Good Harvest Conditions Will Continue In Area

A-J News Services
Ideal cotton harvest weather, with warm dry days and mild nights, will continue over the area at least through Sunday, according to weather forecasters.
Afternoon temperatures in the low to mid-80s and early morning lows in the high 40s and low 50s will prolong Indian Summer weather for the region.
Drying conditions should remain excellent, with humidities ranging from near 60 percent in the early morning hours to about 20 percent in the afternoons.
Light and variable southerly winds of 5 to 10 miles per hour are predicted for this afternoon.
The only change in the fair weather pattern for the entire state is a forecast for some scattered showers in Southwest Texas today.
Skies were clear over the entire state this morning, with predawn temperatures ranging from the 40s in the Panhandle to the upper 60s along the Texas coast.

Lubbock's low this morning was 50 degrees, four degrees above the average minimum for this date. Tuesday's high of 83 also was considerably above the average of 74 for the date.
The weather was fair over much of the nation today, with only a forecast of scattered rain showers from New England through New Jersey and across portions of the Great Lakes and Appalachians marring the pattern.

'South Pacific' Musical Scheduled For Weekend

Civic Lubbock, Inc. will present Rogers and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" Friday and Saturday nights in the Civic Center theater.
The popular Broadway musical will be performed by a major cast of local and professional actors under the direction of Ric Brame. A full pit orchestra will be under the direction of Charlotte Greson. Choreography will be handled by Steve Mann.
The evening of total entertainment will be kicked off by a cocktail party in the fountain area of the Civic Center. Hot Polynesian hors d'oeuvres will be served and a cash bar will be provided.
"South Pacific" opened on Broadway on April 7, 1949, and was voted Best Musical of the '48-'49 season by the New York Drama Critics Circle. The show is a musical adaptation of James A. Michener's Pulitzer Prize winning book "Tales of the South Pacific."
The action of the play takes place on two South Pacific islands during a lull in the fighting of the war with Japan. The plot is formed by two romantic themes.
First is the love affair between Ensign Nellie Forbush (played by Janis Geddes), a high-spirited young nurse from Little Rock, and the gallant middle-aged French planter, Emile de Beque (played by professional actor Roberto Silvano).
The other romantic theme is that of the likeable young marine, Lt. Joseph Cable (portrayed by Evin Mirees), and the lovely Tonkinese girl, Liat (portrayed by Shannon Adams).
The varying moods of Nellie's romance with Emile de Beque are characterized by such familiar tunes as "I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Outa My Hair," "A Wonderful Guy" and "Some Enchanted Evening."
The love affair between Lt. Cable and Liat is highlighted by the beautiful "Younger than Springtime" and the light-hearted "Happy Talk," sung by Liat's mother, the colorful Bloody Mary (played by Doreen Hutton), who also sings the popular hit "Bali Hai."
Other musical favorites include "There Is Nothin' Like a Dame," sung by the men's chorus and the wheeler-dealer seabebe Luther Billis (played by Tom Frances). "This Nearly Was Mine" and the hilarious "Honey Bun."
Supporting roles include: Chi-Chi Wong King and Jill Adams as de Beque's children, Ngana and Jeanine; Joy Dean Evans and Phil Caffey as Luther Billis' henchmen, Stewpot and Professor; Jack Wilson as Captain Brackett; Jim Hill as Commander Harbison;
Lou Keay as Bloody Mary's assistant; and Janet Smith as Henriette.
Nurses are portrayed by Barbara Fore, Shirin Salzer, Martha Krueger, Gloria Wilson, Celeste Ward, Lynn Rowe, Leslie Thurman, Melissa Houser, Brenda Duncan, Ruth Boyd, Diane Caron and Susie Stephens.
Completing the cast are Steve Mann, Robert Dahl, John Packard, Jack Owens, Bert Boneta, Ricky Colorado and Phillip Morris as marines, sailors and seabees.
For reservations and ticket information, call the Civic Center box office.

Money Called Useless

WACO (AP) — A bank officer said Tuesday that almost half a million dollars two teenagers claim they found on a South Texas farm "isn't doing anybody any good just sitting in the vault."
Joe Newton made the statement after the City of Waco said the fortune should be placed in an interest-bearing account.
Attorneys representing the city asked Monday that U.S. District Court Judge Jack Roberts direct the Citizens National Bank of Waco to put the $483,183 in such an account.
The two youths, James Dean Bridges and Percy Arnold Garcia, told authorities they found the money while digging on a Jim Wells County ranch, owned by Bridges' father, James Hiroms. Bridges had taken the name of a stepfather.
The story came out after the two youths were stopped on a traffic violation in Waco in a new automobile they had purchased with part of the money.
Investigations by government agencies and one state grand jury failed to reveal any criminal activity in connection with the money.
Hiroms has never claimed the fortune. State District Court Judge Bill Logue of Waco directed that the money be kept by the bank in such a way that it would not become co-mingled with other bank funds.

Master Baker Battles To Save French From Ordinary Bread

ARTIST IN DOUGH — Bernard Ganachaud places loaves of bread on an iron board before baking them at his bakery in northeastern Paris. In a country where everyone eats his own weight in bread yearly, Ganachaud is in a very tough position. PARIS (AP) — In a country where everyone eats his own weight in bread yearly, Bernard Ganachaud is in a very tough position. He's a master baker, a French artist in dough, fighting an uphill battle against the Philistines of mass production.

"Bread is life itself," he said in an interview in his oak-beamed bakery in northeast Paris the other day. "It represents all the trials of my youth, all the suffering it took to learn the profession."

Ganachaud, who began baking at his father's side 39 years ago at the age of 8, added: "You have to have a love both of bread and the craft of making it, not just a love of money. Otherwise, you should be in a factory turning out bread by mass production."

"An artisan, a true craftsman, must be available permanently to show his apprentices by his own example what must be done. He can't accept the least imperfection in making bread. It would be a catastrophe."

There are 112,000 bakers in France; 42,000 of them are certified bakers and most have their own shops. There are also about 100 big industrial bakeries in France, and their operations are expanding constantly.

Ganachaud said the quality of bread is threatened by the giant bakeries and supermarkets that stock their packaged loaves, but that the small shopkeeper must survive because only he can cater to the thrice-daily French need for "warm, blonde and crusty bread."

Ganachaud led a visitor to a tray of steaming croissants, picked up one of the golden brown, crescent-shaped rolls and pulled it slowly in two. "Look how flaky and airy it is," he said. "If a customer eats one of these, a second isn't necessary. How can factories compete with this?"

"They can't, mainly because of distribution problems," he said, answering his own question. "Their trucks get bogged down in traffic and can't deliver morning, noon and night when the French want their bread, and want it hot and fresh. They also can't provide the variety of tastes an artisan can."

"If bread is made from wholesome, natural ingredients and well prepared, it's good for your health," Ganachaud remarked as he passed his medieval-style, wood-fired stone ovens that bake at a slow, gentle heat in full view of customers. "A big problem is that many doctors advise against eating bread. They denigrate it."

"Another problem is recruiting qualified help. It's getting harder and harder to find good bakers. Nowadays there's too much emphasis on the intellectual side of baking, the theory of it, rather than the practical side, the technique itself."

Ganachaud said he and his helpers prepare their dough in the evening using only natural leavening, put it in refrigerators to retard the fermentation process, fire their furnaces with oak or pine, and bake in the morning.

Diplomats Say Cuba No Threat

By PIETER VAN BENNEKOM
KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — Even though four top American diplomats and Rosalynn Carter have recently visited every independent country in the Caribbean the United States says it has no Stop Castro policy.

The diplomats also say that Cuba's growing ties with other islands — marked by Fidel Castro's visit to Jamaica this week — do not mean that Cuba's growing ties with other islands are a security threat to Washington.

They say the massive attention the islands on the southern doorsteps of the United States have received since the Carter administration took office is due to a genuine desire on Washington's part to establish closer relations.

Analysis

"If Jamaica wants to experiment with Socialism, that's no threat to us," U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young said recently in Barbados. "And if Guyana wants to go Socialist, that's no threat to the United States either."

"We just want to tell them that we still want to cooperate," Young added. "They don't have to cut their traditional ties with the West just because they establish relations with Cuba."

Terrence A. Todman, Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, commenting on the current Castro visit to Jamaica while he himself was touring Haiti, the Dominican Republic and Puerto Rico, said there is no reason for Americans to get hysterical.

Todman lamented the fact that Americans will probably get hysterical about it anyway.

Besides Young, who visited 10 Caribbean basin countries on an August swing, and Todman, a native himself of the U.S. Virgin Islands who has also been to Cuba, other emissaries to the Caribbean included:

—Rosalynn Carter, the U.S. First Lady, who started off a Latin American and Caribbean trip in Jamaica.

—Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, who visited Grenada and Trinidad in June.

—Philip Habib, assistant secretary of state, who went to Guyana and Barbados.

Young, the most outspoken of the island-hopping diplomats, said the Carter administration is placing less emphasis on ideology in its relations with the developing nations of the area.

In determining which countries it wants to cooperate with, Young said the Carter administration looks at whether national governments are responsive to their people's needs, whether they try to distribute wealth justly, whether they are trying to provide health care and education for the needy, and whether they respect basic human rights within whatever system of government they choose for themselves.

Young, at least, expresses confidence the strategy will work.

"In the struggle for development, we usually win out," he said in Trinidad. "Whether it's hamburgers or computers, we know how to do it best."

A case in point was Castro's current visit to Jamaica. On Monday, the Jamaica Daily Gleaner naturally gave top billing on its front page to Castro's arrival in Kingston.

But the second biggest story of the day, also on the Gleaner's front page, was a speech by Jamaican Education Minister Eric Bell announcing to the Jamaican Teachers Association that he expected to obtain a large U.S. loan to finance a five-year education program.

Another illustration of the mood in the Caribbean which Young and other Americans are trying to sense was the Jamaican taxi driver who was taking a foreign journalist from the airport to downtown Kingston while Castro was arriving on his training ship at the docks.

"I don't know what you think, but I like that man," he said of Castro, but then he turned on the radio and listened with obvious relish to a Johnny Mathis song.

When asked if that wasn't an inconsistency, he replied: "I don't feel like I have to choose, man. I can like both."

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Speaking Of Rip-Offs...

ORGANIZED LABOR dealt America a staggering blow while President Carter was diverting attention with allegations that the oil companies are trying to "rip off" the American public.

Whether this was a coordinated shell game or merely an off-key duet, the fact is that Congress used the occasion to put all but the final touches on one of the biggest labor rip-offs in American history.

Under a Senate-House Conference Committee agreement, the federally mandated minimum wage will jump by $1.05 an hour over the next three years, to $3.35 in 1981.

THE NET EFFECT of this action will be a new spurt in inflation and an exacerbation of the nation's unemployment ills, the twin dangers which pose the greatest peacetime threat to American security in the history of the Republic.

The cruelest aspect of the situation is that it will prevent American business and industry from creating new jobs to hire the unskilled laborers about whom the union bosses chronically shed crocodile tears.

If there are not enough jobs available at $2.30 an hour, it is sheer ostrichism to pretend they'll sprout when the minimum wage goes to $3.35.

A business which can't recover the pay it lays out for a new employe by selling his product or service just isn't going to hire him.

This means that millions of unemployed persons who are willing to work will have to be supported by government welfare and make-work programs, the cost of which will spurt upward again as the labor cost-induced new round of inflation takes hold.

IN HIS PRESS conference last week, President Carter intemperately accused the oil companies of plotting to "profiteer" out of the oil crisis by unjustifiably raising their prices.

He had wanted to raise prices through taxes and rebate the money to citizens in a socialistic type scheme.

We hold no grief for the oil companies, but it is at least worth noting that when they reinvest their profits in finding and producing energy, the effect is to create jobs and help the economy.

Raising the minimum wage, with the President's help, will have the opposite effect.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Any More Like Him At Home?

WASHINGTON—A couple of weeks ago, conservatives on Capitol Hill were having a merry time. They had just dealt organized labor a series of setbacks on the minimum wage bill in the House, and they were about to break their arms putting one another on the back.

They can stop the exercise now. Face it, my brothers. We got clobbered.

There is no way to paper over the defeat suffered by the business community on October 6.
By a vote of 257-163, the House approved a "labor reform" package that gives Big Labor its sweetest victory in 42 years.

On the following day, the Senate made bad matters worse: The Senate approved a four-step hike in the minimum wage that would produce an hourly minimum of $3.40 by 1981.

As Leo Durocher once remarked, in a different context, it was "Poli Harbuh for duh GInts."

CREDIT OUGHT TO be given where credit is due. This was a personal triumph for Alexander Barkan, the 69-year-old chief of the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education.

He is a Dickensian figure, held in affectionate regard even by his right-wing foes.

He turned up at a Capitol Hill reception on the night of the labor reform vote, grinning like a well-fed colt, his homely mug alight with honest jubilation.

A newsmen asked him how he brought it off.
Well, said Al, it was organization—a lot of organization, plus a little bitty nudge at the end.

Over the past two years, the unions have lost 767,000 members; they now represent barely a fifth of the nation's labor force.

If the Senate goes along with the House approval, Big Labor should be able to recoup—at the cost of some heavy-handed impositions on employers.

The bill encourages hurry-up votes on representation elections, the bill would penalize employers who try to resist.

To make certain the scales stay tilted, the bill would add two members to the National Labor Relations Board. It is a fair assumption that in any doubtful case, Carter's appointees would go along with Al.

THE SENATE WILL not take up the labor reform package until next year, but its vote of October 7 on the minimum wage bill offers no encouragement to the business community.

The Senate rejected an attempt to provide a special sub-minimum wage for teenagers, and it added limitations to the House-passed exemptions for certain small businesses.

Conservative spokesmen will have to fall back and regroup.

Businessmen staged their own fine performance some months ago, in defeating the common site picketing bill. Right-to-work forces also have worked effectively to forestall any serious effort for repeal of Section 14(b) of Taft-Hartley.

But on the labor reform package, they face an uphill struggle. They might consider a task force in every state, an $800,000 special fund, an organized effort, and some well-directed nudges.

What business needs most of all, if an envious word may be forgiven, is its own version of a guy named Al.

NO, VIRGINIA, that power plant fire and resultant blackout in San Antonio Sunday wasn't staged just to make City Manager Larry Cunningham and others from Lubbock feel "at home" during the Texas Municipal League convention.

President Carter's energy taxes would constitute a $275 billion "rip-off" of the citizenry over the next five years, National Republican Chairman Bill Brock alleges.

That would make the "moral equivalent of war" almost as expensive as the real thing.

BING CROSBY will be missed as one of the world's great entertainers, but the world's greater loss is of Bing Crosby as a man.

Unlike so many of today's headliners, Der Bingle was a family man with a set of high moral values. A female interviewer almost dropped her uppers earlier this year when he was so old-fashioned as to say he'd kick a daughter of his out of the house if she were to have an illicit affair.

Crosby was a man of goodwill whose half-century in show business and whose enormous wealth never dulled his sense of right and wrong.

Storm Shutter Snoops, Buzz Off

WASHINGTON—When we were last reading in our newspapers about Greg Schneiders, we were reading about how he was not going to get the White House Appointments Secretary job because he had personal financial problems.

It seems that an FBI investigation of Schneiders revealed, among other things, that he had received unemployment compensation payments while operating a consulting business for restaur-ateurs in 1975.

And it was discovered that the employees of a Capitol Hill restaurant formerly operated by Schneiders were frequently given paychecks that bounced because insufficient funds were deposited.

Anyway, all of this is water over the dam, as they say.

SOMEWHERE ALONG the line, as New York Times reporter James Wooten puts it, Schneiders was "vindicated," unofficially demoted, and given the title of White House Director of Special Projects.

Up to now, as Wooten reports it, Schneiders has been working on things in which the President has not been "deeply interested."

Things, for example, like studying the efficiency of the White House mail room, examining regional federal centers, and putting together a youth energy conservation corps.

It is this last project, ferreting out the energy criminals in our midst, that has once again put Schneiders in the news.

As Carter's ex-main person explains it, herds of young volunteers would scour the nation "raising awareness and educating the general public on ways that energy can be saved."

THIS WOULD BE accomplished by starting outside a house and checking off "energy problems" on a government-prepared list.

The volunteer would then knock on the door to tell the occupant his or her outside energy conservation score and offer to go through the inside of the house to complete the survey.

According to a proposed 100-page "Team Member's Manual" these young energy snoops would check everything from the inflation of a homeowner's car tires to the water level in the toilet tanks. Schneiders, who estimates the cost of this project at not more than $100,000—"extremely cheap by any standards," says

"The information is not going to be sent anywhere. The thing I want to avoid obviously is the implication that an army of little uniformed inspectors are going out and check on people."

"And what better place to settle than Lubbock, Texas, where no smog, little traffic, low crime rates, excellent schools and a low cost of living are still a way of life? You'll feel good in Lub-

The ad goes on to praise Lubbock's climate, civic symphony, ballet, theater, museum and pla-

Meanwhile, John Knox Village is advertising in downstate newspapers: "Lubbock. A beautiful city in the scenic high plains. Noted for its many recreational facilities and educational and cultural institutions..."

IN THE CHAMBER of Commerce's Lubbock Goals for the 70s, it was observed that "the nation's business community has shown a marked tendency to cluster branch plants and offices around cities which offer the finest array of cultural facilities and most varied cultural activities."

"This is particularly true of the highly technical and professionally oriented industries which also might be attracted to Lubbock because of the special benefits available to them through the existence of Texas Tech University..."

Since those goals were written, Lubbock has attained them by improving and enlarging its cultural facilities and activities. And it has added industries like Texas Instruments.

Social Security Blitzed By Double Goof

(Third of five columns)

STRETCHING OUT beyond this century are two long-term financing problems that our Social Security System may or may not have to face.

Together, they account for a shortfall (or deficit) of 8.2 per cent over the next 75 years.

A full one-half of that projected deficit could be wiped out tomorrow if Congress merely corrected a technical fluke in a benefit formula written into the law in 1972.

The formula, designed to keep benefits up to date, ties increases in future benefit checks in both prices and wages.

Since wages go up with prices, workers retiring in the future would be getting double adjustments for inflation. This was an unintended double indexing.

If nothing is done about it, a mounting number of future retirees could be getting benefits exceeding the highest wages they ever earned before retirement—a very costly paradox.

This will be changed, it is unanimously agreed.

the criminal justice system since crime is greatest among the young.

More productive work and therefore, more SS taxes paid by women who will be in paying jobs because they have fewer children.

COMMERCE SECRETARY Juanita Kreps, in a lecture delivered when she was a professor at Duke University, noted that the proportion of women in the job market would be greatly increased if a strong demand for their services pushed up their pay.

She also stressed that there is increasing evidence that young women now in the labor force have a strong attachment to working for pay and are less likely to return to full-time work at home than in the past.

The net effect, she concluded, could be to produce a favorable ratio of workers to retirees and, possibly, to retard the downward drift for men.

IF, AS THE SECRETARY recently suggested, older workers in the future postponed retirement to age 68 or later, that also would improve the financial prospects for Social Security.

The fundamental message is that Social Security's long-range problems—which have resulted in so many scare headlines about the system being trillions in the red and heading straight for bankruptcy—are not hard to solve at all.

Congress can—and Congress will—wipe out one-half of the projected deficit merely by correcting a technical fluke in the law.

Shifts in population trends can—and almost surely will—significantly alter the outlook. The fright is not warranted!

tions.

Carter Expected To Try Again For Investment

By R. GREGORY NOKES
WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the realization that their economic program isn't working, President Carter and his advisers are back at the drawing boards trying to salvage what they can.

All indications point to yet another attempt to win business support and to stimulate investment in new industry, which the country badly needs.

The failure of businessmen to step up investment activity has been the largest single factor undermining progress toward Carter's original targets of a balanced budget, lowered employment and sharply reduced inflation by 1981.

heard from the administration that Carter already has done too much for business without any results to show. For example, Carter never put forth the tough anti-inflation program he wanted because business opposed it and he withdrew plans for the $50 per person tax rebate, also opposed by business.

But Carter appears willing to make one more try this time through tax incentives to increase business profits and encourage investment.

He also disclosed last week that he is considering tax cuts for both businesses and individuals in 1978, one year ahead of his original scheme, if the economy shows signs of floundering again, as some experts now fear.

Very little in the economic program Carter unveiled in January has worked out according to plan.

Inflation and unemployment both have remained stubbornly high, the nation's huge trade deficit has started another attack on the dollar and interest rates have reached the danger level again.

In the first major retreat from its economic program, the administration has abandoned hopes of achieving a balanced budget by 1981, barring an economic miracle. There is no more talk, as there was during the campaign, of the $60 billion budget "dividend" in 1981 to help pay for new government programs.

Carter's advisers are now telling him that if he wants to meet his goals for an unemployment rate of 5 per cent or below by 1981, the best he can hope for is a budget deficit of $20 billion to $25 billion.

Besides the failure of businesses to step up investments, another fly in the economic ointment has been the nation's trade deficit, estimated at $30 billion this year, which has cut into employment and production in this country.

The administration appears to be seeking to reduce the deficit by encouraging an increase in the value of the Japanese yen and the German mark in relation to the value of the dollar, which would make U.S. goods cheaper in those countries while raising the price to American consumers of German and Japanese products.

The Carter administration is the third to try to tackle the problem of lagging business investment, but so far Carter has been no more successful than Richard M. Nixon and Gerald R. Ford.

Charles L. Schultze, the chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said last week administration surveys show business is increasing its inflation-discounted investments by only 6 per cent annually while an investment rate of 8 per cent to 9 per cent is needed to achieve the administration's economic targets.

Businessmen basically say their profits are too low to justify substantial increases in investments.

The administration takes this lament at face value and plans to include several measures in its proposed tax reform program to increase business profitability. The measures likely will include a reduction in corporate taxes or a scaling down of the current double taxation of corporate dividends.

In fact, there has been a pronounced shift in emphasis in recent weeks from tax reform to tax reduction, especially in tax cuts for businessmen, although there will be significant reductions for individuals too.

When Carter first began proposing tax reform, his emphasis was on closing tax shelters and loopholes with little said about helping business, but all that has changed now.

Secretary of Commerce Juanita Krupar also indicated over the weekend the administration may be preparing a new statement of its economic policies, in part to meet complaints by businessmen that they don't know what the administration is doing now.

Seasons Tied To Illness

By AL ROSSITER JR.
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Three researchers have found that more Americans with schizophrenia are born in winter and spring months than any other time of the year.

A seasonal link to the most common of the nation's serious mental illnesses has been reported since 1929. But most of the earlier studies were inadequately carried out and they had little impact on mental health research.

Within the past three years, however, several more thoroughly conducted studies have verified a winter and spring excess of schizophrenic births in Northern Europe.

In South Africa, where the seasons are reversed, two scientists reported in 1974 a significant excess of schizophrenic births for May through October.

Dr. E. Fuller Torrey of St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Washington and coworkers decided to see if the seasonal situation was the same in the United States. They studied the cases of 53,584 people with schizophrenia in 19 states and found a similar seasonal relationship.

Reporting the findings in the September issue of Archives of General Psychiatry, the researchers said there was a clustering of births in January, March, April and May of people who eventually developed schizophrenia. March and April appeared to be the peak months.

A striking exception to this pattern was an elevation of schizophrenic births in June in South Carolina and in July in Georgia and North Carolina. In South Carolina, for example, births of people who eventually developed the illness were 91 per cent higher in June than would be expected from the overall monthly average.

The outstanding question, the researchers said, is why do these seasonal birth patterns occur?

One possibility, they said, was pregnant women might not receive proper nutrition at some times of the year and this might be responsible for brain damage in their unborn children. One idea is that protein deficiency occurs most commonly in summer months — the first three months of pregnancy for winter births — and this might produce more schizophrenic and mentally retarded individuals.

Another theory is that a seasonal environmental factor plays a role. One scientist proposed that climatic factors somehow might interfere with development of the egg.

The report said since many infectious agents are more common in one season or another, they must be considered as possible explanations. The scientists said viruses are of particular interest because of their ability to disrupt the function of cells without affecting their structure.

They also noted that seasonality has been reported for some complications of pregnancy and for some inherited problems. Miscarriages, for example, were reported to be more frequent in late winter and early spring in New York City. Stillbirths in the nation have been found to be more common in March and April.

"What is clear at this point is that more studies are needed in attempts to identify the etiological factors producing the seasonality of schizophrenic births," the report said.

"Hippocrates noted long ago that the seasonality of a disease may provide clues to its cause. This would appear to be as valid now as it was then."

In addition to Torrey, the study was carried out by Barbara Torrey of the Office of Management and Budget and Dr. Michael Peterson of the Food and Drug Administration.

Whooping Cranes Get New Chance

BOSQUE DEL APACHE, N.M. (UPI)—Two years ago Ida was an orphan. Barely 6 months old, she traveled 800 miles with her foster parents across the plains and mountains of the West.
Now Ida, although not completely mature, is the "old lady" among a select group seeking a new home.
Ida is a whooping crane, one of only about 120 in the world. She and her peers are the largest birds in North America, and until recently her kind had appeared to be doomed to extinction.
Her brilliant white plumage shining in the bright sun, Ida flew into New Mexico's central Rio Grande Valley this fall, ending her 800-mile migration from Idaho. With her came a new member of a tiny flock of whoopers.

Ida and her companion were the first of an experimental flock of whooping cranes to arrive at Bosque del Apache National Wildlife Refuge this fall. Tom Smylie of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said six or seven more whoopers are expected.
The two birds arrived at Bosque del Apache last weekend after migrating from their nesting grounds at Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge in Idaho. The rest of the flock has stopped at a refuge near Monte Vista, Colo., and will continue to Bosque del Apache later. The Fish and Wildlife Service hopes to establish the Western flock of whoopers to protect the bird.

Labor Wins Few Battles Despite Heavily Democratic Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Labor won an important victory in the House with passage of the National Labor Relations Board reform measure. But that was only the first against a string of losses on other always centered in the House, because the Senate traditionally gives the needed votes with less effort by the lobbyists.

The first test came on the construction site picketing measure, which has been around Congress for more than a decade and looked like a sure thing this year. It was defeated in the House early in the year.

The next major setback came on the minimum wage bill. The House passed it, raising the current level of $2.30 an hour to $2.65 in January and up to $3.05 in two subsequent annual steps.

But major provisions in the bill, such as the automatic "indexing" clause providing annual adjustments, and the tip credit, were deleted on the floor through GOP-sponsored amendments.

So it was that the Committee on Political Education, the political arm of the AFL-CIO, analyzed the minimum wage voting to alert its sympathizers that the 289-146 division of Democrats over Republicans in the House is an illusion that should be remembered for the life of this Congress.

The analysis is worth noting here, if for no other reason than a lesson in politics and how the big time lobbyists "count heads."

COPE rightly concluded that Republicans cannot prevail on just the help of southern Democrats, that conservative bloc estimated anywhere from 60 to 80 members that has long formed a coalition to thwart the Democratic-controlled House.

"If all Republicans and all southern Democrats stuck together, they'd have 216 votes. But on the key minimum wage votes, from 10 to 15 Republicans backed labor's position on each issue, as did from 18 to 43 southern Democrats, depending on the issue," said COPE.

"So, in each instance, the conservative position picked up a goodly number of Democratic votes outside the South."

COPE noted. On the indexing issue, COPE said, "97 Democrats voted with the conservatives, 30 of them non-southern. Since the vote itself went 223-193, had 16 of these stuck with the President and with labor's position, indexing would have carried."

Analysis

major bills in this heavily Democratic Congress.

When the 95th Congress convened in January, many observers made the mistake of assuming that the big 2-1 margin of Democrats over Republicans assured smooth sailing for labor bills that long languished in committees or were defeated outright in the House for lack of large enough Democratic majority.

