A WHITE LINE intended to mark the highway's boundary strays off the pavement of a Crawford County road near Meadville, Pa., after a Pennsylvania Department of Transportation line-painting crew laid the line on the dirt- and snow-covered shoulder Dec. 6. Two members of the crew have been dismissed since.

Jobs program to be pushed

Democratic leaders, declaring an end to an era of disputes between the White House and Congress, say they are going to work at once on a plan to double the effect of the nation's public works job program.

The proposal amounts to disclosure of the first major element of President-elect Carter's package of programs that will be aimed at stimulating the economy.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright made the announcement at a Thursday news conference, saying a cornerstone of Carter's program to stimulate the national economy will be creation of at least 150,000 jobs through the additional funding of public works projects.

The Democratic leadership will sponsor a public works jobs bill, already approved by Carter, and will see that informal hearings on the proposal begin next week, even though the House won't be formally organized until late January, Wright

The new public works jobs program could range in cost between $2 billion and $4 billion, he said. An outlay of $2 billion would have the effect of doubling the current federal public

Wright said the program will create between 150,000 and 300,000 new jobs directly and a similar number in-Announcement of the plan from

Democratic leaders in Congress appeared to be an effort to add emphasis to Carter's vow of cooperation, and Wright declared: "The era of confrontation between the executive and legislative branches has ended." The last Congress funded $2 billion in public works jobs after President Ford vetoed a plan that could have used up to $6 billion.

Wright said the Democratic leadership of Congress will meet with Carter in Plains, Ga., on Jan. 7 to work out details of the new jobs program and to discuss other economic stimulation proposals.

Wright said the amount of money for the program will depend on Carter's assessment of the economic situation in late January.

The first 2,000 projects under the current works program were chosen earlier this month for funding by the Economic Development Administration. The agency has a backlog of applications for $22 billion for other projects and Wright said some of these could be funded by spring if new money and authority is voted by Congress.

The projects range from construction of sewer lines to building of parks and hospitals. Local governments choose the public works projects they believe should have highest priority.

Cold front chills Basin

From an unseasonably warm high of 70 degrees Thursday, temperatures in Midland had plunged to a new record low of 14 degrees this morning.

Temperatures dropped 16 degrees, from 70 degrees to 54 degrees, between 1:45 and 2:45 p.m. Thursday, as a cold front blustered in.

The previous record for new New Year's Eve was 16 degrees set in 1946. Mercury watchers within the city reported temperatures this morning as low as 11 degrees.

More cold weather is in store for the area through the weekend with a predicted low tonight in the mid-20s and a high Saturday in the low 40s. Skies should be mostly cloudy and the cold may be compounded by rain. There is a 20 per cent chance of rain Saturday, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds should be from the southeast at 5 to 10 mph tonight.

Area cities shared Midland's cold weather. Temperatures of 12 degrees in Andrews and 16 degrees in Rankin were the result of the cold front that has set Permian Basin residents to Cold weather was reported also in Lamesa, Crane and Stanton. Skies were clear this morning in Lamesa, Crane, Stanton and Rankin but partly cloudy in Andrews and Big Lake.

Texans elsewhere in the state awoke to the coldest weather of the season on this last day of 1976, light snow fell in some areas and threats of rain, sleet and snow lay ahead for the rest of the New Year's weekend.

Temperatures plunged within a few degrees of zero in early morning, and freezing weather knifed all the way south to the Upper Texas Coast, the Associated Press said.

Snow started near dawn in the middle of the state from around

Brownwood to Lampasas and Llano. Light rain dotted West Texas from Sonora toward Ozona and Sanderson, farther south between San Antonio and Uvalde, and near the Middle Texas Coast Mostly clear skies helped the mercury to plunge across the north and central parts of the state. A broad band of clouds kept things a bit warmer south of a line from Del Rio to College Station.

Forecasts held out prospects for light snow in the west and south parts of North Texas, and scattered rain and a mixture of snow and rain in West Texas and the north part of South Texas tonight and Saturday. There were indications the wintry siege could continue into Monday for most sections.

Thermometers dived to 9 degrees at Amarillo and Wichita Falls. Readings at other points included Abilene and Lubbock 10, Childress 11, Dallas-Fort Worth 14, Tyler 15, San Angelo 16 and Longview and Midland-Odessa 18. Outside the colder areas the mercury stayed as high as 55 at Brownsville in the semitropical Lower Rio Grande

Study cites solar energy economy

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Solar energy can now be as economical a source of heat as hot water and electricity in 12 of 13 cities across the United States, according to a government study.

The study, prepared for the Energy Research and Development Administration, makes a number of assumptions - such as an annual 10 per cent rise in fuel costs - that are important to the final conclusion. In some cases, ERDA officials acknowledged, if the assumptions prove faulty, the report's conclusion cannot stand.

According to the report, the high initial cost of a solar heating installation will average out to lower heating bills in five or fewer years in the 12 cities as opposed to heating bills for an electric system.

In addition, the report claims, the use of solar heating — instead of elec-trical — will pay the homeowner back the initial costs of installation within 15 years or less. A solar installation must have a supplementary backup system for extremely cold or overcast

ERDA officials acknowledged that electricity is the least efficient and thus the most expensive method of heating a home. At the same time, it is a method that is widely used.

According to ERDA, 49 per cent of the homes completed in 1974 and 1975 were electrically heated.

The report assumes a cost of $20 a square foot to buy and install a solar heating and hot water system at present. If the cost were reduced to $15, the report says, solar heat would be competitive with oil heat in six cities — Atlanta, Bismarck, N.D.; Charleston, S.C.; Grand Junction, Colo.; Los Angeles and Miami.

At $10 a square foot, the report says, solar heating would be competitive with oil in all 13 cities - Boston, Columbia, Mo., Dallas-Fort Worth, Tex.; Madison, Wis.; New York, Seattle and Washington, in addition to the previous six.

Seattle, with relatively little sunshine and cheap electrical power, is the only one of the 13 cities where solar heat would not be competitive with electricity.

At $10 a square foot for purchase and installation, the report states, solar heat would also be competitive with natural gas - now the cheapest fuel for home heating in general use — in all the cities studied except Bismarck, Charleston, Columbia and Maggie Gale grieves as she rests on the old rocking chair where her husband used to sit and watch the outside world. He's dead and buried now.

It's hard being alone after 'so many years'

The old, patched-up rocking chair sits empty and motionless on the porch of the old, patched-up shack.

That friendly fellow who used to sit there and wave to the passers-by is gone now. Maybe you never shook his hand or chewed the fat with him. But you miss seeing him, speaking to him across the way with your eyes and a wave of the hand.

And you miss seeing this old man, older than his years, resting easily in that chair and clasping a green bottle or jug of wine. In the mornings, you'd see him with his cup of coffee.

You imagined that he drifted into occasional comfort with the drink. And even before you finally did get to know him through his grieving widow and saddened friends, you figured he was not doing too well. There's a certain amount of misery to be exacted from being poor, really poor, especially amid the pains of old age.

You're certain that death is closing in. It's not in the distant and hazy future, as it was in youth.

Raymond Gale was only 65 when he died of a heart attack at his shanty here about 9:30 p.m. on a Thursday. It was Dec. 9.

