War Plan By Israel Reported

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If current peace efforts fail to head off a new Middle East war, the Israelis are planning to fight a war of annihilation that will eliminate the Arab threat for the next decade, the Washington Post reported today.

Israeli strategy in any new war will be to quickly and completely destroy the armies of Egypt and Syria, the two main forces that would be arrayed against the Jewish state, the paper said.

The strategy reportedly has been outlined by Defense Minister Ezer Weizman and other Israeli officials for visiting Americans.

The plan relies on the fact Israel currently holds a major edge over its neighbors in terms of military might. This force would be applied to full effectiveness before the United States could intervene to force a cease-fire, as occurred in the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, the Post reported.

Also, a rapid victory would free Israel from having to depend on the U.S. for the kind of massive resupply airlift that triggered the Arab oil embargo of 1973, the paper said.

The flow of arms in recent years has reportedly eliminated any immediate need for the kind of airlift that angered the Arabs in 1973.

American military officials reportedly estimate that Israel has stockpiled enough weapons, ammunition and fuel to fight a three-front conventional war for 30 days before needing fresh supplies from the U.S.

Rather than risk the hazards of a strictly defensive posture, the Israelis are reportedly determined to have both the capacity and the political freedom to strike first and ferociously if war again threatens, the Post reported.

Labor Party leaders Yitzhak Rabin and Shimon Peres have said publicly that by destroying the Arabs militarily for seven to 10 years, Israel would be able to get through a period when Arab oil and money could be used to squeeze concessions from Israel.

The article quotes an unnamed U.S. official as saying the Israelis "have gone on the offensive and designed an 18-month, $2 billion pipeline of new equipment that will keep them in that posture into the 1990s."

"If we were to try to exert the kind of pressure we used in 1973 to keep the Israelis from destroying the Egyptian Third Army, the Begin government could and probably would tell us to mind our own business."

In another development, U.N. security officials have been told to make contingency plans for a resumption of the Middle East peace talks on or around Dec. 21, U.N. sources said today.

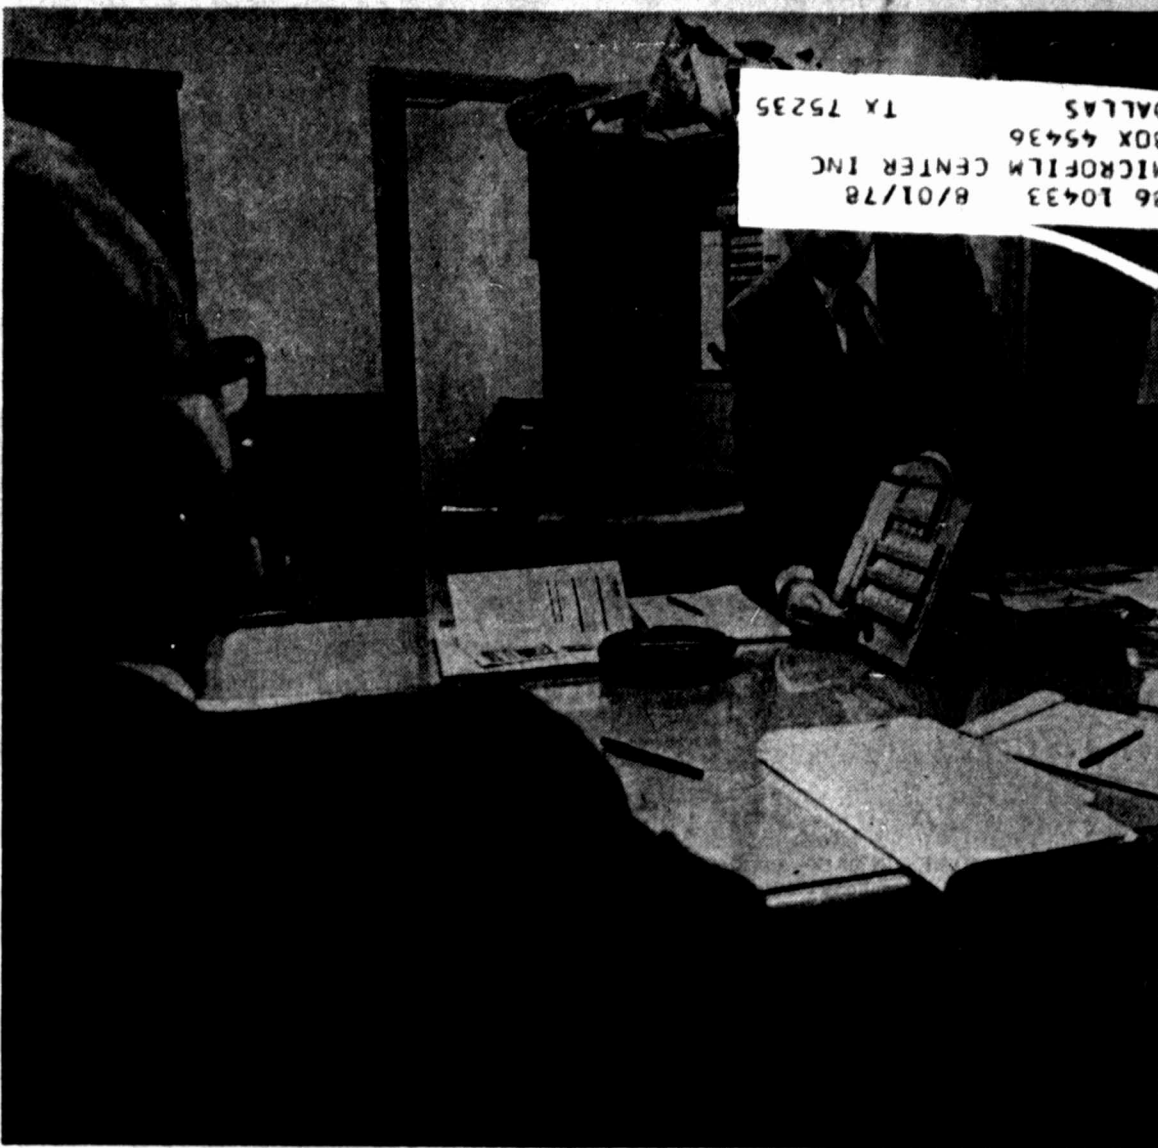

They were told that if the conference does take place, "advance personnel should arrive in Geneva Dec. 17, with a formal opening on Dec. 21, the sources said."

There would be one or two days of ceremonial speechmaking, after which the conference would recess for Christmas and the New Year, they said.

Both U.S. and Soviet officials in Geneva and elsewhere said previously that Washington and Moscow, as co-chairmen of the talks, would like the conference to begin Dec. 21 or 22.

The instructions to security officials at the U.N. European headquarters in Geneva were told, however, that this is still far from decided and that security plans should be made only on a contingency basis.

The Middle East conference first met for two days before Christmas in 1973 and then recessed without reconvening.

STUDY VOTING MACHINES — County commissioners look a close look at mechanical voting machine systems during their meeting this morning. Here, a manufacturer's representative, A.V. County Seeks Bids On Voting System to replace the long-disputed use of paper ballots here.

Commissioners unanimously instructed the County Election Board and the county purchasing agent to draft specifications for both lever-type and punch card election systems.

The proposed specifications are to be reviewed by the commissioners' court Nov. 14. Commissioners then are expected to instruct the purchasing agent to take bids for a proposed December purchase.

Representatives of AVM Corporation, which manufactures lever voting machines, and Computer Election Systems, Inc., marketing punch card devices, debated their systems at a two-hour meeting before commissioners this morning.

The proposed punch card system was touted as the less expensive voting scheme, costing about $300,000. The AVM system would cost more than $500,000, and several officials said that figure may be too low because it would not provide enough machines.

Commissioners told the election board to decide how many machines of each system would be needed to equip the county.

When they open bids in December, commissioners will compare costs and other features, and decide which system to buy.

"Most of all, I hope you decide to buy something," Madison Sowder, Democratic party county chairman, told commissioners. "Whatever the commissioners court decides, we'll be better off than we are now," he said.

Lubbock County is the largest county in the state still using paper ballots. Such a practice has been long under attack as outmoded, inefficient and requiring too many election workers. Questions about the privacy of voting also have been raised because voting has been done on table tops.

Both the lever and punch card voting devices come with built-in voting booths. A.V. "Tex" Martin, vice president and general manager of AVM Corp. of Jamestown, N.Y., argued that lever-type voting machines would save the county $20,000 per election in manpower costs.

This, he said, is a much greater savings in operation costs than the punchcard system would allow.

Martin said other advantages of the AVM devices are that they allow for complete ballot display, are simpler to vote on and provide voting totals per machine within 30 seconds after polls close.

However, Tom Eschberger, area manager of Computer Election Systems, said his machines are easier to store and distribute to polling places.

Also, Eschberger said, a punch card system allows election officials to go over ballots manually in case of a recount.

No such check is provided in the lever-type system, he said.

Also in today's meeting, Sowder urged County Judge Rod Shaw to break up polling precincts which include more than 2,000 registered voters.

Ambulance Attendant Bolsters Davis' Case

AMARILLO (AP) — A former ambulance attendant testified today that Gus "Bubba" Gavrel told him he could not identify the "man in black" who gunned him down outside Cullen Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

And he said the gravely wounded shooting victim pulled two bags of marijuana from inside his pants and asked him to "get rid of them."

'Horn Fans Draw Blast

AUSTIN (AP) — University neighborhood residents are complaining that student enthusiasm over Texas becoming a No. 1 football power has changed from "basic hell-raising and student hijinks" to disturbing the peace and breaking the law.

Betty Phillips, president of the Save University Neighborhoods Association, wrote letters Tuesday to UT President Lorene Rogers and Austin Mayor Carole McClellan.

Cars and pickups career around corners running red lights and stop signs, she said. Groups of drunken students prowl the streets, littering lawns with broken beer bottles and shouting obscenities.

"I looked at it a second and decided to throw it out the window," Paul Goheen told the jury in Davis' capital murder trial.

Goheen said he first saw Gavrel sprawled on the breakfast room floor. He said he leaned down and asked him where he had been shot.

"I don't know where I've been shot. Just get me out of here... he's going to come back and get me," Goheen quoted Gavrel as saying.

Goheen said he asked Gavrel who was going to get him and he said the young man replied:

"I don't know who. Just get me out of here. He's going to come back and shoot me."

Goheen said he and his associate loaded Gavrel into the ambulance and headed toward a Fort Worth hospital. He said he was attempting to remove Gavrel's clothes to examine his bullet wound when Gavrel "reached down into his pants and pulled out two plastic bags."

"Have you ever seen a substance like that before?" defense attorney Phil Burleson asked.

"Yes sir, I have," Goheen responded. "Do you know of your own knowledge what it was?"

"It was marijuana."

Goheen also testified he talked to Gavrel's date that night, Beverly Bass, 19, outside the mansion and that he had an occasion to see her eyes.

"They were dilated and glassed over," he said.

"Is that consistent with a person who had taken drugs?" Burleson asked.

"Very consistent," the witness replied.

Goheen also told of spotting a black plastic trash sack lying in the grass under See DEFENSE CLOUDS Page 14

Slayer's Snores Hurt Defense

HOUSTON (AP) — Defense attorney Leroy Peavy addressed the state district court jury, pleading for the life of his client who had been convicted of capital murder.

But something kept interrupting his carefully prepared presentation. It was the snoring of the defendant.

While Peavy argued Tuesday, Billy Wayne White slept at the counsel table, loudly snoring.

White, 20, awoke to find the jury had assessed him the death penalty. It made him the youngest man sentenced to death here since the new capital murder statute was enacted in 1974.

He was convicted for the Aug. 23, 1976, robbery-murder of Martha Spinks, 80, at her furniture store.

White's snoring was so loud it brought a slight frown to the face of State District Court Judge William Hatten.

Peavy urged jurors to give White a chance with a life sentence, then sat down beside his client and awakened him with a rough nudge.

White opened his eyes, turned his head and drifted off again, sleeping through the closing argument by Asst. Dist. Atty. Gerald Flatten despite repeated ef-

Carter Backs Embargo On South Africa

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has instructed United Nations Ambassador Andrew Young to give U.S. support to moves in the Security Council to impose an embargo on all arms sales to South Africa, it was learned today.

An official announcement is expected on Carter himself at a news conference on Thursday. But in the meantime, Young was consulting with British and French diplomats in New York on the strategy to be used against South Africa, whose latest round of suppression against blacks and their supporters has disturbed the administration.

In his discussions, it also was learned, Young is exploring the prospect of limited economic sanctions against South Africa, which actually could have a more serious impact on the Pretoria government.

The United States and Britain already observe virtually air-tight arms embargos of their own, although some police equipment and other "gray-area" gear, such as spare parts for old C130 transport planes, are sent to South Africa from the United States.

Carter told reporters in the White House Rose Garden on Tuesday that he had made "the right decision" on whether to support U.N. sanctions against South Africa, but he declined to disclose it. Informed officials at the White House and State Department were instructed to guard against any "leaks."

"I haven't had much experience with sanctions yet," Carter said, "but I think there are all varying kinds — sanctions against the sale of weapons and all degrees of economic sanctions..."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said later that Carter was waiting for "the appropriate time" to announce his decision.

Young said Monday that he personally favored some form of sanctions, but that Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance would have to decide which "are appropriate in these conditions."

A confrontation with South Africa has been building since last week's massive crackdown on black and white dissent. At the same time, however, the administration needs the support of South Africa in promoting black rule in Rhodesia and Namibia.

At the United Nations, black African and other delegations are promoting military sanctions against the government of Prime Minister John Vorster. Young is faced with difficult negotiations in trying to build a consensus, beginning with a unified western position.

France has been a major arms supplier for South Africa, which also obtains weapons from Israel and on the open market.

The U.S. economic stake in South Africa is considerable. Last year, the United States was its largest trading partner, selling South Africa $1.35 billion worth of goods or 16 per cent of its total $8.50 billion in imports.

Red Adair To Battle Oil Blaze

A-J News Service
TAFT, Calif. — Famed oil well firefighter Red Adair arrived at the government-owned Elk Hills oil reserve early today and immediately began preparing to try to douse a runaway oil fire in which three men died.

"Mr. Adair is here and he is consulting with supportive units at the fire scene," Elk Hills spokeswoman Anita Powell said.

She said Adair arrived from Texas shortly after midnight.

"We don't know how long it will be before he makes an attempt to put out the fire," she said. "He has been out there for several hours now and is making his preparations."

An underground explosion at the rig owned by the Department of Energy on the reserve killed three workers in a basket atop the rig Tuesday afternoon. Flames billowed 50 to 150 feet in the air.

The victims were identified as George VanHousen, 34, Mark Maynard, 25, and Bobby Fuqua, 38. All three worked for Hydraulic Workover Services Inc., and lived in nearby Bakerfield. The Kern See OIL FIRE Page 14

Wood Demand Boosts Prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House inflation council says that lumber prices have risen rapidly because not enough trees have been available to keep up with demands for new houses.

Prices of softwood lumber and plywood have soared more than 50 percent over the past two years, and wholesale prices of all lumber products have gone up more than 12 percent in the last three months alone.

Barry Bosworth, director of the White House Council on Wage and Price Stability, told the Senate Banking Committee that prices of lumber fluctuate widely because lumber producers can never adjust their supplies to meet demand.

He said large swings in mortgage interest rates make conditions uncertain for lumber producers and "sharply affect housing demand and new home construction."

Bosworth said, "The rise in prices can be explained by a sharp rise in lumber demand during the 1970s, together with a sluggish expansion of supply."

The National Forest Service, he indicated, may be too stringent in its policies of permitting logging of trees in national forests.

Currently, loggers cannot cut down trees at a rate faster than they can be replaced over a long period.

Bosworth, criticizing the policy, said it prevents a temporary increase in the harvest, even if such a yield would in no way diminish future harvests.

Sen. William F. Proxmire, D-Wis., said the Federal Reserve should take some of the blame for fluctuating interest rates. He said the answer may be to produce smaller houses or find new materials for building them.

The White House council launched its inquiry after Housing Secretary Patricia Harris had predicted in August that a mid-summer rise in lumber prices will drive up the cost of a new house by at least $1,000.

Demand for housing has continued this year at a rate of about two million new houses per year, the largest in four years.

The average new house costs $51,300 in the first quarter of the year and will go up by at least $1,500 by the end of the year, housing officials have said.

PUTTING ANCIENT NAMES ON MAP — A road sign in English gives travelers precautionary warnings at the entry to the West Bank town of Tulkarm, in the background. Israel has been in charge of the West Bank since its capture in the 1967 Middle East war, and despite demands that the area should be part of a Palestinian homeland, Israel is trying to put the ancient names of Samaria and Judea back on the map to describe the region. Biblical Terms Used For West Bank

By LARRY THORSON

SABASTIAH, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Ruins lie upon ruins at Sabastiah, a Palestinian Arab town with a Greek name honoring a Roman emperor, and now administered by Israelis.

Almost 3,000 years ago Omri and Ahab raised the Kingdom of Samaria here, but within 200 years the Assyrians had wrecked Samaria and carried the people of Israel into their first exile.

Today the wheel of history has come full circle: Modern Israel has been administering the area, now commonly called the West Bank of the Jordan River, since the 1967 Middle East war. Despite demands that the West Bank should be part of a Palestinian homeland, Israel is trying to put the ancient name Samaria back on the map, along with Judea, the old name of an adjoining area.

"Don't call it 'the West Bank,'" Prime Minister Menachem Begin admonished reporters after his nationalistic Likud party won last May's election. "It's Judea and Samaria," he said.

These words — "Yehuda" and "Shomron" — in Hebrew — are common usage in Israel. An Israeli army camp one mile from Sabastiah is named Shomron, and Jewish settlers have moved into the camp to start a civilian town.

Much of the rest of the world calls the area the West Bank of the Jordan River. But after a decade of putting up the roadside signs and printing the telephone books, Israel would prefer wider recognition of the biblical Jewish names.

There are three ways of referring to this disputed area of 2,270 square miles, and each has a different political significance.

"Judea and Samaria," the term favored in Israel, suggests ancient Hebrew power because these were the names of the two Israelite kingdoms formed after the death of King Solomon in 928 B.C.

Judea (or Judah) had its capital at Jerusalem. Its domain reached the Mediterranean in the vicinity of modern Tel Aviv, and extended south to Elath (also known as Eilat) on the Gulf of Aquaba.

North of Judea, Samaria's territory included the Mediterranean coastline up to today's Haifa area and a big loop of what is now Syria and the Kingdom of Jordan.

Samaria (the kingdom was also called Israel) is named for a man called Shemer who, according to the Bible, for two talents of silver sold King Omri a hill where he and his son, Ahab, built a capital. Walls and foundations of their city are visible today on the hill 42 miles north of Jerusalem.

There are also column-lined streets from a Roman era city (called Sebastia after the Greek name for Augustus Caesar) and crusader churches, one now taken over by a stately Moslem Mosque and an elementary school.

"West Bank of the Jordan" suggests a connection to Jordan, which was called Transjordan until the first Arab-Israeli war in 1948. Jordanian troops captured land as much as 15 miles west of the Jordan river in that war. The land was annexed and the kingdom changed its name to Jordan, signifying control over land both east and west of the famed river.

"Palestine" (pronounced "falasteen" in both Hebrew and colloquial Arabic) takes its name from the Philistines, idol-worshipping enemies of the ancient Israelites. This name was used by both Roman and Crusader conquerors of the Holy Land, and the local Arabs all themselves Palestinians, not Jordanians.

"This was Palestine until 1948 then it became the West Bank," a young Arab teacher said in Ramallah, a center of Palestinian nationalism in the West Bank. "Now we want it to be Palestine again."

The West Bank is only a small part of the area known as Palestine, and when Arabs say "Palestine," Israelis suspect the meaning includes a desire for Arab rule over all the land redeemed by Jewish blood and sweat.

Jews seldom use "Palestine" and instead lump Judea and Samaria together as "Eretz Israel" — Hebrew for the "Land of Israel."

The 700,000 Arabs of the West Bank have no terms corresponding to Judea and Samaria. They are more likely to divide the area into "the Hills of Hebron" or "the Hills of Nablus," suggesting the districts dominated by the large towns.

Israelis don't use the name Nablus, instead calling the town Shechem, which was its name when the Hebrew Patriarch Abraham visited there 3,800 years ago.

"We love to call our places by their biblical names," said Dr. Zeev Vilnay of Jerusalem, a guidebook author, former soldier and member of the Israeli government place-names committee.

"It is not the West Bank for us, it is Judea and Samaria," he said. "We are trying in our education to revive our Hebrew heritage, so we never use King Hussein's name (Jordan) for the area."

He said Israeli soldiers rose to heights of courage in tough battles with the Jordanians in 1967 because they were fighting on land with place names that evoke biblical glory.

"But you know," Vilnay said, "We have a saying: 'A stranger will not understand that.'"

College Sophomore Says Snake Program Popular

NORTHBLEN, Colo. (UPI) — Rob Gentry is a college sophomore who has become a personal ambassador for snakes, touring area schools introducing his reptile friends to somewhat nervous students.

Gentry, 20, who attend the University of Northern Colorado in Greeley, is in his second year of visiting area schools with a road show of live reptiles.

"Snakes are really good animals to have around," he told a third grade class at Malley Elementary School in Northglenn recently.

The children started out recoiling from Brutus the Boa and the other reptiles, but by the end of the 45-minute session, almost everyone seemed to think better of the snakes.

"How come rattlesnakes, before they strike, shake their tail?" asked one student.

"How do snakes move without any legs?" said another.

Gentry answered the questions and more. He has been working with snakes as a hobby for about a dozen years, and "got serious" about five years ago.

His collection of 10 snakes includes one rattler, which he doesn't bring along on his road tours unless he is asked.

Gentry says people don't realize the value of snakes, which control rodents and try to avoid human beings.

The college sophomore says last year he was asked to put on 28 programs, and this year the number will probably be closer to 50.

The only charge Gentry makes is for gas and lunch. He also requests a letter commenting on his programs. They have all been complimentary so far, according to Gentry.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

It's One More Patch

IF BANKRUPTCY is defined as having more liabilities than assets, then the nation's Social Security system already is bankrupt.

Either way, if the promises Congress has made to Social Security recipients are to be kept, the system must have additional revenue.

Congress now is debating the "least of evils" way to provide that revenue.

UNDER ONE PLAN in the House of Representatives, the maximum tax for Social Security would climb $239 next year, to $1,204 for a person earning $19,900 or more.

This would continue climbing annually through 1987, reaching a maximum of $2,732 for the employee and $2,732 for the employer, a total of $5,464 per worker 10 years hence.

Over in the Senate, a more "politically expedient" alternative is on the boards. The employees' share wouldn't jump but to $1,071 next year (the same as under present law) and would rise to a maximum of $1,417 in 1986.

But the employer would be paying a maximum tax per employee of $7,050 by that time. His cost, of course, would be put right back on the consumer in the form of higher prices.

Under the Senate Finance Committee bill, Social Security taxes would be raised by $285 billion over the next 10 years.

WITHOUT ADDITIONAL payroll taxes or revenue from the equally deficit-ridden general fund, Social Security administrators won't have the money in 1979 to cover disability benefits and will run out of money for old age and survivors' benefits in 1983.

The House proposes to broaden the base of the system's contributors by taking in federal, state and local government workers, but that's a patchwork solution.

In truth and in fact, the only longrange hope for the Social Security system is for Congress to get inflation under control so that benefits don't have to spiral upward constantly in order to keep up with the cost of living.

So long as it spends more than it collects —until it balances the budget—Congress is fooling itself and damaging America.

'Or Else...'

To refresh your memory: A year or so ago, a Pittsburgh artist, Le Ann Wilchusky, obtained a grant of $6,025 from the National Endowment for the Arts for the production of a 20-minute film.

Part of the grant financed a week in the Caribbean for the artist and her husband, where he photographed her at work.

Most of the balance paid for a short flight in a small plane over El Paso in August of 1976. It was during this flight that four rolls of crepe paper were unrolled while a camera recorded the interesting scene.

Word of this expenditure eventually floated back to Sen. William Proxmire of Wisconsin. The senator hit the ceiling, all splattered out, and some time elapsed before he returned to the floor.

Then he denounced the award as "outrageous," and awarded the National Endowment for the Arts his Golden Fleece of the Month.

NOW MICHAEL Straight, acting chairman of the Endowment, has come forth with a useful suggestion: The Endowment itself, he says, should stop making direct grants to individual artists, composers, poets and the like.

Such grants lay the Endowment open to attack, and cause more trouble than they are worth. Straight asks: How is artistic excellence to be determined? It may be possible to reach a consensus in some areas.

If 30 young pianists compete in a blind competition, playing the identical work, a competent jury usually will arrive at agreement on their talent.

The same thing is true, Straight believes, of works of literature. But what of the visual arts? Here agreement comes hard.

"There are Anti-Object Artists, and Earthwork Artists, Conceptual Artists and Performance Artists; Minimalists and Minimal-Systematists; Traditionalists committed to form, and Iconoclasts, whose sworn purpose is to annihilate all form in the visual arts.

"Given this range, standards become meaningless; no consensus can be assured."

STRAIGHT'S IDEA is to increase the public funds available for individual artists, but to change the grant procedures. He would halt direct "handouts," which perpetuate the alienation between the artist and the taxpayer.

Instead, he would have the government match purchase awards by art museums, publishers and local symphonies.

By dispersing the "patronage power," he feels, a major obstacle to the continued growth of public funding for the arts could be removed.

The gentleman's proposal makes sense; it ought to be promptly approved by Congress. If some state or private museum had been willing to put up $3,000 toward Ms. Wilchusky's crepe paper epic, at least the National Endowment could have ducked half its responsibility.

But Straight's temporizing suggestion begs the

Holmes Alexander: Time Out For Mideast Break

WASHINGTON—One way—as good as any other way—to look at the upcoming Geneva Conference concerning Mideast affairs, is to consider it a disarmament conference.

It might possibly become a disarmament conference that, for once, obtains its purpose. Almost certainly, the American agreement to break a six-administration tradition by including Russia as a temporary peace-partner, means that Great Power supervision over Israel and the assorted Arabs has replaced the UN in that capacity.

Here is a change indeed. The disunited United Nations never had the clout to slap weapons out of the hands of the warring parties.

But the USA and the USSR can do so, merely by withholding shipment of weapons, and the training of soldiers to use them.

AGAIN, IF THE angry reaction of militant American Jewry is any guide, the Carter administration is more free to declare peace, and enforce it, than any administration since World War II.

Despite his breast-baring talk about preferring political "suicide" to displeasing Jewish voters, Carter may have blundered into a useful policy by issuing a joint Mideast statement with the Soviet Union.

The Russian presence as an ally has built a huge background of distrust during and since World War II, but the Soviet Union need not automatically be a Jonah under all circumstances.

If the President believes, as he seems to, that Israel cannot have a secure homeland unless the Palestinian Liberation Organization is allowed to gain a foothold for its own homeland, then Russian influence may do for the region what the United States has been unable to do.

IF IT TAKES months of standstill, and years of cease-fire, new generations will grow up without the bitter memory of their elders.

Such a standstill and cease-fire can only happen if the USA and the USSR deny—instead of supply—arms to the belligerents.

Here in the United States, we need time to take notice that the Soviet Union is no longer the enigma wrapped in a puzzle, as Churchill called it.

I recently heard testimony by Russologist-professors before a House International Relations subcommittee, to the effect that Soviet policy is not quite an uninterpretable language.

The great and growing size of the communist empire presents troubles, and calls for compromise.

So They Say...

Omar Bureson, the Anson conservative. The WTCC always comes down hard on the side of free enterprise and a minimum of federal controls on business.

With his built-in contacts throughout the 17th Congressional District, and the generally conservative to moderate philosophy of its voters, Godfrey should be a strong candidate.

The district stretches from Tahoka to Gainesville and includes Floyd, Crosby, Garza, Borden and Scurry (Snyder) counties in the South Plains area.

In an absurd bit of gerrymandering to attain population balance under the one-man, one-vote edict, the district cuts through the middle of a half-dozen counties.

Sales of peanut candy have plummeted this year along with the popularity of President Carter, says a news story.

It's another case of sweet talk not living up to expectations.

A new candy bar named "Reggie" in honor of Yankee slugger Reggie Jackson is in the works. Sales ought to be brisk just from having Yankee Manager Billy Martin chew on it.

One of The A-J's Austin correspondents, noting that Warren G. Harding was appointed to succeed Jesse James as state treasurer, believes he should get the next appointment. His name: Bill E. Kidd.

"I LOATHE airplanes. Terrible things. I like ships." That's not an uncommon attitude. But it's a bit surprising when the man who holds it—and publicly admits it—is the sales director for an international airline.

Douglas Haws admitted it last week in a talk to directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, meeting in Kerrville.

He is sales director for British Caledonia Airlines, which began Houston-to-London direct service this week. You can leave Houston at 6 p.m. and be in London nine hours later.

"BRITAIN HAS a mixed economy of socialism and free enterprise," Haws said.

His airline falls into the latter category. The competing British Airways is government-owned. Haws is able to sell his service, despite his lack of fondness for or knowledge of airlines, because British Caledonia is "operated as a business, not an airline."

Each route has to show a profit, Haws said. If it doesn't, he added, "you either cut the route, cut the staff or cut your throat."

There is one aspect of Britain's "mixed economy" which Haws must find especially galling. His salary, he said, is about $34,000.

"At around $30,000," he said, "the government won't let one's salary go up."

About the best that can be said for that, perhaps, is that it beats cutting your throat.

the intent toward Castro's uprising in the 1960s, but when the promise of any easy conquest for the Soviets was denied them even by Kennedy's half-hearted resistance, the adventure was halted and Khrushchev was removed for his "adventuring."

Thus it could be in the Mideast if the President and his Secretary of State follow history. For once, there could be a Russo-American disarmament move which, as it did in Berlin, simmered but never boiled over. Without being a sure thing by any means, it could happen in the Mideast.

Sylvia Porter: Waiting Time's Over For Short-Weighting

WHEN THE LABEL on the package of hamburger or sausage you are buying says "one pound," you expect to get 16 ounces—not 15 1/2, not 14, or whatever.

Similarly, you expect the weight printed on packages of cereal, bread, flour, detergent, etc., to be accurate.

But as of Tuesday, a flaw in federal regulations permits certain products sold to you to weigh less than the net amount shown on the package.

The practice is called short-weighting, and alarmed state officials fear that if it is not banned, it will cost America's shoppers as much as $1 billion a year.

The products involved are those which are not canned or hermetically sealed and thus lose (or gain) moisture during the time they leave the factory until they reach your shopping basket.

These include flour, fish, meat and poultry, bread, soaps, frozen foods, cereals, rice and pasta.

UNDER FEDERAL regulations, such items must weigh the amount stamped on the package only at the time they are shipped from the plant. Once they reach your grocery shelves, "reasonable variations" in their weight are allowed.

But what are "reasonable variations" in weights and measures?

It's the responsibility of state inspectors to check packages at the retail store, but under the ambiguous federal rules, each inspector is left to figure out for himself what constitutes a "reasonable" shortage for loss of moisture.

Besides, the inspector has no way of knowing if the shortage is due to short-weighting or truly unavoidable loss of moisture.

Until this year, state and local weights and measures officials, acting under stricter state laws, pulled items from the stores which they discovered were short-weighted.

But in March the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that federal laws, no matter how vague, preempt state and local regulations.

THUS, SAY STATE inspectors, they are now prevented from protecting consumers from short-weighting.

And we aren't the only ones who can lose heavily because of today's confusing federal standards.

AS ONE ILLUSTRATION, the Agriculture Department is working to revise regulations governing meat and poultry products.

"We are moving to remedy the difficulty created by the Supreme Court decision," explains Carol Tucker Foreman, assistant agriculture secretary for food and nutrition services.

"There's no reason why the citizens of such states as California or Michigan which had fine net-weight regulations should be penalized because of federal preemption."

"We should come up with stronger, more specific federal regulations that are at least as good as the ones they had."

AS ANOTHER illustration, the American Meat Institute, a meat industry trade organization, agrees with the states' efforts to change the federal laws.

"We want a uniform standard uniformly enforced," says a spokesman, "not 50 different state standards."

He points out that the problem of moisture loss is rapidly diminishing as packagers switch to plastics and other air-tight wrappings.

Meanwhile, as federal agencies spend the next four to six months preparing, issuing and finalizing new weights and measures regulations, state inspectors are doing their best to keep short-weighted items off the market.

"We are even risking contempt of court citations by pulling items off the shelves," says Herbert Cohen, counsel for California's Department of Food and Agriculture.

"Weights and measures officials around the country are holding the line, but they can't continue for long."

Craftsman Says Antique Dealers Fooled By '350-Year-Old' Chair

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Message from one Rhode Island craftsman to antique experts who consider themselves infallible: ha ha ha. Armand LaMontagne says he built a chair that sold for $9,000 as a 350-year-old antique.

LaMontagne, a former policeman who thinks antique experts and museum officials are snooty, says in a story that appeared in the Detroit Free Press that he built the chair "for a good laugh. Those people think they're infallible, you know."

LaMontagne, 38, says he spent $2 for material and worked for two months in 1969 at building what came to be known as "the Great Brewster Chair."

"I'm sick to death of it!" said New Hampshire antique dealer Roger Bacon, who sold the chair to the Henry Ford Museum here. Donald Shelley, who purchased the chair for the museum before retiring as the institution's president, says he still believes it is real.

"I wish you wouldn't even print this kind of story. He (LaMontagne) is embarrassing everybody. This man is up to no good," Shelley said.

The Great Brewster was supposed to be only the third chair of its kind ever discovered — a relic of the pilgrim era, built as a throne for the ruling elder of the Pilgrim Church. Two similar chairs are on exhibit at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and Pilgrim Hall in Plymouth, Mass.

LaMontagne maintains that he has not made a cent from the chair. He says he planted it in a house in Maine where he knew antique dealers would find it. He never misrepresented the chair, he says.

Sure enough, it passed through the hands of two or three dealers before coming to Bacon and then, in 1970, to the Henry Ford Museum, which bragged about it at the time.

Robert Wheeler, the museum official now in charge of the discredited piece of furniture, is philosophical about the affair.

"It happens, and we're just going to have to live with it," he said.

"I don't think we feel that badly about the thing," he says.

Aztec Computer Discovered

By DEBRA BEACHY

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Mexican civil engineer David Esparza Hidalgo says it cost him a divorce and 18 years of tramping through mountains, deserts and jungles, but in the end it paid off with the discovery of the Aztec computer. Nepohualtzintzin Esparza claims the computer, still used today, can beat electronic brains in more ways than one.

Some operations can be done faster on the Aztec computer, but its biggest advantage is that the person operating it has to reason. Electronic computers do the reasoning," Esparza said.

Esparza, 52, began his quest when he was a college student studying architecture. His search took him to Indian villages and university libraries across the country.

"I had to dress as a peasant to gain the Indians' confidence. I went to their bars, I made friends with them and lived with them for months. Everywhere I went I asked the Indians about their system of counting. Slowly the bits of information began to fit together."

Esparza says his search for the Aztec computer was a lonely one. But certainty that it existed drove him on.

"The Aztec and Mayan pyramids were proof that there existed advanced mathematical computation," he said.

The breakthrough came when Esparza talked to an old Indian in the Puebla Sierra, in central Mexico, who told him about the "kipol," a simplified version of the Nepohualtzintzin.

The Aztec computer is a board divided into two sections of keys separated by a divider which has dots representing values of 1, 10, 100, and 1,000, etc. In the top section, there are 13 rows of three keys each, in the bottom section there are 13 rows of four keys.

The keys in the top section have a value of five and the keys in the bottom section a value of one. The computer is operated by moving keys from right to left, in order of their decimal value.

Aside from being able to make any calculation based on the decimal system, Esparza says, computation can be made based on the Aztec and Mayan duodecimal system, which was based on 20.

The computer also can be used for astronomical calculations, for which it was used by the Aztecs and Mayans, he said.

"The beauty of this is that it evolved from observing natural phenomena," Esparza said. Esparza says he hopes the Aztec computer will be used by teachers.

"It would be a great aid in teaching children math," he said. "Too many people are turned off early in life to math because of the way it is taught. Math itself is a beautiful and abstract philosophy."

The Aztec computer had not gone unnoticed previously. In 1976 it was proposed at a UNESCO adult education seminar in San Jose, Costa Rica, for use in teaching mathematics.

The Nation Politech Institute is using two of Esparza's books — Aztec Computation and Nepohualtzintzin — in courses. And the Mexican Foreign Trade Institute has announced plans to export the computer.

"Every North and South American has a right to know about the computer," Esparza said. "It is a forgotten inheritance from the first inhabitants of this continent."

19-Year-Old Spelunker Refuses To Quit Hobby

FROSTBURG, Md. (AP) — Spelunkers, who explore caves for a hobby, get their kicks from finding something new. Jim Wright Jr., who became trapped in his discovery last week, says he plans to go looking again this weekend.

Wright, 19, a Frostburg State College sophomore, was trapped in a slender mud-walled passage while exploring Twigg's Cave near Frostburg. The 5-foot-8, 180-pound spelunker was trapped in a standing position for 36 hours while 200 rescuers tried to fish him out.

"We had explored this cave a couple of times before and we saw this pit that was at the end of the map," Wright said. "I knew there was a passage beyond that, and we went out there just to explore that passage. The whole thing with the sport is finding something new."

Wright took the trip with fellow caver and roommate Steve Earnest, who did not attempt to go into the narrow passage that trapped Wright. Earnest tried to pull his buddy to freedom by rope a couple of times before going for help.

Wright's ordeal in the cold, damp passage ended Oct. 16 when he hauled himself up on an eight-foot piece of timber stretched across a steep, 10-foot shaft, and eased his way through a narrow tunnel to freedom.

He was hospitalized for observation for two days after the rescue. He lost 10 pounds, but was not injured.

During the rescue effort he had to be given air through a half-mile hose and was given warm food in a Thermos.

"Does he intend to go back to caving?"

"You bet I will," he said. "I think we're going back to Twigg's this weekend. I left a lot of equipment down there. Actually, I'm in pretty good shape, considering what I've been through."

Wright said as he sat in the living room of his off-campus apartment

Anti-Nuclear Ads On Radio

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — Radio stations in Vermont have begun airing anti-nuclear ads designed to counter power industry commercials that say atomic energy is safe and inexpensive.

The anti-nuclear ads, sponsored by the Vermont Public Interest Research Group, are being run free of charge. VPIRG contends the federal fairness doctrine requires that both sides in the nuclear power controversy have an opportunity to get their message to the public.

Herman Bluestein, executive director of VPIRG, said the five 60-second commercials will run weekdays during the same times of the morning as the "Atom Man" ads sponsored by the Vermont Yankee Nuclear Power Corp.

Atom Man is a cartoon-like figure who argues that nuclear power is inexpensive and safe. Bluestein said the VPIRG ads are designed to show that Atom Man is wrong.

Bluestein said the ads are serious and straightforward. "Nuclear power is no laughing matter, and this is the theme of our campaign," he said.