The major test of labor's strength has

Park Service Offers Lesser Known Attractions

By JAMES PHILLIPS
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Tired of fighting crowds at the Washington Monument? Too jaded for the Grand Canyon? If so, the National Park Service invites you to visit the Saugus Iron Works.
 The major attractions are not the only government sites for tourists to visit, the service says. There are lesser-known places. Some of them are very, very lesser known.
 Take, for example, the iron works. On this national historic site in Saugus, Mass., the first integrated iron works in North America has been reconstructed. Your eyes can feast on a furnace, a forge, and a rolling and slitting mill.
 On your return home, you can describe the works to your friends without fear of learning they've already seen it. The iron works definitely does not attract as many visitors as the Statue of Liberty.

 If iron isn't your bag, try the Fort Union Trading Post, a national historical site straddling the North Dakota-Montana border. It celebrates the principal fur trading depot for the Upper Missouri region from 1829 to 1867.
 Admittedly, the view does not match that of Mount Rushmore. All that remains of this frontier outpost are crumbling foundations. But you won't have to battle throngs of hot and sweaty tourists.
 The park service maintains 173 national historic sites, created either by act of Congress or presidential proclamation to preserve areas of America's past.
 The park service can provide you with the names of all the historical sites maintained at taxpayer expense. Not all are obscure. Included in this classification, for example, is the White House.

 Then there's Mar-A-Lago in Palm Beach, Fla., billed in a government brochure as a "private mansion representative of the affluent society's way of life in the 1920s."
 Alas, the same brochure says the mansion "is not open to the public."
 This is only proper. What could be more "representative of the affluent society's way of life" than snubbing summer hordes of tourists with screaming kids?
 Actually, the huge estate, built for $8 million in 1927, is simply too expensive for even the government to keep open.
 One home you can enter is that of the late Augustus Saint-Gaudens, the turn-of-the-century sculptor of American heroes. The New Hampshire site memorializes his studio and gardens.

A journey here can provide you with conversational one-upmanship for years when you casually cite Saint-Gaudens' works. Even an Interior Department employe admitted Saint-Gaudens "is not as well known as Michelangelo."
 If your kid wants to be a cowpoke, try Grant-Kohrs Ranch near Deer Lodge, Mont. This national historic site "was the headquarters of one of the largest and best known 19th Century range ranches in the country," the government reports.
 Another choice spot is Pipestone National Monument in Minnesota. This is a quarry where "Indians obtained materials for making peace pipes used in ceremonies."

Advance Terrorist Policy Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An authority on terrorists warns that nothing short of a police state can forestall terrorist tactics, and he urges governments to ready "methods for defusing the danger."

Dr. Frederick J. Hacker, a Los Angeles psychiatrist and author who has aided authorities in several of the most spectacular terrorist hostage cases, stressed the need for good-faith negotiation rather than threats or the use of force in such situations.

"I think that urban guerrilla warfare is indeed a danger, mainly because terrorism up to now has been so spectacularly successful," Hacker said in an interview in the November issue of Penthouse magazine.

"I can easily imagine all sorts of disgruntled groups, such as the Puerto Rican Independence Movement and other people who feel they have been unjustly treated, using the techniques of urban guerrilla warfare."

Hacker said this week the only way to defuse the danger is through a social policy worked out well in advance.

The key to success is a firm general policy that uses violence only as a last resort, Hacker said.

Two points should be considered absolutely non-negotiable, he said: providing terrorists with additional arms and turning over to them anyone hostile to their cause.

"Everything else should be negotiable — at least in principle," Hacker said.

Hacker also cautioned terrorist groups already are circulating instruction books for making nuclear weapons and may someday try to hold a city hostage with the threat of a homemade atomic explosion.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission experts have said there is little chance a group of terrorists could successfully build and set off a nuclear weapon. But university students have devised plans for crude atomic bombs. And Hacker in-dedicated an atomic threat by terrorists might have to be taken seriously.

The amount of lubricating oil that is discarded annually totals some one billion gallons—that would fill a tank 90 feet across and one mile high.

"We have to assume that they will make use of all the improved technology, including the use of atomic material or at least the threat of it. There are already instruction manuals circulating among these radical groups that outline how it could be done."

"When you think in terms of nuclear weapons, it is particularly foolish to refuse to negotiate with terrorists," he said.

"Imagine a group of terrorists disclosing, credibly, that they are flying over New York with an atom bomb. Are you going to say, 'Sorry, I can't talk to you because it's against my principles'? It would be absurd."

TELLER 24

24-hour banking/7 days a week

One teller at our bank never takes a coffee break.

Plains National has one teller that never takes a coffee break. For that matter, this teller doesn't break for lunch, never calls in sick, and never misses a day of work. Not even Saturday or Sunday or holidays.

You guessed it. Teller 24 is a machine. But it can do everything a regular teller can do (cash a check, verify an account balance, transfer funds from savings to checking or vice versa) and it does it every day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year.

Next time you need cash on weekends, talk to Teller 24. The next time you need a bank, talk to Plains National.

Paper Mill Announces Shutdown

JAY, Maine (AP) — International Paper Co. says it is taking an electrostatic base stock paper off the market and will sell or close its 265-employee Otis Mill here by Jan. 1.

IP said the closing of one of its oldest mills should have no significant effect on the company's earnings.

The paper-products company also said if a new buyer is not found, hourly employees hired before April 15, 1976, would be absorbed into the work force of a larger mill in the same town. Other workers would receive severance pay and other union-contract benefits.

The paper made at Otis Mill is used in liquid toner copy process copiers. The mill has operated at a loss in the last three years, largely because plain-paper copiers have been developed, the company said.

The company said it is discussing the sale of the plant with a prospective buyer.

IP has a total Maine work force of about 1,700. Of that total, 1,225 are employed at the newly built Androscoggin Mill, also located here.

IP said the Otis mill, built in 1888 by Hugh Chishom, a founder of International Paper, was one of the 20 mills that made up the original company, founded in 1868.

At the turn of the century, Otis was the largest mill in the world. But it has since given way to modern mills, which use huge papermaking machines and the latest technology.

International Paper said recently that Otis has been producing 20,000 tons of paper a year, when its capacity is 50,000 tons.

The fluctuating paper market has caused Otis to undergo temporary layoffs, five-day work weeks and week-long shutdowns, IP said.

Survey Shows Winter Energy Supplies Adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — New energy supply surveys indicate the nation could get through even a severe winter this year without the extensive plant closings and layoffs that hit last winter.

An Energy Department survey shows the nation should have enough fuel oil this winter to make up for expected shortages of natural gas, even if the weather is severe.

At the same time, the staff of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission reported there may be more natural gas available for emergency purchases this winter than last.

Taken together with commission findings that interstate pipelines have found additional gas supplies in recent months and with the ability of industries to switch to alternate fuels, the new surveys appear to indicate the nation's energy supply will not cause economic disruptions as severe as last winter's.

The department is to combine all of the information in an official public report later this month or in early November.

But the key information already has been submitted by the commission staff and the department in memos to the commission, which has been closely watching the prospect of natural gas shortages.

The commission has predicted gas shortages in the neighborhood of 23 percent this winter, and shortages close to that appear certain to occur.

But many industries can avoid shutting down operations when their gas service is curtailed by switching to fuel oil or propane. And, the recent reports indicate that the gas shortage will be a little less severe than previously feared, because some new gas supplies may be available.

"Certain states appear more susceptible than others to shortages of alternate fuels," the Energy Department reported.

In normal winter weather, it said, there should be no shortages of either middle distillate (light) fuel oil or residual (heavy) fuel oil.

In a winter 10 percent colder than normal, it said, a shortage of light fuel oil could develop only in Montana, and there should be no shortages of heavy oil. Last winter averaged 11.5 percent colder than normal.

In a memo obtained by The Associated Press, however, the department warned that propane could run short in a few states because of inadequate transportation.

Propane supplies may be tight in the Carolinas even in a normal winter, the department said, and in severe weather propane shortages could spread to Tennessee, Kentucky, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

The department's report did not estimate the extent of possible propane shortages or their potential economic impact.

On Monday, a commission staff study indicated six interstate pipelines which previously expected gas shortages causing thousands of plant shutdowns have found additional gas supplies and now anticipate only a few plant closings.

Further improving the situation is the staff's new report, based on a telephone survey, that almost twice as much gas may become available for emergency purchases this winter as last winter.

The staff warned that this estimate looks high and may have to be reduced

By SUE SHELLNBARGER

CHICAGO (AP) — Emily Mittl watched as the heir to the throne of Great Britain swept away in a white Lincoln, her black cotton coat fading to gray in the floodlights of the hotel entrance.

"Shorter. He's shorter than I thought he'd be," said the middle-aged woman, standing still on red carpeting as police in blue swirled around her. She clutched a plastic tote bag commemorating the Silver Jubilee.

"Maybe it was just that the security guards were so tall."

"But oh, he's charming. Handsome. And such beautiful blue eyes. Some girl's going to be lucky to get him."

She patted her wig and began to move off with a crowd of some hundreds of other Chicagoans who greeted Britain's Prince Charles here Tuesday. "I always wanted to go to England, especially this year with the Silver Jubilee. But now, with him here, this is almost as good," she said.

Admirers of the bachelor prince, the most dogged of them elderly women, waited patiently along guarded walkways for a glimpse of Charles, 29, whose royal title is a paragraph long and whose solicitous manner puts even the most timid at ease.

He flew to Chicago Tuesday as the first stop on a nine-day tour of 10 midwestern, southern and western cities.

After a day and a half in Chicago, he will visit Cleveland, St. Louis, Atlanta and Athens, Ga.; Charleston, S.C.; Houston, San Antonio, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

The visit is Prince Charles' first official trip to the United States and is a kind of belated tribute to the American Bicentennial, according to British officials. He was last in the United States when he and his sister, Princess Anne, were the guests of former President Nixon in 1970, although he visited Canada as recently as July.

After a quick rush-hour ride Tuesday from O'Hare International Airport during which police caused massive traffic jams by blocking traffic along the prince's expressway route, he opened his Chicago visit with an off-the-record press reception at the Drake Hotel.

Sipping a gin and tonic, he moved gracefully around the new Avenue One Room restaurant at the Drake, followed closely by Peter Jay, British ambassador to the United States, greeting each guest in turn.

Most Chicagoans there forgot they should address him as "Your Royal Highness," and came out with "Prince Charles" instead. And no one curtsied.

The touring party today will visit the Art Institute and the University of Chicago, where the prince will lunch with 230 "randomly selected" undergraduates and hold a discussion with 60 other undergraduates on the proposition, "George III was a good thing for America."

A tour of laboratories and other sites significant in the university's pioneering atomic research will be followed by a visit to the Museum of Science and Industry.

Mayor Michael A. Bilandic will host a black tie dinner for Prince Charles tonight.

Georgia Workers Join Lockheed Union Strike

MARIETTA, Ga. (AP) — Picket signs went up at the big Lockheed-Georgia plant in Marietta just after midnight Tuesday, as members of Local 709 of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers went on strike.

They joined another 14,500 union members on strike against Lockheed plants in California.

Meanwhile, almost 24,000 union workers continued their strike against Boeing facilities in Seattle, Portland, Ore., and Wichita, Kan., where workers walked off their jobs Oct. 4.

The local, which represents 5,000 of the 8,600 employees at the Marietta plant, had voted overwhelmingly Sunday to reject the company's latest contract offer, union officials said.

Union president Reeves Bowen said the major issue in the strike was what he called attempts by the company to "gut the seniority system all across the contract."

Other issues, he said, were retirement benefits and wages.

A Lockheed spokesman called Bowen's view of the company's position "sheer demagoguery," and said the company sought only "a reasonable middle ground" on the issue of seniority.

When union members at Lockheed plants in California voted to strike Oct. 3, employees at Lockheed-Georgia voted to return to negotiations rather than join the strike. Bowen said talks broke down last week.

The Marietta plant produces C-130 cargo planes and four-engine executive jet aircraft.

Meanwhile, striking machinists met for three hours with Lockheed Corp. in Los Angeles Tuesday for the first time in two weeks to seek an end to the nine-day-old strike in southern California.

In northern California, talks were to resume today for another 4,000 workers at Lockheed's facility in Sunnyvale, near San Francisco.

Christie Encouraged To Run For Senate

AUSTIN (UPI) — Joe Christie, who resigned last month as chairman of the State Insurance Board to "consider" a race for the U.S. Senate, was encouraged Tuesday night to enter that race.

Christie and his family were honored at a $100-a-plate fund-raising dinner, just two days before Christie has called a news conference to announce whether he will challenge Rep. Bob Krueger, D-Tex., for the Democratic nomination to the Senate.

Pilots Seek Crackdown On Pirates

LONDON (UPI) — Airline pilots from nine Western nations will back a two-day strike next week — an action that could strand thousands of passengers around the world — to lobby for an international crackdown on air pirates.

Pilots in Britain, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Greece, Belgium, Holland, Spain and Australia, angered by the slaying of a German pilot by hijackers in Southern Yemen, vowed Tuesday to support the walkout.

French, West German, Austrian and Portuguese pilots also are expected to back the strike, which the International Federation of Airline Pilots Association wants to last 48 hours beginning at 7 a.m. CDT next Tuesday.

American pilots agreed with the need for tighter airport security, but made no immediate decision on whether to take part in the protest.

A spokesman for Australia's Qantas airline said about 8,000 of its passengers alone would be affected by a walkout.

The London-based International Federation, which has 55,000 members in 64 countries, wants the U.N. General Assembly to convene a special session to draft an agreement denying sanctuaries to hijackers.

At least one-third of all U.N. member nations have never signed three international agreements on air piracy.

The strike will be called off "only if we can persuade the United Nations to sign and ratify the three conventions," said Capt. Roy Hutchings, president of the British Airline Pilots Association.

In Hong Kong, Capt. Derry Pearce, president of the international pilots group, said the strike's aim is "to gain enforcement of a convention to deny civilian aviation to those states that provide sanctuaries for hijackers."

"The recent trend in the severity of hijackings has become a carnage and savagery," he said. "Something must be done."

Pearce referred to the slaying Monday of Lufthansa pilot Juergen Schumann, 37, by four hijackers who threatened to kill 86 other hostages until West German commandos rescued them in Somalia.

Hutchings said, "We have to do something in a hurry. And it's not really the crews we're concerned with — it's 86 passengers who've had the most appalling experience in the most dreadful conditions."

Capt. Richard Holt, president of the Australian pilots' federation, said airlines are facing "murder and piracy by experts ... and these people have come to be a very great danger which is growing rapidly."

"There is death and destruction along the way for large numbers of people unless we take action now," he said.

The U.N. plans to discuss anti-hijacking measures during its 1977 session, but it is doubtful that would happen before Tuesday, although Secretary General Kurt Waldheim is discussing the possibilities with advisors.

Band Marching Slated At Jones Stadium

Twenty-three area junior and senior high school bands will take part in the "Marching Festival" Saturday in Jones Stadium, sponsored by Texas Tech's school.

Jim Toland, with Tech's Music Department, said the event would serve as a warm up for the upcoming University Interscholastic League competition Nov. 1-2 at Jones Stadium. UIL rules would be followed in the festival, he said.

The event will begin at 4 p.m. with the Littlefield Junior High School band and will end about 9 p.m. with the Big Spring High School band.

Toland said judging would be based on band maneuvers, one to four.

There will be four high school band directors judging performances — Verda Herrington of Austin Anderson, Tim Jones of Hamlin, Norvill Howell of Clovis, N.M., and J.W. King Jr. of Canyon. Toland said the event is not a competition for top honors, but advice will be offered and criticism given.

Sponsoring the festival will be the Tech band, Kappa Kappa Psi Fraternity and Tau Beta Sigma sorority. Persons seeking information at the festival may go to the sorority and fraternity members who will be dressed in blue jerseys.

Admission to the public will be 25 cents, and high school band members can get in free if they wear their band uniforms.

The 16 acres of Manhattan Island covered by the United Nations Headquarters is international territory, not under the jurisdiction of the United States.

Police Seek Cause Of Student's Death

MARTINSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Investigators looked to a fingerprint check and dental records today in the effort to positively identify a body found in a cornfield as that of a young woman who disappeared Sept. 12 en route to Indiana University.

The body discovered Tuesday was tentatively identified as missing coed Ann Louise Harmeier, 20, of Cambridge City. An autopsy also was being performed to determine the cause of death.

Morgan County Coroner James Summers said he could not determine whether the young woman was slain because the body "was so badly decomposed."

State police said they found a shoe string and a hairbrush around the young woman's neck, leading them to believe she might have been strangled.

The remains were found by a farmer harvesting corn five miles from where Miss Harmeier disappeared along Indiana 37 Sept. 12. She was driving to school from her home when her car conked out. The auto, its parking lights blinking, was found abandoned along the highway two miles north of here.

Summers said the body was that of a female about 20 years old and appeared to have been in the field five weeks.

At the scene police found a red shirt, jeans and tennis shoes which they said matched the description of what Miss Harmeier was wearing when last seen.

State troopers also said a purse found next to the body contained a paper with Miss Harmeier's name on it and jewelry and other items known to belong to the coed.

A police chaplain and minister went to Cambridge City to advise the coed's mother, Marjorie Harmeier.

The farmer, Lawrence Stafford, said, "I was just going along picking corn and ran on the body there between two rows."

He said his children often ride motorbikes through the area and as recently as Monday, his small son, Jim, rode within 100 feet of where the body was found and noticed nothing.

Miss Harmeier's disappearance triggered a nationwide search and an outpouring of time, concern and money from her hometown.

Miss Harmeier, a drama major and an "A" student at the university, returned home often to visit her mother. Her father, Robert, died of a brain tumor when Miss Harmeier was 4 years old.

The people of Cambridge City mounted a community effort in the search for the coed, spreading bumper stickers, posters and billboards across southern Indiana. Tractors distributed thousands of posters with Miss Harmeier's picture throughout the nation.

A citizens' committee collected more than $10,000 in pledges and $5,000 in cash to pay for the advertising blitz and a reward fund.

Congratulations

Lubbock Officers Probe Residential Burglaries

An assortment of burglaries and thefts again kept police investigators busy as numerous residents fell victim to such incidents.

H.G. Davis of 3021 22nd St. told officers he was relieved of several items stored in his garage Monday. Among the goods reportedly stolen were a shotgun, a set of golf clubs, three tennis rackets and a bicycle.

Another sports-minded thief got away with about $700 worth of fishing equipment from Neil Mitchell's 2517 33rd St. home Sunday or Monday.

According to Louise Marie Coleman of 3411 E. Baylor St., $350 worth of costume rings and a calculator were stolen by whoever broke through a window at her residence Tuesday.

David Holbert of 2311 19th St., No. 225, reported the loss of his $441 television after someone forced a window at his apartment Tuesday, and Glenn Benson told police someone using the same mode of entry made off with a stereo speaker from his 602 Walnut Ave. house the same day.

Two women said their wallets were stolen from their shopping carts at Lubbock grocery stores Tuesday afternoon.

Janie Stephenson of 512 E. 36th St. told officers she noticed her wallet was missing when she got to the checkout stand of an Avenue Q store about 3 p.m. The woman said she last saw the billfold, and the $105 it contained, in the cart.

Aline Phillips Watson of 1919 34th St. related a similar story, saying her wallet and $15 was taken as she shopped at a 34th Street market about 5:30 p.m. Reports indicated the billfold, sans cash, later was found behind a counter at the store.

Owner Gene G. Nelson of 3402 41st St. said intruders struck his business at 2322 Slaton Highway sometime between 6 p.m. Monday and 8:15 a.m. Tuesday, hauling away equipment and tools valued at $6,767.

Nelson said the burglars also caused damage to the structure after trying unsuccessfully to enter an office window at which a rock had been thrown.

After prying the locks from two store-rooms, the intruders hauled away a spate of sophisticated equipment, oil, anti-freeze, magnesium wheels and an estimated $2,500 worth of tools.

About the same time, someone broke into Willie Light's pickup parked on a 6025 Ave. A parking lot. The Littlefield resident told police the burglars snatched a commercial radio valued at $1,200 in addition to an eight-track stereo unit and a CB radio.

Tom W. Mixon told officers a named suspect made off with 56 pounds of steaks from a restaurant at 106 E. Broadway last summer, a potential feast worth nearly $200. Mixon said he recently had learned of the man's whereabouts and decided to file a complaint.

Rodney Davis of 1630 17th St. said someone stole a color television worth $800 from him sometime Monday.

A bike worth a reported $145 was stolen from William J. Pierson of 3804 30th St. The bike, stolen earlier this fall, was taken from a front porch, Pierson said.

Despite the late season, G. W. Simpson of 711 Vardo Lane said someone stole his $75 lawnmower from his carport Monday or Tuesday.

Carpet panels valued at $194 reportedly were stolen from a vehicle on a car lot at 4611 Ave. Q late Monday or early Tuesday.

Burglars also swiped a two-wheeled trailer worth an estimated $300 from the street in front of Robert Noble's 3102 45th St. residence. The theft occurred late Monday or early Tuesday, reports indicated.

Two unsold mobile homes were the targets of burglars Monday or Tuesday, Duane Harrod of 3401 78th Drive told police. Harrod said the intruders stole bedspreads and caused damage to the doors of the trailers, inflicting a $180 loss. The trailers were parked at 1405 N. University Ave., Harrod said.

Fort Worth Officers Under Investigation

FORT WORTH (UPI) — Deputy Police Chief C.A. Corn Tuesday said the department's internal affairs division would investigate allegations of unethical conduct against six officers.

The policemen were accused Tuesday of attending parties at the home of two women, having sex with them and drinking liquor while on duty. Corn said the men had not been suspended or transferred.

Modern Pioneers Seek Home In Wyoming Desert

WAMSUTTER, Wyo. (AP) — A group of modern-day pioneers has been drawn to the high plateau of the Red Desert for the back-to-the-land life. But some of the 139 townspeople here fear the 18 families they've come to call the "desert rats" won't make it through the winter.

"It isn't good, that's for dang sure," says Wamsutter Mayor James Hennek, who has lived here for 35 years. "If we have a mild winter, fine. But the kids kind of shook people up. They can't get along as well as adults."

Water, firewood and game are as scarce as modern conveniences in this harsh land, where some companies are starting to tap the oil and natural gas deposits. But the lure of owning a plot of land at a time when land ownership is being consolidated into fewer hands has been strong for the families, who have built their homes 20 miles south of Wamsutter. Many of the homes are little more than shanties.

The families were drawn to southwestern Wyoming by advertisements placed by the Triad Land Co., a firm in Rawlins, about 40 miles east of here. The advertisements, on billboards and in outdoor magazines, offered 40-acre tracts of land for $4,500, or $50 down and $40 per month.

The advertisements were read by people like Ted Schrouf, a Pennsylvanian who gave up a $20,000-a-year job and two houses to come to the Red Desert. Schrouf's four-room desert home is insulated with tarpaper.

"We know it's dangerous. People know what they're in for out here," said Schrouf. "In the future I can see this being a little community out here, possibly a small town."

"I fear that they may freeze to death," said Sweetwater County social worker Patricia Brown. "They are going to have a very rough time making it through the winter. Some people are stockpiling wood, but not enough to make it through the winter."

She said she talked with families from Colorado, Oregon and Pennsylvania, but came away discouraged after they told her they never had lived without heat, electricity and running water.

The families have none of these conveniences. For water, they drive to a well used to water cattle, and Wamsutter residents say that well freezes during the winter.

"They own that 40 acres, and that's very precious to a lot of people," said Mrs. Brown. "I admire the people's spirit, but I feel for them."

Negotiators Oppose Canal Pact Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. negotiators of the Panama Canal treaty said today a clarification worked out by President Carter and Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos may help public understanding of the pact, but need not be incorporated into the document.

The statement of understanding issued by the two leaders last Friday did not carry their signatures because "it added nothing to the treaty itself," former Ambassador Sol M. Linowitz told the Senate Foreign Relations committee.

He repeated the White House position that there never was any difference of views between Carter and Torrijos as to the meaning of the treaty's provisions for future U.S. defense and use of the canal.

Questions about interpretation of those provisions arose when the word "intervention" was injected into the debate over the treaty. But neither he nor fellow negotiator Ellsworth Bunker ever used that word, Linowitz said.

Linowitz and Bunker were invited to appear before the Senate panel to explain and defend the clarifying statement that Carter hopes will secure the treaty's approval by the Senate.

Although they said there was no need to make it part of the treaty, some senators said they thought it should be given more official status.

"It seems to me that the American people would be better satisfied if this understanding were formalized in some way," said Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho. "I see nothing to be lost by that, and I think people would be reassured to know that both countries understand the meaning of the treaty the same way."

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., said he was "sympathetic" to Church's view, but said the Senate should resist demands that it attach "reservations" to the pact when it is ratified. "I hope we'll recognize that these demands for reservations are just another way of trying to destroy the treaty," Javits said.

As the hearing began, aides distributed copies of a report that Panama's chief negotiator, Romulo Escobar Bethancourt, had told a news conference in Panama on Tuesday that there is no difference in the U.S. and Panamanian views of the treaty's security terms.

Escobar was quoted as saying both countries recognized that after the canal is turned over to Panama in the year 2000, each will have a right to defend the canal's neutrality, but not to interfere in the domestic affairs of the other. He also said U.S. warships would have priority access to the waterway in time of war, according to the report.

Linowitz said this conformed to the Carter-Torrijos statement, which he and Escobar jointly drafted here on Friday.

The White House hoped Bunker and Linowitz could convince the senators that the understanding reached by Carter and Torrijos would eliminate any uncertainty about the canal security provisions.

But Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., one of those pressing to have the terms spelled out in the treaty, noted that Torrijos was quoted as saying he hadn't signed any new agreement.

"No sooner had we been told by Ambassador Linowitz that the clarifying language had been worked out than we received reports from Panama City that the general had not agreed to any right to this military action in the canal, stating, 'I haven't even signed an autograph,'" Hollings said.

Such uncertainty about an agreement that won't go into full effect for 23 more years makes it vital that the treaty be specific, he said.

In a closed-door meeting Tuesday, the panel took no action on a suggestion that it travel to Panama for a "first-hand look" at canal defenses. But it decided to study further the idea of some members going in smaller groups or as part of a "task force," committee sources said.

Some senators were said to have expressed worry that the entire committee traveling as an official group or holding hearings in the Canal Zone might offend the Panamanians or Canal Zone residents on an already-delicate issue.

COMMANDO FORCE LEADERS — Commander Ulrich Wegener, right, talks with Hans Juergen Wischnewski, West German Secretary of State, Tuesday after the special anti-terrorist commando force returned to Cologne-Bonn airport. Wegener was military commander of the force that stormed the hijacked Lufthansa jetliner, killing three of four terrorists aboard. Wischnewski was in general control of the force that followed the hijacked jet from one airfield to another. (AP Laserphoto)

Optimists Set Meet Saturday Terrorists Open Bombing Attack

About 250 officers of the North Texas District of Optimist Clubs are expected to attend the organization's quarterly board meeting here this weekend.

The meeting will be headquartered at the Hilton Inn, with the general session scheduled all day Saturday at Memorial Civic Center.

Speaking Saturday night will be A. Coy Dean of Alexander, Ark., vice president of Optimist International for 1977-78. Also attending will be Jim Welch of Grand Prairie, newly elected governor of the North Texas District.

Tom Kinder, president of Monterey Optimist Club here, said officers at the meeting will represent the district's 95 clubs in 15 zones.

A welcoming party at the Hilton Inn Friday night will kick off the activities.

An executive committee and district chairmen's meeting is scheduled for 7:30 a.m. Saturday at the civic center.

Saturday's activities also include two general sessions, a meeting of the nominating committee, leadership training workshops and a dinner dance beginning at 7 p.m.

Sunday there will be a zone breakfast at 7:30 a.m., and the weekend event will end with Dean meeting with executive committee members and district chairmen at 9:30 a.m.