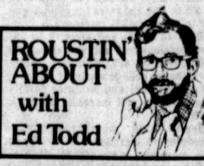

"I was so shocked . . .," said his wife of almost 30 years, Maggie Gale. She turned 70 on Christmas day. "I'm kind of getting out of the shock, and now grief has hit."

Mrs. Gale, a slight lady who wears her hair in a bun, recalled the day of her man's death. She'll not forget it.

He walked the few blocks over to the county welfare office, where he talked with Marceille Moore, the program's director. She sort of looked after the Gales.

"She's been a white lady to us," Mrs. Gale said of the welfare director.
"She's wonderful to as." She "took care" of Gale's hospital expenses when he suffered a heart attack some

On the day of his last stroll, Gale went over to the Salvation Army, where he signed up for some free groceries for the wife and himself.

Mrs. Moore told him how to go about

"They give us poor people a box (of groceries) for Christmas," Mrs. Gale

Before he left the Salvation Army, Gale picked up a couple of small drinking glasses and a cup. He carried them home. "I sure do like this little cup," she

That evening, Gale soaked his of-ten-swollen feet in a foot pan and then went into the small, dingy bathroom. "Maggie," he had called to his wife, "you better get in here with a wet towel." He was feeling sickly.

Mrs. Gale said she "wasn't paying much attention" to him. "And before I could get in," Mrs. Gale said, "I heard two groans ... horrible groans."

He was dead.

"I still was in a daze," she said. She wailed and cried and cried.

A few days later, this old man, who had labored in South Texas rice fields as a boy, who had worked in East Texas cotton fields and gins as a young man, and who had toiled in West Texas construction work and then over the shoe-shine rag in later years, was buried in a plot at the county cometery. county cemetery.

"I did just what any wife would do," she said. "Try to put him away decent. . . He's buried in the suit his boss gave him."

He wanted to be buried elsewhere — in his home town of Eagle Lake.

Shooting leaves man 'critical'

A 43-year-old Midland man was in critical condition this morning at Odessa Medical Center Hospital before surgery after receiving a gunshot wound in the head during the early morning hours.

Joe Day, a Midland county resident, was shot once in the head with a .22 caliber rifle in the 900 block of South Mineola Street shortly before 3 a.m. today, according to police reports.

A suspect has been taken into custody and was being interrogated by police detectives this morning, Detective Lt. Earl Luckie said.

The shooting incident reportedly followed an argument concerning the victim's alleged behavior to a mutual acquaintance.

Following the argument the assailant allegedly followed Day to his parked automobile and pointed a .22 caliber rifle to the window, police

The rifle discharged, and the bullet shattered the car's front window, striking Day in the upper portion of his skull, police said.

There were two adult passengers and a small child in the car with Day

Carter seeks public suggestions

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) - Presidentelect Carter, worrying about moving into the "strange and unnatural world" of the White House, says he wants public suggestions on how he can break free of the isolation of the presidency and keep in touch with ordinary citizens.

Closing out a year that brought him from relative obscurity to the nation's highest office, Carter said through a spokesman that he wants written suggestions on how to keep from becoming insulated from the crowds that pass by outside the White House

Carter Press Secretary Jody Powell said public suggestions along this line can be sent to "People," Box 2600, Washington, D.C., 20013.

The President-elect planned a quiet New Year's weekend after meeting Thursday with former Maine Gov. Kenneth Curtis, who indicated he is Carter's choice to be the next chairman of the Democratic National Committee

Carter also issued a New Year's statement in which he said he believed 1977 would be a year when Americans can "put old divisions behind us," and he expressed pleasure with the tone of exchanges so far with Soviet leaders.

Powell, in the last of hundreds of campaign-year news briefings, said Carter probably will make a "swing around the country" after his second or third month in office in an effort to keep in close touch with citizens and their everyday concerns.

Powell indicated that various regions would be visited to give Carter "a chance to see and talk to people who would not have an opportunity to travel to Washington."

The press secretary noted that as governor of Georgia Carter opened his office door to all comers at least once a month and met with them about their individual problems that involved state government. "Obviously something like this is a matter of consideration," said

Powell, acknowledging that the security precautions that envelop a president raise questions about doing the same sort of thing at the White A special staff group is being formed to study the whole question,

Powell reported, and it is this group that will consider suggestions submitted by the public. The President-elect, who moves into the White House on Jan. 20, planned to spend a quiet New Year's holiday at home here, and Powell said there would be no new an-funeral expenses, much less the cost of transporting a coffin almost across the state. "That was his design, if he passed before I do, to send him home. Today, Mrs. Gale, like widows across the country, is living alone. "Since he's gone," she said, "seems

I don't rest like I used to." They had slept in separate beds, Mrs. Gale said. But after his death, she moved over to his larger bed. Sleeping there somehow soothed her. She said they didn't do "too much talking" because "we've been together for so many years." 'We were really partners in life." she said. "We loved one another."

The welfare lady, Marceille Moore, didn't learn of Gale's death until three weeks after his final groan. "I haven't had the heart (to tell her)," Mrs. Gale said. "She's sure been good to us." There was no notice of his death in the obituary columns of the newspaper.

"I hope she'll be able to manage." Mrs. Moore said when she first learned of Gale's passing. "They were so dependent on one another. I've always been fond of them."

Mrs. Gale expressed concern about living alone. (She keeps up two cats, a Persian named Pete and an unnamed calico. They were her husband's favorites, especially shaky old Pete, who, like his former master, looks older than his years.)

"I hope I won't be here by myself for too long," she said. Mrs. Gale said she's considering moving in with a kinfolk in Midland She is without a radio or television set to try to offset the loneliness of "I had a little radio and gave it to his daughter's children," she said. "(And) the last one (TV set) we bought, it just blowed out." They paid $40 for that one at a pawn shop here. And they never did scratch up enough money from their welfare "allowance" to buy another used set.

Of course, she makes sure that her allowance pays for the food tab. She, by habit and circumstance, doesn't eat high on the hog.

"This is old salt pork," she said, as she was thoroughly chewing on the hog-fat sandwich. A pot of stew was cooking on the gas stove.

"I was raised on it (salt pork), and I like it. We had chicken on Sunday back on the farm." She grew up at Cooper, in Northeast Texas, and pulled cotton bolls produced from that black land country. In later years, in Midland, she worked in laundries, in cafes as a dishwasher and as a cleaning lady.

For years, Raymond Gale shined shoes over at the OK Barber Shop on Midland's southside. He wasn't able to handle strenuous work since he was injured while working at a cotton gin many years ago.

Gale talked a lot; that was part of the shoe-shine business. Recalled William "Slim" Shelby.

who years ago used to shine shoes and made a decent living at it: "You had to talk a lot," Shelby said. "You had to tell a lot of jokes." He said that he and Gale used to talk about the "different types of people" who would sit on their shoe-shine stands. They were as entertained by that, possibly, as their regular customers were by the talking, jawing and joking that went along with the art of popping that ol' shoe-shine rag. Robert Pate was another friend. "He was a very nice guy. He talked a right smart," Pate said of Gale.

"He cared about people, for one thing ... about people doing right with each other ... sort of a philosopher."

Philosopher or not, Raymond Gale has gone to the grave. And Maggie Gale, for one, longs for him.

Beer, wine sales jump first Big Spring hurdle

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring City Council Thurday took the first step toward legalizing Sunday beer and wine sales within Big Spring by passing an ordinance to authorize such sales.