Pension Age Of 65 Set By Otto Von Bismarck

By DONALD H. MAY
WASHINGTON (UPI) — It all began with Otto Von Bismarck.
In 1889, in the western world's first state-supported old age pension system, the chancellor of the German Empire, defined "old age" as 65.
Other countries eventually adopted the same figure in setting up their retirement

And it has become evident that Social Security is becoming increasingly expensive to finance. One reason is the number of retired persons is growing compared to the number of workers paying into Social Security.
Business groups argue that relaxing mandatory retirement will make it harder to run efficient companies — that, with fewer openings at the top, there will be fewer promotions below; it will be harder to keep good workers; vitality and new ideas will be lost.

age: they outlive men; they frequently enter the job market after children are grown; they work for lower wages and earn lower pension benefits.

Sponsors of the bills say the effect on unemployment will be small because relatively few elderly persons will work longer. Most Americans covered by mandatory retirement now are retiring before the required age. The trend in the country is toward earlier retirement.

One study showed that of a typical 100 retired men, 54 were covered by mandatory retirement, 24 of those remained on the job until the fixed retirement age, and 10 of those went out to seek other jobs.

Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J., chief sponsor of the Senate bill, said it would add at most 200,000 annually to the job market, in an economy which last year produced 3 million new jobs.

One idea to which Washington appears opposed, however, is raising the age — now 65 — at which people are eligible for full Social Security benefits. They can retire earlier on lower benefits.

Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps once bemoaned that subject and got a heated letter from Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., head of the Committee on Aging. Kreps replied that neither she nor the administration were proposing such a plan.

Analysis

programs, and so did the United States when it established Social Security in 1935.

The House Committee on Aging, which recounts this history, argues that the original choice of age 65 must have been somewhat arbitrary. Bismarck, at the time, was an active 74.

Wilbur Cohen, a former secretary of health, education and welfare and one of the drafters of the U.S. Social Security program, has written that there was "no scientific, social, or gerontological basis" for the United States picking 65 — "It was the general consensus that 65 was the most acceptable age." He added that 65 was intended as the age when benefits would begin, not as a compulsory retirement age for everyone.

Now, Congress is tinkering with this traditional concept of "old age."

Different bills have passed the House, 350 to 4, and the Senate, 88 to 7, raising from 65 to 70 the age at which most employers can require workers to retire. A compromise and final enactment appeared likely by the end of the year.

Support for these measures caught hold in Congress for several reasons:

Senior citizens have gained political power. Recession and inflation have cut retirees' standard of living.

Minneapolis To Utilize Snow, Cold

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The skaters in bright reds and yellows whirl in circles on a downtown ice rink during the lunch hour in midwinter.

Racks of cross-country skis stand outside the brick department store, ready for shoppers and employees to begin the afternoon trek home.

Vendors selling steaming mugs of grog do a bustling business along the evergreen-lined main street mall.

It's not a 19th Century small-town scene from a holiday greeting card. It's how Professor William C. Rogers would like Minnesota's biggest city to look in the year 2000.

Minneapolis, with a half-million people and an average January temperature of 17, is the coldest big city in the United States.

Rather than merely endure the frigid climate, the University of Minnesota professor says residents should turn it into an asset.

"In America's northern cities, people live through the winter, but there has been no effort to make the cities more attractive in winter," said Rogers, a 28-year resident of Minneapolis who heads the city's Committee on Urban Environment.

The committee has embarked on a campaign to change attitudes and give the city a new look for that snow-covered time between November and April.

"One day last winter I was in downtown Minneapolis and looked out over the parking lots, and everything looked dark and gray," Rogers said. "I thought, it doesn't have to be that way."

Thus began the committee's work on making winter a more interesting and attractive time.

"The whole campaign is educational. If people know how to make things more attractive, they usually will try to do so," Rogers said.

"Color is very important. We should be replacing trees that are dying of dutch elm disease with evergreens to give us a contrast to the winter snow. Dogwood is also a good choice because of its red twigs.

"Birds can be attracted by plants with seeds and berries and by heated bird baths. More birds die from thirst in the winter than starvation. Cardinals and blue jays obviously enhance the winter city.

"These are ways private citizens can work on their own to change the winter scene."

Rogers said he would suggest that the city's bicycle paths be converted for the use of cross-country skiers during the winter, and would like to see brightly colored winter fish houses on city lakes.

More use of brick and wood, rather than glass, concrete and white plaster, might make the northern city look warmer, he said.

"Every architect who builds a building should think about what it will look like in the winter," Rogers said.

Minneapolis already has made some changes to make residents feel better during the winter. Many of the buildings in the city's downtown shopping area are connected by heated skyways. And for those who prefer to walk outside, trees along the main mall are covered with tiny lights which twinkle gaily at night and on overcast days.

"A lot of people just think nothing can be done about winter," Rogers said. "What if we had taken that attitude toward summer? We'd never have invented the air conditioner."

"Once the barrier is broken that prevents residents from thinking about winter, then we can do something about improving it. Northern cities should have a lively, festive air about them. We should look like we're enjoying winter, even if we don't feel it."

Political Rivals Agree On Value Of Debates

By WALTER R. MEARS
WASHINGTON (AP) — A year later, the rival sides agree on one thing: each says the presidential campaign debate between Jimmy Carter and Gerald R. Ford served its candidate well.

Presumably they served Carter a little better, since he won the election. Without the debates, he has said, he would have lost. He hasn't said whether, as president, he'll agree to a repeat with his challenger in 1980.

Nonetheless, a strategist for the losing Republican side maintains that Ford's decision to debate was the right one, suggesting that without the three nationally televised confrontations, the election wouldn't have been as close as it was.

All of this came up for review, and for a look at the uncertain future of national campaign debates, at a conference sponsored by the American Enterprise Institute.

The conference was long on analysis and short on conclusions, because Carter will determine whether there are candidate debates next time.

The Republicans surely will demand a new round, pointing out that when their man was the incumbent, he broke precedent and confronted his challenger. Of course, Ford had his reasons.

"The traditional wisdom was that an incumbent president did not debate his challenger, but then, ours was not a traditional incumbency," said Richard Cheney, Ford's White House staff chief.

"The concern that debates would place President Ford and the governor on an equal plane in the eyes of the public was of little consequence," Cheney told the conference. "Frankly, we would have been delighted in July to have been perceived on equal terms."

Analysis

That was when Carter was a runaway leader in the polls, by more than 30 points in one survey.

Furthermore, Cheney said, Ford strategists figured the debates would give Carter's views "the kind of exposure which had previously been lacking, and would hopefully contribute to our efforts to persuade several million Americans that he disagreed with them on several issues."

Carter strategists wanted to debate for some of the same reasons.

"We had to debate to reinforce those people who wanted to vote for Carter," said pollster Patrick Caddell. "Debates would give him depth exposure, would demonstrate his competence in the same arena with an incumbent president, would retain his solid vote — and keep reinforcing it."

"Winning or losing debates, whatever that means, doesn't change votes," Caddell added. "It has been viewed aptly as a football game. You root for your team, but if it doesn't win, you don't stop being a fan of that team."

Caddell's polls showed that while Carter had been slipping six or seven percentage points a week, that slide was halted after each of the three presidential camaign debates. Cheney said he still believes Ford's decision to debate Carter was strategically correct.

"In the end, we were unable to overcome the Carter lead ... but viewed in the light of our July deficit of more than 30 per cent, we felt that we had run a successful campaign," he said. "I believe the debates were an important part of that success ..."

But successful losing campaigns are not likely to become popular. Candidates run to win, not to come close, and that goal will guide them when it comes time to decide whether to confront a rival in debate.

It may be more difficult to avoid debates in the future, but many difficult things are achieved in the quest for election — or re-election — to the White House.

So the debate about debating will go on, until there are candidates to decide whether their pursuit of the presidency will be best served by seeking or avoiding nationally televised confrontations.

There may come a time when public demand will weigh heavily in that decision, when there appears more political risk in avoiding than in joining debate.

But there is not much chance that two candidates will soon, if ever, come to the contest as firmly convinced as were Carter and Ford that the televised debate was the ticket to victory.

Pragmatism May Be Key For Canal

BY ARNOLD SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is a story, probably apocryphal, that someone asked Albert Einstein after the atomic bomb was developed what the principal weapon of the next war would be.

The great man replied that he did know about the next war, but he was willing to predict what armaments would be used in the war after that: "bombs and arrows."

It may be worth remembering in the current controversy over the Panama Canal that we still are talking about "the next war" — the nuclear holocaust.

So if, as our military men have convinced us, the only way we can assure our national security is to spend billions of dollars on nuclear missiles, what part will the Panama Canal play in our survival.

How does the ability to move ships between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans relate to a military situation in which our potential enemies are capable of incinerating our cities and poisoning our countryside with weapons from the air?

When the canal was built, the United States was trying to defend two coasts with a one-ocean navy. It was a time when no one in Europe or Asia could menace us without sending warships and invasion fleets to hit us from the sea.

But airplanes brought the protection of the oceans into question; missiles eliminated it. So why are we in such a dither about letting the Panamanians take control of the canal 23 years from now?

Sen. Barry Goldwater probably has the answer. Goldwater says public opposition to the canal treaties is based on the same kind of strong personal feeling that people have about the flag — an emotional response based on attitudes deeply implanted in childhood.

So it probably does little good for supporters of the canal treaties to argue that we don't need it for national defense. To folks who were taught in grade school that the Panama Canal "is ours," the question simply is whether we should "give away" one of America's proudest possessions.

Not does the argument that Teddy Roosevelt "stole" the land to dig the canal seem likely to alter public opinion. Many, perhaps most, Americans are unable to admit the possibility that the United States may have been less than honorable in its dealing with the rest of the world. We had an example of how that kind of argument works in the controversy over the Vietnam War.

During the early years of the antiwar movement, the argument was made that the United States had become an aggressor, injecting itself into a civil war. That was a direct contradiction of the official explanation that we were in Vietnam to defend a free people against Communist invasion.

Public opinion turned against the war, but it probably was the lack of victory along with the cost, in dollars and blood, that caused the shift. The continuing hostility to amnesty for those who resisted military service during that conflict is just one indicator that Americans did not accept the argument that their country was doing wrong in Vietnam.

It may be that nothing short of serious violence in Panama will change the minds of Americans who object to giving up control of the canal. Their first reaction will be to defend what is ours, but if the price gets too high, as it reaction will be to defend what is ours, but if the price gets too high, as it did in Vietnam, pragmatism may do what persuasion cannot.

Scientists Plan New Genetic Research

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — University of Michigan researchers this week plan to cross a threshold of genetic research that has been both hailed as revolutionary and attacked as a frightening step into the unknown.

After a year of building special laboratories under the supervision of a special committee, scientists are ready to start "moderate risk recombinant DNA research" involving the transfer of genes from one organism into another.

DNA (deoxyribonucleic acid) is a chemical code believed to be the most basic genetic message for determining the characteristics of all living organisms. Researchers for years have been trying to break the cryptic code and perhaps manipulate it. Research proponents have said the work could produce new organisms or techniques useful in industry or medicine, particularly cancer study.

But the technique has been attacked as too risky, particularly because of the possibility of an alien, catastrophic creation beyond man's control.

Less risky recombinant research has been under way for several years but only 15 to 20 universities and other institutions are working under so-called "moderate risk" conditions.

Michigan is spending about $430,000 on meticulous safeguards, even though LM researchers say most of the concerns based on horrors conjured up by opponents. "There is no example at this point of where anything hazardous has been associated with any organism using recombinant DNA," said Dr. David Jackson, one of the supervisors of the research. "We're all worried about things that we can imagine."

To ensure the safety of the work, Jackson said, the labs have separate air circulation systems, have had all openings sealed and are equipped with ultra-violet lights to kill microorganisms.

"I think the work we're going to be doing in the P-3 facility is probably substantially safer than what we and many other people in the country have been doing also for many years under essenally no containment at all," he said. Jackson plans to work with a virus to study how cancer is induced in organisms, while associates will study a human gene involved in the synthesis of protein.

A nine-member "biohazards committee" was established a year ago to monitor the research. Members included faculty, staff and one nonuniversity representative from the local community.

Committee chairman Dr. Francis Payne said the panel has been able to deal with many of the safety concerns but generally has skirted more complex moral issues.

"In terms of some of the long-term questions that are involved," he said, "the more philosophical kinds of things, I don't think that we're any different now than we were a year ago."

'Conspiracy' Alleged By Loser

PROVIDENCE (AP) — U.S. Rep. Ferdinand J. St Germain's 1976 primary opponent says the congressman used campaign tactics that would "make Richard Nixon blush."

"This is the dirtiest campaign that I've ever been involved in," Norman J. Jacques, a former state senator who lost to St Germain in last year's Democratic primary, said at a news conference.

Jacques' comments were in response to a story in last week's Providence Sunday Journal, which said the nine-term congressman investigated his opponents to obtain embarrassing information about them.

The newspaper reported that a private detective encouraged businessmen to file suit against Jacques to collect old debts, that a woman who did campaign research for Jacques was the subject of surveillance by a St Germain aide, and that the apartment of St Germain's Republican general election opponent was searched.

St Germain, who dismissed the initial story as "preposterous," made some charges of his own, claiming that a "conspiracy" against him which began last January led to the Journal article.

"Memos of the proceedings were prepared and I have them initialed and dated by prominent, respected members of the Rhode Island media of the highest integrity," the congressman said.

"I earnestly want complete, unbiased, professional investigations into the slanted, untrue, contrived, conspiratorial allegations that have been overpublicized so widely in recent days.

"I am, in addition, going to ask that they investigate the hysterical, bizarre, eerie, unbelievable, weird and frightening meeting or meetings that began in Newport, R.I., in January of this year at which the conspiracy was developed and the 10-month effort by the Providence Journal was contrived," St Germain said.

Asked to explain his accusations about the alleged conspiracy, the congressman said the statement "speaks for itself." He also refused to identify the two reporters who supposedly initialed the memos.

Jacques and John J. Slocum Jr., the Republican who lost to St Germain last year, denied they conspired against the congressman.

Coors Forms New Food Firm

GOLDEN, Colo. (AP) — The Adolph Coors Co. has formed a new food company as a wholly owned subsidiary.

Coors Food Products Co. was organized as a broad-based food company, but initially will deal primarily in rice, said William Gilmore, president of the new firm.

"We recognize the rice industry in the United States has a long way to go in tapping potential domestic consumption," said Gilmore. In the future, he said, the company plans to market new food products from rice, grain and brewery by-products.

Organized in September, the new company will initially employ eight people in Golden and 50 in the Roberts Rice Mill's processing facility in Weiner, Ark., Gilmore said.

Man Will Try To Establish Escape Record

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Escape artist Bill Shirk will attempt to enter the Guinness World Book of Records next week by escaping chains, handcuffs and a welded-shut jail cell.

Under the rules, announced by a Guinness representative, Shirk must be naked except for an athletic supporter. Sheriff Larry Cook of Hamilton County has made the old jail at Noblesville available to Shirk, who will try to break the record on the 50th anniversary of the death of Harry Houdini.

Cook said Shirk will work from a cellblock welded shut by a Hamilton County contractor.

Shirk will be locked behind two sets of cell doors. His hands will be locked behind him with three handcuffs, 44 pounds of chain will restrain his arms and his ankles will be shackled in footcuffs.

Shirk then will have five hours and 50 minutes to break the record set in 1972 by Reynir Leosson of Iceland.

Sheriff's officers will search him for keys or other devices, and a dentist will be called in to examine Shirk's mouth for hidden escape tools.

China May Set 200-Mile Zone

TOKYO (AP) — China may establish a 200-mile fishery zone, Japan's Kyodo News Service has reported from Peking.

Kyodo said China's vice chairman, Teng Hsiao-Ping, raised that possibility in a meeting with Susumu Nikaïdo, former chief cabinet secretary and former secretary-general of Japan's ruling liberal-democratic party.

Nikaïdo said Teng told him China was studying when to set up the 200-mile zone but that China "would not take unreasonable measures against Japan."

It was the first reference made by the Chinese leader concerning the fishery zone, Kyodo said.

Fishing is a major industry for Japan, which lies about 450 miles off the Chinese mainland at its closest point.

Source Says Cuba Sells Oil In U.S.

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Cuban-refined petroleum products "have been reaching markets in the United States in recent months," a Venezuelan oil industry source has been quoted as saying.

The products are derived from Russian crude oil, said the source in an article written by Caracas-based freelance reporter Joseph Mann and published in an issue of the Caracas English-language newspaper, the Daily Journal.

Venezuelan officials made no immediate comment on the report by the industry source, who Mann said, asked not to be identified.

Venezuela, a founding member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), currently exports over one million barrels a day of crude and refined oil products to the U.S. eastern seaboard market for home and industrial use.

"The Cuban government now is selling its excess refining capacity to oil buyers in Caracas, the Netherlands and France who then pass a large portion of the products along to several foreign-based firms operating in the Eastern United States," the source was quoted as saying.

According to Mann's story, Cuba, whose refining capacity currently is estimated at 120,000 barrels a day, has been seeking export markets for surplus refinery output for at least a year.

The story also indicated that the Cubans are said to be selling "significant quantities" of naphtha, a refined product which serves as a feedstock for petrochemicals, to "a variety of traders" at OPEC prices.

Woman Enjoying Position As Head Of Ute Indians

FORT DUCHESNE, Utah (AP) — Her dark eyes gleaming, Ruby Black grins, then laughs, her left fist gently pounding the desktop. She is leader of the Ute Tribe.

"After seven children, I don't think this job is as tough as it sounds. But I love it and hope I'm bringing something to it," she said.

Last spring, Mrs. Black was chosen chairman of the six-member Ute Tribal Business Committee, the first woman to head the 1,600 member tribe.

"I was a housewife to begin with and I'll always be a housewife," Mrs. Black said. "I just saw some things that needed to be done, then I talked about them and then I decided to try and do something about it."

Her constituency is the 1.3 million-acre Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation, which sprawls L-shaped over the rocky red sandstone desert to the north and the hilly Book Cliffs to the east.

Powerful in history among the tribes and nations of the West, the Utes are a people facing many problems.

The tribe, which has invested in oil, a motel-recreation complex, a clothing outlet and several other ventures, has been losing money in recent years, according to several persons associated with the tribe.

"We have our problems and we've been looking into them. We have meetings under way and expect to have things looking better shortly. For sure, we don't have as much money now as we did three or four years ago," Mrs. Black said.

Mrs. Black said tribe members seem to have a tough time getting credit. She said she has been rejected as a credit card applicant several times.

"I'm told it's happened to many of us," she added.

Another sore spot she hopes to ease is a lack of jobs that forces young people to leave the reservation.

"There's nothing here to hold them," she said.

Despite the problems and some setbacks, Mrs. Black is optimistic.

"I believe there's a future for us, the tribe, just as there is a past," she said.

Easter changes from year to year. It can come as early as March 22 and as late as April 25.

DR. LAMB

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB—Bless the woman who wrote you about the pain she was suffering from diverticulosis. I have had it for years. Four years ago I went into the hospital for X rays and a cure. I was put on a soft diet along with sulfa pills. It seemed to heal the colon, then about five months ago I started having this awful pain in the abdomen. I guess I was never free of it until I read your column about using cereals with fiber.

For three weeks now after I started using All-Bran I haven't felt any discomfort. I have a bowel every other morning with a banana or peaches. It isn't easy to take as I've never liked cereals of any kind.

I am regular and normal in all respects. I can't think thank you enough and will pass on the word to friends who have this trouble.

Also I wanted to thank you for The Health Letter you sent me on strokes. I read it to my husband who had one two years ago. He quit smoking and feels much more alert and better physically.

DEAR READER—I am glad to hear both you and your husband have improved. Several years ago when you were first evaluated for diverticulosis, those pesky pockets of the colon, the idea of using fiber or bulk for treatment was just beginning. The concepts of treatment of spastic colon, diverticulosis and related problems has undergone a drastic change since then. To give you a more complete appreciation of diverticulosis I am sending you The Health Letter number 5-6. Diverticulosis. Others who want information about this common problem can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of The Avalanche-Journal, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB—You recommended that women past the menopause should get at least 1000 milligrams (1 gram) of calcium a day. I try to eat foods that contain a large amount of calcium but I am one of those who cannot tolerate dairy products. I'm 58, in the age group you mentioned, and I don't want to start having softening of the spine. I was diagnosed as having a spastic colon years ago and have a severe gas problem. I am wondering if it is wise to take calcium with magnesium as a supplement. We have a water softener and I understand these chemicals are lost. I am in a quandry about the supplement and had stopped taking them for fear I could be getting more than I need by taking three a day.

DEAR READER—There is nothing wrong with taking a calcium supplement. Some of the various preparations are irritating to the digestive system and others are not. A frequently overlooked source of advice on a good supplement preparation is your neighborhood pharmacist. He may be able to help you choose one that is good for you.

You wouldn't get enough calcium in your water, even without the softener to really solve your problem. You may find that you can use uncreamed cottage cheese. It contains far less lactose than ordinary milk and you may be able to build it into your diet without causing you to have digestive problems.

Reporter Gets Taste Of Law, Order In Russia

By CHARLES M. MADIGAN
MOSCOW (UPI) — The Kremlin and Red Square are beautiful at midnight when the long brick walls and gray stones are ablaze from banks of floodlights atop the big GUM department store.

Every hour the poker-stiff guards who stand at the doorway of Lenin's tomb go through an impressive change, goose-stepping out of the square as their replacements take up the watch.

What better time to watch than at midnight, when the square isn't so crowded as during the day and when the stars are fiery little pinpricks in the black Russian sky?

Or so we thought as we sat on the GUM steps at 11:30 p.m., waiting for midnight so we could watch the changing of the guards. Russians sat near us, also passing the time.

"Ne seditye...NE SEDITYE."
The policeman came charging across the square, interrupting our 15 minute conversation with a torrent of Russian that basically translated as: "Sitting is forbidden here."

Our brief attempt to argue failed. He couldn't speak English and we were too flimsy with our Russian to note that he wasn't shooting the locals away.

There are policemen everywhere in Moscow, and they are living proof that a little bit of authority in the Soviet Union goes a long way.

There are policemen in the parking lots of our apartment and policemen on every corner. There are policemen at every entrance of the U.S. Embassy and policemen peppered along the streets.

There are policemen in little booths at almost every major intersection, eagle-eyed bastions of Soviet authority waiting for anyone who dares violate Soviet traffic laws.

Apparently, from conversations with friends, about the only time you cannot find a policeman in Moscow is when you need one. Like the time we drove home from the Kremlin at midnight.

By way of explanation, Soviet automobiles have good headlights, probably as good as Western automobiles. The difference is that you are forbidden to use your headlights for night driving in the city here.

Americans are not accustomed to driving in the dark with only parking lights, and so it was only natural to flick the lever that turns on the headlights. We were immediately assaulted by a drunk in a red Zhiguli, the most prominent Soviet automobile.

First he tailed us down Kutuzovskiy Prospekt, flashing his own lights and shouting. Then he pulled alongside and gestured violently toward the lights on our car. Finally he tried to run us off the road.

Such maneuvers are rude violations of Soviet traffic laws and the fact that the man waved a vodka bottle at us would surely have interested even the most liberal traffic cop.

But, although the policemen managed to keep us from sitting in Red Square, they could do little to help us avoid this four-wheeled menace who was intent on killing us because our lights were on.

One of the best police stories to come from foreigners involves a correspondent who walked into a tightly guarded parking lot one morning to find his car had been stripped of its vital exterior parts.

He complained to the policeman in a guard box a dozen steps away. The policeman listened patiently and replied, "Yes, we are aware that it happened at about 1:30 a.m."

The correspondent asked why the policeman did nothing to hamper the thieves.

"It is not my job," he said.

The Russians seem to have found their own way of coping with the many policemen. In many cases, they just ignore them or push past them with a nasty snort or grunt.

When a fire hit the U.S. Embassy in late August, Soviet police had a field day, afforded all the power anyone could want in a tense situation.

One particularly short and surly militiaman in a long dark green overcoat appropriated a bullhorn from the back of a police car. He walked up to a group of six reporters standing on a corner.

"Crackie, crackie, crackie ... back, back, back ... you must get back," he shouted into the bullhorn. No one could understand why he was using it, since he was all of 14 inches away from the group.

Nevertheless, he had a grand time for the rest of the night, shouting "back, back, back," at small groups of people.

It was refreshing to see at about 9 a.m., after a night of watching the Soviet police in action, that they failed to ignore the locals who were walking to work.

Is an obvious display of his authority, the little policeman with the bullhorn stopped in front of a large man in a shabby gray suit who was striding purposefully down the sidewalk.

The big man just kept on walking, and the little Soviet policeman bounced off his stomach like a pinball off a hot bumper.

Chaplain's Job Poses Many Risks

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The Rev. Peter Rogers is pastor at a church where the Shrine of St. Jude, the saint of the impossible cause, is located. That's fitting for Rogers, a man with movie star features and a down-to-earth job.

Rogers is police and fire chaplain, a task which regularly puts him in danger in a city known for brutal crimes and bizarre accidents.

Wearing his black fire hat with a yellow cross on the front, the light from the flames flickering in his face, the big priest looks like a movie or television series star playing the part of the gutsy and devoted priest in the line of fire.

But the fires and shootings are real, and Rogers has no stunt men to play the tough scenes for him.

"When I was sent here, I had that desire to work on the crisis line," said Rogers, a member of the Oblates of Mary Immaculate order of Roman Catholic missionaries.

Photos and articles on Rogers and citations for his work hang on the walls of his wood-paneled office. A brick sits on a shelf in the corner, a souvenir from a crumbling wall which nearly killed him at the scene of a fire.

Police and fire radios squawk their commands and responses in the office. Those radios or another by his bed stay on 24 hours.

Soon after he arrived in the city in 1965, the first call of "headquarters to car 30" came over the radio. He was "car 30."

The first call involved no danger, but since then Rogers has been called many times when there was trouble. He is there to administer last rites, comfort widows and often to inform persons of the death of a relative.

Rogers, 51, is particularly adept at talking persons out of suicide. By his reckoning, he is 22 for 22 in that department.

"Someone has to try to get through that haze and hold out a real hope that there can be a better tomorrow," Rogers said.

And once a potential suicide victim is talked out of the deed, the priest said it is important that help be provided in the future.

"You don't just get them down and walk away. You have to stay with them and work with them."

Much of Rogers' job is difficult, but there is one duty that exceeds the others in difficulty — breaking the news of a policeman or a fireman's death to his wife or children.

One steamy summer night he was called to a French Quarter bar where a young man was holding police at bay with a pistol. Police had been unsuccessful in talking the man into giving up the gun.

Rogers tried. The man's face was wounded, his shirt stained with blood.

The pistol swung toward Rogers, but when the man noticed his aim was on a priest he repeated in Latin, "Introibo ad altare Dei." The words were from a mass he learned as a child and mean, "I will go to the altar of God."

The priest responded with the next sentence in the mass: "Ad Deum qui laetificat juventutem meam." It translates, "To God who gives joy to my youth."

The young man, relieved, smiled and gave up his pistol.

"When you face the gun, at that point you're beyond the point of no return," Rogers said. "There's no point in getting scared. If it's going to happen to you it's going to happen."

Prison Suicides Confirmed

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — An official inquiry into the controversial prison deaths of Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe upheld today earlier announcements that the three terrorists committed suicide.

Leftists have claimed that the three were killed while serving long-term prison sentences.

The Baden-Wuerttemberg government's "preliminary official report" to the state parliament did not clarify how Baader and Raspe obtained the pistols they allegedly used to shoot themselves in the early hours of Oct. 18, shortly after German commandos had freed 86 hostages from a Lufthansa jet hijacked to Mogadishu, Somalia.

The four hijackers had demanded the release of Baader, Miss Ensslin, Raspe, Irmgard Moeller, seven other radical terrorists held in West German jails and two Palestinians held in Turkey.

Miss Moeller, found with stab wounds to her chest, declared through her lawyer Tuesday that she had no intention of committing suicide. She also denied a suicide plot involving her, Baader, Miss Ensslin and Raspe.

Baader and Raspe were found dead from pistol shots and Miss Ensslin from hanging in her cell.

The conservative state government in Stuttgart ordered an autopsy, watched by a representative of Amnesty International and several specialists invited from abroad, which concluded that the deaths at Stammheim prison were suicides.

The committee to investigate the dramatic events at the maximum security institution was made up of state prosecutors and members of the state police force. Without presenting positive evidence, they expressed suspicions that defense attorneys assisted in smuggling the pistols and other items to their clients in the 7th floor cells.

The pistols and subsequent discovery of a camera, transistor radio, an ingeniously simple wire communication system between cells and half a pound of explosives, has led to a confrontation between the Social Democratic-Liberal coalition government in Bonn and the conservative state government in Stuttgart, one of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's most ardent critics.

The 40-page report admitted that some events in Stammheim remained a mystery to all concerned and warned that such actions — under similar circumstances — could not be excluded in the future.

Helmut Engler, an official of the state Justice Ministry, told parliament that the defense lawyers in all probability handed the pistols and other objects to their clients during visits to the prison.

The lawyers were searched by "especially experienced officials" and "on several occasions objects were discovered which they intended to smuggle to their clients, such as ammunition and printed matter," Engler said.

During a search on Feb. 17 of lawyer Armin Newerla, a partner of Klaus Croissant who is currently jailed in France, officials discovered some electrical wiring hidden in defense documents, the report said. Newerla has since been arrested under suspicion of being a member in a criminal gang.

Engler told reporters that about 90 witnesses were heard during the investigation. The conclusion was that no third party was to blame for the deaths of Baader, Ensslin and Raspe or the alleged suicide attempt by Miss Moeller, he said.

Further investigations revealed that the barrel of the pistol Raspe used to shoot himself was bought in Basel, Switzerland, together with an American-made carbine later found on another gang member.

Whereas Raspe fired only one shot, Baader first fired a bullet into his mattress, another into the wall of his cell and only then did he fire to his head the shot that killed him, the report said.

There were no fingerprints on the pistols or the knife Miss Moeller used for her alleged attempt because all were smeared with blood, the report added.

Meanwhile in Bonn, West German police said today the killers of Hanns-Martin Schleyer are hiding abroad, and French police are checking reports the slain industrialist was held captive in a remote area of France.

"All signs point to the fact that the biggest part of the suspects have gone abroad at least for the time being," Horst Herold, the head of the Federal Criminal Police Office, said in a newspaper interview.

"They apparently plan to filter back in the near future."

The Bonn government has launched the largest manhunt in West Germany's history for 16 terrorists it said helped kill Schleyer and leave his body in the trunk of a car in Mulhouse, France last Tuesday.

In Paris, police said they are checking reports the West German industrialist could have been held in the Jura mountain range during his 43-day ordeal.

A witness, described only as a West German citizen who frequently visits the French Jura for his work, has identified as wanted terrorists a group of young Germans he met Sept. 9 at Moirans-en-Montagne near the Swiss border, police said.

Schleyer, kidnaped Sept. 5 in Cologne, had pine needles in his hair and clothes when his body was found.

Police said they are interested in the witness' evidence, because Moirans is located in the center of a pine forest and because they are investigating the possibility Schleyer was smuggled into France from West Germany via Switzerland.

Herold told the newspaper Bild Zeitung he did not expect immediate results in the search for Schleyer's killers.

"They are in possession of passports that are perfectly forged and have built up a plausible life history," he said. "In addition, they change their appearance continually and the photos on their wanted posters only resemble them roughly."

Herold called on European nations to make it more difficult to forge passports

Oil Fire Brings Adair To Scene

County coroner's office said they had moved recently from Louisiana.

Adair, who with 25 years experience is said to be able to put out oil well fires that no one else can, was called in hours after the explosion and fire erupted and efforts to extinguish were failing.

A spokesman said firefighters were pouring 750 gallons of water a minute on the flames through the night just to keep it from spreading.

The heat from the fire toppled the rig during the early evening hours.

The well that exploded was one of several in the area owned by the government.

The Chevron Oil Company also operates wells at Elk Hills, but none of the privately operated wells were in the area.

There was no official statement on what caused the explosion and fire.

There was one report that the blast occurred when the drillers hit a pocket of natural gas, but Mrs. Powell insisted that "they don't know" what caused the explosion and fire. She declined to give the name of the subcontractor whose rig was destroyed.

One fireman at the scene, who described the rig as about 60 feet high, said it toppled when the guideline cables supporting the rig melted.

He said he understood the victims were "setting a plug" when the explosion occurred.

The blast blew the three men out of their suspended basket and hurled them more than 50 feet from the oil rig, said Kern County Fire Department Capt. Ron Marshall.

"One man got up and tried to run, but he collapsed after about 125 feet," said Marshall. "All their clothes were burned off. Two of them still were wearing their heavy work boots."

Wary oil field crews from this tiny town 140 miles north of Los Angeles worked today to assemble eight to ten 500-barrel water tanks near the well for Adair's Houston-based crew.

"We're pouring 900 gallons of water a minute onto the flames, but there's no way they can shut off the flow of oil, so they're letting it burn," said Marshall.

"Even if they were able to get in, they believe the control devices to shut it off were destroyed in the explosion and fire."

Officials said there were no buildings within half a mile of the fire and that no other oil wells appeared to be in danger.

All oil lines near the fire were shut down, said Howard Schlieman, general manager of Williams Brothers Engineering of Tulsa, Okla., prime contractor of drilling operations at Elk Hills, where an estimated one billion barrels of oil is stored underground.

"It was either human error or mechanical failure, but we may never know which," said Schlieman.

The well erupted into flames when a packer being placed into the well became jammed Tuesday.

A packer is a doughnut-shaped device designed to keep oil and gas from escaping around the outside of the drilling rod.

"We tried to shove the packer in and it stuck," said Dan Hulsey, one of two men working nearby who escaped uninjured.

"We opened it up and it still wouldn't move, and then the well blew."

"Then we ran. We tried to get back to them (the three trapped men), but it was just too hot."

"We'd just been so happy," he added. "We'd just had a steak barbeque together."

Terry Bailey, 21, of Ventura was to have been working on the well at the time of the explosion but he arrived late.

Asked if he was considering another line of work, he said solemnly, "Sure am."

Funds Stolen From Town

SHREVEPORT, La. (UPI) — More than $1,100 was stolen from Springhill, La., and almost 100 traffic tickets were fixed, but no charges will be filed because almost anyone could have done it, state attorney general William Guste said.

Guste told a news conference this week that a three-week investigation by his office and state police found the shortage in bail bond funds and discovered records of traffic tickets apparently were ripped up and thrown out.

Guste said there was no clear indication of who took the money or fixed the tickets.

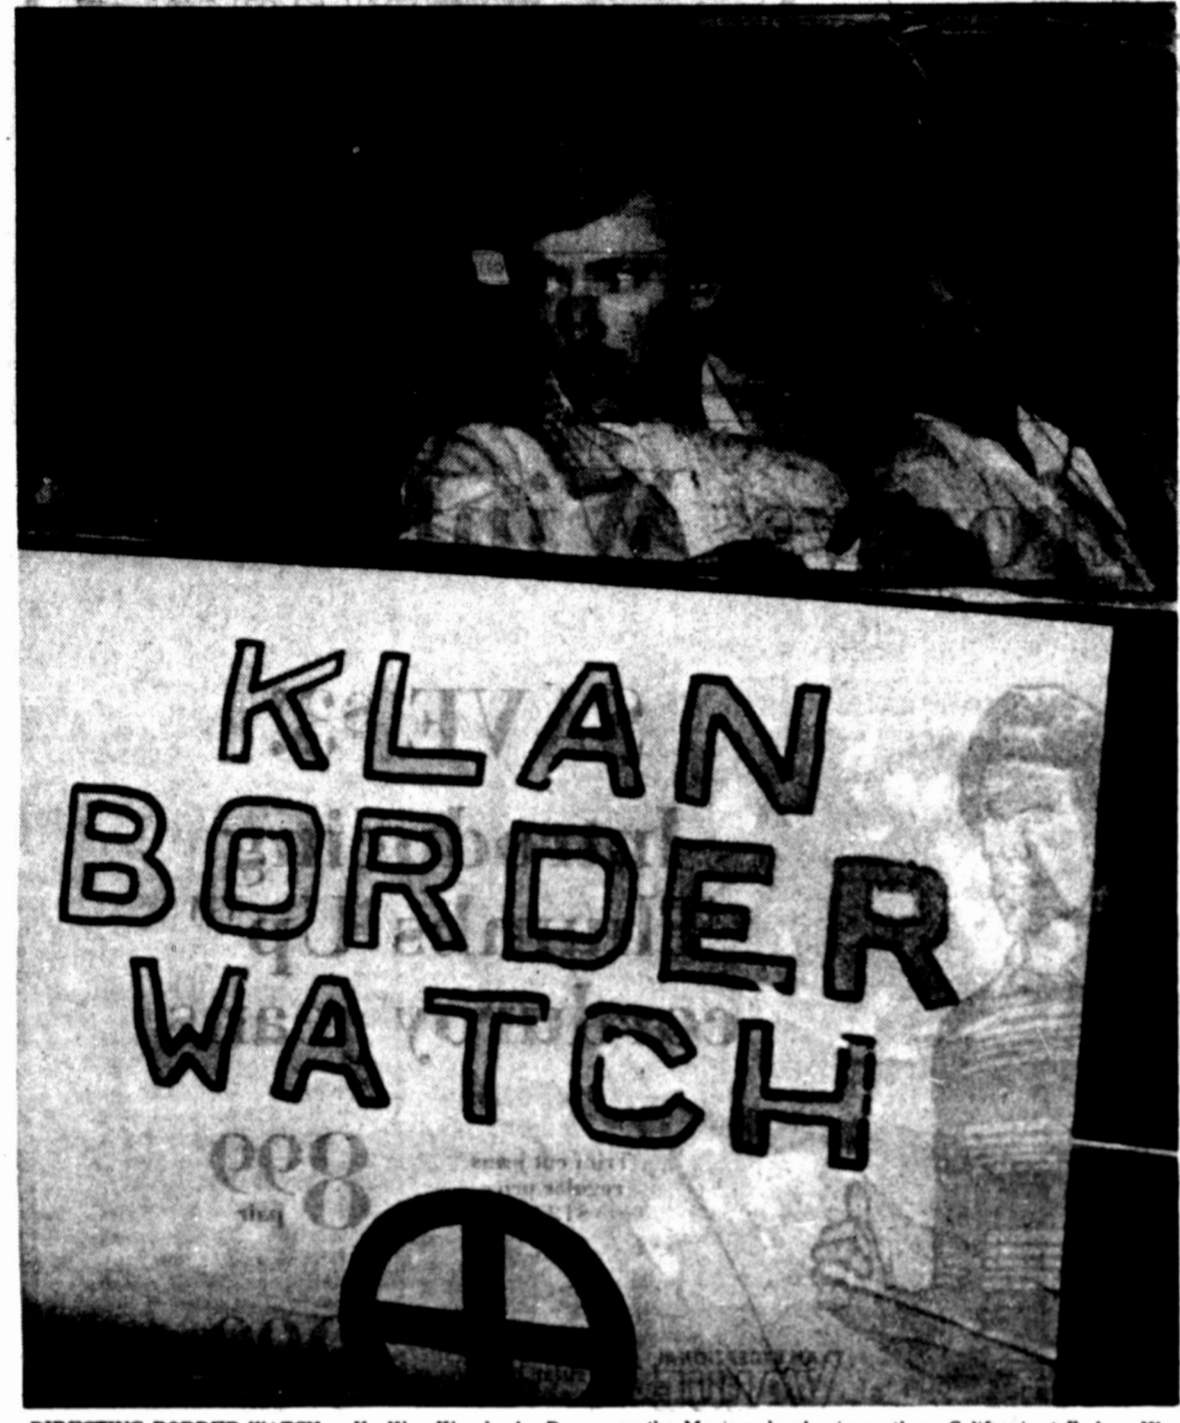

"There is no doubt about it that there was ticket fixing, a substantial ticket fixing. I think we established that at least 99 tickets had been fixed. In addition, there's no doubt about it that there was theft of public funds in excess of $1,100. The problem is that we could not prove who took that money," he said.