Kinder said there also will be activities for the wives during the weekend.

As radical lawyers voiced suspicions that the three members of the Baader-Meinhof gang were murdered, the Baden-Wuerttemberg state government invited three foreign doctors to take part in autopsies on the bodies.

A government spokesman said security experts warned the cabinet to expect a "spontaneous reaction for the freedom of other jailed terrorists."

The government and the chairmen of the major political parties joined in a statement, saying it was clear German terrorists are dedicated "to further sharpening of their fanatical and murderous struggle."

The violent backlash to the deaths erupted almost immediately.

Bombs wrecked three German automobile showrooms in the Italian cities of Turin and Leghorn early today. A caller to an Italian news agency said the "Revolutionary Armed Groups" were responsible for the Turin attacks. The caller ended the message "Honor to the comrades fallen in Germany."

There were no injuries in the attacks.

Leftists marched in Rome, Milan, Genoa, Athens and London.

In London, marchers outside the West German Embassy chanted "Murder! Murder!" In Rome, riot police and ar-more cars kept the marchers away from the West German Embassy.

Seventeen lawyers who have represented terrorist suspects in West Germany issued a statement suggesting that the government killed the three prisoners to appease public demands for revenge in the wake of recent terrorist actions.

The Baden-Wuerttemberg government reported Tuesday that Baader, the 34-year-old co-founder of West Germany's most active terrorist organization, and Jan-Carl Raspe, 33, shot themselves in the head in their cells in a maximum-security prison in Stuttgart early Tuesday, and Gudrun Ensslin, 37, Baader's mistress, hanged herself in her cell.

They said another terrorist, Irmgard Moeller, 30, stabbed herself in the chest with a bread knife but was recovering in a hospital.

Baader, Raspe and Miss Ensslin were the core of the Red Army Faction, an ultra-leftist group known popularly as the Baader-Meinhof gang. Its co-leader, Ulrike Meinhof, was found hanged in her cell in May, 1976, and her death also touched off bombings and other violent protests and allegations of murder.

The four Stuttgart prisoners were among 11 German terrorists whose freedom had been demanded by terrorists who hijacked a Lufthansa jetliner last Thursday. The deaths came only hours after West German commandos stormed the hijacked plane in Somalia, killing three of the four hijackers and rescuing the hostages.

Baader, Raspe and the two women were in separate isolation cells in what was supposed to be West Germany's most secure prison, and the state justice minister, Taugott Bender, told a televised news conference it was not known how they obtained the weapons.

He said the guards did not hear the pistol shots, and authorities were not even sure whether the prisoners knew of the hijacking and its failure.

Energy Bill

The conferees turned down four compromise proposals Tuesday.

But they instructed the staff to draft still a further compromise, suggested by Johnston, for today's deliberations.

President Carter warned the conferees Tuesday that the public will judge Congress this year by whatever they do on energy policy.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn. who will work on tax aspects of the final energy bill, met with Carter at the White House and said afterward, "If there was ever a time when cooperation is needed between Congress and the President, the time is now."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., co-author of a bill to deregulate natural gas, also met with Carter and said later he expects a compromise on that issue. Earlier in the day, Carter had a session with Rep. Thomas Ashley, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Energy Committee and a leader of the House conferees.

It was during the Ashley session that the President warned Congress it is facing public judgment on the energy bill.

Whatever emerges from the House-Senate conference, he said, "will determine the success or failure of the whole year's work of Congress in the minds of the American people."

INVADER FROM ANOTHER WORLD — Staff Sgt. Danny Bollinger, security policeman at Charleston Air Force Base, S.C., hoses down a big alligator after it was found near the flight line. Authorities said the gator probably wandered in from a marshy area nearby. The reptile was turned over to South Carolina Wildlife and Marine Resource officials. (AP Laserphoto)

Hance, Sheats Lead Campaign Donations

By PAT PATRICK

Republican congressional candidate George W. Bush is running a close third in contributions in the field of three candidates seeking to succeed retiring U.S. Rep. George Mahon, according to a financial report he filed with the Federal Election Commission.

The report shows him with $13,350 in campaign donations through Sept. 30. Democrats Kent Hance and Morris Sheats reported $17,609 and $13,399 respectively through the same period.

Bush reported $2,433.30 in expenses, compared to Hance's zero and Sheats' $5,880.

Hance said that while he had some expenses before the Sept. 30 cutoff date, rules allow him to show them on the next report, due shortly after Jan. 31.

The report by Bush, a Midland oilman, noted seven contributions of $1,000 among nearly 40 individual gifts.

They were from Richard Gibson, Midland attorney; L. E. Sawyer Jr., Midland attorney; W. H. Munn II, Midland, independent oil and gas business; Jack Wilkinson Jr., Midland, real estate; Mr. and Mrs. Michael Wood, Washington, D.C., publishing; Barbara P. Bush, Houston, housewife; and George H. W. Bush, Houston, the candidate's father who was once director of the Central Intelligence Agency and is a former congressman.

Other contributors of more than $250, according to the report, include — Henry E. Catto Jr., San Antonio, investments; Charles M. Younger, Midland, physician both $250.

— Ralph Way, Midland, independent oil and gas business; Jack L. Russell, Midland, independent oil and gas business; Dorothy W. Bush, Greenwich, Conn., housewife; Mr. and Mrs. Jack Brown, Midland, independent oil and gas business; V. F. Neuhaus, Mission, investor and rancher; and a business listed as Whitaker Oil Properties of Orlando, Fla.

An election commission spokesman said the latter would be an illegal contribution if it had come directly from a business' treasury.

Auto Explodes; Oilman Killed

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Millionaire Ray Ryan was killed Tuesday when "a bomb of large dimensions" ripped apart his luxury automobile in the parking lot of a health spa here.

Ryan, 72, apparently was murdered by professionals who rigged a bomb to the car, said Frank Cook, a local officer of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. He said there were no suspects.

The explosion broke windows and knocked pictures off the walls of a nearby apartment building. It also knocked out a substation of Southern Indiana Gas and Electric Co., halting electric service three hours to a section of Evansville's east side and a part of neighboring Warrick County.

Ryan acquired his wealth in the oil business and later owned a resort at Palm Springs, Calif., and a gambling casino in Las Vegas.

He also had joint ownership with film actor William Holden in the Mt. Kenya Safari Club in Africa.

Cook said Ryan had just finished a two-hour workout at the Olympia Health and Beauty Resort, not far from his fashionable two-story brick home.

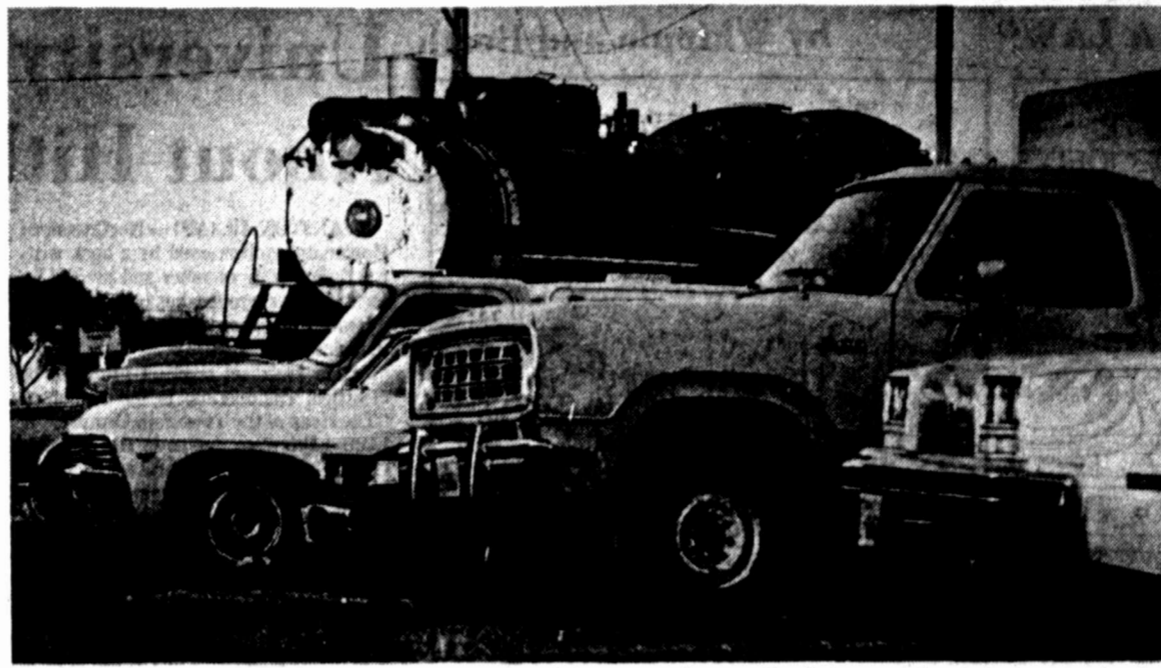

Cook said investigators were trying to determine whether the bomb was detonated by remote control or set off when Ryan got into the Lincoln Continental.

Two spa members were the first to reach Ryan, found face down with his feet under the car on the driver's side. They pulled him away from the burning wreckage. He was taken to a hospital and pronounced dead on arrival.

Parts of the car were found as far away as 150 feet.

Ryan recently filed suit in U.S. Tax Court in Washington protesting assessment of about $9 million in federal taxes allegedly owed for 1958 through 1965, excluding 1963. The case was set for trial Nov. 15.

The government charged that Ryan's income was derived in part from many foreign sources, including gambling proceeds.

PARKING PROBLEM — It sometimes gets pretty crowded on the commuter parking lot at Texas Tech University, but not quite as bad as it appears in this photo. The locomotive isn't actually looking for a parking place. The historic steam engine, preserved as a relic of the past, already has one nearby. It's only the camera's telephoto lens that makes the engine look as if it's vying for a spot. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

Police Eye Connection In Abilene

By PAT CARLSON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Abilene police today said they believe that the three robbers who made off with $9,000 from a supermarket there last week are the same trio that got away with almost $200,000 worth of goods from a Lubbock jewelry store earlier this month.

According to Lt. Ray Portolatin of the Abilene Police Department, investigators there are looking at the "strong possibility" the bandits are the same.

About 10 p.m. Thursday, two white men and a white woman separately entered one of the Super Duper Food Stores and began shopping. As they reached the two opened check-out stands a few minutes later, one of the men produced a revolver and demanded the money from the two registers.

Portolatin said the bandits then forced employees to open the safe and made all three attendants go to the rear of the store as they made their getaway. Reportedly there were no customers in the store at the time of the heist.

Police said they have received information on a certain vehicle possibly used by the trio; however, reportedly no one saw a car at the scene.

Abilene detectives also have been checking local motels in an effort to determine if the trio was from out of town, and also with other cities to establish possible connections with other crimes — the search which led them to the Lubbock jewel heist.

On Oct. 1, two white men and a white woman walked into Meyer's Jewelry Store at 5408 Slide Road minutes before taking possession of almost $200,000 worth of precious gems and jewelry.

The woman and one of the men had entered about 1 p.m. and asked to look at some rings. As a salesman showed them a couple of diamonds, the second man entered at the other end of the store.

As attendants helped the "customers" at each end of the store, the first man calmly removed a large revolver from his leisure suit jacket and said, "This is a holdup." Meanwhile, the second man near the front door quietly moved the salesman toward a corner display case.

The woman bandit was described as "hard looking," 5-4, 135 pounds with shoulder-length brown hair parted in the middle.

Both men were described as 35-45 years old, 5-9 and 195 pounds. One of the male suspects reportedly had short wavy reddish-blond hair.

According to Abilene authorities, the woman involved in last week's grocery store holdup had brown hair with clips on the sides, hazel eyes, was in her late 20s or early 30s, 5-6 and 150 pounds.

One of the men was about the same age, 5-10, 160-175 pounds and had sandy blond hair. Their accomplice reportedly was 5-8 to 5-11, 180-190 pounds, with reddish hair having possible bleached tips.

Lubbock police said they also are considering the possibility the trio in each heist was the same. Although possible suspects from other cities have been looked at during the course of the Lubbock investigation, detectives here say they, as yet, have no firm leads.

The owner of Meyer's Jewelry Store is offering a $5,000 reward for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the perpetrators of the Oct. 1 heist.

City Suspect Found Dead

Lubbock County Sheriff's Department deputies said they did not find out until Tuesday that the man charged with an April murder here committed suicide in a New Mexico jail Saturday without ever having been arrested for the homicide.

According to Capt. J.B. Douglas, deputies were doing routine follow-up work regarding the whereabouts of Oscar Mesa Flores, who had been charged and later indicted with the April 23 murder of 17-year-old Joel Hernandez of 303 E. Tulane St.

During a Tuesday conversation, Douglas said, a woman acquaintance of the suspect told lawmen that Flores was dead.

After making several phone calls, Douglas said, he was able to confirm that Flores had hanged himself in his Roswell jail cell last weekend. He also said that although the 27-year-old prisoner had been wanted by Lubbock authorities for almost six months, they were not contacted by New Mexico lawmen, and only "by chance" learned of the death.

Sgt. Albert Hill of the Chaves County Sheriff's Department late Tuesday said the inmate's body was discovered by two jailers at 8:51 p.m. Saturday. Flores, who reportedly listed a Roswell address and no employer on his jail card, had been charged in Roswell Oct. 10 with larceny over $100 and burglary of a residence, and his bond set at $1,500.

Hill said a note was found in the cell occupied only by Flores, and the body was sent to his mother who lives in California.

The Chaves County authorities did not run Flores's name through a national computer system because, as explained by Hill, the suspect was arrested by officers of the Roswell Police Department.

The murder victim, Hernandez, was found lying face down in a field near Trotter Road, about two miles east of the Loop and south of E. 19th Street.

Justice of the Peace Wayne LeCroy, who ruled homicide at the scene, said the victim had suffered "seven or eight skull fractures." Most of the blows, LeCroy said, were confined to the face and head, although there were some apparent injuries to the man's forearm and hands.

MY ANSWER

By BILLY GRAHAM

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am not very wealthy, frankly. I feel a bit silly putting a little amount in the collection plate each Sunday. Since God is the Creator of the universe, wonder how He can be helped by my puny gift?—W. W.

DEAR W. W.: Yes. There is a sense in which God, the Creator of the universe, needs nothing. After all, He made everything, and He is all powerful. But this does not mean that He does not want or cannot use our gifts.

Maybe it would be helpful for you to remember that everything you have is a gift from God. King David prayed, "All that is in the Heaven and in the earth is thine."

But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee" (I Chronicles 29:11,14).

Also remember that God is not concerned with the size of our gifts, but with our attitude. In a touching scene, Jesus commended the poor widow who gave two small coins, because she wanted to honor God (see Luke 21:1-4). Paul said that we are to give "not grudgingly, or of necessity; for

University Planning To Teach About Hitler's Death Camps

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP)—Northwestern University, embarrassed by a book written by a faculty member and praised by local neo-Nazi groups, has opened a drive to teach more about Hitler's death camps in high schools.

Arthur Butz, an assistant professor of electrical engineering, is the author of "The Hoax of the Twentieth Century." It blames the mass deaths in Hitler's concentration camps on natural causes plus a shortage of food and medicine.

It has caused problems at Northwestern. The concept of academic freedom is getting a thorough workout.

"There is tension," says a highly placed member of the administration who asked not to be quoted by name. "All kinds of people talk about how nice it would be if he would go away... Butz is still here. He goes about his business and hasn't brought any of this into his classroom."

"It's meant a lot of bad publicity," adds Jack O'Dowd, university public relations director. He said some people have threatened to withhold contributions to the school, although the university just completed one of its more successful fund-raising drives.

In February, Northwestern President Robert Strotz called B.J. Chandler, dean of the School of Education, to a meeting to discuss how to counter the unfavorable publicity.

The product of the meeting is a plan to hold a conference next summer for high school teachers from across the nation. Its theme will be putting material about the death camps into classrooms. The School of Education also is developing curriculum plans on the subject and starting a collection of books about it.

Help in organizing the collection has been sought from the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League.

"On the most important level, this fills an incredible gap in our social studies curriculum," said Chandler. "Also, it is a way of letting people know that there was dismay about the Butz kind of material."

"Our social studies curriculum is practically devoid of material on the Holocaust," Chandler says. "I think part of the reason is the usual lag in treating any subject. Then, many social studies textbooks are pretty bland anyway. Publishers ers tend to shy away from anything they see as tinged with controversy."

Recently about 12 Northwestern undergraduates were sent to Chandler's office by Rabbi Marc Gellman of the Hillel Foundation at Northwestern. They plan a study of the death camps and then a lecture tour of Chicago high schools.

"This is not a thing they can do lightly," Chandler says. "We want them grounded in solid, historical material. That means they have to do some studying, themselves."

Prince Files Embezzlement Charges

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP)—Prince Charles, 74-year-old uncle of King Baudouin, has filed a complaint charging he was embezzled out of as much as $890,000, court sources report.

The sources did not name the accused embezzlers, but they said police had carried out house searches in connection with the allegations and that they were believed linked with real estate ventures.

Prince Charles has been at the center of several court cases in recent years.

Last February he won a slander case against a satirical Belgian weekly that accused him of tax evasion. Previously he had accused his former financial adviser of misappropriating $4 million from the royal estate. The adviser was acquitted of the charges.

The prince has led a secluded life since 1950, when he ended a six-year reign as prince regent in the absence of his brother, ex-King Leopold III.

Lance Tells Group To Get Involved

HOUSTON (AP) — Bert Lance says shortly before his resignation as director of the Office of Management and Budget he expressed to President Carter a fear of a very great risk of losing the presumption of innocence in this country.

"And I can't think of a time when it is more important to us to maintain the great belief and faith that we have in this very basic presumption of innocence," Lance told delegates to the American Bankers Association convention Tuesday.

"So it was extremely important that I be able to meet and hold up the standard of presumption of innocence as it is related to the future of this nation. What was important was that I would be able to say to you and the rest of the American people, 'You also should be willing to be involved and be part of that process.'"

Lance, whose resignation followed a Congressional investigation into his personal finances and former banking practices, addressed the bankers and appeared at a news conference.

He said he never intended to become the cause for casting blame on anyone.

He went to Washington, he said, hoping to balance the budget, restore fiscal responsibility and participate in a reorganization of government that would make it more efficient and responsive to the American people.

He said no one understands today's problems better than bankers and urged them to get involved in business and government.

There had been talk of a walkout or boycott of Lance's speech but none developed. Most seats were taken in the in the 4,000-seat Astroarena.

Lance said Robert Strauss, ambassador for trade, and Treasurer Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, who was to address the bankers today, were doing excellent jobs.

"There are a lot of people who are willing to listen," he said. "I think President Carter himself will play a greater role in the future in listening to the problems you articulate... Since you are, in effect, involved in every area of economic activity in this nation, I think you have a way to speak as effective spokesmen for the business community as a whole."

He declined to comment on the protest of some ABA delegates to his appearing at the convention but he did say he had offered to release the organization from its invitation after he resigned his governmental post.

"If they didn't want me, I certainly didn't want to be here," he said.

Frank Zarb, former Federal Energy Administration chief, also addressed the bankers Tuesday and called for less government intervention in solving the nation's energy problems.

Zarb said government is "retarding" solutions to the energy dilemma by preserving artificial price ceilings on fossil fuels.

"It is time for the marketplace to take over," he said.

Zarb claimed if fuels were allowed to reach true value prices, conservation, added supplies and alternative energy sources would be accomplished more quickly.

Meteor Causes Crash Reports

A-J News Services

A huge meteor flashed across the sky of the southwestern United States Tuesday night, prompting mistaken reports of plane crashes in five states.

A television station in Beaumont was so convinced the streaking lights was from a blazing aircraft, it flashed a bulletin during the fifth inning of the New York-Los Angeles World Series game announcing an airplane had crashed in the area.

Moments later a broadcaster had a terse announcement: "That plane crash may be a little different."

The meteor was seen at approximately 8:30 p.m. CDT from as far west as Albuquerque to as far east as Lake Charles, La. The meteor also was sighted in Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Dr. Joe Patterson of the McDonald Observatory located in the Davis Mountains of far West Texas said an observer watched the huge meteor travel from west to east.

"Our man on the mountain saw it," said Patterson. "He saw it in heavy twilight and through heavy clouds. But he saw a single streak of light moving from west to east."

Police in sections of eastern New Mexico were kept busy checking out plane crash reports by witnesses who mistakenly thought the natural phenomenon was aircraft going down in flames.

The flaming meteorite apparently had its greatest visibility over the Texas Panhandle, where the National Weather Service reported a "tremendous meteor shower."

Police and fire units from Clovis were dispatched to the Texico area after a woman telephoned saying she saw a plane crash.

At about the same time, the National Weather Service at Amarillo reported the meteor shower over the Texas Panhandle area.

In Lubbock, calls were received from residents saying they had witnessed a giant glowing streak towards the earth.

Department of Public Safety officers in Beaumont said they received reports the meteor was sighted as far south as Corpus Christi, 200 miles away.

An air traffic controller in Lake Charles said an airplane reported seeing the shooting star, as did aircraft flying in the Jennings, La., area.

Hobby Airport traffic controllers in Houston also reported seeing the meteor.

The giant meteor also was sighted in Oklahoma at Enid in the north central section of the state and at Ardmore in the southern part.

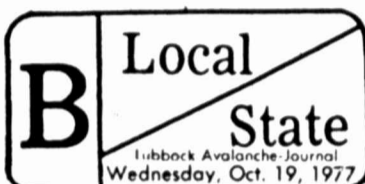

Oklahoma Highway Patrol Sgt. Carol Dellinger said the patrol received numerous calls about the meteor. She said her husband, also a trooper, saw the falling star south of Yukon, Okla., and said it

Air Boardings Show Record Increase Here

Passengers continued to climb aboard airplanes at the Lubbock International Airport in record numbers last month, as boardings climbed a whopping 70.4 per cent over September, 1976.

A total of 35,241 passengers took to the skies last month, compared with 20,689 who boarded planes in the same month last year.

The increase in boardings, apparently caused mainly by Southwest Airline's entrance into the Lubbock market and the reduced fares offered by Southwest and Continental, contributed to a 35.9 per cent increase in boardings over the same nine-month period last year. In 1976, 188,467 passengers were boarded, but the number increased to 256,239 this year.

This year's boardings have already surpassed the total for the entire 12 months of 1976, when 253,510 passengers were counted, and the airport experienced its biggest year in terms of passenger numbers.

Continental, with its reduced fares, registered the largest increase in passengers for September, compared with the same

Organizations Exist To Assist Adoptees Looking For Families

Following is the last of four articles by Rod McKuen on adopted children.

BY ROD MCKUEN

NEW YORK (WNS) — While the cynical may think that actresses such as Jane Fonda, Vanessa Redgrave, Catherine Deneuve, etc., have nothing to gain but publicity by announcing their status as unwed mothers and, more recently, boxers Muhammad Ali and Ken Norton have acknowledged bastard children... the effect goes far beyond the fan magazines and tabloids.

I think it important for people under the glare of the spotlight to acknowledge the love they have for their children, whatever their origin.

Recently James Michener, Elsa Lanchester, Tab Hunter, among others, have, with nothing to gain, owned up to being born out of wedlock. Only those who harbor such a secret can know what it means to have someone they admire come out in the open and tell them they are not alone.

I shared a flight from London to Los Angeles recently with Charlton Heston. The subject of adoption came up. In what I consider the ultimate declaration of love, he said, "One of my kids is adopted — I forgot which one."

If the Church, the State and responsible parents were just that — responsible — there would be no unwanted pregnancies. With many of the so-called "sexual revolutions" fought and won, we have yet to draw a roadmap for an updated sense of morality. Once in a debate with several bishops I asked one if he knew the difference between the "Catholic rhythm method" and other forms of birth control. When he hesitated, I continued, "The others work."

"Then you favor abortion?"

I do not.

I am against the killing of anything that lives.

But I am committed to not bringing unwanted children into the world. I have seen too many neglected, physically battered and mentally scarred children in my lifetime. If unwanted children were not conceived, abortions would not be necessary. But since unwanted children are conceived, I do believe that ending a pregnancy is a matter between a woman, her conscience, her spiritual feelings and those feelings her doctor has for her safety as his patient. Men, whether they be the fathers of unborn children or religious leaders, should dummy up until they can carry a baby around inside them for nine months.

Children are still being MANUFACTURED for profit. Some wind up in garbage cans. There are mothers, 10, 20 and 50 years later, still searching for the child they were forced to put up for adoption, for whatever reason. A year ago the London Daily Mail reported that many young married couples were so hard up they were offering their children for adoption so the child might have a better start in life. Some social workers, thankfully, argue that to know who you are is a basic civil right and there remains a very vocal group which maintains that the mothers who give away their children also have rights. Undoubtedly.

I have received several thousand letters since the initial publication in America of my book, "Finding My Father." One came from a boy whose sister was adopted. He writes that his sister found out about her adopted status at school and rushed immediately to ask her mother if it was true. Her mother replied, "Yes."

The girl then went on to ask who her natural parents were. She was just curious, she said, but her mother began to cry so she dropped the subject. Seven months later on her 16th birthday the boy's sister blew her brains out. A note left behind addressed to her parents said she loved them very much but she just wanted to know where she came from.

Hardly an atypical situation. By now I've read several hundred letters containing the gory details of teen-age suicides brought on by well-meaning foster parents who didn't level with their children.

I feel young people should be allowed to grow up in a relatively healthy atmosphere before such decisions are forced upon them.

Once when I was a guest on an all-night radio show a blind girl called to tell me she was looking for her father. She said her birth had resulted from her mother's having been raped and that it was believed her blindness was congenital. I asked her if, as a result of her father's action, she wanted to find him to get even in any way.

"Of course not," she replied, very quickly. "I just want to find out how he is."

Recently the U.S. Supreme Court upheld provisions of the Social Security Act that make it difficult, if not impossible, for many children born out of wedlock to collect survivor benefits when their fathers die. The state of New York has ruled that a child born out of wedlock can inherit his share of his parent's estate under certain conditions. Both laws specify that those conditions for eligibility include proof that the deceased parent lived with the child for a time, and contributed to his or her support.

Following is a letter printed in its entirety from Nan Britton, whose daughter was fathered by President Warren G. Harding (1865-1923). I'll never forget it.

"Dear Rod McKuen,

Unfortunately I saw only the last half of the documentary you narrated, 'Hello, Again.' The moving scenes I did see, however, struck a strong chord of sympathy and understanding in my heart — for I am one of those deeply concerned for the welfare and peace of mind of children who are abandoned by one or both parents.

"Nearly 50 years ago (in 1927) I published 'The President's Daughter' for the purpose of sponsoring through my own love story all children born out of wedlock. In 'The Author's Motive' prefacing the story, I proposed that an organized effort should be made to secure State and Federal legislation providing the following benefits for unwedded mothers and unfathered children:

"FIRST: That on the birth of a child the name of the father be correctly registered in the public records, and that failure to do so shall constitute a criminal offense.

"SECOND: That every child born in the United States of America be regarded as legitimate whether born within or without wedlock.

"I have not yet read your book, 'Finding My Father.' Our laws fail shamefully in not demanding registration of the father's as well as the mother's correct name with every birth. The Norwegian law is still the ideal law.

"Probably unlike your own experience, my daughter and Mr. Harding's was told of her true paternity at a very early age. And until his tragic death following his trip to Alaska, President Harding was father to our daughter and a husband to me in every way possible.

to a man of his prominence in our much-too-political world.

"Come and see me if you care to do so. I shall be 80 years old in November but my so-called 'illegitimacy problem' is as keen — and hopeful of solution — as ever, Nan Britton."

Since I received her letter, we have become good friends and the lady indeed continues to work for legislation. For her trouble she is even now hounded by cranks, and forced to have an unlisted telephone number.