The measure passed on first reading by a 3 to 1 margin with one abstention. Council members Ralph McLaughlin and Polly Mays and Mayor Wade Choate voted for the ordinance. Harold Hall voted against allowing the sales and Charles Tompkins abstained because of a conflict of interest.

To become effective, the measure must pass on second reading in

The issue was discussed last week but the absence of Choate caused a 2-1 vote, less than a quorum.

All not that well in Hua's China

TOKYO (AP) - New reports of violence in China suggest that though Mao Tse-tung's widow and her three leading party allies are under arrest, their radical followers still pose a powerful threat to the new Peking

Mao's successor, Communist party Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, recognized this danger in a Dec. 25 speech when he called on the masses to "wage a people's war" in 1977 against "the gang of four" and their adherents. The latest reports say armed radicals clashed with the ruling moderates in Paoting, a key rail center 100 miles southwest of Peking. It took a "concerted effort" by the army to put an end to "great chaos" in the city, the official reports said. They did not say when the violence occurred. Hua said last weekend that a planned coup by radicals led by Mao's widow, Chiang Ching, was put down "without firing a single shot or shedding a drop of blood." Hua insisted the situation was "very stable" in the aftermath of the arrest of the four radicals in October on charges of treason.

Enough seems to have happened in Paoting, however, to cast doubt on It may be surprising that more serious cases of unrest have not been reported, given China's vastness, its huge population and the fact that the radicals were strongly influential in the decade preceding Mao's death last September.

In gaining power, the moderates had the backing of the 2.5million-man army, the party elders and the immense Chinese bureaucracy. As long as these elements remain firm, and as long as they continue to control the mass media, they seem likely to prevail.

Against these powerful institutions, Chiang Ching's faction could count on some elements of the militia, millions of radical-minded youths trained as "Red Guards" during the 1966-69 Cultural Revolution and later in the universities, and thousands of party cadres who owed their jobs to Madame Mao.

The moderate press claims that Chiang Ching's efforts to subvert the militia in Shanghai and elsewhere were stopped by loyal militiamen and that Shanghai's workers have turned gainst the four, who had depended on that port city of 10 million as a power

But little has been said about the current role of the students, who only a few months ago were denouncing the moderate policies of the late Premier Chou En-lai and - if the moderates are to be believed - never

After the United States changes over to metric measurements, the average citizen will find that grocery shopping will be somewhat dif-ferent. HOUSTON (AP) - Oilmen say 1976 has been a year of contrasts and uncertainty and they anticipate 1977 will be quite similar. Lagging domestic production and spiraling imports highlight the contrasts. The new Congress and new administration in Washington underscore the uncertainty. For the consumer, one thing appears certain. Prices will continue to

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) boosted crude oil prices in mid-December as the Ford administration studied the advisability of proposing, before leaving office, that gasoline prices be decontrolled.

Oilmen, meanwhile, awaited clues that might indicate the direction and emphasis President-elect Jimmy Carter will place on energy matters.

Clifton C. Garvin Jr., board chairman of the giant Exxon Corp., viewed the late December uncertainty this way:

"I can't read what the Congress is going to do in the new session... I very candidly don't know Governor Car-

OIL & GAS Although facing consumer group court challenges, the Federal Power Commission, seeking new supplies for interstate markets, boosted the price for new 1975-1976 gas from 52 cents to $1.42 per 1,000 cubic feet.

And oilmen are hopeful a 1976 nearmiss for congressional decontrol of natural gas prices will become a reality in 1977. The Senate voted to decontrol prices for new gas dedicated to interstate markets but the House rejected a similar measure, 205-201.

Industry leaders plan to revive the issue early in the new session but acknowledge quick success probably would require a strong endorsement from Carter.

At the same time, the industry anticipates renewed congressional attempts to break up major oil companies.

They were encouraged by the outcome of 1976 public hearings on vertical divestiture proposals that would have separated the producing and marketing segments of the industry, but have particular fear of possible 1977 horizontal divestiture efforts that would prevent oil companies from operating in other energy ields such as coal

Meanwhile, the industry was preparing to start production from Alaska's prolific Prudhoe Bay region and begin oil and gas explorations off the Atlantic Coast

The scheduled mid-1977 opening of the Trans-Alaska pipeline will, for the first time, provide a market outlet for the vast North Slope crude oil reserves discovered in 1968.

area, however, remains years away. Federal approval of a gas pipeline route is not expected for months. At yearend, a FPC staff report suggested a line across Canada into the Midwest. d to be moving 1.2 million barrels of crude a day by the end of 1977 or early

West Coast refineries do not now need such quantities, however, and California is objecting to a proposed pipeline that would connect with lines serving the Gulf Coast and Midwest.

Tanker shipments to the Gulf and East coasts are being planned but the Federal Energy Administration has frowned on suggestions for a temporary swapout arrangement that would divert some Alaskan crude to Foreign oil met more than 40 per cent of the nation's requirements as domestic crude oil production declined for a sixth consecutive year in 1976 and demand for petroleum products approached the record preembargo level of 1973.

Crude production averaged about 8.15 million barrels a day, compared with 8.362 million in 1975 and the alltime high of 9.637 million barrels daily

The production decline continued despite a 14-year high for drilling activity that saw the industry complete 29,431 oil, gas and dry wells the he year compared with 25,729 the comparable year earlier period. Oil imports soared more than 15 per cent to average about 7 million barrels a day compared with the preembargo level of 6.256 million in 1973 and only 3.419 million in 1970. The FEA estimated the 1976 expenditure for foreign oil at $34 billion, compared with $3 billion in 1970.

Increased Alaskan production will offset some of the domestic decline and replace some imported oil, but industry sources say such trends will be only for the short term because of anticipated increases in demand. Domestic demand in 1976 was expected to average about 16.847 million barrels a day, compared with 16.294 million in 1975 and the all-time high of 17.308 million in 1973. Preliminary estimates for 1977 have run as high as 17.9 million barrels a day, "back to the preembargo pattern," according to Natural gas production from the Exxon's Garvin.

Inoculation program

It is said that a medical student will believe he has had every disease known to mankind before he completes his training. Much the same psychology prevails in the troubled swine flu program which has been getting an anxious shaking down each time a cluster of ailments or deaths occur that are not obviously or directly attributable to the vaccine.

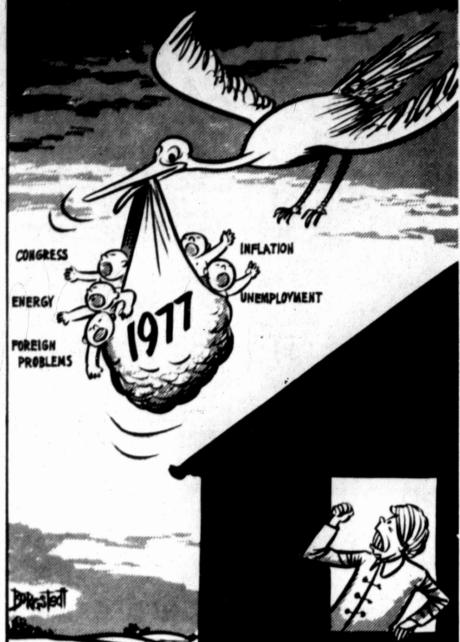

The effort to vaccinate the majority of Americans against the possibility of catching swine flu has a brief history of sickness itself. Many persons apparently decided against having a swine flu shot back in August when two months of malpractice insurance debate rocked Congress and the medical profession. The fear then was that large malpractice suits could result; this in turn suggested that something was wrong with the program.