Guste said the bond money was kept in a locked box in the police chief's office, but the box provided very little security because screws holding it together could be taken out easily.

"We figure at least 20 people could have had access to that money," he said. "This was just very poor administration of public funds."

"As to the tickets, again because so many people had access to these tickets, it was very easy for any number of persons to just simply tear up these records. And that's just what was done."

Klan Watching Border Region

DULZURA, Calif. (AP) — The national director of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan says private patrols have begun along the 2,000-mile Mexican border, but very few Klansmen were in sight the first night of the operation.

In a news conference held in the darkness of the rugged hills just north of the border, David Duke, Grand Dragon of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, announced the official beginning of the "Klan Border Watch."

"We will be here as long as it takes to meet the response" of the illegal alien problem, said the 27-year-old leader of the white supremacist group.

Duke said about 200 Klan members will patrol the border in Southern California, with another 160 in Texas, 60 to 75 in New Mexico, and almost none in Arizona.

However, U.S. Border Patrol officials said they saw no Klansmen on the first night of the program.

Observers reported sighting at least 10 Klan members, along with six Klan vehicles. The cars and pickup trucks had "Klan Border Watch" signs taped to the sides.

Duke said Klansmen would refrain from direct contact with illegal aliens. If any are found, he said, Klansmen would not talk to them or contact them. "But if any illegal crossings are seen, they're going to use CB radios to relay the information to the border patrol," Duke said.

Duke, of Metairie, La., claimed the Klan "has the support of the American people" in helping the border patrol stem the influx of illegal aliens into this country. He claimed the illegal aliens take jobs away from U.S. citizens.

Meanwhile, Border Patrol officials, other local officials and Mexican-American and minority groups denounced the Klan program.

In San Ysidro on the border south of San Diego, 40 people met at the port of entry to protest the Klan patrols and what demonstrators claimed was the Immigration and Naturalization Service's "support of racist activities."

In San Diego, Herman Baca, chairman of a coalition of religious and minority groups, said 40 anti-Klan organizations would demonstrate at San Ysidro Saturday. The coalition also is working out its own plans for non-violent patrols to counter Klan movements along the border, Baca said.

In Mexico City, Mexican Foreign Secretary Santiago Roel said he is watching the situation carefully, adding his government "will protest if there is any case of aggression" against Mexican citizens.

Mercury Up On Plains

AJ News Service
Today's temperature in Lubbock may near the all-time high Oct. 26 reading — 87 degrees — set in 1950, and forecasters say the clear, dry trend should continue through Thursday.

Houstonians and Southeast Texans this morning awakened to heavy fog which reduced visibility to near zero in many places and created hazardous driving conditions.

But persistent heat, rising to its predicted high in the 80s, was expected to steam-dry the shroud by mid-morning.

With the clearing of that corner of the state, Texans were faced with uniformly warm weather.

"Light and variable winds" in the 5 mph range on the South Plains this morning were expected to take a 5-10-mph southwesterly course this afternoon.

Temperatures early this morning ranged from the 60s in the eastern half of Texas to the 50s in West Texas and the lower 40s in parts of the Panhandle and Southwest Texas.

Morning readings included 47 degrees at Amarillo, 54 at Wichita Falls, 57 at Texarkana, 58 at Dallas-Fort Worth, 61 at Austin, 57 at Lufkin, 56 at Houston, 63 at Corpus Christi, 67 at McAllen, 60 at Del Rio, 58 at San Angelo, 48 at El Paso and 51 at Lubbock.

Border Patrol officers reiterated their opposition to any interference or "assistance" from the KKK.

Robert McCord, assistant chief patrol officer at the San Ysidro port of entry, said Tuesday that agents would react cautiously to any Klan contacts.

"We are concerned about getting our people caught in a dangerous situation," McCord said. "We don't want them walking into a trap."

Several Klan members embarking on their night-long vigil said they expected "little will be accomplished tonight. There are too many cameras, too many newsmen... too many lights."

Defense Clouds Key Testimony

a street light off the road near the mansion.

Burleson held up a plastic garbage sack recovered from within the mansion and asked Goheen if the bag he saw that night was similar to the one in evidence.

He said it was.

Goheen said he notified officers on his radio of his discovery of the plastic sack, and he said they came to the location and searched for a weapon. He said no weapon was found and he did not know what happened to the sack.

On cross-examination, prosecutor Marvin Collins asked him about his opinion that Miss Bass might have taken drugs.

"You can't say that for sure?" Collins asked.

"No sir," he replied.

"Did she tell you who shot him (Gavrel)?" Collins asked.

The defense objected and the trial judge ruled that the question was improper.

Hinting vaguely of a dramatic revelation, the defense called Goheen as its fifth witness in a campaign to convince the jury that someone other than Davis killed his young stepdaughter.

"There may be a development" at the conclusion of the defense case that will surprise you and that at this juncture is not foreseen," said chief defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes.

That was the provocative closing remark he dropped on the jury as the crafty Houston attorney unveiled defense strategy in Davis' capital murder trial.

The 44-year-old millionaire industrialist is on trial for the August 1976 slaying of Andrea Wilborn, 12, one of four gunshot victims at Davis' Fort Worth mansion.

The defendant's estranged wife Priscilla, 36, was wounded, her lover Stan Farr, 30, killed and Gavrel, 22, crippled in the gunfire.

Mrs. Davis, Gavrel and Gavrel's girlfriend Beverly Bass, 19, testified that Davis was the "man in black" who invaded the hilltop mansion and triggered the murderous assault.

Haynes told the jury Tuesday the defense will attempt to show that unsavory, angry creditors killed Farr, that Andrea was an "accidental victim" and that Mrs. Davis and Gavrel were not primary targets.

"Farr was the target of the assailants that night because of business connections with some persons whose collection techniques are not those used by the courts," Haynes said.

Haynes stopped short of pinpointing anyone as the proposed killer, but he said he intends to show the connection among "W.T. Rufner, Horace Copeland, Priscilla Davis, Stan Farr and one John Smith."

Rufner is a former boyfriend of Mrs. Davis, who, the evidence will show, once threatened to kill Farr and Mrs. Davis, Haynes said.

He said the defense will also demonstrate that Farr toted a pistol, not because he carried large sums of money from his nightclub, but because he feared Copeland, a shadowy Fort Worth figure who was shot to death last summer at an apartment occupied by a John Smith.

Haynes told the jury, "We will bring W.T. Rufner... we believe his bizarre behavior will be illuminating."

In his sweeping statement, Haynes contended prosecutors revealed only the "tip of the iceberg" and said the defense intends to show:

—Davis could not have been at the mansion at the time the survivors said the shootings occurred.

—Mrs. Davis knew of a pre-nuptial agreement with Davis and was aware she "couldn't get into his separate property, the family estate."

—The state selectively called only witnesses who would "support the prosecutorial theory."

AFL-CIO Raps Congressmen

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO, in a major shift of political tactics for the 1978 congressional elections, is planning to punish a number of one-time Democratic friends who voted against key labor issues this year.

"Why should we help someone who's going to put a knife in our members' backs?" said an official of the Committee on Political Education, the AFL-CIO's political arm.

Officials of the committee, known as COPE, say there are several tactics that may be used against their "former friends," including withholding support, running someone else in the primaries or endorsing acceptable Republicans.

COPE contributed about $3 million to House and Senate campaigns last year, most of it to Democrats. Of 28 candidates COPE endorsed for the Senate, 19 won.

In the House, it endorsed 362 candidates; 256 won.

The committee in the past has lent its support to candidates who shared the labor federation's general economic and social objectives.

Next year, it will focus more on specific labor issues and be more selective about the Democratic candidates it backs, according to one official.

But a top union political strategist said the new policy "shouldn't be a threat at all."

"We're in the business of politics because we expect protection and help, and when they don't give it, that's not the kind of guy we need in Congress," he said.

No specific names have been mentioned — "we don't have an official hit list," said one labor strategist — but officials say there are 30 to 40 congressmen the AFL-CIO helped last year who voted against issues that had labor's top priority.

These included legislation to overhaul the nation's labor laws to make it easier for unions to organize plus bills to increase the minimum wage, broaden picketing rights at construction sites, require that more foreign petroleum be carried aboard U.S.-flag ships and allow federal employees to participate in partisan politics.

The labor law bill passed the House after a bitter fight and the minimum wage measure passed both the House and Senate, but the picketing and cargo preference bills were defeated.

"We spread ourselves thin by taking on so many social causes, so that when it comes to specific labor issues, some of our friends in Congress don't see the difference," a union strategist said. "We're going to have to take a more parochial view next year and weigh votes on labor issues with a lot more care."

AFL-CIO endorsements are formally made by COPE's state and local affiliates, but generally follow recommendations made by the national leadership.

Sources said AFL-CIO President George Meany and Alexander Barkan, COPE's director, informed House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill of the approach to the upcoming campaign shortly before the House vote on the labor law bill, which passed by a 257-163 vote.

Hooper Verdict Overturned In Austin

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The conviction of Everett Joe Hooper in Lubbock County for resisting arrest was overturned Wednesday by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals, which sent the case back to district court for a new trial.

Although the appeals court said it had no transcript of the trial and that no briefs had been filed in behalf of Hooper, the court records indicated that Hooper was not represented by an attorney at his trial.

Noting that there is no indication that Hooper "made a knowing and intelligent waiver of counsel," the appeals court said the conviction and 90-day jail sentence must be reversed.

The appeals court upheld the following Lubbock County judgments:

— The conviction of Willie Pearl Thomas for misdemeanor theft. Thomas had been assessed a fine of $50;

— The three-day jail sentence and $100 fine assessed Natividad Villareal for driving while intoxicated;

— The driving while intoxicated conviction of Juan Galvan, who was assessed three days in jail and a fine of $150;

— The conviction of Joe Bruce Atkinson, fined $100 for carrying a handgun; and — Eulogio Martinez Guerrero's conviction for driving while intoxicated. Guerrero had been assessed 10 days in jail and a $200 fine.

The appeals court denied the appeals of Demesio Mendoza, revoking the Deal Smith County man's probation in five cases in which Mendoza had pleaded guilty to burglary of a motor vehicle. The sentence in each case was nine years in prison.

Court records indicate that Mendoza's probation was revoked upon allegations by Hereford police that he had been found publicly intoxicated.

Since then she has danced the leads in "Giselle," "Nutcracker" and "Spartacus," in which she premiered just last season.

Her husband, Vyacheslav Gordeyev, 29, is her partner in "Sleeping Beauty" as he was in "Spartacus."

Problems Attributed To Minority Law

By MIKE HENDRICKS
OGDENSBURG, N.Y. (AP) — Ed Skelly always has considered himself a white man, but he says he is thinking of using the bit of Indian blood in his background to get work.

Because of a 1977 amendment to the Public Works Employment Act, 10 percent of the work for local projects funded by a federal grant must be given to companies controlled by "Negroes, Hispanics, Orientals, Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts."

Skelly, a mechanical contractor, and other contractors in this rural area say there are not enough minority businessmen around.

"I might just say I am an Indian, and they can't prove otherwise. I could just sit back and rip them all off," said Skelly.

The federal requirement is needlessly pushing up costs on projects funded by a $4 billion local public works program, which is administered by the U.S. Department of Commerce, says one local contractor.

The contractor said that in order to qualify for bidding on the contracts, he went to a minority broker who had just opened his business and knew nothing of the contractor's needs, but charged the contractor 12 percent of the profit to provide the needed supplies.

U.S. Rep. Robert McEwen, R-N.Y., whose district covers much of the thinly populated upstate region across the St. Lawrence River from Canada, had tried to get the Ogdensburg area exempted from the 10 percent minority rule.

"There are just a few Oriental contractors in the North Country — or Aleuts or Eskimos or blacks," said Cary Brick, McEwen's executive assistant. "The specific problem ... is there are not any minority contractors up there. There are no minorities up there."

There are Indians in the area, Mohawks from the nearby St. Regis Indian Reservation. Many labor in the construction industry, but as workers building skyscrapers in New York City.

Court Upholds Denial Of Partnership

A-J Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The state Supreme Court today upheld the decision of a Lubbock County trial court in its denial of a partnership status to Alton R. Taylor in the management of The Lubbock Inn.

Taylor sought a judicial ruling that a partnership existed between him and H.C. Lewis in the running of the facility. He had sued for wages and benefits under a claimed agreement with Lewis, both individually and as the executor of Elaine Lewis' estate. Harold Chapman and Ray Chapman.

The Chapmans owned land in Lubbock on which contractor Lewis was to construct the inn, court papers said.

In ruling the partnership did not exist, the Supreme Court upheld both the Lubbock court and the Amarillo Court of Civil Appeals.

Ex-POW In Vietnam Retires From Navy

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Rear Adm. Jeremiah Denton Jr., senior member of the first large group of prisoners of war to return from North Vietnam in 1973, says he is retiring from the Navy.

Denton, 52, a Mobile native, said he will become executive assistant to the president of Spring Hill College, a Jesuit institution here.

Denton, a Navy flyer, was a POW between 1965 and 1973. He is remembered for his emotional "God Bless America" as he stepped off the first POW plane at Clark Air Force base in the Philippines, before a national television audience.

There is a possibility that this particular program will be dropped. If not, you may feel it is necessary to ask that your children be excused from the encounter group. If the matter is serious, you and other parents who share your concern should confront the school authorities.

Whether or not you are able to remove your children from this program, you should remember that you still have a responsibility to train your children in the way of Christ. No school system can replace the role of parents, especially in teaching about religion. We are told to teach our children "that they may learn, and fear the Lord your God, and observe to do all the words of this law: And that their children, which have not known any thing, may hear, and learn to fear the Lord your God" (Deuteronomy 31:12-13).

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Our grade school children are being subjected to a particular type of psychological group encounter process that, I believe, is anti-Christian. What do you think we should do about it?—Mrs. S. T. N.

DEAR MRS. N.: I am glad you're sensitive to what's happening in your children's classroom because we cannot automatically assume that everything will be helpful. As you try to be a responsible Christian parent, you should first be sure you have your facts straight and are not making judgments on incomplete evidence. You should feel free to ask about the content of any program that you think might be objectionable.

If the situation is as you believe, you may have several options available. See if

Jury Hears Testimony On Finances

A-J News Services
SEYMOUR — Testimony in the trial of former Childress cotton broker Vaughan B. Nowlin so far is focusing not only on an alleged worthless check his company gave a farmer, but also has developed into an in-depth look at his financial dealings.

Nowlin, 34, is a former financial wizard whose cotton company, at the height of his success, brokered between $40 million and $50 million worth of fiber a year.

He is being tried in 50th District Court here on charges he issued a check for $43,002.49 to Cottle County cotton farmer Prentiss Fields to pay for 187 bales of cotton though he did not have sufficient funds on deposit at the time.

A parade of witnesses Tuesday testified before the seven-man, five-woman jury on extension of bank credit to Nowlin, return of drafts issued by the Nowlin Company on two cotton firm accounts, returned checks issued to farmers, "missing" cotton warehouse receipts and reported "exchange" of some 577 Paducah receipts for other receipts as collateral on a bank draft.

Fields testified he sold his cotton to Mrs. Elva Curry, buyer and commission agent for Nowlin on March 5, 1976. He said three checks, including the one for $43,002.49 from the Nowlin Company, were returned.

Nowlin, who now lives in Durango, Colo., could face a two to 20-year prison term and a fine of up to $10,000 if convicted on the felony theft-by-check charge.

Twelve other such indictments are pending against Nowlin.

Allegations of wrongdoing leveled by area farmers against Nowlin first surfaced publicly in The Avalanche-Journal in March, 1976.

A flurry of legal activities were launched which saw Nowlin's affairs wind up in a federal bankruptcy court in Lubbock.

Thirty-nine Paducah area farmers filed a civil action against Nowlin, claiming his company failed to redeem checks totaling about $375,000 given them in exchange for warehouse receipts representing about 1,800 bales of cotton.

Banks in Lubbock and Childress filed involuntary bankruptcy petitions against the businessman, and Nowlin countered by filing his own voluntary petition. He failed, however, to come up with a plan for satisfying creditors.

Rest Missing On Schedule Of Prince

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prince Charles' 49-hour visit to Southern California has everything a dashing, well-read man of the world might desire — except, perhaps, time to rest.

The agenda for the 12th stop of the prince's 10-day visit to the United States includes watching the final test flight of the Space Shuttle Enterprise and touring the Jet Propulsion Laboratory — a special treat for a man who has piloted helicopters and jets in the Royal Navy.

Prince Charles, who also studied archeology, was to visit the La Brea Tar Pits, where dinosaurs were trapped and preserved eons ago.

Today's activities also included a speech, a ritual key-to-the-city ceremony and a charity evening for the prince, whose duties as Prince of Wales are mainly ceremonial.

And, for perhaps the world's most eligible bachelor, there are plenty of pretty girls.

One of them, John Wayne's 12-year-old blonde granddaughter, Josephine, presented Prince Charles with a brown sombrero Tuesday afternoon in an Old California-style welcome to Los Angeles.

He walked into his suite at the ornate Beverly Wilshire Hotel in Beverly Hills along a specially decorated "El Camino Real" — the King's Highway. The passage between the hotel's two sections was festooned with red roses and the flags of the two countries. Melodies from a mariachi band filled the 80-degree air. Eight young señoritas in Mission-era lace and long skirts curtsied as he walked along a red carpet.

Prince Charles arrived Tuesday from San Antonio. During a three-hour stay there, he toured the Alamo and ate a lunch of tamales, enchiladas, tacos and beans.

Council To Seek Fuel Cost Ideas

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock City Council at 1:15 p.m. Thursday will solicit citizen opinion about freezing fuel cost pass-throughs for electricity and natural gas at their current levels.

If council members, to meet in council chambers, halt the automatic feature of the cost adjustments, they probably will order utility companies that want to up the pass-through rate to submit justifying data by Tuesday, a city spokesman said.

A public hearing to consider rate increases would be held on Nov. 17, he added.

The city staff has made no recommendations on Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan's proposal to freeze pass-throughs, which would affect Lubbock Power and Light as well as Pioneer Natural Gas and Southwestern Public Service Co.

Council members several years ago approved automatic pass-throughs for the gas and electric companies and have never formally reviewed them. Mrs. Jordan claims the cost adjustments mean "de facto rate-making once a month" and says the council review would assure that the pass-throughs are justified.

At 2 p.m. the council will conduct a public hearing for an Urban Mass Transportation operating assistance grant for fiscal year 1976-77. The council then will decide whether to apply for $403,169, the amount of the transit system's operating losses for that year.

If the grant is approved, the money would be available in late January, a city spokesman said.

A request by Levi Strauss & Co. for permission to install two 1,000-gallon butane tanks at its plant here also will be considered.

The alternate fuel supply would be used if natural gas deliveries were curtailed, the company says. The Railroad Commission tentatively has approved the request subject to council approval.

Council members will consider an ordinance annexing about 158 acres of land bounded by Indiana Avenue, Memphis Avenue, 98th Street and 106th Street, including a 660-foot strip east of Indiana Avenue and a 150-foot strip west of Memphis Avenue.

The area lies within the Cooper Independent School District.

A law firm will request a street use license to allow the installation of an antique clock on the sidewalk at 1306 Broadway Street.

The 20-foot tall, four-sided clock would be bolted to the sidewalk about five feet from the curb. It originally stood before a bank in Mineral Wells and has been in Paducah for more than 50 years, a city spokesman said.

Restrictions on an airport limousine service will be considered in an amendment to the taxicab permit ordinance.

Because such a service is not covered in the ordinance and several persons have approached the council seeking permission for one, the municipal governing body earlier this month ordered an amendment drafted.

As proposed, the limousine service must apply to the Airport Board for a permit, operate only between the airport and sites specified in the permit and charge fares set by the board.

A Lubbockite's claim that the city owes him $265 for the loss of his dog will be heard.

Jay Lester of 1108 E. 54th St. contends that the animal shelter picked up his miniature Schnauzer and lost it. The shelter counters that it picked up a stray mongrel that appeared to be a long-haired chihuahua.

The animal, picked up on Aug. 15, was either lost or stolen from the shelter by Aug. 22. Lester wants the money to compensate for the dog, but the city attorney recommends his claim be denied because of the confusion about the dog's type and because he says negligence on the part of the city can't be proved.

Nursing Homes Lose Payments

AUSTIN (UPI) — State health officials moved this week to cut off state and federal payments to seven nursing homes and hold up Medicaid payments to three others.

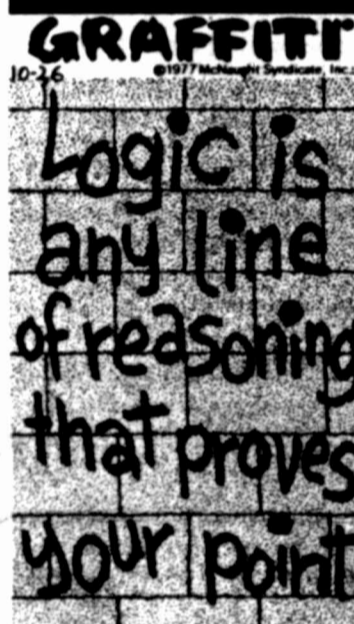

The State Health Department decertified Retama Manor Nursing Center of Brownsville, Retama Manor Nursing Center of Robstown, Belle Mt. Nursing Center of Austin, Harlingen Good Samaritan Center of Harlingen, Leisure Lodge of Lamesa, Leisure Lodge of Midland and Bryanwood Care Center of Amarillo. The health department recommended welfare authorities hold Medicaid payments for patients in Twinbrooke South of Benito, the Manor Retirement and Convalescent Center of Mexia and Oak Manor Nursing Home of Nacogdoches until those facilities correct deficiencies.

Governor's Office

Worth '33 Yards'

SEATTLE (AP) — Being governor is worth 33 yards at college football games, says former Gov. Dan Evans.

"I used to sit on the 50-yard line at University of Washington football games," Evans said in a recent interview. "Now I sit on the 17."

Tech Rodeo Kicks Off Today

Chutes slam open at 7:30 p.m. today on the best in college rodeo as a family bargain night launches the 31st edition of the Texas Tech Intercollegiate Rodeo.

Rodeo fans will pay $3 a seat for today's opening round of competition between cowboys and cowgirls and the tough rodeo stock of Harry Vold. With no seats reserved, early arrivals get the best seats in the house.

Competition for 15 colleges and universities in the Southwest Region of National Interscholastic Rodeo Association ends with the Saturday finale.

Traditionally a fast-paced rodeo, the 1977 Tech session will add a production angle to the arena action to give fans a little more for their money.

Warming up the crowd each night will be some horseback pomp and pageantry by spotlight performed by the Abernathy Riding Club, which has been practicing with the show producer, Stan Steen of Montana.

Also in town whooping up the Tech rodeo is a former competitor in NIRA from Tarleton State. Darrell Barron, who recently joined the U.S. Tobacco Co. rodeo promotion ranks which already contain Walt Garrison, a continuing favorite at any cowboy gathering, be it Dallas or otherwise.

Barron, come rodeo time, will be working behind the scenes to keep the arena action flowing. Siding with him will be Tech rodeo hands, against whom he once competed.

Kirk Taylor, a junior agriculture-education major from Lubbock, will leave the chute on the hurricane deck of a bareback bronc in the opening round today, then be around to help with the stock end for other performances.

Taylor was a senior in high school before he tried out bareback broncs one Sunday during a buckout at Dub Parks Arena.

Armed only with a few pointers from friends, Taylor lost the contest, but undaunted and completely won by the sport went back for more. He finds the thrill of competition where "you have to have everything together to get aboard" a new way of life he'd like to carry into the teaching field.

Dusty Johnston of Shamrock, also an aged major on the junior level, usually makes the rodeo scene as a bullrider, but this week the member of the Tech rodeo board will be working up a good head of steam behind the chutes, lining up the roping calves, getting stock to the bucking chute and undertaking dozens of other activities involved with the production of a fast rodeo.

Johnston got on his first bucking bull at the age of 14, the time he persuaded his mother to let him try out all the things he had learned with the bucking barrel he and all the other youngsters had been riding for years.

About that time, "it was a big deal to be a cowboy" in Shamrock, and the youngsters did what the cowboys did, starting with the barrel.

He "bucked off" that first bull in the high school rodeo, but it didn't keep him off the next one coming his way in the next rodeo.

Settling down on a big bull's back, he doesn't think of the damage the bull could do him. His concern is for the way the bull might buck and whether he has everything, including his rigging, right when the chute gate swings open.

Bull riding will top off each performance as usual, with Bob Romer of Canyon clowning around while keeping the bulls off downed cowboys.

The Francisco Zamora trick roping and trained Spanish liberty horse acts will fill the entertainment spots along with a special "Introduction of the Bull" which features a classic example of the Brahma bull.

Tickets Thursday through Saturday will be $5.50, $4.50 and $3.50 with $1 off for those 12 and under.

The 1977 Tech rodeo is the first of three annual events which will be produced by Vold to help the Tech rodeo over a financial bind.

Tech will receive a percentage of the attendance take regardless of Vold's output and will get all funds from program sales as well as arena advertising.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: We are a retired couple living next door to a very nice elderly woman who recently lost her husband.

I remarked to my husband yesterday, "That little widow seems to be getting so thin and frail lately. I suppose living alone as she does, she doesn't bother to cook for herself. Perhaps when I make something special, I should take some over to her."

My husband surprised me with the following observation: "Heavens no. That would give her the notion that we think she's not able to look after herself."

Abby, that notion never crossed my mind. Do you think my husband is right?

Dear Neighbor: You are. But people who live alone miss much more than food. They miss companionship. If you feel generous, do something for the widow's spirit as well as her stomach. Invite her to join you sometime. The simplest meal with company will be more appreciated than the finest delicacy alone.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 15 year old girl. I met a boy the other night at a party. We go to the same school. We liked each other right away, and before I knew it, we were in the bedroom making out. (Nothing serious happened.) There were about 10 other kids there, including some football players from our high school.

This boy is a key club member and is neat up at school. Abby, whenever I see him in the hall now, he doesn't even speak to me. You would think he never saw me before. This has me confused. What's wrong with him? Or is it me?

Mixed-Up

Dear Mixed-Up: You were foolish to "make out" with a boy you had just met at a party. He either (a) is ashamed of himself, (b) doesn't want anyone to know he knows you, or (c) doesn't recognize you in the light.

DEAR ABBY: I am sure other wives of traveling men have this same problem. When my husband is out of town, a long distance call will come in for him. The operator asks, "Is Mr. So-and-So home?" I say, "No, he isn't." She asks, "When do you expect him?" I say, "Not until next Friday." She asks, "Where can he be reached?" I reply, "I don't know. He's on the road now."

Halloween Carnivals Planned By Schools

With Halloween just around the corner, many Lubbock schools are sponsoring carnivals as alternatives to traditional "trick or treat" activities.

On Thursday P.F. Brown Elementary School, at 2315 36th St., will sponsor a carnival with food served in the cafeteria from 5:30-9 p.m. and room activities and contests from 6-9 p.m. Activities will include a crafts bazaar and a spook house. Tickets for the room contests will be 15 cents each or seven for $1.

The annual Halloween Carnival of Wheelock Elementary School will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday at the school at 3008 42nd St. Supper will be served during the carnival.

Balinger Elementary School P-TA is sponsoring a carnival at the school, 1110 40th, Thursday. Food will be served in the gym beginning at 6 p.m., with carnival activities from 7-9 p.m.

The P-TA of Haynes Elementary School will sponsor a Halloween carnival Monday at the school, 3802 60th, from 5:30-9 p.m., instead of its regular meeting.

Well, Abby, as you can see, it could be someone right around the corner, trying to find out if I'm home alone, and how long I will be alone. With the crime rate so high, shouldn't something be done about this? Maybe someone at the telephone company has the answer.

Alone

Dear Alone: When someone calls for your husband and he is out of the city, you need only ask, without revealing that your husband is out of town, "Who is calling Mr. So-and-So, please?"

If you don't recognize the name, say, "If your party will leave his name and operator's number, I will have Mr. So-and-So return his call." That way you disclose no information whatsoever.

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

The first and only time I was on a ski slope, I had the attention of every person within a two-mile radius.

It could have been my color-coordinated pants and jacket.

It could have been by oversized goggles.

It could have been by knitted cap with the signature of a leading skier on it.

My husband seemed to think it was because I was the only woman on skis carrying a handbag. I can't help it. Do men actually believe women enjoy lugging around a handbag everywhere they go? By the time everyone in the family unloads their stuff on me, I feel like an anvil salesman.

I don't know when it all started, but somewhere in history someone decided women were the keeper of the nose tissue, fingernail clippers, breath sprays, band aids, change for restrooms, pins, hair spray, sticks for chapped lips, road maps, combs and scratch pads. I never see a film clip of Queen Elizabeth with that large handbag slung over her arm that I don't half expect to see Prince Phillip lean forward and say, "Got any gum, Ducky?"

History was kinder to its women than they are nowadays. Did you see Joan of Arc carrying a Gucci to war? Did Pocahontas lug around a pouch to match her moccasins? And I don't know where Lady Godiva carried her credit cards, but it wasn't in a handbag. I would have noticed.

Believe me, there is nothing that detracts from a woman's aura of mystery and intrigue like wearing a black suede over-the-shoulder bag with a pale blue bathing suit.

I think it's time we women stopped carrying supplies for the entire family. If children don't have room to carry their own toys, if men don't have pockets in their pants, tough.

Things are clearly out of control. I didn't mind rummaging through my bag for the ring at the wedding ceremony. I didn't raise my voice when I went to surgery with a tote bag over my chest. But the other day, I realized things had gone too far. My husband said, "These Life Savers are stuck together. Where did you have them?"

"When I went to the sauna..."
"You didn't!"

BULGUR STUFFING

- 1 cup fine bulgur (cracked wheat)
- 2 chicken bouillon cubes dissolved in 2 cups boiling water
- ¼ cup olive oil
- 1 small onion, finely chopped (¼ to 1/3 cup)
- 2 ribs celery, finely chopped (¾ cup)
- ¼ cup dried currants
- ½ tsp salt
- ¼ tsp pepper

Gently boil the bulgur in the bouillon, covered, until it is soft and the water absorbed — about 10 minutes. In the oil, gently cook the onion and celery until the onion is golden. Mix with the bulgur, currants, salt and pepper. Use as a stuffing for a 4-lb. roasting chicken. Roast stuffed chicken.

SOFT BODY CLOTHES — The alternative to pants this fall is the soft, feminine dress look. California designer Wayne Rogers shows this feminine style in a v-neck blouson sweater with very full sleeves, meant to be worn with a soft dirndl skirt. The fabric is a luxurious blend of angora, wool and nylon.

Thai Guerrillas Create Problems For Mines

By PAUL WEDEL
 NAKORN SI THAMMARAT, Thailand (UPI) — Southern Thailand is a treasure trove of valuable minerals guarded by thick jungle, communist guerrillas, corrupt local officials and warlords.

Jungled limestone hills south of Bangkok already produce tin, barite, coal, iron, gypsum and tungsten, but mining experts estimate 95 percent of the hill country remains unexplored.

The mines struggle with a host of problems just to remain open.

The most remote and potentially most productive mines in three provinces of the south were quietly closed five months ago at the request of the Thai military. Another Communist suppression campaign was beginning.

The military wanted to clear the back country for air strikes and artillery barrages. And despite Thai worries about the effect on foreign investment, the mines are still closed.

Those still open often must reach an agreement with guerrillas who operate in their areas. Miners exchange rice and sometimes money for the right to work in peace.

During last summer's joint Malaysian-Thai communist suppression operation in the frontier provinces, Malaysian soldiers claimed credit for destroying a "Communist tin mine."

Local sources, however, report the mine operators were Thais forced to cooperate with the Communists. Mine owners now are claiming damages from the Malaysian government.

Other mines operate in areas traditionally dominated by local "men of influence" — petty warlords with groups of well-armed followers. In some cases, these men have even been given government titles and salaries to legitimize their power.

One company which has six mines in the area simply puts the local warlords on salary. If any special action is required, further payments are then negotiated.

But the payoffs are no guarantee of peaceful operation. Last year an Australian mining company had its ore trucks shot up. A local tough demanded protection money. The police refused to take action.

The manager of the company complained to a high provincial official. The official told him, "You're a big boy now — have the man killed."

Business in the lawless south can be rough, but mining is especially so.

Last month a British mine manager fired an unruly employe. The man gathered some friends and came back to the mine with M16 rifles and hand grenades.

After driving mine guards and workers into the jungle with a hail of bullets they doused the manager's car with gasoline and set it ablaze. The manager escaped a similar fate only by hiding deep in the mine.

Lawless local people are not the only obstacle, however.

The Thai bureaucracy contains pitfalls only money can avoid.

Miners say they must pick their way through a jungle of bureaucratic restrictions before even opening a mine.

Once the mine is operating, the violation of some forgotten regulation or the failure to get necessary permission for some minor action can close down the whole operation.

Even the legitimate cut going to the Thai government has increased. In July the government increased royalties on tin from 25 percent to 32 percent and adopted a sliding scale which will send taxes higher as the tin price rises. Other minerals are less heavily taxed.

The soaring prices of minerals on the world market, however, makes it all worthwhile.

The price of tin, especially, has been booming. In the first six months of 1977 prices averaged 44 percent higher than the same period last year, according to Bangkok Bank figures.

As other mineral resources become scarce, the potential of southern Thailand's jungles hills will become more attractive despite the difficulties.

A mining expert in the area said price rises will make many known deposits commercially feasible and new deposits are just waiting to be found.

But the deposits, he said, "will be found only by hard slogging on foot through the jungles. Aerial exploration isn't possible because the veins are small. Right now the security problem makes that impossible, but I'm sure it's there just waiting for whoever takes the risk."

System Provides Help For Convict Mothers

By ELLEN L. SLOTT
 NORRISTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Faye Butler, a former drug addict and convicted armed robber, has accomplished more while in prison than she ever did as a free woman.

While incarcerated, the 33-year-old mother overcame a drug habit, completed courses necessary for a high school diploma and clothed, fed and raised her three young children.

Her seven-month term was spent in a tidy, semi-detached house in the center of this Philadelphia suburb. The home, called Cluster House II, provides a residential facility for adult women offenders and their children. A second nearby dwelling, Cluster House I, operates similarly for single female offenders.

"I feel pretty good since I've been at this place," Miss Butler said while slicing potatoes and carrots for a cool summer salad. "I worked out a lot of things I wouldn't have in a prison."

"I took high school equivalency courses and I'm going to take the G.E.D. (graduate equivalency diploma exam)," she added emphatically. "I've been getting pretty good marks so I think I'm ready."

At first, Miss Butler protested when the judge remanded her to the Cluster House.

"I knew about halfway houses," she said. "When they told me I was coming to Cluster House in Norristown, I didn't want to come. I hadn't even heard of Norristown."

"You know what I expected?" she asked, then interrupted her thoughts to yell at her 9-year-old son swimming in a backyard plastic pool. "I expected locks."

"There are no locks," stressed Robert E. Greene, Executive Director of Cluster House. "In four years only three or four out of 60 escaped. They did not take off because they committed new offenses. They took off because they weren't ready for this type of situation."

Greene, 29, said he and his staff make no pretense of offering secure facilities because they "don't have to and we've never had to."

"A jail on the street would serve no purpose," he said. "Prison is disillusioning. The basic question is what does society want. Do you want to punish — which I understand — or do you want 60 women coming back with more responsibility than when they left."

"If I have 60 women here in four years who have not gotten rearrested," he said, "then I've protected society more than any prison."

A woman may be committed to Cluster House as an alternative to serving a prison term. She also may be sent there for the last three to six months of her sentence as a way of easing her re-entry into society.

Cluster House I, which was begun in 1973 by the Main Line Cluster for Justice, can accommodate up to eight women and Cluster House II, founded in August, 1976, has room for six women and 12 children. Both homes are staffed by a live-in resident manager and a director.

A Cluster House resident is required to either find employment or enroll in a job training program, tend to her children, clean the room she shares with them, do assigned household chores and undergo mandatory in-house therapy each week.

"As they accept more and more responsibility they move up on the ladder and are allowed more privileges to the point where they might be able to go home for the weekend," Greene said.

"The reality is that they come and go as they please during the day so if they want to get into trouble they don't have to look too far."

Cluster House is funded through the Governor's Justice Commission by a grant from the Federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and $60 a month per diem payments from each resident and $20 a month for each child.

Because of the low rents, Miss Butler finds it difficult to leave.

"I don't know of any place where me and the kids can stay cheaper," she said.

Nomination Of 'Independent' Creates Minor Stir

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republicans are unhappy with President Carter's definition of a political independent. The minor flap occurred when Carter submitted his nominees for the five-member Federal Energy Regulatory Commission in the new Department of Energy. The agency replaces the Federal Power Commission.

The legislation creating the Department of Energy specified that "no more than three members of the commission shall be members of the same political party."

Carter sent the Senate the names of three Democrats, one Republican and Charles Curtis, whose voter registration lists him as an independent.

The nominations require Senate confirmation and Republicans on the Energy Committee cried foul when they saw Curtis' name.

They noted that not only had Curtis spent five years employed as counsel to the Democrats on the House Commerce Committee, but he also supported Carter's presidential candidacy and was a coordinator in the Carter transition office.

"Mr. Curtis has been very active in Democratic affairs," said Sen. Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore. "Let's face it, his commitment is to the Carter administration."

And Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., said, "It is questionable that the nomination of Mr. Curtis as an 'independent' meets with the spirit of the act."

However, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., chairman of the Energy Committee, noted that before he registered as an independent, Curtis was a Republican.

The committee finally voted unanimously to endorse all five nominees, including Curtis.

During debate on a bill to raise from 65 to 70 the age at which corporations may force employees to retire, the question turned to whether teachers should be included among those covered by the bill. This prompted a discussion of academic tenure. Once a professor is granted tenure he cannot be dismissed except for cause.

During that discussion, Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., offered this nugget from the history of Harvard University:

"I understand that in the history of Harvard, 300 years-plus, there has never been a professor let go for cause, even though one did murder his wife and did go to the electric chair with his tenure still intact."

