

Hope Fades For Missing City Boy

By IRA PERRY

HOPES FOR FINDING a missing six-year-old East Lubbock youth alive faded Tuesday after police ended the most intensive search in Lubbock County in more than a decade without finding any trace of the missing youth.

Blasted by winds raging through sections of a weed-choked canyon near Slaton and chilled by cold temperatures, more than 54 area law enforcement officers tromped through the underbrush where sources had indicated they would find Johnny Turner, Jr.

But their search turned up no trace of the boy, missing for a week.

The small, shy black youth mysteriously disappeared from his 1028 E. 29th St. home last week only minutes after his mother watched him play outside. Later that day two witnesses told police they saw the youth in a light-colored pickup with a white man in his late 20s.

Slaton Man Arrested

Monday, police announced they had arrested a 28-year-old Slaton man they believe to have been the man seen with the child.

But late Tuesday the intensive search effort begun only hours after the man's arrest had produced only two sets of footprints — those of an adult and those of a small child in a field one mile east of the Slaton Municipal Airport on FM 400.

While police and officers from numerous other area law agencies carefully combed the thick underbrush and climbed jagged canyon ledges, the 28-year-old man stood quietly before a Lubbock judge for arraignment in connection with the child's disappearance.

Charged Tuesday with kidnapping the 6-year-old was Philip Carey Brasfield of Slaton, a man who earlier this year was indicted for aggravated sexual abuse of a child in connection with an incident involving a 9-year-old Lubbock youth.

Brasfield reportedly is the father of two small girls.

Justice of the Peace Charles E. Smith set bond for Brasfield at $100,000 and appointed Lubbock attorney Warren Goss to represent him in upcoming proceedings after Brasfield told Smith he did not have enough money to pay for an attorney himself.

The charge alleges Brasfield "intentionally and willingly restrained Johnny Turner Jr., by secreting and holding him in a place where he was not likely to be found... and with intent to facilitate of a commission of a felony, to wit: sexual abuse of a child."

Brasfield, dressed in a white jail uniform with his hands cuffed behind his back, was returned to Lubbock County Jail where he remained late Tuesday.

Meanwhile, officers of the Lubbock Police Department, the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office, the Criminal District Attorney's office, the Texas Department of Public Safety, the Texas Rangers and the Idalou and Slaton police departments combed a section of Yellowhouse Canyon

1 mile east of the Slaton Municipal Airport on FM 400, about three miles off of U.S. 84 on foot, horseback and by helicopter.

After searching until 3 a.m. Tuesday, investigators returned about 10:30 a.m. and continued their efforts officially until 5 p.m., when darkness forced a halt to most of their efforts. Late Tuesday, though, some volunteer forces continued to walk the jagged terrain.

Police department investigators would say little about why they confined the search to that particular area, but one See SEARCH Page 14

CANYON SEARCH—A pair of lawmen, who joined 52 others Tuesday in a lengthy search of a canyon due east of the Slaton Municipal Airport, gaze down from the canyon rim for any sign of missing Johnny Turner Jr. The 6-year-old, who was reported missing from his East Lubbock home a week ago, has been the focus of a massive search by police, sheriff's deputies, Department of Public Safety troopers, Texas Rangers and a member of the Idalou Police Department. A 28-year-old Slaton man, Philip C. Brasfield, who is pictured in the inset, has been charged with aggravated kidnapping in connection with the youngster's disappearance. (Staff Photos)

Cold, Rain, Snow Make Up Season's First Major Storm

By SYLVIA TEAGUE

Avalanche-Journal Staff

A CANADIAN cold front pushed into Texas from the Colorado Rockies Tuesday, bringing an abrupt end to the unusually warm autumn weather and threatening to send temperatures plummeting below the freezing mark by daybreak today across much of the South Plains.

The first major storm of the fall season spread rain and some snow southward into Texas Tuesday and spawned at least one tornado downstate. In its wake, ski areas in portions of Colorado were overjoyed by heavy snows—a welcome contrast to last season's "dry spell."

Rain, Snow Spreads Widely

Light rain mixed with snow also fell over much of the east central and north-east Texas Panhandle and in the Oklahoma Panhandle.

Amarillo, which recorded .08 of an inch of precipitation Tuesday, had a high temperature of only 45 degrees.

Farther south in the state, rains became floods. In San Antonio, where 4.87 inches of rain fell, according to National Weather Service reports, creeks and streets were flooded.

Wind Batters School

High winds during a rainstorm ripped off a portion of the Madison High School band hall in San Antonio, but no injuries were reported. School administrators said a natural gas line also was damaged.

Two 15-barrel oil storage tanks exploded when struck by lightning in San Antonio Tuesday, shooting flames 50 feet in the air.

The coastal city of Port Lavaca reported nearly 5 inches of rain in a two-hour period Tuesday afternoon, causing floodwaters estimated at 2 to 3 feet in many areas. No deaths or injuries were reported.

Calhoun County Schools Close

The flooding forced the Calhoun County schools to close early and may force them to remain closed today, officials said. One father set out in a boat to pick up his son from school, observers said.

The floodwaters also prevented home delivery of almost one-third of Tuesday's copies of the Port Lavaca Wave.

Other Texas cities reporting deluges include Palacios with 5.06 inches and Texarkana with 3.55 inches.

Shortly before noon Tuesday a "short-lived tornado" struck outside Hooks, about 18 miles west of the Texas-Arkansas border. The National Weather Service reported one house and several other buildings were destroyed, but no injuries were reported.

The cold front extended across Texas along a Dallas-Fort Worth to Austin to Laredo line late Tuesday afternoon.

Temperatures had plummeted into the 30s behind the front in the Panhandle, where the wind gusted to near 60 miles per hour.

In Lubbock the high temperature for the day, 64 degrees, was recorded shortly after midnight. The afternoon high climbed to only 54 degrees then began a rapid descent.

Northerly to northwesterly winds at about 26 mph gusted to 35 mph Tuesday, picking up and swirling dust and well as wreaking havoc with women's skirts and hairdos.

Forecasters predicted the first fall freeze would occur by this morning, as the mercury was expected to drop to near 30 degrees.

School Case To Air Segregation Claims

By JEFF SOUTH

Avalanche-Journal Staff

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT attorneys apparently will try to prove that the Lubbock Independent School District perpetuated segregation in the 1960s by closing inner-city schools, creating optional attendance zones and building new schools in predominantly one-race areas.

Those contentions, and a rebuttal from a former school administrator, are contained in a 200-page transcript of an oral deposition filed in U.S. District Court here. School officials and the U.S. Justice Department are preparing their arguments for a trial to begin Nov. 14.

The document details Justice Department lawyer Steve Gurwin's recent questioning of Dr. Ishmael Hill, employed by the school system from 1937 to 1970, the last 20 years as assistant superintendent. Hill is now a farmer in Canyon.

Biting Exchanges Recorded
 Perhaps more revealing than the answers Hill gave was the way Gurwin phrased and elaborated on questions. The attorney's attempts to attach racial significance to past school district actions led to some biting exchanges between the two men, according to the transcript.

In one such instance, Hill was defending the school board's designation of optional attendance zones between certain schools. He said the optional zones were meant to remedy overcrowded conditions and phase in integration — not, as Gurwin charged, to isolate minorities.

"We didn't have any rednecks on the board," Hill said.
 "I bet," retorted Gurwin.

"You are familiar with rednecks, aren't you?" asked Hill. "What a redneck is?"

Replied Gurwin: "Well, as I understand, that came from an election around 1900, somewhere down South..."

Attendance Zones Attached
 Gurwin attacked the optional attendance zones that existed in the past between Anderson and Struggs junior high schools and between Posey and Boseman elementary schools. Students in the affected zones had their choice of schools to attend.

In that respect, Gurwin said, the optional zones perpetuated segregation by allowing whites to attend the schools with the fewest minority students.

But Hill argued that students' color was not a major consideration — and that in any case, the intent was not to segregate students.

Convenience Among Factors
 He said optional attendance zones were used for such reasons as relieving overcrowding at certain schools, ensuring students' safety and making things more convenient for parents who prefer to drop their children off at school en route to work.

Gurwin also criticized the school district's decisions several years ago to close such inner-city schools as K. Carter, Thompson Elementary and the old Hunt campus.

"The enrollment of the Carter School was fairly stable. If anything, it was growing," he said.

Gurwin said he has been told that "had the Carter School continued, it could See SCHOOL Page 14

Dutch Tycoon Freed Unharmed In Amsterdam Kidnap

$4.8 Million Hobbs Bond Issue Okayed

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Dutch multimillionaire Maurits Caransa has been released unharmed by his kidnapers, police said early today.

A police spokesman refused to say exactly how the 61-year-old real estate tycoon won his freedom. He said Caransa was brought to Amsterdam police headquarters during the night and had since left for an undisclosed destination.

The spokesman described Caransa as "in good health."

Caransa was kidnapped early last Friday — forced into a car by four or five persons as he left the Continental Club in Amsterdam after playing bridge. His briefcase was found on the sidewalk near his chauffeur-driven Rolls Royce.

Police tightened controls on the West German and Belgian borders and launched a nationwide search for Caransa after callers claimed he had been seized by a West German terrorist group.

Terrorists Discounted

But sources said Monday the conviction was growing in government circles that Caransa was kidnapped by common criminals and not political terrorists.

"If the crime were politically motivated it would seem that the kidnapers would have circulated well-documented claims and photos by now," the source said.

Caransa's wife, Rita, made an appeal over Dutch radio Sunday asking the kidnapers to make their demands known "in whatever manner."

Mrs. Caransa, her daughter and two grandchildren went into seclusion at the family villa at Vinkeveen, 12 miles south of the Hague, after the kidnapping.

Ransom Demands

Scores of anonymous telephone calls making ransom demands were made to newspapers and authorities after the kidnapping.

Nine hours after the kidnapping, a German speaking man telephoned a Dutch newspaper and said: "We are the Red Army Faction. We have Caransa. You will hear from us."

A second caller, speaking Dutch with a heavy Moluccan accent, told another Amsterdam newspaper he represented three groups: the Red Army Faction, a Palestinian guerrilla organization and the South Moluccan Suicide Commando. He demanded the release of Knut Folkerts, more than 20 South Moluccan terrorists in Dutch jails and a Japanese terrorist imprisoned in Israel. The 25-year-old Folkerts is a Red Army Faction member detained for the slaying of a Dutch policeman in Utrecht on Sept. 22.

HOBBS — Hobbs citizens voted Tuesday 3-to-1 in favor of a $4.8 million bond issue that will provide $375,000 in water improvements and $4,431,000 for sanitary sewer projects.

Voters had the option of accepting or rejecting the water supply projects and voted in favor of that proposition by 1,460 for to 474 against. Proposition 2, which was the sanitary sewer issue, received 1,415 in favor to 465 opposed.

City officials said sewer projects were needed due to the rapid growth of the city, adding they were elated at the passage of the bond issues.

Passage of the bonds means taxpayers here will pay about $1.46 per month more in additional taxes.

County GOP Rejects Link With New Group

By PAT PATRICK

Avalanche-Journal Staff

THE LUBBOCK County Republican Party Tuesday night publicly disassociated itself from a new organization formed last month — a group which organizers maintain is meant to help, not hurt, the GOP effort here.

County GOP chairman Mike Stevens read a three-page statement in which he expressed concern that:

"...the new organization will split the party effort, cause division in the ranks of party members, and detract from the central purpose of the Republican party of the county — namely to attract strong candidates who share our philosophy, to convince the voters our candidates can best manage the affairs of government, and to provide the helping party organization in which our members can work to further their philosophy of government."

He noted the founders of the new organization, the Active Republicans of Lubbock County, frequently have been critical both of Stevens and the county GOP executive committee.

New Oil, Gas-Burning Plants Banned By Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House-Senate energy conference committee tentatively Tuesday to ban most new power plants from burning either oil or natural gas.

Similar provisions have been approved by both chambers as part of President Carter's plan to force industries to convert to coal.

The prohibition likely would be coupled with a tax on at least some use of these scarce fuels by existing power plants and factories. Such a tax also has been passed by both chambers.

The conference committee took up the coal parts of the president's energy program after completing action on a wide variety of energy conservation measures.

Although readily agreeing to the proposed oil and gas ban on new power plants — generally those built after last April 20 — the conferees still must resolve differences on what to do about existing plants that use these fuels.

The House-passed bill contains tougher non-tax provisions aimed at forcing such plants to convert to coal than does the Senate version.

Rep. Harley M. Staggers, D-W. Va., conference chairman, claimed that in turning to the coal conversion legislation, the sluggish negotiating panel appears finally to be making some headway toward producing a compromise national energy bill.

He predicted that the final bill would be completed within two weeks — so that President Carter would not have to cancel his planned four-continent trip scheduled to begin Nov. 22.

Carter has said he will remain in town if Congress has not finished work on an energy bill by then.

But other congressional leaders were not so optimistic. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Russell Long, D-La., predicted it would take the panel about three weeks to agree on tax aspects of the energy bill.

And House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman, D-Ore., said remaining House and Senate differences on key energy issues could hold the conferees in session until Christmas.

Conferees failed again on Tuesday to agree on how to deal with cars that give poor fuel economy. The Senate voted to ban, beginning in 1980, cars getting less than 16 miles to a gallon of gasoline. The House, after debating the issue, voted a special tax on fuel-wasting vehicles.

After debating the rival approaches for several days, the conference committee agreed to put off a final decision until later, when it will be working on tax measures.

Then the panel will choose between the two alternatives or, possibly, consider some form of combination tax and ban as a compromise.

In addition to the tax on heavy cars, the House also has passed the president's proposal for new taxes on crude oil and on industrial use of oil and natural gas.

The Senate energy tax bill, passed 52 to 35 Monday, contains only a scaled-down version of the industrial oil-gas tax and ignores the other two tax proposals completely in a bill laden with some $42 billion in tax breaks for energy conservation and production.

In another congressional energy development Tuesday, the Senate joined the House in voting to require President Carter to spend $80 million in the current fiscal year to keep alive the Clinch River breeder reactor project at Oak Ridge, Tenn.

The Senate put the project into a $6.8 billion funding bill to pay for a variety of federal programs. The House has taken similar action.

The legislation would require Carter to spend the funds even if he should veto a related bill now on his desk authorizing money for the breeder program. Carter wants to scrap the project.

Carter Inks Record Increase In Minimum Wage Scale

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter signed into law Tuesday the biggest increase ever in the minimum wage, requiring most employers to pay their workers an annual minimum salary of at least $7,000 by 1981. The current minimum is $4,784.

The law raises the minimum wage from the current $2.30 an hour to $2.65 on Jan. 1, and then in three annual steps to $3.50 an hour by Jan. 1, 1981. Based on a 40-hour week, that is $6,968 a year.