The program took another blow last October when a check was made to determine whether swine flu vaccine endangered the lives of senior citizens. And the current investigation as to whether the inoculations are responsible for Guillain Barre syndromes partial paralyses - may well deliver the coup de grace to the program, very soon, provided there is no massive outbreak.

If so, that would be regrettable Largely overlooked is the fact that the swine flu vaccine program also offered protection for many recipients against A Victoria flu which doctors believe may surface this winter.

Apprehensions and superstitions are common in many things related to sickness and medicine. It takes a prolonged, concerted effort to establish the effectiveness of any vaccine and to have it accepted by the public at large.

Even if this one inoculation program is discontinued, attempts to immunize the American population against all communicable diseases must continue.

"Happy New Year, Jimmy!"

PENNSYLVANIA AVENUE: Federal officials pay is taxing issue

By BENJAMIN SHORE Copley News Service

WASHINGTON - How much is a federal "public servant" worth in hard currency? Most taxpayers, fed up with bureaucratic inefficiency and disclosures of corruption and conflict of interest, would say politicians, judges and bureaucrats as a group are overpaid. President Ford before he leaves office or Jimmy Carter shortly after he becomes president will have to deal with the question of executive-level salaries.

They have before them a thoughtful report by Peter Peterson, a former Commerce secretary under President Nixon and today a wealthy New York businessman, who chaired a special government commission to study the whole salary issue.

The real problem is convincing hard-pressed taxpayers that a government position paying $45,000 or more, plus attractive fringe benefits, should pay even more.

It is a delicate problem politically because many officials aren't worth half their present salaries.

Congress especially is a frustrating situation. All its members are elected and all are paid the same to do basically the same job. But it is obvious to even a casual observer that many are greatly overpaid in relation to the quality of their work.

Peterson and others are concerned about the growing resistance of businessmen, lawyers, scholars and others to leave their present positions. even temporarily as in the case of a presidential appointment.

While many decline government job offers because they feel the bureaucracy would frustrate them, others are simply concerned over the financial picture. Mr. Carter has learned this the hard way in his recruitment efforts. How does a president or a Cabinet officer convince a successful businesman or lawyer to give up the fruits of that success and serve the public if such service requires substantial personal sacrifice?

He doesn't do it easily. He increasingly finds himself limited to extremely wealthy individuals (whose wealth often is derived from associations that could raise questions about conflict of interest) or young inexperienced persons who see government service as a stepping-stone to higher positions upon return to private life.

There was a time not too long ago when many successful citizens considered government service a noble. often fulfilling, experience. Some presidents were able to inspire this attitude.

But revelations of corruption around the White House and on Capitol Hill have made all public servants suspect in the eyes of many taxpayers. .

Since the majority of these people are honest and hardworking and eager to do a good job for their government, the public's suspicionfrequently beats them down and out.

Furthermore, the rising cost of living and uncertainty about the economic future are making prospective public servants think ong, and hard about leaving their present positions, even temporarily.

It's hard to expect qualified people to make personal sacrifices that most of us would not make. And it's easy, to imagine the quality of persons willing. to accept positions others turn down solely for personal financial reasons.

It would seem, therefore, that an immediate upward adjustment in pay will be necessary.

We may deplore the loss of a spirit of "public service" but we cannot ignore reality. Would you take a pay cut to work as a federal judge or as a bureaucrat?

The late Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago hated the word "boss," insisting that he was the first of the new leaders rather than the last of the old ones.

Actually, the colorful and powerful mayor of Chicago probably was neither.

The Tammany Hall or Pendergast ward heeling, patronage own in the United States, despite the rash of election purity laws. Frank Rizzo, the mayor of Philadelphia, is a prototype who comes to mind readily. Consequently the possibility of future "bosses" along the Daley lines cannot be dismissed.

And against the backdrop of the clean election laws, the late Mayor Daley hardly could have been considered the first of the new generation of leaders.

In short, Mayor Daley's death was not the end of an era and it's too early to tell whether it will mark a new one in Chicago.

Mayor Daley was a forceful individual, a superb politician, a person who understood the applications of power and, surprisingly, a good mayor for the city of Chicago.

Not the least of his attributes were his tenacity and perseverance. His mortal obituaries here appeared in the papers. His political obituaries have been written many times during his career as proteges went to jail or were defeated at the polls, when he was seemingly drummed out of the Democratic party at its convention in 1972, and on numerous other occasions. But he persisted and became one of America's legendary figures, whose feats will be recounted for generations. He was one of a kind. Whatever else is said about him there is no doubt that he lent zest to politics and loomed large on the political landscape.

May he rest in peace.

Pipeline security worries CIA

By JACK ANDERSON and LES

WASHINGTON - The Central Intelligence Agency, apparently concerned about sabotage by foreign governments or terrorists, has quietly been sending agents north to inspect the Alaskan pipeline.

The CIA is also worried, say our Soviet Union, or other nations, may have planted agents among the pipeline workers.

Internal documents from the Interior Department say that a CIA team was particularly interested in the giant Prudhoe oil field, the key pipeline terminal at Valdez, and the bustling Cook Inlet production facility. Coincidently, investigators for the Senate Internal Security subcommittee are preparing a report that will show huge gaps existing in present federal and state plans to safeguard the pipeline. Squabbling among various government agencies and Alyeska. the firm developing the multibilliondollar oil project, has created severe security problems, the committee has discovered.

Tighter security is badly needed at such critical points as pumping stations north of the Yukon, which, if destroyed, could shut off the vital flow of oil for as long as a year, the subcommittee found.

The Senate investigators also have reviewed possible scenarios for a major war, limited warfare or sabotage over the pipeline. The subcommittee's final report will recommend methods of handling such crises without a total halt of oil shipments to the rest of the United States.

There is no easy way, the committee has tentatively concluded, to effectively protect the long pipeline. which runs through some of the world's most rugged, frozen terrain. In fact, one congressional expert told

A clique of colonels led out to pasture by the Pentagon is meticulously taking care of the military's oil needs at the expense of industry, other federal agencies and the consumer.

At least 70 former brass hats are in high-level jobs, and the overall percentage of ex-military officers at FEA is more than twice that of the average federal agency.

Among the entrenched oil colonels, a persistent offender is Col. Don

According to internal documents, Allen and two other colonels, George Hall and Richard Johnson, have teamed up to give the Pentagon such favors as providing posh service clubs with priority oil during the fuel shortage. This was in violation of the FEA's own rules, insiders say.

In addition, ex-Gen. Gorham Smith, an FEA assistant administrator, also employed some dubious methods to keep the fuel flowing to the Pentagon until supplies increased.

Disgruntled career civil servants finally urged FEA chief Frank Zarb to crack down on the colonels. But the timid Zarb assigned yet another colonel, Thomas Noel, to investigate the situation.

The probe by Noel's office turned up "pocket of retired military" ... in fact, states the report, "a military clique exists.'

