Geographic puts it: "Can you see an ape in a tree? An owl on a limb, what about him? Do you spot the dots of a sleek ocelot? Find the birds in the bush. In a leafy green place, a gorilla's lean

Pauley never dreamed she'd take Walters' place

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Forty years ago, you understand, it was not television It was the Hollywood movies that plucked a few of the ripe ones and took them, only dimly comprehen-ding, from nowhere to somewhere, from no one to someone, and - occasionally - from someone to no one, because quite simply, stardom is a very curious and painful matter. Very rapidly, very matter-of-factly, noneof-your-business becomes everybody's business. And now there is television, which is in many ways the surrogate Hollywood of the Thirties. Which turned Barbara Walters into the queen of soft news on the "Today", show, and then, when she left for the hard stuff on ABC, set about finding her replacement in a manner analogous to the days when David O. Selznick rummaged among the bodies for the quintessential Scarlett O'Hara.

But it wasn't simply a matter of private screen tests. The "Today" show gave us live try-outs: Cassie Mackin, Linda Ellerbe, Kelly Lange and Betty Furness, and the winner was ... Jane Pauley. Who didn't even know she was trying out. Who thought she was "filling in for someone." Which, in fact, she was.

Although not for Barbara Walters Tom Brokaw is the new Barbara Walters - the "Today" show's host, to be more precise, its star. Jane Pauley is simply filling in The Woman's Spot on the program, but since that was Walters' territory as well, the comparisons do crop up. And since it was Walters who played out the daily soap opera of salary and psyche in the headlines, Jane Pauley is now The Other Woman. Younger. vastly less experienced, with 26 years of Midwestern life behind her.

"At what point do you say to yourself, 'I'm ready?'" she wonders aloud. "You never do. I was never going to volunteer for this job. I don't want to peak too early. Twenty-six. I've got a little room for improve-

She is sitting in her office, and in her bottle-green midi-culottes and matching battle jacket, the blonde hair pulled back from the scrubbed round face, she looks like what she once was: A smart sorority girl from Indiana, pretty enough to gain acceptance among the men; but not striking enough to rattle the women in the morning hours of pincurls and frogface. "See," she told Dick Wald, NBC's news president, when the good news call awoke her in September. 'See how cheerful I am in the morning ... " She aims to please, an effect she produces by deploying propor-tionate amounts of yout hful deference and candor.

"By the time I came to New York," she says simply, "my confidence had bounced back. I knew I was not going to set the country on fire and that there would be unkind criticism. But they're not going to be around as long as I intend to be ... I probably would be a little better off - certainly in the credibility department, if I'd had a couple of more years in Chicago." Chicago, 1975, as it happens, was a rough place and a rough time for Jane Pauley. Before she even arrived at NBC-owned WMAQ to co-anchor the news with Floyd Kalber, it was suggested by an unnamed source in a local newspaper that she probably had "the IQ of a canteloupe.

In fact Pauley has a certain shrewdness, a show-biz shrewdness that skims the surface of her own brief career and makes her talk at times like a vocational guidance counselor.

"I don't particularly consider myself a feminist," she will say, "but I've certainly taken advantage of the movement at every turn. I would never have had my first job (on TV in Indianapolis) if the FCC hadn't wanted women in the jobs quick ... When I came to Chicago last September I was the first woman anchor. I was a first, a novelty ... I was toughened in Chicago.

It was Chicago, after all, that taught her TV lesson No. 1: Ratings. It was because of sagging ratings that Pauley was brought, amidst a lot of flackery, to co-anchor in the first place ("And yet I was supposed to turn it around in less than a year.")

But the ratings remained deflated, and she was removed from the 10 p.m. anchor (although she retained the 5 p.m. one, and reported on the late news).

"When you leave work," she remembers, "you go home and it seems like a hotel. That's when I felt I didn't belong, felt like a transient. When you're there, alone, and it's dark and it's late - that's when you feel the pressure ... To be toughened in Chicago takes its toll in New York. And so does being the child of television, the only career Pauley has ever known. Even though television is wedded to written journalism, the formative influence is always the camera. As she takes out a cigarette, Pauley turns to the photographer:

"Hey — would you please put down your camera for five minutes?" She looks at her Kool. "It's a crude, foul, disgusting habit. Which I took up when I started in Chicago. Actually, I should know better because you're going to write it all down."

She smiles half-heartedly. "I can't trust you people. When I was in Chicago I had lunch with a reporter, a good friend, and she counted and wrote down the number of cigarettes I smoked. And she counted wrong."

Jane Pauley smoked exactly twice during the interview, and on both occasions photography was suspended. When the shutter clicked at a third untoward moment, she looked up in-stantly. "Got me while I was scratching my face. Can't trust you, either."