Carter said it will pump an extra $9 billion into the pockets of America's low-wage workers, who will "use it for the necessities of life."

"The impact on our economy will be very beneficial," the President said during a brief ceremony in the White House Rose Garden.

Among the labor and congressional leaders on hand were AFL-CIO President George Meany, Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., and Rep. John Dent, D-Pa. Each also was there in 1938 when President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed a law establishing the first minimum wage at 25 cents an hour.

Carter noted that each time the minimum wage was increased, it brought predictions of higher inflation and catastrophe for the economy. But, he added, Congress nevertheless "acted, perhaps belatedly, but wisely in each instance" in raising the federal pay floor.

"Every President who has signed the minimum wage has signed it with heavy opposition," Dent told Carter. He added, "All that ever came out of it is a little better way of life."

The Labor Department estimated that

4.3 million workers would receive increased wages totaling $2.6 billion from the initial 35-cent an hour increase that becomes effective Jan. 1.

Subsequent increases will affect another one million workers at a cost of $6.3 billion over the following three years as the minimum wage rises to $2.90 in 1979, $3.10 in 1980 and $3.35 in 1981.

Farm workers, whose present minimum is $2.20 an hour, will receive the same rate as most other workers under the new law.

Congress approved the new minimum wage law Oct. 20, despite heavy opposition from conservatives and business. Opponents argued that the increase would contribute to inflation and put thousands of people out of work. But the administration, aided by labor, civil rights and other groups, successfully argued that the higher wage was needed to lift millions of workers out of poverty.

Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., called the legislation a "triumph of bipartisanship and cooperation between the executive branch and Congress." Sen. Harrison P. Williams Jr., D-N.J., said "it is a great day for the people on the lowest rung of our economic ladder."

While the new law represents a victory for labor and the administration, it wasn't a total triumph. Congress knocked out a provision sought by labor and the administration that would have made future increases automatic.

The new law increases the number of small businesses exempted from the minimum wage law. Now, businesses with less than $250,000 in annual gross sales are exempt. This will rise to $362,000 by Dec. 31, 1982, removing some 850,000 workers from minimum wage coverage.

"I very much enjoy writing about positive, direct emotions," says Sayer in Rolling Stone. "I don't find any recognition in Dylan anymore. Now I realize that all he's got are the words and the poetry and a lot of word games. It sounds so self-indulgent. I hate art as a be-all and an end-all."

Missing $100 Bills Puzzling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Federal banking officials have a puzzle: What's happening to all those $100 bills?

The San Francisco branch of the Federal Reserve Bank, which serves 33 million people in nine Western states, says it has discovered that a lot more $100 bills are being put into circulation than are being returned as worn out.

During the two fiscal years 1975-77, the bank reported Monday, it paid out $32.8 billion in currency and got back only $31.9 billion.

That was a net excess of $914 million added to the bills in circulation. But the increase in $100 bills amounted to $1.4 billion.

Wesley G. DeVries, senior vice president of the Fed, said nobody knows why. But he said some of the increase is traceable to the intensity of travel by people who want to carry cash and not depend on travelers checks or credit cards.

Witnesses Testify On Priscilla Davis' Methods To Get Drugs

AMARILLO (AP) — Two defense witnesses testified Tuesday that Priscilla Davis juggled doctors and pharmacies to obtain hundreds of pain-killing pills.

The estranged wife of millionaire murder defendant Cullen Davis once used prescriptions by different doctors to purchase 300 Percocet pills in a single week.

According to the testimony, she also purchased 250 Percocet tablets in the four weeks prior to the Aug. 2, 1976 shooting spree at the Davis mansion in which two died and two were wounded.

Fort Worth pharmacist Daryl Spence and Ollie Chote said Percocet and Percocet are similar in composition and routinely prescribed for moderate to severe pain.

Mrs. Davis, 36, a jet set blonde wounded in the shootings, said she has at times taken more than 200 Percocets a week and "probably" is addicted to the drug. She was the first of three state witnesses to identify Davis as the gunman in black who invaded the hilltop mansion and triggered the midnight rampage.

Killed were the defendant's 12-year-old daughter Andrea and Priscilla's 30-year-old lover Stan Farr, with whom she was sharing the mansion at the time.

Gus Gavrel, 22, a friend of Priscilla's elder daughter Dee also was wounded.

Spence, a pharmacist at Summit Pharmacy, produced records showing Mrs. Davis frequently used prescriptions from different doctors to buy a wide range of drugs, mostly Percocet.

Defense lawyer Mike Gibson matched those records with those from Chote's Whitten Pharmacy to show Mrs. Davis corresponding drug purchases. For example, on April 7, 1977, Mrs. Davis obtained 100 Percocet pills from Summit and another 100 from Whitten, using prescriptions from different doctors.

Chote said the procedure was not illegal and that there were no state or federal restrictions on dispensing the drugs if the prescriptions themselves are legitimate.

The defense has steadfastly contended that drugs, legal and otherwise, flowed freely through the mansion after Cullen and Priscilla separated and Davis moved out in July 1974.

Farr subsequently moved into the mansion with Priscilla and Davis took up residence at the Edgely Village home of his girlfriend, Karen Master.

Deaths Of 11 On New Protein Diet Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is investigating the deaths of 11 persons who were on liquid protein diets to see if the modified fast played a part in the deaths.

A Food and Drug Administration spokesman said Tuesday that no cause-and-effect relationship has been established between the liquid protein diet and any of the deaths.

The FDA and the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta are jointly looking into the deaths, which ranged from a woman in her early twenties to a 62-year-old man. All occurred this year.

The FDA spokesman emphasized that no one should go on a liquid protein diet without direct medical supervision and said such a diet is intended only for "extremely obese" persons, not those trying to lose 10 or 20 pounds.

Liquid protein is sold under many labels without a prescription at drug and health food stores. Dieters are told to consume only a few ounces of the liquid protein daily and nothing else.

Protein is an essential ingredient in nutrition, but the FDA spokesman said, "To the best of our knowledge, none of these diet supplements is nutritionally complete."

He said a person could become seriously dehydrated if he or she does not consume enough water, and that dehydration was "especially dangerous for someone with heart, kidney or liver problems." He said the liquid protein diet also should be supplemented with potassium, the absence of which can affect the heart.

The FDA said the diet is "rarely suitable" for use by children or by pregnant or nursing women.

Persons taking certain drugs should be wary of the diet, the spokesman said. He cited diuretic, antihypertension and diabetic drugs, steroids and thyroid preparations.

The liquid protein diet has been popularized in recent years by Dr. Robert Linn, author of "The Last Chance Diet." His book says the diet can help persons lose 20 to 25 pounds in the first month and keep the weight off, but it also cautions that it should be used only under medical supervision.

Each ounce of liquid protein contains about 60 calories.

AN EDITORIAL:

A Vote 'For' Amendments

THE AVALANCHE-JOURNAL recommends a vote next Tuesday in favor of two anti-crime amendments to the Texas Constitution and of a third dealing with the process for disciplining state judges.

Proposition 1 on the ballot would enlarge the Court of Criminal Appeals. Proposition 3 would allow a judge to deny bail to a person accused of committing a felony while already free on bail. Proposition 7 deals with the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

If Proposition 1 is approved, the five-member Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin would be enlarged to nine members who could sit as three-member panels to decide cases.

BY DIVIDING UP an increasingly heavy workload in this manner, the Court of Criminal Appeals could unlog the appeals process and bring criminals to quicker justice.

The speed and certainty of punishment is almost universally endorsed as a major deterrent to crime. Conversely, when cases drag on and on during the appeals process, the whole system seems to break down.

Opposition to the proposed amendment has come mainly from those who believe a better solution would be to give regional civil appeals courts jurisdiction over criminal cases.

However, that solution—which also would have combined the Texas Supreme Court with the Court of Criminal Appeals—went down to defeat with total revision of the Constitution a couple of years ago.

Enlargement of the existing court to handle more cases is the best solution at hand.

THERE IS LITTLE that irritates the public more than to learn that a person has been freed on bail a second time after allegedly committing a heinous crime while free awaiting trial or appealing conviction on another crime.

Proposition 3 would put an end to abuse of the bail bond system in this manner, assuming sponsors are correct in their belief it would not violate the federal Constitution.

If Proposition 3 is approved, a district court could deny bail to a person accused of a felony committed while he was on bail for a prior felony indictment or to a person who has been previously convicted of a felony and who is accused of using a deadly weapon in the commission of a second felony.

The career criminal thus would be kept behind bars, where he belongs, rather than being permitted to abuse the presumption of innocence guarantee by continuing his life of crime while his lawyer delays trial on previous offenses.

By making bail denial discretionary, both the public and the accused person would be protected, the latter from being harassed or "hassled" by over-zealous police.

PROPOSITION 7 on Tuesday's ballot would provide for quicker and more effective handling of judicial scandals when the electorate has erred in electing a judge.

The State Judicial Qualifications Commission would be re-named the State Commission on Judicial Conduct with an enlarged membership and broader powers.

It would have power, with concurrence of the Supreme Court, to suspend a judge with or without pay pending final disposition of charges against him and would authorize a public reprimand in addition to a private reprimand.

This faster disposition of allegations against a judge, and the public disclosure of reprimands, are needed to reinforce the public's confidence in our courts.

THE JOB OF running the Animal Shelter is not an easy one under the best of conditions.

No matter what, that person is "damned if he does and damned if he doesn't." Handling animals, most often family pets if you please, is an emotional thing. Reason often gets lost.

However, because of this and because so many residents of the city do have pets, it is incumbent on the City Council to see that the Shelter is adequately funded and properly run.

On the other side of the coin, it is equally incumbent on the citizenry to see that pets are properly cared for, kept penned or on leashes, vaccinated and treated with the care they deserve.

THERE WERE some in City Hall who inadvertently or otherwise left the impression that a "dog pound" is better hidden away and what happens there better kept quiet.

Fortunately, this attitude has changed.

Too, those in charge at the Shelter have shown a willingness to cooperate, to seek ways and means of improving the lot of the animals, the workers and those who come to the shelter.

In the final analysis, the Animal Shelter is

ART BUCHWALD:

Getting Back To Basics As Simple As C, B, A's

WASHINGTON—There is a tremendous concern in this country about our educational system. At least 1,567 commissions are studying it, 18,732 professors are now writing books critical of it, and every politician running for office is demanding a change in it.

I myself have opted for the Makepiece Plan, put forward by Harvey Makepiece of the Society for the Abolishment of the Three-Chocolate-Milk lunch.

Makepiece told me, "It's obvious that five- and six-year olds are not ready for grade school. Their minds and bodies are too fragile to take on the difficult tasks their teachers assign to them. They should have more leisure and fun before they get down to work."

"What do you suggest?" I asked him.

"WE SEND THEM to college first and let them work off their high spirits."

"I'm not sure I follow."

"Let first graders have their first taste of school in college. Give them a chance to join sororities and fraternities, go to football games, frolic on the campuses and have panty raids in the dorms."

"College is not the time for serious schoolwork, and it is the perfect place for children from the ages of five to nine to have a good time and get used to attending classes, where they can sleep, flirt or cheat on their studies."

"Very few demands are made on college students. They can cut classes, spend their days in the student union and their evenings listening to rock music." "And then what?" I asked.

"AFTER FOUR years of college, a child is ready to tackle high school. High school, as you know, is just a little tougher than college, and a child would have to get down to work. Not too much work, but enough to get him or her interested in books."

"The student still would have an opportunity to attend football games, date once in a while if he or she wanted to, go to an occasional dance and drive around in a car after 3 o'clock.

"ALSO, THE student would have to work hard because he or she knows that there are only a certain number of places open in grade school, and to be able to go on to the school of his or her choice would mean making the grades to qualify."

"Then," I said, "what you're advocating is that grade school be the last one a student must attend."

"That's correct. After the pleasures of colleges and the joys of high school, a student should be mature enough to face life in the tough world of grade school."

"There are no fraternities or sororities to distract them. Social life is at a bare minimum, teachers in grade schools don't take any back talk from their students, and corporal punishment is permitted."

"LOWER PUBLIC schools have no football teams or extracurricular activities. If the truth be known, it's an eight-year grind, and no one accepts any excuses from a kid who can't make it from grades one to eight."

"But grade school is so long," I protested. "Do you think teen-agers could go the distance without dropping out?"

"No one drops out of grade school. All of them are prepared to come to grips with it, particularly when a grade school diploma will be the highest one that any student can receive. A grade school education under my system is what every parent in this country will want for his kid."

"But what about graduate school?" I asked.

"Those who want to go on to graduate school could enroll in kindergarten."

"You're advocating a complete reversal of the American educational system," I said. "Do you think this country is ready for it?"

"After what we've seen of our students for the past 10 years, this country is ready for anything."

It's My New Diet Plan—This Way You Don't Eat So Much

M. STANTON EVANS:

It's A Trifle Suspect

WASHINGTON—Part of the selling job used to promote the Carter welfare program is that it will cost "only" $2.8 billion more than the existing setup.

Even this, of course, is well outside the guidelines set up by the President.

The original mandate had been to devise a program that was no more expensive than the present one, a stance the President and his spokesmen now interpret as a "valuable tool in discipline" rather than a hard and fast requirement.

An overrun of only $2.8 billion now is considered close enough.

It develops, however, that the frequently cited $2.8 billion vastly understates the two additional costs of the Carter package.

WELFARE EXPERTS ON Capitol Hill have been digging into the program and its ambitious plans for putting as many as 50 million Americans on welfare.

They have discovered that the added cost would be approximately $15 billion higher than the present system—which already is painfully expensive.

The welfare researchers, including the former U.S. welfare commissioner Robert Carlson and congressional staffers, charge that HEW has engaged in statistical games to downplay the size of the projected spending hike.

It appears the Carter planners scratched around for as many items of the present or even prospective spendings as they could to lump in as "costs" of the existing program, and simultaneously omitted items from the actual cost of the Carter package.

By jacking up the first total and whittling down the second, HEW got the difference down to only $2.8 billion.

THUS, THE researchers note HEW counts as a "cost" of the present program $1.3 billion in wellhead tax revenues which are a part of the Carter energy package, targeted for rebates to the poor.

Since this proposal has not yet been enacted, and is something the President is promoting, it hardly can be counted as an existing cost that he is going to do away with.

And even if it were enacted, its status as part of the energy package would make its inclusion in the welfare program a trifle suspect.

Similar skepticism is directed at HEW's inclusion of the $5.5 billion in "counter-cyclical" job funds as part of the existing welfare cost.

This appropriation is and was intended to be purely temporary as an anti-recession measure, and in fact expires at the end of this year.

To treat it as a continuing part of the welfare program as it is about to expire makes little sense—unless one is trying to jack up apparent costs for some ulterior purpose.

OTHER INCLUSIONS in the Carter list of present welfare costs are equally dubious—such as $7 billion in extended unemployment insurance that, like the job funds, is a temporary measure.