Not surprisingly, though, Noel's office minimized the colonels' influence and tried to undermine the courageous employees who had rightfully questioned the set-up. Col. Noel has now been replaced by

By ROWLAND EVANS And ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON - The reason the usual seasonal smiles were not on the faces of top officials and staffers at AFL-CIO headquarters when they sat down to their annual Christmas luncheon was expressed candidly by one leader: "He didn't give us anything, and we don't owe him

"He" is President-elect Carter, and what he did not give the AFL-CIO was Dr. John Dunlop of Harvard as Secretary of Labor. Actually, the aggrieved union officials have no great preference for Dunlop over Carter's choice, Dr. Ray Marshall of The University of Texas. Rather, the President-elect's decision not to select Dunlop was such a chilling rebuff because it placed them far lower on the political influence ladder than they imagined themselves to be.

Rarely has an event so lacking in policy significance been so rich in political innuendo. Dunlop's rejection illustrated power realities within the Democratic coalition, the unwritten taboos prevailing there and the split inside organized labor. It also typifies occasional Carter clumsiness, this time making the worst of a difficult

Immediately following the election. no cabinet post seemed easier to fill than Labor. President George Meany and the rest of the AFL-CIO hierarchy wanted Dunlop, who quit as President Ford's Secretary of Labor when he vetoed a union-backed picketing bill. Considering the unprecedented AFL-CIO campaign effort for Carter, labor chieftains in the Phillip Murray Building on 16th Street felt a proprietary interest over this one cabinet post. By mid-November, however, word was being passed that "Dunlop is bad on blacks and women," followed by formal opposition from the Congressional Black Caucus and the National Women's Political Caucus.

Like "Red" charges a generation ago. the accusation in itself convicted Dunlop; some Carter aides promptly began seeking an alternative.

Dunlop had broken what has become a Democratic party taboo: he had questioned details of "affirmative action," which boils down to mandatory hiring quotas of blacks and women for anybody doing business with the federal govern-

Dunlop sealed his fate in testifying before a House subcommittee June 19, 1975, when he questioned "the efficacy of using the government procurement process as an equal employment enforcement mechanism." Dunlop's stated doubts about imposing the quota system on federal contractors, rather than failure to enforce the law as charged. is the source of his trouble.

In a straight power test of womenblacks against labor, labor might have won. But it was not that simple. Organized labor is no monolith, and left-of-center unions which this year formed the Labor Clearinghouse Coalition were low on Dunlop. Indeed, opposition from the county, state and municipal workers (AFSCME), the machinists and other AFL-CIO unions in the Coalition was palpable.

But these labor leaders privately regarded the women-black com-plaints about Dunlop as demagogic nonsense. Their objections are economic. While a staunch champion of labor unions and collective bargaining. Dunlop tends to be a fiscal conservative. When he effectively argued against wage-price guideposts at the Carter economic briefing in Plains Dec. 1, Dunlop sounded more like Meany's old guard than the Coalition avant-garde.

Thus, the women-black veto of Dunlop was a smokescreen for ideological opposition within organized labor. Even so, Dunlop had a chance for survival so long as he received nominal support from president Leonard Woodcock of United Auto Workers (UAW), the Coalition's most influential figure. Not wishing to confront Meany on this issue, Woodcock endorsed Dunlop. But as opposition mounted, word seeped out of the UAW that Woodcock viewed him as entirely expendable.

Despite Carter's press conference statement Tuesday that Marshall was always his first choice, that name was not mentioned to the AFL-CIO even informally until Dec. 8. "If Carter had

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) -California must scrap its present property tax-based school financing system and replace it by 1980 with one providing equal educational opportunities for students in both rich and poor districts, the state Supreme Court has ruled

The court's 4 to 3 decision on Thursday declared that the present system violates the rights of the state's 4.5 million public elementary and high school pupils to equal protection guarantees in the state Constitution.

The decision made California the second state to declare illegal its method of paying for public education, since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in 1973 that property tax financing did not violate the federal dividual states. In January, the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled against property-tax financing there.

Sid Wolinsky, attorney for the plaintiffs in the case, hailed the California ruling as "a total victory for the poor school districts and school children.

"The governor has adopted essentially a do-nothing stance, and the ball is now in his court and the legislature's." In wealthy Beverly Hills, school

Supt. Kenneth Peters said the decision "must be held responsible for the eventual chaotic destruction of public education in California."

Dr. Wilson Riles state superintendent of public instruction, praised the decision, but he cautioned, "We must make sure that any solution ...provides adequate resources....I will not support a plan which merely spreads poverty equally among our schools.

In its ruling, the court said, "The poor district cannot freely choose to tax itself into an excellence which its tax rolls cannot provide.

"So long as assessed valuation within a district's boundaries is a major determinant of how much it can spend for its schools, only a district with a large tax base will truly be able to decide how much it really cares about education," the court said in its second ruling in the historic Serrano vs. Priest case which began eight years ago.

Despite legislation passed after the first Supreme Court decision, in 1975 wealthy districts were spending more than $2,000 per pupil while poorer districts were spending $1,000 or less. State officials estimate that half the $3 billion spent annually on public schools comes from property taxes. State aid provides 41 per cent and federal aid 6 per cent. The balance comes from such things as donations and adult education fees.

The 81-page decision left the question of compliance methods and financing in the hands of the governor and state legislature, but it made several suggestions. State officials and legislators have estimated a solution would cost between $500 million and $2 billion.

Life an identity crisis for Houston QB

The Washington Post

DALLAS - For quarterback Danny Davis, key to the success of Houston's veer offense, life has been an identity

When he was 12 years old, Davis sold soft drinks and popcorn in the Cotton Bowl, where the Cougars play Maryland Saturday. He would rest whenever a big play was made. Then he discovered he could sell more when he rooted for the team in his section.

He learned quickly the Texas section was for Texas, the Oklahoma section was for Oklahoma. When he got to the end zone, where the overflow from the competing teams was seated, he told fans he was from California and maximized profits. He was paid $1 for every 25 drinks he sold. He normally made $20 to $25.

As a high school star in Dallas, Davis was known as Danny Jones. But a year ago, the sophomore took his step-fathers'a name and is now Danny Davis. Old frends tell him, "You look like Danny Jones I used to know in Dallas."

Davis wants to let the folks here know who he is. And that involves another identity crisis Saturday; recognizing the variety of stunts in Maryland's wide-tackle-six defense and executing his options effectively. "We want to try and confuse the quarterback as to what we will do," said Maryland coach Jerry Claiborne The beauty of the wide defense is the number of different stunts and defensive alignments that originate from an eight-man front. "Every defense wants to confuse you." Davis said. "That's what this defense is all about. The thing is to remain cool and calm, to take your time and to let everything come

Because of its triple-option ball handling on the run, the veer is considered a high-risk offense that can lead to turnovers. With Davis, a scrambling passing thret, it also has been high yield this season. Houston's is the nation's eighth-ranked offense, 414 yards per game.

"It's only high-risk when you fail to stop and think about what happens when you don't do your assignment. In an early game, I dropped back and threw the ball up for grabs. yeah, then it's high risk." Davis, a sophomore, replaced a two-year starter this season. As a quarterback, a man supposed to have an ego big enough to eliminate fear from his vocabulary, Davis can admit his shortcomings. "At first I was scared to put the ball in the fullback's beliy and take it out," Davis said. "I was scared to play with the defensive end and the defensive tackle (in reading their movements to decide his option). I was scared to throw more than 15 yards because I didn't want to get it picked off."