"I'm a much better interviewer than interviewee," she admits. "I've never knowingly crucified anyone, but I'm sure I have arrived at some stories with a bias. So now the tables have been turned on me ... I just feel so helpless in an interview. I have met and you have met people who come off so delightfully, and then later, they come off like Jekyll and Hyde. I mean they grow fur and teeth and hair ...

She shrugs, her face impassive "It's an aspect of my job I have to admit. I am on TV in one capacity or another 10 hours a week. It probably is PR and I gag at the thought of it.
One of these days it will be over. Very soon, I guess.'

This is pure fantasy. The "Today" show designates one regular, and one only, as the incarnation of womanhood. And right now, it's Pauley. When it was Walters, the "Today" Show was, as Tom Brokaw says, "Clearly Barbara's program."

Vikings and virus bug team up against Redskins

By The Associated Press The most important player in Saturday's first round National Football League playoffs is small, quick and all but invisible. He wears no helmet and was never cored a touchdown. But before he's through, he could decide the fate of the Washington Redskins.

Buzzing madly around the Washington training camp this week was a virus bug that at various times grounded a half dozen of Coach George Allen's Redskins.

The latest casualties were running back Mike Thomas and defensive end Dennis Johnson, both floored with Redskin Virus. They followed running back Bob Brunet, kick returner Eddie Brown, kicker Mark Moseley and reserve guard Dan Nugent to the in-

ALLEN, OF course, brushed off the the bug, saying that he expects all of the virus victims to be ready for today's playoff opener against the Minnesota Vikings.

As he watched the films, studying the Redskins in preparation for Saturday's game, Viking Coach Bud Grant might have thought he was looking in-

'They're a lot like us," said Grant. Their defense is sound and they've got a lot of experienced hands.'

AMONG THE most experienced is quarterback Billy Kilmer, 37 years old and in his 15th NFL season.

Asked about Kilmer, Redskins' linebacker Chris Hanburger smiled. "If you opened up this guy's body," said Hanburger, "all you'd find is Kilmer and Hanburger are two of 14 players on Allen's roster who are over 30. But that's the way their boss likes them. There are no rookies and that's Why does Allen like senior citizens so much? Maybe it's because they stay healthier. Of the six Skins decked by the virus this week, only Brunet is not surprising

If, like Allen, you prefer veteran experience to youthful exuberance, then you've got to prefer Oakland against New England.

The Raiders have won nine AFC West titles in the last 10 years. But New England is making its first playoff appearance in 13 years.

OAKLAND quarterback Ken Stabler, a seven-year veteran, won his first NFL passing title by completing 194 of 291 attempts for 2,737 yards and 27 touchdowns. New England's attack is operated by young Steve Grogan who, in his first full year on the job, completed 48 per cent, passing for 1,903 yards and 18

Oakland posted the NFL's best record, 13-1, but the lone loss was an embarassing 48-17 thrashing by New England. Grogan threw for three TDs and ran for two others in that game.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Oklahoma State is rated a one-touchdown favorite over Brigham Young University in what is expected to be a highscoring battle in the 31st Tangerine Bowl football classic Saturday. Both teams, representing the Big Eight and Western Athletic Conference, were at top strength and it appeared to be a question of which gets the big breaks and big plays in the clash of contrasting offenses.

"They're a big challenge for us."

Oklahoma State Coach Jim Stanley said about the BYU Cougars, the nation's top passing team. "But our defensive secondary has been doing a good job all year.

BYU COACH LaVell Edwards said quarterback Gifford Nielsen and his receivers "are as ready as we'll ever

Oklahoma State hopes to put enough pressure on the long and lanky deadeye passer from Provo, Utah, to hold down BYU scoring which averaged 32 points a game over a 9-2

BOTH BRIGHAM Young, which shared the WAC title with Wyoming, and Oklakhoma State, cochampion of the tough Big Eight Conference, are explosive power teams which often relied on the big play to win. The 6-foot-5 Nielsen, a former star basketball player at BYU, was second in total offense in the country, gaining 3,192 yards and 29 touchdowns from his passing.

The speedy, 190-pound Miller made the All-America team on the strength of his rushing statistics of 1,541 yards and 19 touchdowns against the likes of Oklahoma, Nebraska, Arkansas, Colorado and Missouri.

Oklahoma State quarterback Charlie Weatherbie, operating from the veer offense, gained 390 yards rushing and 752 in the air during the Cowboys' 8-3 season.

Coach Stanley is relying on 260-pound defensive tackle Phil Dokes to get into the BYU backfield often enough to upset Nielsen's throwing. Dokes knocked Brigham Young quarterback Gary Sheide out of the 1974 Fiesta Bowl game the last time these two teams met. Oklahoma State won that one 16-6.