One also might note the curious inclusion of added Social Security taxes, alleged HEW budget shavings, etc., but even if we pass over these, the wellhead tax, the job funds and the extended unemployment benefits add up to more than $7 billion in overstated current costs.

At the other end of the scale, meantime, the Carter planners casually exclude from the costs of their own projected program some $3.4 billion in tax credit payments to people in middle-income brackets—a figure that Treasury officials suggest will be at least $1 billion higher.

IF THIS SUM WERE added to the cost of the Carter program, the annual dole would come to $35.1 billion rather than the $30.7 billion claimed by HEW, compared to a maximum cost of slightly over $20 billion for the existing program.

As Carlson sums it up: "There has been an overstatement of current welfare costs by $7.5 billion and a specific understatement of the costs of the new program by $4.4 billion."

"Therefore, from the administration's own data, the additional costs of the new program in the first year are at least $14.7 billion instead of the $2.8 billion claimed."

"This represents a net increase of over 70 per cent."

Jest For Fun

Several flags were being shown to a kindergarten class. "What flag is this?" asked the teacher. A bright youngster quickly replied, "That is the flag of our country."

"And," continued the teacher, "what is the name of your country?"

JAY HARRIS:

R-U One Two?...

MORE YEARS AGO than we like to recall, we got our first introduction to the "world of tomorrow" at a State Fair of Texas.

One of the gimmicks which had everyone "ooing and aahing" was a small, boxlike contraption about 18 inches square and eight or ten inches high.

At the push of a button in a kitchen, the Gimmick would emerge from his hiding place under a kitchen cabinet and proceed to wash, vacuum and then polish the kitchen floor, or just clean it if it were a rug.

It was to be the boon of the liberated U.S. Housewife, even before the term had become a cause celebre and Housewives found out they were supposed to be liberated, a fact many have probably lived to regret.

ANOTHER ITEM of the future which got a big play after World War II was the possibility of radio-controlled autos.

One would just hop in the family jalopy, with its plexiglas top, tool out on the nearest highway, set a few dials, sit back and enjoy the scenery. Beams or some sort of lines in the pavement would keep the car at a safe distance from the one ahead, keep it at the proper speed on curves.

Well; Man has been to the Moon, and back. We've got mixmasters, color television and instant replay of the world's problems and a host of other things, including a couple of generations out of hand.

But, we ain't got no Kitchen Gimmick, or radio-controlled what-cham-call-it to keep us from banging into each other yet.

We may be getting close to the Jack, or Jackie, of all trades, however. We read the other day about a fellow by name of Anthony Reichelt of Hackensack, N.J., who has come up with a five-foot, two-inch robot named Klatu, pronounced Clay-too.

Klatu, it seems, does everything from clean house to walk the dog. It also serves drinks and makes small talk. Its inventor hopes to sell it eventually for something like $4,000 a copy.

IN VIEW OF the recent interest in R2-D2, or is it Artoo-Deetoo, and C-3PO, or See Threeipo, in the movie, Star Wars, maybe Klatu's time has come.

If so, we have a few words of advice about what sort of world he, she or it will face. It's enough to make a robot whiz and wheeze twice.

First off, Klatu probably will have to get a Social Security card, with a proper number. This will stick with him, her, it, even longer than the patent pending thing.

Next, there is the matter of a driver's license, also with number and picture (not to drive a car, but to cash checks!), a bank deposit account, with a you-know-what, and maybe even a passport, also with one-two-three-something.

Now, Klatu is ready for the house cleaning, dog walking, drink mixing, and small talk. That is, if he, she, it can meet the right quota, also a number of sorts. And considering that computers and robots are a relatively new item in the political spectrum, there may not be a special interest group or ethnic bloc to beat chests and burn bras for his, her, its "rights."

BUT, ASSUMING all these things come to pass, and all things do in the Land of Oz, New Deals, Fair Deals, Great Deals and Raw Deals, then Klatu will be ready for business, as well as work.

Of course, as time goes by, there will be such items as income tax reports—with numbers, yet; employe progress reports (also ditto), insurance records (might break a buzzer or something and have to sue someone), credit records (cash is a no-no these days), medical records (even robots get sick), phone records and some we haven't heard of yet.

When the New Jersey man invented Klatu, he programmed in some 250 words. Predictably, things went awry the first go-around and the Thingamagig didn't speak the right words when spoken to. But, who does nowadays?

And, according to People magazine in its report on the New Worker, when it did get around to talking, one of its first squawks was: "I do not do windows."

IF AT SOME point in here, Klatu has started sounding and acting like a Human Being, then he can be forgiven.

A lot of Human Beings these days are getting to feel like robots or computers.

Nor only are we Humans burdened with all those numbers, and we forgot Parking Lot stickers, but the "civilized" part of the Human Race may have the eerie feeling that it also is "programmed."

Much of what we eat, wear, read, see, the games we watch and the games we play are "packaged" as part of the good life and something all with-it robots and Human Beings must have to be a "success."

If one of something is good, then two of it has to double the pleasure. Conversely, no one ever seems to realize that the reverse also may be true.

WE AREN'T ONE of those who puts down Progress, the Space Age, Technology.

On the contrary, Progress is the greatest thing since bottled milk. The Space Age, to us, was worth every penny. Technology, miracle drugs, the works, we buy.

But something needs to be said for the milk of human kindness, unbotled, compassion, minding one's own business, people treating one another as people. In brief, a return to the basics, even if the computers get lost along the way.

There's a lot to be said for the Age of the Computer, as long as we remember that all those little dots and blips and inserts and delete lines and scroll downs and scroll ups are People we are talking about.

Otherwise, the R2-D2's, C-3PO's and Klatu's may well take over the world. If they haven't already...

...Pass It On

ONE SORT of feminine costume, and only one, has been in continuous fashion for more than 5,000 years, certainly far longer than any other. Can you name it? The sari of India.

Q: "Why did some Indian tribes require their children to be brought up by their uncles instead of their fathers?"

A: "Brought up" isn't exactly right. The uncles corrected the youngsters and disciplined them, leaving those fathers free to be friendly with their own kids. Less authoritative, more loving, as it were.

Burglaries, Assaults Highlight Police Activity

Police Tuesday were investigating a spate of expensive house and car burglaries in addition to two reported aggravated assaults.

Robert E. Ross said someone broke in to his television repair van over the weekend, while it was parked at a shop at 1710 Clovis Rd.

Taken from the vehicle were handtools, a television tube caddy and electronic replacement modules valued at $1,500.

Trailer thieves cost Marvin Lee Jones of 2005 69th St. a reported $1,500, after they reportedly made off with two cotton trailers last week from a gin at 13th Street and Avenue A.

A "test" drive apparently impressed the man who drove away in a 1974 Thunderbird Monday.

Dale Martin said the "customer" left his car at a lot at Broadway and Quirt Avenue Monday then took the Thunderbird for a test spin. Martin said he had not heard from the man since.

Burglars who entered a west side door at Kelly Holamon's 2019 5th St. residence Sunday made off with an estimated $2,560 worth of assorted items.

Witnesses, who had been staying at Holamon's home in his absence, said they left the premises about two hours Sunday, then returned to find the items gone.

Included in the theft were two televisions, jewelry, two bicycles, $1,000 worth of stereo equipment and meat from a freezer.

In other reports, two Lubbock men reported in separate incidents that they were assaulted Monday.

Ruben Pincon of 3314 E. Bates St. reportedly was unconscious when a policeman—responding to a fight in progress call—arrived at a residence in the 2600-block of E. Bates Street late Monday.

Pincon, who had been at a party at that address, reportedly was struck in the head with a baseball bat, but he was not believed to have been seriously injured.

Elsewhere, Bobby Joe Casanova of 2011 77th St. reportedly was stabbed in the left side of the abdomen a half hour after the attack on Pincon Monday.

Reports indicated Casanova had been called outside at a club in the 1700-block of 4th St. about 11 p.m., when a group of men gathered around.

One of the men reportedly asked Casanova questions about one of his relatives, then stabbed the victim in the abdomen.

Bob C. Smith said someone took a television and seven cartons of cigarettes from a service station at N. University Avenue and Loop 289 overnight Monday.

After using a ladder to get in a garage door, reports indicated the burglars made off with about $167 in merchandise and caused $50 damage.

Steven Stem of 1802 66th St. wasn't thrilled about becoming a moveable Texas Tech University mascot late Monday or Tuesday.

Stem said vandals sprayed his car's entire surface with red and black paint, causing an estimated $250 damage.

Stereo speakers and a radio, valued together at $165, reportedly were taken from Burl Ham of 3202 27th St. The items, Ham said, were taken from his parked vehicle.

While Halloween prank playing apparently was light Monday night, police kept busy with reports of a Monday afternoon robbery, an aggravated assault at a junior high school and a house burglary netting more than $1,500 in stolen goods.

Jose Martinez, a maintenance man at the Sands Motel at 310 Ave. Q, told police he was robbed of about $140 about 4 p.m. by a man registered at the motel after he agreed to give the man a ride to some apartments.

The motel employee said he was at about 10th Street and University Ave. when his passenger grabbed his arm and demanded his money.

Martinez said he did not see a gun but that the man was holding something in his pocket which might have been a weapon.

After the reported holdup, Martinez said the man got out of the car and ran to some nearby apartments.

The motel registration card showed the man to be from Dallas. Martinez said he earlier had seen the suspect in a brown Cadillac. The alleged holdup man was described as a thin black male, about 18 to 25 years old and about 6 feet tall. He was wearing a brown and white shirt and blue pants.

Police arrived at Matthews Junior High School about 1:30 p.m. Monday to find that a 15-year-old student apparently had been assaulted with a piece of iron by another student, also 15. Both were in Principal E.G. Nunez' office when police arrived.

The alleged assailant was taken to the county ward by juvenile officers on a charge of aggravated assault.

The victim, Nina Navairo, was treated for a cut on her arm.

Miss Navairo reportedly was hit in the back and the arm by the girl who now is being held by juvenile authorities. Reports show that the girl charged also threatened to kill Nunez and assistant principal Jessie Garza.

Pat B. Mullins of 2622 26th St. told police his home was entered between noon Friday and 1:30 p.m. Monday and that about $1,540 worth of property was taken.

Among the stolen items listed were clothes, liquor, stereo equipment, a watch and a television set.

Mullins said entry apparently was made by prying a screen off an unlocked bedroom window and raising it.

Kaye Haney of 3905 Ave. R. reported that her residence was burglarized between 7:45 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Monday.

Worried About How You'll Look With A Hearing Aid?

Chicago, Ill.—A free offer of special interest to those who hear but do not understand words has been announced by Beltone. A non-operating model of the smallest Beltone aid of its kind will be given absolutely free to anyone answering this advertisement.

True, all hearing problems are not alike... and some cannot be helped by a hearing aid. But audiologists report that many can. So, send for this free model now, and wear it in the privacy of your own home. It is not a real hearing aid, but it will show you how tiny hearing help can be. It's yours to keep, free.

The actual aid weighs less than a third of an ounce, and it's all at ear level, in one unit.

These models are free, so we suggest you write for yours now. Again, we repeat, there is no cost, and certainly no obligation. Thousands have already been mailed, so write today to Dept. 5308, Beltone Electronics, 4201 W. Victoria, Chicago, Ill. 60646.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Organize matters at home and try to cooperate more with kin. Not a good day to start some new interest.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day to write letters and handle other communications wisely. State aims to close ties and gain cooperation so that you may attain them more readily.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Concentrate on ways to increase income for future security. Get the aid you need from a successful person who can be of assistance to you.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Improve health and appearance so that you can accomplish more in the future. Attend a social affair where you meet interesting personalities.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be more cautious in you handling of money matters. Spend more time with mate, loved one. Be careful of one who may be trying to come between you.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Know what your true position is with friends and do something kind for them to improve it. Attending a social gathering can be fun, but do so after your work is done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A civic matter you're involved in could take more time than you anticipate. Clarify some work situation that has been puzzling you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Plan time now to extend your interests so that you can become more successful. Making new contacts with persons whose ideas are different from your own is wise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are able to concentrate on money problems and solve them. Try to cooperate more with co-workers. Save money for the future and feel more secure.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Mixing work with pleasure could cause a rift. Don't make rash decisions. Control any feeling of obstinacy.

Childress Manager Announces Plans To Improve City Streets

A-J Correspondent

CHILDRESS — A plan to improve the streets of Childress has been announced by City Manager David Galligan.

The city council recently voiced approval of a program of street paving through residents' assessments, Galligan said.

Maintenance and repairs to existing streets and roadways, the city manager explained, "This does not allow adequate funds to develop and maintain a satisfactory program of new paving. Through the assessment process and citizen participation, a self-perpetuating fund can be established to insure a continuous paving program."

Galligan further explained that the new program would promote a continuation of street improvements as the city grows, and as the increasing population requires additional property development. In addition, it would allow for surfacing of the streets which currently are unpaved.

The proposed assessment program would be operated in this manner:

—Fall and winter months would be used to complete the necessary paperwork, with actual paving done by city crews in spring and summer.

—Citizens interested in having paving done on streets abutting their property should organize with other residents of the area. A written or oral request for paving should be made to the city manager.

—Prices for paving will be held to a break-even cost to the city so as to allow citizens to participate in the program without undue financial burdening.

Residents who want their streets included in projects slated for next spring and summer should contact the city manager or his assistant, Roger Davis as soon as possible.

Pre-Surgery Second Opinion Found Advisable

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Health, Education and Welfare Department, saying there is an increasing amount of unnecessary surgery, Tuesday urged the public to get a second doctor's opinion before undergoing elective surgery.

The department also said it would urge all states to quickly begin allowing—and paying for—second opinion consultations for low-income patients in state-administered Medicaid programs. And it said it would pay for second opinions on surgery requested by elderly patients in Medicare programs.

Health Agency Seeks Funds From Towns

A-J Correspondent
PLAINVIEW—The Plainview-Hale County Health Department is in need of money, officials contend, and to get it they want more financial support from the county's smaller communities—Hale Center, Abernathy, Petersburg and Edmonson.

That was the crux of Monday night's meeting of elected officials.

Currently the health department, which provides services in each of the Hale County communities, gets local financial backing from only Hale County and the city of Plainview.

To continue operating at current efficiency, health officials said, more money is needed. Since both Plainview and Hale County already are contributing about $35,000 annually, health officials are hopeful of getting the funds from the smaller towns.

They want the money in time to increase next year's budget so part-time nurse fulltime. The estimated cost of those can hire a new nurse's aid and make one addition is $12,000. Although the smaller towns declined to commit themselves, they did agree to meet jointly with Plainview city councilmen, Hale County commissioners, and health officials prior to finalizing next year's budget.

Those same small community officials did express some surprise that they were being asked to contribute to the program, since a portion of their county taxes are being used for the same purpose.