It took two large cartons to hold the news releases Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., sent to the press gallery. Attached to each release was a copy of a letter Dole had sent to every member of the Senate, asking them to "join me in observing the National Day of Bread... We are delivering a loaf of bread to you and your staff."

compliments of the wheat growers, millers and bakers....

The two cartons delivered to reporters were filled with loaves of bread.

President Carter is lobbying hard for votes for the Panama Canal treaties. He was delighted to get the support of former President Gerald R. Ford, the man he defeated in the 1976 presidential election.

But apparently, Carter thinks Sen. Dole still is Ford's vice presidential running mate and obligated to support the stands taken by Ford.

Dole recently received a telephone call from Carter, who said he wanted to congratulate the senator for his courageous stand on the treaties.

Dole is one of the most outspoken opponents of the treaties in their present form.

A statistic you might have missed if you don't read Sen. Gaylord Nelson's newsletter: There are slightly more than one billion acres of farmland in the United States.

The Wisconsin Democrat did some long division and said that comes to about five acres for every person in the United States. And for those who wonder just how much ground is five acres, Nelson points out that a football field is slightly larger than one acre.

If you have no idea of the size of a football field, you're out of luck.

Maine Group Says Muskie Aids Project

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The Maine Natural Resources Council, which opposes the Dickey-Lincoln hydroelectric project, says Sen. Edmund S. Muskie's support of the controversial $600 million dam is a "disappointment," but not "a major setback."

Muskie, in a interview during the weekend, said the project would help meet New England's future energy needs while creating badly needed jobs in northern Maine. He accused environmentalists of being "against every form of energy that has been suggested."

"That could not possibly be true," Christian Herter III, executive director of the council said this week.

"With regard to nuclear power, the council does not classify itself as an opponent," said Herter, who is the son of the late U.S. Secretary of State and Massachusetts Gov. Christian A. Herter.

"Nuclear power is with us, and future development may be a necessity to meet valid energy needs. We do have questions about nuclear safety, particularly about means by which high-level radioactive wastes can be stored."

Ad Hoc Committee Recommends Closing City Jail

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

For economic and other reasons, the City of Lubbock jail should be closed as soon as possible, with all prisoners booked directly into the Lubbock County Jail, an ad hoc committee of municipal and county officials said Tuesday.

"The committee is of the unanimous opinion that there should be one and only one jail facility to serve all of the law enforcement agencies and governmental entities in Lubbock County, and that that facility should be the Lubbock County Jail," Criminal Dist. Atty. Alton Griffin, chairman of the panel, said.

"We believe that the consolidation of the function of detaining will result in the most efficient and effective use of tax dollars for all the citizens of Lubbock County," Griffin added.

Left unresolved by the committee was whether the county should expect or could require compensation from the city for accommodating prisoners displaced by the proposed shutdown of the municipal lockup.

The group said that issue still must be addressed by the Lubbock County Commissioners Court and the Lubbock City Council.

"There are a number of financial considerations that must be thoroughly studied prior to any recommendation concerning the apportionment of operating costs," the panel's report, presented to commissioners Tuesday by Griffin, said.

"The committee recommends that all financial considerations...be studied in detail by a committee appointed by the city and county. This committee could then make recommendations concerning a mutually satisfactory financial arrangement," the document said.

The county commissioners court voted unanimously to accept the report and "proceed with the city council in working out details" of financing a city-county jail.

Members of the ad hoc committee were Griffin, Sheriff C.H. "Choc" Blanchard, City Atty. Fred Senter and Police Chief J.T. Alley.

The committee was appointed Sept. 22 during a joint meeting of the commissioners court and city council.

The idea of merging the city and county jails has been in the mill for several years. Recent attention to the proposal was prompted by the county's plans to build a $3.6 million, 330-inmate detention complex downtown to replace the existing county jail.

The new facilities, to be financed by federal revenue-sharing funds, are expected to be completed by early 1980.

Griffin's committee said, however, that the city and county should not wait for the new facility to effect a jail merger.

Through an immediate jail merger, Griffin told commissioners, "A lot of the bugs could be worked out of the system prior to moving into a new facility."

He said the operation of two local jails here necessitates "far too much duplication of effort" by the Lubbock Police Department and the Lubbock County Sheriff's Department.

Last year, Griffin said, 2,000 prisoners were booked into the municipal jail, only to be transferred a day or two later to the county jail. Such transfers require manpower and repeated book-in procedures, he said.

Griffin's committee suggested that "to facilitate the consolidation of the jail function, a consolidated book-in procedure, mutually agreeable to the sheriff and chief of police, be established to eliminate any duplication..."

"It is further recommended that duplicates of all records pertaining to the arrest and booking of the criminals be provided to both agencies."

Griffin said the county may not be able to require the city to pay for county jail accommodations, since most prisoners arrested by the police department are charged with violation of state laws and thus must be admitted to the county lockup.

However, Griffin said, the county would realize some additional revenues if, as the committee recommends, "all arrests made by the City of Lubbock police for Class C misdemeanors involving violations of state law are filed in the appropriate Justice of the Peace court."

Such cases now are filed in municipal court, and fines paid by the defendants are collected by the city, not the county.

County Agrees To Renew Fire Cost Talks

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County commissioners agreed Tuesday to reopen negotiations with disgruntled volunteer fire fighters on how much county support the departments should get for providing fire protection to unincorporated areas.

Commissioners said they may increase the county's contribution for rural fire service if the volunteer fire departments can document the claim that they need more money.

The commissioners court voted to invite the mayors and fire chiefs of Slaton, Wolforth, Shallowater, New Deal, Abernathy and Idalou to the court's next meeting on Nov. 14 to discuss the dispute.

Commissioners said they want to "analyze the operating budgets" of the six smalltown fire departments in an attempt to "come to some mutual agreement" on the size of the county's rural fire service subsidy.

Currently the county pays each department $275 for answering a call outside the volunteer unit's municipal jurisdiction. But in balancing their 1978 budget, commissioners trimmed that contribution to $200 per call for next year.

The county's small cities and their fire departments have petitioned for renegotiation, saying even the $275 subsidy is too small.

"From an economic standpoint, the volunteer fire departments of Lubbock County find it not feasible to answer rural fire calls outside the corporate limits of their respective cities for an amount less than $300 per call," they said in a letter to commissioners.

Commissioner Jim Lancaster said he is confident "we will find a solution" to the problem. He said the commissioners court "may have been a little hasty" in cutting the fire call contribution during summer budget discussions.

"We asked for a response and we got it," remarked Commissioner Coy Biggs, a longtime volunteer with the Slaton department. He agreed with Lancaster that an increase in the fire service subsidy may be justified after an inspection of the departments' budgets.

County Judge Rod Shaw noted that in their letter, the fire-fighters and their sponsoring cities spoke of inflationary increases in the cost of protecting rural areas. What the commissioners court needs, Shaw said, are "some specifics" on the finances of individual departments.

Some of the fire departments say they may have to limit their runs or reduce their rural service areas if they cannot get adequate reimbursement from the county.

In a related development Tuesday, commissioners received a list of other "possible solutions to the current fire protection difficulties," drafted by Weldon McKinney, Idalou fire marshal, and Tim Ward, captain of the Idalou department and former fire chief and marshal.

McKinney and Ward said their list represents a "radical departure from previous thinking."

But at the same time, we feel this is a most workable solution."

They suggested that: —The Abernathy, Idalou, Slaton, Wolforth and Shallowater fire units be designated as city-county fire departments, "responsible to both their respective cities and the County of Lubbock."

This would strengthen the partnership between the county and the cities, and give the county some say-so over the departments.

"Equal but separate budgets be set for each rural fire department by a governing board composed of the Lubbock County commissioners and one city councilman from each of the five rural municipalities."

Man Charged With Murder

A 60-year-old Lubbock man was charged Tuesday with murder as the result of a shooting Sunday at a 13th Street cafe.

Named in the charge was Alfredo Machado, a truck driver who listed his address as Rt. 10, Box 165. The Criminal District Attorney's Office recommended a $2,500 bond.

The victim of the shooting, Domingo S. Juarez of 3505 E. 19th St., was dead on arrival at Methodist Hospital shortly after being shot at the 616 13th St. establishment.

The incident reportedly occurred about 5:40 p.m. Police said they arrived to find Juarez, 38, sitting on the cafe's kitchen floor. But, they said, he fell backward before he could be questioned and was taken to the hospital.

Witnesses told police a suspect had gone into the cafe and found Juarez sitting in a booth. As the man walked past, witnesses indicated, he turned, pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired three or four times.

Police officer Michael Holder said he saw Machado standing on a nearby street corner after the shooting and arrested him without incident.

Reports indicated a .25-caliber automatic pistol was confiscated as evidence.

United Way To Hear Report

United Way officials are anxiously awaiting the third report meeting of the 1977 campaign scheduled at noon Thursday in the Civic Center banquet hall.

"We know that every report meeting from first to last is critical," campaign manager Owen Gilbreath said, "but this one has the campaign cabinet jittery. We must be high enough in percentage to be within striking distance of our goal for the final report meeting."

THEATER MANAGER

Laura Keene, producer of "Our American Cousins" at the Ford Theater in Washington the night that Lincoln was assassinated, was the first woman to be a manager in the American theater.

Campaign volunteers, at the second report meeting on Oct. 17, brought in a record 76 percent of the $1.4 million goal allocated to operate 32 community service agencies in 1978. With several divisions already over the top, victory results depend upon the success of those campaign divisions still incomplete, Gilbreath said.

Entertainment for Thursday's report meeting will be presented by organist Betty Tolley's Texas Tech "fun machine" class Red Raider football representatives scheduled to perform include Wilbert Cunningham, James Hadnot, Billy Taylor, Andy Thomas, Curtis Reed, Mike Keeney, Craig Harris, Freddie Taylor, Sam Bailey, Dan Irons, Mark Julian and Howie Lewis.

Mrs. Tolley will provide luncheon music, as she has done for every report meeting for 10 years.

Members of the United Way Speakers' Bureau will be introduced and honored at the meeting. To date, the 42 members of the speakers' group have presented 155 United Way talks before employee groups and organizations.

Divisions in the campaign which already have reached or exceeded quotas include Pacesetter, Professional, Federal and City of Lubbock. Chairman Gilbreath is hopeful that others of the remaining nine will reach that status Thursday.

A DAILY MESSAGE FROM

The Newspaper Bible.

1 John 2: 25-28, 3: 1-7, The Living Bible

25 And He Himself has promised us this: eternal life.

26 These remarks of mine about the Antichrist are pointed at those who would dearly love to blindfold you and lead you astray.

27 But you have received the Holy Spirit and He lives within you, in your hearts, so that you don't need anyone to teach you what is right. For He teaches you all things, and He is the Truth, and no liar; and so, just as He has said, you must live in Christ, never to depart from Him.

28 And now, my little children, stay in happy fellowship with the Lord so that when He comes you will be sure that all is well, and will not have to be ashamed and shrink back from meeting Him.

29 Since we know that God is always good and does only right, we may rightly assume that all those who do right are His children.

CHAPTER 3

I See how very much our heavenly Father loves us, for He allows us to be called His children—think of it—and we really are! But since most people don't know God, naturally they don't understand that we are His children.

2 Yes, dear friends, we are already God's children, right now, and we can't even imagine what it is going to be like later on. But we do know this, that when He comes we will be like Him, as a result of seeing Him as He really is.

3 And everyone who really believes this will try to stay pure because Christ is pure.

4 But those who keep on sinning are against God, for every sin is done against the will of God.

5 And you know that He became a man so that He could take away our sins, and that there is no sin in Him, no missing of God's will at any time in any way.

6 So if we stay close to Him, obedient to Him, we won't be sinning either; but as for those who keep on sinning, they should realize this: they sin because they have never really known Him or become His.

7 Oh, dear children, don't let anyone deceive you about this: if you are constantly doing what is good, it is because you are good, even as He is.

Wichita Officials Fail To Solve Controversy

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Wichita County commissioners and County Treasurer Helen Kollman will try again next week to reach an agreement over her refusal to authorize payment of a refund to a state agency.

District Gets Warrant For $4 Million

The Lubbock County Hospital District made a $4 million bond deposit Tuesday, and district officials will hold a reception later this week to thank state legislators for appropriating the money for the county's Health Sciences Center Hospital.

A spokesman for the hospital district said the reception will be held at 10:30 a.m. Thursday in the Lubbock National Bank conference room.

A $4 million warrant from the state treasury, the first half of an $8 million appropriation for the start-up of the new Lubbock teaching hospital, was received by the district late Tuesday, the spokesman said.

He said the money was deposited at Lubbock National Bank.

J.C. Rickman, chairman of the hospital district's board of managers, said the deposit was made without delay because the money will earn the district about $1,000 a day in interest.

"It's not every day that somebody makes a $4 million deposit," Rickman noted. He said Thursday's reception is planned to "recognize the people who made this all possible."

The $4 million in state funds appropriated for fiscal year 1978, and approved for disbursement just last week, will defray start-up and teaching costs at the new 245-bed hospital. The hospital will serve in the training program of the Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

The appropriation was the first such assistance granted by the state legislature.

Sergeant-At-Arms Gets Realty Post

AUSTIN (AP) — Tommy Townsend, Texas Senate sergeant-at-arms since 1970, was named Tuesday as assistant director of public affairs for the Texas Association of Realtors, effective Nov. 3.

Townsend will replace Mark Hanna, Austin attorney, who recently returned to private law practice.

Townsend, a native of Paris, is a graduate of the University of Texas.

Sen. A.M. Aikin, D-Paris, dean of the Senate, appointed a selection committee to make recommendations for replacing Townsend as sergeant-at-arms. Members of the committee are Sens. Bill Moore, D-Bryan, chairman; Chet Brooks, D-Pasadena; Don Adams, D-Jasper; Pete Snelson, D-Midland, and Tom Creighton, D-Mineral Wells.

The committee's recommendation will go to the Senate Administration Committee which will appoint an acting sergeant-at-arms until the next Senate caucus when the legislature is next in session.

British Police Free Of Politics

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

To most Americans, the major difference between British and American policemen is in the guns they each carry. British policemen, for the most part, don't.

However, the former head of the London Metropolitan Police (of which Scotland Yard is headquarters) said here Tuesday the differences between the U.S. and British criminal and justice systems go much further than merely guns.

"We have no district attorneys, none of our judges are elected, and the police do the prosecuting of criminals," Sir Robert Mark told an audience at Texas Tech Tuesday night.

"As a result, the judicial process in England is free of political influence and the British policeman is totally free of political interference.

"The task of the politician in the judicial process ends with the making of the law. The quickest way for political death in Britain is for a politician to interfere with the judicial system," he added.

Unlike America, which Mark called an "armed society" by tradition, culture and history, Britain allows its citizens very few guns.

Out of 50 million British, only 180,000 have certificates to carry firearms, Mark said. The unlawful possession of even a single bullet, the former police official said, was an arrestable offense in England.

And the lack of firearms is reflected in England's crime statistics.

"There were 565 murders in England last year, about two-thirds of the number killed in Detroit alone," Mark said. "An average of one to two British policemen are killed annually, and in the past 32 years British Service police have killed only four civilians."

Mark said he does not intend to criticize the American police force or justice system. "After all, (England's) system is not perfect."

And Mark should know. He orchestrated one of the most widely publicized and controversial police reform campaigns in the history of Scotland Yard.

When Mark took over in 1972, Scotland Yard was being rocked by a series of earlier probes that revealed corruption and scandal in the police organization's top investigative division.

Detectives were being accused of accepting bribes and cultivating too close relationships with the criminals they were supposedly keeping an eye on.

Mark set about reforming the police force in a series of moves which included setting up a new branch, known as A10, under which both uniformed and plainclothes policemen could be investigated for misdeeds.

Corrupt detectives were brought to trial as a result of the Mark clean-up campaign, and nearly 200 officers were dismissed.

Retired now from the force, Mark says corruption is always a risk in any police force. "And if you can't prevent it, you've got to catch up and deal with it."

He said police corruption usually begins from one of three sources.

The first source is the detective who doesn't believe in the system of justice and bends the rules to achieve the conviction of someone he believes is guilty, Mark said. "He thinks he's justified in bending the rules — that his motives are honorable, but they really aren't."

The second source is when a policeman bends the rules "for personal profit," such as accepting bribes or engaging in extortion, and the third source is the special detective who is working on a big time operation such as pornography.

Mark called the British police "the most highly accountable police force in the world," saying they were the only force to allow a reporter in the anti-corruption unit for two weeks with no restrictions on what he could see or read.

Railroad Plan Hearing Slated In Lubbock

A-J News Services

AUSTIN — Texas Railroad Commission officials will be in Lubbock Friday to get public comment on the formulation of a two-year study of Texas railroad lines, including railroad line abandonment.

The public hearing will begin at 9:45 a.m. in rooms 111 and 112 in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

At the first such forum in Austin Tuesday, a Railroad Commission official said he hopes the study will help avert disasters like recent ones in the Midwest and Northeast.

James Cowden, director of the transportation division, also assured a South Texas legislator that the economic impact of halting rail service will be one of the major issues that will be studied.

"We want to anticipate rail freight service problems and examine the economic, environmental and social conditions associated with proposed rail line abandonments," Cowden said.

The first public forum was conducted by the commission and members of the research group, Arthur D. Little Inc., which was selected to compile the Texas Railroad Plan.

The plan will be Texas' first comprehensive study of rail freight lines, Cowden said. It was made possible through a $1.5 million grant from the Federal Railroad Administration.

In Texas, Cowden said, railroads have asked to abandon approximately 1,000 miles of rail line. One of the pending requests for abandonment includes a Southern Pacific rail line stretching through Hidalgo, Brooks and Jim Wells counties in South Texas.

"I'm concerned about whether or not to make it public policy to stem (railroad) emigration from rural areas to the big cities," said Rep. Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice. Her district includes Brooks and Jim Wells counties.

Clark said he issued the original directive on the advice of the district's lawyer, Richard Peebles, in connection with an eight-month-old lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) on behalf of Ruth Johnson.

The woman claims Christian activities in Baytown public schools violate her parental right to determine her children's religious training.

"The legal position taken by me and the district's attorney was not based on emotion," Clark said, adding that he favors the board's decision.

Peebles said he considered one portion of the suit dangerous as it affects the action taken by the board.

Christie Reports $81,000 In Funds

AUSTIN (UPI) — Campaign officials for Joe Christie say they have raised $81,000 for his race for the Senate seat now held by Sen. John Tower, R-Tex.

"Virtually all of these funds were raised at a dinner held by the (Christie) Committee in my behalf last week," Christie said. "Based on that night's results and the support I have had for my candidacy, I feel we face no major problems in running an adequately funded race that will defeat my primary opponent and unseat Sen. Tower."

Jurors Hear Deposition By Student

PALESTINE (AP) — A University of Texas graduate student has testified by deposition that 3rd Judicial District Attorney Bill Green initiated a homosexual act that led to the arrest of both men in January in an Austin adult bookstore.

Attorneys read parts of a sealed deposition Tuesday by Mark Edmond Webb to jurors hearing a disbarment suit against Green by the District 20 Grievance Committee of the State Bar of Texas.

Testimony was to continue today. Green and Webb were arrested in a peep show booth. Green was convicted earlier this year of public lewdness in connection with the incident.

Webb, who said he has been a homosexual for five years, claimed he did not go to the bookstore with the intention of meeting anyone. He added that he did not invite Green into the booth where he was watching a movie, "but I did not reject him."

An Austin policeman testified earlier Tuesday that Green's arrest was not "planned."

"An arrest can't be planned," said Sgt. James Belvin, one of several officers who raided the Mr. Peep's shop late on the night of Jan. 17. "You can go to a place to see if there is a violation, but you can't make anybody violate the law."

Presiding Judge Donald Carroll Jr., who on Monday said he hoped for a speedy trial, admonished attorneys outside the presence of the jury to pick up the tempo of the proceedings.

He objected to time-consuming questioning of witnesses on such items as price comparison of sex-related objects in various Austin stores.

Old Discs Can Be Expensive

By PHILIP PULLELLA
NEW YORK (UPI) — If you collect rock and roll records and the words "original label" or "limited pressing" interest you, you could become an oldies junkie.

But be careful, the habit can be expensive. Most older singles usually sell for under $10, but if you wanted to pick up an early Elvis Presley single such as "Good Rockin' Tonight" on the Sun label from Nashville, about $275 would have to cross the table. "Teach Me Tonight" by The Five Dips would cost $200, and "Stormy Weather" by The Five Sharps would set you back a cool $1,000.

Of course, you wouldn't let even the best diamond stylus come anywhere near these gems. You would want to keep them in a plastic bag, in that virginal condition we call mint to show to your friends and, of course, to rival collectors.

The bulk of today's collectors are not nostalgia buffs. Many of them are too young to have much to be nostalgic about. The typical collector is between 17 and 25 and many times was not even born when the song he paid $10 for was originally recorded.

Why and how then does one become hooked? Usually a friend or a television commercial will make the introduction. A spark catches and the relationship takes its course. If a person is a true collector, his path will inevitably cross — by mail or in person — with that of Bob Abramson, owner of the House of Oldies in Greenwich Village. Abramson boasts the largest stock of rock and roll records in the country — over one and one half million the last time he had the strength to take inventory.

"People collect old records," Abramson said, "because there is so much great music from the past and such a lack of great music today. People still sit alone and play rock and roll. People don't sit alone and play disco because there's nothing contemplative, communicative or meaningful about it."

Abramson thinks that much of today's music is really Muzak, always in the background while something else fills the spotlight. "Most of it is packaged," he said. "A computerized winning formula recycles the basic elements of popular songs to create new hits. Disco is popular because of the social atmosphere it creates. Musically, it's overly sophisticated but has little connection with what is real."

Whatever personal meaning early rock and roll has for the individual listener, Abramson hopes people will keep yearning for it. His and other oldies record stores are doing fine financially. Abramson says the buying habit today is fewer customers but larger sales.

One curious fact, even to Abramson, is why more people who were teenagers in the 50s aren't buying any older records today. "I guess it's because many of them now have three kids and a mortgage," he said. "They probably don't have the time — or money — to buy old records."

Rock and roll is not dead. It is, as the song goes, here to stay. Hard core purists are keeping it alive at collectors' prices.

Happy Days Return To Broadway

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP) — The new lullaby of Broadway is happy days are here again.

Highlights of the theatrical year now ending include: A record $91 million box-office gross for legit attractions; a lusty increase of 1.1 million spectators; and production activity at a 10-year crest.

"This is the greatest season since before World War II," says Gerald Schoenfeld, chairman of the Shubert Organization, which operates 17 playhouses. "Broadway has moved into a new era."

Taking the pulse of the business is an annual rite coinciding with the traditional June-May term of all stagecraft union contracts.

Turnabout after several years of waning activity was evident last season, but the increased surge since indicates the revival wasn't just a brief flurry.

The season's boxoffice total, based on weekly reports by the trade paper Variety, tops the 1975-76 gross by $21 million.

Although some of the jump comes from generally higher ticket prices, greater significance was given to the attendance growth during the 12 month period, from 7.2 to 8.3 million people. In the Shubert Theaters, for example, revenue went up 45 percent and attendance 32 percent.

Schoenfeld attributes audience upswing to several factors: Increasing popular interest in theater, evident also in regional theaters; merchandising aimed at attracting more young people and ethnic minorities; and modernizing of the way tickets are sold.

During the year, 67 shows arrived on the Rialto, compared to 59 the prior season, and the most since an identical number in 1966-67. They included 27 dramas, 16 musicals, eight comedies; the rest were such diverse attractions as Swiss mimes, Hal Holbrook's "Mark Twain Tonight!" and visits by Bing Crosby, Diana Ross and Lily Tomlin.

Five shows were imported from London, less than usual, but Broadway's growing symbiosis with once-scorned areas of theatrical enterprise was very apparent. Twelve plays originated in regional theaters, six came from off-Broadway and one from off-off-Broadway.

Among the others there were few signs of creative originality. Eleven of 27 dramas and 19 of 16 musicals were revivals.

Stereotypes Avoided In Indian Play

By GEORGE BOONER
TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Neither savage nor stoic warriors, American Indians are human beings who have something to say to the American people, according to members of the American Indian Theater Co.

"We are breaking away from the stereotypes," said Shirley Ehn, who works with the theater company and with the Tulsa Indian Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

"A stereotype is not human, whether it is a good stereotype or a bad stereotype. Hollywood is into good stereotypes now."

The AITC, organized in December, 1975, has produced one play and is planning another for Tulsa. The company did not set out to avoid the first quality in production.

"I think the Indian has something to say and I think the people want to listen," Ms. Ehn said.

The company's first production was "The Ecstasy of Rita Joe," a serious play written by Peter Ryga, who grew up on an Indian reservation although not an Indian himself. The play is about an Indian girl, Rita Joe, who has trouble making the adjustment from reservation life to city life, and her boy friend, Jamie Paul, an angry young man who becomes impatient for change.

The production played to packed houses for four days in Tulsa — the city with the second largest Indian population in the nation.

"These young people who were in this were unbelievable," said Wendell O'Brien, a vice president of the AITC. "If an opportunity is given for the young Indian people to perform, they can."

The AITC's next production probably will not be as serious as the first.

"The Indian people are the funniest people in the world," said Mrs. O'Brien. "But they have to be among their own. All outsiders see is the Hollywood reserved Indian, very stoic."

The backers of the AITC say Tulsa is the perfect place to start a serious Indian theater company because of its high Indian population, second only to Los Angeles, and a variety including representatives of 40 tribes.

"While there are tribal differences, there is a universal experience in being Indian," Ms. Ehn said.

It is that experience which the AITC hopes to project while developing Indian actors, playwrights and directors and producers. The group hopes to become a first-rate national theater company, but is willing to take the time needed to develop.

"The Indian Theater is a very big thing to Indian people all over the country," Ms. Ehn said.

The AITC grew out of a project started by the Indian Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse. The council produced the play, "Skins," in 1975 as the first all-Indian play in the city. "Skins" was a success. It attracted an audience of 900.

"The urban Indian, living in close proximity with the majority society, has an urgent need to communicate his concerns and culture to that society," the AITC said in its statement of purpose. "Only in the urban area can ethnic theater find the audience to sustain itself."

"What we're waiting for is the Indian Eugene O'Neill," said Ms. Ehn. "Somewhere, sometime, some little Creek boy is going to look up and say, 'Hey, it's possible to be a playwright.'"

"And he is going to write the play that tells everybody of the Indian experience."

Steve Miller's Talent Evident In Recordings

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International Writer

At any given time, there is rarely more than a small handful of popular musicians who can transcend the enforced distance that electronic recording puts between them and their audience.

Nearly all of those who make the grade — Steve Wonder comes to mind, and, of course, Bob Dylan — are stylistic originals, the creators who provide everyone else with the fresh ideas that put wind in the sails of pop music.

Among this elite group, Steve Miller is a standout — because his music is at once both stylistically derivative and intensely personal.

Listen to a few of Miller's albums — really listen to the words and develop a feel for his melodies and arrangements — and you have a feeling you really know the guy.

Miller is a dealer in style. His genius lies not in innovation but in creative and invariably tasteful adaptation of diverse but existing (and mostly familiar) forms to his clean and open and very pop approach. Somehow he makes the whole thing come out sounding a lot more like true art than it really should.

What's more, with his latest collection, "Book of Dreams" (Capitol SQ-11630), Miller shows that he has mastered one of the most difficult and valuable of music business techniques — the follow-up album. In this case, the follow-up turns out to be even better than the original.

After years of effort, Miller had finally tuned into the pop mainstream. The mainstream had caught up with him and he wasn't about to let it go. "Book of Dreams" is the result.

In a very narrow sense, "Dreams" is a concept album, too, though with some rather over-the-top synthesizer pieces and a bogglingly dense that each time represents a slice of Miller's own fantasyland.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: We read that former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's recent speech at the Humanitarian Awards dinner in Los Angeles stopped the show. How come? — Paula and Billy G., New York.

A: Kissinger spoke with the kind of wit best described as being a little like Will Rogers, Buddy Hackett and Milton Berle seated on the dais of a Dean Martin TV roast. Variety, the show business Bible, even gave a review of the talk, quoting the comments that won the loudest laughs! For example:

"Kissinger's timing was as flawless as his punchlines; his pauses reminiscent of the mastery of Jack Benny. 'Christians and Jews,' he began — 'and also the Arab who's negotiating to buy this hotel.'"

He told what a privilege it was to be honored by an organization dedicated to equality in religion. "That's why," he said, "I would like to make sure that you Christians in the rear of the room can hear me!"

Admitting to some personal inconveniences in coming to the affair he made reference to the toastmaster's comment that he had the distinction of being the first recipient outside the entertainment industry to be honored by this tribute. Kissinger retorted: "Having served in Washington in two administrations, I rather resent that."

He explained that the book he is writing will be a story of the struggle for power in high places and confessed his limitations. "I hope," he pleaded, "that everyone will understand that I've had only six months of experience at NBC."

Kissinger acknowledged that he frequently is asked if he misses all the power, trappings and atmosphere of his years as Secretary of State. "My answer," he proclaimed, "is absolutely NOT. I made that point to my assistants yesterday morning — as they knelt before me."

Similarly he disavowed any claim to divine gifts notwithstanding learned research indicated that the first diplomats were messengers from heaven. "I draw no moral from this story," he insisted, "except to point out that — though one or two foreign ministers I knew, and all Israelis, claim a special relationship to divinity — I haven't done so even in my most megalomaniac period... which has not yet ended."

Q: Who was it who, in explaining why women control the cash in this country, observed: "After all, American divorcees collect more than three billion dollars a year in alimony"? — R.T., Earl City, Pa.

A: Comedian Gary Morton, before he married Lucille Ball.

Q: When Archie Bunker calls his wife a "dingbat," we know it's always good for a laugh. But where did that belittling expression originate? — C. Petersen, Longview.

A: Dingbat, as we learned in our youth, was a word to describe or specify a typographic ornament to place at the end of or between paragraphs. Some dictionaries describe dingbat as a small object, such as a stick or stone suitable to hurl at another object. Dingbat is also an Australian colloquial term for delirium tremens.

Q: How long did it take to build the Panama Canal? From start to finish? — Charley Johnson, Milwaukee.

A: It took, including a period of "gestation," 44 years. Broken down by author David McCullough in "The Path Between the Seas," the era of vision and vain attempts by a French company (under Ferdinand de Lesseps) to build a canal is from 1879 to 1894; the initial period of U.S. involvement and purchase of rights from the French, from 1899 to 1904; the actual construction of the canal from 1904 to 1914. Highlights of the engineering triumph of our time: the birth of a new nation (Panama), the moving by U.S. engineers of 211,000,000 cubic yards of rock and earth, the conquest of yellow fever, and the expansion of American power.

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," care of The Avalanche Journal, P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

SPEAKER — The banquet circuit has a new superstar: Henry Kissinger. He's seen here standing with two former Nixon aides, Bob Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

CARROLL O'CONNOR AS ARCHIE BUNKER — For the meaning of Archie's pet word for Edith—dingbat—see the Gardner's column.

TV Reviewer Has Harsh Words For New 'Ted Knight Show'

By JOAN HANAUER
NEW YORK (UPI) — For CBS watchers, tonight will be the best of times and the worst of times, with a dreary comedy half hour followed by a touching drama of dignity.

At 7:30 p.m. CDT, talented Ted Knight appears as the head of an escort service in "The Ted Knight Show." Ted remains the vain and pompous personality he etched as Ted Baxter on the Mary Tyler Moore show, with a streak of fussy perfectionism thrown in "Cleanliness is next to Godliness, which is next to me."

Artist Says Works Make Questions, Not Answers

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Painter Pierre Alechinsky, whose physician-parents wanted him to be a doctor, has won a $50,000 art prize for dream-like canvas anatomies inspired by fascination with his family.

The Belgian-born artist began a visit to Pittsburgh which culminates Thursday, when he receives the Andrew W. Mellon Award. He is celebrating the prize with a 134-piece exhibit at the Carnegie Museum of Art.

"When I make a painting, I make a question," he says. "A painting is not to give an answer."

Alechinsky, 50, who wears a beard and shaves his head, was chosen by an international panel of judges to receive the award named for the late Pittsburgh financier for the most representative living modern artist, according to museum art director Leon Arkus. The new award is to be given every two years, and may be shared by more than one artist.

"We are not saying Alechinsky is the greatest contemporary artist in the world," Arkus said. "That would be impossible to do and unfair."

Alechinsky, whose father fled Russia to escape religious persecution, was born in Brussels in 1927. Although encouraged to enter the medical field, he was fascinated by the artists with whom his family lived.

"Uptown, my aunt produces her well-mannered paintings. On the floor below, grandmother plays Schubert sonatas accompanied by a gentleman from France on the violin," he once wrote of his childhood.

Alechinsky, who now lives in Paris, spoke to reporters through a translator amid four rooms filled with his colorful expressionist paintings of humans and animals.

Alechinsky's bold works are virtually HAMMER RULE
Play it safe by never using one hammer to strike another.

The show boasts a Mr. and Mrs. Got-Rocks type wealthy couple that makes "The Flintstones" look like realistic theater.

This is a pilot for what may become a series if CBS decides to try the low road to high Nielsen numbers. Ted Knight deserves a crack at a show of his own, but this isn't it.

"Ted Knight" is followed at 8 p.m. CDT by "The Greatest Thing That Almost Happened," starring Jimmie Walker, J.J., on "Good Times," as a high school basketball player stricken with leukemia.

Walker is charming as Morris Bird III, an insecure young man, troubled by his mother's death along with more common adolescent problems, who finally gets to play a full game in which he becomes his school's hero. Then he collapses — leukemia.

His relationships with his girlfriend (Deborah Allen of "3 Girls 3"), his sister and his father as he first refuses to accept his dying at 17, then his struggles for dignity, understanding and life as he accepts death, make for a drama that is sensitive, compassionate and compelling.

Walker is good, but he is overshadowed whenever he must play opposite James Earl Jones as his father, a "supervisory engineer" who would almost kill to keep his "whittled shirt" job and the respectability that he feels goes with it.

Jones as Morris Bird Jr., has his own problems with dignity — how does a black man retain his dignity in the white dominated world of 1952 when even his own wife has made him question his worth? And how does a man whose quest for dignity and respectability has led him to emotionally neglect his son now reach out to a dying boy?

James Earl Jones can package the conflict in a troubled look, the bitterness and pride in a stiff back and a slow voice.

"The Greatest Thing That Almost Happened" is more than another touching story of an athlete struck down in his prime by a deadly disease — which has become something of a television cliché — and instead reaches out for larger issues.

Investment Managers Critical Of Pension Law

By JOHN CUNIFF
 NEW YORK (AP) — Explain the meaning of "prudent man" and you might improve stock prices, help companies raise capital, cut down on paperwork, provide more and better pension benefits, and help investment managers sleep.
 All these considerations are viewed as possibilities by critics of ERISA, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, which mandated that pension fund managers use prudence in pension fund investments.
 Perhaps no other investment law on the books is more criticized for such a variety of reasons. Some investment managers confess that their biggest daily battle is now between ERISA and the maintenance of their own sanity.
 It isn't difficult to understand why. In passing the act, Congress failed to define man provisions ... have increased the portions of portfolio funds which are invested in corporate and government bonds." Stocks, he feels, have become too risky for uncertain money managers.

 The conservative practice of indexing, in which fund managers seek only to match the popular averages, is said to be another consequence of the term's vague definition, the rationale being that averaging is seldom in violation of the law.

"We have to guess what is reasonable," said Wilson. "The law is so abstract that I cannot tell mechanically what I should do every day."
 Fear is but one of the drawbacks said to result from the law. The paperwork burden sometimes is overwhelming, the critics say, but it becomes maddening when the government, equally confused, changes the documentation required.
 Brown claims the complex reports required, and the constantly shifting government deadlines and changes in reporting standards are "time-consuming, costly and morale-breaking" for fund managers.

 In a speech to the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans here, Brown said ERISA is a factor in the termination of a large number of benefit plans, although he conceded there were other factors also, including an unpredictable market.

 "The administrative costs are driving us berserk," Wilson admits. "We're spending a lot of money on reports the government then says it doesn't want, and that kind of inconsistency is adding enormously to costs."
 When investment charges go up, of course, the return to the pension fund goes down. They have less to distribute to retired workers because the already weakened investment yields are diminished further.

 "Banks have raised their fees for administration by 200 percent here," he said. A job that trust departments once handled with ease, and with profit, has become a headache for many banks, he said.
 Nobody says we don't need ERISA, Wilson said. "The goal is fine." The execution, he concluded, is a disaster.

Analysis

what it meant by a "prudent man," whom investment advisers are supposed to emulate. It's still anybody's guess, which is too precarious an approach to law for less than steely-nerved portfolio managers.
 "I feel uncomfortable because I genuinely am trying to do a good job, but I have no guidelines," said Paul Wilson, executive vice president in charge of the trust department at Fidelity Bank, Philadelphia.
 Critics say the law's vague terminology is forcing pension fund managers to be overly conservative, cutting down yields and depriving companies not among the nation's top 50 of investment capital.
 "It's forced us to a very conservative, passive approach," said Wilson. "We have the desire, knowledge and technology to do a good job, but we're back to basics. We're super-prudent."
 Explaining the consequences, Wilson continued: "We're timing market moves rather than varying our item selection. We choose only the very best companies. We've given up on the marginal companies."
 Said Kenneth Brown, president of Graphic Arts International Union, and labor trustee of pension funds: "Many small businesses are being denied the capital that would otherwise be available to them."
 John Wright, whose Wright Investors' Service handles $600 million of retirement funds, maintains "The prudent

Sea Mining Considered By Industry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Three miles down, on the Pacific Ocean floor, mysterious black lumps grow, laced with essential metals like manganese, nickel, copper and cobalt.
 The steel industry needs these manganese nodules and wants to start deep-sea mining. But the industry says it needs laws to protect its right of access and capital investments estimated at $500 million to $750 million per site.
 "It is not possible to produce steel without manganese," said Phillips Hawkins, vice president for resource development of U.S. Steel Corp. in Pittsburgh. "The preservation of the United States' present right of access to deep-sea nodules is of tremendous importance to our country."
 Deep seabed mining was discussed at Oceans '77, a conference seeking to relate new marine technology to public policy and education. About 1,000 scientists, engineers and academics attended the three-day conference sponsored by the Marine Technology Society and the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers.
 Hawkins said U.S. Steel, the world's largest manganese user, now gets its supplies from manganese ore deposits in Gabon, South Africa and Brazil.
 Known manganese reserves on land are estimated at several billion tons, and if steel production continues to expand, land reserves would be near exhaustion in 29 years, he said.
 Scientists do not know how manganese nodules are formed. They were first discovered by British sailors 100 years ago but ignored until the 1960s. Hawkins noted that the lumps frequently have a foreign object like a shark tooth inside.
 The nodules are about 30 per cent manganese, 1.4 per cent nickel, 1.2 per cent copper and .2 per cent cobalt. Scientists estimate there could be several trillion tons of manganese in them.
 The American Mining Congress estimates its member industries have spent more than $150 million in identifying, exploring and developing sites.
 Hawkins said U.S. Steel has been working in a 25,600-square-mile area 1,100 miles southwest of San Diego.