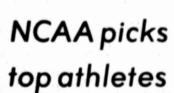

BUT BYU Coach Edwards has moved 6-7, 270-pound offensive tackle Dave Hubbard to the left side in hopes of neutralizing Dokes.

Bantering with each other during a press luncheon, the Cowboy coach told Edwards, "If you'll promise not to throw the ball, I'll put Dokes and Miller any place you want them."

"How about on the bench?" cracked the BYU boss.

Plagued by rainy weather since their arrival Monday, the two squads practiced in sunshine for the first time Friday. The weather was expected to be clear and warm for the Saturday night game.

A crowd of more than 35,000 was expected in the 50,500-seat Tangerine Bowl.

Davis Cup lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) - Roscoe Tanner shattered the tennis nemesis of Raul Ramirez with piston-like power and, along with Arthur Ashe, led the United States to a 2-0 lead over Mexico in the 1977 North American Zone Davis Cup competition.

Tanner, a 25-year-old polished hillbilly from Lookout Mountain, Tenn. with a service that explodes at 128 miles per hour, struck the first blow by smashing a favored Ramirez 7-5, 6-4, 6-4.

Then the 30-year-old Ashe, playing his 31st Davis Cup match covering a full decade, cut down unranked Roberto Chavez 6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

"This is great," said an enthused Tony Trabert, captain of the U.S. team. "I think we have a good chance of making it a 5-0 sweep.

This would avenge in some measure the embarrassment that Ramirez, a 23-year-old son of an Ensenada Baja, Mexico, government fisheries' executive, had meted out to American teams over the last two years.

He shared in all the winning points in 3-2 victories at Palm Springs, Calif. in 1975 and Mexico City last April, beating topranked Jimmy Connors in the decisive match of the latter event. The Americans, who have not won the Davis Cup since 1972, now can clinch a final spot in the North American Zone by winning Saturday's doubles.

Today they send the experienced team of Stan Smith and Bob Lutz against a Mexican duo of Rann irez and pro bably Emilio Montano. . 23year-old playing in his first Davis Cup match.

South Africa would be the next cutponent in the 1977 series.

Tanner a pparently dealt the knockout blow for the Mexicans in the opening match, played on a blue-painted asphalt court at the Tucson Racquet Club It anch which nestles at the foot of the Catalina Mountains.

It was a pleasting victory for him. Not only had Rattirez singlehandedly beat down America's finest tennis talent for the past two years, but he had made Tanner in is personal pigeon since they first begin a meeting in tournaments in 1972, wirning seven of the eight matches played.

'I was more nervous today and sleeping less before the match than any semifinals at Forest Hills or Wimbledon," the Stanford graduate said. "I consider it my greatest victory in tennis."

Was it more satisfying than beating Connors at Wimbledon last year? "Yes, much more pleasant," he replied. "For one thing, I was playing for the United States. Also, I felt I had to prove myself against Ramirez.'

Italians ahead 2-0 over Chile's cuppers

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Adriano Panatta and Corrado Barazzuti led Italy to a 2-0 lead over Chile Friday. just one victory away from clinching the 1976 Davis Cup.

for Sunday.

Before a work-day crowd of about.

In the other match, Barazzuti fell behind 0-4 in the first set, but Fillol became visibly nervous as the Italian came from behind and won seven of the last eight games.

The same pattern prevailed in the second set, with Fillol's strong serves helping him to a 4-0 lead. But the advantage dwindled as Barazzuti, flashing a consistent net game, staged a comeback. Fillol, however, managed to salvage the set.

Barazzuti won the third set, then won all but the first game in the fourth as Fillol's game deteriorated.

Luis Ayala, the Chilean captain, said Fillol was handicapped by an old injury, a pulled muscle in the lower abdomen and groin area.

"Lately he has been injected with cortisone for the pain, and today he played with a special bandage that bothers him notably in action," Ayala

"In regard to Cornejo, I think he played normally," Ayala said. "Panatta was formidable. We shouldn't forget that he is one of the 10 best in the world."

What you've always wanted to know about pro football officials and no one could ever tell you. With the work of the men in stripes under the microscopic scrutiny of the TV eye these days, more and more their calls on close plays become controversial, and instead of the annonymity they prefer, they have been projected into the glaring spotlight of the public eye. Fans wonder, who are these guys, where do they come from and what riches are they after? HAL LEBOVITZ, a Cleveland writer and one-time official himself who has worked with some of the current NFL officials, probably is in as good a position to shed some sympathetic light on these men of mystery as anybody outside the profession.

Contrary to the belief of some who have been so foolish as to jump at an inviting point spread, only to see their winnings disappear on the soft flutter of a yellow hanky pulled from a convenient pocket, they are not handpicked hitmen from the Mafia.