The literature on personal experiences is growing: "The Search for Anna Fischer," a book by Florence Fischer (Fawcett-World) resulted in the organization ALMA (Adoptees Liberty Movement Association, P.O. Box 154, Washbridge Station, New York, N.Y.); "Jody," Jerry Hulse's beautiful piece of writing about the race to find his wife's natural parents in order to save her life; and "Roots" by Alex Haley, an American black man's journey all the way back to Africa to discover his heritage.

Among those who have written impressively about the experience of being a love child are Diana Petre and J.R. Ackerley, brother and sister, who wrote separate books with distinctly different points of view. Diana's "The Secret Orchard of Roger Ackerley," is one of the most straightforward, moving and literate books I have read on any subject during my lifetime.

Since the U.S. government has been slow to recognize the plight of the adopted, abandoned or bastard child, could it be that perhaps individual states can be relied upon to do so?

Not a chance. With the single exception of Alabama, records continue to be withheld. At the moment there are law suits in Illinois, New York, Pennsylvania, Florida, New Jersey, Nebraska and California seeking to open sealed records to adult adoptees.

If credit bureaus, various service organizations, not to mention the FBI and the CIA, can know all about us, why can't we know that ourselves? Is it too much to ask that at age 18 any child not knowing his background can be apprised of it by checking with the adoption agency from which he came, or with local records or indeed, with the U.S. government?

I went seeking my father just to say "thank you" for helping to make it possible for me to live in the best of all possible worlds. I wrote to encourage others undertake such a search themselves. Mine was a costly search that took more than 28 years, but I did eventually find out what I wanted to know.

Since my book has been published in hard cover, I have received thousands of letters from people seeking aid, and generous cooperation when some of them were referred to their senators and congressmen.

The new edition of "Finding My Father" has a first printing of more than one million copies. Its glossary was designed to give some information to help begin searching whether you are an adoptive parent, an orphan, a child born out of wedlock or the child with the good fortune to have one or more loving adoptive parents. If you have missed any parts of this series, most of the information can be found in the new edition of my book.

Meanwhile, there's Florence Fischer's ALMA headquartered in New York and with branches around the country, the Chicago-based organization Yesterday's Children and the clearinghouse I have developed — BASTA (Brothers and Sisters Together Again), P.O. Box 2783, Hollywood, Calif. 90028.

Two new books the adoptee or adopted parent might want to read are "I Heard My Sister Speak My Name," by Thomas Savage, and "Art of Adoption" by Linda Cannon Burgess.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

BY BARBARA GIBBONS

Leftover baked ham or roast turkey makes a great sandwich, or you can dress it up as a savory slimmer's quiche. "Quiche" is French for pie, and pie is fattening in any language, so our calorie-saving translations are made without pie crust pastry. In the first recipe we make a square "pie" using crisp rye crackers as a base. The turkey pie recipe has no crust at all.

HAM 'N' CHEESE ON RYE PIE about 9 seasoned rye crackers (Ry-Krisp or similar) 4 oz. lean cooked ham, diced
4 oz. Swiss cheese, diced
1 1/2 cups low-fat cottage cheese
1/2 cup skim milk

1/4 cup dry white wine
3 eggs
1 small onion, minced (or 1 tbsp. "instant")

3 or 4 sprigs fresh parsley, chopped
1 tsp prepared mustard dash of Tabasco

Spray a nine-inch nonstick square cake pan with cooking spray for fat-free baking. Arrange crackers to cover the bottom, breaking to fit.

Spread diced ham and cheese over the crackers, evenly.

Combine remaining ingredients in blender or food processor. Cover and blend smooth. Pour over ham and cheese.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 45 minutes, or until set. Serve warm. Makes six servings, under 210 calories each.

MEXICAN TURKEY 'N' EGG 'PIE'
10 eggs, lightly beaten
2 cups diced cooked turkey (see note)
2 bell peppers, seeded and chopped
2 cups peeled diced ripe tomatoes
1 onion, peeled and chopped
2 tbsp. minced fresh parsley (or 2 tsp. dried)

1 tsp. salt (or garlic salt)
1 tsp. chili powder
1/2 tsp. oregano

optional: 1 tsp. cumin seeds
Beat eggs lightly, then stir in remaining ingredients until well blended. Spray a nonstick cake pan with cooking spray for no-fat baking. Pour in egg mixture. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for 30 minutes, until set. Cut in wedges to serve. Makes eight meal-size servings about 185 calories each, or 16 appetizers at 95 calories each. May be served hot or cold.

NOTE — for interesting variations, use cooked smoked turkey, or diced "turkey ham" or julienne strips of "turkey salami" or "turkey pastrami," available at many cold cuts counters.

FOO YUNG PIE
2 cups diced cooked turkey (or chicken, or lean roast pork)
3 tbsp. soy sauce
10 eggs
16-oz. can mixed Chinese vegetables, rinsed and drained

1 Spanish onion, peeled and minced
1 small red or green bell pepper, diced
Marinate leftover roast poultry or meat in soy sauce 30 minutes or more.

Beat eggs lightly, then stir in all ingredients. Turn into a nonstick nine-inch pie plate that has been sprayed with cooking spray for no-fat baking. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven 30 minutes or more, until set. Cut into eight wedges to serve. 185 calories each with turkey, 155 with chicken, 210 with pork.

MARINATED VEGETABLES

1/2 cup olive oil
1/2 cup white wine vinegar
Small clove garlic, crushed
1 1/2 tps salt
Freshly ground pepper
6 red-ripe tomatoes (about 2 1/2 lbs.), skinned and sliced
1 med cucumber, pared and sliced thin
1 small sweet onion, sliced thin and separated into rings
Shake or beat together the oil, vinegar, garlic, salt and pepper. Alternate layers of the tomatoes, cucumber and onion — sprinkling each layer with some of the dressing. Cover tightly and chill for 6 to 8 hours to allow flavors to blend. Garnish with parsley or fresh basil. Makes 8 servings.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM The Newspaper Bible

II Peter 3:16B-18 I John 1:9

Some of his comments are not easy to understand, and there are people who are deliberately stupid, and always demand some unusual interpretation — they have twisted his letters around to mean something quite different from what he meant, just as they do the other parts of the Scripture — and the result is disaster for them.

17 I am warning you ahead of time, dear brothers, so that you can watch out and not be carried away by the mistakes of these wicked men, lest you yourselves become mixed up too.

18 But grow in spiritual strength and become better acquainted with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To Him be all glory and splendid honor, both now and forevermore. Good-bye.

I JOHN Peter CHAPTER I

1 Christ was alive when the world began, yet I myself have seen Him with my own eyes and listened to Him speak. I have touched Him with my own hands. He is God's message of Life.

2 This one who is Life from God has been shown to us and we guarantee that we have seen Him; I am speaking of Christ, who is eternal Life. He was with the Father and then was shown to us.

3 Again I say, we are telling you about what we ourselves have actually seen and heard, so that you may share the fellowship and the joys we have with the Father and with Jesus Christ His Son.

4 And if you do as I say in this letter, then you, too, will be full of joy, and so will we.

5 This is the message God has given us to pass on to you: that God is Light and in Him is no darkness at all.

6 So if we say we are His friends, but go on living in spiritual darkness and sin, we are lying.

7 But if we are living in the light of God's presence, just as Christ does, then we have wonderful fellowship and joy with each other, and the blood of Jesus His Son cleanses us from every sin.

8 If we say that we have no sin, we are only fooling ourselves, and refusing to accept the truth.

9 But if we confess our sins to Him, He can be depended on to forgive us and to cleanse us from every wrong. [And it is perfectly proper for God to do this for us because Christ died to wash away our sins.]

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every year when the list of America's Most Admired Women come out, I look for Mayva Cochran's name.

Mayva is my best friend and if there's anyone who deserves the pride and respect of her homemaking peers, it's Mayva. She has a list of accomplishments that run up to your elbow, not the least being:

- * Measuring her windows for draperies and not having enough left over to slipcover Connecticut.
 - * Knowing where her gas tank is and being able to pull into the self-service island.
 - * Keeping a Boston fern alive for two weeks.
 - * Painting her fireplace white without asking her husband.
 - * Rearranging her bathroom.
 - * Washing and cleaning her vegetables before storing them in the refrigerator.
 - * Pouring her own patio without covering over her septic tank. (Couldn't you scream?)
 - * Hanging a wall of adhesive paper without being put under sedation for excessive crying.
- That last item alone should bring you to your feet applauding. I suppose somewhere out there is another woman who has hung wallpaper with no muss, no fuss, no paste, no pins, and no skill, but I've never met her.

With Mayva's success as my guide, I decided to paper a small wall over the kitchen sink that measured 42 by 23 inches. I cut my first strip and started to climb into the sink. The paper became alive. It drifted toward the curtains and stuck. I ripped it back. It caught on the ladder, stuck to my arm and pulled away all the hair up to my elbow. It stuck to itself and I climbed out of the sink to smooth it out.

I knew at that moment I would have to try a new approach. It would have to be picked up and shoved immediately into the wall with no time for measuring or hesitating.

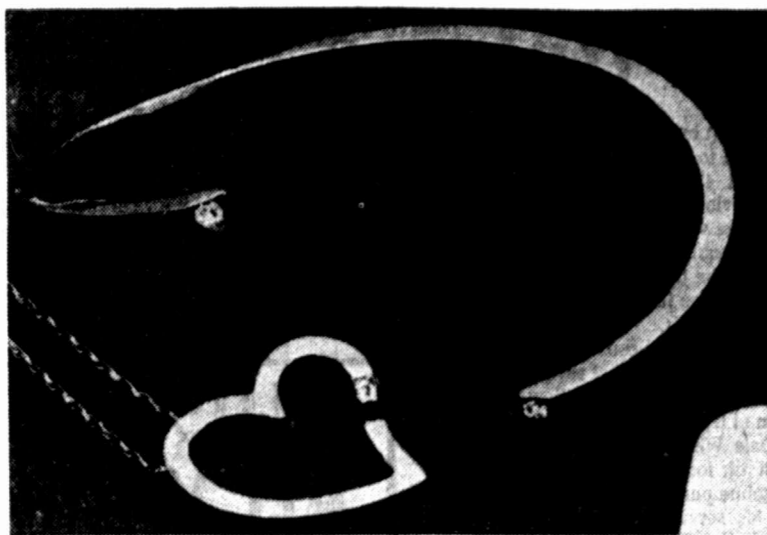

I picked up the small piece of adhesive paper, slapped it to the wall. IT WAS A GIANT BUBBLE. Carefully, I began to press the bubble out into a permanent crease. When I got the crease out, the wallpaper was at an angle — I lifted it and started over again.

By dinner, I was still in the sink trying to pull the adhesive paper off the water spigot. They say saints need a miracle performed in their name. Mayva has a whole wall for proof of her canonization.

The Boy Scouts should be good bridge players. Their motto, "Be prepared," ought to be the watchword of everyone who plays the game.

Since North's two diamond response covered the major weakness in South's hand, South chose to show his trick-taking ability with a jump rebid. North's two aces and a potential ruffing value in clubs easily warranted a raise to game.

West led the king of hearts, won by the ace. Declarer's plan was to ruff a club in dummy, so he continued with a low club. East's nine was allowed to win, and the inevitable trump shift was won by the queen. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a club in dummy. He returned to his hand with a heart ruff and cashed a high trump. Not only was he disappointed when East failed to follow, he was down — there was no way to avoid losing two diamonds and a trump in addition to the club already conceded.

Had trumps broken 3-2, as was most likely, declarer would have romped home in style. But a good Boy Scout would have made the contract by anticipating the bad break and being prepared for it.

Observe the difference if, after winning the king of hearts, declarer immediately ruffs a heart, then ducks a club. After ruffing a club in dummy, he ruffs another heart in his hand.

Now when he discovers the 4-1 trump break, he can do something about it. He gets back to dummy with the ace of diamonds and ruffs another heart with the ten of trumps. When West has to follow to this trick, the contract is made. With the aid of three ruffs in hand and one in dummy, declarer has scored seven trump tricks and three side-suit aces. The thirteenth trick is won both by

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: With the school social season just commencing, you'd be doing a real service to urge girls not to pass up a boy just because he's short.

During my college years, a wonderful fellow tried many times to date me. He was bright, popular, kind and had a great sense of humor, but he had one fault. He was shorter than I was. So I never dated him.

Finally I married a tall, handsome college athlete. He's conceited, lazy and dumb. We live from hand to mouth.

The short fellow I wouldn't even date is now a very successful professional man. He married a beautiful girl who adores him. She's half-a-head taller than he is, but nobody seems to notice. She has a beautiful home, status and security. Every time I see her, I think, "there but for the cockeyed values of my youth go I."

Print this, Abby. Many girls can learn from it.

Missed The Boat

Dear Missed: And speaking of boats that have been missed, let's look at the guys who've left themselves on the dock.

I refer to fellows who wouldn't date a girl because she was a little too short, or tall, or skinny, or plump. She may have been intelligent, kind, lots of fun and eager to please, but because she had less-than-lovely limbs or an unfortunate complexion, she was bypassed.

So now that the school social season is commencing, boys, look around. Give the plain girls a chance. You may do yourself a favor that will last about 50 years.

Dear Reader: Well said. And so does a real woman.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was recently honored at a banquet by the company he works for.

At the end of the program, he was called upon to say a few words. When he reached the microphone, everyone stood up and applauded.

As his wife, I felt it would be out of place for me to stand up and applaud my husband, but my heart was applauding.

Did I do the right thing by remaining seated?

Club Seeking Variance Of Parking Requirements

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Giancarlo Campanelli, representing Fat Dawg's, will ask the Zoning Board of Adjustment Thursday to vary parking requirements for the club.

The board, which will meet at 8:15 a.m. in council chambers, will be asked to allow off-street parking across the alley from the club.

According to zoning ordinances, the nightspot at 2408 4th St. must have 77 parking spaces. Some of the spaces the club had leased adjacent to it have been lost because of new businesses, and Campanelli will ask that they be replaced by leased slots across the alley from the club.

Mark Corley will ask the board to allow outside food service at his eatery at 2406 34th St.

No such outside food service is allowed in a general retail (C-3) zone without board waiver of the ordinance prohibition.

Setback requirement variances will be sought by Jim Clark, Robert Barnhill, H.B. Shipman, James D. Howze, Leonard Crowder and B. Young Kim.

Clark will ask that the front yard setback requirement of 25 feet be altered for a fence at 4803 7th St. He also will ask that the fence, which encloses a tennis court, be allowed to remain 10 feet high on the front yard side. According to ordinance, the fence must steadily diminish in size as it approaches the front yard property line.

The board will be asked by Barnhill to permit the addition of a canopy, which would not meet setback requirements, to his quick-service restaurant at 3002 Ave. A.

The canopy would reach to the side and rear property lines and to within 17 feet of the front line. The ordinance requires setbacks of 10 feet, 5 feet and 43 feet, respectively.

Shipman will request a sideyard setback variance to allow a carport at 4725 40th St. to extend to the property line.

Crowder also will seek a setback variance for a carport at 2637 Parkway Drive. The carport, built without a city permit, extends to 14.8 feet of the front property line instead of the required 25 feet.

A front yard setback variance also will be sought by Kim. He will ask that he be allowed to build duplexes on several lots at 5601 43rd St. The planned buildings would violate the 25-foot requirement.

Howze will request a variance on sideyard requirements to allow a storage shed to be built on the property line instead of five feet off. The shed would be at 2501 45th St.

The board will consider recommending to the city council that several special exceptions be granted to allow the expansion of legal non-conforming uses.

Dale White of White's Pump Service will ask for such an exception to allow a gasoline pump retail parts store adjacent to his service and repair shop at 2307 Clovis Road.

The lot is zoned commercial (C-4), and a parts store would be allowed only in a light manufacturing (M-1) district.

South Plains Bible Chapel at 5402 Quaker Ave. will request a special exception to expand parking in a single-family residential (R-1) zone.

If approved, the church would use a lot across the street from it for parking.

Templo Calvario at 1908 N. Ash Ave. will ask for a special exception to allow church expansion in an R-1 zone.

Another church, Gloria Dei Lutheran Church at 5202 18th St., will seek an exception to allow separate portable buildings to be used for church use.

Square footage and setback requirements variances will be sought by Continental Motors of 1941 Texas Ave.

The car dealership will ask that it be allowed to replace one sign with three on the same pole and to move an existing sign pole.

Officials Eye Drug Curb

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — State and federal law enforcement officials are coordinating efforts through the Drug Enforcement Administration to slow increasing illegal drug movement in the Big Bend National Park.

The park, with 109 miles of international border between Mexico and extreme Southwest Texas, has become a funnel for smugglers of marijuana, heroin and other drugs, U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd said this week.

National Park officials, concerned over visitor safety, have attended two meetings in Alpine, near the park, to discuss the problem with state and federal officials, Boyd said.

The meetings were triggered by a series of incidents, including a Sept. 24 narcotics probe by state undercover agents which was broken up by unknowing federal officers.

Boyd said the various law enforcement agencies have decided to coordinate their plans through the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

During the fiscal year ended Sept. 30, federal officers made 44 arrests and seized 21 vehicles, three pounds of dangerous drugs and more than 5,000 pounds of marijuana in the park, Boyd said.

He said the park appeals to drug smugglers because they can mingle with tourists and not be noticed.

J. F. Carithers, Big Bend park superintendent, said park officials fear drug deals might be made in campgrounds.

"That's the last thing we want," he added.

DIEFENBAKER'S BIRTH

John Diefenbaker, Canada's prime minister from 1957-63, was born in 1895 in Ontario.

The board will be asked by Barnhill to permit the addition of a canopy, which would not meet setback requirements, to his quick-service restaurant at 3002 Ave. A.

The canopy would reach to the side and rear property lines and to within 17 feet of the front line. The ordinance requires setbacks of 10 feet, 5 feet and 43 feet, respectively.

Shipman will request a sideyard setback variance to allow a carport at 4725 40th St. to extend to the property line.

Crowder also will seek a setback variance for a carport at 2637 Parkway Drive. The carport, built without a city permit, extends to 14.8 feet of the front property line instead of the required 25 feet.

Vietnamese Battlefields Hold Key To Economy

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Vietnam is stabilizing its future on "new economic zones" being developed on the former battlefields. One zone was recently visited by Associated Press photographer-writer Horst Faas, who covered the Vietnam War for 13 years.)

By HORST FAAS
Associated Press Writer

LE MINH XUAN, Vietnam (AP) — The tough new frontier of Vietnam begins in the marshes just west of Saigon.

Under the iron rule of a Communist party cadre, thousands of former city dwellers are digging new canals, preparing fields for fruit plantations and building thatched huts.

The German tourist group I accompanied on a recent visit was allowed to go to one such "new economic zone." Le Minh Xuan, named after a national hero who died in battle against the Americans in 1972.

It is one of many zones created in former no-man's-lands devastated by the Vietnam War.

Officials said the new zones are the Communist regime's answer to the overcrowding of the cities caused by the war and the increasingly severe food shortages that followed the war's end in 1975 and the termination of American aid. The government plans to move one-third of South Vietnam's urban populations to the new economic zones.

Le Minh Xuan is one of nine new zones in a green belt around Saigon, which the Communists now call Ho Chi Minh City. Van Dai, the vice president of the people's planning committee for the former South Vietnamese capital, said in a newspaper interview that 700,000 people already have left the city for the new zones and their native villages.

Officials hope to raise 300,000 tons of food annually in the green belt to feed a population of 1.5 million in Saigon. This will be less than half the population jammed into the city by the end of the war.

A visit to Le Minh Xuan provided a glimpse of the magnitude of direct control that cadres from North Vietnam are exercising over the South Vietnamese to implement the plans.

The chairman of Le Minh Xuan is Ho Van Thiet, a stocky, short man with strong hands. He is a northerner who headed a cooperative in the Red River Delta near Hanoi.

Thiet, who has the manner and the power of a military field commander says of his zone: "War started in this area 10 miles west of Saigon in 1961 and continued almost without letup until 1975. This was a major assembly area for the liberation fighters."

It was here, on the road between Duc Hoa and Saigon, that Spec. 4 James T. Davis of Livingston, Tenn., officially became the first American soldier to die in the Vietnam War on December 21, 1961. A truck in which he was riding with 10 South Vietnamese soldiers was ambushed.

Le Minh Xuan was for years a free-fire-and-kill zone within the "rocket belt" around Saigon.

"At the end of the war the former agricultural area was totally neglected, the fields had turned into marshes, salty and sour," said Thiet. "We had to start from the beginning."

"The party decided to create 6,500 hectares (16,000 acres) of pineapple fields. We made plans for some agriculture-related industry and production for domestic use and exports. We planned for at least 10,000 people to live and work here.

"At first youth brigades worked day and night to revitalize the irrigation in the area and build new canals. The salty, sour earth had to be flushed out with sweet water. The Communist youth brigades built provisional shelters for the first inhabitants."

The shelters are low, thatched longhouses. The workers live and work in spartan, military fashion, and each gets a monthly salary equivalent to $23-$28.

Thiet would not comment on reports that some of the first, hardest work here and in the other new zones was done by former South Vietnamese soldiers and employees of the government of President Nguyen Van Thieu who were rounded up for "re-education." Reliable sources said about 150,000 men are still held in re-education camps and are worked regularly on labor projects.

"While irrigation projects were still in progress we built the first homes for the inhabitants that now came from the city," Thiet continued.

They are simple huts, lined up along the roads or waterways, without electricity or running water. But "each house has an individual plot of 2,000 square meters (nearly half an acre)," the chairman said. "The workers can grow their own vegetables and rice here. For the first six months the state provides subsistence for each worker and his family. Thereafter he is on his own. But we help in emergencies."

Thiet said in 18 months, 3,000 of the zone's 16,000 acres have been made arable, and nearly 250 acres has been planted.

"We have already provided homes for 1,200 families and 10,000 people," he reported. "We have had setbacks, but we are overcoming them."

The large-scale resettlement of people from South Vietnam's cities has a certain surface similarity to the wholesale removal of the urban population which Cambodia's new Communist rulers are reported to have carried out. But the Vietnamese Communists apparently are not acting with the brutality and cruelty which a host of reports say the Cambodians used. And the Vietnamese program is designed to clear the overcrowded cities of the hordes that the war drove into them or American dollars attracted, not to decimate them.

Thiet makes no secret of the fact that the Communist party is the boss at Le Minh Xuan and that dissent is neither encouraged nor permitted. But he insists that every inhabitant of the zone came voluntarily.

"People begin to understand the value of labor and have begun to love it," he says. "In the beginning we had so many applications from people who wanted to live here that we could take only five per cent."

"Can anybody who does not like it here go back to Saigon to make his living some other way?" I asked.

Thiet replied evasively: "People must realize that it is an honor and a political obligation to live here. We will live with the work of our hands as a nation. If somebody talks of leaving, we will explain to him the meaning of living here."

There obviously is no return from Le Minh Xuan.

DR. LAMB

Train, Don't Strain

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB—I am an inmate in a correctional institution and have put a lot of effort into becoming a better person physically and mentally. Lately I have become discouraged over my weight training program.

I would like to ask you a question pertaining to your statement that a person should train, not strain. How do you know you have done enough while training but not to the point of straining?

Are high repetitions better for development than heavyweight, low-repetitions, for example lifting 150 pounds 10 times for 10 sets or 200 pounds three times for 10 sets.

DEAR READER—Most weight training authorities agree that your maximum benefit from resistance exercises or weights is obtained by lifting the weight no more than 10 times, than resting and repeating such a set of 10 no more than three times. Apparently doing this every other day will provide the maximum benefit you can get for your weight. To maintain your muscles one such exercise session a week appears to be adequate.

The choice of a weight should be one that you can lift easily three times in succession but not one so light that you can lift it 10 or more times in succession without difficulty. As soon as you can lift a given weight 10 times in succession for three sets (a total of 30) you should certainly progress to a heavier weight. Excessive repetitions will not speed muscle growth or development of muscle strength. A lighter exercise in any form that is repeated, as occurs with running, is considered an endurance exercise as opposed to strength exercises. Obviously there is a great deal of overlap, though, with many forms of exercise.

Some authorities believe you can obtain progressive muscle growth with only two sets at each exercise session. If you send me your address I'll send you the Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training for Energy and Weight Control. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

DEAR LAMB—I read all of your writings. I am 91 years old and have had nine operations, mostly hernias, gall bladder and appendix, years ago.

I live with my daughter in Oregon now and she's a wonderful person and cook. We eat lots of vegetables, pot roasts with vegetable around the roast in a steam cooker—no grease.

I eat four to five tomatoes every day and one banana. I want to know if these tomatoes are all right. I put sugar on them.

DEAR READER—You sound like you are doing great. I want to take this opportunity to comment that boiling or using a pressure cooker is a good way to avoid grease. Particularly if all of the excess fat is removed before cooking.

A good pressure cooker can result in very tender meat and help people avoid fat with its excess calories and its effects on obesity or fatty-cholesterol deposits in arteries that cause heart attacks and strokes.

Fresh tomatoes are great for you. The sugar is all right if you are not overweight. Sugar may cause dental problems so it is a good idea to brush the teeth well after eating sweets of any kind.

Car In Argentina Powered By Sun

By DIANA PAGE

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — It was raining, but that didn't stop Ariel Rietti from taking his solar-powered electric car out for a spin.

"The rain doesn't matter. I've foreseen that. The car runs at night too," the Argentine inventor said.

Rietti, 54, opened up his neighbor's garage where he keeps the car. The auto consists of a Citroen chassis, two seats, a motor in front, six lead batteries behind and a clear plastic roof where the solar energy cells are placed. It looks like a big go-cart.

Rietti tucked his crutch under the seats and started the car. He won't talk about the airplane accident that crippled one of his legs during his days as a pilot.

The strange vehicle slid back out of the garage. A businessman with a black umbrella stopped to watch the car glide almost silently down the street.

"So, it does work," he chuckled.

The neighbors on Lezica street take a humorous view of Don Ariel and the contraptions that emerge from his workshop on the roof-terrace of his two-story house. Three years ago, he completed his "Golondrina-5" airplane which can take off from a 20-yard runway and land in 30 feet.

This year it was the solar-energy car that was lowered from the roof terrace by a crane.

"The next step is to improve this car so it can go further and faster," Don Ariel said.

Rietti's car can travel 60 miles on stored energy alone, and has a maximum speed of 35 m.p.h. However, the batteries can be partially recharged by the solar cells and by the motor when the car is in motion. To fully recharge, it must be plugged into a wall outlet.

"The energy from the sun enables you to economize, but the car can't yet run on solar power alone," Rietti said. "Of course, this is all in the process of development, we hope to make better batteries and other improvements."

Rietti believes an electric car using solar power could be produced commercially for no more than the average combustion-engine car costs.

"The cost of operating this automobile will be 25 per cent less than one with a gasoline engine, and there's no pollution with an electric car," Rietti said.

"I've had the idea for this car in my head for 20 years, but I built it because everyone now has come to understand the need for an alternative to the present system."

To underline his point, he presented his car on the same day that the price of a gallon of gasoline jumped from 89 cents a gallon to $1.09 in Argentina.

Rietti was once a pilot and a mechanical expert for the air force.

His formal education ended when he dropped out of the engineering college of Buenos Aires University because "I wasn't learning what I wanted to know."

For the past eight years he has devoted himself to his inventions, working with about a dozen friends, each a specialist in some technical area of his projects.

He says he is economically independent, but various firms have donated material and scientific institutes have provided technical assistance.

"Even if I have strange ideas, people have learned I'm serious," Rietti says.

Actress Makes Plea For Disease Victims

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The projection room was tiny but ornate — where the Senate Appropriations Committee holds hearings. The dimming lights were crystal chandeliers.

Jennifer Jones was pleading.