Student Publication Shows Reading Pays

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — Interest in Valdosta State College's annual student publication "The Pine Cone" dwindled recently to the point where the editors figured they would have trouble giving it away.
 So they decided to give away money. A few lucky students casually leafing through the book found $1, $5, $10 and $20 bills sandwiched between the pages. Junior Debbie Bruner of Leesburg, Ga., said her issue contained a total of $50.
 As the word spread around campus, student demand for "The Pine Cone" soared, reaching an all-time high.

Aid Available In Language Programs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Graduate students studying languages spoken by seven American Indian tribes now are eligible for federal assistance. The U.S. Office of Education says it has added Northern Cheyenne, Blackfoot, Cherokee, Choctaw, Creek, Kiowa and Seminole to a fellowship program which offers assistance to graduate students specializing in bilingual education.

The $4 million fellowship program, now in its third year, helps states improve the education of children with limited English-speaking abilities.

Other languages eligible for the assistance are: Pueblo languages, Navajo, Crow, Spanish, Chinese (several dialects), Filipino, Vietnamese, Japanese, Korean, Greek, Portuguese, French and Italian.

Minority Students Making Gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — The percentage of minority students rose at 131 state and land grant universities the last four years, although the proportion of blacks dropped, a new study says. Asian and Hispanic students registered the biggest enrollment gains among minorities during the period, according to the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges. Minority enrollments were 15.2 per cent of the graduate and undergraduate positions in the fall of 1976, compared with 11 per cent in 1972, the study said. But the 7.3 per cent black undergraduate enrollment of 1976 was a drop of more than 1 per cent from 1972, the report said. Graduate enrollment for blacks remained unchanged. The study also said more white students were enrolling at traditionally black schools. In 1976, there were 15.5 per cent whites in 20 traditionally black colleges.

Vermont's 'Thurd Party' Preserves State Culture

CHESTER, Vt. (UPI) — What's a Thurd? It's one-third of Vermont's population — the ones who are natives of the state and say "Vah-mahnt." And the Committee to Save a Thurd wants to keep it that way.

The committee, also known as the "Thurd Party," was formed in July to preserve the state's Yankee culture and traditions.

The committee is currently searching for the oldest living native Vermonter and the family that has lived in the same house the longest.

"Thurd Party" founder Fletcher Manley said that honors for the oldest living native apparently belong to Jessica Swift of Middlebury, who turned 106 last month.

The next oldest native Manley has come across so far is Mrs. Wally Bush of Newport, who will be 104 Nov. 26.

Several other longtime natives have been found, but they are relatively "young" at 101, Manley said.

And, Manley can tell you the Edward Lewis family of Ferrisburg has lived in the same home since 1771. Other families and their homes date to 1750 and 1775.

The committee launched its search by sending out cards to town clerks and asking for help from the public.

"If there are others out there, we'd sure like to know about them," Manley said.

Below-Standard Housing Alleged In Suit

Two Lubbock apartment complexes are being used as labor camps for migrant farm workers, a suit filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court alleges.

The suit charges the Wilson and Coronado Apartments were being used to house migrant workers employed by Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc., a business with division headquarters in Plainview.

According to the suit—filed by Lubbock Legal Services on behalf of 10 migrant farm workers—the plaintiffs were placed in rooms which did not meet state or federal standards required of migrant labor camps.

Plaintiffs allege the housing was dilapidated, insect infested, overcrowded and without adequate plumbing and garbage facilities.

The suit also alleges that Pioneer and defendants Gerardo De Los Santos and Luis Rodriguez, described as farm labor contractors, have not taken certain plaintiffs' social security numbers and have made social security deductions in some cases and not in others.

The suit asks for $1 million in punitive damages. Attorneys are also asking U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward to grant a class-action designation and request a trial by jury.

Defendants include Pioneer, described as owning or controlling farms in Lubbock and surrounding counties.

Along with De Los Santos and Rodriguez, Raul Ortiz, Clemente Ortiz and Anselmo Carbajal are listed as defendant labor contractors.

Defendants Bill Norris and O. Goodwin Powell are described as owning or controlling Fordham Road housing which is allegedly being used as a labor camp.

D.P. Trammel, H.H. Trammel, C.F. Boone, Max Ann Trammel Merritt Boone, Ethel Trammel Herriage, Billy Boone and Bobby Gene Wilson Jr., along with Dwellings, Inc., are defendants listed as controlling or owning the Wilson Apartments. According to the petition, the apartments are also under the control of defendants Weldon Sikes and Carbajal. Jay Fikes, Arlen Wesley, J.F. Vernon and Emily Vernon are among defendants listed in the petition as owning or controlling the Coronado Apartments.

The suit claims Pioneer, acting through its employees and through labor contractors, recruited migrant workers without providing them with written statements in regard to type of work, area of employment, wages, housing and other factors.

The suit says Pioneer entered into agreements with individuals controlling apartments through Sikes, described in the petition as a real estate agent.

Under terms of the alleged agreements, the suit says, blocks of apartments were rented to Pioneer who, in turn, rented apartments to plaintiffs.

Sewage Proposal Okayed

SILVERTON — The Mackenzie Municipal Water Authority Tuesday approved a proposal by the Texas Water Commission regulating the use and installation of private sewage facilities here.

John McCammon, acting manager for the lake, accepted the state agency's proposal, which would delegate to the Mackenzie Municipal Water Authority the licensing, regulation and enforcement functions for the control of sewage disposal within the lake area.

As proposed, the Texas Water Commission order would designate the "regulated area" as that lying within 1,500 feet from the edge of the lake.

The order would require that a license be obtained from the authority for the construction of any private sewage disposal facilities in the regulated area.

Developers wishing to create a subdivision within the controlled area also would have to obtain approval from the authority of their plan for sewage disposal.

Others attending Tuesday's public hearing included representatives from the Texas Department of Water Resources and the Texas Department of Health.

"Our main concern is for water quality at Mackenzie, since eventually the lake will provide water for the cities of Silvertown, Tulia, Floydada and Lockney," said Ron Freeman of the Texas Department of Health. "I've reviewed this proposed waste control order and it looks good to me."

Jim Wilson of the Texas Department of Water Resources added that he thought the authority's concern with setting up sewage regulations now was a good idea since very little building has taken place at the lake.

Before the order takes effect, it must be published in the Texas Register for 30 days and must be approved by the three-member Texas Water Commission. Within 20 days after commission approval, the order will become law.

TOWNSEND RESIGNS

AUSTIN (UPI) — Tommy Townsend has resigned his $26,300-a-year job as Senate sergeant at arms effective Nov. 2. Townsend, 34, has held the post since May, 1970. He said he plans to take a position with the Texas Association of Realtors.

Bat Talented At Escapes

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — Houdini, a bat named for his abilities as an escape artist at Washington High School, was too talented for his own good.

Houdini managed to escape twice from a bird cage in the classroom of biology teacher Ted Schupbach. A third escape took place after Schupbach declared the winged rodent dead.

Fearing the bat may have died from rabies, the biology teacher placed Houdini inside two sacks and put the package in the refrigerator until he could send it to health officials to be checked for disease.

Schupbach later turned the package over to the Tulsa City-County Health Department, which forwarded it to the state Health Department in Oklahoma City, but when state health officials opened the bag there was nothing in it.

A search ensued and a quick survey was taken to make sure nobody had been bitten by the bat since a former student brought it to class. Nobody had. Four days after the last escape, Houdini was found again alive on the floor of the storeroom where the refrigerator was located.

Houdini was turned over to health officials who killed the bat and checked for rabies. The test report was negative.

Malaysia Fears Tin Industry May Fall

By S.C. WEE
 KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (UPI) — The current record high price of tin may be a windfall for producer countries but Malaysia — remembering the bitter experience with another of its commodities — is concerned.
 Deputy Primary Industry Minister Lew Sip Hoo warned last month that high prices could spur a search for substitutes for tin, which is used mainly as a corrosion-resistant coating for the familiar "tin" can.

Commission To Discuss Fisheries

TOKYO (AP) — Japan, Canada and the United States will conduct the 24th annual meeting of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission in Anchorage, Alaska, Monday through Nov. 4, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said Tuesday.

The commission was set up under the International Convention for High Seas Fisheries in the North Pacific. It became effective in June 1963 and meets once a year to discuss various fisheries problems concerning the North Pacific.

Included among topics on the agenda are:

- Examination of conditions which make it necessary for Japan to restrict salmon and salmon trout catches in the seas east of 175 degrees west longitude.
- Examination of conditions which necessitate restricting catches of North American origin halibut in waters outside of the Bering Sea and Canadian origin herring in Canadian coastal waters.
- Study of effects on trawling of halibut stocks in the Bering Sea and the Gulf of Alaska.
- Study on the intermingling in the high seas of North American origin and Asiatic origin salmon and salmon-trout.
- Study on resources conditions of king and Tanner crabs in the East Bering sea.
- Study of resources conditions of seabird fish except halibut in the northeast Pacific.

Japan will send a 17-member delegation including four government delegates to the meeting, the ministry said.

The ministry said the International Convention for High Seas Fisheries in the North Pacific will expire Feb. 10, 1978 since the United States' notification last February of its desire to terminate the convention following the enactment of the 200-mile fishery zones in April.

Korean War, the price of rubber plunged to $390 a ton after the United States and other developed countries churned out tons of artificial rubber from petroleum byproducts.

As the price fell below the cost of tapping, Malaysian rubber tappers suffered great hardship.

Only the Arab oil embargo of 1973 and the huge price increase of crude oil saved the day. Rubber recovered to around the present $900 a ton.

"We should be forewarned of the serious difficulties that would lie ahead if the tin industry has to face serious competition from substitutes," Lew said.

Available substitutes for tin in the manufacturing industry are aluminum and chromium plus lacquer. But their usage is still relatively small because they are expensive.

The world shortfall of tin is estimated at 20,000 tons a year and many consumer countries are looking to Malaysia, which accounts for a third of the world's output, for increased supply.

But there are problems.

From a record output of 75,619 tons in 1972, Malaysia's production declined last year to 63,401 tons, the lowest in 12 years. Production dropped further during the first half of this year to 29,849 tons, a reduction of 1,996 tons compared with the corresponding period last year.

Local miners blame a lack of prospecting land and the high taxes the government has imposed on tin for export.

Land, which is under the authority of the state governments, is not made readily available to tin prospectors because the states get only 10 per cent of the export duty from the federal government, miners say.

Also, there are eight direct and indirect taxes imposed on tin sale, totaling 35 per cent. With 56 per cent going to meet production costs, miners say their profit is only 9 per cent.

"What incentive do we have to produce more?" one asked.

The government has promised to look into the miners' woes and Finance Minister Tengku Razaleigh Hamzah is expected to revise some taxes when he presents the 1978 budget next month.

Executive Chairman of the International Tin Council Peter Lai of Malaysia warned tin producers in August of the possibility of more substitution by the manufacturing industry. He urged miners to boost output with new investments.

ITC, the commodity regulator, is powerless because its buffer stock has ITC, the commodity regulator, is powerless because its buffer stock has been used up, he said.

Tin dealers say only the United States' stockpile of 200,000 tons could act as a short-term check to the current surge in the tin price.

But in the opinion of some U.S. dealers, President Carter will not make a decision on tin until next year.

WHEN THEY PLAY, IT HURTS — Gary Lile, a trumpeter on Ingraham High School's band in Seattle, wears a sweatshirt with a hood as he plays. It isn't because of the cold, but because it helps block out oppressive sounds. The school's music-rehearsal room has a high decibel reading, and at times the director can't distinguish if particular sections are playing wrong notes. (AP Laserphoto)

Band Members Use Earplugs

SEATTLE (AP) — When the Ingraham High School band practices, earplugs go in, hoods go up and the buzzing in the brain soars.

The problem isn't with the musicians — it's the acoustics in the music rehearsal room.

After repeated complaints last year, the school district ran a sound test, but it was done during the last week of school when 30 per cent of the band members had left.

Even so, the test report showed the decibel readings ranging from 95 to peaks of 108 when the band played "Minstrel Boy." Audiologists say anything above 90 decibels for prolonged periods is harmful.

The report recommended "requesting a survey and cost estimate for improved acoustic treatment of the room," but nothing was done.

So band members like senior Doyle Meyer, a drummer, shelled out $3.95 for a pair of earplugs. Meyer uses them "to protect myself."

Court Crier Finds Days Numbered

BAMBERG, S.C. (UPI) — Elgin W. McMillan plans to stay on the job as long as he's needed, but jobs like his are rapidly disappearing.

McMillan, 83, is one of the few remaining court criers in South Carolina.

While several of the state's 46 counties have turned the criers' duties over to bailiffs, Bamberg County so far has retained the position.

McMillan, a retired farmer who has lived almost all his life in this county of South Carolina, says criers are needed and points out that state law back him up.

"The court crier's got to be there or there won't be no court," he said.

McMillan has been the courthouse crier for 12 years, and said he plans to continue in the job "as long as they need me."

"I got a book on it, but I don't even use it," he said.

His predecessor had suffered a stroke and could not talk, so McMillan took over as a favor at first, letting the man continue to collect the $10 a day salary. Eventually, he was appointed to the job.

Leaning over the railing outside the second-floor courtroom last week, McMillan's gravel voice bellowed each morning, just as court was to begin:

"Hey, Hey, Hey. Court's in session; court's in session. Anybody with any business with the court come into the court."

A widower, McMillan said he likes the job.

"It's just a hobby, but I get to meet a lot of people," he said.

Circuit Judge James E. Moore of Greenwood, whose home county also employs a crier, said the crier is a custom that served a good purpose in earlier times.

"In the past, more spectators used to come to court and the crier let them know when court was in session," said Moore, who is presiding in a Bamberg case this week.

N. Fletcher Kirkland, Bamberg County clerk of court, said McMillan is a courthouse fixture.

"If there's any hollerin' to be done, he does it," Kirkland said.

Craftsman Makes Shingles

THURMONT, Md. (UPI) — Paul Lewis, who swears by the durability of home-made red oak shingles just as his grandfather did, still trains apprentices who eventually take up the business of restoring old homes.

The 73-year-old craftsman exhibits his knowledge of making shingles by hand at Catoctin National Park every weekend from May to November. His apprentice works by his side.

"Red oak shingles will last more than 100 years. One roof will stay on a house for a lifetime," Lewis says, adding that his own home was adorned with home-made shingles until fire destroyed them.

The process of splitting the wood and shaving the shingles down until they fit together is slow, he admits.

"A power mill can make a dozen while I make one," he said as he straddled a shaving horse. "Depending on the size, it takes about seven days to make 10 squares working 10 hours a day. There are 350 shingles in 10 squares."

Lewis retired seven years ago as a carpenter, but said he has made shingles for "60 years on and off."

His tools were handed down to him through two generations, beginning with his grandfather.

"It was a living. That's why I started to make them," he said. "I was the oldest of nine. My father fell down one day and an axe cut his arm. He was crippled for life. That's when I got started."

"I must like it or I wouldn't be here," he said of the trade.

Interior Department To Poison Seagulls Near Major Airports

By ALICE Z. CUNEO
WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seagulls, fed by refuse in municipal dumps near the coast, pose an increasing threat to aircraft in the Northeast. But the federal government thinks it has the answer — poison.

The Interior Department has obtained permission from the Environmental Protection Agency to use a powerful chemical to kill hundreds of sea gulls endangering air traffic at major airports. The chemical "starlicide" will be applied to squares of bread next spring and placed in the birds' nests.

Officials said the poison works internally and kills within hours.

Humane groups contend the plan is only a temporary solution, and suggest if the government is going to do so much trouble to kill the birds, why not apply a chemical to the bread that sterilizes the birds.

The problem has been growing in recent years as cities and towns turn to dumping and burying garbage instead of burning it. Regulations on open burning were imposed to control air pollution.

Clarence Faulkner, chief of the Fish and Wildlife Service's Division of Animal Damage Control, says the herring gull has turned from "a wild state into birds" dependent on man's handouts and unthreatened by man's noise.

Gulls are so brazen at municipal dumps along the East Coast, they gather in front of bulldozers moving garbage to see if new scraps turn up.

Gulls on the West Coast have not adapted to man and are easier to drive away from airports with conventional methods such as exploding devices giving off a loud noise, Faulkner says.

"Normal attrition which takes place over the winter has been greatly reduced by a continuous year-round food supply at garbage dumps," a report noted.

"Many birds such as terns, puffins and petrels require very special nesting areas which only a few coastal islands supply," the report added. "The gulls compete for living space and food and frequently eat the eggs and young of other species."

Starting in April, the offending herring gulls will be caught, dyed and followed back to their coastal nests and rookeries by airborne spotters. Bread squares with the compound DRC-1339 will be placed in the nests.

Guy Hodge, a bird expert for the U.S. Humane Society, says the government should be looking for more "permanent and more humane" ways to limit the gull population. The gulls "have a new status as the latest problem bird along with pigeons, starlings and blackbirds," Hodge says.

Humane groups plan a "detailed look" at the government plan, he said.

Faulkner said the Interior Department would cut the herring gull population in specific areas by one half or one third, depending on the potential threat they pose to aircraft.

Airports troubled by the gulls include Kennedy and LaGuardia Airports in New York and Boston's Logan airport. All three are located near the ocean.

While Faulkner noted commercial aircraft now have safety glass windshields to prevent the two to four pound gulls from breaking through, the birds could be ingested into the jet engines.

Carter Not Pressuring Senate For Energy Plan

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — In public, President Carter has blasted the move to lift petroleum price controls as "the biggest ripoff in history."

But in private, the President has dealt more gently with the Senate leaders who seem ready to let that very thing happen, dumping his energy program in the process.

The reason, key administration aides say, is strategy. Like a bridge player, Carter is trying to lead the action into his strong suit.

That's in the House of Representatives, which has passed the main features of his energy plan: continued controls on oil and gas prices, but at higher levels, and new government taxes to raise the consumer prices still higher, moves Carter hopes will stimulate conservation without giving petroleum companies excess profits.

The petroleum industry has lobbied heavily against Carter's plan, arguing that prices should not be controlled and that higher profits are needed to encourage exploration and development of oil and gas.

The proposed energy taxes and their direct or indirect return to the public were cut out of the energy bill in the Senate Finance Committee.

Against that background, Carter suddenly attacked the petroleum industry on Oct. 13, charging it with an unreasonable grab for profits.

But the next morning, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger made it clear that Carter's attack stopped with the companies and did not apply to the Senate committees, whose action, he said, "just reflects a general reluctance to impose taxes."

Last weekend on a speaking swing through the Midwest and West, Carter warned again of "an enormous windfall in profits" and said, "there's a limit to how much we can take out of the pockets of consumers and give to the oil and gas industry."

Analysis

But back in Washington, meeting with Senate leaders, Carter just explained his position and left it to the senators to write their energy bill without heavy pressure from him.

A well-placed administration aide says the administration, in fact, did not want to press the committees to include Carter's tax provisions in a Senate bill because it seemed likely they would be rejected in a floor vote.

Instead, the aide said, the administration hopes some form of Carter's energy tax proposals will be put in the bill when House and Senate conferees get together to iron out their differences.

If the tax proposals reach the Senate floor is a bill recommended by a joint conference committee and without a previous rejection vote, they also stand a better chance of winning Senate approval, the Carter people think.

To get his energy taxes back into the bill in the conference committee, Carter is relying on the House conferees.

Senators, elected for six years and with greater individual influence in a chamber of only 100 members, are traditionally the targets of heavier industry lobbying than are congressmen in the 435-member House.

Representatives, up for re-election every two years, are more subject to the whims of the voters back home, who also happen to be consumers generally distrustful of the petroleum companies.

So Carter has taken to television and public speeches to criticize what he terms the "ripoff" supposedly planned by those companies.

That is the second half of Carter's energy tactic.

By putting up only token resistance in the Senate committees, Carter avoids an immediate showdown on the Senate floor.

By attacking the petroleum industry publicly, he seeks to rally public opinion and stiffen the resolve of the House conferees to bounce an energy bill, including his tax proposals, back to the Senate.

If it works, Carter will still face the job of pushing energy taxes through a reluctant Senate, but he hopes it will then be a little easier.

Steel Companies Report Drop In Profits

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For the past several months, the nation's steel industry has waged a battle against steel imports, claiming they are biting deeply into profits.

Four major firms, including U.S. Steel Corp., the nation's biggest producer, have announced third quarter earnings. All but one has reported a drop in profits. And all blamed imports, at least in part, for their problems.

On Tuesday, U.S. Steel Corp. reported a 76 percent profit drop during the quarter, following a year-long trend. National Steel Corp., the third-largest producer, announced a 46 percent profit drop on Monday.

Armco Steel Corp., the fifth-ranked steelmaker, said its profits increased slightly due to diversified business interests, while ninth-ranked Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp. reported a $4.6 million loss.

"Because of record-breaking levels of predatorily priced imports, the steel industry is having its own severe recession of jobs and earnings," U.S. Steel Chairman Edgar Speer told a press conference Tuesday.

U.S. Steel reported net earnings of $27.7 million for the months of July, August and September, or 30 cents per common share, on sales of $2.2 billion, compared with $112.5 million, or $1.38 per share, on sales of $2.4 billion for the third quarter of last year.

National Steel, which last week filed a suit with the U.S. Treasury Department charging firms in six European nations with dumping steel products in this country, said that unfair imports combined with labor difficulties at company mines and plants combined to limit earnings.

"A contributing factor leading to lesser shipments was the sharp increase in imported steel, particularly sheet products," said National Steel Chairman George A. Stinson.

The company earned $13.6 million, or 71 cents per share, on sales of $804.9 million in the third quarter, compared with $29.4 million, or $1.55 per share, on revenues of $754.6 million for the same period last year.

"Intensive efforts are underway at all National Steel plants to reduce costs," Stinson said.

Ohio-based Armco Steel Corp., credited strong performances from its diversified businesses, such as industrial products and insurance, for raising third-quarter earnings above those of the second quarter.

Armco chairman William Verity said the company barely broke even on steel-making in the third quarter.

The company has invested more than $1 billion in modern technology since 1965 at its flat-rolling mills at Middletown, Ohio, and Ashland, Ky., but both are running at a loss because of import competition, Verity said.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp.'s deep loss represented a $7.9 million "swing" or difference from last year's third quarter profits.

The firm's losses were $1.42 per common share, on sales of $253.4 million in the third quarter, compared with profits of $3.3 million or 70 cents per share, on revenue of $249.9 million in 1976.

For the first nine months of the year, Wheeling-Pittsburgh's loss deepened to $20.7 million.

Wheeling-Pittsburgh President Dennis J. Carney said the impact of foreign imports, combined with higher energy costs and wage and benefit increases have put the company in the red.

Jazz Event To Stay In New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — The Newport Jazz Festival, which has made New York City its home for the past five years, will remain here instead of moving upstate to Saratoga Springs next summer as had been planned.

"No one can leave this town once you're here," said George Wein, the festival's producer, at a ceremony Tuesday at City Hall where the latest plans were announced.

Wein said that an increased stipend from the Schlitz Brewing Co., which has sponsored the jazz concerts for 15 years, would enable the jazz event to remain here despite increased operating costs.

However, Saratoga will get a piece of the action, too. Wein said two of the 10 concerts scheduled for next July will be held in Saratoga Springs.

NEW WRINKLE ON BROW — The flag of Puerto Rico was draped across the brow of the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor Tuesday after about two dozen demonstrators seized the edifice. The group of Puerto Rican nationalists held the statue for nine hours before submitting peacefully to arrest. (AP Laserphoto)

Arraignment Scheduled For Statue Protesters

NEW YORK (AP) — The Statue of Liberty again beckons the "huddled masses yearning to breathe free" — along with visitors to her New York harbor island — after a nine-hour occupation by 30 Puerto Rican nationalists.

The demonstrators, members of the New York Committee to Free the Puerto Rican Nationalist Prisoners, were to be arraigned today in U.S. District Court in Manhattan on charges of criminal trespass, U.S. Atty. Robert Fiske said.

U.S. Park Police broke through a glass door in the statue's base at 6 p.m. Tuesday and captured the unarmed demonstrators, who were chanting, "Free Puerto Rico."

The occupation started shortly after 9 a.m. when the demonstrators arrived on Liberty Island on a sightseeing boat. They chased tourists and 90 school children from the statue and draped a large Puerto Rican flag across the front of the statue's crown.

During a day of negotiations, the demonstrators rejected seven offers from federal negotiators.

Vincente Alba, speaking for the demonstrators at Battery Park on the tip of Manhattan, said the group was demanding independence for Puerto Rico, an end to discrimination against Puerto Ricans and release from prison for the four remaining Puerto Rican nationalists jailed in the 1954 shooting of five congressmen from the gallery of the House of Representatives.

The leader of that attack, Andres Figueroa Cordero, was granted clemency several weeks ago and returned to Puerto Rico because he is suffering from cancer.

The demonstrators ignored a U.S. District Court order to leave the island. An offer to allow them to leave without prosecution also was refused. The demonstrators were brought ashore in three city police boats.

One supporter, who asked not to be identified, said: "The publicity was done. That was the purpose."

The statue, a gift from France 91 years ago, has been occupied before. Vietnam War veterans and American Indians have been among groups who used the 306-foot statue to demonstrate their positions in recent years.

HEW Official Expects Move Toward Health Insurance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials say they can make national health insurance work, despite the tarnished reputation of some Great Society programs of a decade ago.

"The time has come to make a minor leap of faith to a truly national health policy and program," Hale Champion, the undersecretary of health, education and welfare, said in a speech Tuesday to the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine.

Some form of national health insurance is expected as part of the health policy President Carter has promised to unveil next year.

Champion said the administration is willing to make mistakes with a far-reaching health program rather than not taking any initiative.

He said that under eight years of Republican administration, HEW became a confused, dispirited department "more accustomed to analyzing than to decision-making."

"We need less of the recent emphasis on Murphy's dictum that anything that can go wrong, will," he said. "We're not going to get anything done unless we are willing to make an occasional mistake."

"We need to overcome the conservatism that has gripped so many in the wake of the 1960s," he said.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. was a key aide to President Lyndon B. Johnson and was considered an architect of many of LBJ's domestic programs.

Champion outlined what he said were his initial impressions of the form Carter's plan is likely to take.

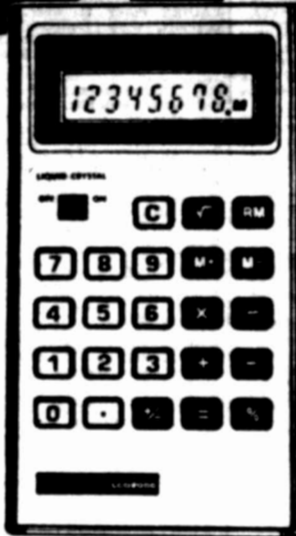

"No national health proposal can be simply another financing program in the pattern of Medicare and Medicaid," the undersecretary said. It must lead to "a significant restructuring of the way care is delivered," he added.

"Preventive care must be stressed, particularly for mothers and children," he said.

Novelist Feels Uncomfortable Talking About Latest Book

By CONNIE GRZELKA
NEW YORK (AP) — Author Joan Didion says she feels intimidated when she is in a room full of books.
'I don't even like to have books in the room when I'm working. It's just heavy freight. You think just what this world needs is another book and that you can't do it as well.'
In her Malibu, Calif., home she works in a spare bedroom overlooking a clothesline, rather than suffer the distracting view of the Pacific Ocean and the shelves full of books in the office in her home.
Miss Didion, former Life magazine columnist and the author of three novels and "Slouching Towards Bethlehem," a collection of essays, is 42, weighs 90 pounds and doesn't quite top 5 feet 2.
Her manner of speaking matches her slight appearance. Her voice is low and almost apologetic. White space occurs frequently during a conversation. Ends of sentences fade and occasionally dissolve when she speaks.
'I often perceive myself as invisible. I don't mean literally. I'm always startled if my presence is noticed in any way,' she says.
Although a reporter as well as a novelist, Miss Didion shies away from interviewing and does not like to be interviewed herself.
However, the recent publication of her third novel, "A Book of Common Prayer," brought a three-week, national book promotion tour — the first of its kind for the author — and a solid schedule of interviews.
'I find it quite uncomfortable to have to talk so much,' she admitted. 'I don't even talk much socially. I come from a rather quiet family — they just don't talk a great deal. They are laconic to a fault.'
Lighting up her second unfiltered cigarette during an interview here, the author said she is not a depressive even though her lean but powerful prose might indicate otherwise.

'I'm pretty cheerful, actually. I don't think about how I feel. I don't really know what I think until I sit down to write. (Depression) must be what I really think. I don't have an analytical mind and I don't think about what I think.'
Miss Didion, who has been married to writer John Dunne since 1964 and has an 11-year-old daughter, explains that delusion, the main thread running through her new book, "kind of interests" her.
'It's like asking whether things are as you see them or the impossibility of seeing them as they are. It's sort of a variation of the game children play when they turn around to see if the world is still there. Perhaps if you turn around fast enough, you'll catch it not there.'
She smooths out imaginary ripples in the fabric of the couch as she talks and says that when she works on a book, "I never think in terms of what things are about. It's just the picture and the story."
The main characters in her books often reside on the periphery of society, and are what she calls de afuera — from outside — in her new book. Miss Didion views herself in the same fashion.
'I don't know why. I've just always felt outside. I never as a child had a sense of being part of any particular group. I did not like being the new child in the class because I was shy to begin with — that sort of intensified the separation between me and the other children. It is not a painful thing to look back on, but the pattern seemed to continue.
She and her husband worked on the screenplays for the film "A Star Is Born." They also wrote the screenplay for "Panic in Needle Park" and for Miss Didion's second novel, "Play It As It Lays."
Miss Didion, whose family was among the early settlers in California, has begun work on a new book — "which is really an extended essay about California. It's neither fiction nor reportage. I don't know what it's about yet. I want to find out what is the difference between Californians and people elsewhere."

Band Able To Blend Ideas With Rhythms

By BRUCE MEYER
United Press International Writer
Face it, rock 'n' roll is music for the gut and the feet — not for the head.
That's not to say there hasn't been some intellectually rewarding rock music made over the years, but little of it was really intended to be that way. And, in fact, many rockers who really work at putting some intelligence into their lyrics end up with music that is no longer rock: the gut-level gets neglected.
So it's good to encounter that rare band that can work with idea as well as rhythms, whether or not you agree with all the ideas or get off on all the music.
Rush — a hard-driving power trio from Toronto — is such a band.
Rush is five albums old, having first moved into the North American music scene in the summer of 1974. In the past three years singer-bassist Geddy Lee, guitarist Alex Lifeson and drummer Neil Peart have spent a lot of time pumping hundreds of decibels of raw power at their audiences, but they never gave up thinking and experimenting.
Rush's newest album is a live LP, "All The World's A Stage." But their most recent studio collection is called "2112" — a semi-concept album that tells the story of a future world devoid of artistic and intellectual pursuits, ruled by computers. Not, perhaps, a world-shaking artistic breakthrough, but a considerably better-than-average effort for a young rock 'n' roll band with a promising future of its own.
Neil Peart thinks a lot about what Rush is trying to tell its young and growing audience. He says the main message is — "be honest."
"Be honest... has to be an honest statement of what we want to hear and what we want to play. Honesty is the keynote, the principle which we try to apply to everything we do — the music, the business, our personal relationships with each other.
'I'd like to think that we are the message in our music — what we are and what we're trying to do. We just want to prove that it's possible to be successful and happy and still be honest. There are so many people doing music that they don't like."

The members of Rush are making music to suit themselves, admittedly within the confines of the hard rock form, but with little regard to popular taste. Rush tunes are rarely danceable despite the heavy beat, and Geddy's high piercing voice can sometimes be unpleasant, though always affecting.
'I think something can be progressive and commercial too,' says Peart. 'It's happened before — not enough times, but... well, there's so much involved between those two ideals. The trouble is, when you get successful, nobody believes you didn't want it.'
Does Rush really reject success?
'Well, I wouldn't say that — but it certainly isn't a priority with us. Like, we're really happy at the level we're at right now, selling around 200,000 records... because as soon as you start selling more, your free time, your time for thinking and writing and messing around starts to disappear. There's a happy medium there somewhere, but I guess you never know it — until you've gone by it.'

McKnight, 52, was sworn in by Supreme Court Justice T.C. Chadick in a simple ceremony in the Senate Chamber.

Album Brings Out Brilliance Of Early Operatic Composer

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER
United Press International Writer
During the Renaissance, some inspired citizens of Florence got together to enhance the dramas of ancient Greece. The finished product was opera.
These Florentinians called themselves "Camarata" and they developed the music that had come to them from the Middle Ages.
One of the first operatic composers was Jacopo Peri, who was later eclipsed by a contemporary, Claudio Monteverdi. Even so, Peri's music has endured for almost four centuries.
To appreciate the brilliance of Peri, the opera buff should listen to "Euridice" (Telefunken 6.35014), a two-LP album. Although there are no shining arias, the music is melodic and meaningful.
Like most of the early composers, Peri concentrated on the chorus and the voices in this production are strong and disciplined. Usually, the sound of the chorus is the most difficult to duplicate on records, but in this production it is clear.

This opera is based on the tragedy of Orpheus and Euridice, a story line that is familiar. Ottavio Rinuccini's libretto is enclosed, but there is no English translation. It doesn't really matter as the music transcends language.
Nerina Santini is Euridice and Rodolfo Farolfi is Orpheus. The prologue is sung by Adele Bonay. Angelo Ephrikian conducts I Solisti di Milano.
Since we tend to think that anything composed more than 300 years ago was primitive, "Euridice" is a pleasant reminder that such is not the case.
Among the later composers who developed the techniques of the "Camarata" were Alessandro Scarlatti and George Federic Handel. Some of their music may be heard on "Baroque Aires for Soprano and Trumpet" (Columbia M34518). The artists are soprano Judith Blegen and Gerhard Schwarz, trumpet. Handel is the better known composer and Miss Blegen sings arias from some of his operas. In addition to playing trumpet, Schwarz conducts the Columbia Chamber Ensemble.

Moving from the Renaissance to the present, no singer in the 1970s has made a greater impact than Luciano Pavarotti. The robust Italian tenor starred a few weeks ago on the televised production of "La Boheme" with Renata Scotta.
For those who need more of an introduction to this remarkable operatic tenor, "The Great Pavarotti" (London OS26510) includes favorite arias from Donizetti, Rossini and Verdi operas.

Merrill's Action Worries Brokers

By PHILIP GREER and MYRON KANDEL

Overlooked in all the commotion over Wall Street's latest big merger — between Dean Witter and Reynolds Securities — is an even more significant move for the industry and for investors. Industry leader Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith has raised compensation levels for its salesmen in an effort to capture an even bigger share of the business.

Ironically, the Justice Department (which quickly said it will look into the antitrust implications of the Witter-Reynolds merger) hasn't yet raised an eyebrow about Merrill's action, even though that move is likely to woo salesmen from smaller brokerage firms, weaken those brokers financially and make it tougher for them to keep going on their own.

The securities industry clearly is worried by the moves of both Dean Witter-Reynolds and Merrill. The Witter move alerts all firms that do business in Wall Street they will need lots more capital (the merged firm will have $166 million, second among firms that do business with the public) and a nationwide network of offices in order to survive.

Faulkner, Dawkins & Sullivan bit that bullet a few months ago when it joined forces with Shearson, Hayden Stone. Until then, Faulkner was trying to get capital of its own. Now, other brokers will be forced to build a national network and find the capital that move requires.

"It raises the ante," says Sanford I. Weill, chairman of Shearson, Hayden Stone.

The need for capital certainly will reduce the number of brokers and accelerate the consolidation to which the Street seems committed. Of course, Merrill Lynch will be a kingpin when that shrinkage has run its course. And its latest move to boost the salaries of its retail salesmen is seen as another step in that direction.

Merrill pays its salesmen salaries that are based on the commissions they produce. About two weeks ago, the firm lifted the percentage that its salesmen retain. For example, a salesman who formerly was paid about 22 percent of his commissions on business up to $50,000 now gets 30 percent. From $100,000 to $150,000, the split has been increased to 36 percent. In effect, the move could work out to an increase of about 25 percent for Merrill salesmen.

Washington regulators haven't become as worked up by the current trends in the industry as they were about forcing the changes that are causing them. The Securities and Exchange Commission apparently is content with almost any move that breaks up the Street's "private club" and brings on more competition.

There also, however, has been a lack of any reaction from individual investors, who certainly can't figure to see any long-term benefit. Most small traders still pay roughly the same commissions they paid before the changes started sweeping through the street.

The Justice Department's fast announcement that it would look into the Witter-Reynolds merger is ironic. It was Justice that originally forced negotiated rates on the industry and thus lit the fuse that is still burning. Justice threatened long, hard court action on the antitrust front if the SEC didn't move to eliminate fixed commission rates that brokers had charged. Now that the SEC — with the help of the industry's giants — has brought about negotiated rates (which already are beginning to have a heavy impact on the markets themselves), Justice has raised the antitrust flag again, because of the results.

Meanwhile, competition is centered on institutional business up to now — spurred in part by Merrill Lynch. Such competition has proved a mixed blessing at best. Most brokers don't make any money on once-lucrative institutional trades, which now bring in as little as five cents a share in commissions. They handle the business for good customers in the hope of keeping open channels that can generate business in some other areas, such as underwriting on new stock and bond issues.

From the institutions' point of view, they may be paying lower rates, but that means they can't buy as much research. That creates more pressure for mergers — and, in fact, most of the research-oriented firms already have disappeared.

Competition on retail business — for all but the largest individual investors — really doesn't exist, despite those ads you see in newspapers and on television. The discounts actually are small potatoes.

That's why Merrill's move makes brokers nervous. Their real fear is that once Merrill enlarges its market share, it will drop its rates, forcing everybody else to do the same. That would likely force more brokers down the merger route or out of business. It could be the time individual investors finally see some cuts in charges, but it also would be the forerunner of a tougher — and probably more expensive — market to deal with in the future.

Recycling Of Paper Can Yield Profits

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) — The office wastebasket can be a source of profit to any company that goes in for recycling wastepaper — if they do it intelligently, says John Veidt.

Veidt, chairman of the Paper Stock Conservation Committee of the American Paper Institute, said unfortunately most companies don't do it intelligently and hundreds of thousands of firms don't recycle at all.

Many firms that have tried recycling have been disappointed because the prices of baled wastepaper dropped precipitately from time to time or buyers just didn't seem much interested, but Veidt said they were not going about it properly.

He said there is plenty of opportunity for businesses interested in conserving paper resources. "There are 225 paper mills in this country that use wastepaper as a raw material every day, and many of them are looking for new supplies of office grades."

In addition to potential cash profit from sale of waste paper, and lower trash hauling costs, there are environmental benefits, Veidt said.

Success is not easy, he said, but the profit can be substantial. Detroit Edison Co. took in $24,000 last year in a paper recycling program that cost $12,000 to operate. "While that's not a lot of money for a company our size, we sure can't make that return on power sales," an executive said wryly.