IF YOU, dear reader, had a little more get up and go, you might very well be one of Sunday's mostmaligned ministers. Officials come from the ranks of educators, school teachers, professors, coaches and administrators. They have also been recruited from the ranks of lawyers, elected officials, bankers, salesmen, business executives, firemen and policemen.

According to Lebovitz, "These men start out working junior high, junior varsity and amateur games. It costs them more for equipment and gas than the pay they receive. They must pass a state test and also the test of the local officiating board. They must go to a meeting every week."

AT THIS level, it's obviously a labor of love kept warm by the hope that they may become proficient enough to move into high school, college or pro ranks where the pressure is more intense, but so is the money, although not sufficiently to turn them into mere

In the NFL, each Saturday, they must report to the city where their respective games are to be played. They don't sit around and rest up for the next day's assignment, but spend their time examining movies of each team's game of the preceding week, accompanied by observations from an official representative of the league office.

"EACH CREW is 'refereed' every Sunday by a paid league observer who sits in the press box and makes notes," informs Lebovitz. "In addition, Art McNally, head of the officials and assistants, Nick Skorich and Jack Reader, check out the game films and add their com-

Six officials work each game and all six are responsible if there is a mistake in applying the rules. If a down is lost, although this is the primary responsibility of certain officials in the crew, all six can be set down for a couple of weeks. LEBOVITZ POINTS out that although the referee is in charge of the crew, the pay scale is the same for all positions. A rookie starts out at $325 per league game and gets a full schedule. Every two years each official receives an automatic raise of $50 until he reaches his 11th year when he is making the $575 maximum. A veteran official can earn over $8.000 by working once a week all 14 weeks of the NFL season.

Officials also receive a flat $300 for all exhibition games. For post season games, the compensation is much greater than for the regular season.

It's a rewarding hobby, if one climb high enough, provided he doesn't wilt under the constant harping of players, coaches, fans and the league office.

MEMPHIS (AP) - Coach Bear Bryant, singing his usual bowl season blues, brought the Alabama Crimson Tide to town Friday for their Liberty Bowl matchup with UCLA Monday night.

As is his usual habit, Bryant complained that Alabama is outgunned. "This is a tremendous challenge for our team." Bryant said earlier this week. "We'll have to play the very best we can and that may not be good enough."

UCLA Coach Terry Donahue said Friday he thinks the Bear is trying to con him. "I read all that stuff in the Los Angeles papers about what Coach Bryant was saying about his team. about how he didn't even know if his team could play against ours," Donahue said. "Isn't that the most ridiculous thing you've ever heard? "That man is like the country fox trying to set up the city slicker," he said. The Bruin coach insists he should be the one who

"We've only been practicing since last Saturday, he said. "Our players have had exams and at UCLA. exams are a serious business. How long has Alabama been practicing? Since Dec. 6, that's not

Donahue says his players stuffed themselves on turkey during the Thanksgiving holidays. "Five or six of our players have really put on some pounds. They're at least 10 pounds overweight. We're not as big as Alabama, but I felt we were quicker. But now that so many of our guys have put on the weight, we've lost that advantage."

Alabama, which has a poor bowl game record, brings an 8-3 season record to their 18th consecutive postseason game. Seventh-ranked UCLA has a 9-1-1 mark for the year.

It will be the third Liberty Bowl apearance for Bryant's Crimson Tide. Alabama lost to Penn State in the inaugural game at Philadelphia in 1959, then lost a 47-33 decision to Colorado in Memphis in 1969. UCLA, which has a 2-5 record at the Rose Bow! will be making its first postseason appearance outside Pasadena.

Pacers bow to Pistons

DETROIT (AP) - Marvin Barnes, plagued most of the season by troubles with the law and a sore ankle, triggered an 18-4 fourth period explosion that carried the Detroit Pistons to a 113-104 National Basketball Association victory over the Indiana Pacers Friday night.

Barnes hit six of his 12 points in the uprising that enabled the Pistons to wipe out a 92-87 deficit and grab a 105-96 lead over a five-minute stretch. Barnes also sank two more baskets in the final period.

Barnes recently was found guilty of attempting to carry a concealed gun aboard an airplane and sentenced to one year in jail in Rhode Island for breaking his probation there.

The victory was the third in a row and six in the past eight games for the Pistons.

Darnell Hillman, with 10 points, and Billy Knight, with eight, had brought the Pacers back from a seven-point deficit to an 82-81 lead going into the final period. Then Indiana moved in front by a five-point margin before the Pistons took off with their winning

RANKIN-The Rankin Red Devils opened the District 6-A cage race here Friday night with a 72-63 victory over

Van Horn, who figured to be one of the league contenders this year, is now 0-1 in the loop race. Rankin is now 6-5 on the year and 1-0 in district competition.