Houston coach Bill Yeoman, the inventor of the veer-t offense, traces Houston's rise from a 2-8 team last season to a 9-2 outfit and coachampion of the Southwest Conference in its first year in the league to Davis gaining confidence in himself. Davis completed 77 of 161 passes for

1.348 yards this season, with 10 interceptions and 11 touchdowns, and rushed for 420 yards. Unlike the Maryland multiple-I offense, in which every player, including the quarterback, has blocking assignments, the veer is designed for only the five interior linemen to block.

Davis issued a warning to the Terps that he would come out passing if they stayed in that eight-man front. 'If they keep using that three-deep, we have to throw on them, Davis said. "They will have eight men up there against the run and we'll have only five blocking. They can't block eight men; I know I'm not going to block them. What sacares the Maryland defense is Davis' scrambling and passing. Houston will be the undefeated fourth-ranked Terps' first opponent this season with a balanced offense. One assistant coach, after watching Houston films, said that most of the

Tony Roche crushes Vilas

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) -Former Australian Davis Cup star Tony Roche Friday crushed top seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina to reach the men's singles final against American Dick Stockton in the New South Wales Open Tennis Championships.

Roche played superb tennis, highlighted by strong volleying to upset Vilas 7-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Stockton, from Dallas, advanced by defeating Roscoe Tanner, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., 6-2, 6-4, 6-7, 6-1 in the second semifinal.

Roche, who is aiming at his fourth championship in this tournament, had to survive two bad line calls on vital points in the first set to advance. Roche did not let the calls deter him and took the set 7-5 in the tiebreaker.

Roche completely blotted out his opponents' renowned passing shots by pushing the ball into Vilas' body and making him cramp his volleys.

The women's singles final will be fought out between top seed Dianne Fromholtz and Kerry Reid, both from Miss Fromholtz beat Australian Karen Krantzcke 6-4, 6-3 while Mrs. Reid defeated Czech Renata Tomanova 6-3, 6-3.

Cougars' big plays have been unplanned, coming as a result of Davis scrambling.

"He's got quick feet," said Claiborne. "He can throw the ball well and can run with it. If his guys are covered, he runs it on you; then you start to contain him and, bang, he throws the ball on you. "He's the key to the whoel offense." said linebacker Brad Carr. "He's like duke's Mike Dunn, but he's a better passer, like N.C. State's Dave Buckey, and he can run like Condredge Holloway of Tennessee. If our offense can put 21 points on the board, I think we can hold them well enough. Otherwise, Danny Davis will have overcome his identity crisis.

Good morning yesterday

By PAUL DOMOWITCH

With the final few hours of 1976 winding down, my mind wanders back as I recall one of the year's more familiar songs, and its lyrics written by Bill Lane: Good morning yesterday/ You wake up and time has slipped away/ And suddenly it's hard to find/ The memories you left behind/ Remember, do you remember.

The Boston Celtics won another NBA title, the Cincinnatti Reds repeated as champions of baseball, and the Montreal Canadians replaced Philadelphia's "Broad Street Bullies" as the crowned heads of professional hockey. But in a year from now, those accomplishments will become just another part of history. And a decade from now, even the most well-versed sports enthusiast will be hard-pressed to remember who won what in 1976.

There have been incidents however, that will not erode the memory-at least not mine. Incidents that go beyond the spectrum of victory and defeat. When my children ask me what I remember most about the Bicentennial Year, I'll have an answer for them. I'll tell them, as Bill Lane's lyrics further indicate—the good times and the bad. And there have been both.

COMING ONLY once every four years, the Olympic games are something special, and as such, they evoke many fond memories. The games of Montreal were no exception. There was Edwin Moses, a black, and Mike Shine, his white teammate, embracing after their one-two sweep in the 400-meter hurdles. ABC held their cameras on the pair as they walked together around the Canadian track, and for one brief moment, there was no black and white. There was only oneness, and a special unity that only athletics can bring about. There was the story of Lanny Basham and Margaret Murdock, two American competitors in the smallbore shooting competition at the summer games.

THE TWO finished deadlocked for first place at the end of the competition, and only a special tiebreaking system gave the gold medal to Bassham. He asked the remain a tie, and allow Miss Murdock a share of the gold, but they refused.

More determined than ever to give Murdock her share of the crown Bassham asked her to share part of the victory stand with hin, as they played the national anthem at the awards presentation.

THERE WAS the story of American boxer Howard Davis, who dedicated his gold medal quest to his mother. She had died just before the Olympics began. Two weeks later, the 20-year old won the lightweight division, and with tears in his eyes. held his gold medal up to the sky for his mom to see. And Perhaps the most touching story of the entire summer games is volved a mother again, her two ber ing sons, and an anonymous hero. Kay Spinks watched her son Finley said he discussed the same publicly a year ago. But matters Charles F. Miriani, IRS district director for Northern Illinois, said that since then Finley still has not filed the corporate returns for 1972 through 1974 and, in addition, has not filed the 1975 returns.

The A's owner said someone wants to blacken his name because he sued baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn for $3.5 million. Trial of the suit was recessed Dec. 23 and resumes Monday in Chicago.

The suit was filed because Kuhn. citing the best interests of baseball, locked Finley's attempted sale of three top Oakland players for $3.5

Olympic bouts on a borrowed television set, which was not working very well, back in St. Louis. The St. Louis Post-Dispatch carried the story, and hours later, the anonymous hero called the paper and said, "That woman deserves to see her sons fight for the gold medal. I'll pay her expenses to Montreal.'

Mrs. Spinks went to Montreal, and saw her boys win their gold medals.

THE WINTER games also had their memories. The sight of Rosi Mittamier hoisting Canadian Kathy Kriemer onto her shoulders after Miss Kriemer had just spoiled Rosi's chance for a sweep of the women's ski events will live on as a vivid illustration of what sports are really

For shear courage, there was cross-country skier Bill Koch, who somehow finished the 50-kilometer event suffering from a chronic case of 'exercise-induced asthma', and cerebral hypoxia, which is an in-sufficiency of blood reaching the brain. Five days earlier, Koch became the first American ever to win an Olympic cross-country skiing medal, when he finished second in the 30-kilometer race.

For beauty, there was Dorothy. Nine years after she put on her first pair of ice skates and graced a small Riverside, Conn. pond with her presence, this lovely lady won the figure skating competition at Innsbruck, and an entire world fell in love with her.

FOR AN outpour of human emotions, there was the tearful postgame scene following Permian's 14-6 win over Odessa, which cost the Bronchos the District 5-4A title.

Coach Dick Winder wept openly before his saddened players after the defeat, and quarterback Darrell Sheppard, standing dejected and alone on the snowy W.T. Barrett turf. was consoled by several Permian players, who only minutes before had crushed his championship dream.

New Year's Day observance dates back 4,000 years

Associated Press Writer I wish you a Merry Christmas And a Happy New Year A pocket full of money And a cellar full of beer, And a good fat pig To serve you all the year Ladies and gentlemen Sitting by the fire

Pity us poor boys Out in the mire. This blithe ditty can be heard echoing through towns and cities of Scotland on New Year's Day, when bands of children, some in masks and costumes, go from house to house wishing good cheer and asking for money or something to eat. New Year's traditionally has been the biggest annual feast day in Scotland. But somehow between the docks of the British Isles and the shores of the American Colonies, the practice of dressing up and visiting homes became associated with Halloween. Nonetheless, welcoming the New Year with festivity is among the oldest and universal of man's observances. The date of New Year's Day has bounced all over the calendar since ancient times. but throughout it all man has demonstrated an innate urge to celebrate when the year finally rolls over and calls it quits. The earliest known New Year's parties were corked long before the Royal Canadians and the Waldorf even were thought about. Around 2000 B.C. in Mesopotamia a celebration occurred when the sun was nearest the spring equinox, mid-March; in Assyria, it was the autumn equinox, mid-September. Other cultures observed various days based on the movement of the stars and planets. In 153 B.C., the Romans adopted the Julian Calendar, institutionalizing Jan. 1 as New Year's Day despite reservations by Julius Caesar. The emperor thought the March 25 date made more sense since it was linked to a harvest. But the confusion which already had resulted from the change, plus the fact that Jan. 1, 45 B.C., fell on a new moon (an unfavorable omen), dissuaded Caesar from tampering further with the calendar.