The secret is to train workers not to throw everything in one wastebasket but to throw the premium grade paper waste, which may be worth $60 a ton, into one set of receptacles and the cheaper papers into others. If the paper is all mixed up in the bales, its value goes down dramatically because the cost of sorting it is prohibitive.

The most valuable office papers for recycling are letter bond, Xerographic papers, solid white envelopes, white ledger paper, computer printout paper and manila tab cards.

But a total of seven different grades of wastepaper are found in large offices and, for best financial results in selling them, they should be segregated and employees taught which receptacles to toss them in.

Stuart Millendorf, who looks after the wastepaper recycling at New York's twin-towered World Trade Center, says any sizable enterprise gets an additional advantage from paper recycling by cutting down on its monthly bill for hauling away refuse. Millendorf's crew collects a ton of segregated wastepaper daily. He estimated there is a profit of $9,000 a year on manila tabulating cards alone.

Even small offices generate significant quantities of waste paper.

At Barnett Bank in Tampa, Fla., the one-man paper collecting project of Paul Marovich, an accountant, now nets about $165 a month from the waste paper saved for him by other employees who pitched in to help when they heard of his "pet project to help reduce air pollution." Marovich donates this, in the name of Barnett Bank, to Suncoast Seabird Sanctuary, an institution that rescues injured birds.

Corn Husking Credited For Long Life

OAKLEY, Kan. (UPI) — An 82-year-old man, placing third in the state corn husking contest for contestants over 80, says husking corn has added 10 to 15 ears to his life. A. W. Luther of Quinter, Kan., was the oldest state contestant in the over-80 class. He tramped through the dusty rows, although he had been immobilized by a stroke 10 years ago. He was told by doctors at that time he would never walk again and that his right arm would remain paralyzed. Luther displayed lightning motions with that arm and big hands, grabbing, husking and tossing ear after ear of corn into a horse-drawn wagon. He exhibited a husking style he has practiced since 1922.

The state contest was only a preliminary to the 7th annual National Corn Husking contest, in which six states were represented by 14 contestants. In the event, sponsored by the Oakley Chamber of Commerce, contestants each took a row of corn and were given 20 minutes to throw as many ears as they could pick into a wagon. Under corn husking rules, points were deducted from the total score by the amount of unpicked corn in the row and the amount of ears of corn in the wagon with husks remaining on them.

Houston, A&M Win Grants

HOUSTON (UPI) — The University of Houston and Texas A&M University have been awarded $79,000 in grants to study new uses of coal.

UH officials said they will use their $40,000 grant to launch a two-year study of coal liquefaction, converting coal to a liquid fuel. A&M officials said their $39,942 grant will finance a coal chemistry study. The schools were among 24 institutions nationwide receiving Department of Energy grants totaling almost $1 million.

Elderly Parolee Gives 'Outside' Third Chance

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI) — San Quentin Prison's No. 1 senior citizen is giving the "outside" another chance.
Odd Cornell, 83, was released on parole last week after spending 50 years in the prison on the banks of San Francisco Bay. He will move to a rest home in the Sacramento Valley community of Exeter.
"I'd make it on the 'outside,' if someone would give me a hole in the wall and leave me alone," Cornell said.
However, those he left behind at San Quentin don't think he'll make it. Twice he was given his walking papers, and twice he couldn't adapt to the freedom, forcing his parole agent to take him back.
Cornell was sentenced to death for killing his wife after finding her in bed with another man. In 1934 the sentence was commuted to life without possibility of parole. In 1966 then Gov. Edmund G. Brown granted the no-parole provision.

In 1970 he was paroled. He wandered around, then returned to the prison saying he was lonesome. But officials said they could not take him back.
So Cornell took the matter into his own hands — he slugged his landlord. His parole was revoked. He was returned to San Quentin.
In 1975 he was paroled to a home in San Francisco's Mission District. Cornell didn't like all the animals kept by the owner so he left. He was then sent to a home in Santa Rosa, Calif. He couldn't make it there either, so again, he slugged the landlord.

Hughes Rudd Leaving 'Morning News' Program

By JAY SHARBUTT
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hughes Rudd, formerly of the Kansas City Star, the Minneapolis Tribune and the Rock Springs, Wyo., Daily Rocket, becomes former of the "CBS Morning News" anchor team Friday.

He's giving up his co-anchor job — but not appearances on the show — at his own request. Monday, Dick Threlkeld, who has worked for CBS in Vietnam, San Francisco and Rome, takes over.

Rudd, the amiable, gravel-voiced delegate from Waco, thinks that four years and three months of pre-dawn reveilles are enough. Now, it's time to rise with the sun, not before.

"I'm just terminally fatigued," he said, not sounding that way in a phone chat from New York, where he's been rising at 1 a.m. and reporting for work at 2:30 a.m. since July 1973.

Rudd, with CBS since 1959 in jobs ranging from news writer in New York to correspondent in Berlin and bureau chief in Moscow, said he originally asked for reassignment back to Western Europe.

But the brass wanted him to continue doing those sometimes sardonic, sometimes whimsical essays with which he ends each day's show.

So he'll do them live the next two weeks and help Threlkeld break in, then appear both live and on tape. He'll stay based in New York, but the deal is, he can blow town occasionally and essay from elsewhere.

"I hate New York and hate being nailed to it," emphasized Rudd, who also will do documentaries now. The first commences in mid-November, the subject being newspapers in America.

He said the project will take him to Miami, Phoenix, San Francisco and perhaps even Fun City.

"Now, that'll be fun — if I don't get shot," laughed the ex-newspaperman, last shot — in the arm — by a German fighter plane's bullets while flying an Army spotter plane in World War II.

Inquiries were made as to any regrets he ever agreed to get up so early for so long to do the "CBS Morning News."

"No, in a way it's been fascinating," he drawled. "It's been good for my professional career at CBS, no question. You get to be better known by far than when you're just a field hand."

"Which means," he mused, considering the side benefits, "I can get $2,000 for a speech before the Rotary Club instead of $150. Also, I didn't know whether I could do this kind of thing (news anchoring)."

"And actually I knew, I guess, within a couple of weeks I could do it — and I should of quit while I was ahead."

When he quits Friday, perchance there'll be a farewell blast?

"I hope not," the Texan sighed. "I hate those things. Every time a secretary here is transferred from one desk to another 20 feet away, they have a bleeping party, domestic champagne and all that.

Adams Says Color TVs Not Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Brock Adams doesn't feel all his top aides should have color televisions — and he's making sure they get the picture.

Adams recently ordered the return of 12 new sets costing $375 each, although government regulations permit high officials to have color televisions in their offices.

"Adams found out and said, 'We don't need them,'" according to David Jewell, the department's chief spokesman. "He's against redecorating in general."

Asked in a telephone interview why the sets were needed, Jewell replied, "I don't know the answer. I really don't."

Jewell, a recent appointee, admits he's still bewildered by regulations spelling out who's entitled to particular office furnishings — from television sets to art posters.

He feels the tale of the televisions is really a story of a runaway federal bureaucracy.

There are 110,000 Transportation Department employees, and Adams has no idea how many have government televisions, Jewell said.

"It's a common practice," Jewell said. "Every time there's a change in administration, there's almost an automatic procedure built in where TV sets are ordered for new people coming in."

He said the dozen sets were for officials who qualified for them after a recent departmental reorganization. Other officials brought in by Adams found sets waiting in their offices.

"In the previous administration, everybody entitled to one had one," Jewell said.

Adams found a color set in his office when he arrived. It's still there.

Jewell also has one, although he's not ranked high enough to demand one.

"A color one was left here and my deputy has a black and white," he said. "We're supposed to watch press conferences and news shows. If I weren't the public relations man, I wouldn't have one."

The people allowed sets are the secretary, assistant secretaries, deputy assistant secretaries, agency administrators and deputy administrators.

These employees have considerable management responsibility and earn at least $47,500 a year, Jewell said.

He added, "You're entitled to furniture if you're a certain rank. My office furniture and carpet are not red hot. An assistant secretary has a much nicer carpet and furniture. You also get pictures on your wall when you get to be a certain rank."

"I'm always putting that down, so I don't think they'd have the nerve. I'd just be surly," he said, and his voice didn't sound it, either.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) It may be necessary to bite the bullet in order to prevent discord with your mate tomorrow. Doing otherwise could stir up something regrettable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Your intuition and logic should furnish clues tomorrow to a fruitful course of action. If they're ignored, you could do something counterproductive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Making unreasonably heavy demands of a friend tomorrow could damage or even sever the relationship. Unkind words could also cut the cord.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You must not permit yourself to be intimidated tomorrow by persons involved in your career. Feelings of insecurity will provoke you to react erratically.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Make a list of things which you would like to accomplish tomorrow, or you might get off on tangents and forget your real priorities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone you're associated with may present you with a harebrained scheme tomorrow that could separate you from your hard-earned dollars. Listen not, leap not.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) This is definitely not the day to make important decisions under pressure. Outside influences hamper your thoughts.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In your anxiousness to get things done tomorrow you might use methods that will only cause further complications. Think before you turn the crank.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may experience some difficulty tomorrow in communicating as well as you'd like to. Should this occur, be consistent, patient and tolerant.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't take on more than you can competently handle tomorrow or stray too far from your area of expertise. Out of your element, you could founder.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Usually you're quick to perceive the essence of a fresh idea. Tomorrow, however, you'll tend to jump to erroneous conclusions. Triple-check facts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Read the small print in contracts and be wary of assuming the obligations of others. Money matters will be tricky tomorrow.

Coogan, 'Addams Family' To Mark Halloween

By VERNON SCOTT
 HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — What better way to celebrate Halloween than with the weirdo "Addams Family" which regrouped for a 90-minute television special to be seen Sunday?
 "The Addams Family" series left the air in 1966 after two years and 78 episodes. All of the original cast, including John Astin as Gomez, Carolyn Jones as Morticia and Ted Cassidy, Lurch the butler, are back in their ghoulish roles.
 Only the late Blossom Rock, who was Jeanette McDonald's sister and who played grandma, was missing. "Thing" and "Cousin It," along with the bizarre props (including the legs of a man being devoured by a swordfish), also are back in the Addams' haunted house.
 Weirdest of the clan, originated in the New Yorker magazine by cartoonist Charles Addams, is Uncle Fester, the bald, squeaky-voiced misanthrope played insidiously by the movies' first child star, Jackie Coogan.

"It was terrific reunion," Coogan observed the other day. "It was the first time we'd been together in 11 years."
 "We had no trouble re-establishing our roles. Just like old times, but with a fresh approach. We had nothing but laughs."
 "The old show was done on film in a studio. This time we taped it in an abandoned old mansion. The crew, all young people who did the taping, kept ruining takes by laughing out loud."
 Coogan has become Uncle Fester to the younger generation. But to oldsters he's still "The Kid," the ragamuffin who co-starred with Charlie Chaplin in 1920.

"I'll never live down my image as 'The Kid,'" he said. "But it's nice to be remembered as Fester too."

"Most people think 'The Kid' was my first film. Not so. Back in 1916, when I was 2, I worked in 'Skinner's Baby' at the old Essanay Studios in Chicago for a guy named Max Abrams. He later became Bronco Billy Anderson."

"But I became an instant child star with 'The Kid' and I loved every minute of the work and fun and activity that followed."

"It's not true that I missed having a childhood. I had a wonderful time surrounded by knowledgeable people who truly cared for me. I don't think it's better to grow up 'normal' and get the measles and mumps and have your front teeth knocked out."

"I led a sheltered life until I went to college. But I wasn't deprived and I can't say I missed anything as a kid except a lot of heartaches. If I had to do it over again, I'd just do it better."

At 63, Coogan has almost total recall and is putting his memory to use writing an autobiography. He already has filled 700 pages of manuscript and says he's only covered his life until the age of 6 when he made "The Kid."

His principal sources of research are two dozen enormous books of clippings, photographs and stories from newspaper and magazine accounts.

"The books get smaller as I get older," Coogan said. "I'm going to tell the truth and I'm writing it myself. Some people may be hurt, but I'm determined that readers know the facts."

Coogan earned a fortune making films for his own company under the guidance of his father. But the money was frittered away. As a consequence the "Coogan Law," protective child labor legislation, was established.

While the ex-child star isn't the multimillionaire he might have been had his earnings been saved and properly invested, Coogan is well off financially.

He owns a home in Palm Springs, where he spends eight months a year, and another in Malibu where he lives during the summer.

His youngest child, Christopher 11, hasn't done any acting. But his grandson, Keith, at 6 is a veteran of 35 television commercials.

"It's really funny," Coogan said, laughing. "Chris is Keith's uncle and they are great pals. They play together all the time."

"I'd like to see Keith continue with acting because I don't want a grandson who's a bum. I know he has talent. He's a little old man, really, very deep."

"He has the right perspective, just like I did. He can go from the world of grown-up work to being a child without being hurt. It's simple to adjust from the real to the unreal."

HURRICANE SEASON

The hurricane season runs from the start of June through the end of November, according to the National Weather Service.

"You can bet his earnings will be protected, thanks to the 'Coogan Law.' The only thing I'm really sorry about is the finances. I wish I had some of that money I earned in the days when I made $20,000 a week and the income tax was only 4 1/2 percent."

"I think I could have used it a lot better than it was used. Kids today have a much better shake. Not just money, but they work decent hours."

"In the old days we'd work day and night to finish sequences. These days the kids work only four or five hours."

"I have only one real regret. In 1923 that dog, Rin-Tin-Tin, had me out for the honor of top box office attraction in movies."

Dow Jones Off 3.46 At 798.08

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, with the Dow Jones industrial average slipping below the 800 level for the second straight day.

The Dow average of 30 blue chips, up more than 3 points at the outset, was off 3.46 at 798.08 by noon.

Gainers clung to a small lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts noted that some shopping for bargains and covering of previous short sales was touched off by the Dow's decline into the 790s for most of the day on Tuesday.

But they said many traders still seemed skeptical that the market was ready for a sustained rally after its broad and steady declines of late.

Citicorp was the most active NYSE issue, unchanged at 20 1/4. A 105,900-share block traded at 21.

The Big Board's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was down 10 to 49.76 On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index lost 0.8 to 111.30.

Volume on the NYSE totaled 9.51 million shares by noon, against 10.10 million at the same point Tuesday.

Continental Oil dropped 1/2 to 28 in active trading after a 1 1/2-point loss Tuesday, when the company reported a 24 percent decline in its third quarter earnings.

Soviet Scientists Disagree On Nuclear Power

By PEGGY POLK
MOSCOW (UPI) — Normally, the official Soviet press is quick to seize upon mass anti-government demonstrations in the West as fresh evidence of the failure of the capitalist system.

But when 30,000 French, West Germans, Belgians and Swiss staged a protest at the site of France's super Phoenix fast breeder nuclear reactor in Creys-Melville recently, the Soviets remained silent.

Not a word about the demonstration appeared in newspapers. Nothing was said about the incident on radio or television.

Instead, at least in part of the benefit of the considerable number of Soviets who listen to Voice of America and Radio Liberty news reports, a series of newspaper articles appeared extolling the virtues of atomic power in terms of efficiency, economy and safety.

The reason is that the Soviets have opted to go nuclear in a big way. And the last thing the Kremlin wants is to sensitize its complacent citizenry to the environmental and safety issues which have triggered sometimes violent debate in much of the non-Communist world.

Controversy over nuclear power does exist within Soviet scientific and engineering circles. Critics include one of the country's most distinguished scientists, Pyotr Kapitsa, 83, the founding father of Soviet nuclear physics.

Kapitsa warned almost two years ago in a speech at the 250th anniversary celebration of the Academy of Sciences that accident or sabotage at a standard million kilowatt atomic power station could release as much radioactivity as the Hiroshima atom bomb.

He said atomic power stations should be built far from populated areas.

Kapitsa also asserted that the problems of adequately disposing of atomic waste and of dealing with the increased supplies of plutonium-235, key ingredient of nuclear weapons, created by fast breeder nuclear reactors, remained unsolved.

But the speech was not published and the Soviets are going ahead with construction during the current five-year plan of more and bigger plants in the populous European part of the country.

The Soviet plan calls for 10 new nuclear reactors to start operation by 1980, amounting to 20 percent of all newly commissioned power plants and 13 to 15 million kilowatts.

By 1985 the rate of commissioning nuclear power stations will double and after 1990 the Soviets intend to begin switching on a large scale from the present thermal reactors to plutonium-producing fast breeders.

It is ironic that the Soviet Union is plunging so heavily into nuclear power with all its attendant problems. Not only is this country the world's largest producer of oil, but also a major source of coal and natural gas. Its deposits of these fuels are believed to be the largest in any single country.

The catch is geographical. "The eastern part of the country now consumes about 80 percent of electric energy while its fuel resources constitute one quarter of the country's supplies," an article in Pravda pointed out.

"We have to go further and further to the east and the north to get oil, coal and gas," Pravda noted.

More than 350 million tons of fuels are being transported annually from east to west at a cost of many billions of rubles and the demand for energy to power industry in the west is increasing, the newspaper said.

Transportation is not only expensive, it involves massive engineering and logistics problems.

The Siberian permafrost makes construction and maintenance of oil pipelines costly and difficult. Coal, while abundant, has a higher ash content and lower calorific content than U.S. deposits, meaning it creates more pollution while providing less heat.

Even with construction of the 1,860-mile Baika-Amur Railroad in the far northeast, rail facilities are inadequate to transport enough coal west to meet energy needs.

The coal could be burned near mines and sent west as electricity, but this requires construction of expensive superconducting high voltage transmission lines.

Hydropower resources are mainly in the Urals which divide the western or European part of the Soviet Union from the east.

Nuclear power remains an overwhelmingly attractive option for Soviet planners.

To supply its own needs and those of its partners in Eastern Europe plus Cuba as well as possible clients in the West and the Third World, the Soviet Union is constructing a giant plant to turn out nuclear reactors in an assembly line process.

Called Atomash, for Atomic Machinery, the plant is situated on the banks of the Don River where it meets the Volga at Volgograd. The first stage of the plant is scheduled to be completed in time for the 60th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution Nov. 7.

A complex of three factories and a high-rise office building, it will cover 1,600 acres, including a serpentine six-mile-long assembly line turning out million kilowatt reactor units to be shipped out on barges from a special dock at Volgograd.

The Soviets have long been pioneers in nuclear power. They built the first nuclear power station at Obninsk near Moscow in 1954, started up the first operational fast breeder reactor at Shevchenko on the Caspian Sea in 1973 and last March became the first to maintain a controlled thermonuclear reaction.

"The rules of the construction of the atomic power stations envisaging effective measures for the protection of the station's personnel and of the surrounding populated areas from the harmful effects of radioactive fuel were worked out in the Soviet Union when the use of this kind of energy was just beginning," the official Tass news agency reported in a recent dispatch.

Tass said that with strict observance of these rules there have been "no accidents in which people would be subjected to radiation."

Zhores Medvedev, a dissident Soviet biochemist now living in London, claimed last year he had evidence that the Soviet Union suffered a major disaster killing hundreds of people 20 years ago when nuclear waste exploded in an underground shelter in the South Urals.

The official press has said that such wastes are buried "at great depths in the Karst Caves" — probably in the Urals. But Western nuclear experts have tended to discount Medvedev's allegations as science fiction or to claim that not enough evidence exists to take a position.

The Soviets profess to be as concerned as President Carter over the danger of proliferation of nuclear explosives — fed by the plutonium byproduct of fast breeder reactors.

But while Carter has called for suspension of fast breeder development pending a two-year study on nuclear fuel, the Soviets are proceeding with construction of their second and larger fast breeder facility, the BN600 at Beloyarsk in the Central Urals.

They already carry out plutonium reprocessing for their Comecon partners and then operate international plutonium storage by holding onto the results.

And they have made it plain they are in favor of setting up international controls on plutonium storage as a safeguard through the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Artist Says He Walks 'Tightrope'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Ilya Glazunov, the bad boy of the Soviet art establishment, appears to have emerged unscathed from his latest and worst clash with authority after doing penance in Siberia.

Three months ago Glazunov challenged Soviet cultural powers by trying to exhibit a painting so blatantly controversial that it was banned as an "anti-Soviet caricature."

Glazunov called the huge canvas, which fills an entire wall of his studio, "The Mystery of the 20th Century." He described it as a work of "philosophical realism" that attempts to sum up contemporary history as Dante did 600 years ago in "The Divine Comedy."

Soviet authorities balked at the painting because among the scores of figures acting out modern history from the Russian Revolution to the present are such political pariahs as Trotsky, Stalin, Mao and Solzhenitsyn.

Insisting that the work is his "masterpiece," the 47-year-old Glazunov cancelled his first Moscow show in 13 years rather than remove the painting.

But he was obviously shaken by the clash. The all-powerful Ministry of Culture had hinted at reprisals, he told Western correspondents, perhaps the loss of his spacious studio and curtailment of the privilege of traveling abroad to paint the portraits that have given him an international reputation.

Glazunov remained intransigent on the painting but moved swiftly to redeem himself. He wrote a letter to the official Tass news agency complaining that a number of Western publications had "largely distorted" his views and denying any "conflict" with authorities.

He then set off on a journey to Siberia to paint portraits and scenes at construction sites of the Baikal-Amur Mainline (BAM), the Soviets' "railway of the century."

Glazunov spent most of the month of August in Western Siberia, working from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m. to produce 50 paintings and drawings to be submitted for publication as a folio of prints.

The painter said a Soviet publishing house invited him to make the trip a year ago but he had put it off to prepare for his exhibition, which was scheduled to open in late June.

His detractors in both official and unofficial Soviet art circles said that by August Glazunov was begging for the chance to go. Siberia was his road to rehabilitation.

Glazunov complains that he "walks a tightrope," criticized on one side for deviating from approved Socialist realism, on the other for being an agent of the KGB state security police and by both as an opportunist, all of which he denies. But he admits that he welcomed the trip to Siberia and he claims that he enjoyed it.

Carter Cromwell McEachern 'Story' Good, But False

RANDY MCEACHERN DENIES it, but it makes a good story, anyway. Supposedly, matters progressed thusly:

It was the week of the Texas-Oklahoma game, the battle for blood and state pride and just incidentally one between the nation's second- and fourth-ranked teams. McEachern, a junior squadman who hadn't played a varsity down until this season, was Texas' third-string quarterback, so he didn't envision himself playing a lot versus the Sooners.

"They might as well not even take me to Dallas," he was said to have confided to friends. "No third-string quarterback ever got to play against Oklahoma."

McEachern laughed earlier this week when queried about the "incident."

"I certainly didn't think that I'd get to play, but I figured I was going, since we always take three quarterbacks. The quote isn't correct."

It's incorrect in more ways than one. McEachern, in fact, got to play against Oklahoma. A bunch. He entered the game in the first half when first- and second-team quarterbacks Mark McBath and Jon Aune were injured in the short stretch of seven offensive plays, and he directed the Longhorns to a 13-6 victory. McBath and Aune are out for the season, so the starting job is McEachern's.

PERHAPS IT WAS best for him and Texas that the call to action came as a surprise.

"I was nervous, of course, but not too much so, because things happened so quickly," he said. "I didn't have time to think about it. I was standing on the sideline, and, the next thing I knew, I was in the game."

"I don't really remember what the first play was that we ran. It was probably just a straight handoff or something just so everybody could get loosened up. You don't want a new quarterback to run a real risky play on the first down he's in there."

Losing its top two quarterbacks in the same quarter isn't the greatest morale booster for a team, but McEachern says the rest of the offensive unit didn't let such an attitude show through.

"They gave me more confidence than I had at first," he said. "After all, you can't sit around and mope about your losses. You have to help the new guy. You have to go with what you have."

Since then, the 5-11, 172-pounder has gained a great deal of confidence. Working with the first team in practice regularly has made a difference. And winning, of course, is the finest confidence-builder. UT has defeated Oklahoma, Arkansas and SMU with McEachern in the lineup.

"I GOT TO play quite a bit in our first three games (all routs), and that helped. Then, I got to work with the first team that whole week between the Oklahoma and Arkansas games, and that's when I really began to feel confident in myself. I'd never worked with the first team before, and it was a matter of getting our timing down."

This all could easily be overwhelming for McEachern, considering his background. He had been redshirted one season and suffered a knee injury during two-a-days in August 1976 that caused him to miss all of last year.

This past spring, he was moved to the secondary, but couldn't engage in contact work because of his knee. At all times, there have been two or three quarterbacks ahead of him on the depth chart, and this was naturally discouraging.

"When I got that knee injury, I kind of wondered if I'd ever get to play," the Pasadena Dobie product said. "But I continued to work out and didn't give up hope totally."

But it sure looked like it would be a long wait in the spring when I saw McBath, Aune and (Ted) Constanzo ahead of me.

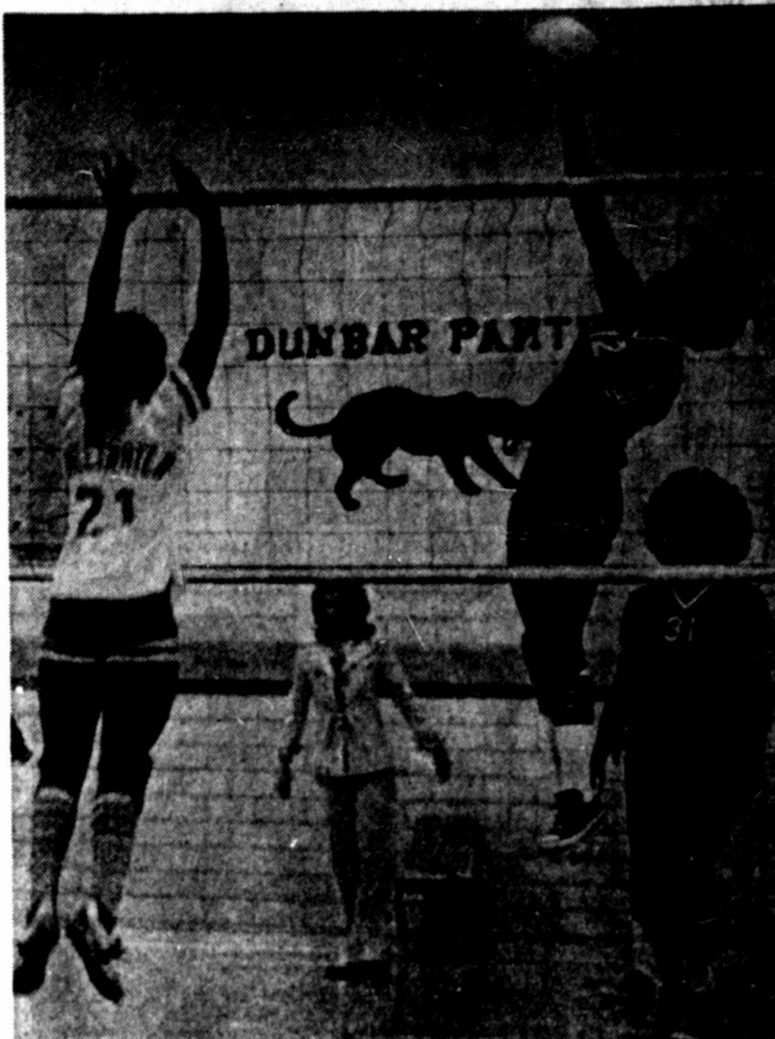

"IN THE SPRING, I worked on my leg and tried to make sure it was in top condition. I felt discouraged and depressed at times, but I talked to coach (Fred) Akers at the end of the spring and asked if I could be tried at quarterback again. He said okay because the situation wasn't solved, and I worked on my skills all summer and tried to be in top shape for the fall."

Late in the summer, Constanzo suffered a knee injury that required surgery, and McEachern moved up to No. 3, setting up 1977's early-season chain of events.

A parallel exists between McEachern and the Longhorn team. Before the season, neither was expected to do particularly well, but have surprised thus far. Texas, because of its overall inexperience, was picked around the middle of the SWC race, although most observers pointed out that, with a few breaks and development at a few positions, things could turn out better. Currently, of course, UT is 6-0 and ranked No. 1 in the nation.

"We had confidence before the season that we'd have a pretty good team," McEachern said. "We felt we'd go pretty far. The thing I'm most proud of is that nobody's given up when we got behind. A lot of people wondered how good we were after our first three games, but we got behind against Oklahoma and Arkansas and came back to win."

No one denies that it's been a good story for the Longhorns so far.

Dodger Boss NL Honoree

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Lasorda, head cheerleader of baseball's "Sunshine Boys," the Los Angeles Dodgers, was named the National League's Manager of the Year today.

The vibrant Lasorda won the award as easily as his team took the National League pennant this past season — scoring a landslide victory over seven competitors.

Lasorda, who preached "love and togetherness" while leading the Dodgers to the National League pennant in his rookie year, collected 338 votes from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters polled by The Associated Press.

Herman Franks of the Chicago Cubs, Lasorda's closest competitor, wasn't even in the same ballpark with 39 votes.

Danny Ozark, whose Philadelphia Phillies won the East title before losing to the Dodgers in the NL playoffs, finished third in the voting with 32.

Houston's Bill Virdon was fourth with 8 votes, followed by Vern Rapp of the St. Louis Cardinals and Sparky Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds, 2 each, and San Diego's Alvin Dark and Pittsburgh's Chuck Tanner, 1 each.

Lasorda, a longtime loyal organization man who "bleeds Dodger Blue," inherited the manager's job upon the retirement of the venerable Walter Alton last year.

The change was noticeably dramatic, both in terms of managerial personality and artistic accomplishment. A flamboyant, free-wheeling character with a repertoire of one-line jokes, Lasorda was a distinct contrast to Alton's quiet, meditative ways.

Lasorda's reaction to getting the job on Sept. 29, 1976 was typical of things to come.

"I've got this terrible weight problem," he said. "I can't weight' to get started."

Lasorda continued to bombard his Dodgers and newsmen alike with similar stuff all through the 1977 season. At one point during the year when he truly had a weight problem, the whimsical Lasorda quipped: "I'm on a seafood diet. I eat everything I see."

Then when there was a threat of rain for one World Series game in New York, Lasorda said without blinking: "We're equipped to play in the rain. After all, we have a Penguin on our team."

Lasorda's reference, of course, was to third baseman Ron Cey, the power-hitter.

Fem Golf

HOUSTON (AP) — Alicia Ogrin of Oklahoma State University is the new champion of the Houston Baptist University's Women's Invitational Golf Tournament.

The OSU freshman fired a one over par final round 72 Tuesday to give her a total of 210 for the 54-hole tournament.

a total of 210 for the 54-hole tournament.

Lori Garbacz of the University of Florida was second with 214. Other individual leaders included Mary Beth Murphy of Southern Methodist 221 and Sherry Donovan of Houston Baptist and Cindy Lincoln of the University of Texas each with 222.

Florida won the team championship with a total 898. SMU was second with 915 followed by Texas with 921 and Houston Baptist with 929.

Earl Campbell

AUSTIN (AP) — Johnny "Ham" Jones is too busy blocking to see teammate Earl Campbell run much but Jones, part of a growing chorus, recognizes that "the big man's really rolling."

Campbell rolled 32 times for 213 yards, including a 58-yard touchdown sprint, in Texas' 30-14 victory over Southern Methodist last Saturday.

That was enough to make Campbell The Associated Press' offensive player-of-the-week in the Southwest Conference for the second straight week — but there was more.

"Earl Campbell had probably the best offensive performance in the nation," says Texas coach Fred Akers. "He ran just like a Heisman Trophy candidate should run."

"He had some great, strong runs, recovered a fumble to save a field goal and had a tackle on an interception. He just had an all-around great game."

SMU coach Ron Meyer said of Campbell's thunder and lightning touchdown run — in which he faked past a linebacker and shook off two defensive backs — "that's the Tony Dorsett in him."

Dorsett won the Heisman at Pittsburgh last year before signing a lucrative contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

"I don't think anybody is ever going to stop Earl Campbell," said Meyer. "He's just the best runningback in the nation."

SMU linebacker Champ Dickerson said of Campbell, "He has to be the most intense player I've ever seen. It looked like he was going to bite right through his mouthpiece a couple of times."

The yardage against SMU hiked Campbell's total for the year to 899 — or nearly 150 yards a game. With an SWC record of 3,596 in 3½ seasons, Campbell has moved past Ricky Bell, former Southern California star, as the 13th all-time NCAA rusher.

Akers insists that Campbell, a 220-pound senior, is the leading contender for the 1977 Heisman, saying, "Earl Campbell is the best runningback to come out of this state. He has power and grace."

"He's also a team man. The line enjoys blocking for a guy like Earl. He's unselfish. I'm proud to have him on my football team."

Tom Landry

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have outscored their six National Football League victims 76-21 in the second half and Tom Landry calls it the best conditioned team he has coached in his 17-year career.

"Our conditioning is the best it has ever been," said Landry. "That's definitely a factor in the fourth quarter."

Dallas has blitzed Minnesota, the New York Giants, Tampa Bay, St. Louis, Washington and Philadelphia 52-6 in the fourth quarter.

"The enthusiasm of the young players gives the older players incentive and this leads to a confident team," said Landry, who put the team through a rugged training camp after extensive off-season conditioning.

Landry said his team hasn't been playing well but makes the big play when it has to like the blocked punt which led to Sunday's 16-10 victory over Philadelphia.

"Hopefully we will regain some of our emotion," said Landry. "We played two very emotional games against St. Louis and Washington. We were emotionally drained against Philadelphia."

Landry was heartened by a medical report which said cornerback Aaron Kyle could play with a cast on his broken wrist.

"Kyle can play if we want to use him and he's a possible starter," said Landry.

The Cowboy coach praised defensive lineman Randy White, who Landry called a "one man team on defense" against Philadelphia.

"Randy performed just about as good as you can," said Landry of the Outland Trophy winner from Maryland, a former No. 1 draft choice who started out the year as a linebacker.

"Randy is in the right place," said Landry.

Detroit comes to Texas Stadium Sunday and Dallas can register its best start in the club's history with a seventh consecutive victory.

Asked if he agreed with some coaches who have called the Cowboys "awesome," Landry said, "I don't agree. We are still winning but we have plenty of room to improve."

Longhorns

AUSTIN (UPI) — Both of the starting defensive ends for the No. 1 Texas Longhorns missed Tuesday's workout with injuries suffered in last week's win over SMU.

Henry Williams has a sprained ankle and Dwight Jefferson is bothered with rib injuries. Coach Fred Akers said Jefferson "is going to have to get much better to be ready to play" in this Saturday's game against Texas Tech.

Tim Campbell and Ron Bones took Williams' and Jefferson's places at the workout.

Cougars

HOUSTON (UPI) — Sophomore Derrick Brown will start at quarterback for the Houston Cougars in their game against TCU Saturday, says coach Bill Yeoman.

Yeoman said Brown has been bothered by a sore toe and will be backed up by Yeoman said Brown has been bothered by a sore toe and will be backed up by freshman Darrell Shepard.

Yeoman said the Cougars did not plan many changes in their basic offense and defense for the TCU game.

"What we have to do is just work harder and improve what we're doing. We have to execute," said Yeoman.

Texas A&M

COLLEGE STATION (UPI) — Texas A&M coach Emory Bellard said Tuesday fullback George Woodard was suffering from a strained hamstring muscle and that even if Woodard can play Saturday against SMU his work will be limited during the week.

Woodard pulled the muscle during workouts Monday.

"We'll have to wait and see whether he'll play Saturday," said Bellard. "If he can't play we'll have to go with Eddie Hardin at fullback."

A&M has had two less than distinguished games since losing to Michigan, but the Aggies remain tied for the SWC lead going into the game with SMU.

TV Offer

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M Coach Emory Bellard said Tuesday that ABC television asked him if he would switch the Dec. 3 nationally televised game with Houston to an A&M-Texas matchup Thanksgiving Day, but the network pulled the offer back because it wouldn't meet certain stipulations.

Bellard said ABC-TV was told it would have to satisfy the University of Houston and that he didn't wish to switch the game with Texas from Saturday to the preceding Thursday.

He said ABC-TV couldn't go for the Horn-Aggie game scheduled Nov. 26 on a Saturday.

ABC-TV passed this Saturday's game between No. 1 ranked Texas and No. 14 ranked Texas Tech in Austin.

There was speculation that ABC-TV was gambling Texas would beat Tech so it could televise the Nov. 19 Baylor-Texas game as the second matchup of a doubleheader with Michigan-Ohio State.

Houston is on NCAA probation and will not be permitted on television next year.

At Houston, UH Athletic Director Harry Fouke said he was not contacted until Sunday.

"We were contacted. We did do-line to change," Fouke said, "simply because we had made the arrangement early."

Contrary to the obvious reasoning of ABC-TV that the A&M-Texas game currently looms as possibly more important and more attractive, Fouke said, "We think it's (the UH-A&M game) is going to be a fine game and one that will have a definite effect on who wins the championship."

"We do feel there are guidelines and it isn't particularly fair for any school to change the guidelines in the middle of the season."

TIAA Honorees

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Rod Hinson of Trinity University and Karl Meisenbach of Austin College Tuesday were named co-winners of the offensive player of the week award by the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Armando Zapata of McMurry was selected as defensive player of the week in the TIAA.

Hinson, the TIAA's leading rusher with 647 yards, ran 21 times for 125 yards and two touchdowns and caught a 24-yard pass for another score in Trinity's 47-14 win over Baptist Christian.

The freshman Meisenbach passed for 228 yards and a touchdown and ran for 31 more yards in Austin College's 31-13 loss to Benedictine, Kan.

Zapata registered 11 tackles and 10 assists, three quarterback sacks and a pass deflection from his linebacker position in McMurry's 21-7 victory over Sul Ross.

'Ring Of Honor'

DALLAS (UPI) — Dallas Cowboys President and General Manager Tex Schramm said Tuesday the club would honor former linebacker Chuck Howley as the fourth member of its "ring of honor," during halftime ceremonies of the Detroit game next Sunday.

Howley played outside linebacker for 13 years with the Cowboys and is the only player from a losing team ever to be chosen most valuable player of a Super Bowl game. He was so honored in Super Bowl V, which the Cowboys lost to Baltimore.

Howley will join Bob Lilly, Don Meredith and Don Perkins in the Cowboys ring of honor and his name and number will be displayed on the blue ring which divides the lower and upper decks of Texas Stadium.

MR. EFFICIENCY CINCINNATI (UPI) — Ken Anderson of the Cincinnati Bengals has completed 57.8 percent of his passing attempts, the highest lifetime completion percentage in National Football League history. Anderson has completed 1,042 of 1,804 attempts since entering the league in 1971.

Sparky Lyle Snares AL Young Award

NEW YORK (AP) — After shutting a lot of doors during the 1977 baseball season, Sparky Lyle has opened a new one for relief pitchers.

"Maybe now they'll start to be recognized after sweating blood out there in the bullpen day after day," says the New York Yankee pitcher. "I think that now people will stop and think about all the short-inning men who have worked so hard in this game."

Lyle was equally proud of his achievement of winning the Cy Young Award Tuesday as he was bringing a new status to his breed.

"That's the best part of it—I'm happy not only for myself but for what it does for relief pitchers," said Lyle after becoming the first reliever in the American League to win the prestigious award.

"By me winning it does a lot of good for all relief pitchers. It gives them more recognition and it means people are beginning to realize the importance of relief pitchers. That's what this award means to me."