Rankin sent four players into the double digits. Michael Dupriest led the way with 20 points while Lynn Parker, Randy Doege and Randy Golson each had 14 markers in the fast getaway.

Darrell Evans had 20 points to lead

Van Horn. Sanchez had 13 while Melendez and Valdez each had 10 as Van Horn also had four in double figures.

The Rankin girls also captured a district victory with an 89-34 win over Van Horn. Lerii Fitzhugh amassed 32 points to lead all scorers while Joyce Plagens and Cathy Hughes each canned 20 markers. Vicki Corrills led Van Horn with 28 points.

Age-shooter Vannaman back with eagle

Hogan Park Golf Pro

Remember George Vannaman, our one and only golfer to shoot his age at Hogan Park this year?

This month George accomplished another difficult feat by scoring an eagle two on the 380-yard par four

George scored the eagle with a perfect three-wood shot

STANDOUT AMONG the low scores at Hogan this month would have to be the fine round of 34-35-69 scored by Max Combs.

Max, a current five-handicapper may see his handicap dropping, if he continues to play sub-par golf. Congratulations, Max, on a superb round of golf.

THE GOLF shop and staff had so much fun with the turkey shoot in November, they've chipped in and purchased two turkeys. The turkeys will be given as closet-to-hole prizes on No. 3. One will be given today and another Sunday. The contest will be held at 3 p.m., both days.

Dallas Cowboys' Coach Tom Landry and quarterback Roger Staubach talk with an assistant on sidelines on the way to Dallas' Sunday playoff date

Pokes ready rinky-dink attack for Los Angeles

DALLAS (AP) — A year ago, when the Dallas Cowboys beat the Los Angeles Rams in the National Football Conference championship game the Cowboys won 37-7.

But several members of the Rams felt they had been more hoodwinked than physically beaten that day.

"Rinky dink," was a term used by several Ram players about the Cowboy spread formation. A little shovel pass from quarterback Roger Staubach to Preston Pearson off the spread formation was cited as high schoolish, even though it produced a

THERE ARE several of Landry's pet "exotics" which he hasn't us-ed—like the fullback pass or halfback pass-or a flanker reverse pass by Drew Pearson, a former schoolboy quarterback in New Jersey.

Pearson threw a touchdown pass off the reverse in 1974. It's his only National Football League attempt. Landry uses the weapons on hand. He no longer has Calvin Hill and Duane Thomas in the same backfield to grind down the opposition.

Landry has gone so far as to have his special assistant, Ermal Allen, scout the Cowboy play tendencies.

"Since Tom calls the plays he doesn't want to get into a rut where he is tipping off what he will do in certain situations," says Allen, who keeps a thick stack of recipe cards listing the tendencies of other teams and the

BY RODGER MC KOWN Texas Parks & Wildlife Department

During the first few days following the 1976 mule deer season in the Trans-Pecos Region of West Texas information was being sifted and sorted and other data, concerning, the season, was still being collected. It will be sometime next spring before final projections of deer harvest, hunter success are available. But the picture of the 1976 season that had begun to emerge just after it ended was indicating that the shortened season had produced the desired effect of reducing hunter pressure and deer harvest. Early indications also were that bucks were somewhat smaller than might have been expected and it appeared that the number of large, trophy racks was surprisingly low. Texas P&W biologists aged and weighed more than 300 mule deer bucks on a random sample basis throughout the nine counties of Trans-

A total of 369 bucks were aged. Average age of those deer was 4.12 years. A total of 333 field dressed bucks averaged 109.75 pounds.

HEAVIEST AVERAGE weight came from Culberson County where the average buck weighed 135 pounds. A total of 104 deer were weighed to arrive at that figure. The Culberson County deer were slightly older at 4.23 years than the overall average for the entire nine-county area. The lightest weight average was from Terrell County at 87.5 pounds, but average age of the deer there also were well below the overall average by 2.73 years. Other counties and average weight for deer sampled in those counties were: Brewster 110, Reeves 127, Hudspeth 116,57, Pecos 107.53; Jeff Davis 101.86 amd Presidio 119.24. The season got off to a slow start with the storm that moved through the Trans-Pecos opening weekend. Snow and icy conditions made it difficult for hunters to get around and wind and snow kept the deer from moving and made it difficult for hunters to find them. As the season progressed and weather conditions improved, the hunting also improved. There was some speculation that the cold season, but this condition never materialized. Very few of the bucks were reported showing signs of going

THE LARGEST buck that had been reported and recorded by P&WD field personnel in the first few days after the season was a 210-pounder from Culberson County. It had 12 points with a 26-inch spread. Most points reported was a 15-pointer from Brewster County, but antlers on that deer were not exceptionally heavy. A 12-pointer with heavy antlers and a 21inch spread came from the area between Alpine and Marfa.