"Let them be free to be clumsy, to drop things, to stumble, to have muscle spasms without worrying they are going to die. Let them be free to plan families without fear of passing it to their children."

The veteran actress sat in the hearing room Monday, her voice on tape narrating an 18-minute slide show that played to one senator — Birch Bayh, D-Ind.

Miss Jones won an Oscar in 1943 for "The Song of Bernadette," portraying a French peasant girl who worked miracles in a grotto at Lourdes. Now she devotes much of her life trying to work real-life miracles — to bring hope into the now-hopeless fight against Huntington's disease.

Huntington's is a killer. It is hereditary, slowly attacking brain cells and the central nervous system, destroying power to think, remember, reason — reducing victims to vegetables.

If a parent has it, chances are 50-50 the child will get it. There is no pre-symptom test, no treatment, no cure.

It is prolonged, agonizing Russian Roulette. Your mother had it, do you have it? When will it strike? Should you marry? Should you have children? Will you pass it along to them?

Only death brings the answer.

Marjorie Guthrie, who chairs the Commission for the Control of Huntington's Disease, lost her husband Woody — America's most famous folksinger — to the disease a decade ago. Her son Arlo, a celebrated singer, lives knowing he may have it also.

Miss Jones, a commission volunteer, described hearings conducted in 11 cities.

"Thousands of people came to speak," she said. "Testimony was heartbreaking. Once you've seen them, you'll never forget them."

"They writhe, twist and turn all parts of their body in uncontrollable fashion.

They have wild delusions. They are profoundly suicidal. It saps the person of dignity, it absolutely batters him."

It was part of her plea for Congress to appropriate $53 million over the next three years for research into Huntington's and other deadly genetic diseases.

"It is a unique curse — children watch the painful decline of their parent and never know when it might happen to them."

On the screen the children who are "at risk" of Huntington's — with an afflicted parent — spoke of the gnawing fear that the first muscle spasm, the first clumsiness could signal the beginning of the end.

"They say it more eloquently than I ever could," said Jennifer Jones.

"Academy Award," said Birch Bayh.

Immigrant Workers Protesting French Employment Proposal

PARIS (AP) — France's none too modest proposal to shrink unemployment by sending immigrant workers back home to Southern Europe and Africa is finding few takers and raising cries of racism.

The measure is the most extreme taken to date by any European government and reflects rising black-white friction on a continent beset by spiraling joblessness and inflation.

In June France offered 10,000 francs (2,000 dollars) and air fare to any of its 100,000 unemployed immigrants who opted to go back to their economically struggling countries. Only 3,600 accepted.

The rest clearly preferred to take their chances in a country which pays 90 per cent of a jobless person's former salary for a year, and 100 per cent for a year of retraining.

On Sept. 27, the repatriation offer was extended to any of the 1 million immigrant workers resident in France for at least five years, or roughly half the foreign work force.

At the same time, the government stopped issuing New York cars to non-Common Market immigrants and froze entry of their families into France for three years.

The government thinking is that the departure of the immigrants will open up jobs for 1.1 million unemployed French or roughly 5 per cent of the work force.

The problem is that most of the jobs are considered too menial by the French, and that without immigrant labor, industries such as construction, steel and auto-manufacturing will suffer.

The government insists there is nothing racist about its program. But this has not halted the avalanche of protest.

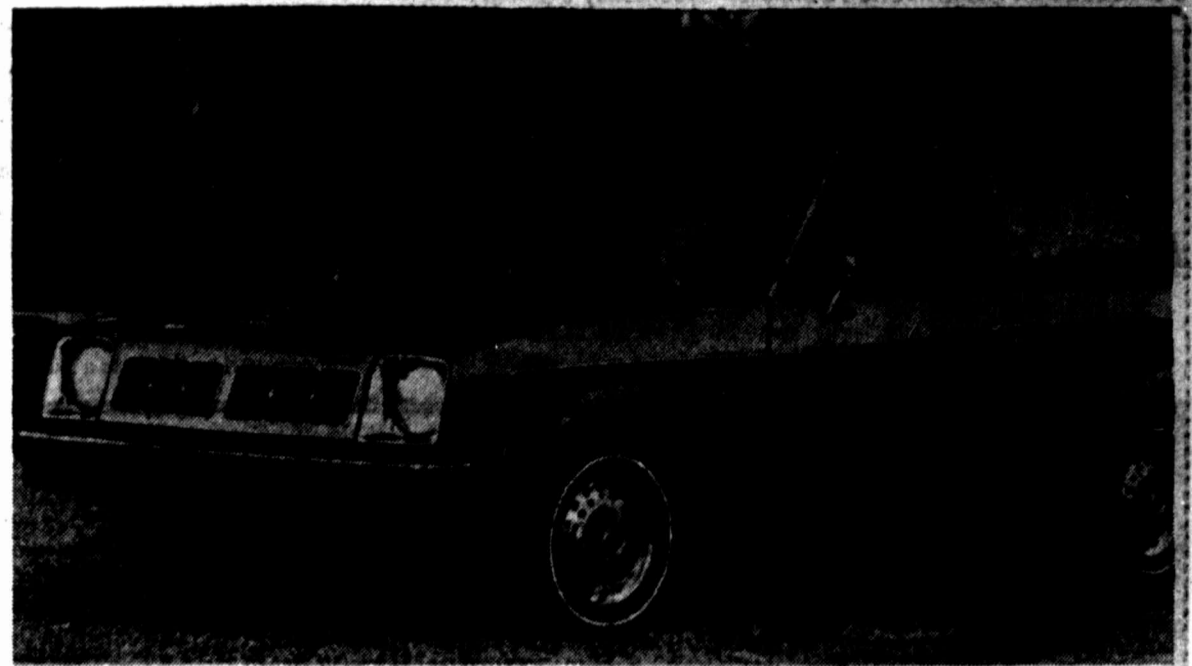

"It is false to believe that massive repatriation of immigrants will shrink unemployment," the influential French Confederation of Democratic Workers said. "In fact it threatens to create grave racial incidents for which the government and businessmen's association will bear direct responsibility."

The Communist-led General Confederation of Labor, the nation's largest union, declared, "The government is continuing its ruse by trying to make the French think repatriation of immigrants will solve unemployment. The government is in fact in the process of reversing the French tradition of welcome. This is dangerous for the freedom of the entire population. The repatriation of the Poles in 1934 was the point of departure for the rise of Fascism."

The brotherhood of Algerians in Europe said the program treats immigrant workers "like merchandise" and supports the stereotype of "immigrant workers taking bread out of the mouths of the French. Now it has been said officially."

There are 7.5 million immigrant workers in Western Europe. Most came during the boom of the 1950s and 1960s. But rising unemployment and inflation in the 1970s led to a backlash and now they find themselves scorned and unwanted.

REDUCTION IN PRICE — Chevrolet has added 18 items as standard equipment on the 1978 two-door Chevette, while reducing the price as much as $400, or 11 per cent, below comparably equipped 1977 models. (AP Laserphoto)

Geese Face Shortage Of Food

ESKIMO POINT, Northwest Territories (AP) — A population boom among snow geese nesting here has Canadian biologists worried that the once-scarce fowl will eat itself out of house and home.

There were 12,000 pair of breeding snow geese counted 23 years ago in a small area at the mouth of the McConnell River, about halfway up the western shore of Hudson Bay. Then a federal migratory bird sanctuary was established in the area.

By 1973, biologists estimated 163,000 nests at the mouth of the river alone.

Now there are so many birds there is not enough food to support them.

The geese have moved farther north and south in search of grasses and sedge, their forage.

Goslings hardly big enough to tumble through sodden tundra have scrambled as far as 50 miles in a desperate search for food.

Driven by their hunger, the geese have sought out every blade remaining, even within the confines of this peninsular community.

"The problem with these geese is that they never have a poor year," Kent Brace, a Canadian Wildlife Service (CWS) biologist, said in an interview. "Every year they're able to bring off their broods."

Brace said the presence of the geese in the area may be due to agricultural developments to the south as well as local conditions.

More traditional nesting locations such as Southampton Island, high up in Hudson Bay, and Baffin Island produce young geese only during those years when snow leaves the ground early.

Brace said the McConnell sanctuary and surrounding territory may be too much of a good thing.

"We have more than just our observations on the spread of this flock to conclude that the McConnell geese may be in serious trouble."

"There have been some unusual changes in nesting behavior with females abandoning nests."

"The young goslings here are in relatively poor condition and it is doubtful that a good percentage will survive until they can fly," Brace said.

Many Reported Growing Own Marijuana

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Many marijuana users not only are "rolling their own" but are growing it, according to Jacksonville Vice Capt. John McCormick.

That's especially true in Florida, where marijuana plants grow like weeds in the tropical climate and rich soil. McCormick said many pot users have found it safer and cheaper to grow pot than to import it.

"I would guess from information we get that there are hundreds of people growing it in this area," McCormick said.

Recently, a man target practicing in Jacksonville spotted several potted plants in wooded area. He called police and the sheriff's four-wheel-drive posse spent two days combing the area.

"We found about 100 pounds of plants in there," McCormick said. "And from the different colors of some of the cans, there may have been two or three people growing marijuana in there without knowing anybody else was doing the same thing."

He warned parents to investigate when youngsters take a sudden interest in horticulture in the backyard or in surrounding woods.

"When children suddenly become interested in potted plants, they'd better take a close look," he said. "Nine times out of ten the children will be growing marijuana."

MONTEREY SHOPPING CENTER 50th & GARY STREETS

Many Attracted As Firm Puts Old Hotel On Market

By BOB SPRINGER
 SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Bargain-hunters, antique-shoppers and curious sightseers were on hand as one of Illinois' most notable landmarks — the St. Nicholas Hotel — went the way of the liquidator.
 It's the hotel where Abraham Lincoln modeled for Thomas D. Jones for his first clay bust after being elected president in 1860. And it's where Lincoln polished his first inaugural address.
 The St. Nick's claim to infamy, however, may be a mysterious shoebox bulging with about $750,000 in cash that was found in the closet of the fifth-floor room of Paul Powell, who died in 1972 while Illinois Secretary of State.
 Former state Democratic headquarters and host to presidents from Lincoln to John F. Kennedy, the St. Nick is now the property of National Content Liquidators, Inc. of Dayton, Ohio, and is being sold lock, stock and barrel.
 Built in 1856 for $15,000 as a four-story, 66-room hotel, the St. Nick expanded over the years to its present 10 floors of 191 rooms and two floors of penthouse apartments.

 But its ownership changed hands repeatedly in recent years, suffering financial blows that finally sent it down for the count.
 The hotel's contents, everything from beds, chairs and lamps to plumbing, are worth about $100,000, a spokesman for the liquidator says.
 The first items sold, and sold out, were 500 sets of china with the hotel's emblem set in the center in gold-leaf, he says.
 But the item most folks seemed particularly curious about was the fifth-floor room with the famous closet.
 The closet door is gone. It was confiscated by the Illinois Department of Law Enforcement when Powell died and the money was found. But inside the closet's back wall was a sign: "Too late! Cash Is Gone!"

Ex-Gridder Hopes For New Life

MILAN, Mich. (UPI) — Billy Taylor had it all going for him in 1972. He was a college football hero bound for the pro ranks.

But things went sour. His mother died. His girlfriend was stabbed to death. His uncle killed his aunt, then shot himself. Taylor kicked around from football team to football team, unable to stay with any one team for very long.

Finally, he went to jail for his part in a 1975 robbery at a bank in his hometown — Barberton, Ohio.

It was in prison that Taylor began turning things around. He is scheduled to be released from the Federal Correctional Institution at South Ann Arbor today after serving 28 months of his eight-year term.

Taylor participated in a study release program, and is the first federal prisoner to earn a masters degree. He has been admitted to the University of Michigan's doctoral program in education. And he has a labor relations job with General Motors waiting for him.

He is also writing a book about himself — how he went from football hero to jail in less than four years.

"Oh, man, it'll be like coming out of a cocoon," Taylor said.

"Just to be out and somewhere where I can go to the refrigerator at night if I'm hungry, or just sit back and watch television, or drink a cold beer," Taylor sighed. "Those things seem like so much now. Now I want to get into a situation where I can enjoy a family type situation. It's time to mellow out, get some roots and do some meaningful things."

Taylor was the premier back on the 1971 Michigan football team. His college rushing total of 3,072 yards still ranks second on Michigan's all-time individual rushing list.

He was drafted by the Atlanta Falcons in 1972, but his pro football career was a disaster.

Shortly after Michigan's 1972 Rose Bowl loss to Stanford, Taylor's mother died. He lost his desire to play football. Later, his girlfriend was stabbed to death and his uncle shot his aunt, then turned the gun on himself.

"My heart really wasn't in it, but I went (to Atlanta) and accepted my bonus," Taylor recalls. "I figured I'd just go and play and make some money."

He said he had the wrong attitude in training camp and never really hit it off with Norm Van Brocklin, then head coach of the Falcons.

Taylor moved on to the St. Louis Cardinals, to Calgary in the Canadian league, to Memphis of the World Football League and, finally, spent a short stint with the Philadelphia Eagles.

Somewhat he wound up in his hometown, driving a getaway car after an armed robbery at a bank. On June 4, 1975, he was sentenced to eight years in prison for his part in the robbery. He will report to a parole officer regularly after his release.

LEAA Sets

Testing Of '911' System

WASHINGTON (AP) — A computer system for improving the operation of "911" emergency telephone services is being tested by the federal government.

About 700 cities across the country use the 911 system, said the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, which is conducting the test.

Under the system, a citizen dials 911 to reach the police or fire department in an emergency.

Metropolitan areas with several different police and fire departments in more than one legal jurisdiction now use "a cumbersome manual routing" to switch incoming calls to the proper agency, the LEAA said.

The experiment involves using computers to switch the calls automatically.

LEAA is providing $711,093 to test the computerized system in Alameda County, Calif. The test will go into full operation June 1, the agency said.

"We expect this demonstration project to make a significant contribution to improving 911 call systems in the United States," said Acting LEAA Administrator James Gregg.

With the computer system, "the moment 911 is dialed, the caller's telephone number and street address light up on a video terminal in front of a police dispatcher," the agency said. "If the caller is unable to communicate for any reason, the screen continues to display the caller's address and telephone number."

With the press of a button, the police dispatcher can alert the fire department, poison control center, suicide prevention center, ambulances, bomb squad or other emergency services as well as sending police to the scene.

Under the present system, it may take several minutes to determine which emergency units are closest to the caller and send them on their way, the agency said.

Alameda County has 1.2 million residents in 16 cities and numerous unincorporated communities.

Court Says Damage

By Mouse Insured

METZ, France (AP) — An insurance company has been ordered to pay a $1,200 claim for damage to a car caused by a mouse trapped in the car's engine.

According to testimony, mice nesting under the car's hood became trapped by the fanbelt and damaged the auto's cooling system. The award covered the cost of repair work.

Bald Eagle Protection Expanding

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The federal government is about to expand to 43 states its protection of the bald eagle, the national symbol which has been threatened with extinction in the lower 48 states.

The Interior Department's Fish and Wildlife Service within the next few weeks will publish final regulations proclaiming the bald eagle is endangered in 43 states and giving their habitat full protection under the Endangered Species Act.

Alaska has a large population of eagles, estimated at 7,000 pairs or more. The birds, which eat fish, dead animals or even crippled ducks, were never found in Hawaii.

Bald eagles already are protected under a separate law, but their habitat is not. With the new listings, the government will have to make careful analysis before disturbing eagle nesting or wintering areas.

Currently, eagles are divided into northern and southern "races," with only the southern bald eagle — those found below the 40th parallel — holding endangered status.

"All is not well with this nation's symbol," Fish and Wildlife Service Director Lynn Greenwalt recently told the National Wildlife Federation.

National Wildlife Federation eagle expert Bill Clark said "the new status more accurately reflects the true biological situation."

Eagles once were found in every section of the country, but now only 10 states can count more than 25 eagle nests, Clark said.

"Florida has a lot of nests," he said, while some states such as California provide breeding grounds and others provide wintering areas.

Clark said there is "guarded optimism" that the eagle is making a comeback. There are 3,000 eagles in the lower 48 states, including 1,000 pairs and 1,000 young eagles under the breeding age of 5 years.

The federation said the biggest threats to eagle survival are destruction of habitat, contamination of food supply with pesticides and poisons, and illegal shootings.

But Clark said the biggest breakthrough in the campaign to save the eagle is the national ban on indiscriminate use of the pesticide DDT, which works its way into the bird's food supply and impairs reproduction.

In addition, he said, strong federal laws against the malicious killing of eagles has helped protect the species.

Jeweler Robbed 37 Times

DENVER (UPI) — Ralph Cunningham, a 77-year-old jeweler, is fixing watches again — even though last week he was robbed, knocked to the floor and kicked in the face.

Cunningham's no stranger to violence. He has been robbed 37 times in the past 23 years. The last robbery occurred with a trained guard dog sleeping in a family car and police sitting in a patrol car across the street.

The jeweler has been beaten, knifed and shot several times. On one occasion — when he was hospitalized for a gunshot wound — his business was burglarized twice. But he returns to work every time.

"This is my livelihood," he said at his store in downtown Denver. "I have work to do. I'm not thinking about the future."

Cunningham has installed bars on his windows, a burglar alarm system, a sophisticated tear-gas device and a trained guard dog. The dog, a Doberman pinscher named Solomon, was sleeping in the family car during the latest robbery.

"We've made too much of a pet of him," said Mrs. R.D. Frey, 79, Cunningham's sister. "He likes to sleep on the soft cushions in the car."

Cunningham, who keeps only cheap costume jewelry and inexpensive watchbands on hand because he cannot get insurance, said the alarms have helped somewhat. Police also know the address by heart and have no trouble in quickly responding to a call for help.

Cunningham says he didn't fear for his life "because I'm not a coward — but it might pay to be a coward sometime."

His sister said her brother's hands were beaten so badly one time that he couldn't work.

"Some men came in and beat his hands until they were bloody," she said. "It was a long time before he could repair watches again."

School Board To Consider New Conduct Policy

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock school officials have revised their policies on student discipline, spelling out for the first time youngsters' responsibilities and formally eliminating out-of-school suspension as a punishment.

The proposed policy changes, to be considered by the school board Thursday, also include a new behavior code and "due process" provisions for students accused of breaking school rules.

Most of the revisions represent things the Lubbock Independent School District has been enforcing all along, either by tradition or under other policies. Dr. E.C. Leslie, assistant superintendent for administration, said Tuesday.

They have been put into new form to make them "more understandable and give them all the weight of board policy," he said.

The only big changes involve assignment to Project Intercept, the district's new program for hard-to-manage students, and use of in-school suspensions.

The in-building suspension program, piloted at Estacado High last year and implemented in all 15 junior and senior high schools this term, establishes a special classroom in each school for students who otherwise would be sent home for a few days.

Students habitually truant, tardy or disruptive temporarily are assigned to the in-school suspension room where, under teacher supervision, they serve time working on their studies — without talking or mixing with friends.

The in-school suspension program has received considerable play in the local student press. Student opinion has been mixed, as evidenced in recent letters to the editor published in Coronado's newspaper, The Crest.

"I think that this business of a little room with just a desk in it is a bunch of bunk," wrote Billy Langwell. "For one thing, I have never been 'truant' before in my life, but for those who have been, putting them in a small room for three school days isn't going to do anything but make matters worse."

"I thought that this was supposed to be a building that taught the beautiful things about being free, but to me it looks like we're headed for our jail cells when we come to school," Langwell said.

That was followed up by letters from Jeff Johnson and Delane Butler.

"It is important that we learn not only the beautiful things about being free, but more importantly, the responsibilities that freedom brings," Johnson said.

"The in-school suspension program is simply punishment for students who knowingly break rules. If a student feels strongly enough about the punishment, he should have sense enough to stay out of major trouble," Johnson said.

Added Butler: "Detention-room haters think a punishment should not be uncomfortable. However, the rest of us know that the only way to keep a person from doing something is to punish him with an unpleasant reward, not a pleasant one."

School trustees will have their say on the subject when they meet Thursday at 7:15 a.m. in the district administration building, 1628 19th St.

School administrators long have been searching for alternatives to out-of-school suspensions, which they say may do more harm than good. Results of that search have been the in-school suspension program and Project Intercept, an alternative school set up in the district's administration annex.

Project Intercept, established by a criminal justice grant in cooperation with the Lubbock County Juvenile Probation Department, provides intensive counseling and supervision for students who otherwise would receive what used to be called a "long-term suspension."

The proposed policies to be considered Thursday by the school board state: "When a student fails to comply with reasonable rules of the school and other disciplinary measures have failed to change his behavior, he may be subject to in-building suspension or assignment to Project Intercept."

The proposal said minor infractions should be handled with "short-term in-building suspension," with Project Intercept reserved for "repeated violations or major offenses."

In either case, before any action is taken, the student must be advised of the charge and "allowed to give his version of the situation," the proposed policies say.

Assignments to Project Intercept will be decided by a committee composed of the director of pupil personnel, the secondary education director, the juvenile probation officer and the principal making the recommendation.

The proposed new policies outline a conduct code listing student "obligations": "To obey the rules of his school, to apply himself to the established course of study, to respect the authority of all teachers, to respect all school property, to conduct himself properly at school, in school buses and at all school functions, to refrain from disruption, demonstrations, violence and other forms of incitement, to go to and from school in an orderly manner and without delay, and to refrain from interference with other students."

The proposal said grounds for suspension will include disrespect or disobedience of teachers, skipping class, damaging school property, fighting, gambling, hazing, carrying weapons or drugs on school property, smoking tobacco at school, violating city, state or federal laws, and "disrupting the educational process."

New Exhibit Featured At Museum

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The doctor's office, holding all the necessities for practicing medicine behind or above any drugstore in any small pioneer West Texas town, premieres Friday at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

Members of the West Texas Museum Association and their guests will preview the new exhibit at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

"We wanted to catch the spirit of a variety of offices," Patrick Butler, curator of history, said.

In part, exhibit builders are using the office Dr. Marvin Overton once used in the back of a Lubbock drug store, but where Dr. Overton had a rough wooden examining table, the exhibit has an imported one.

The exhibit, incorporating an office and a small operating area behind, is larger than that of Dr. Overton, whose place in South Plains history is recorded in the Peter Hurd mural in the old museum building now known as Holden Hall.

Butler spent much of the summer at the Smithsonian Institution researching the doctor office of the small town.

He found most of them to be similar to those West Texans recall, having a simple roll top desk, examining chair, operating theater, a number of medicine bottles, most times a dental drill.

Office furnishings came in from all over the area, with the help of the Medical Auxiliary and the sponsoring Heritage Projects Committee of the WTMA Women's Council.

A dentist's instrument cabinet once part of the office of Dr. W.R. Scofield of Brownfield will be added to a foot pedal drill and instruments from A.E. Gissell to form the dental segment of the family doctor picture.

Medical instruments came from H.H. Moncus of New Mexico, a folding operating table plus instruments from L.D. Rochelle and a heating pad from Mrs. T.J. Harris.

The examining chair will be one used by Dr. J.H. Wavland who founded Wayland Baptist College in Plainview.

A gas-heated sterilizer came from a Silverton clinic.

looked like "an arc of fire from something electrical."

At Lubbock, Ron Johnston, Texas Tech planetarium director, said he is "90 per cent certain" the bright object that blazed across the sky about 8 p.m. was a bolide meteor.

The Lubbock International Airport control tower reported several calls on the object as did Lubbock police. Some of the inquiries reportedly came as far away as Boy's Ranch near the Canadian River and Dickens to the east. Reese Air Force Base sent out several planes to search for possible plane wreckage, but spokesmen reported all of their aircraft safe and accounted for.

Johnston said the greenish-blue object, which appeared to flame and give off sparks, moved from the southwest to the northeast, about four degrees above the horizon. Johnston said he observed the object for nearly half a minute.

About 9:30 p.m. Tuesday the Associated Press reported the meteor had been spotted by residents in four states: Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Missouri.

There were conflicting reports throughout the Southwest, the AP said, as to whether the object was a meteor or meteorite, a flaming chunk which actually strikes the Earth.

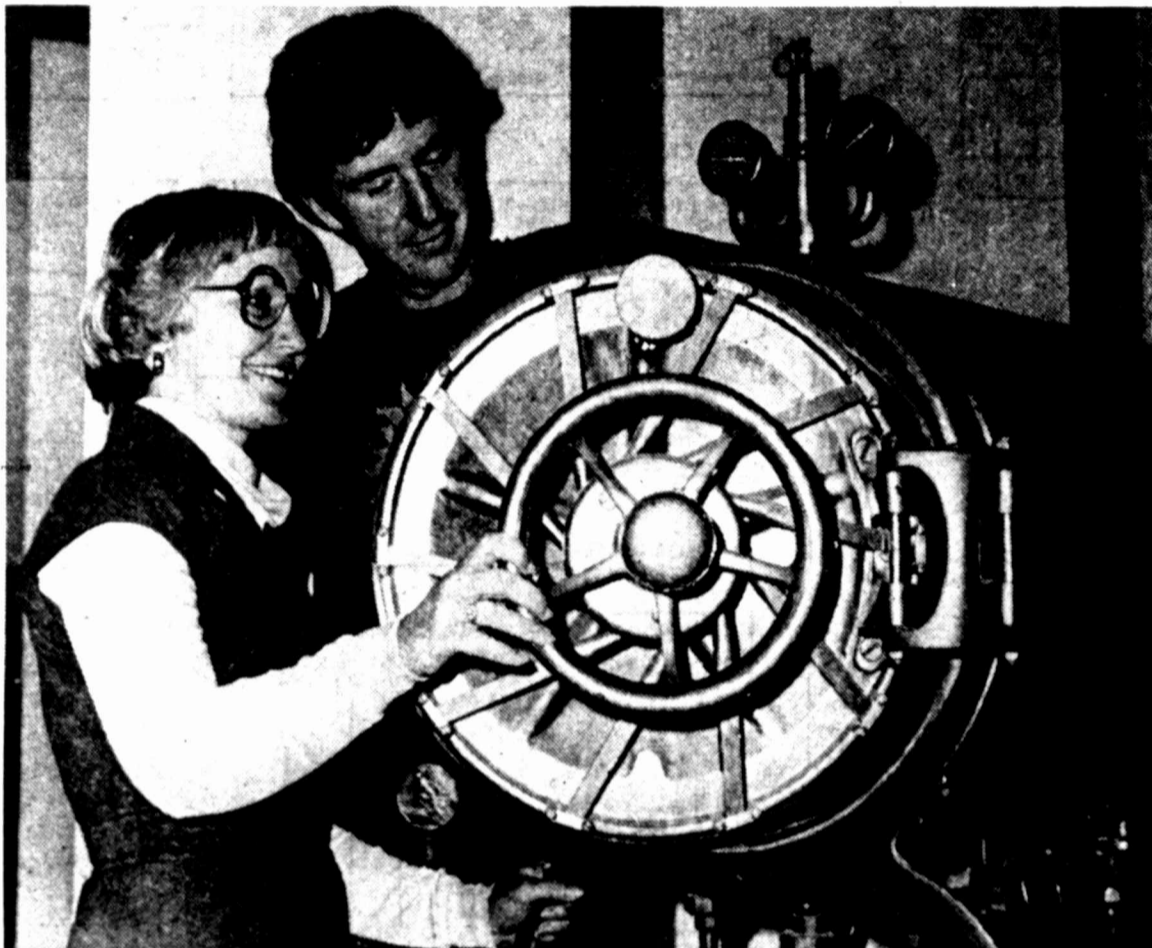

A spokesman for the McDonald Observatory in Fort Davis told the AP "it's definitely a meteor. When one is that large and that bright, it's likely to have reached the ground intact."