However, Plainview representatives said they, too, pay county taxes and, yet, they contribute city money as well.

If additional money does not become available, the officials added, health services will have to be reduced in Hale County.

HEW Under Secretary Hale Champion, testifying before a House commerce subcommittee, said one of the reasons for the increasing amounts of unnecessary surgery is because "there are many thousands more surgeons" than we need in the United States.

He advised the public to get second opinions on elective surgery, especially tonsillectomies, hysterectomies and cholecystectomies—gall-bladder operations.

The HEW recommendation aimed at reducing unnecessary surgery comes less than six months after the Carter administration proposed controversial legislation aimed at holding down soaring hospital costs. The legislation proposed last April would place a 9 per cent annual ceiling on hospital fee increases.

HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr.

has called the nation's hospitals obese and said a ceiling of hospital fee increases would save the government, health insurance companies and consumers several billion dollars a year.

Champion said the overall rate of surgery in the nation increased by 23 per cent between 1970 and 1975. Specifically, the rate for hysterectomy increased 35 per cent; for prostatectomy—removal of the prostate gland—18 per cent; and for cholecystectomy 17 per cent.

The purpose of another opinion by a second doctor would be to confirm or raise doubts about the necessity of surgery recommended by the patient's first physician.

Champion said the results of the new system under Medicaid and Medicare will be monitored for about six months. He said if HEW finds that voluntary second opinions prove ineffective in reducing the "intolerably high levels of surgery" or that stronger action is needed, then it may require—rather than urge—second opinions for certain non-emergency operations.

"Until we reduce the enormous glut of excess hospital beds in this country," said Champion, "physicians and surgeons will continue to fill them with patients who could be treated on an outpatient basis."

COMMON ALLERGIES

The most common food allergies are to fish, berries, nuts, eggs, cereals, milk, pork, chocolate, beans, and various fresh fruits. The National Institutes of Health reports that some people also are allergic to things like food additives.

"We have to recognize that there are many thousands more surgeons than we need, and cut back significantly on the number trained at public expense," he said.

"Surgeons, as you might expect, favor a surgical approach to medical problems. And the result is that excess surgeons lead to excess surgery."

Champion said the existing fee-for-service billing system encourages surgeons to operate. For example, he said, physicians in pre-paid practices operated only half as frequently as those in the fee-for-service system.

"We have to change the perverse economic incentives at work if we are ever to get to the heart of the unnecessary surgery problem," said Champion.

Message To Washington

NO TAX DUE

MESSAGE—We have received notice from the Internal Revenue Service that we are delinquent $900 in our taxes. My husband and I filed separate returns but we mailed them together. Since my refund was equal to the amount my husband owed, we asked the IRS to credit my overpayment to my husband's liability. An IRS agent told me that it was a bit unusual, but he saw no reason why it couldn't be done. I would like an explanation as to why we received the past due notice even though the IRS has had our $900 for months. I don't think we should owe any interest or penalty, either. Can anything be done?—J.M., Houston.

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS—Something has been done. The problem according to IRS officials, was that the name did not match the Social Security number on your return, which has delayed processing of the return and held up your refund. The IRS advises me that you are being sent a form to correct your return and your Social Security records. Your return will be processed as soon as the form is returned. You should disregard the past due notice and you will be charged no penalty.

TANGLING WITH FDA

MESSAGE—Last May I ordered a machine, books and supplies from Sussex College in England. This machine is used for identifying rocks and is not yet manufactured in the United States. Later, I received a form letter from the Food and Drug Administration stating that they were holding my machine because the accompanying literature stated that it was to be used for health purposes. Since I don't have the machine, I don't know what else it can do besides identify rocks. Two weeks and five phone calls later, a man at the FDA told me that the literature has been destroyed and I can now receive the machine. But I can't use it without directions. What can be done to stop the FDA from usurping rights and destroying my property?—M.S., El Paso

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS—The FDA advises me that "radionics" devices, such as the one you ordered, have been denied entry into the United States because of extravagant therapeutic or medical claims. They held up your machine because of the claims in accompanying literature. After you contacted them, indicating that the machine was intended for geological and not medical use, they ruled that the machine could be sent to you but not the literature, with its extravagant medical claims. Otherwise the machine would have been destroyed or sent back to England.

Bentsen Reviews Texas' Military Base Status

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen announced Tuesday that he will meet in his office Wednesday morning with top defense department officials to discuss the future of Texas military bases.

"We know that Defense Secretary Harold Brown has said that he supports major cuts in the budget for military installations. And we know that 11 military installations in Texas have been shut down since 1965 in the wake of various defense cutbacks," Sen. Bentsen said.

"I feel very strongly that those Texas bases which have survived the numerous reductions that have taken place over the past decade are vital to our nation's defense and are being operated efficiently, and I want some assurances that our state won't bear the brunt of any reductions planned for next year's budget."

Sen. Bentsen will meet Wednesday morning with Deputy Secretary of Defense Charles Duncan and John White, the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Manpower, Reserve Affairs and Logistics. Sen. John Tower will also attend.

The 11 Texas military facilities that have been shutdown since 1965 are: Amarillo Air Force Base; Perrin AFB, Sherman; Ellington AFB, Houston; Matagorda Air Force Station, Matagorda Island; Laredo AFB; Webb AFB, Big Spring; Connally AFB, Waco; Ft. Wolters, Mineral Wells; the Navy's Inactive Ship Storage Facility, Orange; the Navy Rocketdyne Facility at McGregor; and Camp Gary, San Marcos.

There are some 27 military facilities in Texas which are still active including Reese AFB in Lubbock.

"It took emergency legislative action this year to block an attempt by the Navy to close down the Corpus Christi Naval Station," Bentsen said.

"I am hopeful that, by having these early discussions with defense officials as they are drawing up their budget, it won't be necessary to take similar action next year," Sen. Bentsen said.

Museum Director To Speak At Annual Meeting

Dr. Leslie C. Drew, new director of The Museum of Texas Tech University, will be speaker for the 48th annual meeting of the West Texas Museum Association at 7 p.m. Monday.

New officers and trustees will be named and Action Awards presented during the dinner session in the museum's main gallery.

Current president J.C. Chambers and women's council president Nancy Tarwater will make brief annual reports.

Action awards are made each year to three individuals or organizations having made significant contributions to the cultural life of the Southern High Plains.

Drew, who assumed duties Tuesday, came to Lubbock from Bozeman, Mont., where he was director of the Museum of the Rockies and a professor of biology at Montana State University.

Prior to his Montana duties, Drew served in a number of museum capacities and as assistant professor of entomology at Michigan State University. He went to Bozeman from Yale University where he was assistant to the director of the Peabody Museum.

Tickets for the dinner, for association members and their guests, are $5.50 per person.

Tower Visit Rescheduled For December

U.S. Sen. John Tower has rescheduled for December a tour of the Lubbock area that he had planned this week.

The tour was to have begun Tuesday. But an aide said Senate business required the Republican to stay in Washington instead, where he is involved in action on President Carter's energy tax bill, Social Security proposals, including one Tower has introduced himself, and a supplemental defense appropriations bill that deals with the FB111 aircraft.

Senate majority leader Robert Byrd now has predicted that the Senate will be adjourned by Thanksgiving, the aide said. So on that basis, Tower's South Plains-

Panhandle tour has been set for Dec. 5-8.

The itinerary calls for him to be in Guthrie, Aspermont, Jayton, Spur and Crosbyton on Dec. 5, finishing that day with a 5 p.m. press conference in Lubbock and then staying overnight here.

On Dec. 6, plans are for him to travel to Tahoka, Morton, Matador, Silvertown and Tulia, with an overnight stop in Amarillo. The Dec. 7 swing will cover Claude, Clarendon, Wellington, Dimmitt and Friona.

He is to wind up Dec. 8 with visits to Miami, Booker, Stratford and Vega.

The tour will include "town hall" meetings.

U.N. Reports Upswing In World Drug Abuse

GENEVA, Switzerland (UPI) — More than 1,000 babies in New York City are born addicted to heroin each year because their mothers are addicts, a U.N. drug agency said Tuesday.

In a grim report on the sharp increase in drug addiction throughout the West, the U.N. Fund for Drug Abuse Control said there are now more than 600,000 addicts in the United States and that half of all street crimes in America are committed by drug addicts.

The agency said there were 2,000 heroin deaths in the United States last year.

The agency blamed Burma, Laos and Thailand for producing most of the raw opium for the illicit trade in narcotics.

Most of the raw opium produced in the world comes from the "Golden Triangle" of Burma, Laos and Thailand, with Burma turning out 500 tons of the 600 to 700 tons produced annually by this region, the agency said.

The 500 tons of opium produced by Burma is sufficient to make 50 tons of heroin which at $4.50 a milligram in Washington streets represents $225 billion.

Citing official and unofficial sources, the agency said a heroin addict in Washington spends $54 daily to get his four doses, which adds up to $20,000 a year.

In the United States, the report said, an estimated 620,000 people are addicted to opium and its derivatives.

By comparison, there were some 100,000 addicts in France last year — five times the number in 1970 — West Germany had some 40,000 addicts, 5,000 of them in West Berlin. There were 15,000 in the Netherlands, half of them in Amsterdam.

Tradition Broken As New HEW Building Named For Humphrey

HUBERT H HUMPHREY BUILDING
 Marcel Breuer, Architect
 This building is dedicated to Senator Hubert H. Humphrey in recognition of his contribution to the health, education and welfare of this Nation.
 Dedicated November 1, 1977
 Jimmy Carter
 President
 United States of America

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington Tuesday named one of its grandest new buildings in living honor of Sen. Hubert Humphrey — "our beloved Hubert" — and the cancer stricken senator, blinking back tears, said, "My cup runneth over and I love the harvest."
 Then he stepped back from the microphone at hushed dedication ceremonies in the ultramodern new Hubert H. Humphrey building, took his wife in his arms, tipped her chin up and kissed her.
 The building houses the Health, Education and Welfare Department on Independence Avenue at the foot of Capitol Hill, and in naming it for Humphrey, the government departed from the crusty tradition that federal landmarks commemorate dead men.
 "This is the department whose programs are filled with love," Vice President Walter Mondale told a dedication crowd of about 500 persons, including many high ranking political celebrities, "and for that reason I am deeply honored to join with you today as we dedicate this building in the name of our beloved Hubert."

 Looking gaunt but full of sparkle, Humphrey, 66, who returned last week after two months of treatment for inoperable pelvic cancer, got a long, standing ovation from the crowd as he arrived at the lobby ceremony with his wife Muriel on his arm.
 The Marine band struck up "Happy Days Are Here Again," fight song of the Democratic Party.
 His voice quivered and his eyes filled with tears as he accepted the honor with a blend of inspirational comment and homespun humor.

 "Few men enjoy a comparable privilege of being so lavishly praised while they can still enjoy it, and that is a unique experience," he said.
 He said the naming of the HEW building in his honor — intended as a reflection of his lifelong dedication to social programs — shows Washington has a heart and does not identify "only with winners."

Soviet Supersonic Jetliner Makes First Run

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union entered the era of supersonic travel Tuesday with the first passenger flight of the Tu-144, the much-delayed Soviet answer to the British-French Concorde.

The droop-nosed 140-seat liner, which strongly resembles the Concorde in outer appearance, took two hours and two minutes to fly a special delegation of reporters and Soviet VIPs from Moscow to Alma Ata in Soviet Central Asia, 1,992 miles away. The plane then returned with its passengers to Moscow.

The Concorde, once expected to trail the Soviet plane into service, made its first passenger flight 21 months ago.

"It was a good flight without anything unusual," Capt. Boris F. Kuznetsov reported when the round trip was over. The trip to Alma Ata will become a weekly passenger run, chopping two hours 20 minutes off the flight time by conventional airliner.

Reporters aboard the plane said its layout and facilities were similar to those aboard other airliners, but that noise in the cabin was considerable.

"I was sitting by the window and couldn't talk to the person sitting two seats away on the aisle," one passenger said. "I had to communicate with him by notes." Another passenger reported small problems with toilet and water equipment but said they appeared routine for a new airliner.

The inaugural flight from Moscow's domodedovo airport was smooth after the initial climb, which some passengers called sharp and abrupt. The plane's transition to its top supersonic speed of 1,426 miles per hour could not be noticed inside the cabin.

The plane lacks the Concorde's indicator that tells passengers when supersonic speed has been reached.

The aircraft leveled off at an altitude of 10 miles.

"If I hadn't known it was a supersonic flight I wouldn't have noticed anything different from the ordinary," one passenger said.

Among those aboard was Alexei A. Tupolev, 52, who designed the plane and guided its development from the first test flight in 1968.

He told reporters that the plane is still being developed and that internal and external noise will receive special attention. He said that "now that regular passenger service has started, we will get new valuable experience."

Tupolev blamed some of the noise on the Concorde's powerful engines and the ventilation system required to cool the cabin. The fuselage is heated by air friction in supersonic flight to 248 degrees, he said.

The slim white aircraft emblazoned with a red hammer-and-sickle flag was once expected to go into passenger service in 1972. But on June 3 of that year a prototype exploded in the air at the Paris air show, killing 13 people including all six crew members.

An improved prototype was sent to the 1975 Paris air show but reportedly had to make an emergency landing in Poland on its way home because of technical troubles. The aircraft began regular mail and cargo flights between Moscow and Alma Ata Dec. 26, 1975, while technicians reportedly continued to work on fuel consumption and vibration problems.

Tupolev told reporters that the Soviet Union's current fleet of Tu-144s have now flown a total of 2.5 million miles. But asked how many Tu-144s the Soviet union has, he answered only that "we have enough of them."

Tupolev and Soviet Vice Aviation Minister Konstantine Gulakov also declined to say what new routes are planned for the plane. It is expected eventually to compete with Concorde on overseas runs.

'Skip' Humphrey Enters Contest

MINNEAPOLIS — State Sen. Hubert H. "Skip" Humphrey III, eldest son of Minnesota's best-known politician, has announced his candidacy for Congress in the suburban 3rd District.

The 35-year-old lawyer said Tuesday he will seek the endorsement of Minnesota's Democratic-Farmer-Labor Party to run against Republican incumbent Bill Frenzel. Also seeking the endorsement is Michael Freeman, 29, a Richfield lawyer and son of former Minnesota Gov. Orville Freeman.

Young Humphrey's announcement came as ceremonies were being held in Washington, D.C., to dedicate a new Health, Education and Welfare building in honor of his father, Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey.

Humphrey said he had consulted his father about the congressional race and said he was advised: "Make up your mind, get going and let's talk about it after you've returned to Minneapolis."

The 3rd District takes in a corner of Minneapolis and 15 suburbs. Humphrey said he plans a door-knocking effort throughout the district and estimated his campaign will cost at least $100,000.