A Brewster County hunter also took a buck that had 21 points on a nontypical rack. One branch of the antlers was normal and the other turned down instead of up.

FISHING REPORT — Whether cooler weather or other causes re responsible was not clear, but the fact remained that striped bass fishing at Lake E.V. Spence was booming. Almost every fishing party had reports of one or more of these goodsized fish, which ranged up to 10 1/4 pounds....Paul Varner, Midland, took a nine-pound striper; Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Aycock, Terry Aycock of Midland and R.B. Fields, Odessa, took eight stripers up to 81/4 pounds, W. D. Brown, Midland, landed three blacks to four pounds, and George Brickey, Midland, had two stripers to 41/2 pounds.

Fishing at Oak Creek Lake, crappie caught from the dock," meanwhile, was slow for bass, but crappie fishing has been good, according to Ike Pate, owner of the Sportsman's Lodge-Marina. The crappie are on the move as evidenced by the luck of R.C. Hedges, Oak Creek, and two friends who took over a 100 from one spot last week and two days later came up empty-handed in

"There have been some nice winter, fishing should be good. weather, experienced much earlier than normal for far West Texas, might trigger an earlier rutting season, but this condition never season, but this condition never the Rams' atom struck

The Cowboys have whipped the Rams twice in post-season and a regular season game since Jackson's performance that day but Dallas respects him like a fer de lance.

"I really don't care whether the Rams started (injured) Pat Haden or

James Harris at quarterback," says Cowboy free safety Cliff Harris. "Now, if you ask me had I rather see Harold Jackson or somebody else I can tell you pretty fast.' One of the keys to Dallas' 37-7 National Conference title victory over the Rams last year was shutting down Jackson with no receptions.

"Jackson can kill you if the defensive back freezes just for one instant." says Cowboy special assistant Ermal Allen.

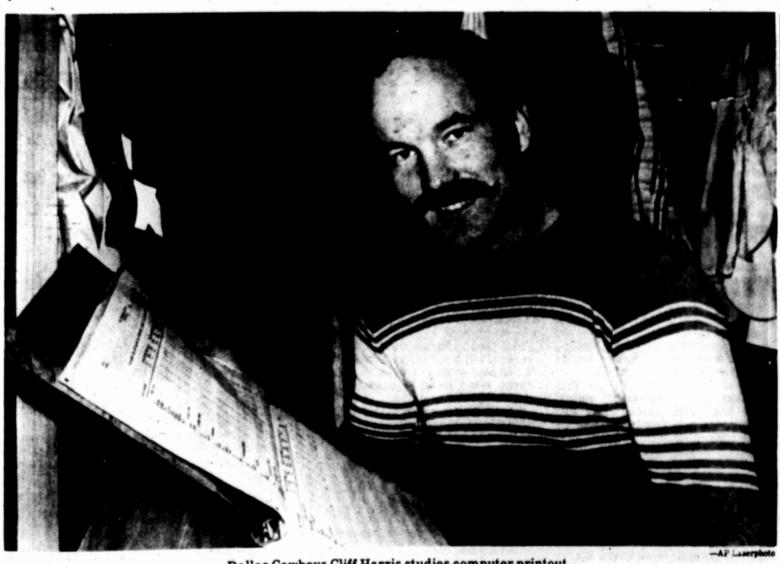

Strong safety Charlies Waters sees Harris as a streaky type of quarterback. The Cowboys intercepted Harris' first pass in the last playoff game and he was rendered inefhe's not he's not," says Waters. Waters adds "You're always aware of Jackson out there. He's sort of like Mel Gray of St. Louis. A constant Dallas Coach Tom Landry looks upon Harris as a "bad luck" quarterback.

"Harris has a lot of talent and the Detroit game where he came in for Pat Haden could be very significant," said Landry. "I'm sure it helped Harris' confidence."

Finley not only owner concerned over game

By NANCY SCANNELL The Washington Post

LOS ANGELES - It's not often that other baseball executives agree with Charlie Finley, but many of them share his concern about the potential impact of the new players' agreement on the sport's future.

In interviews at their annual winter meetings here last week, several executives expressed the same sentiments as the Oakland A's owner that the new labor pact with the players will lead to escalating salary demands that could force shutdowns of less-affluent clubs

But the club executives interviewed tempered their remarks by noting that the new four-year agreement is experimental and its long range effects might not be as drastic as some

The owners and players agreed on the new contract last summer after an arbitrator ruled, and the courts upheld, that pitcher Andy Messersmith could become a free agent after playing out his option year. The revolutionary ruling opened the door for other players to become free agents rather than being the exclusive property of their clubs which had historically held absolute rights to release, trade and sell them.