The only previous reliever to win the Cy Young award as best pitcher in his league was Mike Marshall of the National League's Los Angeles Dodgers in 1974.

Lyle, who had 26 saves to go with a 13-5 record, finished with 56½ points to edge Baltimore's Jim Palmer, a previous three-time winner who received 48 points in the voting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Strikeout king Nolan Ryan of the California Angels was third with 46 points.

Lyle collected nine first-place votes, three for second and 2½ for third place from 28 BBWAA writers, two in each American League city. The point system awards five for first, three for second and one for third.

Tom Lasorda

"I told our players that we were going to win the pennant," Lasorda said. "I said it because I believed it and I wanted the players to believe it."

The Dodger feedback on Lasorda was entirely positive all summer. Many found his college enthusiasm refreshing and all have nice things to say about him.

"They have tremendous respect for Lasorda," said one Dodger-watcher, "because he gave them his respect."

"When I got a telephone call about the award, I was so choked up I couldn't talk," said Lyle. "I was so nervous ... and at the same time, so happy."

After getting over the initial shock, Lyle had no trouble talking.

"It's really too much for one person to handle—the first the playoffs, then winning the World Series, and now this!" exclaimed the tobacco-chewing southpaw. "It's fantastic!"

The 33-year-old Lyle, for long one of the majors' best relief pitchers, led the Yankees to the AL East title for the second straight year, appearing in 72 games. Along the way, he carved out a league-leading 2.7 earned run average.

Lyle's victories in Games 4 and 5 of the AL playoffs against Kansas City sent the league champions into the World Series, where the reliever picked up the opening-game victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Although Lyle pointed out that the Cy Young Award was "worth its weight in gold," he didn't plan on renegotiating his contract, which still has two years to run.

Yankee owner George Steinbrenner has already compensated him for his fine season, he says.

"George has been just great to me," noted Lyle, indicating that an extension of his contract or a bonus, or both, might have been his reward for being the Yankees' golden arm this year.

Three QBs Head A-J Honor Roll

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A trio of quarterbacks, one runningback-linebacker and a 1976 All-State defensive lineman grabbed top billing on this week's Avalanche-Journal Area Honor Roll.

The quarterbacks are Junior Ashmore of Hale Center, Kenny Brockman of Nazareth and Calvin Wilke of Wilson. Neil Wilhelm of Nazareth was the two-way standout and Sudan's Lonnie Williams.

Ashmore, a sophomore, hit on 10 of 14 passes for 125 yards and one TD plus connected on a conversion try in the Owls' 31-7 win over Ralls.

Brockman also hit on 10 of 14 aerials for 120 yards and a TD, but he rushed for 98 yards and another score in a 43-19 win over Silverton.

Wilke was an all-around performer in Wilson's 35-14 triumph over Klondike. He hit on 5 of 12 passes for 87 yards and two TDs, he rushed 14 times for 56 yards and 1 TD, caught a PAT pass, ran over a PAT, returned a punt 83 yards for a score and hauled back an interception 29 yards for a six-pointer. Oh, yes, he also had six tackles.

Wilhelm scored four touchdowns for Nazareth, including a 92-yard kickoff return. He had six carries for 50 yards, blocked a punt and had 15 tackles.

Williams, a mere 5-9, 145-pound nose guard, had four unassisted tackles and 18 assists in Sudan's 35-6 win over Lazbuddie. For the season he had 32 tackles and 77 assists.

Others turning in excellent outings include:

- The Hale Center trio of Bob Heath (17 carries, 161 yards), Tony Clark (6 carries, 68 yards including 37 yard TD run) and Rodney Keeton (three catches for 39 yards and one TD).

- Eddie Johnson of Kress, 14 carries for 116 yards and two TDs-plus ran over conversion that put Kangaroos ahead to stay in 43-28 victory over Farwell.

- The Valley trio of Darrell Dowd (15-173, 1 TD), Kirk Proctor (13-108, 1 TD plus 2-5 passing for 60 yards and also passed for one PAT) and Kenneth Helms (16-91, 2 TDs) in stunning 34-0 win over state-ranked Motley Coun y.

- The Slaton trio of John Johnson (24-163, 1 TD), Steve White (8 of 15 passes for 154 yards, 2 TDs) and Michael Piwonka (3-98, 1 TD) in a 40-7 victory over Post.

- The Sudan trio of Joel Williams (17-116 plus one TD reception), John Miles (14-132, 2 TDs) and Darren Provence (6-14 passes for 103 yards, 1 TD) in 35-6 win over Lazbuddie.

- Springlake-Earth's Tim May, who had 14 tackles and three assists in 15-12 win over Bovina. Teammate Ronnie James carried 15 times for 98 yards and one TD. May, a fullback, scored TD which put S-E ahead in final period.

- Tahoka's Randy Meeks had 19 tackles in a 13-7 win over Roosevelt. Clifford Bailey had 24-120, 1 TD for victors.

- Eunice's Steve Dean carried 7 times for 80 yards and the fullback caught three passes for 39 more yards in a 7-6 loss to Ft. Sumner.

AP Picks Texas Over Tech 20-10

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
NEW YORK (AP) — It was back in January and the American Football Coaches Association was holding its annual convention in Hollywood, Fla. Texas Tech's Steve Sloan wandered up to Lost Tree Village, Jack Nicklaus' course, and a rumor began making the rounds that he sandbagged the Golden Bear in an 18-hole shootout.

"Naw, I didn't sandbag anyone," Sloan says. "I hadn't played in about six months and I shanked a few off the practice tee so Jack gave me 10 strokes."

That was one of Nicklaus' few mistakes. Sloan, you see, is a scratch golfer, the reason the AFCA changed its annual tournament from medal play to a scramble to give other folks a chance. And even though a rusty Sloan shot a 78, Nicklaus' 71 wasn't good enough to prevent $5 from changing hands.

"Sounds like you sandbagged Nicklaus," Sloan was told. He just laughed. "I'm over the hill now," he said. "Coaching's too rough on me."

Sloan would like to sandbag Texas, the nation's No. 1 team, come Saturday, but he'll probably be forced to go without clutch quarterback Rodney Allison, who suffered a broken bone in his leg Sept. 24. "He can't run," Sloan said earlier in the week. "He can't even jog and we haven't figured out any plays where he doesn't have to run."

Running doesn't present a problem to Texas. "I'm a little surprised by their record," Sloan admits. "We didn't realize they had such team speed. If they're not the fastest team in the country, they're certainly in the top three."

Sloan... Texas 20-10.

Last week's score was 52 right and 24 wrong for a .684 percentage. On the season, it's 350 right, 146 wrong and 10 ties for .707.

Alabama at Mississippi State: "I think if we win the rest of our games we'll win the national championship," says Bear Bryant. "We've got to worry about the teams we play, though, and Mississippi

State is the next one." The Bulldogs apparently have been looking ahead to Alabama for three weeks while losing to Kentucky, Memphis State and Southern Mississippi. That's long enough. Upset Special of the Week... Mississippi State 24-22.

Wisconsin at Ohio State: Michigan walloped the Badgers 56-0 and Woody Hayes likes to think that anything Bo Schemmeler can do he can do better. Uh-uh... Ohio State 33-14.

Oklahoma at Kansas State: When Oklahoma hired Barry Switzer, they were warned he'd lose a game every so often. He's already lost one this year... Oklahoma 38-14.

Navy at Notre Dame: The Midshipmen almost upset the Irish last year, losing by only 27-21. The folks in South Bend were so impressed that George Welsh's name is the latest one in the ND coaching sweepstakes. Dan Devine's looking better, though, after last week's 30-point shellacking of Southern Cal, so don't look for the expected post-SC letdown... Notre Dame 35-7.

Iowa at Michigan: When the Wolverines lost to Purdue last year, they bounced back by trouncing Illinois 98-7. Now, they're coming off a loss to Minnesota, so... Michigan 38-7.

Virginia Tech at Kentucky: VPI was supposed to be one of stronger Southern independents, but it hasn't worked out that way. Meanwhile, Tennessee's Johnny Majors says he "wouldn't be a bit surprised" but what "Ol' Kaintuck" is the most powerful team in the Southeastern Conference... Kentucky 41-0.

Arkansas at Rice: Has anyone seen that Razorback hog mascot which escaped before the season? Sooy... Arkansas 42-7.

Miami, Fla., at Penn State: The Hurricanes always play the tough teams close. They lost to Ohio State 10-0 and Georgia Tech 10-6 and beat Florida State, then lost to Texas Christian. The Nittany Lions are a tough team... Penn State 21-14.

Southern California at California: Forget Cal for the Rose Bowl, but a victory would make the Golden Bears very attractive for some other bowl. Unfortunately... Southern Cal 27-14.

Nebraska at Oklahoma State: Terry Miller would like to remind you that Hipp who's king of the Big Eight ground gainers. Second Upset Special... Oklahoma State 28-21.

Minnesota at Indiana: He who lives by the upset dies by the upset. Third Upset Special... Indiana 21-13.

North Texas State at Florida State: One of these teams—North Texas is 7-1, Florida State 6-1—is going to look awfully good to the bowl people when this one's over... Florida State 17-14.

this one's over... Florida State 17-14.

North Carolina at Maryland: Terps have their backs against the wall in North Carolina at Maryland: Terps have their backs against the wall in their bid for another Atlantic Coast championship... Maryland 24-17.

Washington at UCLA: John Nelson, The AP's resident Husky, says UCLA "always beats us in Los Angeles." We don't take much convincing... UCLA 24-14.

... But Major Hoople Tabs Red Raiders 27-24

By MAJOR AMOS B. HOOPLE
AMAZIN' Pigskin Prophet
Egad, friends, the upset trend continues across the country and this week we have another startling prediction for you—Steve Sloan's Texas Tech Red Raiders will rise to the superlative heights to corral the hard-driving Texas Longhorns and their super runner Earl Campbell.

Yes, dear readers, the Red Raiders will match Campbell and Russell Erxleben point-for-point and then add three more to win 27-24—har-rumph!

Anywhere else you care to look across the country, there is sensational football on tap this week. In no particular order, here are some of the big ones: Brigham Young sophomore quarterback Marc Wilson, filling in for the injured great Gifford Nelson, will lead the Cougars past Arizona 42-21 as BYU continues its relentless drive toward the Western Athletic throne room.

Farther west, Southern California will continue its drive to the Rose Bowl by stopping a very good California team 28-22 at Berkeley.

In some interesting Big Eight matchups, we like Nebraska over Oklahoma State 24-18, Oklahoma over Kansas State 38-17 and Colorado to whip Missouri 16-14 in a hard-hitting contest at Boulder.

Down south, Florida visits Auburn and will come home with a 22-12 triumph. And in an outstanding doubleheader at Jackson, Miss., the Rebels of Ole Miss will edge out LSU 28-15 in the afternoon contest, while playing later under the lights, mighty Alabama will move another step closer to the Southeastern title by defeating Mississippi State 35-13—kaff-kaff!

Miami, of Florida, showing improvement each week, journeys to University Park to meet Penn State and will give the Nittany Lions a tussle before falling 31-24. Also in the east, Tulane will find Pitt to be rude hosts as the Panthers win by a 33-16 margin.

Two other big games set for the Southwest conference pit Texas A&M against troublesome SMU and the up-and-down Houston Cougars against TCU. We see A&M winning 31-17 and Houston being on the upswing this week to take TCU 42-20.

The Kentucky Wildcats, living up to our pre-season assessment, will roll over the Virginia Tech Gobblers 35-12 to the delight of their home stadium rooters.

The Big Two of the Big Ten, Michigan and Ohio State, will keep rolling toward their annual Big Ten showdown, which is scheduled this year for Nov. 19 in Ann Arbor. The Wolverines will have little or no trouble whipping Iowa 38-7 and Woody Hayes' Ohio State lads will turn back Wisconsin 35-17 in their 47th rework.

Irons' Battle Gear Weighs 23 Pounds

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Browns' outside linebacker Gerald Irons dresses for a football game like a man going to war. His "armor" weighs 23 pounds.

The most important person on the National Football League team, in Irons' opinion, is equipment manager Chuck Cusick.

Irons wears every piece of protective football equipment currently manufactured. He weighs 223 pounds without his "armor" as he calls it, and goes to battle at 246.

Football players wear different equipment according to their positions. Quarterbacks don't like shoulder pads because they interfere with passing. Similarly, runningbacks, receivers and defensive backs are primarily concerned with dressing for speed.

Irons dresses for war.

After suffering a broken hip during his rookie season with the Oakland Raiders, Irons is determined not to break any more bones. He's doing well. He has played in 83 consecutive games.

Irons' armor includes helmet, mouth guard, neck brace, shoulder pads, bicep pads, elbow pads, forearm pads, hand pads, hip pads, supporter, thigh pads and knee pads. Rib protectors are attached to the shoulder pads.

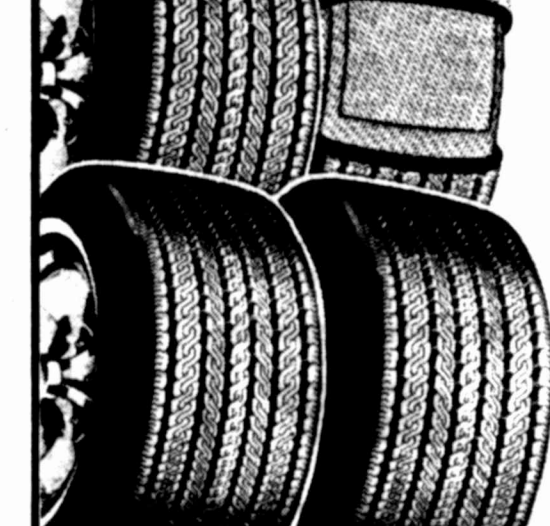

The other Browns have nicknamed Irons "Darth Vader" after the black-draped villain in the movie "Star Wars."

But behind all the bulky equipment on the man with such an ominous nickname, there's a poet. Irons, who has a master's degree in business administration from the University of Chicago, has taken up writing verse.

A sample: "To be the best is my quest. Athletes come and athletes go, but there's something special about a real pro. See he's determined to be the very best, and until he is world champion... he will never rest."

CHANDLER REPLACED
SAN DIEGO (AP) — After nine years as a San Diego Padres announcer on television and radio, Bob Chandler will be replaced as color man on the broadcasts, the National League team reports. A former second baseman with the New York Yankees, Jerry Coleman, is expected to remain as an announcer with the Padres. Geoff Witche, host of a Los Angeles Dodgers' pre-game radio talk show, is among those mentioned for Chandler's job next year.

KENT ALLISON

DOUGLAS BIRDEN

Allison, Birden Cop City Honors

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

The majority of time, when a coach is asked who was the outstanding ballplayer on his team the previous week, he will utter an offensive back's name.

After all, the backs are used to getting the girls as well as the headlines. Monterey coach James Odom took exception to the rule this week. He said an offensive lineman, one George Morris was his nominee.

"We were able to control the line of scrimmage around Plainview and that was one of the main reasons that we were able to beat them (21-0)," Odom said concerning his lineman.

Odom went on to add that Morris was "one of the real assets in our win." Morris, who graded 88 per cent, has been named the offensive lineman of the week by the Avalanche-Journal for his performance in the Plainview's crucial District 4-AAAA victory Saturday over the Bulldogs.

"Most of the time we ran at the weak side of the line," Odom pointed out. "And that is where he (Morris) plays. During the game he was able to control his man and help open some holes for us."

Morris, a 6-5, 240-pound junior, is seeing his first action on the varsity this season. Last year, he was play exclusively on the junior varsity unit.

"This year he (Morris) has really improved quite a bit," Odom said. "He has some agility and is quick." Odom said Morris' strong point was "just coming off the ball and straight-up blocking the man across from him."

Also nominated for the offensive lineman honor were tight end Shawn Williams of Lubbock Christian High, who had three catches for 77 yards; Kevin Lusk of Dunbar, who coach Van Jefferson called "one of our steadiest players," and Coronado's Mark McLain.

"You know that when a fan is at a game, he is watching the backs run," Odom said. "But not the coaches. We know that we win and lose ball games on the line."

Garnering the offensive back of the week honor is LCHS quarterback Kent Allison.

Allison, one of the city's top aerialists, hit six of nine passes for 123 yards and a touchdown to lead the Eagles to a 29-0 win over Abilene Christian Friday night. He also rushed for 35 yards on four carries.

Greg Iseral of Monterey snagged a pair of Plainview aerials and returned one for a touchdown to garner the defensive back of the week award.

Iseral, who has been a mainstay in the Plainview's defensive backfield all season, also racked up eight unassisted tackles in the win.

Drawing praise for their defensive work were Allison of LCHS, Coronado's Steve Matthews with 15 tackles and Dunbar's Bruce McKnight who had a lone interception and two unassisted tackles.

Douglas Birden, a defensive end on the Dunbar Panthers, notched nine unassisted tackles and four assists against Brownfield to garner the defensive lineman of the week honor.

Randy Willis of LCHS with nine tackles and three quarterback traps, Keith Hall of Coronado with 13 tackles and Mike Caffey of Monterey with nine stops were also cited.

Bear Says Todd Performance No Surprise To Him

By The Associated Press

Down in Tuscaloosa, old Papa Bear sometimes enjoys the luxury of sitting in his high-back leather swivel chair and twisting the knobs on his 23-inch television set.

Almost every channel he flips to, he sees a coach, a quarterback, a linebacker or a kicker who once was one of his Baby Bears—a football player he personally fashioned and pointed to stardom.

The latest is Richard Todd of the New York Jets, whose 17 completions and 396 aerial yards almost derailed the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders in last Sunday's NFL shocker.

"I saw it on TV," said Paul (Bear) Bryant of the University of Alabama. "It was a great performance, no surprise to me. I've been trying to telephone Richard and chew him out for not making a couple of more scores."

Bryant, 64, the dean and winningest of football coaches, suffers from a conflict of interest almost every time he tunes in on a pro game—the screen is so saturated with former pupils—but this time the Bear could be excused for permitting himself a touch of favoritism.

It was a battle of former Alabama quarterbacks—Todd, 23, a relatively untried successor to Joe Namath, playing with a ragtag second division team, and Ken Stabler, 31, an eight-year veteran barking signals for the best club in pro football.

The Raiders won the game 28-27 but Todd won the day, losing only because a teammate failed in three routine kicking assignments.

"A tremendous athlete," the big Bear said of young Todd. "Strong as a horse. Tough. Good football mind. He led our wishbone attack, more running than passing."

"But it was no surprise to see him pass as he did—even those bombs he threw Richard can do anything on a football field."

In a 33-year-career during which he turned chronic losing teams into champions at Maryland, Kentucky, Texas A&M and now at Alabama, Bryant has racked up 268 victories, 40 more than compiled by the second winningest coach, Woody Hayes of Ohio State.

He has led teams into 23 post-season bowls, won four national college championships and seen 38 of his players and assistants go on to top coaching jobs in both college and pro ranks.

The final statistic is the one in which the one-time Alabama end takes the final statistic is the one in which the one-time Alabama end takes the greatest pride, but most people remember the Bear for two things—hard-hitting, winning teams and ace quarterbacks.

Four of Bryant's products are now quarterbacking in the National Football League. Besides Todd and Stabler, there are Scott Hunter, with the Atlanta Falcons, and Namath, once the most celebrated and highest paid of them all, playing in the twilight of his career with the Los Angeles Rams.

Quarterbacks who wore the Bryant brand include George Blanda and Babe Parilli, whom he coached at Kentucky, Roddy Osborne at Texas A&M, and Pat Trammell and Steve Sloan at Alabama.

Blanda and Parilli went on to brilliant pro careers. Trammell, whom some say was Bryant's all-time favorite, became a doctor and died at the age of 28 of cancer. Sloan, troubled with calcium deposits, went into coaching. He now is head coach at Texas Tech.

"I never liked to make comparisons," Bryant said. "All of these boys had something in common—ability, class, pride, a genuine desire to win."

coached. Now I would add a third to that list—Ozzie Newsome, our wide receiver and tight end. Great talent.

"I think I hurt Blanda more than I helped him, never played him in the right position. Parilli was a fine ball-handler and passer, accounted for 54 touchdowns in college. Stabler was the best I ever saw his junior year."

"Namath—you name it, he had it. I blame myself for putting too much pressure on Todd early in his career. I told everybody he could be better than Namath. People expected a touchdown every time he touched the ball. He's going to make a great pro."

Kangaroo Gamble Pays Off

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

All Mitts' experiment at Kress this fall seems to be paying dividends. The Kangaroos are presently tied for the 3-A lead and, in all likelihood, will go into that Nov. 11 showdown with Vega with the loop title on the line.

"We're not going to overlook Bovina or Springlake-Earth at all," Mitts explains, "but it sure would be nice to go into that game (against Vega) making it the big one."

Explaining his experiment, Mitts says "this year we tried to bring our boys along a little slower. In the past we've gotten too high too soon and got burned out. The last couple of years we've concentrated hard in the early going to correct our mistakes and worked hard on that."

"This year, we tried not to play with so much emotion early in the season and the boys responded well. We've had two emotional games (22-14 and 43-28 victories over Hart and Farwell, respectively) the last two weeks and have really played well."

"Our staff and scouts have done an excellent job this year and deserve as much credit as anyone (for Kress' 6-1 record)."

"We haven't sat down and ironed out the mistakes on offense and defense... we've just brought the team along slow, working on technique and play timing and on improving the mistakes we were making earlier."

The Kangaroos have the schedule in their favor, as they have only one road encounter left—that this week against Bovina.

That contest against Farwell was a real thriller, with the lead changing hands three times. And Mitts said he had no qualms about electing to go for a two-point conversion (which put Kress up 29-28) with 11 minutes to go.

"I talked to the officials at the half and we were behind in penetrations and first downs then (with the score tied 14-14). I didn't know how they stood them, but I wasn't about to settle for a tie... that's not what we were out there for."

Kress' only loss was a 49-20 decision to Petersburg before the Kangaroo fans the third week of the season.

"Petersburg has a real fine club, there's no doubt about that. But this goes back to what we were trying to do this year. Even though it was an important game, we didn't want to get our kids too high and you can't get them up all the time."

"We still feel like we have about as tough a district as there is around. We feel very fortunate to have beaten both Hart and Farwell."

Mitts had words of praise for Eddie Johnson (116 yards on 14 carries, two TDs and 12 tackles from a linebacker spot), Eddie Gonzales (fumble recovery and 15 tackles as linebacker) and Carlos Amador (14 tackles as defensive tackle) for their showing against Farwell.

UT Makes Taylor 'Nervous'

By CARTER CROMWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff
Billy Taylor is the type that exudes confidence. If he's nervous, he rarely reveals the condition. Things are different this week, though.

"You know, I just might get nervous for this game," the Texas Tech running-back said Tuesday. "This game," of course, is Saturday's battle with top-ranked Texas in Austin, an important clash for national prestige and position in the Southwest Conference race.

"I never get nervous before a game," Taylor added, "but I started thinking about this one last week, and I've stayed awake at nights mulling it over."

"There's just no way we can't be motivated for this game. We'll be playing before a big crowd and against the No. 1 team in the nation. I've never ever played against a team that was ranked No. 1. It's a heck of an opportunity for us."

"I don't think I've played in a game that meant this much, not even our game with Houston last year. I think this game means more because we're playing the No. 1 team."

The Longhorns' 6-0 record and high ranking in the country in offensive and defensive statistics haven't escaped Taylor, either.

"Defensively, they're extremely quick and have real good team speed," he said. "Their speed really shows. They have great pursuit. A lot of times when I watch a film, I can see times at which, if I made a certain cut, I could go all the way for a touchdown, but I can't say that after looking at the films of Texas' first five games."

Much has been made of the youth on Texas' defensive unit. The starting 11 includes eight sophomores and just one senior, defensive tackle Brad Shearer.

"I'm surprised that they're so young but have still played so well. It's kind of a shock."

"But they've proved that they can play by beating Oklahoma and Arkansas. After watching Oklahoma against Ohio State, I didn't think anybody could hold them without a touchdown, but Texas did. Their defense has proved they can play under adverse circumstances."

Shearer and free safety Johnnie Johnson are the leaders of UT's defense. Shearer is coming off a junior year in which he was bothered by a bad knee. He missed spring training because of knee surgery but has come back strongly this season.

"He's the key in the middle for them," Taylor said. "He's quicker and stronger than he was in 1976, and he's become their defensive leader, like (Wilson) Whitley was for Houston last year."

Texas is expected to be a big challenge for the Tech offense, which has gradually gotten better since the loss of quarterback Rodney Allison against Texas A&M a month ago. Taylor sees much room for improvement, though.

"I don't think we've played nearly to our potential, offensively. The last time we came close to it was in the first quarter against A&M. The defense has been leading us all season. Losing Rodney and the two guards (Greg Wessels and Greg Davis) has hurt because it took some experience out of the lineup. We've had other injuries, too."

"The last three or four games, we haven't had the confidence we had at the start of the season, but we're slowly getting it back. We've done some good things, but have stopped ourselves with penalties and stuff. Nobody's really stopped us."

Taylor has not been happy with his performance thus far. He's the team's top rusher with 425 yards, has a 44-yard average per carry and is the team leader in pass receptions with 15, but he expected much more in this, his senior campaign.

"I just haven't done that well so far. I can look at film and see instances in which I just didn't make the right cut, and that's not normal. Usually, my cuts are natural, instinctive."

"I think it's just mental. Maybe it started with that knee injury in the fall. I'd never had one before." Taylor was having a fine fall until he suffered a hyperextended knee and missed some work.

"But we've got to get going now. This is the stretch, and I think we can make it to the Cotton Bowl if we win these last five games."

NOTES: Head coach Steve Sloan said injured quarterback Rodney Allison was much improved Tuesday over Monday, but is still a doubtful participant for the Texas game. Sloan said Mark Johnson would be Tech's quarterback starter, "based on Tuesday's practice." Sloan added that strongside guard Greg Mahoney probably will not be able to play versus Texas because of a severely pulled hamstring muscle. Right now, second-team center Joe Walstad is Mahoney's replacement. Strongside guard Greg Wessels has resumed working out this week. A back injury has kept him out of action since the A&M game. Punter Mike Mock hasn't punted in practice since the Rice game, in which he suffered a pulled groin muscle. Sloan said it's a wait-and-see situation now. "We'll try him as a punter today or Thursday and see how he does." Freshman walk-on Eric Jones is the backup punter.

Frazier's Homecoming Big Success For Cavs

By The Associated Press
They stood in the Madison Square Garden aisles and cheered Walt Frazier. Then Clyde stood the Garden on its ear. Frazier, a mainstay of two championship teams with the New York Knicks, was sent to the Cleveland Cavaliers just prior to the beginning of the National Basketball Association season. He returned to his former playground Tuesday night and led Cleveland to a 117-112 overtime victory over the Knicks.

"The reception tonight was dynamite — I got goose pimples," Frazier said of the 1½-minute standing ovation he received from the sellout crowd of 19,694. "It was a happening tonight, and I won't forget it."

"I'll always remember this. The reception was beautiful. The fans were ready tonight. It meant a lot to me. After all, I gave the best years of my career here, before these fans. I had to show some emotion to that crowd roar."

Frazier also showed the form that made him the best guard in basketball, scoring 28 points in 44 minutes and running the Cavs' offense. With three seconds left in the overtime, he was replaced and received another standing ovation as he moved to the sidelines, his fist upraised and a smile creasing his face.

Reserve forward Bingo Smith scored nine of his 15 points in the overtime for the Cavs and Campy Russell tied Frazier for team honors with 28. Bob McAdoo, whose two fouls shots with three seconds remaining in regulation time tied the game, led all scorers with 29.

In other NBA games, Philadelphia topped Kansas City 112-104. Golden State rode Rick Barry's 44 points to a 105-98 triumph over Chicago. Boston defeated Atlanta 110-103. Indiana blasted Denver 129-104. Phoenix beat Seattle 93-86. Los Angeles edged San Antonio 109-107 and Portland blasted Buffalo 107-85.

76ers 112, Kings 104
Doug Collins broke out of a shooting slump with 31 points as Philadelphia held off Kansas City.

"I got in stride and left my slump behind me," said Collins.

"We decided the game in the first half," said 76ers coach Gene Shue. "We were absolutely superb on defense. Anytime you can hold a good shooting team like KC to 36 points in the first half, it speaks well for your defense."

Warriors 105, Bulls 98
Barry scored 44 points in the opening period and 10 in a late spurt in the third quarter to lead the Warriors to victory.

"The name of the game is not to let Rick Barry get 40 or 50 points," the star forward noted. "The name of the game is to get the ball to the other players. I could have taken a lot more shots tonight but it was better to get everybody involved."

"A year ago, this team would have given up after falling behind. Now, we don't give up."

Celtics 110, Hawks 103
Boston won its first game of the season as Dave Cowens scored 23 points, hitting 9 of 14 floor shots.

"I was pleased with the intensity our team showed," said Celtics coach Tom Heinsohn. "It was hard to accomplish the technical aspects of our game, though, because of the radical defense Atlanta employs — it's like a high school zone defense."

Pacers 129, Nuggets 104
Adrian Dantley scored 32 points and John Williamson added 29 as Indiana blew out the Nuggets. The Pacers never trailed and forced Denver into 16 turnovers in the first half, eight by Dan Issel.

The Pacers at one time led by 37 points.

Suns 93, SuperSonics 86
Phoenix and Seattle continued to go in opposite directions, the unbeaten Suns winning their third straight while the winless Sonics dropped their fourth in a row.

Paul Westphal had 30 points and Phoenix held Seattle to three points in the first seven minutes of the final quarter.

Lakers 109, Spurs 107
Jamaal Wilkes' rebound basket with 48 seconds remaining gave Los Angeles its victory. Rookie guard Norm Nixon scored 24 points and handed out 10 assists to pace the Lakers.

Trail Blazers 107, Braves 85

test and handed Buffalo its first loss as Maurice Lucas hit for 27 points. A crowd of 12,666 attended, giving the Blazers 16 straight home sellouts.

THEIR SECOND LOVE — Baltimore Oriole manager Earl Weaver and his wife Marianne line up a putting shot from the rough after he was named American League Manager of the Year Tuesday in a landslide vote. Weaver's second love after baseball is golfing. (AP Laserphoto)

Weaver Corrals AL Boss Award

BALTIMORE (AP)—Earl Weaver, backed with the security of a three-year contract and confident of his team's ability, is eagerly awaiting the start of a new baseball season.

"Our personnel is as good as anybody's in baseball," Weaver said of the Baltimore Orioles—a team he led to a surprising second-place Eastern Division tie in 1977, just 2½ games behind the world champion New York Yankees.

That finish, by a team thought to have been stripped of too much talent in the re-entry draft, earned American League Manager of the Year honors for Weaver by a landslide vote.

Weaver received 248 votes in a nationwide poll of writers and broadcasters conducted by the Associated Press. Whitney Herzog of Kansas City edged Bob Lemon of Chicago 54-52 for second place, and New York's Billy Martin polled 38 votes.

Bristol Not Bitter Over Braves Move

ATLANTA (AP) — For the last place Atlanta Braves and their roster of rookies, 1977 was an attempt to develop a team for the future. For Dave Bristol, who claims a major part in that effort, the future does not include a return as the team's manager.

Billy Hunter, who ended a long association with the Orioles and took over in July as the fourth manager of the year for the Texas Rangers, was named on 12 ballots. Don Zimmer of the Boston Red Sox received seven votes and five went to Gene Mauch of the Minnesota Twins.

A perennial optimist, with imposing career won-lost records to support his lofty goals, Weaver never gave up on the Orioles even after they lost slugger Reggie Jackson, Gold Glove second baseman Bobby Grich and 20-game winner Wayne Garland.

On Tuesday, Bristol, who managed the Braves for two seasons, got the word he had been fired by the team's board of directors.

Atlanta finished last in its division both years Bristol managed the club, and the Braves' 61-101 record this season was the worst in the National League. It was most games lost by the franchise since 1935.

Although he had to use 10 players with less than one year's major league experience, Weaver directed the Orioles to 97 victories. They weren't eliminated until three days before the end of the season.

"We'll be looking to trade if we can help ourselves," Weaver said before leaving his suburban Baltimore home for a month's vacation to Hilton Head, S.C., and Hialeah, Fla. "But we can give anybody a fit, the way we are."

"We're lacking nowhere. We have the type of team that can win as many as anybody in baseball. Of course, they'll still have to go out and prove that statement."

Bristol was offered an administrative position with the Braves after his firing was announced, but he indicated he probably will try to land a job as a coach with another baseball team.

The 43-year-old manager said he wasn't bitter, just hurt, and he expressed confidence the young players who got their first major league experience under him last season eventually would become solid performers.

"We're lacking nowhere. We have the type of team that can win as many as anybody in baseball. Of course, they'll still have to go out and prove that statement."

Eddie Murray, a designated hitter-first baseman, and pitcher Dennis Martinez turned in fine rookie seasons for the Orioles in 1977, and young pitcher Mike Flanagan produced a whirlwind finish.

Other young players who improved during the season included outfielder Andres Mora, infielder Rich Dauer, pitcher Scott McGregor and catcher Dave Skaggs. Dauer and Skaggs also were rookies.

Bristol said he was disappointed that owner Ted Turner, who once told Bristol he could manage the club "for 100 years," apparently had decided to not let him continue to work with the young team.

"He's an impatient man," Bristol said. "I guess he thinks if he can win the America's Cup (sailing race) that quickly and that easily, you can do the same thing in baseball. You can't."

Turner is under a one-year suspension from baseball and legally could not have played a part in the decision to fire Bristol. It is generally assumed, however, that his feelings on the matter were known to the board.

While appealing his suspension earlier this year, Turner shocked the baseball world by giving Bristol "a rest" and assuming the role of field manager himself.

The veterans include 20-game winner Jim Palmer, Gold Glove shortstop Mark Belanger, and two of the league's top hitters in 1977, Ken Singleton and Al Bumbry.

In a boastful moment while serving as an analyst for a local television station after the Yanks had won the World Series, Weaver said he was "glad that all the Yanks would be back" next year.

"Then, if we beat them," he said, "it would be much more satisfying. They won't have any excuses."

After serving 11 years as manager in the Baltimore farm system, Weaver took over the Orioles on July 11, 1968, replacing Hank Bauer.

Bristol returned after Commissioner Bowie Kuhn ruled that the practice of owners managing their own teams was "bad for baseball."

On Tuesday, Bristol had some final advice for his employers. "They should take a look down the hall at the (National Football League Atlanta) Falcons," he said.

"People who didn't know anything about the game got out of the way and let football people handle it. That's what they should do here," he said.

The Orioles have since won 909 games and lost 596, giving Weaver a winning percentage of .596 which stands third behind Joe McCarthy and Sparky Anderson among major league managers with five or more years of service.

Since 1957, Weaver's teams have finished in the first division 24 times in 26 tries, counting five winter league teams. Since 1960, he has skipped 24 teams and 22 have finished in either first or second place.

Not until the end of the 1977 season, in the wake of long-term contracts for several of the Baltimore players, did Weaver get a multi-year pact from the Orioles.

Closed Circuit TV To Present Tech-UT Game

When the Texas Tech Red Raiders and the University of Texas Longhorns clash Saturday, Lubbockites will be able to see every play — without ever leaving the city.

Gary Davidson, of the Tulsa, Okla., firm Henthorne-Davidson Productions, said Tuesday the game will be broadcast via closed-circuit television in Lubbock's Municipal Auditorium.

Davidson said tickets for the broadcast will go on sale Thursday morning at the auditorium box office and at another location to be announced today.

The game between number-one ranked Texas and the 13th-ranked Red Raiders will be shown live on a giant TV screen, he said. The play-by-play for the game will be handled by KMCC-TV, which also will supply the television cameras.

Davidson said a percentage of the proceeds from the telecast will go back into Texas Tech athletic coffers.

The Oklahoma admitted he had been busy the past few days pulling the broadcast together, after ABC announced Monday it would not broadcast the game.

"We expected ABC to carry the game," Davidson said. "We didn't know until someone Monday we could do it."

A closed-circuit presentation of this sort requires permission from both schools and the National Collegiate Athletic Association.

Davidson said he has put up $10,000 "front money" for expenses for the broadcast.

He predicted all the 3,023 seats of the auditorium would be filled for the 2 p.m. kick-off and emphasized a closed-circuit presentation is just like being at the game — "only it's dark."

Sweetwater Whips Dunbar In VB Play

Despite Odessa Gamble's 10 points, the Dunbar Panthers were defeated by Sweetwater here Tuesday night 12-10, 15-9 in high school girls' volleyball action.

Cindy Amos had nine points for the winners.

The loss drops the Panthers to 0-7 in the District 3-AAA chase.

In Lamesa, Dana Elrod scored 11 points to lead Snyder to a 15-10, 15-1 win over the Tors. Debbie Martens was the high scorer for Lamesa with eight points.

Sanderson Now Sitting, Waiting

NEW YORK (AP) — Harold Sanderson was on the phone with his son, who had called from Tulsa, Okla. This was some time during the 2½ weeks that Derek Michael Sanderson was playing with the Tulsa Oilers of the Central Hockey League.

Harold Sanderson said, "Son, it's my generation that runs the game. Why don't you shut your mouth and play by the rules? Your time will come to run the game, but not until my generation is in the grave. You'll go nowhere if you don't learn humility."

Derek Sanderson, outspoken as he is, didn't interrupt. But when his father paused, he told Harold, "I'm quitting hockey."

"He said, 'Don't quit. You worked your whole life. You made yourself a name and a career. Don't throw it out the window.'"

"I said, 'They won't listen to my arguments, dad.' He said, 'Son, you don't have an argument.'"

"I said, 'I'm depressed.' He said, 'There's no need to be depressed.' He said, 'I went through six years of a war. That's depression. I couldn't leave World War II. You can leave hockey. You've got a roof over your head and three square meals a day with mom and me. You can cut the lawn, rake the leaves — earn your keep. But as long as I'm alive, son, you won't starve.'"

Derek's mother, Caroline Sanderson, had done her talking earlier. It was nine years ago, when her son was reaching the peak of his notoriety in the hockey world. It was a world taken aback by his flamboyant manner, his lifestyle . . . and his ever-gaping mouth.

Caroline Sanderson said to her son, "You'll rue the day you opened your mouth and wanted to be controversial." And this summer, just before Derek went to camp with the Vancouver Canucks, she said, "I told you. You talked so much that what you say now means very little."

"You've brought it all upon yourself. You should have been quiet and that would have been it."

Parents can see things happening. Now Harold and Caroline Sanderson sit at home in Niagara Falls, Ont., and know their son is unemployed. They know this could be the end of their son's 11-year National Hockey League career — that his future is in the hands of any NHL owner willing to take another chance on one of the most provocative figures in the game's history.

The Boston Bruins, New York Rangers, St. Louis Blues and Canucks took a chance, not to mention a now-forgotten World Hockey Association team called the Philadelphia Blazers, which signed him to a $2.5-million contract to start a relationship that ended in bitter divorce.

Now Derek sits and waits here, living with his fiancée Jill and — believe it or not — wondering about his financial future.