America's Creek Indians, like many other agriculture-based tribes, centered their New Year's celebrations around the harvest. The Green Corn Dance, or Busk (a variation of "Boskita," meaning "to fast"), occurred when corn was ready for

But Protestant Europe was in the middle of its tumultuous reformation, and papal decrees fell on deaf ears.

Not until 1700 did Germany adopt the Gregorian Calendar. Great Britain and its American Colonies changed in 1752, and Sweden a year later. Asia resisted change for at least another 100 years.

for meats to climb

WASHINGTON (AP) — When you go shopping for meat in 1977 you'll find plenty of beef and pork and "at reasonable prices," says the nation's largest meat packing trade association.

But the American Meat Institute, an association of meat packers and wholesalers, admitted Wednesday that its idea of "reasonable prices" may set some new records at your neighborhood supermarket.

The Agriculture Department predicted recently that 1977 retail meat prices will rise throughout the year to an average of 10 cents per pound higher than this year's average of $1.39. That would be a record high price for a yearly average, although daily high price for a yearly average, although daily prices might not top the record of $1.61 set in July

A spokesman for the industry group, asked about that government forecast, said it did not conflict with the industry's estimate, indicating that the industry thinks an extra 10 cents per pound will not push meat out of the "reasonable" category.

Declarer finessed with the ten of clubs, and West won with the jack. It didn't matter what West returned, for South's clubs were about to produce five tricks. Declarer thus wound up with a total of 11 tricks.

Now go back to the first club trick and see what happens if East puts up the king, as he should. South cannot refuse the trick, since then East would take the rest of the spades.

When South wins the first club trick. however, he can no longer run the suit. West still has a club stopper, and South has no side entry to the clubs.

South can bring in only two clubs and can thus win only eight tricks. An aggressive South might return to dummy with a heart or diamond and lead a club to try a finesse with the ten. This play would be as helpful as a broken leg, for South would get only one club trick and would be down two. DAILY QUESTION

(EDITOR'S NOTE—Canadians had high hopes a few years ago that there was enough oil and natural —Canadian federal gramment moves to chop away at foreign owners of the oil companies with tough new regulations lessening industry enthusiasm for the energiearch.

—Emerging policial awareness of the native Indians and Eskims and populate part of the sparse arctic lands throwns to delay or stop exploration and transportation plans.

"In Canadian people still think that great multinational companies are jostling each other to invest in canadian energy," U.S. Ambassador Thomas soiers told an Ottawa audience recently. "In fact the energy opportunities and returns are more attractive elsewhere, including the United States" he said.

June costs, staggering even to the multinational gue costs, staggering even to the multinational

Panarctic claims to have tapped 15 trillion feet of gas so far. Other companies have dropped out of the Arctic Islands. Drilling in 1976 was around 75,000 feet compared to 220,000 feet in 1973. "But the expenditure so far is a mere pittance compared to what future costs are going to be," said I. H. Mackay, oil and gas manager of the Bank of Montreal in Calgary, Alber-high gear three years ago.

The unhappy reality for Canadans and the multinational companies financing the work, however, is that the finds so far are nowhere near as significant as fields in the Alasan North Slope and significant as fields in the Alasan North Slope and the British North Sea. None are energy resources the British North Sea. None are energy resources so far discovered in northern Canada can yet be economically marketed, a quantion also disquieting to northern-tier Americans who have grown totally dependent on Canadian satural gas.

The situation could arther deteriorate for these reasons, according a oil industry and government officials: The Polar Gas pipeline, one of five proposals for transporting oil and gas south from the arctic, would cost $10 billion for the 3,000-mile trip to Canadian and officials:

—A money shortage Hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent on Canadian arctic exploration, so far for dollar return, and much more capital is required, particularly to build the pipelines to bring it to markets in the south.

—There are serious questions about whether there will be easien oil and gas up there to justify the enor-American natural gas markets. Multibillion dollar sums are also mentioned for the other four pipeline proposals, including the once-favored joint Canada-U.S. pipeline down the Mackenzie River Valley that seems to have fallen into disfavor.

Exploration attention is now centered on two arctic regions - the islands, and the eastern coastal waters polar bears in the past three years. White wolves frolic with dogs in the drilling camps. Musk ox appear on distant ridge lines.

Cairns of rocks left by explorers dot some of the coves. A Panarctic drilling crew recently found a bottle left on a beach by a French explorer in 1906 containing his last will and testament addressed to his daughter, and a St. Christopher medal.

Seven large gas fields have been discovered so far. and one well on Cameron Island yields around 5,000 barrels of oil a day.

Headquarters for Panarctic exploration is Rea Point on Melville Island, 600 miles north of the Arctic Circle. The camp is a cluster of mobile homes and house trailers, sealed together to ward off the winter cold of 40 degrees below zero. For the workers, two weeks of duty in the High Arctic is followed by a week at home. A top equipment operator can make $30,000 a year.

Off the Canadian east coast, exploration has been moving steadily northward after disappointing results off Nova Scotia and the Grand Banks.

Discoveries in the deep and hostile waters in 'Iceberg Alley" off Labrador have been more optimistic, and Eastcan Ltd., a consortium, has made two gas strikes from four wells, and hopes for a commercial discovery within the next five years.

The area is aptly named. An estimated 400 icebergs, some a mile long, others up to eight million tons in weight, travel each year down the Labrador coast. One like these sank the Titanic in 1912.

Canadian nationalism has directly affected the oil industry. The government is seeking a major part of the Canadian oil industry, 90 per cent of which is currently owned by foreigners, mainly Amricans. Canadian partners must now be taken to produce newly found fields. Long-term leasing has ended, and royalty payments have been altered. "The government has just pulled the rug from under northern development; drilling on federal land will almost come to a halt," complained one industry observer.

Preferential treatment is being given Petro-Canada, a government-owned energy corporation. that is moving into exploration on a large scale.

The political awareness of the Indians and Eskimos in the arctic region have been heightened by the energy search. Peace treaties did not give the federal government full title to the land, and now both the Eskimos and Indians have asked for provinces of their own. If both claims were granted, more than a third of Canada would revert to the indigenous peoples.

"For the old year's gone and the new year's come. And for good luck we'll fire our guns."

The man who will become president three weeks from now, Jimmy Carter, told the nation in a New Year's greeting Thursday that he expects 1977 to show a national determination "to put old divisions behind us" as the country pursues "our national goals of peace, progress and justice '

But New Year's Eve was not time for hope. The National Sat Council predicted that traffic cidents would kill 350 to 45 Americans over the weekend.

By and large, Americans were planning to gather in their traditional ways - at private get-togethers or at high-priced celebrations in nightclubs, restaurants and bars.