Retired Teachers Announce Meeting

The District XVII Retired Teachers Association will meet Oct. 28 at 12:30 p.m. for a luncheon and program at John Knox Village of West Texas, 1717 Norfolk.

For reservations, local retired teachers should call Elsie Andress at 799-8868 or Edith Caveness at 792-4794. Reservations must be in by Friday.

Dr. Sam Nader of the First United Methodist Church will be the featured speaker. The meeting is open to all retired teachers, regardless of where they taught.

QUITE A FIND — Mrs. Doug Andrews, chairman of the heritage projects committee of the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association, admires a gas-operated sterilizer which will be part of the doctor's office exhibit going up at the museum of Texas Tech University. Lubbock Air Boardings Skyrocket month in 1976. The airline reported a 30.9 per cent hike over last September, and a 7.2 per cent increase in passengers over the same nine months last year.

Branch is maintaining the largest increase in passengers for the nine-month period, with a 12.5 per cent hike over the same period in 1976. However, the airline recorded no gain in passengers for the month.

Texas International, which initiated reduced fares for its passengers only this month, registered a modest gain of 1.4 per cent over 1976 and a 3.4 per cent decrease from September, 1976.

Southwest Airlines, which began operation here on May 20, boarded 11,723 passengers last month, bringing its total for the year to 51,979.

Chaparral Airlines, a commuter service headquartered in Abilene, explained 56 passengers last month, increasing its total for the year to 509.

Crown Aviation, a Clovis-Lubbock service, boarded 56 during the month of September, bringing its yearly total to 128.

The Airport Board will receive these figures at its monthly meeting at 7:30 p.m. today at the airport.

At the meeting, the board will be asked for the third consecutive month to allow Executive Limousine Service to operate at the facility.

The board refused to act on the request at its last meeting, and the owners of the service company took the request to the City Council.

The council determined, however, that city ordinances dealt only with taxicabs, not limousines, and threw the ball back to the Airport Board.

The board will again be asked to grant the limousine service parking space in front of the terminal.

Other items on the eight-item agenda are routine, including a review of parking expansion at the airport and a progress report on work on the north-south runway.

Accreditation Seen For High Schools

An official for the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools said Tuesday continued accreditation of Lubbock's five public high schools by his organization should be "no problem."

"We have found evidence of very good teaching here," said Dr. Kenneth Laycock, chairman of an 81-member committee that has spent the past two days inspecting Coronado, Dunbar, Estacado, Lubbock and Monterey high schools.

"The teachers are making a real attempt to reach the goals the Lubbock Independent School District has set — especially in terms of individualizing instruction for youngsters," Laycock said.

"I can say nothing but good things about the faculty. As for reaffirmation of accreditation by the Southern Association, that should be no problem."

Laycock's committee divided into three teams, one visiting Coronado and Dunbar, another Estacado and Lubbock High and another Monterey.

Each team instructed subcommittees to examine various academic departments.

Laycock, executive director of the Region XVI Education Service Center in Amarillo, will pull together the team reports into an overall evaluation of the city's high schools.

He hopes to have a comprehensive document ready in four to five weeks.

Visitation by the committee, composed of active and retired teachers and school administrators from various West Texas cities, is required by the Southern Association every 10 years.

If the evaluation is favorable, Lubbock high schools will retain their membership in the association.

"Not only does that status carry prestige, but it also facilitates the transfer of high school credits for students who move out of Lubbock."

The visiting committee's report will serve as a check for the school system's self-evaluation, a campus-by-campus study that took place over the past two years.

With the committee's guidance and the district's own research, school officials will develop a five-year plan to address weaknesses here.

Laycock said the district's self-study was "very thorough and of great help" to the visiting committee.

The self-evaluation and the five-year plan are part of the district's effort to renew accreditation of all schools — not just the senior highs — by the Texas Education Agency.

Only the senior high schools are accredited by the Southern Association.

Production Rise Sought By Exxon

AUSTIN (UPI) — Exxon Corp. asked the Texas Railroad Commission Tuesday to permit increased production of an East Texas oil field to avoid the loss of 1.7 million barrels of oil.

Exxon officials said a higher production level would prevent the waste of recoverable oil in the Neches (Woodbine) oil field in Anderson County.

SOLAR CAMPUS — Architect John Truemper, left, of Little Rock, Ark., and Dr. Harry Smith, president of Mississippi County Community College in Blytheville, Ark., examine plans for an $8.8 million solar-powered classroom complex at the school. Papers' Buyer Unknown

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP) — A "guessing game" about who will buy the Wilmington News-Journal Co. has begun in earnest following the merger of the Christiana Securities Co. into E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co.

The News-Journal Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Christiana, publishes the only morning, evening and Sunday newspapers in Wilmington.

The sale of the newspapers has been the object of lively speculation in the newspaper industry since plans for the merger of Du Pont and Christiana, primarily a holding company for a group of Du Pont family members, were announced in 1972. At the time, Du Pont said it would sell the newspapers as soon as the merger was completed.

Following a shareholders' meeting this week, during which the merger was approved, Du Pont Chairman Irving S. Shapiro disclosed that there have been "more than 80" inquiries from prospective purchasers of the newspapers.

A Du Pont spokesman said the sale, which will be handled by Morgan Stanley & Co., probably would be completed within "120 to 150 days."

When the merger was first announced, the value of the News-Journal Co. was appraised at $24.3 million. The purchase price is expected to exceed that amount.

The latest audited circulations of the newspapers are 49,477, morning; 86,880, evening; 120,515, Saturday, and 82,278, Sunday.

Shapiro said that price alone would not determine the new owner of the newspapers.

"We want someone who is skilled in running a newspaper enterprise," he said.

Du Pont will take into account the purchaser's plans for serving Delaware, their commitment to high journalistic standards and their consideration for the welfare of the News-Journal employees, Shapiro said.

A statement released after the merger was completed warned that brokers looking to buy the newspapers just for resale "need not apply."

In addition, the statement said that Du Pont reserved the right to reject all offers with no explanation.

House Demand Boosts Prices

By PHILIP GREER and MYRON KANDEL

The heady spiral in housing prices seems to be over in California, but some of its strength is moving eastward. Texas, the Midwest, the sunbelt — most of the country with the exception of the New England area — are seeing a pickup in housing demand that's likely to become even more pronounced over the next few years.

That's the reading of Eli Broad, chairman of Kaufman & Broad, Inc., the international building firm. Broad, whose company sold $283 million worth of houses last year, has an obvious interest in a strong market. But he told us that he bases his projection on some new trends that are developing in home ownership.

"A few years ago, home ownership was just a natural step. A couple got married and lived in an apartment. When they started having a family—or thinking about it—they decided they'd need more room and they began looking for a house."

"Now there's a new element," he said. "Young people view a home as an investment. They've seen their parent build an equity through home ownership, and they see it as a way of saving and building an estate. So they're more willing to reach for homes. There are more two-job families now, there are more young single professional people buying houses, more unmarried couples setting up housekeeping and more divorced people who want to own homes. People used to spend 20 to 25 per cent of their disposable income on housing, but because of the investment idea they're increasing that to 30 per cent or more. I think we're going to see more of that."

Broad conceded that such thinking could make buyers more willing to push prices up, but he doesn't expect a repetition of the California boom in other parts of the country. Over the past few years, home prices on the West Coast soared 200 and 300 per cent, helped by large numbers of speculators who added fuel to the fires.

"The demand is still good in California," he told us. "But the fever is out of the market. The traffic looking at homes is still good and prices haven't gone down, but houses aren't being sold in two three days any more. It's a much healthier market right now."

Another strong attraction, Broad said, is that "housing is the last tax shelter around. All the others have been closed down. It's the last place where people can get tax writeoffs."

Although the housing business has picked up this year, government figures on total activity have not matched the expectations of a decade ago. The monthly figures—which are reported as if they continued for a year—have been hovering around 2 million starts, 10 per cent or so below the country's estimated requirements. But Broad says a large part of the lag is due to outside forces, not to the lack of demand.

"In California, if starts are off next year, it will be because of a shortage of places to build," he said. "Then there are the no-growth areas, like northern California where new housing is limited because of the water shortage. Denver has a limit on building permits because of water supply problems. In some of those areas, we could get a starvation of supply."

Rental housing, Broad said, has been lagging and he attributes that to cost problems. "Rental can't keep up with costs," he said. "To do that, rents would have to go up 10 or 15 per cent a year, and people aren't willing to pay that right now."

"That could change as prices go up," he said. "The spread between home ownership, counting in the equity building and the tax advantages, will narrow over a period of time and renting will become more attractive. That's happened to some extent in Los Angeles. If you look around, you can find apartments for $300 or so a month. If you can rent at prices like that, why buy a house that will cost $600 or $700 a month? Of course, prices haven't gone up as much in other areas, so it will take some time before people start thinking more in terms of renting."

Broad's own company, which includes its Sun Life Insurance Co. subsidiary, has had some tough times since its peak year of 1973, when it showed a profit of $1.27 per share of common stock. The next year, housing sales dropped sharply and the company reported a loss of $1.56 a share, but the figures have been improving since. For the first nine months of this year (which ended on Aug. 31), K&B reported a profit of 55 cents a share, more than double the results for the same period of 1976.

Broad said he expects the improvement to continue in 1978 when, he said, the company could rack up record sales. It probably won't match the net profit of its peak year, though.

Professor Suggests Freer Labor Market

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The best thing the federal government could do to create jobs for blacks would be to stop intervening and promote a freer labor market, says a black professor of economics at Philadelphia's Temple University.

The strongly worded views of Dr. Walter Williams have not endeared him to the NAACP or most other prominent black leaders. Nor have the prominent black leaders earned a high place in Dr. Williams' esteem.

Williams told United Press International the NAACP and nearly all the blacks in Congress are dependent on financial support from the "white liberal establishment and don't really represent the interests of black people."

Williams said while the reactions of black leaders to his views have been highly negative, "I have had much support from black groups."

The professor's bete noir is the minimum wage law. He said it is largely responsible for high unemployment among young blacks because "it sets a labor price so high it makes it uneconomical for firms to hire and train the least skilled individuals among whom blacks are a disproportionate share."

Williams charged that President George Meany and the top leaders of the AFL-CIO support a minimum wage increase largely as a device to keep less skilled blacks out of work. He said that as late as 1948, the jobless rate for black youths was less than the rate for white youths and the minimum wage law has played a big part in reversing this situation.

The Davis-Bacon Act, which allows the federal government to set minimum wages for federally funded construction jobs, was conceived in 1931, he said, as a way to force contractors to hire white labor at higher wages instead of non-union Negroes and to force out of business non-union contractors, many of them black.

Williams said the speculative medallion tax/cab license situations in New York, Chicago and Baltimore have had the practical effect of excluding blacks from owning their own cabs, whereas in Washington a black man or anyone could become an owner-driver for $200 over the cost of a car.

"A taxi driver I rode with in New York the other day told me the medallion price there now is $50,000," Williams said.

He charged there is a curious parallel between the use of the minimum wage law in the United States and "in racist South Africa."

"South Africans were paying black labor as little as 40 cents an hour against nearly $2 for white workers doing the same job," he said, "but in those trades where the white unions wanted the blacks out, they succeeded in getting special wage equality laws passed. Faced with the choice of paying blacks the same as whites or firing them, the employers fired the blacks."

"Now that George Meany has got Congress to raise the minimum wage again, I predict the AFL-CIO will use that to launch another round of big wage boosts," Williams said.

Frustrated Skiers

Get Free Ride Home

DENVER (AP) — Skiers: If Nature forsakes you, United Airlines says it won't.

United president Bob McBride has said if skiers arrive in the Denver area and find less than half of the ski lifts operating because of poor skiing conditions, the airline will fly them home — free.

PROTECT THE LOOKS OF YOUR CAR

POLYGLYCOAT

The revolutionary new protective sealant that is not a wax or polish and can only be applied by your new car dealer.

GUARANTEED

FOR THREE FULL YEARS — Your auto purchase today is a necessity. Buy with the future in mind.

POLYGLYCOAT PRESERVES! NO NEED TO EVER WAX YOUR CAR AGAIN!

Polyglycoat is a paint and chrome sealant that — guaranteed to protect your car against fading, corrosion, oxidation, and loss of gloss for three years. Complete of Dow 300 paraffin waxes with a synthetic base. Polyglycoat breaks through the fine paint pores in the surface and the paint sealing, hand spreading it against the foreign elements that cause corrosion, rust, and loss of gloss.

Not only will Polyglycoat eliminate the need for waxing, but it will actually maintain your car's showroom finish, thereby ethically increasing its value. It should be applied to all new cars and properly prepared used cars. KEEPS YOUR PAINT AND CHROME LIKE NEW!

Jackson's HRs Smash LA 8-4

NEW YORK (AP) — Reggie Jackson, the man who stirred the drink, made it a champagne cocktail. With three magnifi-cantly dramatic home runs, he gift-wrapped the New York Yankees' 21st World Series championship.

"I am the straw that stirs the drink," Jackson said before he had ever batted for the Yankees in a major league game. "(Catcher and captain Thurman) Munson can only stir it bad."

Though that comment alienated Munson and touched off the Yankees' soap opera season of conflict and controversy, all was forgotten Tuesday night. Jackson powered New York to an 8-4 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and gave the Yankees the World Series, four games to two.

"Ah, the taste of victory," Jackson said, swigging a bottle of champagne in the jubilant Yankees locker room. "This symbolizes victory and being champions."

All his hitting heroics helped him overcome a season of mental pressure that would crumble a lesser man. First, there was the spring training remark that degraded Munson, the Most Valuable Player in the AL last year.

Soon after the remark appeared in a national magazine, Jackson had his celebrated run-in with Manager Billy Martin on national television. The two proud

Carter Cromwell Tech Offensive Statistics Down

AS A PLAYER, Steve Sloan was a quarterback, and a good one. Because of his background, people have come to expect the team he coaches to possess a potent attack. Usually, that's proven to be correct.

Sloan was offensive coordinator for one year each at Florida State and Georgia Tech, and both teams had success offensively. His Vanderbilt clubs led the Southeastern Conference in total offense both years Sloan was head coach. His first Texas Tech outfit led the SWC in total offense, and the Raiders finished third in the league last year with a fine 380-yard mark.

However, things have been tougher so far this season. After six games, the Raiders are averaging 343 yards per game, a decent—if not outstanding—figure. But 965 yards came against New Mexico and Rice, which are statistically two of the very worst defensive teams in the major-college ranks. Minus that yardage, the per-game figure for the other four games is 274, which would rank eighth in this week's SWC total-offense standings.

This was unexpected from a team that has gone over the 500-yard mark in three games the previous two seasons, bested the 400-yard figure nine times and exceeded the 350 level 15 times. And unusual for a team that returned regulars from the 1976 campaign at 10 offensive positions.

OPONENTS LIKE BAYLOR, Texas A&M and North Carolina weren't bad defensively. But the major cause of the Raiders' offensive inconsistency this season has been injuries. All those players from last year haven't played all the time this season.

The most obvious loss is that of quarterback Rodney Allison, who provided spark, leadership and many big plays. Anyone who followed Tech last year can attest to his importance to the team. The attack naturally lost some efficiency.

Rodriguez, Williams, Hall Nab Awards

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
It isn't everyday that old man opportunity comes a calling. No, siree.

"Old Op" pounded on Dunbar running-back Earnest White's hat last Thursday night and the 161-pound took advantage—full advantage—of his generosity.

White, who had rushed for only 13 yards on 16 tries this season prior to game with Lamesa, racked up 91 steps on 15-totes in the District 3-AAA contest at Lowrey Field.

White has been named The Avalanche-Journal's offensive back of the week as nominated by the local high school coaches.

Although White did not score a touchdown for the Panthers in their 7-6 win over Lamesa, he did manage to convert three runs into first downs for the Van Jefferson-coached team.

Coaches Seek Future Tilts

Coaches over the South Plains are scrambling for games, both basketball for this winter and football for next fall, in anticipation of new realignments. Morton High School will host a JV boys and girls basketball tournament Jan. 5-7, 1978. Interested parties may contact coach Dan Smith or Charlie Adams at 266-5131 or 266-5736 or by writing them at 500 W. Buchanan, Morton, 79346.

Adams also needs varsity girls and JV girls games for Jan. 6 and Jan. 17 and would like to enter ninth grade or JV tournaments.

At Hale Center, football coach Jackie Needham is seeking a game for Sept. 8, 1978. The Class A football coach can be reached at 839-2452.

Lubbock Christian High basketball coach Gary Bowe needs both boys and girls junior high games for Nov. 14, 17 and 28 as well as Dec. 1 and 8.

Bowe can be reached at 792-3221.

"We were pleased with the way he played," Jefferson said. "He came through for us the way we knew he could."

Before the Lamesa game, White had been used primarily on specialty teams. However, when runningback Kenneth James was shifted to wingback to help generate more offense, White was inserted as starting tailback.

"He (White) does a great job blocking," Jefferson pointed out. "He is not one of those dancers or fakers; he just gets the ball and runs hard."

Also nominated for the award were Randy Lusk of Coronado, Ernest Day of copped the weekly honor, Rodriguez, a guard for Estacado, helped spring Mataroz back for more than 240 yards rushing in their 21-6 win over Brownfield Saturday.

Along with Rodriguez, drawing praise were Carl Clawson of Coronado, Roy Reyna of Lubbock High, Daryl Thomas of Dunbar, Wes Blanchard of CTK and Shawn Williams of LCHS.

Heading the defensive backs is Williams of LCHS. Williams intercepted a pair of Crane aerials and also collected eight unassisted tackles in the 39-6 loss.

Williams was also named the Eagles' top offensive lineman by coach George Harper after catching seven passes for 60 yards.

Johnny McCormick of Coronado, Chris Bigham of Lubbock High, Wayne Williams of Dunbar, Kenneth Davis of Estacado and Jatin Mehta of Christ the King were also nominated.

Bigham and Williams were the only defensive backs nominated to nab interceptions.

On the defensive line, Keith Hall of Coronado had seven unassisted tackles and the same number of assists to garner the linemen's honor.

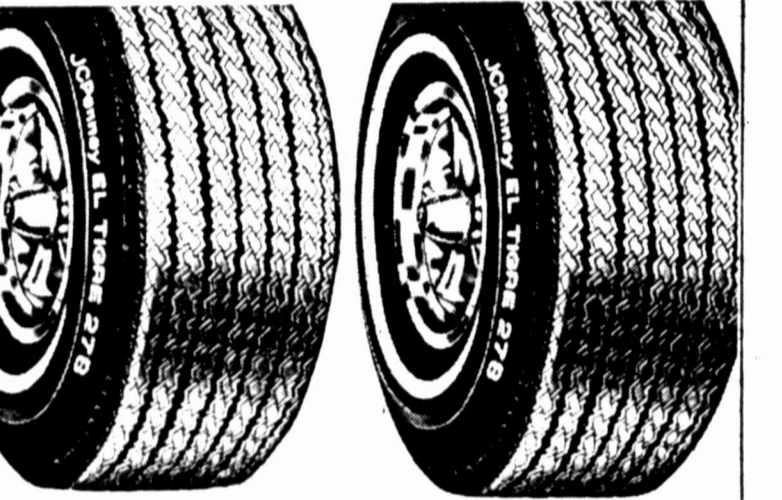

Coach Don King praised Hall's performance in the Mustang's 21-7 win over Lubbock High. "He was all over the field for us," King said. "He just did a great job."

Also cited were Chris Smith of Lubbock High, John Bouillon of Christ the King, Jamie Hill of Lubbock Christian, Steve Wright of Estacado, and Vernon Gibson of Dunbar.

Frenship QB Townsend Heads A-J Honor Roll

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Despite all those lopsided scores rolled up last week, Friday was a good night for the defense. . . and, as usual, the 200-yard rushers.

Thus, standing at the top of The Avalanche-Journal's weekly honor roll list are three defensive stalwarts (two of whom double as kicking experts), two runningbacks and a quarterback whose air antics helped sink an undefeated team.

The two-way honorees are Borden County's Tim Smith, and Dawson's Sammy Rivas, with Springlake-Earth's Tim May the other defensive standout. Larry Moore of Morton and Mike Jones of Petersburg ran wild and Frenship quarterback Doug Townsend passed Post dizzy in keeping the Tigers unbeaten and preventing the Antelopes from remaining so.

Smith, a two-way tackle, was in on 16 tackles, sacked the quarterback three times—including once for a safety—recovered two fumbles and kicked a 40-yard field goal in a 27-8 win over Wilson.

Rivas, a linebacker, was in on 19 tackles and recovered two fumbles, punted seven times for a 42.1 norm and, with 11 seconds left, booted a 22-yard field goal to nip Klondike 3-0.

May, an offensive guard last year but now a fullback-linebacker, had 15 tackles, four assists, caused three fumbles and tipped one pass away. However, the 5-11, 180-pounder's effort was not enough as Vega prevailed 48-0.

Moore, who has 724 yards rushing on the year, carried 28 times for 227 yards in a 19-14 loss to Friona. He zipped 60 yards for one score and then bolted 68 yards to set up the other. And, from his linebacker berth, he had six tackles and seven assists.

Jones had another outstanding week, carrying 31 times for 250 yards and 2 TDs (36 and 15 yards) in a 22-6 win over Hale Center. In the second half alone he had 15 carries for 147 yards. Jones now has 220 carries for 1,358 yards in seven games this year and his tandem offense totals 1,584 yards.

Townsend managed only 8 yards rushing, but it was his passing that was a key in the 21-20 verdict over Post. He hit on 12 of 18 for 133 yards and two TDs.

Two others joined the "200-Yard Rushing Club" last week, with Joel Williams of Sudan carrying 16 times for 219 yards in a 33-8 win over Nazareth.

Darrell Dowd of Valley carried 20 times for 259 yards and three TDs in a 28-8 win over Happy. That runs membership in the "Club" to 18. However, Jones has accomplished the feat four times, as has Danny Clark of Lockney, Clifford Bailey of Tahoka has done it three times and both Jerry Lee of Motley County and Danny Murphy of Idalou twice each.

Jones has the top rushing figure on the South Plains, with Clark next at 1,255, followed by Lee at 1,221, Dowd at 1,218 and Bailey, who had played one less game, at 1,195.

Others having excellent outings last Friday include:

- Petersburg punter Ricky Juarez, a 5-7, 150-pounder who averaged 43.0 on his four punts, with one covering 56 yards. In 30 attempts this fall, he has a 42.0 average.

- Springlake-Earth's defense was aided by sophomore linebacker Rudy DeLeon (eight tackles, 10 assists), junior noseguard Keith Clayton (five tackles, seven assists, one sack) and junior tackle Bryon Vaughn (six tackles, eight assists, one sack).

- Crosbyton quarterback Chad Davis, who carried 16 times for 196 yards and one TD. He was also involved in the most unusual play of the night. Following a 16-yard gain, he was hit, the ball popped loose and Marvin Wiley grabbed it and completed the 63-yard touchdown play. Wiley also scored on runs of 43 and 13 yards in a 41-12 win over Ralls.

- Friona's Jeff Whiteside carried 17 times for 149 yards and one TD in the win over Morton.

- Whiteface QB David Fietz rushed for 155 yards and Gary Dunkerson for 144 more in addition to scoring twice from the 2 in a 12-8 win over Smyer.

- Murphy carried 15 times for 145 yards including TD runs of 70, 10, 33 and 6 yards and also ran over two 2-point conversions in the 34-7 romp over Tulia.

- Clark managed 182 yards on 36 carries and scored on runs of 1 and 77 yards in a 23-19 loss to Floydada.

- Whirlwind linebacker Greg Jones had 18 tackles against Lockney.

- Dean Northcutt carried 27 times for 165 yards and Jeep Shanks 13 to 126 in Muleshoe's 18-7 win over Littlefield in which Shanks scored twice.

- Lee, who has 460 yard rushing the last two games, carried for 251 in a 41-3 rout of Silverton, scoring on runs of 58, 4 and 5 yards.

- The Seagraves duo of Steve McCormick and Clarence Davis accounted for 218 of the teams' 354 ground yards in a 41-0 win over Shallowater. Davis carried 14 times for 115 yards and McCormick six times for 103 steps.

- Jal's Ricky Jennings averaged 13 yards on each of his 13 carries and broke for 93 yards and a TD that gave Jal a 13-6 win over Fort Sumner.

- Lorenzo's Greg Cunningham carried

27 times for 111 yards and scored on runs of 1 and 43 yards in a 26-0 win over Spur.

- Slaton's John Johnson had 16 carries for 149 yards and Brad Eblen 13 for 106 as the Tigers amassed 351 ground yards and 439 total yards in a 60-0 win over Denver City.

- Alex Perez had nine tackles and carried 20 times for 102 yards in Grady's 30-21 win over Cotton Center, which was paced by Ruben Gutierrez with 125 yards on 21 carries.

EHS Defeats City Rival

Terrance Gatewood banged home 11 points for Estacado as the Matadors defeated Dunbar 15-11, 15-8 Tuesday night in a District 3-AAA volleyball contest.

Norma Luna was the high point scorer for the Panthers with 8 points. The loss leaves Dunbar winless in loop play with an 0-6 mark. Estacado has a 4-2 district mark.

Led by Donna Hays' 11 points, Monterey defeated Levelland 15-0, 15-2 in the Levelland gym.

The win evens Monterey's won-loss mark at 11-11 for the year.

In junior varsity action, Monterey downed Levelland 15-0, 15-7 and Dunbar edged Estacado 15-6, 14-16, 15-5.

LA Checked Out Of Hotel Early

HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N.J. (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers packed their bags, paid their bills and checked out of their hotel before the critical sixth game of the World Series was decided.

"But if they won, they would have come back," said officials at the Sheraton Heights Hotel here.

Officials said the arrangements were made not because the Dodgers were pessimistic about the game, but to eliminate the need for the team to drive back to New Jersey in the event of a loss.

The New York Yankees won the World Series championship with a 8-4 victory Tuesday night.

A large floral display at the hotel depicted a Yankee. Its attached card read, "Go Damn Yankees."

'Dodger In Sky' Throws Lasorda Curve

NEW YORK (AP) — The "Big Dodger in the Sky" finally threw Tom Lasorda a curveball.

"Our pitchers just didn't put the ball where they were supposed to," said the Los Angeles manager, "and our hitters didn't hit the ball the way they were capable of."

Lasorda, who claims to bleed Dodger Blue because of his long emotional attachment to the Los Angeles Dodgers organization, was bleeding more than usual Tuesday night after watching the New York Yankees tear apart his reputable pitching staff.

"We lived by the long ball all season and we died by it in the World Series," said Lasorda after the Yankees hit four home runs, three by Reggie Jackson, to bury the Dodgers 8-4 and win the 1977 World Series four games to two.

"I kept hoping and praying that we could get something started ... but it just wasn't to be," said Lasorda, who in the past had whimsically invoked "the Big Dodger in the Sky" for supposedly supernatural help.

Actually, the only thing supernatural that happened Tuesday night appeared to be a Jackson's performance. It was the talk of the stunned Dodger locker room.

"I think it was a night when he released a lot of his emotional tension," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey, referring to Jackson's season of controversy in New York. "It sure was some performance. I have never seen one like it in my life in a championship game situation."

Lasorda agreed. "Let's put it this way," said Lasorda. "No one has hit three homers in one World Series game since 1928, so it has to be a hell of a performance. I have never seen any better in a World Series."

While impressed with Jackson and the Yankees as a whole, the Dodgers would not let the loss of a World Series overshadow their brilliant season.

"Nobody on the Dodgers should feel ashamed," said third baseman Ron Cey. "Nobody believed in us at the start of the year, but we proved we were a great ballclub. You have to give credit where credit is due, the Yankees were able to make all the right plays. Their pitchers made the good pitches, and their hitters got the big hits. I know we'll be back next year."

Garvey and Lasorda expressed similar pride in defeat.