The only one of Humphrey's four children to enter politics, he has served in the Minnesota Senate since 1972. Skip Humphrey and his wife, Nancy Lee, have three children and live in New Hope, a Minneapolis suburb.

Gun Blast Kills Area Girl, 15

A-J Correspondent
 DIMMITT — Officials here still had filed no charges late Tuesday in connection with the shooting death Monday of a 15-year-old Dimmitt girl.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Plains Memorial Hospital shortly after 8:30 p.m. Halloween night was Roxanne Casas, a Dimmitt High School sophomore.

Miss Casas was riding in a pickup with four friends when the shooting occurred at a farm house six miles north of here. Officers said two shotgun blasts were fired from close range through the pickup's right window as the vehicle turned around at a farm house.

Two Others Injured
 Two other persons in the truck with Miss Casas reportedly were injured, but their wounds were not believed to have been serious, observers said.

Castro County currently is without a county attorney in the wake of Robert Buntyn's death two weeks ago. Jimmy Ross, a private attorney, has assumed the interim duties.

No Formal Statement
 Ross, who has made no formal statement in connection with the Monday night incident, was in Plainview much of the day Tuesday, reviewing evidence of the incident and consulting with 64th District Court officials.

Services for Miss Casas will be at 3 p.m. Thursday in the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church here with Father Raphael Chen, pastor, officiating. Burial at Castro Memorial Gardens will be under the direction of Dennis Funera Home.

Survivors include her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Raul Casas of Dimmitt; three sisters and a brother, all of the home.

Dutch Kidnap

 Moluccans living in The Netherlands have been trying to force the Dutch government to support their demands for the independence of their native islands from Indonesia. They have made a number of terrorist attacks in the Netherlands, including two train hijackings.

Newspapers also received calls demanding ransoms ranging from $20,000 to $10 million for Caransa's release. Caransa was born of a poor Jewish family of Portuguese descent and was imprisoned by the Nazis during World War II. He was released after 13 weeks, but his parents and two of his brothers died in Nazi concentration camps.

 detective at the site said simply, "He's here, somewhere, we know for sure. It's just a matter of time now."
 About 3 p.m., officers walking the fields discovered a set of tire tracks of the type made by snow tires, a set of footprints believed to be those of an adult and a set believed to be a small child's. No other indications of any occurrence at that site were found, and police said the footprints may have been made by hunters walking the same fields.

Power Outage Hits London

LONDON (AP) — A rush-hour power outage hit London and other parts of Britain on Tuesday, snarling traffic, trapping people in elevators and dousing the lights in such tourist areas as Piccadilly Circus and Soho as power workers staged an unofficial work slowdown.

Most of central London was plunged into darkness from 3:54 until 6:34 p.m. The power workers staged the slowdown to press their demands for better fringe benefits.

Traffic signals and street lights winked off, and motorists snaked through busy intersections in the gathering darkness and drizzling rain.

A British Rail ticket agent at London's Holborn Viaduct station dispensed tickets by the light of a single candle as his left elbow.

Many trains were delayed because signal lights went dead. Stranded commuters sought refuge in pubs, where they dined by candlelight.

Firemen were out in force rescuing hundreds of people trapped in elevators. The London fire brigade freed at least 200 persons, including one of its own public relations officers, from an elevator at its headquarters on the south bank of the River Thames.

About 15 percent of Britain — some three million homes — had no electric power in the late afternoon and early evening.

Halloween Insurance Profitable For Boy

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The enterprising 13-year-old who gambled that the gobblins would be good made a profit of every penny of the $12.50 he took in when he offered Halloween insurance to his neighbors.

Mike Brennan had promised — in exchange for 50 cents in advance — to come over and clean up any splattered eggs, chalked sidewalks or other mischief that might be perpetrated by Halloween spooks.

Twenty-five neighbors bought the insurance, but Monday night passed without incident and no one filed a claim. "So far only one of my customers called and that was to say everything was okay," Mike said Tuesday night. "I guess it was pretty quiet."

U.S. Leaves U.N.'s Labor Organization

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter pulled the United States out of the International Labor Organization on Tuesday, marking the first U.S. withdrawal from a United Nations agency since the world organization was founded in 1945.

Carter said the ILO is no longer committed to its original purpose — to improve the lot of workers around the world. Critics say the agency has increasingly fallen under Soviet and Third World domination.

As he was withdrawing U.S. support from the ILO, Carter criticized the United Nations sharply for a "disappointing" record on human rights, but he pledged his full support to the world organization.

"Ready To Return"
 "The U.S. remains ready to return whenever the ILO is again true to its proper principles and procedures," Carter said. His statement was read to reporters by Labor Secretary F. Ray Marshall.

The secretary gave these four reasons for Carter's decision to withdraw from the agency:

— The ILO has not applied labor standards equally among all of the nations of the world.

— The agency frequently issues condemnations "without adequate investigation."

— Politics often enter into the ILO's considerations and nations are condemned for "extraneous political" reasons.

Delegations Criticized
 — As originally established, ILO delegations contained representatives of labor, industry and government. Each represented its own constituency. Now too many delegations represent "governmental" interests.

The ILO is a U.N. agency aimed at improving world labor conditions, living standards and economic and social stability. The agency has been a main source of statistics on hours, pay and labor safety.

In recent years, it set up technical training courses in former colonial areas of Africa and Asia. It received the Nobel Peace Prize on its 50th anniversary in 1959.

Carter's decision will weaken the ILO. The U.S. contribution to the ILO has been $20 million a year, about one-fourth of its budget.

Some diplomats, including some of Carter's own top foreign policy advisers, say it might weaken the United Nations as a whole. "It reminds me of the 1930s when the German pullout marked the beginning of the end of the League of Nations," said a European diplomat in Geneva, where the ILO has its headquarters.

"It's a stupid decision," declared a West European diplomat at the United Nations in New York.

Carter countered: "This decision, I think, is the right decision." He made the statement during a photo session in the Oval Office.

Victory Over Diplomats
 The president's decision represents a victory for business and labor over diplomats in administration councils. The AFL-CIO and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, which are the labor- and industry representatives in the U.S. delegation to the ILO, favor pulling out. The State Department, on the other hand, wanted to stay in.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, who told reporters about Carter's decision before it was announced, said he was not particularly pleased that it had to be made. But he said it will have no practical effect on the United States.

"I hope that somewhere down the road things will change so that we can get back in," Meany said.

Supports U.N.
 The president reaffirmed his support for the United Nations in his annual report to Congress on this country's participation in U.N. activities. "I have pledged my administration to full support for the work of the United Nations," Carter said.

But he added: "The U.N.'s record with respect to human rights was disappointing (in 1976)."

"The unwarranted linking of Zionism with racism was an impediment to serious consideration of human rights matters and the United States continued to resist it by all possible means," Carter said. "In a number of cases, failure to take effective action belied the commitment to human rights that all U.N. members have accepted."

Valuable Forum
 Carter praised the United Nations for serving "as a valuable forum for the discussion of political disputes even where progress on the underlying issues was not always possible."

In leaving the ILO, Carter decided not to lift a notice of withdrawal filed two years ago by the Gerald R. Ford administration. Henry A. Kissinger, then secretary of state, said there was "disregard of due process" in ILO proceedings, a "selective concern for human rights" and an "erosion of tripartite representation."

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance had urged extension of the United States' 43 years of ILO membership for another year to give West European allies time to try to make changes in the ILO. Both advisers were concerned that withdrawing might weaken the U.N. structure and leave the Kremlin in charge, with the West Europeans on the defensive.

But the AFL-CIO, the Labor Department and the Chamber of Commerce told Carter the ILO no longer serves its original purpose.

When the U.S. pullout was announced, the Chamber of Commerce called it "the only logical decision."

When the ILO was formed in 1919 under the League of Nations, government, labor and employer representatives from each country were independent delegations.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Talk about rude awakenings. Just as Morris and Anna Nemerowsky were dozing off early Tuesday, a frightened deer crashed through their bedroom window, sailed over them, and landed on the floor next to their bed.

Not knowing whether it was a burglar or a wild dog, Mrs. Nemerowsky, 74, and her husband, 76, tried to fight the animal as it rampaged through their apartment.

"I had never been frightened of any man, but this scared me," said Nemerowsky, a diminutive man. The 120-pound doe threw off Nemerowsky "like a toy," he said.

"My father can't see too well," said their son, Sidney. "He didn't know what he was grabbing at. He thought it might have been a gangster."

"He jumped up on the bed and tried to wrestle with it, but it threw him right out of bed. My mother started screaming and her blood pressure went soaring."

Eventually, the Nemerowskys had to retreat. They ran screaming from their home.

But the doe tried to escape, too. It ran down a hallway, kicking a hole six feet high in a plaster wall. It looped about the living room, knocking over lamps, mirrors, and flowerpots.

Finally, the terrified animal, which had broken a leg, sought refuge under a kitchen table.

Nemerowsky crept back into the apartment to call his son-in-law, Marvin Cotler, who arrived on the scene with the police and Harry Scuron, a deputy game protector from nearby Montgomery County.

Scuron tried to snare the deer, but backed off when it stood up. He said he did the only thing he could — shoot.

"If they get cornered, they can do a lot of damage to a human with their hooves," he said.

The animal was removed on a stretcher and taken to the meat locker at The Christ Home, a non-denominational religious home for children and the aged.

The Nemerowskys were taken to Holy Redeemer Hospital where they were treated and released.

Scuron said the doe probably wandered into the densely populated area from nearby Pennypack Park, where he said there is a large herd of deer.

Deer Sails Into Home Over Sleeping Couple

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Talk about rude awakenings. Just as Morris and Anna Nemerowsky were dozing off early Tuesday, a frightened deer crashed through their bedroom window, sailed over them, and landed on the floor next to their bed.

Not knowing whether it was a burglar or a wild dog, Mrs. Nemerowsky, 74, and her husband, 76, tried to fight the animal as it rampaged through their apartment.

School Case To Air Segregation Claims

 have supported a student population for years in the future." Continued operation of central Lubbock schools could have enhanced desegregation, he said.

However, Hill said the schools in question were closed because enrollment was indeed falling off, the buildings were old and Lubbock had enough other centrally located schools.

Locations Discussed
 Discussion turned to how the school system, during Hill's tenure, decided where to locate new schools.

Gurwin suggested that over the years new schools traditionally had been built on the fringe of Lubbock's population, accommodating or encouraging outward movement of families, particularly whites.

Though some schools have been located in the central part of the city, Gurwin claimed these facilities served specific minority neighborhoods and thus held together concentrations of minority families.

But Hill said the school system's sole purpose was to locate schools where the students live.

"I guess the question comes down to what we believe the school district's duty is to use their construction affirmatively to desegregate the school system," Gurwin said.

He said some schools, such as Martin Elementary, could have been located between white and minority areas, to enhance desegregation.

"Desegregation of student bodies or desegregating facilities was not something considered at the time (the Martin school was built)," Gurwin asked.

"I don't remember it being considered," Hill said.

White Students Based
 Gurwin also criticized an arrangement under which, until 1965, white students in northeast Lubbock had been bused to Lubbock High School, then a predominantly white campus.

"Obviously these students were closer to Dunbar," an all-black high school at the time, Gurwin said.

Hill could not recall the specific reasons for the arrangement, but suggested that Dunbar may have been overcrowded and Lubbock High had more room for the northeast students.

"That is not the real reason they weren't sent to Dunbar," Gurwin replied. "It is not the room, that is not what we are really talking about."

"The reason they weren't sent to Dunbar and the reason they went all the way past it to Lubbock High was because Dunbar was a black school, isn't that what we're talking about?" he said.

Gurwin also argued that until U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward ordered the desegregation of Dunbar and Struggs in 1970, the school system had done little or nothing voluntarily to increase integration. Hill, however, maintained that some steps had indeed been taken, such as the location of Estacado High School in an integrated area.

The Justice Department is asking Woodward to order a more comprehensive desegregation plan for the Lubbock

Extension Bid For ERA Ruled Legal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress has the authority to extend the deadline for states to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment, Assistant U.S. Attorney General John Harmon said Tuesday.

Thirty-five states have ratified the ERA since Congress passed it in 1972. Three more states are needed.

Unless Congress extends the deadline or three more states ratify the amendment by March 22, 1979, it will die.

The assistant attorney general testified at a hearing on whether Congress should extend the deadline another seven years. He said Congress could change the time deadline for the ERA by a simple majority vote because the limit was not contained in the proposed amendment, only in the resolution sending the amendment to the states.

Regarding attempts by Tennessee, Idaho and Nebraska to withdraw ratification by their state legislatures, Harmon says that states can only ratify amendments and cannot change their mind once the action is taken.

The first hearing on extending the deadline was before the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights. The hearing room was crowded, with women and men wearing "Stop ERA" buttons or hats. Some passed out bright pink flyers criticizing the upcoming National Women's Conference in Houston, saying it would be a gathering of "women's libbers, homosexuals and abortionists."

Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., said he favors the ERA but he thinks an attempt to extend the deadline "is the worst strategy I ever heard of."

Harmon said Congress could tell states such as Illinois that the next time it votes on the ERA that a majority vote will be considered sufficient for ratification, despite a state requirement of a two-thirds vote.

Strike Negotiations Canceled

NEW YORK (AP) — New talks between striking longshoremen and the New York Shipping Association broke off in disarray Tuesday as the selective walkout on East and Gulf coast docks went into a second month.

The meeting had tentatively been set for today here with the intention of getting the key negotiating body of the union together with management representatives of all ports from Maine to Texas.

Of prime concern were acceptable local agreements on a guaranteed annual income plan in all ports. Currently, such plans exist only in the largest ports, mostly in the north, and the amount of guarantee varies widely.

"There's no use in meeting and doing the same thing again, with guys sitting for 10 hours in a room watching one another and not coming up with anything," Gleason told a reporter.

The ILA chief said union-management talks were continuing in Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Hampton Roads, Va., and that he understood they had broken off in New Orleans.

"You've got to get a bona fide GAI plan before you can get the over-all picture," Gleason said.

To a question whether that was not yet in sight, he responded, "Not as far as I'm concerned."

The disagreement over GAI has divided the employers and held up negotiations on other matters, including union demands for improved benefits and a $10 hourly wage in place of the current $8.

Meanwhile, the strike has idled tens of thousands of workers in transportation and other industries, is hurting various businesses and is aggravating the nation's record balance-of-payments deficit.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

STRIPS IN SKIP-ROW PLANTING PATTERNS of any width would not qualify as "set-aside" acreage under the new rules proposed by the USDA. Nor would summer-fallowed or clean-tilled land.

Walter Y. Wells, executive director of the Lubbock County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, points out that set-aside acreage for 1978 must be in a cover crop.

The only cover crops approved to date are small grains when not allowed to mature, grasses and legums, or trees, shrubs, terraces, sod waterways and water storage established this fall or in the spring of 1978.