In New York, for example, the plans included the time-honored celebration in Times Square, where the familiar lighted globe will descend at midnight - and be joined this year by a new light display board, 40-feet-by-20-feet.

Cigarette sales hit new high, says USDA

WASHINGTON (AP) - A dozen years after the famous surgeon general's report on the hazards of smoking, cigarette use is at an alltime high with tobacco sales up by a billion dollars over last year, the Agriculture Department says.

The department said Thursday that people who smoke, chew or sniff tobacco spent nearly $16.6 billion on tobacco this year, compared with $15.6 billion in 1975. More than 90 per cent of the money went for cigarettes.

The statistics released by the department, which subsidizes tobacco growing, create a different picture than those issued recently by antismoking groups showing a decreasing number of adult smokers.

The department said Americans smoked an estimated 620 billion cigarettes this year, a 2.1 per cent increase over the 607.2 billion a year

"With further gains expected next year in population and consumer spending, cigarette consumption and output may rise further." the department report said.

The National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health said this fall that the percentage of adult smokers is lower now than five years ago.

The clearinghouse and the Agriculture Department did agree that there is a trend toward low-tar, low-nicotine cigarettes.

Meanwhile, the American Cancer Society is gearing up for a five-year campaign against cigarette smoking. Allan K. Jonas, chairman of the society's National Task Force on Tobacco and Cancer, has said that cigarette smoking "is responsible for nearly 70,000 cancer deaths a year. practically one in every five deaths from this disease.

The Tobacco Institute, an industry group, has called the society's program "regrettable propaganda."

New type discharge adopted

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 500,000 recipients of undesirable discharges will soon be eligible for a new status, but the Pentagon is sti' not going to clear their records.

The Defense Departannounced Thursday that it will stop giving the undesirable discharge to enlisted personnel dismissed for misconduct, security reasons or other causes and instead issue a "discharge under other than honorable conditions."

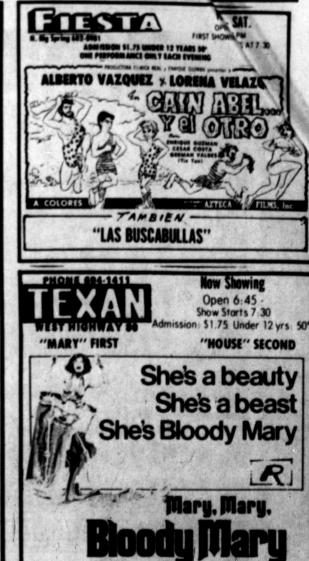

Under the new policy, effective New Year's Day, the half million former service members given the discharge since 1948 will be offered the new status. About 170,000 of them were asministratively discharged during the Vietnam War.

However, a discharge under other than honorable conditions still represents a blemish on an individual's job record that could affect that person's ability to get a job, a Pentagon spokesman said.

As a practical matter, there is no difference between undesirable and less than honorable discharges, except that the former is a more "pertorative term," the okesman said.

New laws galore to take effect as New Year begins at midnight

By DICK BARNES

WASHINGTON (AP) - If you want to turn right on a red light in Virginia or New York, pump your own gasoline in Ohio or talk on channel 39 of your CB radio, Saturday is the day.

But you'd also better save the financial tables from Saturday's newspaper if you plan to leave stocks to your heirs, give some thought to paying more Social Security taxes and quit driving your truck in Minnesota without mud flaps.

All this good news and bad news is the result of new laws that take effect Saturday, the first day of 1977.

Among the patchwork of changing federal and state laws, those affecting the greatest number of people are federal tax revisions.

Massive changes in federal estate taxes can affect everyone who dies after midnight tonight. A new method of taxing the increase in value of property held during a person's lifetime will make stock market tables from Saturday's newspapers into collec-

Under the old law, no tax was paid on capital gains occurring during the

Two provisions of the tax law that will help some taxpayers after 1977 arrives affect houses and spouses who don't work outside the home.

California millionaire purchases Santa Claus

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) - Who says money can't buy everything? Millionaire businessman Larry Wilson just bought Santa Claus.

Asking price for the town of Santa Claus, Ariz., was $52,500. Owners Peter and Mary Stanovich put it up for sale on Christmas Day.

Included in the package was a service station, a cafe called "The Christmas Tree Inn," a curio shop and four acres of desert along U.S. 93 about 85 miles southeast of here.

said they were tired of operating

Wilson, 39, is a real estate investor. in Santa Rosa, Calif., and used to own the town of Healdsburg, a tiny community in the California wine

"Everybody should have a town called Santa Claus for their family," said Wilson. "We might decide to keep it just the way it is, or we might decide to do something with it, or we might just hang on to it. I can't really

Persons over 65 now can escape/taxation on $35,000 of the sale price of their residence. The old limit was $20,000. Workers who qualify for the tax-deferment advantages of an Individual Retirement Account can throw an extra $250 a year into the account as a retirement fund for their spouses if the spouses aren't Social Security taxes will be going up this year for the higher-income worker. Last year, workers earning $15,300 or more paid $895.05 in Social Security taxes. This year, if you earn $16,500 or more, you'll pay $965.25. If you pay the higher amount, you'll be in the company of 16 million others.

But retired persons who do a bit of work get a Social Security break starting Saturday. Now they can earn up to $3,000 before starting to forfeit any of their Social Security checks. That's $240 higher than last year's limit.

For those older folks, however, some of the savings may go right back into medical costs.

Last year an elderly or disabled person entering a hospital under Medicare had to pay the first $104 of the bill. This year, the tab is $124. And if you're a young person thinking of joining the armed forces to get the education benefits of the GI bill, better run down and sign those enlistment papers before midnight. Veterans who met certain service requirements in the past got as much as $292 a month for education after their discharge, and didn't have to contribute anything. Under a new plan taking effect Jan. 1, enlistees must contribute $50 to $75 a month in order to get $2-for-$1 matching government funds for their later schooling. The nation's Citizens Band radio users will have 17 new channels to talk on starting Saturday. The former 23 channels were getting so crowded folks that the Federal Communications Commission decided to allot them more space on the airwaves.

The feds gave a possible break to beer drinkers, too, or at least to those who like local brands. The excise tax for smaller brewers will drop by $2 a barrel on their first 60,000 barrels so they can compete more effectively with large brewers. The number of brands of beer in the country has been steadily dropping as smaller brewers fold or sell out.

Here is a sampling of some of the other laws taking effect in various states at the stroke of midnight:

-Right to Die: A doctor in California can remove life-support equipment from a dying patient if the patient has given such authorization within the past five years.

-Body bequests: Virginia driver's licenses will include a form on which the licensee can indicate that any or all parts of his or her body can be used for transplants, therapy, research or education. But the authorization can be crossed out if the licensee has a change of heart.

-Truck flaps: Minnesota will require rear mud flaps on virtually all -Right turns: Virginia and New York will permit right turns on a red light under certain conditions. Virginia officials say the new law, similar to many in the West, will save millions of gallons of gasoline and 14 seconds per stop per motorist.

-Gas stations: The rush of selfservice gasoline stations will spread to Ohio, which is legalizing personal pumping

-Pulltabs: Minnesota wanted to end use of beverage cans with throwaway pulltabs on Jan. 1, but some bottlers are in court trying at least to win permission to use up their existing stocks of such cans.