After 24 players became free agents at the end of last season, the clubs engaged in an unprecedented bidding war that sent salaries skyrocketing and virtually dismantled the powerful lineups of some teams, most notably the Oakland A's.

The clubs, fearing absolute chaos as other players become free agents over the next few years, bit the bullet and came up with the revolutionary new contract.

The contract provides for a player becoming a free agent after six years and allows him certain veto rights over which clubs he can be traded to In essence, the traditionally conservative owners semi-abolished their historie "slave system." And it is with some trepidation that they face the future. "I think in the year coming, there might be more upheaval from the standpoint of the player-talent shift." said John McHale of the Montreal

"The player who reachers star status is usually about 27 years old and his attraction to a city he wants to make his future home and where the market is for doing other things is going to become more important," he added in an obvious reference to the theory that most players will gravitate to New York and California

McHale added that many players will also want to go to the "Sun Belt," which will force clubs like Montreal. where the yearly snowfall averages 110 inches, "to get them with money.

clubs for commercial considerations.

Phil Seghi of the Cleveland Indians thinks baseball is in the throes of "a player quake that's going to cause a chaotic transition for the next couple of years.

Although he believes there are "many, many flaws" in the new contract. Seghi adds that "somehow, the fiber of the sport is strong enough to withstand whatever comes up."

Unlike some colleagues, Seghi says the new contract should help maintain competitive balance among the clubs since it will give them a shot at luring new talent they might not have gotten under the old system.

Peter Bavasi of the expansion Toronto Blue Jays sees two potential dangers with the new contract - the "enormity" of salaries and the possible destruction of competitive

"There will be a ripple effect from the escalating salaries and we'll have to pay more and more for their services which could cause a severe economic hardship on an industry which has merchandised itself as being available to everybody and everybody's family," Bavasi said, referring to possible increases in ticket prices to help meet operating costs.

"Sports is a license to lose money." said Dick O'Connell of the Boston Red Sox. "I'm upset, too. I don't like to see skyrocketing prices, but what are you going to do? (Baseball) had an op-portunity to head this off and failed."

The Red Sox had been slated to get Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi from Oakland in exchange for $2 million cash last summer until commissioner Bowie Kuhn vetoed the deal. Kuhn said such a deal - which also involved Oakland's sending Vida Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million - could destroy competitive balance as the wealthier clubs bought their way to championships.

"I told him (Kuhn) I realized why he didn't like it and that I agreed with him," O'Connell said. "But I told him I had to protect my franchise if these players were coming up for sale.

"There's no question they would have helped us win a pennant ... And in our business you have to gamble if you're trying to win a pennant."

O'Connell added that Marvis Miller, executive director of the players' union, "made a hell of contribution for them. Nov ballplayers have more stability that before the agreement. If (the Messersmith case) hadn't come up, it would eventually just be somebody else. Baseball was heading in that direction."

Bud Selig of the Milwaukee Brewers said he does not think competitive balance was destroyed in this year's free agent draft, but that he is "very, very concerned about the future.

Selig said that he probably "would have been tarred and feathered if we hadn't picked up Sal Bando" from Oakland since the public is now expecting clubs to go after the superstars with no holds barred.

Klammer flashes to win in World Cup Downhill

VAL GARDENA, Italy (AP) -Franz Klammer won the men's World Cup downhill race in this Italian resort Friday with his patented display of daring and speed.

The Austrian flashed down the 3,750-meter Sasionch track in 2 minutes 3.83 seconds, more than one second faster than Herbert Plank of Italy, but he said he was not pleased with his performance.

"I MADE a mistake early in the race, at the very first curve, and that cost me precious time." the 22-yearold Olympic champion said. "From there on, however, everything went smooth and I won with no problem.

Plank, a bronze medalist at the Innsbruck Olympics, was clocked in 2:04.91, the opening downhill for the men's World Cup season.

Norway's Eric Haker finished third in 2:05.27, edging the Olympic silver medalist. Swiss veteran Bernhard Russi, who was timed in 2:06.21.

Russi survived a mishap within sight of the finish line, on a steep wall down the last 400 meters of the course. He banged his left arm on the ice, but managed to complete the race although clearly suffering from the

The Austrians placed six men in the top 10 in Friday's downhill. Rising star Anton Steiner was fifth in 2:06.23. Peter Winsberger seventh in 2:06.44, Werner Grissmann eighth in 2:06.54, Ulrich Spiess ninth in 2:06.86 and Hans Enn 10th in 2:06.91.

Walter Tresch of Switzerland was sixth in 2:06.31.