"On August 10, I was 174 pounds and everything was going good," Sanderson says. "I was in shape, building fences and working with the horses on my farm."

Then the troubles started. "We'll call it ill health to my father, who is extremely close to me. If he dies, I won't care what happens to me," said Sanderson, contrite now when bragadocio had been his trademark.

"Then I cancelled my wedding because of financial problems," he says. "I lost $300,000 on the market and the only person who bailed me out was (his attorney) Bob Woolf, who lent me money out of his own pocket."

"Then there was the problem with the Jill. Should we get married or shouldn't we? She's got a very successful modeling career. She's a fine young woman with talent. I don't think I have the right to deny her the notoriety or the fame and fortune. I had not that many years ago. I want her to be herself. She has tremendous qualities to be a mother and a wife, but there's a part of her that wants to be a successful model."

"And this caused some trauma. My male ego would not allow me to make less than my wife. Call it immaturity, it's been conquered. I could be a house husband. When she goes on her road trips to Acapulco or Japan, I'd sit home and play games and find out what it's like for the athletes' wives — what they go through."

"It's difficult for the average fan to see that a guy who makes $200,000 a year (actually it's less) can be having financial difficulty. But what could I do? Drive a truck? Sell insurance? I don't know," he says.

"So I started to worry. I didn't sleep much, gained weight, and by the time I reported to camp in Vancouver, I was 190 pounds which is much too heavy for me. Then the colitis (inflammation of the large intestine) came back."

That kept Sanderson out of training camp and signalled the beginning of the end with Vancouver — and, possibly, the end of Sanderson's career.

"He came to camp in very bad condition," said Canucks General Manager Jake Milford by phone from his Vancouver office. "He hadn't prepared himself for camp, so we sent him to our Tulsa farm team to get in shape. He didn't want to play in Tulsa, so his agent and I worked out a contract settlement that leaves him a free agent without compensation."

Sanderson was placed on waivers and no team would invest the $100 to claim him.

"I'm in trouble," says Sanderson. "I don't want to quit hockey, but no one has any interest in me because they think . . . Well, I don't know what they think. For a man of my talents to be passed by the wayside with the game in the shape it's in . . ."

Well, maybe it's because of the shape Sanderson's in — not as much physically as mentally. He could have been one of the best in the game to which he has devoted his life.

"I've never cheated hockey," he says, the old bravado returning for an instant. "I've been overpaid a couple of times, but what do you want from me? It's my fault the WHA came along?"

No, Derek, it's not your fault. But your mother may have been right. You'll rue the day you opened your mouth and wanted to be controversial.

Blues Avoid Another Loss

By The Associated Press
The change was obvious in the St. Louis Blues' locker room.

"Everyone was talking it up after the game," observed St. Louis center Bernie Federko. "At other games we would come into the dressing room and everyone was embarrassed to say anything."

"They seemed to dress as fast as possible and leave."

There was no rush Tuesday night, though. After six season-opening losses, the St. Louis Blues had tied a hockey game.

The 2-2 deadlock with the Atlanta Flames was almost as good as a victory. Federko scored both goals, bringing the Blues from behind and giving them the lead until Atlanta's Eric Vail deadlocked the contest with 11:45 remaining.

But at least, the Blues hadn't lost. "I think the bubble burst tonight," said Federko, "even if we only got a tie."

The Colorado Rockies also got a tie, coming back from a 4-1 deficit to tie the Boston Bruins 4-4. In the other National Hockey League games Tuesday night, the New York Rangers blanked the Cleveland Barons 5-0 and the Vancouver Canucks beat the Los Angeles Kings, 3-1.

The Indianapolis Racers trimmed the Birmingham Bulls 5-4 in the only World Hockey Association game.

"We knew we'd have to play well against a team that hadn't won a game," said Eric Vail of Atlanta, which has won two and tied three of its six games.

"They kept us in our own end pretty well — especially early in the game." Now the Blues want to work on doing it at the end of the game as well.

Rockies 4, Bruins 4
Paul Gardner's deflection of a Gary Croteau shot with 5:44 remaining capped the Colorado comeback and gave the Rockies their tie with Boston.

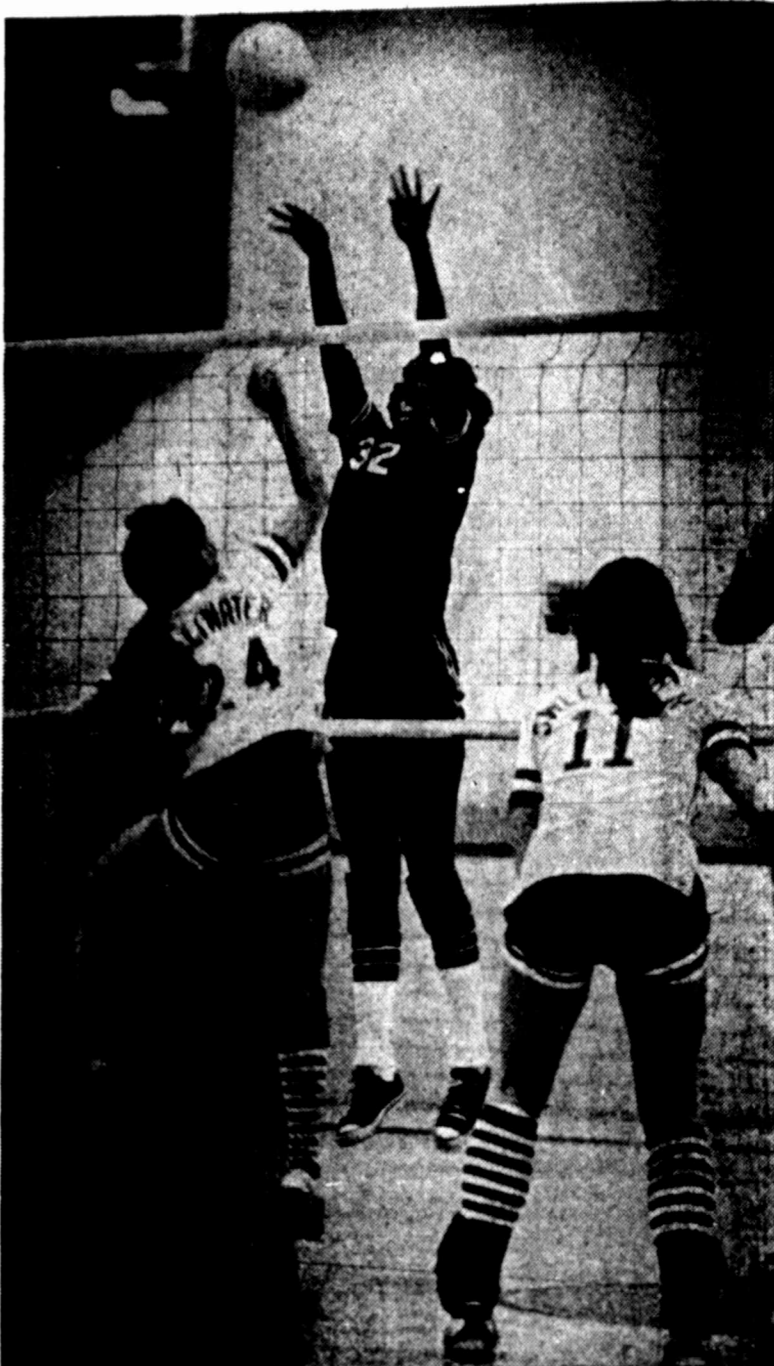

"It would have been easy for our guys to pack it in, but they never gave up," said Colorado coach Pat Kelly. "To come back like that against a team that was in the Stanley Cup finals really pleases me."

Don Marcotte, Rick Smith, Bobby Schmautz and Stan Jonathan had given the Bruins their 4-3 lead entering the final period before Gardner brought Colorado even.

Rangers 5, Barons 0
Walt Tkaczuk and Steve Vickers scored first-period goals and Wayne Thomas stopped 28 Cleveland shots for his first shutout with the Rangers as New York bested the Barons. Pat Hickey, rookie Ron Duguay and Don Murdoch also connected for the Rangers.

Canucks 3, Kings 1
Mike Walton and Hilliard Graves scored power play goals as Vancouver stretched its unbeaten streak to five games by beating Los Angeles. Marcel Dionne tallied for the Kings.

Racers 5, Bulls 4
Indianapolis scored five goals over the last two periods, the winner by Bryon Baltimore with 11:43 remaining, to beat the Bulls.

'Ringer' Makes One Race Fan $87,000

NEW YORK (AP) — An investigation that stretched from New York to Uruguay has disclosed that a "ringer" won a horse race at Belmont Park Sept. 23 and one unidentified bettor collected $87,000 on the race.

As a result of the investigation by the New York Racing Association (NYRA) and the New York State Racing and Wagering Board (NYRWB), which was set off by a picture of the horse called Lebon in a Montevideo newspaper, two men have been suspended by the board and criminal action may follow.

A horse identified as the 5-year-old Lebon won the ninth race at Belmont Sept. 23. After the race, a photograph of the winner, owned and trained by Jack Morgan and cared for by veterinarian Dr. Mark Gerard, was taken and appeared in the Montevideo newspaper.

Uruguayan horsemen claimed the horse was not Lebon, a mediocre performer in that South American country, but was Cinzano, a 4-year-old stakes winner in Uruguay. Both horses had been shipped to the United States with Dr. Gerard acting as purchasing agent and were taken to his farm in Muttontown, N.Y. It was there that Cinzano reportedly suffered a fractured skull and was destroyed.

Both Gerard and Morgan were suspended and are barred from entry to any racetrack under the jurisdiction of the NYRWB. Nassau County District Attorney Dennis Dillon was called into the case, and the FBI also may enter the case.

The horse called Lebon ran out of the money in a $10,500 claimer at Belmont prior to his victory in the Sept. 23 $18,000 claimer race, then again ran out of the money at the Meadowlands in New Jersey after his victory at Belmont.

"Photographs received this afternoon from Uruguay confirmed that Lebon was not the correct horse," said Ogden Mills Phipps, chairman of the board of the NYRA. "We're not saying at this time that Cinzano was the horse. The only thing we're certain of is that the winner was not Lebon. The marking of the two horses appeared similar, very identical."

A blood test will indicate whether Cinzano was, indeed, substituted.

If so, the General Adjustment Bureau of Jericho, N.Y., will have paid $150,000 in insurance benefits for a horse that was not destroyed.

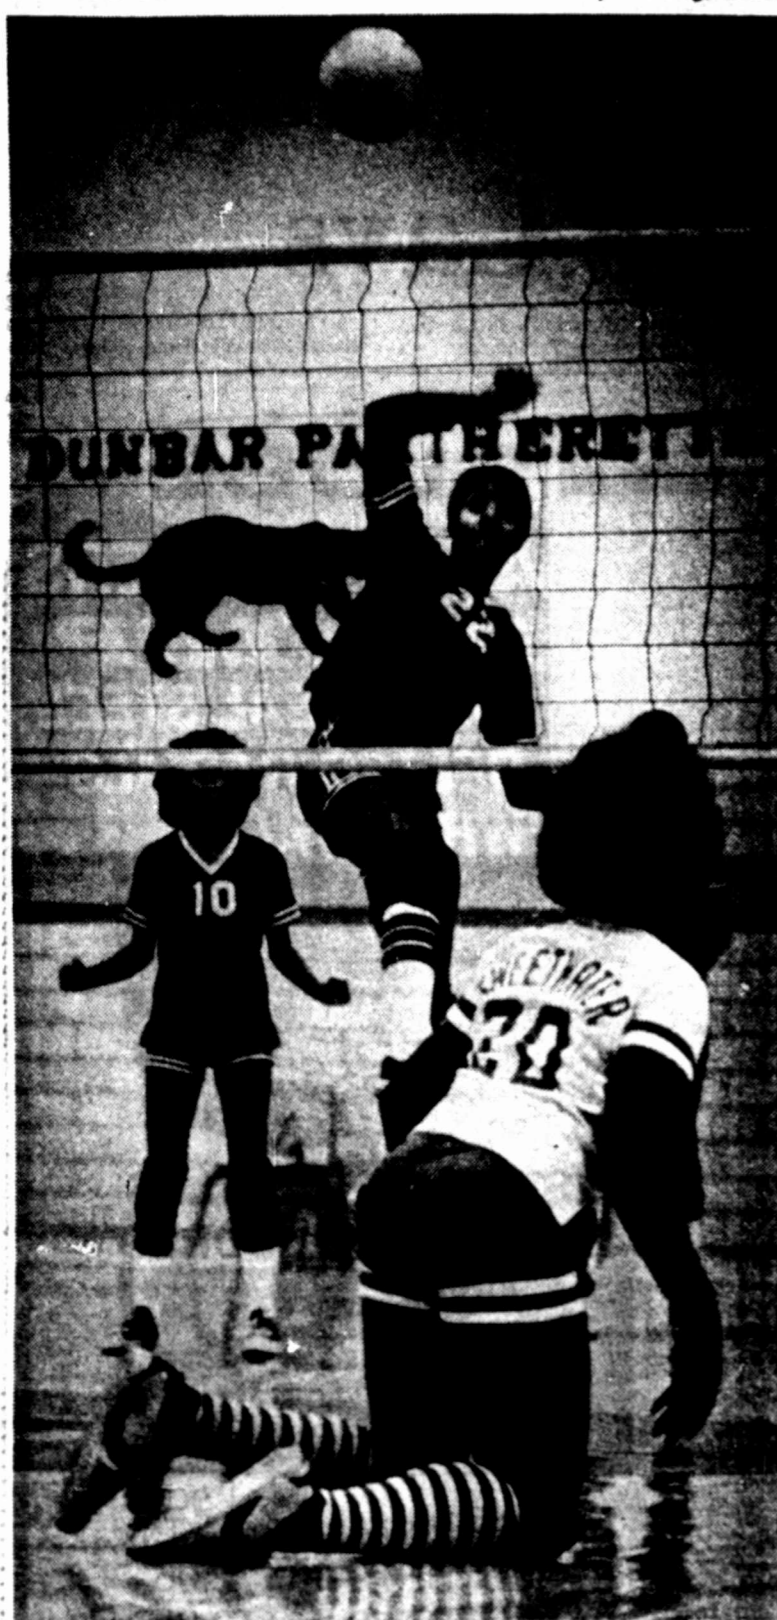

And what of the lucky bettor who collected the $87,000 on the ninth race at Belmont Sept. 23 by betting $1,500 on the 57-1 shot?

"We have a good idea who it was," Phipps said. He did not say whether the bettor may have been involved in the scheme.

Horses in the United States carry lip tattoos as identification marks, but horses from Uruguay do not have the tattoos. Foal certificates usually are used instead.

Nader Move 'Grandstanding'?

By MICKEY HERSKOWITZ And STEVE PERKINS

Q. Are the owners in pro sports worried about Ralph Nader and his efforts to organize the fans into a national lobby? I know the press has treated the whole thing as a joke. But I would like a serious opinion.

—Paul Mathis, Cleveland

A. The sports overlords think that Nader is making, pardon the expression, a grandstand play. But they do not take the movement lightly, in view of the fact that the trend has been distinctly against them in recent years in court, in Congress and in the social structure.

Nader, however, may be in for a surprise the first time he attempts to organize a boycott. For the most part, the fans he would represent were priced out of many major events years ago. Today many tickets are bought in blocks by corporations and by fans governed by their loyalty, not judgment.

Q. As a former member of the Yankee organization (Class AA) and a loyal Yankee booster, I am curious to know the status of Ken Holtzman. Are he and Martin at odds? How can they justify his salary when he pitches once a month? What do his teammates, especially Catfish Hunter and Reggie Jackson, have to say about the situation? What is his future with the Yankee?

—Bill Hogart, Butte, Montana

A. Mark it down: If the temperamental Billy Martin returns as Yankee manager, the temperamental Holtzman will be with another team in 1978. The Yankees quit trying to justify the southpaw's salary when they met his demand (for $175,000). Hunter and Jackson, who go back to the Oakland glory years with Ken, have their own problems with Martin and have nothing to say, for the record.

Q. Bobby Bonds had a great year for the Angels with 37 homers and over 40 stolen bases. I like to needle a friend of mine, a Giants' fan, by reminding him that Bonds is another one his team let get away. In fact, haven't the Giants traded away an all-star outfield?

—Byron Schraaz, Sacramento

A. No, the Giants have traded away TWO all-star outfield: George Foster, Dave Kingman, Garry Maddox, Bobby Murcer, Ollie Brown and Bonds.

Q. This is my pet peeve: coaches who won't let their pro quarterbacks run because they don't want to risk getting them hurt. Another one get knocked out for the season every week and all they do now is stay in the pocket. How come they didn't get hurt in the old days when quarterbacks did everything?

—Henry Peschel, Kansas City

A. By "old days" we assume you mean the pre-T formation era, when quarterbacks were often triple threats. They did suffer injuries, not as frequently perhaps as in today's game, dominated by bigger and more mobile linemen. But they were hurt in more creative ways.

Your letter brought to mind the 1943 NFL title game, when Sammy Baugh, who did Washington's punting, received a concussion while tackling Chicago's Sid Luckman on a punt return. Does anyone out there recall a time in the last 10 year that a quarterback was tackled by the other team's quarterback?

HOTLINE FEEDBACK: . . . Stu Lewengrub, who has a sports trivia radio show in Atlanta, says that Jackie Robinson . . . played in both the Rose Bowl and World Series. Jackie was a Pasadena JC transfer whose home field was the Rose Bowl, but he had only two years of varsity eligibility at UCLA, in 1939-40, and did not play in THE Rose Bowl, meaning the January I classic.

"USC and Stanford represented the Pacific Coast Conference in those years. As a UCLA undergraduate, it was my pleasure to see Jackie in action . . . playing right halfback with Kenny Washington, Woody Strode and some other fine players. It is a pity there was no TV or other national coverage in that day . . ."

Russian Furnace Plant Hopes To Add U.S. Firm To Customers

By PEGGY POLK
NOVOSIBIRSK, Siberia (UPI) — In the upper reaches of the Novosibirsk Electrothermal Equipment Works, a young Betty Grable-type blonde rides the cabin of a crane along a track some 30 feet above the ground.

Lengths of metal tubing wide enough for a man to crawl through are piled at one end of the cavernous workshop, which the Soviets say is the biggest in Europe.

The assembly area holds the skeleton of a towering 200-ton ingot electroslag remelting furnace, described as the world's largest. It sells for $3.45 million, and the Soviets have found a prospective buyer in Philadelphia.

The plant is a showplace of the new Siberia. Built 22 years ago on a stretch of tundra within the city limits of sprawling Novosibirsk, it is now doubling its size in order to double its three million-ton yield capacity under the current five-year economic plan. The plant already exports six types of furnaces to 25 countries, including France, Sweden, Mexico, Egypt and India.

Now it is hoping to number Babcock and Wilcox of Philadelphia among its customers. The American firm recently sent representatives here to examine the electroslag furnace.

It takes about 45 minutes to drive southeast through the tundra from the Novosibirsk Electrothermal Equipment Works to Akademgorodok — along the Ob sea, over the Ob Dam and finally into the stillness of a birch and pine forest.

Akademgorodok means science city. For all its idyllic forest setting it is the Soviet Union's most important think tank, one of the major centers of its kind in the world.

The city within the city of Novosibirsk houses the Siberian Department of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, where more than 3,000 scientists work at pure and applied research and help to train the next generation of scientists.

Some of its work relates directly to the Novosibirsk electrothermal plant. Under a long-term contract with the department's Institute of Hydrodynamics, the plant is able to sidestep intermediate experimental processes and put new production methods directly into operation.

One innovation of recent years is explosive welding, which joins together formerly incompatible metals in a controlled explosion.

Dr. Andrei A. Deribas demonstrates the technique in a small workshop containing two closed explosion chambers and an observation safety booth with a control panel which triggers the blast.

Making a sandwich by putting a thin layer of powdered explosive between a slab of copper and another of stainless steel, Deribas places it on a red platform which he wheels up and locks into a yellow metal dome.

The turn of a key in the safety booth sets off a blast with a muffled clunking sound. Gas escapes through an attached pipe and the welded piece of metal is cool enough to pick up within a minute.

Until this technique was developed a weld of copper and stainless steel had been impossible. One major use is to cover copper with stainless steel or titanium to resist corrosion. The electrothermal works, one of 15 Soviet industries which now practice explosive welding, uses it primarily to insert a ceramic insulating layer between steel and brass.

Deribas, a handsome dark-haired man of 46 who looks more like a poet than a scientist, won the Lenin Prize for his work in the field. The process was developed in the United States in parallel research by scientists at the Dupont Laboratories in Denver, exchanging information with the Akademgorodok scientists.

The Soviets stumbled upon the technique in 1961 while using blast waves to reinforce rails in an effort to produce a long-term, heavy-duty railway switch joint.

Deribas, head of the Institute of Hydrodynamics' Hydroimpulse Technology Design Bureau, is now investigating the state of materials during short-term high pressure — such as the moment of explosion in the welding process — in an effort to obtain new materials.

A native of Moscow and graduate of the prestigious Moscow University, Deribas was among the first group of 15 scientists to come to Akademgorodok. His 19-year-old daughter, now a medical student at Novosibirsk, was the first child born in the town.

Having won his reputation at a relatively early age, Deribas probably would have little trouble returning to a post of some importance in Moscow, but he has no intention of doing so.

"If a person makes science his ambition, here he has all the conditions for developing his abilities — bigger, better opportunities than in Moscow," Deribas said. "I was born and bred and studied and worked in Moscow — and I have no desire to return."

The Soviets, in the words of President Leonid I. Brezhnev, consider Siberia "the future of our country" because of its vast stores of still-untapped minerals and energy. A prime goal of the postwar years has been to develop science and industry at the site of the natural resources.

Success depends in large part on attracting and holding young men like Deribas in science and his opposite numbers in industry.

The chief engineer at the electrothermal works is Vadim G. Zavyalov, 37, a graduate of the Moscow Energetics Institute. The head of the special design bureau is Dr. Andrei G. Domaschikov, 41, a graduate of the Siberian Metallurgical Institute at nearby Novokuznetsk.

Inducements include not only opportunity for advancement but pay — the average monthly salary at the electrother-mal works is $276 compared with the national average of $213 — and living conditions.

Factories build their own apartment houses, schools, kindergartens and, in the case of the electrothermal works, a recreation area on the Ob reservoir for its 4,000 employees.

Apartments are important because the Soviet Union suffers from a chronic housing shortage. In one of Novosibirsk's districts, 40 per cent of the population of 430,000 lives in communal apartments, sharing kitchens and bathrooms.

Vitaly Nikolaitchuk, 40, has worked as a foreman at the electrothermal plant since 1964 and for the last eight months has been chief of the assembly shop.

He lives with his wife, Ludmila, 36, a manager of a textile center, and 12-year-old son, Igor, in a two-bedroom apartment, a considerable luxury for a Soviet family.

The apartment walls are hung with Soviet-made oriental rugs. A large color television set dominates the living room. Translations of Theodore Dreiser and Jack London stand in the bookshelves.

A music box in the form of a gnomon and a miniature bottle of chianti decorate the top of the bookcase, another sign of privilege.

Although travel to the West is controlled by the Soviets, the Nikolaitchuks have been to Italy, Egypt and Bulgaria.

Dancers Give Lift To Ballet Company

By EMIL SVEILIS
LENINGRAD, USSR (UPI) — The world-famous Kirov Ballet is getting a blood transfusion to revive a sagging reputation and restore the company to its long-established mark of excellence.

The main surgeon is 40-year-old Oleg Vinogradov, who as the Kirov's new chief choreographer, is charged with the difficult task of rejuvenating the ballet, or as he says, "putting new blood into it."

Vinogradov, an extremely talented artist who has made a spectacular rise to the top with more than 16 ballet productions in the past four years, hopes some of the success will lie in famous guest producers from abroad and his team of bright young dancers.

Among the internationally famous Vinogradov has invited to guest produce in Leningrad are Russian-born American choreographer George Balanchine and Roland Petit of Balanchine's New York City Ballet.

"We would be very glad if Balanchine would come back and make three classical ballets," Vinogradov said during an interview. "We have not received a direct answer from Balanchine, but we have received an answer in principle."

Vinogradov said that a trip for Balanchine back to his native land "would be very interesting both for him and for us." The 73-year-old Balanchine danced in the same theater before emigrating to Paris in 1926. He has lived in the United States since 1933.

"In mid-November, I am going to visit the United States and discuss our plans. I want to tell Balanchine about the opportunities here," Vinogradov said.

"We have the dancers, but we need more interested choreographers. That is why we have to borrow the best from abroad," Vinogradov said. "We are going to invite the best to Leningrad."

Vinogradov, who was chief choreographer at the neighboring Mali Opera and Ballet Theater for four years, plans to take about a dozen young and up-and-coming dancers with him to the Kirov. He also said the Soviet government had given the Kirov enough extra money to increase the troupe by 30 dancers, bringing the total company to 250.

"We want to start work on new productions," he said. "This increase will enable us to work on several performances at the same time."

In recent years, the Kirov has been criticized for being unimaginative and staging relatively few new performances. Defections to the West of top name stars have not helped matters.

Among Kirov's prominent defectors are Rudolf Nureyev, Natalia Makarova and Michael Baryshnikov. There also have been reports of low morale among the corps de ballet.

"The theater is like a human and every human has different periods of life — his ups and downs. Certainly, we try to be more up than down," Vinogradov said. "Now we shall try to raise the ballet."

Vinogradov was named to the post last April after the dismissal of Igor Beiskiy, 51, who held the position at the Kirov during the same four years Vinogradov was at the Mali.

"Time goes on. Generations change and aesthetics and even life changes," Vinogradov said. "In the life of every team there is a time for reconstruction and building. Now a new generation has come to the Kirov — dancers, artists and composers."

Among Vinogradov's notable works at the Mali is a new production of "Romeo and Juliet." He plans a new production of the "Nutcracker" for the Kirov and also has expressed interest in doing an original version of "Tom Sawyer."

Humphrey Ready To Aid Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hubert H. Humphrey, delighted with his hero's welcome in the Senate, vows he'll win his fight against cancer while becoming President Carter's congressional champion and confidant.

A five-minute standing ovation from the floor and galleries Tuesday marked the Minnesota Democrat's first appearance in the Senate since it was announced that his cancer is inoperable.

Frail but bouncy, Humphrey smiled and waved and scampered around the chamber, shaking hands with senators and page boys, embracing Vice President Walter F. Mondale and blowing kisses to his wife, Muriel.

"The greatest healing therapy is friendship and love, and all over this land I have sensed it," Humphrey told the Senate when the tumult faded.

Earlier, Humphrey told reporters gathered in his Senate office that his faith is unshaken.

"I know in my own case I've got to have absolute faith that I can win my battle, or I can't win," said Humphrey whose struggle is reflected in his face and in the thinness of his body.

"Doctors can't win it for me," he said. "They can help. But they tell me, and it's absolutely true, I've got to win this fight. I've got to be sure that I can win it. And I do believe I can win it or I wouldn't be back here."

Humphrey said the greatest therapy for him is excitement and work, and the work he wants to do now is for President Carter.

"I like him," he said of the President. "I have confidence in him. I believe he's doing a good job."

"But he's under considerable pressure these days," Humphrey said. "He needs nothing more now than he needs a friend."

"And that I am. I want nothing. I'd like to give a lot. ..."

In his speech to his colleagues and the packed Senate galleries, Humphrey said he has "been through a pretty rough struggle. But one of the doctors back home said: 'Hubert, we have done about as much for you as we can for awhile. Why don't you go back to Washington where you want to be ...' And I said, 'Doctor, that is pretty good advice.'"

"I waited, however, because I am a frugal man, until I could get a free ride," Humphrey said as laughter erupted. He returned to Washington as President Carter's guest aboard Air Force One.

"Well, for at least 20 years I've been trying to get on Air Force One," Humphrey added to more laughter.

At the end of his talk he apologized, as he almost always has to do, for talking too long.

"I did not intend to be that long, but that has been the story of my life," Humphrey said. "You would want me to be natural."

But before he finished, he spoke of his own incurable optimism in the future of the country, his "blind devotion" for the Senate as an institution, and the bonds of long friendships.

He quoted the Prophet Isaiah and the late President Lyndon B. Johnson who called for the reconciliation of opposing views with the words, "Come, let us reason together." He spoke of compromise, of the virtue of majority rule.

And he spoke of the praise that had been bestowed on him.

"You have been very flattering with me," Humphrey said. "I want you to know that I am old enough and sufficiently wise enough at this stage of life to know that all you have said was not exactly according to the facts."

Humphrey spoke through the laughter that followed that line to add, "But I also want you to know that I am sufficiently fragile and weak as to want to believe every single word that you have said."

Police Seeking Link To Armed Robbers

By PAT TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock police Det. Capt. Wayne Love today said his men are continuing their effort to establish ties between four suspected armed robbers arrested near Austin this week and the recent Meyer's Jewelers heist here.

Police have been working with Texas Rangers since the Oct. 1 robbery of the jewelry store at 5408 Slide Road. Love said detectives were awaiting photographs of the arrested suspects, scheduled to arrive sometime today.

The three men and one woman were arrested about 12:15 a.m. Monday at Georgetown, 40 miles north of Austin, following the alleged robbery of a Safeway supermarket there.

Travis Thomas, Georgetown chief of police, said Tuesday the suspected bandits gave up without a struggle after allegedly robbing the store of about $2,400 in cash.

Charged with aggravated robbery were Linda Campbell, 31, Homer Clifton Campbell, 34, Kenneth Butcher, 29, and Woodrow Kilgore, 28, all of Waco. All four were held in lieu of $20,000 bond, Thomas said.

Detective Mike Ross of the San Antonio Police Department said Tuesday the Georgetown arrests would clear "six or seven" armed robberies in the Alamo City that occurred during the past year. Ross said analysis of fingerprints and a "picture spread" lineup viewed by witnesses were the keys in implicating the suspects.

A witness to a recent supermarket holdup in Abilene also reportedly implicated the suspects Tuesday, after accompanying Abilene detectives to Georgetown.

Lubbock police particularly were interested in the Abilene case, since composites of suspects in a holdup there were similar to composites made of bandits in the Meyer's holdup.

Six Years Assessed City Man

A prisoner who fled from a sheriff's deputy near the county courthouse pleaded guilty Tuesday to a felony escape charge and was assessed a six-year penitentiary term.

Pleading guilty to escape was Willie Longoria Garcia, 24, formerly of 2602 Cornell St. Garcia was one of 32 persons to plead guilty to felony offenses Tuesday before 140th Dist. Judge William R. Shaver.

Of those, 29 received probated sentences.

Garcia also pleaded guilty to burglary of a habitation and received a six-year term to run concurrently with the punishment on the escape offense.

Garcia admitted attempting to escape from Deputy Benny Melton July 7.

According to reports, Melton was returning Garcia from an arraignment on the burglary charge before a justice of the peace.

The defendant allegedly ran away as he was being escorted to the jail. Reports said Garcia was apprehended by police about 30 minutes later as he hid in an alley.

Garcia also pleaded guilty to burglarizing an apartment at 2210 Main St. on June 27. A pistol reportedly was taken from the apartment.

Also Tuesday, Garland Ray Skiles, 20, pleaded guilty to burglary of a habitation. Skiles also received a six-year prison sentence.

The defendant admitted burglarizing the James S. Irwin residence at 3516 46th St. July 15. Rare coins were among the items reported stolen.

Darrell Lloyd Thomas, 39, was fined $250 and was ordered to spend 20 days in jail after pleading guilty to driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense.

Thomas was arrested April 2 while driving in Slaton.

Christie Campaign Effort Tops Goal

AUSTIN (AP) — Joe Christie's fund-raising committee said Tuesday it has surpassed its initial goal in raising money for Christie's try for the U.S. Senate.

Christie said the committee reported it has raised $81,000, most of it at a dinner held in Austin last week.

"With other financial commitments we feel are firm, the committee has raised more than $100,000 as of the night of the dinner," Christie said in a statement.

Christie said the proceeds surpassed the goal set by the committee and that the money would serve as his initial base for the Senate race.

French Writer Cites Resentment Over Jet

By CANDY SAGON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

A French journalist, on a speaking tour of several Texas colleges, said in an interview with The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday there is resentment in France over the unfriendly reception the Concorde supersonic transport jet received in the United States.

"The resentment is probably more against the New York Port Authority than against the United States," Pierre Guillemot noted, saying the protests against the huge plane landing in New York were covered in the French press.

Protesting New Yorkers said the noise levels of the British-French-built jet were above maximum safety levels.

However, Guillemot said many French citizens felt Americans feared the competition from the jet more than the sound decibels.

The plane was given court authority to land in the U.S. earlier this month, but Guillemot said many Europeans felt the delay in getting U.S. approval forced France to scrap the manufacture of the planes after the initial 16 were built.

"It is a pity the Concorde was a failure," Guillemot said. "But you can't stop progress and hopefully the next supersonic jetliner will be built by Europeans and Americans."

Aside from the issue of the Concorde, Guillemot said relations between the U.S. and France are better now under French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, than they had been under Charles de Gaulle.

The French journalist said Europeans generally seem to view the United States as having reached a period of stability following the riots of the late 1960s and the Watergate scandal.

However, in terms of U.S.-USSR military negotiations, Guillemot said Europeans "feel they are spectators in the U.S.-Russian dialogue. Whatever decision is reached (between the two powers), Europe won't have a voice in it."

Guillemot said the nine-country European Common Market, on the other

Coffee Drinkers Winning Price Struggle

NEW YORK (AP) — The American public may be winning its battle with coffee growers in Brazil, where an awful lot of the product is piling up.

The long battle has had its ups and downs, and it isn't unusual in today's volatile markets for the seeming victor to be the suddenly vanquished. Whatever, the domestic price of coffee has been falling.

Since last spring, to illustrate, the Folger Coffee Co., a division of Procter and Gamble, has reduced the wholesale price of ground roasted coffee by $1.25 a pound to a current level of $3.18.

Brazil, meanwhile, remains determined to keep its minimum export price at $3.20 a pound — that's for green rather than ground and roasted. And at that price it is able to sell almost none to the United States.

Instead, a good deal of U.S. green coffee comes from Colombia, whose growers have been selling to American roaster-grinders at less than $2 a pound.

How long Brazil can hold out against a market that differs so enormously from its own view of things may have something to do with Brazilian foresight or stubbornness, or the financial condition of its growers.

Clearly they hope for a return at least to their minimum export price, but such thinking is at variance with very obvious changes in the American market.

For one thing, the relatively high price of coffee has apparently driven away many customers. Citibank analysts estimate per capita coffee consumption this year will fall to about 11 pounds on a green bean basis, compared to 12.8 pounds per person in 1976.

Americans are perhaps more health conscious as well, concerned about al-—Factors over which no person has control, frost and plant disease especially, could once again cut available stocks to the point where the market is again dominated by sellers rather than buyers.

—The drop in U.S. consumption could turn out to be a passing phenomenon. Coffee is closely tied to social custom as well as taste. Those who tend to this viewpoint recall that cigarette consumption has remained strong despite warnings that smoking may be hazardous to health.

—Marketing strategy, such as a strong media campaign to emphasize the merits of the beverage, could conceivably change a lot of consumer minds. While Brazilians might not appreciate it, there is a lesson to be recognized in the resistance of consumers: They are not totally pawns of the sellers, as they sometimes believe; they can exert pressure.

While coffee producers have learned this lesson rather recently, it is nothing new to the marketplace. Producers of red meat have felt such pressure, as have cigarette manufacturers — less tar and nicotine — and domestic automakers, among others.

Whether the impact is long-term or ephemeral is another matter, perhaps boiling down to whether the American public needs a cup of Brazilian coffee more than Brazilian growers need an American dollar.

Parking Lot Job Leads To Success

HOUSTON (UPI) — Back in 1926, Durrell M. Carothers parked his first car for pay at Uncle Billie Towell's downtown lot. The rate was 15 cents for three hours, 25 cents for all day.

The future chairman of Allright Auto Parks Inc. had found his route to riches.

"It was purely a one-man deal for Uncle Billie, makeshift, no great plans for the future," Carothers, 68, recalls.

Uncle Billie didn't even have a driveway. Instead, he dropped some timbers in the gutter so cars could jump the curb.

"While he was doing the physical labor of spreading the shell and stringing the lights, I was parking those first cars."

Carothers continued to work there part-time after he went to Rice. When he graduated at the beginning of the Depression, there were no jobs so he stayed, going to law school nights. In 1932, Uncle Billie wanted out.

"I organized the first corporation called Allright Inc. — it was the first of the Allright corporations — capital 1,000 bucks," Carothers said.

He opened other lots in Houston and, in 1937, a friend took the idea to Corpus Christi, tearing down the St. James Hotel to open a lot financed by Carothers and operated by the associate, as partners.

That arrangement set a pattern followed for years. Other companies formed with Carothers' backing and the Allright label. The trademark spread across the South, the nation and into Canada.

"Stumbling on a gold mine was certainly my reaction early in the game," he admits. "It just grew. But the gold mine ... is not just finding a nugget. It's really working that rather low grade ore and continuing to make it pay."

In 1963, Carothers and associates, who considered themselves "sort of a family," decided to consolidate and "go public" with a stock offering.

"There were eighty-eight of us locked in a room," Carothers recalls, to fight out the makeup of a single stock company, Allright Auto Parks Inc., that could meet Securities and Exchange Commission requirements.

The company now owns 50 independent operating companies with 1,426 locations in 65 cities in the United States and Canada. Only 85 of the locations are owned outright. Most of the rest are leased.

Carothers, as board chairman, retains less than 10 per cent of the stock in the firm which had revenues last year of $46.8 million, with net income on parking and property transactions of $3.4 million.

The road to success had some kinks. Carothers recalls an early Allright manager asked attendants "if they could drive, and if they said yes he said, 'well, go to work.'"

"One of them that started on that Number One lot could drive all right, but he hadn't taken the second step of stopping. He just drove right out the end ... plowed right through the fence and landed in the showroom across the street."

"Training and indoctrination" became part of the program.

Allright has tried nearly every form of parking operation, abandoning a few and now focusing on the self-park approach in which car owners put their money in a slot before leaving the lot.

"We have polished the techniques that make it possible to get your collections up to 99 per cent efficiency," Carothers said. "In the old days it was advertised as an 'honor system,' but honor has some limitations."

"The present means of collection involves a very, very enthusiastic group of checkers who really get with it," he said.

It also involves computerizing freeloader license numbers and, if need be, hiring a wrecker to tow cars away if repeated warnings have failed to change delinquent ways.

"That freeloader may move across the street or may move across town, but that computer can tabulate how many different times he's parked and how delinquent he is in dollars and cents. Pretty soon he gives up."

Allright has made as much as 55 per cent on a single property investment.

"It was an old service station in Indianapolis, across the street from a hospital. The dealer couldn't even make a living on it."

Carothers, married with five children and 13 grandchildren by a previous marriage, is a history buff active in historical organizations.

Of the often high profits achieved by his firm, Carothers feels no embarrassment.

"You set the rates callously on the basis of what the traffic will bear. We're in it to make money. We're not a utility."