Set-aside now of course is based on the current-year plantings of a crop rather than on a historic acreage allotment.

A "NORMAL CROP ACREAGE BASE" is a new feature of the set-aside provision. The total acres of designated crops grown in 1977 will constitute the normal crop acreage base.

In Lubbock County, these include the acreages of barley, corn, grain sorghum, wheat, cotton, sugar beets, oats, rye, soybeans, dry edible beans and sunflowers planted and reported to the ASCS office.

A grower can plant any combination of designated crops within the "base acreage" after allowances for any set-asides. But no crops are planted on that set-aside is required, there is no upper limit on total plantings.

The USDA has announced a 20 per cent set-aside for wheat and most observers expect a 10 per cent set-aside to be established on feed grains.

PAYMENTS AND LOANS ON ANY CROP will be contingent upon meeting set-aside requirements for all crops. Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland has said a set-aside on cotton is unlikely, but the matter is among those still being studied.

If there is a set-aside on feed grains and no set-aside on cotton, some observers believe some farmers probably would plant all or more of their acreage in cotton and none or less of it in feed grains in order to have greater utilization of their total cropland.

This, it is contended, could be an artificial stimulus to cotton plantings when the cotton carryover already appears headed toward a substantial level of roughly 5.8 million bales at the end of the 1977-crop marketing year.

RESPECTIVE PRICE PROSPECTS for cotton and feed grains probably will result in a considerable amount of switching from feed grains to cotton in 1978 anyway, many observers believe.

Thus, it is argued, there may be justification for a cotton set-aside in 1978 if one is required to prevent excessive acreage being shifted from feed grains to cotton.

In Texas and Oklahoma, the major areas where feed grains and cotton compete for land, there are an estimated 5.5 million acres of grain sorghum and about 1.6 million acres of corn.

Of this total of 7.1 million acres, according to some analysts, approximately 6 million are planted in areas where cotton has been and can be grown successfully.

Quality Of Cotton Termed 'Fantastic'

The quality of High Plains cotton classed through Oct. 21 has been "fantastic," says Donald Johnson, executive vice president of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. in Lubbock.

Johnson compared this year's High Plains fiber characteristics with those reported from other areas of the Cotton Belt and said High Plains cotton "looks better by comparison than ever before."

Grades, micronaire readings and fiber strength tests all are registering substantial improvements over previous years and all compare favorably with cotton from other states.

Staple length of High Plains cotton is always shorter than the national average, but this is the only category in which Lubbock-area cotton falls behind.

"Exceptionally good growing and harvesting weather has helped raise High Plains cotton quality in other respects," Johnson explains, "but staple is primarily determined by variety."

Analysis of quality data on the 415,783 bales classed on the High Plains through Oct. 21, about 13 per cent of estimated area production, shows 76 per cent of the crop grading strict low middling white and above.

Latest quality figures from across the Cotton Belt, covering the 2,366,000 bales ginned through Oct. 1, put 62 per cent of the national crop in the strict low middling and better grades.

A little more than 85 per cent of the early Lubbock crop has "miked" in the premium range of 3.5 to 4.9, a percentage equaled only by California.

Fiber strength or pressley of High Plains cotton has been excellent, Johnson said, with 58 per cent measuring 90,000 pounds per square inch (psi) or above. This compares with a beltwide average of only 33 per cent and is above all states except New Mexico and Georgia.

The following table shows comparative percentages for each of the 12 states included in the Agriculture Department's Oct. 17 cotton quality report for ginnings prior to Oct. 1.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — After wavering for half the session, soybean and grain futures prices surged Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Commodity houses, commercial firms and local buyers all contributed to the upswing in the soybean complex. Soybean contracts, which rose 7 1/2 cents the previous session, gained 10 1/2 to 18 1/2 cents a bushel.

Corn deliveries, the only futures that consistently traded at higher levels, jumped nearly four cents. Buoyed mostly by the strength in other pits, wheat contracts rose two cents and oats gained 3/4 to 3 cents.

Two-sided commercial and institution house dealings early in the day created a cautious mood among traders. But a spurt of speculative buying shortly after midsession triggered short-covering and commission house demand.

Harvest-delaying rains in the Midwest and continued light cash sales of beans and corn were supportive factors. In addition, a record amount of soybeans—24.9 million bushels—were inspected for export last week.

Also encouraging the upswing was the Agriculture Department's announcement of a 100,000 metric ton wheat sale to an unspecified buyer. And an industry publication further reduced its estimate of this year's Soviet grain crop.

Both soybean oil and meal soared firm gains. At the close, soybeans were 10 1/2 to 18 1/2 cents a bushel higher, November 5.69 1/4; wheat was 1 1/4 to 2 1/4 higher, December 2.61 1/4; corn was 2 1/4 to 4 1/4 higher, December 2.18 1/4; and oats were 3/4 to 3 higher, December 1.28 1/4.

Cattle Futures Advance As Sales Pace Quickens

CHICAGO — With the January option leading the advance, live cattle futures closed 10 to 50 points higher Tuesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Traders said steady beef demand and instances of higher cash cattle offset weakness stemming from an easing tone to carcass beef. Volume was estimated at 6,889 exchanges.

Local short covering was responsible for lifting early quotes, while fresh outside buying entered the pit later to help futures close near daily highs.

Wholesale beef was off one cent at 64 1/2 cents per pound for all weights. Cash cattle were off 1/2 to 25 cents higher with a top at $43 per hundredweight.

The day's slaughter was estimated at 144,000 head. The six markets expect 19,100 head to arrive today.

Hog futures followed upward moves in the related meats and closed 57-82 points higher. February was up most, after reaching as high as 90 points for a time.

Volume was estimated at 5,459 turnovers. Light arrivals and firmness in cash hams aided the boost in hog futures, traders said. Sharply higher quotes in cash bellies also lent support.

Expectations for continued reduced runs today helped the market close on a firm tone.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to up one cent at 86 1/2 to 91 cents per pound, f.o.b. river, highest since December. Cash hogs were steady to off $1 with the top at $41.

The six major terminals expect receipts of 29,000 head today. Tuesday's kill was estimated at 338,000 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures rallied minutes before the close to settle up 125 to 187 points led by May. Trading was light with estimated volume totaling 5,278.

'Popular Militia' Launched For Jobless Youth

By BECKY O'MALLEY
Pacific News Service

OAKLAND, Calif. — In an ambitious new pilot program to combat massive unemployment in California's urban ghettos, Gov. Jerry Brown is launching a "storefront" National Guard armory in a former downtown supermarket here. The first recruits, jobless urban youth, are arriving early this month.

If successful, the Brown plan could boost the governor's rumored aspirations to challenge Jimmy Carter in 1980, especially since Carter's own plan for youth unemployment has yet to materialize.

The Guard program is the linchpin of a larger scheme, not yet fully spelled out, which aims to use Oakland as a laboratory for experimenting with using state management assistance to help cities get the most out of available state and federal funding sources.

State National Guard units, for example, get 94 per cent of their money from Washington, intended primarily to bolster national defense. In Oakland, these funds would be combined with aid from the state of California to serve an additional purpose: providing jobs for the 40 per cent of Oakland minority youth estimated to be out of work.

Here's how the plan will work:

- The California Employment Development Department (EDD), which runs the state employment service, will locate suitable male and female candidates, drawn from those who come into their Oakland offices looking for jobs as well as from people recruited in schools and community groups.

- Those chosen will get 30 days pre-basic preparation from the California Guard — to insure that they don't "wash out".

- Then they will go to the U.S. Army for basic training, followed by instruction in marketable skills like electronics, truck driving and cooking.

- While they're away, EDD will find them civilian jobs with Oakland employers using their new skills.

- After training, they will serve out their six-year hitch at home in Oakland, working at these jobs while being paid the usual wages to carry out the Guard obligations of drilling one weekend a month, attending a two-week summer encampment, and being on call for emergencies like fires, earthquakes and civil disturbances.

Maj. Gen. Frank Schober, commanding general of the California National Guard, is the chief proponent of the plan. He is an articulate, urbane man who has a master's degree in public administration from Harvard and quotes Hegel in conversation.

As Schober tells it, the plan is a typical Brown product — born of a brain-storming session as yet about 75 per cent inspiration and only 25 per cent detailed planning.

"It was the governor's idea really, I have to give him credit for it," Schober told PNS. "He's often in a mode of, why don't you do this or that, and he said, why don't you get involved in the minority or poor areas, so we did."

Even with the first recruits virtually on the doorstep, many program details are still hazy. Even the name is still up for grabs.

EDD likes IMPACT (Innovative Military Program and Career Training). Laconic California Guard officers call it "The New Guard."

"The governor insists that we call it the Provisional Organization of the National Guard (PONG)," Schober reports. "He likes it for two reasons: 'provisional' means you can fall back, regroup, do something else if it doesn't work. Then, he kind of likes it because of the Provisional IRA."

The June election of Lionel Wilson as Oakland's first black mayor — with ample campaign assistance from the Brown administration — was the catalyst that moved the nascent urban aid plan into action. The Guard idea had been circulating for more than a year in administration circles, but detailed plans began in March. (Overtures also had been made to San Francisco, but met with a cool reception from Mayor George Moscone, according to an administration source who declined to be named.)

As yet, Mayor Wilson will not comment publicly on the plan, and the governor's powerful executive secretary, Gray Davis, insists that nothing will happen in Oakland without Wilson's okay. But Mike Fischer, deputy director of the Office of Planning and Research — says that the mayor has been briefed privately and supports the plan in principle. Formal approval of details probably will come after Wilson assures himself that there is no significant community opposition to any particular element.

The outline of the Oakland experiment appeared in a San Francisco newspaper September 27, the day before a scheduled "town meeting" in Oakland. There a galaxy of high level administration officers, including General Schober, met 800 people at an Oakland high school for a forum on citizens' relationship to state government.

At the town meeting, suggestions for bringing the National Guard back to Oakland for any purpose — the last armory there closed in 1939 — were greeted with reserve or outright hostility by minority community leaders. Schober himself received a chorus of boos and catcalls when he appeared on the stage in uniform.

Elaine Brown, the woman who ran the Black Panther Party while Huey Newton was in Cuba, and who takes credit for delivering a good chunk of the East Oakland ghetto vote for Mayor Wilson, was scathing in her criticism.

"It's a shameful statement on the government and private business that we can't provide jobs except through the military," "The Black Panther" newspaper quoted her as saying.

The president of the influential Oakland Citizens' committee for Urban Renewal (OCCUR), Jerry Jackson, pointed out that past relationships between young people and the National Guard had been bad: at Watts in 1965, People's Park in Berkeley in 1969, Kent State in 1970.

"It's difficult to imagine our youth relating to any military operation," he said. "Now that the initial anti-military reaction has had a chance to die down, however, other minority residents of Oakland urge a wait-and-see attitude."

"The National Guard performs many valuable functions in disasters," points out OCCUR staffer Lawrence Joyner, "but in our day and time when we are talking about peace and constantly preparing for war, we are not interested solving problems with military means. We have to see if we can get beyond that. Once the program is thoroughly examined, it may have some merits for Oakland."

Little Hairy Gift Will Sit Down Beside You

ARLINGTON (AP) — Jim Carroll has a Christmas gift idea that even Neiman-Marcus hasn't used. And if you will come into his parlor, along will come the gift to sit beside you.

The special gifts are live Mexican red-legged tarantulas. "It's not the pet for everyone," he said, but it could be the perfect answer for those who want the distinction of owning an exotic pet and can't afford the upkeep of an African Lion.

Carroll's pet shop doesn't even sell lions, or cats and dogs, for that matter.

He deals primarily in birds and reptiles, though he has a few small animals. He sells creatures that do not mind being caged, he said.

His brightly colored hairy spiders not only do not object to being caged, but they can go up to three months without eating, though they prefer to be fed at least twice a month.

And when they do eat, they're not picky. A grasshopper or a baby mouse is a considered a good meal by a tarantula. Carroll said the monthly food bill for one of them is about $1.

They're long-lasting pets, too, he said, as one of the creatures crawled up the side of his face. Females live for about 23 years, while males reach maturity at about 11, mate once and then die.

Most of Carroll's tarantulas are males because they're easier to catch. Females don't often come above ground, he said.

Carroll sells his three-to-five-inch tarantulas for $14.95, complete with cage, and will put on a demonstration for potential buyers. He may let one of them crawl across his face, dragging its bony fangs up his cheeks, past his eyes and onto his forehead in a breathtakingly daring display intended to prove how harmless the hairy creatures really are.

"It's really hard to get them riled up," he said, explaining that if they do bite, their poison is only about as potent as a bee's or wasp's.

Of course, they aren't highly animated. You can't teach them how to fetch or roll over, Carroll said, but if you poke them with a sharp instrument, they'll rear up on their hind legs.

Somewhat nearsighted, they can't see more than two inches in front of them, though they have eight eyes.

And, Carroll has learned, they aren't very sociable toward one another. If you put two of them in a cage together, the stronger one will kill the other and devour him.

"I only lost one that way," Carroll said. They have private cages now.

National Survey Shows Food Prices Stable Around U.S.

By Associated Press

Supermarket shoppers got a bit of a break on selected items last month, although the overall grocery bill remained fairly stable, an Associated Press market-basket survey shows.

The AP drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and nonfood items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked it or about the start of each succeeding month.

The government has predicted that retail prices for food will go up 6 percent to 7 percent this year. A recent U.S. Department of Agriculture report said that the worst of the boost is behind us and predicted that retail food prices would remain fairly stable for the rest of 1977.

Among the highlights of the latest AP survey:

—The marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in six cities, last month, rising an average 1.9 percent. The bill decreased at the checklist store in seven cities, dropping an average 2 percent. On an overall basis, the marketbasket bill was about a tenth of a percent less at the start of November than it was a month earlier.

During September, the marketbasket bill decreased at the checklist store in 10 cities and increased in only three, for an overall drop of eight-tenths of a percent.

—The marketbasket bill increased at the checklist store in every city over the first 10 months of the year. The average boost was 8 percent from Jan. 1 to the end of October.

—Coffee prices are to blame for much of the boost. When coffee is removed from the marketbasket totals, the average 10 month increase is only 2.3 percent.

On the bright side, however, coffee prices have started to decline. The price of a pound of coffee decreased at the checklist store in 10 cities during October. Eggs also dropped in price, down at the checklist store in seven cities, and there were sales on other items in some cities.

—Another bean — cocoa — is being blamed for another type of increase. A spokesman for Nabisco said high cocoa prices left the company with three choices: raise the price of its 14½-ounce bag of Chips Ahoy chocolate chip cookies, lower the quality or put out a smaller size package and try to keep the price the same. The company opted for the latter choice, and a 13-ounce bag is replacing the 14½-ounce one.