"The thing was we never quit, even in the ninth and we were losing by five runs," said Garvey. "We continued to give 100 per cent. That's typical five runs," said Garvey. "We continued to give 100 per cent. That's typical of this Dodger team."

"I'm very proud of this team and the things that it's accomplished this year," said Lasorda. "Whatever we did, we exemplified the character of a true Dodger team, and many people have told me that our players had a lot of class both on and off the field."

Garvey only wished that the script would have had a Hollywood ending for the Dodgers.

"It's an empty feeling," said Garvey. "It's like writing a book without a climax ... but we'll be back."

Fans Go Wild In Last Frame

NEW YORK (AP) — The 56,407 fans who watched the Yankees capture their first World Championship in 15 years were well-behaved until the top half of the ninth inning. Then, order at Yankee Stadium began to fall apart.

With the Dodgers down to their final three outs of the year, a fan ran onto the field. Seconds later, a few more fans followed. Within minutes, firecrackers and smoke bombs were hurled from the stands. Right fielder Reggie Jackson, worried that he might be hurt, ran to the Yankee dugout for a batting helmet.

Finally, when Yankee pitcher Mike Torrez snared Lee Lacy's failed bunt attempt for the final out of the game, "a human wave" of fans, as one policeman put it, swept past police and onto the playing field.

In the game's aftermath, about a dozen fans and some 15 police officers were treated at a nearby hospital after suffering minor injuries during skirmishes in and around the stadium.

One fan was treated for a compound leg fracture after jumping from the stadium's second tier. A police officer was treated for a possible arm fracture.

In addition, 20 fans were either arrested or issued summonses on a variety of charges including assault, pick-pocketing, harassment, disorderly conduct and trespassing. A police spokesman said most were released pending a court hearing at a later date.

Said Asst. Chief Inspector Raymond McDermott of the New York City police department: "You have to be selective in how you enforce things. If a thousand people came onto the field, I didn't expect to make a thousand arrests."

Before and during the game — until the top half of the ninth inning, at least — the beefed-up group of 350 police officer and 300 private security guards had little to do. Their presence in numbers seemed to constrain the crowd.

In contrast to Game Two, when numerous fights erupted in the stands after the Dodgers jumped off to a 5-0 lead and held it the rest of the way, the mood in the stands was festive, but comparatively tranquil, during most of Tuesday night's game.

The fans ignored repeated public address announcements not to throw objects from the stands, floating streamers onto the playing surface after Chris Chambliss' two-run home run and after each of Reggie Jackson's three home runs.

Yanks World Champions

But Tuesday night was a time for the Yankees to bask in the thrill of their victory and the awe of witnessing Jackson's home runs — one of the most powerful and theatrical feats in World Series annals.

"He beat us single-handedly," said Dodger first baseman Steve Garvey. "I've never seen a performance like that in the World Series."

It was the sun and the moon of superstar performances. "Guys throw around the word superstar a lot," said Jackson. "Guys like Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente. But I can say I had one day like those guys."

What Jackson did was tie Babe Ruth's record of three homers in one Series game. It started as if Chris Chambliss would be the hitting hero as he had been last year in New York's playoff conquest of the Kansas City Royals. But Horton walked Jackson on four straight pitches in the second inning, and saw him score on Chambliss' home run.

Then Jackson took matters into his own hands. He smashed a screaming line drive into the right field stands on Horton's first pitch to him in the fourth. Then, in the fifth, he sent one from Elias Sosa on a similar fast trip into the right field seats.

"The balls were in. That's how they tried to pitch me all Series," said Jackson. "You can pitch me in, but don't knock on the door and announce it. Even a dummy will adjust and I adjusted."

Charlie Hough, a knuckeball pitcher, was hurling the eighth inning. He threw his first pitch down and over the plate, but the result was the same: a mammoth homer — this time to center field, an estimated 450 feet away.

"Nothing can top this," said Jackson. "Who the hell is going to hit three homers to decide a World Series? Hell, I'm not."

But he did. In Game 5, Jackson homered on his last at-bat. So he ended up smashing home runs on each of his last four swings. Overall in the Series, Jackson broke records for most homers (5), most runs scored (10), most consecutive homers in two games (4) and most total bases (25).

The total base record for a six-game Series previously belonged to Martin, the former Yankee second baseman.

"That's fantastic that he broke my record," said Martin. "Reggie's a super guy. Next year will be a lot easier for him."

It should also be easier for Martin, given a big bonus earlier Tuesday by Steinbrenner, who was on the verge of firing his fiery manager several times this season.

"Doesn't it feel good?" Steinbrenner asked Martin, wrapping him in a bear hug. "I'm proud for you. This is just the start."

"I'm proud for you, too," said Martin, his eyes moist. "Martin was given a cash bonus, a luxury automobile and a rent-free apartment for bringing the Yankees a world championship and keeping the team together ... at least together enough to win."

"We didn't want winning or losing the Series as the reason for rewarding Billy for the good job he did," said Yankee President Gabe Paul.

"Even the guy who won a million dollars in the lottery can't be as happy as I am," Martin said. "Everything is worthwhile now."

The opposite emotion filled the Los Angeles locker room. "Great game. You put on quite an exhibition," a somber Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda told Jackson, extending his hand.

Mike Torrez, the winning pitcher in the pivotal third game and again in the climactic sixth game, yielded nine hits Tuesday night.

So the Dodgers traveled to New York in vain. Their outfielders and relief pitchers in the bullpen were showered with garbage by hostile Yankee fans. Garvey and Dave Lopes received death threats Monday night.

"We lived by the long ball all season long and we died by the long ball in the Series," said Lasorda, whose club led the National League in homers and smacked a record-tying nine in the Series, including Reggie Smith's homer Tuesday night.

Smith's third-inning solo homer, his third of the Series, had coupled with Steve Garvey's two-run, first-inning triple to give Los Angeles a brief 2-0 lead. But that was buried under the explosion of Jackson's power; a ninth-inning Dodger run served only to delay the Yankees' celebration.

"I'm proud of the way the guys battled all year long," said Lasorda, the rookie Dodger manager.

Mike Torrez, the winning pitcher in the pivotal third game and again in the climactic sixth game, yielded nine hits Tuesday night.

So the Dodgers traveled to New York in vain. Their outfielders and relief pitchers in the bullpen were showered with garbage by hostile Yankee fans. Garvey and Dave Lopes received death threats Monday night.

"We lived by the long ball all season long and we died by the long ball in the Series," said Lasorda, whose club led the National League in homers and smacked a record-tying nine in the Series, including Reggie Smith's homer Tuesday night.

Smith's third-inning solo homer, his third of the Series, had coupled with Steve Garvey's two-run, first-inning triple to give Los Angeles a brief 2-0 lead. But that was buried under the explosion of Jackson's power; a ninth-inning Dodger run served only to delay the Yankees' celebration.

But Allison's injury hasn't been the only one hampering the Tech offense. Plankers Brian Nelson and Godfrey Turner have been hobbled lately and have missed games because of leg injuries. The line has been hit hard, too.

At one time during the fall, center Terry Anderson was the only healthy line starter. What was a fine, all-senior line is now composed of two seniors (Anderson and strongside tackle Dan Irons), three sophomores (quick tackle Ken Walter, quick guard Larry Martin and tight end James Hadnot) and a junior (strong guard Greg Mahoney).

QUICK GUARD GREG Davis is out for the season with a knee injury suffered in the New Mexico game. Strong guard Greg Wessels has been very limited all season because of a disc injury in his back. He hasn't played since the A & M game and played sparingly before that.

Sloan once called these two the best pair of guards his staff had had, and losing them has to have made a difference, although replacements Mahoney and Martin have done surprisingly well.

Senior Kenny Thiel, the starter at quick tackle before the fall, severely sprained an ankle before the season and hasn't fully recovered. He is now second-team quick guard behind Martin.

The line is not as experienced as it was before. Wessels, Davis and Thiel are seniors who had started before. Martin and Mahoney were defensive players last season. Martin was redshirted and Mahoney didn't play a whole lot. Walter is a good player, but is a sophomore and still learning.

"We're simply a lot younger on offense now than when we started the season," Sloan said.

Depth, once good, is now shallow because most of the reserves are inexperienced. Mahoney is currently hampered by a badly pulled hamstring, and the situation would obviously worsen if he or any other linemen were forced to miss games.

Sloan said freshmen Mark Gesch and Robert Caughlin are being worked at guard now. Gesch played about half the game against Rice after Mahoney was hurt and "did well, for a freshman," according to Sloan. The offensive line spots are possibly the hardest for freshmen to quickly adjust to because there is much to learn.

With Martin (6-11, 228), Mahoney (6-2, 225) and Anderson (6-1, 217), Tech is somewhat smaller in the interior line than it was previously.

STILL, TECH ISN'T dead offensively in 1977. The attack has gradually improved since the A&M contest, when the Raiders couldn't move at all after Allison's injury. There was a 263-yard performance versus North Carolina, a 374-yard showing against Arizona and last weekend's 478-yard effort versus Rice.

The passing attack has begun slowly in each of Sloan's three seasons here because it is intricate, but it has improved in all phases lately. Quarterbacks Tres Adams and Mark Johnson have thrown more effectively. Adams has completed 51 per cent of his passes and Johnson 60 per cent. Sloan has admitted that Johnson has thrown better than expected.

"We have a better passing game now," Sloan said. "We can do more things now with the people we have than we could when we played North Carolina."

Next for Tech, though, is Texas, the nation's second-ranked team and the SWC leader in total defense. The Longhorns held Oklahoma without a touchdown and Arkansas, which had been averaging 40 points a game, to just three field goals. Still, Sloan is optimistic.

"We've gained valuable experience for our young people, and, if we can have a good week of practice this week, we could be more versatile when we play Texas."

Allison, of course, is expected to play versus Texas. That, too, would enhance Tech's offensive versatility.

NBA Play In Full Swing

By The Associated Press
It took less than three minutes for the National Basketball Association season to get into full swing.

That's when Kareem Abdul-Jabbar of the Los Angeles Lakers decided his elbowing joust with Kent Benson, Milwaukee's prize rookie, had gone on long enough.

So Abdul-Jabbar uncorked a righthand punch that would have made Muhammad Ali proud, catching Benson flush on the nose.

right side of his face and knocking the 6-foot-11, 245-pounder to the hardwood of Milwaukee Arena.

Benson had to leave the game, suffering from a mild concussion and cuts around his right eye. Abdul-Jabbar was assessed a punching foul and ejected from the contest, won by Milwaukee 117-112 behind Brian Winters' 26 points.

Benson and Abdul-Jabbar each blamed the other for starting the contact.

"Coming up the floor, Kareem was elbowing me," said Benson, the two-time All-American from Indiana and first player chosen in the NBA's college draft.

"We got down the floor and I elbowed him back. I tried to play defense, and the next thing I got was a hit in the face."

"He just hauled off and threw an elbow into my gut, right around the solar plexus," was the version offered by Abdul-Jabbar.

Tech Claims VB Triumph

The Texas Tech women volleyballers had little trouble with West Texas State University here Tuesday night in the women's gym and defeated the Buffaloes 15-4, 15-4, 15-4.

Lisa Love hit 9 points for the Raiders who are now 20-10 on the year.

The Raiders will travel to Canyon Thursday for a 7 p.m. return match with the Buffs. It will be the third time this season for the two squads to meet.

Tuesday's match was Tech's last at home this season. Remaining are two out-of-town matches and the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women playoffs.

Stephens Back Woes 'Bruise'

Texas Tech cornerback Willie Stephens, who was forced out of the Red Raiders' game with Rice last Saturday night with a back injury, has been released from the hospital, and his injury has been diagnosed as a bad bruise.

Stephens said he was accidentally hit in the lower part of his back by Tech linebacker Don Kelly toward the conclusion of a play in the first half.

He was removed from the field on a stretcher. Stephens is a sophomore from Abilene.

Move To Panhandle Loop Surprises City Coaches

Chances are the University Interscholastic League officials would not win a popularity contest in Lubbock. Not right now, anyway. In a move Monday, which left a couple of local high school football coaches "shocked", the UIL realigned Dunbar and Estacado, the city's two Class AAA schools, into a different district. The changes came as the UIL made its biannual realignment of all classifications. Several West Texas districts were affected by the changes. The moves will be effective next September, so for Dunbar and Estacado, it's no more District 3-AAA, for at least two years. The move came as a result of Perryton being dropped from the AAA ranks into Class AA, based on its drop in enrollment. The loss of the Rangers left 1-AAA with only four teams, so Dunbar and Estacado were moved in. "It makes me sick, but there's nothing we can do," Estacado coach Louis Kelley said, voicing definite disapproval to the move that now sends the Matadors and Panthers against the likes of Borger, Canyon, Dumas and Levelland. "We had some good rivalries down here," Kelley pointed out. "And we certainly hate to give them up." Kelley said that since there is nothing he can do "we'll just accept it the best we can and pack our bags and head north for awhile." Dunbar coach Van Jefferson was not as vocal as his counterpart. Jefferson said he would "accept the move as best we can." "I think the competition we have now is a little better, and we hate to give that up," Jefferson said. "Now that we know what's happening we are just ready to start competing against those people." Both coaches said they disliked not being able to play present loop foes Lamesa, Snyder, Brownfield, Sweetwater and San Angelo Lake View. Since 1967, Dunbar has been in District 3-AAA. Estacado joined the loop the following year. Lubbock athletic director Pete Ragus said, "We were anticipating some changes, but not anticipating this particular change. But, with Perryton dropping to AA, we were the logical ones to move." Ragus said the move will not seriously affect Estacado's or Dunbar's nondistrict slate. Traditionally the two play a schedule which includes contests with the local

AAAA schools, Monterey, Lubbock High and Coronado. A meeting between the Lubbock schools and the other members of 1-AAA has been set for Thursday morning in Canyon. The realignments were felt throughout West Texas. Districts 5-A and 2-B underwent the biggest changes. Anton, Ropesville and Forsan moved up to Class A, giving 5-A eight teams starting in 1978. In 2-B, Anton and Ropesville departed, as did Meadow, which moved to District 3. Claude, which dropped from 2-A, was added to 2-B. District 3-B remains with 12 teams thanks to Forsan leaving and Meadow moving in. In six-man, District 5 was the big gainer as Trent moved to that loop from District 3 and both Lueders-Avoca and Weinert were shifted from 4 to 5. Higgins, which competed this year in 11-man ball, will join District 4 (Six-Man) next year. The new cut offpoints are: Class B (129 and below); Class A (130-254); Class AA (255-579); Class AAA (580-1259) and Class AAAA (1260 and up). When the classes were realigned in 1976, the figures were: Six-Man, 75 and below; Class B, up to 124; Class A, 125-239; Class AA, 240-549; Class AAA, 550-1219 and Class AAAA, 1220 and up. In 1978 all schools may play their first game on Sept. 7 and the last playing date prior to the playoffs is Nov. 18. Seminole, a member of Class AAA for almost 20 years, is being dropped a level (to 5-AA), where it will compete with Denver City, Roosevelt, Tahoka, Cooper, Frenship, Post and Slaton. On the Class AAA level, Brownwood has been moved from District 4-AAA to 11-AAA with Cleburne, Gatesville, and other Central Texas schools. Wichita Falls Hirschi, a AAAA competitor for the past four years, moves back into 4-AAA. Districts affected by realignments: CLASS AAAA 1-Borger, Canyon, Dumas, Levelland, Dunbar (from 3-AAA); Estacado (from 3-AAA). CLASS AAA 2-Andrews, Fort Stockton, Monahans, Odessa, Ector, Pecos 3-Brownfield, Lamesa, San Angelo Lake View, Snyder, Sweetwater. CLASS AA 5-Denver City, Cooper, Roosevelt, Post, Seminole (from 2-AAA); Slaton, Tahoka, Frenship. CLASS A 5-Anton (from 2-B); Forsan (from 3-B); O'Donnell, Plains, Ropes (from 2-B); Seagraves, Shallowater. CLASS B 2-Amersi, Claude (from 2-A); Happy, Lubbock, Motley County, Nazareth, Silverton, Smyer, Sundown, Valley, Whiteface. 3-Sands, Borden County, Garden City, Sterling City, Jayton, Klondike, Loriane, Meadow, New Home, Roby, Dawson, Wilson. SIX-MAN 3-Cotton Center, Hermitage, Ira, Grady, Loop, Three Way, McCaskey, Highland, Hobbs, Southland, Wellman, Whitarral, Lost Trent. 4-Pattton Springs, Benjamin, Guthrie, Harrold, Higgins (from Class B); Vernon Northside, (also lost Lueders-Avoca and Weinert.)

Grid Campaign Starting Anew For Injury-Riddled Farwell

The 1977 football season has passed the midway point, but for Van Whatley it's really only beginning. Back in August, Whatley's Farwell Steers were picked to win the District 3-A crown and advance in the state playoffs. And the Steers were state ranked for the first five weeks of the season. However, back-to-back losses to Shallowater (29-26) and Boys Ranch (15-8) ended the pollsters' love affair with the Steers. Since then, however, Farwell has bounced back to whip Bovina 21-7 in its loop opener and faces a three-week, make-or-break schedule that includes Kress and Hart on the road and Vega at home. Yet, Whatley remains optimistic, despite the fact "we haven't played everyone together at the same time this year." And it appears doubtful if that'll happen, as split end Kayle Watts is out with mononucleosis and will likely miss the rest of the regular season. Quarterback Russ Jones, tabbed as a blue chipper in many circles before the season, missed the first four games with the same ailment and is "just now getting back into the groove of things. We have to rest him some during the games, and he's making a few mental errors because he just hasn't played that much. But he's getting better." Tackle Rusty McFarland is still hobbled a bit by a bad knee and runningback Tim Norton has played despite an ankle injury. Whatley feels Farwell's 4-2 record this year means more than the 6-0 mark of a year ago. "With all our woes, yes, I'm extremely pleased with the way the kids have performed. "We should have beaten Boys Ranch. We just dropped the football. We dropped two passes in the end zone and two others which would have allowed us to get down close. Shallowater was just one of those deals where we couldn't get anything going and just couldn't stop them. Against Bovina, our defense was good, but we sputtered on offense.

"I feel like we've got one or two good games in us, if we can just get going and put it all together somehow."

Whatley said the passing game is presently where it was one week deep into the fall drills.

Allison Slowly Climbs Slope In Comeback Hope

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Sweating and puffing from recent exercise, Rodney Allison plopped down on the dressing-room bench.

"How many times did you go up the hill?" a trainer asked.

"Six," Allison replied.

"That's not enough," the other said.

"I know, but I'll do more. I'll get there," Allison answered.

By "getting there," Allison meant being ready to play when Texas Tech battles Texas in Austin on Oct. 29 in a key Southwest Conference game.

Tech, of course, is strongly hoping he will "get there."

In the meantime, Allison is working to rehabilitate his left leg, in which he suffered a cracked fibula against Texas A&M Sept. 24. Rehab includes time in the whirlpool, on the stationary bicycle, doing toe raises and walking up and down the steep hill at the north end of Jones Stadium.

"I tried to go up the hill Monday," Allison said, "but I only did it twice before my leg started aching. I'll just do it as many times each day as I can, and I'll try to do more each day."

Allison had the cast removed from his leg last Wednesday, and the cracked bone was "almost healed" at the time. He was on crutches until giving them up last Saturday. Tuesday, he threw "40 to 50" passes during his workout.

He displayed a noticeable limp Tuesday but says he doesn't experience "a whole lot" of pain.

"It's kind of an ache more than anything else," he said. "And they've got it taped real heavily, so that makes it tougher to move around normally. It will throbs some after I work out, but that's to be expected for a while, I guess."

"If I can just get some motion back in it, I'll be all right. It's real stiff from the sprained ankle and from being in a cast."

It's tough to get going in the morning, but, after I take a bath and soak the leg in hot water, it's a lot better."

He's been surprised at his overall condition. He hasn't gained any weight.

"In fact, I've lost two or three pounds. I'm in a lot better shape than I figured I'd be after the layoff."

The layoff is certain to affect his play for a while, but the question is: How much?

"It's got to hurt some. When I get into a game for the first time, I'll probably realize it. But, right now, I just have it in my mind that it's not going to affect me. I'm so anxiously to play."

"The big thing will be getting used to being hit again," he added with a laugh, "but I don't figure that'll take too long."

Allison said the leg improved rapidly the first two or three days after the cast was removed, but the progress has slowed somewhat lately.

"It hasn't come along the last two or three days like I thought it would. At first, I thought I could play against Rice," he said with a chuckle. "Again, that is just me being anxious to play. The leg is still getting better steadily, though."

Standing on the sidelines hasn't been easy for the competitive Allison.

"It's been tough. I'm more nervous standing on the sidelines than I ever was when I was playing."

Allison still expects to be ready for the Texas game.

"I think I can play then. They say I can practice in six or seven days. It kind of depends on me. If there's any way possible, I'll play."

Sloan, Aide Will Review Rice Outing

Texas Tech head football coach Steve Sloan will be speaking Thursday at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Red Raider Club.

The session, for Red Raider Club members and their guests, will be held at Vann's Koko Palace.

Sloan and one of his assistant coaches will speak on the Red Raiders' performance in the 42-7 victory over Rice last Saturday, as well as the upcoming Texas game, scheduled Oct. 29.

Tech has an open date Saturday.

Cubs Sign Three Coaches For '78

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs announced Monday the signing of three new coaches for the 1978 season.

Octavio Rivas (Cookie) Rojas, John (Joey) Amalfitano and Mike Roarke are the three newcomers joining Harry (Peanuts) Lowery and Jack Bloomfield, the team announced.

Plainsmen Stay No. 8

By The Associated Press

Top-ranked Port Neches-Groves in AAAA and No. 4 Mount Pleasant in AAA escaped upset bids last week but three other teams in The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll fell to underdogs.

PN-G finally nudged Vidor 14-12 to hold onto its top billing in 4A while Mount Pleasant edged Jefferson 7-2 and fell one position from last week.

The other top-ranked teams, Gregory-Portland in AAA, Bellville in AA, Seagraves in A and Wheeler in B, all easily retained their leads.

LaPorte, ranked No. 9 in 4A last week, lost to Pasadena Dobie 29-20 and was replaced in the top 10 by San Antonio Highlands (6-0) as the No. 10 team.

Defending state champion San Antonio Churchill (5-1) moved up one notch to ninth ahead of Highlands, which beat Churchill earlier this season. Lubbock Monterey retained its No. 8 position.

The other two losses by ranked teams occurred in 2A where No. 4 Columbus lost to No. 1 Bellville 28-14 and dropped to ninth and No. 10 San Diego fell from the list after a loss to Laredo United.

Idalou, fifth last week, moved up to fourth replacing Columbus and the next four teams jumped up one notch. Childress (5-1) replaced San Diego in the No. 10 position.

Reggie Jackson Proves Point In Big Way

By The Associated Press

Okay, Reggie, you have proven your point. Let no man say otherwise. You are indeed the straw that stirs the drink. You are the eye of the storm. You are the spark that fires the ignition. You make things happen.

Let it be your monument in history: The ball player who never hit .300 in a regular season yet the man who could always reach back for that special kind of magic that turns paupers into kings.

Even your once-bitter rival, Thurman Munson, had to admit it.

"Without him," said Munson, "we wouldn't have won the pennant. Without him, we wouldn't have won the World Series."

Such is the story of the baseball life of Reginald Martinez Jackson, the Wyncote, Pa., tailor's son whose ability to produce under pressure sparked the Oakland A's to World Championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974.

Now you have done it for the proud and haughty New York Yankees, just as your boss and benefactor, George Steinbrenner III, said you would.

A record five home runs in the World Series, three in one game, four in four official at-bats, 10 runs scored, eight runs batted in, a .450 batting average — an individual performance on level with the immortals.

"The word superstar is overused — Ruth, DiMaggio, Mays, Clemente," you told reporters modestly. "But I can say I had one day like those guys."

Indeed you did. But it wasn't easy. Remember all those lonely, frustrating moments during the summer.

You were the "Teacher's Pet." The boss took you in his limousine and showed you the town. He signed you to a $2.9-million contract.

This made you "the most unpopular man in the Yankees clubhouse. Munson, the Most Valuable Player of the previous year, got mad when you told a magazine writer that you were "the straw that stirred the drink." You said Munson could only stir it bad.

It was an undiplomatic thing to say, but you are not diplomatic. You say what comes to your tongue. No subtleties.

No deviousness. You take the consequences.

Munson refused to shake your hand. Third baseman Graig Nettles made unhappy noises. Players with the same color of dark skin moved their lockers to the other side of the room.

There you sat, alone and brooding, on your locker stool — not liked by the manager and ignored by almost everyone but backup catcher Fran Healy, whose friendship never wavered.

The manager, accustomed to center stage, resented you. He wouldn't bat you cleanup. Once he yanked you in front of a national television audience and, when you objected to the indignity, the two of you almost came to blows in the dugout.

Yet it was you who interceded when the manager was about to be fired. You helped save his job.

It was an agonizing summer. The fans were goaded by a hostile press. They booed you at every turn. Pressures, even with your princely salary, became almost unbearable. Your father quit coming up from Philadelphia to watch you play. Your mother wouldn't turn on the radio.

Remember how you sat in your loneliness and said to yourself, "Why do I have to take all of this stuff? I have a good job waiting for me outside."

Quitting would have been easy, but it was not your way. It was a word you didn't know. You owed too much to too many, so you stuck it out.

You were "Mister September" in the Yankees' fierce pennant drive. You closed your lips and tightened the grip on your bat. You became the Yankees' sparkling, and everybody knew it. Your life changed.

And the climax came just before 10 p.m. on a chill Tuesday night when you propelled your third home run of the evening into the black-painted you propelled your third home run of the evening into the black-painted unoccupied bleachers in deep center field.

And out there in center field somewhere, the TV cameras zeroed in on a bronze plaque of the great Babe Ruth. The old Bambino seemed to wear a smile.

Harmony Reigns In Yank Camp

NEW YORK (AP) — Four months earlier to the day they had almost come to blows in a Boston dugout on national television. Now they sat harmoniously side by side as world champions, the fiery, skinny manager and the muscular, outspoken slugger, filming a segment for the "Good Morning, America" TV show.

Reggie Jackson put his arm around Billy Martin. "Have we had a year, Skip?" he asked.

Billy Martin put his arm around Reggie Jackson. "It's been pleasant," he said off-handedly.

At long last, Reggie Jackson and Billy Martin had formed a mutual admiration society that made the Los Angeles Dodgers' season-long love-in look like the Hatfields and McCoys.

Oh, how the platitudes flowed back and forth.

"I wouldn't advise anyone to catch us in a bar together and give us any crap," Jackson said menacingly.

Controversy? What controversy? Bitterness? What bitterness?

Feud? What feud?

Jackson had just pounded three home runs, driving in five runs as the New York Yankees whipped the Dodgers 8-4 and made Martin a world championship manager for the first time. And the Yankees' odd couple was feeling its oats.

"Both of us have been through a lot," Jackson said. "But now we know each other and respect each other. I respect Billy Martin. I like Billy Martin, and it's important to respect somebody."

"When I get in a jam, I know that he'll be the first one there and when he gets in a jam, he knows I'll be the first one there. He's got two more years on his contract and I've got four more years on mine and we're gonna be tough to beat."

"We're gonna unite. Call us renegades, if you like, but we're gonna give 'em hell."

For most of the season, people were giving Martin and Jackson hell . . . when they weren't giving each other hell.

It all started when Jackson, still a neophyte Yankee, told a national magazine such things as:

"It all flows from me . . . I'm the straw that stirs the drink . . . I'm a leader and I can't lie down . . . It's a matter of presence . . . No team I'm on will ever be humiliated the way the Yankees were by the Reds in the World Series . . . You take me one-on-one in the pit and I'll take you . . . There is just nobody who can do for a club what I can do."