And now, it's violent spectators' world of sports

By BILL NACK Newsday

NEW YORK -- Item: With less than a minute remaining in a game between the Vikings and the Cowboys in Bloomington, Dallas takes the lead on a disputed touchdown pass from Roger Staubach to Drew Pearson, virtually assuring a Vikings' defeat, and disappointed fans go bonkers. One end of the field becomes a rain of whisky bottles, golfballs, beer cans, flasks; at the other, two police officers stop fights among drunks. A whisky bottle, lofted from the stands. strikes referee Armen Terzian in the head, knocking him semiconscious and opening his forehead

Item: Chris Chambliss sends the Yankees into the World Series with a ninth-inning home run against the Royals. Fans pour onto the field, knock Chambliss down before he reaches second base, maul him at third base, practically prevent him from scoring. Then they proceed to tear up hundreds of feet of infield and outfield grass and the padding on the Item: Fans at Foxboro, Mass., descend onto the field after their Patriots beat the Jets, 41-7. Teen-agers tackle friends and strangers. Beer bottles fly. An old woman is struck in the head by a bottle. Two men have fatal heart attacks; someone urinates on an ambulance attendant who is trying to save one of them by mouth-tomouth resusciation. Twenty-three people go to jail, 30 to the hospital.

SO MUCH for the incidents most notorious. Spectator violence, in varying degree, is becoming as much a part of the game as the crossbody block or the fastball down and in. In the preliminary draft of a report entitled "The Potential for Violence by Spectators at Sports Events," which grew out of a recent conference sponsored by the New York Institute of Technology and the International Association of Chiefs of Police, Prof. Edward P. Powers and Irving Goldaber wrote

"The specter of violence by and among spectators is slowly emerging as a sporadic but active ingredient of sports events. This violence ranges from the throwing of debris onto a playing field to the clashing of fans supporting opposing teams or the destroying of property within or outside the stadium ... Unless effective preventive, coping and controlling mechanisms are developed and utilized, it is not unreasonable to assume that someday fans entering a stadium will routinely be made to pass through airport-type security screening devices ...

POWERS, THE director of the College Accelerated Program for Police Officers at New York Tech, and Goldaber, a sociologist and consultant to the program, are setting up a center at the institute to study systematically the phenomenon of spectator violence at sports events and to develop ways to deal with it.

There is the uncontrolled exuberance of the crowd, as after the Chambliss homer, and the violence of folks given courage by alcohol. But happiness and wine-bibeing, often as an entry, have been with us since the first gorrilla shed his hair and settled the Euphrates; so nothing is new there. What is new, and what explains the increase in spectator violence the last dozen years, has to do with the fan's need to feel significant, to identify with his team, to feel fulfilled by his team's victory.

"My major point is that the in-diminished," Goldaber said. "We are living in a world which is expanding. It's tougher to make a living today, to make ends meet, and the pressures on us are so enormous that the average guy has to have a sanctuary where he feels important. The grandstand is available. It's an inexpensive and easy way for a guy to feel important. The average guy in today's world works hard and has to make it for self-value, for self-aggrandizement, and the easiest way to make it is to be involved in and win an adversary clash in a sports event ... The need to feel macho is escalating, and at the same time there's the chipping away of the old restraints.' Hence, where 25 years ago no fan impeded Bobby Thomson's progress around the bases — in one of the most potentially volatile, unbelievable moments in the history of sports -

dividual today has become Chambliss barely made it to the dugout, and needed a police escort to

> "WE LEARNED from the director of public safety of Oklahoma that when the Oklahoma Sooners lose, the accident rate on the way out of the football stadium goes up," Goldaber said. "The home fans have a vested interest in winning because it augments their power, satisfying their need for power as human beings. Since they have to win, since their team has to win, they will help out in doing what they can. Throwing things, whatever they can do

> ... The uniqueness is the fans now believe they have the right to help determine the outcome of the game they're part of the team. There has always been a fan enthusiasm. In fact, you need it for psychological reasons.

For work and for play. Our '77 Jeep vehicles make a lot of sense. They're built to take punishment with the famous Jeep 4-wheel drive go-anywhere capability. Tough, dependable 4-WD that's built-in, not added on.

And only Jeep offers a full line of 4-whee!

drive vehicles. There's CJ-5 and CJ-7, the sporty Jeep vehicles with rugged Jeep guts and power to spare. 2-door and new

4-door Cherokees for active, outdoor sports-loving families. Wagoneer for the ultimate in 4-WD luxury and performance.

And tough Jeep Pickups that are equally at home on the job or out performing in

"Jeep Country". We've got 'em all. And you can make them as individual as you are with a full range of performance, appearance and convenience options specially