Except for Chicago, all the cities on the AP survey list still had the 14½-ounce size at the end of October. In Chicago, the 13-ounce bag was already on the shelves at the checklist store. It cost 99 cents — the same as the 14½-ounce bag cost last month. On a per-ounce basis, the cookies were about 12 percent more expensive.

Note: Similar price increases have affected other items over recent years as well. Some brands of paper towels, for example, have fewer sheets. Check per-unit costs if you're trying to keep track of price increases and decreases.

A look at the over-all number of items in the AP survey showed fewer increases during October than during September. Here are the percentages of increases and decreases:

	Sep.	Oct.
Down	21.0	23.1

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available. If the requested size and brand was not available on March 1, 1973, a comparable substitute was selected. Items temporarily out of stock on one of the survey dates being compared were not included in the over-all total.

The AP did not attempt to compare ac-

The USDA marketbasket issued each month is based on a complex set of statistics. It includes 65 retail items of U.S. farm-produced foods in amounts that theoretically could supply a household of 3.2 persons for one year. The department, which draws on information from 1,500 supermarkets in compiling its report, says the figures do not correspond to actual family food spending and are used mainly to illustrate changes in costs.

tual prices from city to city — to say, for example, that coffee cost more in one area than another. The only comparisons were made in terms of percentages of increase or decrease — saying a particular item went up 10 percent in one city and 6 percent in another.

The items on the AP checklist were: chopped chuck, center cut pork chops, frozen orange juice concentrate, coffee, paper towels, butter, Grade-A medium white eggs, creamy peanut butter, laundry detergent, fabric softener, tomato sauce, chocolate chip cookies, milk, frankfurters and granulated sugar.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Price Hikes Seen In Local Stores

By SAM SCHAAL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Supermarket shoppers in Lubbock will find their grocery bills higher this month on 16 commonly purchased items surveyed Tuesday by The Avalanche-Journal.

Prices totaled $17.88 for the items, compared to $17.54 on Oct. 1, representing a two percent increase.

Leading the 34-cent price climb are potatoes and round steak. A 10-pound bag of potatoes leaped from 89 cents to $1.09, but cost of this product has fluctuated from 89 cents in December of last year to $1.29 during July and August of this year. Also varying in price has been round steak. It has dipped from $1.39 per pound in January to $1.09 in October, before jumping 20 cents this month to $1.29.

The comfort to consumers this month is the price tag on coffee, now at $3.49 per pound, down from $3.59 last month. But this month's coffee tab is $1.27 more a pound than this time last year. Coffee percolated at $3.49 a pound from May to September.

Eggs were tagged Tuesday morning with a special price of 55 cents for a dozen of the medium variety, down six cents from October. At the end of October, however, eggs shot up to 63 cents a dozen.

After holding steady at 39 cents for four months, a can of whole green beans increased four cents. Showing a two-cent boost is a whole chicken fryer, up to 49 cents a pound. Fryers, though, have had their ups and downs, varying from 39 cents a pound in January to 69 cents in June.

Flour, holding for seven months at 77 cents for a five-pound bag, also treated itself to a two-cent increase.

Bacon, after a steady climb, has hit a top price of $1.69 for a one-pound package, two cents more than 31 days ago. It climbed nine cents in October.

Since April, a 49-ounce box of laundry detergent has been marked $1.49. But for the second straight month consumers have realized a savings with a 10-cent-off label.

Other items remaining constant since October's survey is peanut butter, lettuce, sugar, bread, milk, margarine and wieners.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY
DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please comment on chelation treatment for angina pectoris as opposed to coronary bypass surgery. Also, please discuss thermograms for testing arteries as opposed to arteriograms. — Mrs. D.T.S.

It would be handy to be able to flush out our plugged arteries the way we do a plugged up kitchen drain. But blood vessels are a bit more complicated than household plumbing.

One use of chelation (kee-LAY-shun) is a heavy metal poisoning (as from lead and others). The word is from the Greek, and it means "claw." In metal the blood, thus preventing absorption in the body. Prolonged use can be harmful.

But chelation has not gone beyond the experimental stage for problems like atherosclerosis, where the arteries are plugged, as with cholesterol plaques. The only practical way to unplug coronary arteries as in angina pectoris (chest pain caused by lack of sufficient blood supply to the heart muscle) is to open the artery and clean it. Surgeons can also reroute the artery around the plugged portion — the bypass to which you refer.

Valuable experimental work continues into other uses of chelation, but for now we have to settle for the older, tested treatments. Thermograms are "heat pictures," made with film that is sensitive to that radiation given off by all living matter, including body tissue. By recording this heat, pictures are formed to pinpoint tiny bits of malignancy etc. Such pictures are often difficult to interpret medically. Arteriograms are X-rays of arteries taken after the vessels are injected with special dye to make them stand out in contrast with surrounding tissue. This remains the most reliable way to evaluate the situation inside vessels.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 65 years old. Eight years ago I had my breast removed. It took a few years to actually accept the fact. Now, for the last three years I have had dark spots that appear on my arms and legs. At first they were small, but now they are the size of quarters. They are bluish and then they disappear.

I am worried. My doctor says they are nothing to worry about, but I am very upset. I worry that I have cancer somewhere in my body. — N.N.

One has to see the spots to make any definite comment. It is possibly a form of purpura — a blood platelet disorder that interferes with proper blood clotting. But women your age often have innocent blemishes.

It could be a vitamin C or calcium deficiency. A complete blood count is in order. I doubt it is related to your breast surgery.

Confidential to A.N. — Your inability to perform is not an unusual situation for men widowed after many years of marriage. The fact you have nocturnal emissions is in your favor. Inability to perform at will is probably psychological. Most likely a subtle sense of guilt prevails. Your friend overcame this and you should in time. Be patient.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Some time ago you had an article about not using bleach for rinsing dishes. Now I have heard it is OK to do so. Who's right? — H.L.

I goofed on that one. I clarified the statement later, but you may have missed the item. Bleach in dilute proportions is apparently OK. I do recommend, though, that the dishes be rinsed afterward with clear hot water. In ordinary household situations I see no need for it. Many restaurants use bleach and its use is approved by health departments.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I realize this isn't the worst problem one can have with a teenager, but my son is a health nut and has been taking vitamins and other substances. He has had a 15-pound weight loss in about two months. I wonder if there is a connection? — Mrs. W.S.

Only if he has been depriving himself of calories by food restriction. He may have the mistaken notion that vitamins make up for food intake. They don't, of course. They are usually unnecessary additions to any wholesome, balanced diet. I don't have the foggiest notion of what you

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My wife and I decided that maybe you can help us. I am writing because she has been crying and her eyes are too swollen to see.

Last year our beautiful, intelligent daughter married a jerk. She had so many great guys running after her we can't figure out why she picked this loser. But that's over and done with. Now the current problem. Her younger sister has become romantically involved with the idiot's brother. He may be an even bigger jerk. At least the other one had four years of college. This clown quit after one year and is still trying to "find himself."

One character out of that family is enough. What can we do to discourage our second daughter from making this awful mistake? — Pittsburgh

Dear Pitts: If you want to make sure both daughters have the same in-laws, just continue to knock the kid. Nothing makes a fellow quite so attractive to a girl as having to defend him against her parents.

Look hard and try to find something about the young man to admire. Then dwell on it. You'll be amazed at the change in her attitude when you change yours.

Dear Ann Landers: There was a big discussion at our house last night about drunken behavior — also a lot of divided opinion. Will you please check with the authorities and give me the straight dope?

When people have had too much to drink do their true feelings come out? Or do they say and do things that are uncharacteristic of the real person?

My uncle, for example, is a rather reserved man who usually keeps to himself. When he has had one too many (like a third martini), he becomes very talkative and even affectionate. (Actually, he is much more likeable when he's loaded.)

My aunt, on the other hand, is a lovely, pleasant, refined lady when she's sober, but when she drinks she becomes belligerent, nasty and downright mean.

What is the story on such behavior, Ann? — Like To Know

Dear Like: Alcohol breaks down the inhibitions. When the booze goes to work, the "censoring agent" takes a vacation.

Inebriated people say what is truly on their minds. Buried resentments surface. The language is unguarded. The behavior you see is the real person.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been happily married for two years. His son (now age 17) by his former marriage lives with his mother in a city about 40 miles from us. Johnny and I have always gotten along well — no problem. Although I see plenty of room for improvement, I have never once criticized him — either to his father or anyone else. We have let him know he is welcome to spend weekends with us but he has never shown much interest in doing so.

Johnny has a key to our home and this is what I'm writing about. Last week a neighbor told me that when my husband and I were in Wisconsin, the boy and a pretty young girl and another couple spent the night at our place. This neighbor is not a gossip. Should I tell my husband? After all, I'm not the boy's mother. — Don't Want Trouble

Dear D.W.T.: You may not be the boy's mother but the home is half yours and you should not supply a 17-year-old with such a cozy and convenient setup.

Tell your husband. He should ask Johnny to return the key but make it clear that he and his friends are welcome anytime — when you're at home.

Discover how to date bait without falling hook, line and sinker. Ann Landers' booklet, "Dating Do's and Don'ts," will help you be more poised and sure of yourself on dates. One of the standard swindle-type plays available to declarer is the super false-card or discard of a winner.

South looked over dummy and didn't like what he saw. Not that dummy bid badly, but rather that South expected to lose the first four tricks and there is no way to make 10 tricks if you have lost the first four.

West cashed the king and ace of spades to start the defense on what should have been the way to a small profit. When East dropped the queen on the second spade lead, South dropped the jack. West continued with the 10 and East chucked the three of diamonds.

West was still on lead and could not see that ace of diamonds in his partner's hand, so West shifted to a trump.

After this it was an easy matter for South to make his contract.

He simply played out all his trumps while holding all four clubs as dummy's last four cards. East could not hold both the ace of diamonds and his club stopper and the simple squeeze had crushed him.

A Florida reader wants to know the correct response to partner's one-club opening with:

The answer is there is no correct response. It is a trifle strong for an immediate four hearts, a trifle weak for two hearts, so we probably would respond just one heart to see what would happen next. There is no scientific way to bid nice-card suits.

HONEY GRAHAM CRACKERS

- 1 cup sifted all-purpose white flour
- 2 cups fine whole wheat flour, fork-stir well to aerate before measuring
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 1/2 tsp baking soda
- 1/4 tsp salt
- 1/2 tsp cinnamon
- 1/4 lb (1 stick) butter
- 1 tsp vanilla
- 1/2 cup firmly packed dark brown sugar
- 1/4 cup honey
- 1/4 cup milk

Stir together the flours, leavenings, salt and cinnamon. In the large bowl of an electric mixer beat together well the butter, vanilla, brown sugar and honey. On low speed beat in the flour mixture in 3 additions, alternately with the milk, just until smooth each time. If not completely smooth, turn out onto a smooth surface and knead briefly with the heel of your hand. Form into an even flat rectangle. Wrap tightly with plastic film and chill 2 to 3 hours or overnight. Quarter the dough and work with one portion at a time, keep remainder chilled. On a prepared pastry cloth, with a prepared stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out portion to a 15 and 5-inch rectangle. Cut into six 5x2 1/2-inch rectangles. Draw the back of a knife across the center of each to mark (not cut) into two 2 1/2-inch squares. With a wide metal spatula, place 1 inch apart on ungreased cookie sheets. With a fork prick at 1-inch intervals in even rows. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly colored — 12 to 14 minutes. Makes 2 to 2 1/2 dozen double crackers.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Being a bachelor now I am trying to furnish an apartment and buying second-hand furniture. Gal, I bought a dresser and when I got it home, the drawers smelled to high heaven; not only that, the drawers were hard to open. Who knows if that piece of furniture was previously stored in a damp basement, etc.

A neighbor told me that if I would take a few bars of soap and put one in each drawer, close them slightly and put a heating pad on "low" for a little while (teach night for about four nights), that it would work beautifully. Not only would the musty smell be gone, but the drawers would open and close with ease.

He must have been right as it did work. No more musty smell. No more sticking drawers. The results were simply fantastic!

Please pass this on. — Mert Blew

I don't have to tell them, sir. You just did and we all thank you for it.

Dampness and humidity quite often cause dresser drawers to "odorize" themselves and stick as well. Sometimes on a sunny day sunshine alone will take care of both problems, but when damp weather comes the drawers will perhaps swell again, thus making it almost impossible to open them.

The best answer to this that I have found, and it's tried and tested, is to either use the hose end of a hair dryer, letting the "low" heat dry out the drawer so that it will open, or scooting a heating pad (also on low) inside the drawers for a little while.

Be sure it's turned on low and exercise caution, checking the drawer from time to time I have used this method myself in damp climates many times.

Come back to see us anytime, Mert We were happy to have another gentleman step into our column. — Heloise

LETTER OF THOUGHT

Dear Heloise:

At school, open house visits are usually held around this time of the year, so would you please advise parents that it would help teachers of large classes if they would bring with them a recent snapshot of their child.

As a P.E. teacher, I work with more than 400 students per week and in the few weeks school has been opened I won't have learned all the students by name. I will, however, remember their faces and skill levels if I see a picture of them.

I'm sure this information would also be useful to teachers of art, music, home economics, etc., since they also see large numbers of students weekly. — Sheila Amato

Dear Heloise:

I take nylon hose that cannot be worn and use them to store small balls of yarn, crocheted thread, etc.

I put in a ball of yarn, tie a knot in the hose, add more yarn, another knot, etc. In this way, one pair of hose can be used for several balls of thread.

The yarn will be visible, yet will stay clean and fresh. — Mrs. Harry Primmer

Dear Heloise:

Would you please tell me how to clean a plastic laminated counter top without ruining the finish?

I'm afraid to use abrasive cleaning powder, yet coffee and tea stains especially, are very hard to remove. Help! — Myrtle Boyd

Try plain ol' baking soda on a damp cloth. Works wonders! — Heloise

Ready-To-Wear Has Luxury Look

By SUZY PATTERSON

Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Luxury ready-to-wear collections opened here with Jules-Francois Crahay at Lanvin laying on the style with a gilt-edge spoon.

The Lanvin looks are big, generous, full. Skirts are long — mid-calf or more, and tops are often bloused, ruffled or made with large split mandarin sleeves.

A Lanvin favorite this time is the fitted jackets — often quilted — with leg o' mutton sleeves over split skirts revealing harem pants or another skirt underneath.

Crahay and his print designer, Michel Lablais, came up with some stunning combinations, in cotton, quilting, challis wool and crepe de chine — with royal blue, chinese red, purple and violet alternating with more somber blacks and whites. Prints here are bold, interesting, sometimes looking like inspirations from nature with flowers or animals.

Full tops and skirts are often ruffled, with a tiered Caribbean look a favorite; another is more difficult to wear — a very wide "obi" sash over the skirt.