Jackson finally proved his point by setting all sorts of World Series slugging records.

"I broke Babe Ruth's record with 23 total bases in a six-game Series and you broke mine with 25," Martin said to Jackson, who delivered five home runs, a double and three singles.

"Records are made to be broken and it's only right that a Yankee should break my record."

"Aw, what's the difference?" Jackson replied. "We won."

Everyone wearing Yankee pinstripes won. What odds could you have gotten against that just a few weeks ago?

"A year like this builds great character," Jackson said, bringing owner George Steinbrenner and catcher-captain Thurman Munson into the discussion. "When you do to the four of us what's been done this year and we survive . . . that makes us tough to beat."

The four of us have been humiliated and embarrassed and put on the spot to test our humility and our manhood. We might get beat, but the team that beats us is gonna catch hell."

"What we went through this year is gonna make us much better men next year," Martin echoed. "Next year I think we'll be champs again, but you won't read about us as much."

Jackson was munching on a cigar so hard that it fell apart. Someone tossed him an expensive stogie in a mental canister. He tried to twist off the cap but failed and handed it to Martin.

"Skip, open this for me," he begged.

"Why, you need a strong man?" Martin shot back.

Then the conversation returned to the tumultuous season, including Martin's benching of Jackson for the final American League playoff game in Kansas City.

"If we'd have lost that game, he'd have been the loser," Jackson said. "I didn't have anything to lose, he had everything to lose. All I had to do was sit and cheer."

"But you came off the bench and got a single that turned the game around," Martin pointed out.

"Well," Jackson quipped, "you had a pretty good guy sitting on the bench." Jackson turned back to David Hartman, the host of "Good Morning, America."

Parade Set Today To Honor Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, baseball's newly-crowned World Champions, were honored today with a tickertape parade.

The parade for the Yankees, who rode three home runs by Reggie Jackson to an 8-4 triumph over the Los Angeles Dodgers in the Series clincher Tuesday night, began at 11:30 a.m. CDT.

The motorcade began at the U.S. Customs House and continued up Broadway to City Hall.

MVP Will Divide Winnings With People In Three States

NEW YORK (AP) — Right fielder Reggie Jackson, who made World Series history with the three consecutive home runs that led the Yankees to baseball's World Championship Tuesday night, will share his prize winnings with people in three states.

In an exclusive article that appeared under Jackson's by-line in today's editions of the New York Daily News, the star slugger said he is "going to give part of my World Series money to New York City, and part to Arizona, where I live, and part to Oakland, my other home. Everybody helped to get me where I am, now I want to help everybody have a tunaish sandwich on me."

"I want to tell all my friends, all our fans, everybody out there, to remember this. Remember the wonderful things that happened to me tonight, and then remember the way it was earlier. There were times when I was so low, I thought I would go crazy."

"It was then that I read the Bible, and I prayed. There's a God out there somewhere. There is help there for everybody. Don't give up. Just keep moving."

Jackson's article goes on to credit his teammates and the Yankee scouts for helping him. When the Los Angeles Dodgers brought in relief pitcher Elias Sosa to pitch in the fourth inning, Jackson said, "I got on the phone in the dugout and called 'Stick' upstairs. That's Gene Michael, our Think Tank."

"I asked him what kind of pitcher Sosa is. He told me: fastball, slider, pretty good control. I was more or less looking for the fastball on the first pitch."

"They been pitching me inside all Series. I took a lot of them. This time, I was ready," the article said.

Jackson sent Sosa's first delivery soaring on a line into the right-field seats for the two-run homer that wiped out a 3-2 Los Angeles lead. Later he hit another two-run homer to virtually the same location.

"Maybe you saw me talking to that girl in right field," he said in the article. "I was trying to get back one of my home run balls. I offered her another one in exchange, but she wouldn't go for it. I wanted it for my father."

The article also states that the car he won for being named the Series' Most Valuable Player by a national magazine will be given to his little sister in Baltimore.

But he couldn't forget the fans.

"Of course, I'm coming back next year. I have a five-year contract. I'm a New York Yankee. Have a good winter. God bless you all."

There was someone else Jackson could not forget. In the jubilant New York locker room, Jackson displayed a small, square medallion bearing the name of Jackie Robinson—the black man who broke baseball's color barrier, ironically, with the Dodgers.

"What do you think this man would think of me tonight?" Jackson asked as newsmen pressed closer to view the medallion.

"Look here," he said. "See this little button on my belt? I wore it throughout the Series."

LPGA Lures Ohio Sponsors

CINCINNATI (AP) — Tournament sponsors here have opted for the Ladies Professional Golf Association championship instead of the Ohio Kings Island Open next year at the nearby Jack Nicklaus Golf Center.

LPGA Commissioner Ray Volpe announced Tuesday that one of the tour's two major championships — the other being the U.S. Open — will be played June 8-11 at the Mason, Ohio, course.

The tournament will be carried on national television, according to tournament sponsors.

Burch Riber, chairman of the championship, cited scheduling problems with the Professional Golfers Association and the rising popularity of the LPGA as among reasons for the switch.

"On the Professional Golf Association tour, we were facing schedule problems," Riber said. "Although we were successful, we had no opportunity to grow and improve our position."

"We are arriving with the LPGA at the pinnacle of their tour and we could not pass up the opportunity."

Riber said he believed it was the first time that an organization ever left the PGA tour for the LPGA, but he said "I would not be surprised if it happened again."

"The momentum of the LPGA is terrific. We have great expectation for growth."

He expressed no disillusionment with the PGA organization and said PGA officials expressed "a little surprise" at the decision.

"We did not like what might happen to us," Riber said concerning future scheduling plans for the tour.

"We much prefer the dates in June to those in September when the OKIO was held."

Volpe said he hoped the championship would remain at the southern Ohio course "for many years to come" and added that there were multiple options if the sponsor was satisfied with the tournament.

"We've got everything we wanted to build our championship," said Volpe said.

The LPGA championship is the third oldest event on the tour; next year will be the 24th edition. In 1977, the purse was raised to $150,000 for the first time, making it the second richest event on the tour.

New Owls?

HOUSTON (AP) — Rice University coach Homer Rice, whose style as a cool-under-pressure head coach has been severely tested this season, may be stepping out of character.

Rice didn't berate his youthful team when Louisiana State defeated the Owls 77-0. His hair remained in place and his suit was unruined following No. 2-ranked Texas' 72-15 victory over the Owls.

But last week Rice called in a karate expert to demonstrate the fine art of self defense to his team. He also suspended Earl Cooper, the team's leading rusher, for the Texas Tech game for disciplinary reasons. Cooper returns this week.

Such tactics might have been expected of Rice's predecessor, Al Conover, who threw chairs, "burned" the team's mistakes by bringing a coffin onto the practice field, held watermelon breaks and once fired blanks at a startled sports writer with a starter's pistol.

Could Rice be trying some of Conover's bizarre approaches to break the Owls out of their five-game losing streak?

"At this point, I'll try anything," Rice said. "If you see somebody get chopped by one of our players, it won't be a violation. That's just the way we hit. Maybe some of these things will help us eventually."

Rice feels something is different on the team already. After losing 35-15 to Texas Christian, ending the Frogs' 15-game losing streak, the Owls lost to Texas Tech by only 42-7 last week.

"I'm very proud of our kids," Rice said. "They played as good as they can play. We still were in the game in the third quarter and we gained a little something, a little spark that will help us generate a little more momentum."

Rice, 1-5, plays 12th-ranked Texas A & M Saturday in Rice Stadium but after the schedule the Owls have played this season, they no longer shudder at the big names.

"I feel A&M has the potential to be the No. 1 team in the nation," Rice said. "But we're not concerned with who we play any more. We just line our young kids up and play the game."

"Offensively we're just starting out being able to put a few things together. We might one day put some points on the board like I'm accustomed to doing from the past."

Ironically, as Rice spoke in a conference room at a restaurant, Conover, now in business here, was lunching down the hall. Asked if he'd join the meeting, Conover replied, "Naw, those days are gone forever."

But Rice comes to practice this week eating a watermelon and carrying a starter's pistol, maybe the Conover spirit is returning.

same dimensions that I am, and if he can keep going all those years it makes me feel great," said Hill.

Hill said his secret in blocking kicks — he has blocked at least two kicks in each of college seasons — is watching the center.

"I take off when he moved his hand," said Hill. "If I can pick up any extra movement he makes with his hand before he snaps it, then I get maybe a second head start."

Hill added, "It makes the kickers mad when you block one of them. I just love to do it."

Cowboys

DALLAS (AP) — Through five games of the young National Football League season the Dallas Cowboys are playing some of the finest pass defense in their 17-year history.

"We are playing well considering we had some personnel changes in our defense," said Dallas coach Tom Landry. "We are confident and getting better each game."

Dallas has four starters in new positions on defense — Bob Breung at middle linebacker, Aaron Kyle at cornerback, Randy White at right tackle, and Thomas Henderson at weakside linebacker.

The Cowboys have sacked the opposition quarterback 21 times for losses totaling 189 yards.

Opposing teams have completed only 34.3 per cent of their passes against Dallas and the composite quarterback rating of the five enemy signal callers is only 24.4.

The NFL quarterback rating system is a complex thing taking into consideration the percentage of completions, percentage of touchdowns passes, percentage of interceptions, and average yards gained per attempt.

Under the ranking formula, for example, Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach leads the National Conference with a rating of 92.3. Los Angeles quarterback Joe Namath is the lowest with 54.3.

The all-time record rating according to the NFL archives, was 110.4 by Milt Plum of Cleveland in 1960.

"The rating is important but we consider the average yards per attempt more important," said Cowboy assistant Ernie Allen. "We ask our defense to try to hold the other team to just under five yards per attempt."

"As it stands right now, teams are averaging only three yards per attempt against us. That's the name of the game."

Staubach, backup Danny White, and rookie running back Tony Dorsett, who has thrown two passes, are averaging over six yards per attempt for the Cowboys.

Paterno Puts Family First

DANVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Joe Paterno has a reputation for winning the big ones — the Orange Bowl, the Cotton Bowl. But the Penn State coach's greatest victory came this week when his 11-year-old son opened his eyes and smiled.

Paterno, one of the nation's foremost college football coaches, was not there last Saturday when his 10th ranked Nittany Lions beat Syracuse. He was anxiously pacing the halls of the Geisinger Medical Center here, where his son David lay near death.

Inside the intensive care ward, doctors worked frantically to save his son. Outside, Paterno prayed, comforted his wife, Sue, and reaffirmed his commitment to family over football.

"It took a maximum effort to save him," said Dr. Henry Hood, chief of the medical center's neurosurgery department. "It took all the skills, techniques and equipment, but he responded."

David Paterno, a sixth grader, fractured his skull after falling from a trampoline at school Friday, the day before his father's team faced the crucial game at Syracuse.

The oldest of five Paterno children, David remained in serious condition Tuesday, but he regained consciousness and smiled at his parents. The boy's prognosis is good, but it could be weeks before the full extent of his injuries are known.

The accident created a personal and professional dilemma for Paterno. National rankings were at stake and a post-season bowl bid might be in the balance.

But Paterno knew he could not be in Syracuse. Even the crowds, the excitement, and a chance for his 106th career win could not sway him from what he values most — his family.

The Nittany Lions escaped with a 31-24 win. It was the first time in 12 years as head coach that Paterno was not roaming the sidelines on game day.

"I think he is a person who has something of the very traditional ideals that this country has been proud of for years," Hood said.

Paterno returned to Penn State Tuesday, shortly after his son came out of a coma. He spent most of the day with his coaches and players, preparing for Saturday's game against West Virginia.

The Paternos value their privacy and refused to discuss their son's condition.

Although absent, Paterno was not forgotten at Syracuse. Before the homecoming game, the fans prayed for David's recovery and the past bitterness of the Penn State-Syracuse rivalry was briefly transcended.

"I don't blame Joe for not coming," said Syracuse coach Frank Maloney. "I'd like to think I would have done the same thing. Your family comes first. That's the way it should be."

IOC TV Money To Subsidize Athletes

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Philip O. Krumm, veteran American Olympic administrator, played a prominent role in launching a new world program of aid for sport which could transform the Olympic movement.

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) will spend its new millions from television rights to subsidize the athletes of every country competing in the Games. A new plan, which still has to be submitted to the full IOC, is based approximately on proposals made by Krumm at a meeting here this week.

Krumm, former president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, suggested a three-point plan at a meeting of the IOC's solidarity commission:

- A pay-out to each of the 136 national Olympic committees around the world.
- A subsidy to help each country maintain its athletes in Olympic villages at the Summer and Winter Games.
- Regional aid schemes in each of the five continents receiving money from the IOC and sharing it out among sports that need it.

"I was disappointed that the commission didn't approve it the first time," Krumm said. "There was a lot of support for my ideas. Some of us have come long distances, at much expense, and I felt at the end of the meeting we hadn't achieved anything."

By The Associated Press
Attention Washington Redskin coach George Allen. There's one of your kind of specialty team guys at Southern Methodist University who might be worth a draft choice in two years—if you have one.

SMU cornerback David Hill, a junior from Cuero, is making a name for himself as a kick blocker deluxe.

Allen sometimes carries a player on his National Football League team who is proficient at such ditch-digging specialty team work.

Hill blocked an extra point and a Houston field goal last Saturday night to ignite SMU to a shocking 37-23 Southwest Conference victory over defending co-champion Houston in the Astrodome.

The performance earned the 5-foot-8, 175-pound Hill the Associated Press Defensive Player of the Week award.

"The coaches were joking on the plane coming back from Houston that David might be worth drafting because of his ability to block kicks," said SMU coach Ron Meyer.

Hill blocked a field goal attempt at the SMU 26-yard line with some four minutes left to play and SMU trailing 23-17.

SMU then incredibly scored three touchdowns in the final 39 seconds of the game.

"David's block of the field goal gave us an emotional lift," said Meyer. "That was the catalyst for perhaps the biggest victory in my two years here."

Hill said Washington defensive back Pat Fischer is his hero.

"I idolize him because he's almost the Series Depicts War On Russian Front

By JAY SHARBUTT
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the 1950s, Isaac Kleinerman edited "Victory at Sea," the Emmy-winning documentary on U.S. naval power in World War II. Now, he's working on WWII again.

But this time, the work involves an aspect of the war rarely seen in TV documentaries here — the Russian front. Kleinerman is executive producer of a coming 20-part series, "The Unknown War."

It's unique, he says, in that most of the film footage comes from Soviet archives under a contract between Air Time, Inc., the series' New York-based distributor, and Sovinfil, a Russian agency.

The series, narrated by actor Burt Lancaster and written by Harrison Salisbury, "The New York Times" Moscow correspondent from 1949 to 1954, will be sold to stations for airing next fall.

Kleinerman, who recently returned from a six-week visit to Russia, says the series starts with Nazi Germany's attack on Russia in June 1941 and ends with Japan's surrender in September 1945.

Kidnaping Suspect Gives Guilty Plea
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Jimmy Dean Howard, 20, pleaded guilty this week in federal court to kidnaping a Texas woman who picked him up as a hitch-hiker near Altus, Okla., in August.

The Oklahoma man faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment, acting U.S. Attorney John Green said.

Howard was arrested after he allegedly forced Norma Jeannette Hurt, 19, to drive from Altus to northern Texas and back again at gunpoint.

He candidly noted that the "rough cut" — the initial versions — of the 20 shows were put together in Moscow by Sovinfil editors, but says he has the right to make whatever changes he feels are needed.

He conceded that some may feel the series is nothing more than a propaganda exercise by Russia, an effort to revise its history for U.S. viewers.

However, he emphasized, "contractually, we have the right to reject any program we feel is not up to our standards ... we want it to be absolutely correct in terms of history, and it's going to be that."

Kleinerman, a respected CBS News documentary-maker for 19½ years until he resigned last August to form his own company, admitted he began work on "The Unknown War" with what he calls "considerable reserve."

"I made a number of films over there (in Russia), and I knew what the problems were," he added. "I know how they do things. But I must say, there isn't a thing I've asked for that they haven't complied with."

Kleinerman, who will leave New York for Moscow in two weeks to continue work on the series, was asked why it's being edited there.

"Because all the films are there," he said. "The logistics of bringing the rare Russian footage to New York) would have been impossible. They could not ship all that film here.

"And under no conditions could we send over all the film editors, the assistants, to do it over there. Economically, it just wouldn't work."

Kleinerman, who said more than 100 Sovinfil employees are toiling on the series, said he doesn't think the Russians are "trying to slip something over on us" in the making of the program.

He cited as an example Sovinfil's use of footage showing the late Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev — whose name has been expunged from Russian history books — involved in the battle of Stalingrad.

It was done without prompting, Kleinerman said, and "I must say I was sur-

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: Is Kaye Stevens, the lively singing star who also doubles on the soap opera, "Days of Our Lives," married, divorced or single? — Chuck King, Washington, D.C.

A: Until only recently she was single, but searching. She found her man strictly by accident, while browsing through the magazine rack at the airport in Miami. Both were looking for what turned out to be the only edition of Scientific American in sight. She won it. He paid for it and they boarded a jet to Los Angeles, skipping three flights while waiting for the craft for which he had a reservation.

Both were so excited and thrilled about the chance meeting, they remained together until he accompanied her to San Francisco where she had a nightclub booking to perform. Then he chartered a plane to Las Vegas. An hour or so later, the glittering necklace of lights below them, Woodrow Maxwell (Mac) Melvin Jr., Miami attorney-at-law, told the pilot to circle the field. "I want you," he said to the redhead who introduced herself as Kathryn Louise Stevens, actress, "to see the last sunset you'll see as a single woman — we'll be married tonight." And they were, less than 48 hours from the time the two strangers first said hello.

All of which resulted in an unusual announcement mailed to friends and family: "Mr. Woodrow Maxwell Melvin Junior, Esquire, is honored to announce his success in legally changing the name of Miss Kaye Stevens to Mrs. Woodrow Maxwell Melvin, Junior. Duly and lovingly documented on August 15, 1977, at 3:58 A.M., in Beverly Hills, California. Legally effective as filed for public record on August 21, 1977, at or about 10 P.M., in Las Vegas, Nevada." The wedding cake was a pizza.

Q: Anything to a line of trivia I heard that Redd Foxx once won a Major Bowes Amateur Hour? — T. R., Denver.

A: Almost true. "I won second prize, not first," Redd reveals. "The prize was a week's engagement in Newark. Then I went on to a job in Baltimore where I first got into the big money — $10 a week! When the regular emcee got sick one night I was asked to pinch-hit. I must have been all right," the comedian remarked, "because they kept me at that joint for three years."

Q: Since transsexuals have made plenty of news in recent years (I understand there have been literally thousands of cases similar to Christine Jorgensen's) I wonder where (at what should be her moment of glory) has Christine Jorgensen disappeared? — C. Jarne, Phoenix.

A: She hasn't. Chris is living happily and doing just fine, thank you, in a Pacific Coast cottage. Right now she's in litigation with United Artists, against whom she's filed a $5,000,000 damage suit claiming her autobiographical film, made in 1970, is being dumped on TV in non-prime slots. "Chris also charges that distributor and late producer, Edward Small, failed to give her a promised 10 per cent cut from the profits of "The Christine Jorgensen Story." "My personal opinion," Jorgensen says, "it's a good film, a very good film, but it's not as great as I had hoped it to be."

Q: Didn't Bishop (now Mons.) Sheen once do a sex lecture on his TV show? J. Prescott, Asheville, N.C.

A: No. You're thinking of when he did a program on the subject "I wrote the word 'sex' on the blackboard," he explained to us. "A few days later a youngster wrote a letter to me saying, 'You're not so smart. You don't even know how to spell SIX!'"

Q: I promised my girl friend, who still worships Elvis Presley, to find his dog-tags and give them to her for her birthday. Can you tell me what his serial number was? Johnny O'Neill, Pittsburgh, Pa.

A: Presley's Army Serial Number was "U.S.A. 53310761." (But before you duplicate the tags you'd better check to see if it's legal.)

New Yorker Wins Prize For Script

By JOAN HANAUER

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Rubino has been writing unproduced plays for eight years — and now not only will one of his scripts receive a major television dramatic presentation, but he is $20,000 richer.

Rubino, 45, who teaches English in a Brooklyn, N.Y., high school, became the first winner of the ABC Theatre Award, aimed at discovering new writers for television.

"This is my first television play," Rubino said at the ceremony in which Fred Silverman, president, ABC Entertainment, presented him with a check. "The play is called 'The Last Tenant,' and is the story of an old man who must move from the apartment in which he has lived for more than 30 years and who winds up in a nursing home.

"This story was very close to me, to my own family," Rubino said. "I've tried to present all sides of the problem. This is a father who had failed his family in many ways years earlier. The grown children now confront this problem and their responsibilities and must decide in what way they will help this man out. There are tremendous conflicts and tremendous guilt."

Silverman said Rubino's script would be put on the air sometime next spring.

If Rubino makes an appealing Cinderella-playwright, Silverman's remarks about the need to bring new writers into the television business deserve a hearty cheer. If there's one thing that television needs most, it is writers. That's the point that the PBS "Visions" series has tried to make, and has contributed some fine theater in the bargain.

The award has been set up in conjunction with the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Theatre Center in Waterford, Conn., which each year weeds through 800 to 1,000 scripts in order to choose 12 theater and four television scripts for production.

Silverman said he hoped ABC might pull more than one award-winner next year.

"It all starts with the man at the typewriter," Silverman said, complaining that there were not enough new people writing for television, in both specials and series.

The project seems to underline the two-headed aspect of television in general and ABC in particular. On the one hand, this is the network that has been accused of gaining popularity through comic strip shows, and which is responsible for the woeful "San Pedro Bums."

On the other hand, this is also the network that aired "Eleanor and Franklin" and "Roots," and now this. The audience is in the middle.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Tomorrow is not a good day to press people you know on a purely social basis for financial or business favors. Requests of this nature jeopardize relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your material prospects look rather encouraging tomorrow, but there's a chance you could mess things up by doing something erratic. Watch your temper.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You will be a bit too glib tomorrow, and you could be deceived by someone with ulterior motives. Don't take everyone at face value.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Keep prying noses out of your financial and business affairs tomorrow—especially those who offer abundant, but unsound, advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Normally you're a very easy person to get along with. You usually treat others with objectivity and friendliness. Tomorrow, however, your methods could be dictatorial.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Although your intentions will be noble tomorrow, your tactics may leave something to be desired. To achieve results, the means must be of equally high standards.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Friends will cooperate tomorrow, but only if you treat them with kid gloves. Throwing your weight around could cause a serious problem.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) An enormous amount of persistence is required if goals are to be attained tomorrow. Don't let down!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Some of your ideas will be quite clever and ingenious tomorrow. However, the ones you have regarding money won't be included in the group.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Enter into no business arrangements tomorrow with problem persons from the past. Old wounds could be reopened.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be cooperative with others tomorrow, but don't make impulsive concessions you might regret. Sound judgment is essential.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Make haste slowly tomorrow if working on a new or unfamiliar project. Costly errors are possible if you're careless.

More attention should be devoted this coming year to artistic, musical or creative pursuits. Involvements in these areas will broaden your perspective and could even provide a source of profit.

Drama Critics Fall With Glee On Mary O'Malley's New Play

By GREGORY JENSEN

LONDON (UPI) — It always is pleasant to discover a funny new playwright, and London's drama critics have fallen with glee upon Mary O'Malley.

"Mary O'Malley is a find," cried critic Peter Lewis. Others echoed his delight at "a new playwright who can purely and simply make you laugh."

Miss O'Malley's first full-length play, "Once a Catholic," has audiences chortling in a West End theater after a richly deserved transfer from the edge of town.

It is a delightful piece of work with affection and warm humor it follows the girls of an Irish Roman Catholic convent school — all the girls are named Mary — through a year of "education" where the primary subject seems to be sex.

Mary O'Malley went to just such a convent school herself. But she insists "Once a Catholic" is "not so autobiographical as they make out."

English in spite of her name, Mary O'Malley is a small, broad-smiling red-haired woman of 36. She lives with the two children of her dissolved marriage in a scruffy and unfashionable London apartment.

For the moment, that is. For "Once a Catholic" seems to have welded her firmly to success.

The Royal Shakespeare Company commissioned her next play — sight unseen, since it not only is unwritten, but unconsidered.

"I shall not know what it is going to be about until I start writing it," Miss O'Malley says.

The BBC is televising another O'Malley play about a Catholic who marries a Jew — which was exactly her situation for five years — and a commercial TV company has commissioned a third work.

Meanwhile there is "Once a Catholic," which critic Herbert Kretzner says "must be numbered among the best new plays of 1977."

It is one of those rare plays in which every character, all 14 of them, is sympathetic.

Pay Heywood's moon-faced Mother Peter teaches the most appalling rot — only marry a Catholic boy who hasn't touched you, and tear up the Communist party newspaper on sight — but she radiates loveable sincerity.

New Book Explores Dimensions Of Sorrow

By PETER COSTA
 NEW YORK (UPI) — Novelist Sandra Scoppetone is a woman with whom one never need worry about appearing stupid or shallow or weak.
 She understands.
 As a recovered alcoholic, she has taken her own measure of various personal prisons and knows the dimensions of sorrow. In fact, she writes exquisitely about sorrow and human frailty in her new book, Some Unknown Person, a novelized version of the life of Starr Faithfull.
 Starr Faithfull was an ether addict and a femme fatal of the 1920s and 1930s who had a long affair with the then-mayor of Boston. Miss Faithfull died mysteriously — authorities speculate she drowned in shallow water off Long Island, New York.
 Novelist Scoppetone makes an attempt — and a grippingly good one — at giving a fictionalized solution to Miss Faithfull's controversial death as well as providing insight into the life of a woman in trouble.
 Miss Scoppetone, who was in New York recently to promote her book, is a calm, quiet woman with deep brown eyes. Were she not an avowed Lesbian, one would think of her as the perfect, traditional mother, one who gathers the threads of anxiety from others and weaves them into a tapestry of peace.
 Her Lesbianism is an example.
 "I don't think my lifestyle is any different from any other writer. I own my own home. I have pets. I don't have children. I dearly love the woman I live with," she said, an accountant totaling up the separate items that combine to make a life.

 And for Miss Scoppetone the best life is one without guilt. It is the one idea that dominates her existence and underlies her work.
 "One must not allow guilt to rule one's life. In a sense, guilt destroyed both these people (the lead characters in her novel). The past is the past, you know," she said.
 Miss Scoppetone, 41, has written plays for the stage and television as well as children's books and novels. Two of her recent books were devoted to the problem of teen-age drinking and homosexuality.
 A writer of some depth, she has the unusual ability to describe the vagaries of the human condition without resorting to amateur psychoanalysis or popular philosophy.
 She does what every novelist dreams of doing: getting the readers to analyze themselves.
 And she turns that same skill on herself in assessing her presently secure financial position.
 "I was lucky. In my twenties, my parents supported me when I wasn't publishing. Now I am fairly secure financially. But, you know, now that I have the money to buy orchestra seats, there is nothing to see," she said.

The Natural Cigarette.

All major brands enhance their flavor artificially. Only Real gives you all natural taste because Real uses only the finest tobacco blend to which nothing artificial has been added. Nothing. You get great satisfying taste. And all of it is natural. All of it. Now enjoy the cigarette that says it tastes best—and proves it. Low tar Real, the natural cigarette. Only 9 mg. tar.

The National Test.

Regular king-size filter smokers—both full-flavor and low tar smokers—tested Real Filter and major non-menthol low tar brands. Each person smoked one low tar brand on an unidentified basis and rated it. Real Filter was rated higher overall than every low tar brand tested. It was rated higher on taste, satisfaction, natural taste and rich flavor. Yet Real has only 9 mg. tar.

The natural cigarette. Nothing artificial added.