Per Spook, Feraud's onetime assistant, is off to a good start in ready-to-wear, showing a sophisticated, wearable line that is not cheap in the shops. Full raincoats or jackets often cover up a sundress with a fitted corselet top and full skirt, or a wraparound skirt.

Spook's layered trademark is shirtheels hanging out below a short blouse over a full skirt, but in some of the lovely gray fabrics he uses, like crepe de chine and soft flannel, it looks all right. Suits with easy jackets or bolero tops are elegant in challis wool, and late-day dresses are good in bright colored sheer tunic tops over heavier silk skirts in matching colors, a different pattern. His boldly flowered black and white skirts are lovely for a summer evening.

Ungaro likes fullness but mainly keeps it to blouson tops, large smocky jackets, and some full, short dresses. His show went on and on, with a lot of repetition of the same idea in different prints, mostly minute and mixed with several other unmatched prints — not always successful.

New for this house is the big line of sportswear being offered, along with sporty minidresses. Easy knit minidresses or shirts with baggy harem pants or very short shorts are often shown with jacquard patterns. Big tunic jackets over lean pants, sometimes not quite to ankle length and worn with flat sandals, are good in the softest sheer cotton pastels.

There are a lot, maybe too many, skirts with print blouses and huge dustjacket tops or box jackets, not to mention a plethora of sundresses, some full and ruffled, belted up to make a minidress, unbelted to fall to the knee.

Ungaro likes short skirts better than anyone in Paris. He also likes harem pants, and shows an unflatteringly baggy version, tight under the knee, with assorted tops.

Serge Lepage, who designs for the house of Shaparelli, again showed he had talent for evening clothes in his first ready-to-wear collection, though there are some narrow trousers and dressy, drapery day dresses, usually belted, sometimes with deep raglan sleeves.

Again, the look is full, but in light fabrics it works well, in gathered tent dresses falling from yokes, or in pointed tunics on skirts well below knee length.

The colors are soft reds, greens, apricots, corn yellow, and a particularly good print in the Byzantine motif, which he developed richly in his couture collection.

Medicine 'No Bargain' In Hong Kong

BY PAUL LOONG

HONG KONG (UPI) — A day in a government hospital in Hong Kong can cost as little as $1, inclusive of medicine, surgery and meals. But the treatment received by some patients is no bargain.

Yeung Wai-chu, 5, was taken to a major government hospital last month with severe stomach pains. Her father, Yeung Honwan, said that after a 45-minute wait in the emergency ward, a doctor examined the girl and declared that she was "sleepy."

No treatment or medicine was given to the child, who was later found to be suffering from acute appendicitis by a private doctor. She was hospitalized for 21 days at another hospital following an operation, her father said.

Yeung Wai-chu was fortunate — she lived.

A 12-year-old boy, Law Yuetchung, died in the same government hospital the same month. His parents claimed that he had been given the wrong injections and medication at a rural government clinic after stepping on a nail. After developing complications, the boy was taken to the hospital where he died.

The parents said they were planning to sue the government. A spokesman for the Medical and Health Department said the case has been turned over to the coroner, and refused comment.

The coroner's court three months earlier ruled that a peasant woman had died from natural causes after widespread public claims that she was given transfusions of the wrong blood type at another government hospital after child birth.

The verdict, handed down April 29, was accompanied by a recommendation that hospitals should be more careful in matching blood for transfusion. But no one was held accountable for the death of Cheung Shing-har, 31, a mother of two infants, from clotting of the blood vessels.

The medical officer who tested the blood — an intern medical graduate at the time — has since been registered as a qualified doctor.

The Medical and Health Department says it has no record of anyone dying in government hospitals from a wrong blood transfusion.

Prior to the coroner's inquiry, however, the government offered to pay compensation to the woman's husband, Pong Fai, a farmer on outlying Lantau Island.

Pong was not aware of any irregularities concerning his wife's death until he was tipped off by an anonymous informer who sent him hospital medical documents. The compensation offer came after Pong had made public the information he received. He was also planning, with legal aid, to sue the government on grounds of "negligence."

The "ex-gratia payment," as it is called by the government, amounted to $36,000

'The Wiz' Provides New Look For Famous Movie Classic

NEW YORK (AP) — The Munchkins range up to six feet tall, Dorothy is 24 and black, and Oz is located in such places as the state pavilion of the 1964 New York World's Fair.

Such intelligence may come as a severe blow to purists who regard the 1939 MGM movie version of "The Wizard Of Oz" as something close to Scripture.

They will be quick to point out that Dorothy, as portrayed by Judy Garland, was 16 years old, the Munchkins scarcely came up to your kneecap, and Oz was a purely fantastic place created on the MGM sound stages.

Further, Dorothy and her companions hailed from all-WASP Kansas.

Not so in "The Wiz." The movie spectacle now being filmed here by Universal and Motown. The difference could be seen by a California visitor who attended an opening sequence one blustery night at the New York State Pavilion.

The huge circular arena, which resembled a bullring with a mass of dancers instead of toreros, was alive with brightly costumed performers writhing in rhythm, children playing on slides and jungle gyms, gymnasts performing flips. The walls of the pavilion were decorated with abstract graffiti of a subway terminal.

A bewildered Diana Ross, carrying her miniature Schnauzer, Toto, had just landed in the magic land, wondering how she got there from Harlem. Her guide was a good witch, Miss Oke, looking curiously like a numbers seller and played by the veteran jazz singer Thelma Carpenter.

While the 200 dancers, recruited from the schools and dance companies of Manhattan, did their thing, Miss Carpenter instructed Dorothy on how to find "The Wiz."

"You've got to sing, Thelma," instructed director Sidney Lumet over the bullhorn. "You can't just mouth to the playback."

The man Dorothy was seeking is played by Richard Pryor, his predecessor in the 1939 version: Frank Morgan. Her three companions down the yellow brick road (yellow vinyl) worth $237,000, according to publicity) are: Michael Jackson of the Jackson 5 as Scarecrow (Ray Bolger), comedian Nipsey Russell as the Tinman (Jack Haley), and Ted Ross of the Broadway "Wiz" as The Lion (Bert Lahr).

The good fairy Glinda, who was Billie Burke in the original, is being played by Lena Horne, who happens to be director Lumet's mother-in-law.

After several takes of the musical number, the company broke for a midnight supper. Lumet disappeared for a production conference, Miss Ross was off-limits to interviewers for the duration of the film (funny, she didn't seem that fragile).

Motown producer Rob Cohen acted as spokesman for the movie.

"This is not a black picture, but the broadest scale entertainment," he said. "We could have made it at $8 million, but what would we have had? A black 'Godspell'."

"No, we decided to go further, to make 'The Wiz' as spectacular and colorful as it could possibly be. In today's film market, you have to do something special to bring people out of their homes. So we are making a work of imagination, a work of scale, a work of quality."

The price tag for such a work? Cohen estimated the final tab at $14 million.

The producer has an answer for traditionalists who complain about the 32-year-old Diana Ross as Dorothy: "In the L. Frank Baum book, Dorothy is described only as a 'young girl.' Because of the Denslow drawings that illustrated the book, people conceived of her as a teen-ager. We're playing her as a school teacher in her mid-twenties who lives in Harlem. That, I think, will add a new dimension and life to the story."

"After all, this is a classic that is being reinterpreted. 'Nothing new about that. 'Hamlet' is constantly being produced in modern clothes and in other places and other eras from the way Shakespeare first wrote it. Why not 'The Wizard Of Oz'?"

In fact, the fable has had many incarnations since the 1902 stage production starring Montgomery and Stone. Baum himself made silent movies about Oz (with Oliver Hardy as the Woodman). A full-length cartoon was produced in 1962 with 16-year-old Liza Minelli as the voice of Dorothy.

Actress Works Despite Injury

CULVER CITY, CALIF. (Special) — Actress Elizabeth Ashley reported to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in a wheelchair, nursing a broken metatarsal bone in her left foot but determined to continue her costarring role in "Coma."

She suffered the injury during a July 4th tennis game in Chicago where she had been residing while appearing in "Vanities" at the Drury Lane Theater. She had arranged to depart the play long enough to appear in the MGM film.

"This is the first time I ever showed up for work in a wheelchair," the actress said, "but I chose the proper setting for my entrance." The film set is a replica of a hospital where Miss Ashley supervises a life support program for coma victims.

Although in constant pain, she will be able to stand and walk well enough to finish her role, according to director Michael Crichton. Her scenes cannot be delayed because of her commitment to return to the cast of "Vanities."

UT Receives Persian Art Show Funds

AUSTIN (Special) — The University of Texas Center for Middle Eastern Studies has received a $29,990 grant from the National Endowment for the Arts to prepare an exhibit on "The Art Of The Persian Empire."

The exhibit will open at the UT Art Museum in February 1978 and later in the spring will be shown at the Walters Art Gallery in Baltimore, Md., and at other museums in the eastern United States.

Dense Schmandt-Besserat, assistant professor of art and assistant director of the CMES, has been named principal investigator for the exhibit project, which will also include a public lecture series featuring visiting scholars and an interdisciplinary course based on the exhibit.

The principal aim of the exhibit is to demonstrate how art is influenced by political systems and, in particular, how the art of the Persian empire is a synthesis of all the countries they conquered," says Schmandt-Besserat. "It will cover such topics as art and architecture, the king and the administration of the empire, language and coinage, and religion."

The display will consist of about 100 objects including sculptures, weapons, jewelry, pottery and clay figurines, tablets and papyri.

Matching funds for the exhibit project will be provided by CMES and the Huntington Fund.

Enchanting French Farce Production Of Bustler, Idler

LONDON (UPI) — They say opposites attract, which may be why John Mortimer is drawn to Georges Feydeau.

Feydeau was the past master of the lunatic world of French farce. One of his most intricate confections, "The Lady from Maxim's," is now enchanting National Theater audiences in a new translation by John Mortimer.

Mortimer is one of Britain's top trial lawyers. He is also the author of several plays, novels, a travel book, and scattered screen and television scripts.

With his prodigious energy he regards Georges Feydeau with awe.

"He was so lazy," Mortimer says, "that when a friend said to him: 'Turn around. The prettiest woman I've ever seen has just come into the room,' he answered, without moving, 'Describe her to me.'"

Feydeau, who died in 1921, was elegant and handsome. Mortimer is bulky and balding.

Feydeau, Mortimer says in the "Maxim's" program, wrote 39 plays "apparently out of extreme indolence." He sat idly all day in Paris cafes and lost wildly on the stock market. Mortimer juggles two fulltime careers with ease and has as much money as the taxman lets him keep.

Yet this mismatched pair makes an irresistible theatrical combination.

"The Lady from Maxim's" is the third Feydeau farce Mortimer has translated. He retains all the insanities of plot but finds apt contemporary phrases for the Frenchman's outdated slang.

Like all the best French farces — and Feydeau wrote some of the best — "The Lady from Maxim's" begins at breakneck pace and accelerates.

A respectable doctor, after an unaccus-ed night at Maxim's, wakes under his sofa the next noon with a thumping hangover and a shocking young lady called the Shrimp in his bed.

Instantly this lady from Maxim's — who rapidly demonstrates she is anything but a lady — is mistaken for the doctor's wife. Just as instantly his religious zealot of a wife bursts in and is confronted by the Shrimp impersonating the blessed Saint Violenta.

So much for the first five minutes. The rest of the play heaps complications upon complications.

His main characters, Mortimer notes, are "sensible and detached, choosing a quiet life."

Patients Seek Freedom From Fear

(EDITORS NOTE: Following is the first (second, etc.) part of a three-part series excerpted from the book "Nothing to Fear: Coping with Phobias," written by Fraser Kent. The copyright series and book is published by Doubleday & Co. Inc.)

"Behavior modification" has recently acquired a poor reputation, partly because so many people associated it with the coercive use of mind-altering drugs, psychosurgery, and electroshock or aversive therapy. Actually, the term should be restricted to the scientific application of procedures with which we are all familiar, to people who need and want such therapy.

Today, behavior modification has come to reflect different approaches to the treatment of phobia. Dr. John Watson, through experiments conducted in the twenties, showed that a phobia could (a) be learned and then (b) be unlearned by repeatedly associating the unpleasant stimulus with a pleasant one, so that the exposure was enjoyable rather than threatening. This ultimately led Dr. Joseph Wolpe of Temple University School of Medicine to develop "systematic desensitization," the most commonly used treatment of phobia today. It is a step-by-step process of exposing the victim in his or her imagination to whatever is feared, while simultaneously providing a pleasant, or at least nontraumatic, relaxation of tension.

First, the psychologist prepared a list of exactly what it is you fear. There may be only one phobia, or a list of twenty. If there are more than one, these are ranged in order of severity, from the least troubling to the most disturbing.

"I had a client with claustrophobia, and we began by listing the closed spaces he most feared," a Denver psychologist explained. "Phone booths; elevators; closed stairwells; small, crowded rooms; steamship interiors; kitchens, washrooms, and restaurants without windows; basements; airplanes; closets; and being a passenger in a bus or car. Just suggesting his being inside a trunk made him literally feel faint and dizzy."

"We made a list of these according to priority rather than severity. What interfered most with his life? We began with cars, airplanes, and crowded rooms. These might not have been as frightening as being inside a closet, but he was more likely to be a car passenger than to go into a closet."

There is no attempt to find out why you fear such and such. The object of therapy is to get rid of the phobia rather than to examine it. Psychologists do not usually consider the phobia to be symptomatic of a more serious emotional problem, and if they encountered a frankly neurotic person, he or she would probably be referred to a psychiatrist.

Along with all this, or perhaps as the next step, you are taught a series of muscle-relaxing exercises: how to recognize each group of muscles and how first to tense one muscle mass and then let it go limp, and then to repeat the same process with another. At the same time, you are urged to imagine calm, pleasant, "neutral" situations such as a palm-lined seashore, a sweeping meadow, a snow ski slope, and so on.

Now therapy can begin. You sit in a comfortable chair or lie on a couch, close your eyes, and relax. "The anxiety level must be down to zero, or very close to it, for an adequately relaxed state to be achieved," Dr. Wolpe said.

The therapist begins: "With your eyes closed, I am going to ask you to imagine a number of scenes. You will imagine them very clearly. The moment the image that I suggest is clearly formed, indicate this by raising your index finger."

The process starts with the first, least troubling item on the hierarchy.

Once your finger is raised, the therapist waits about five seconds and then says, "Stop imagining that scene. Now, by how much did that scene increase your anxiety level?" You'd reply with a rating on a subjective-anxiety level? ("very much, quite a bit, some, very little, not at all") and would then be asked to relax for about twenty seconds before the therapist asked you to imagine the same scene again.

The second image of the scene is held for twenty seconds before the therapist again tells you to relax and rate your anxiety level. You would continue to alternate between the relaxation and imagining of anxiety-evoking scenes for progressively longer periods, until you had gone through the entire hierarchy with a steady decrease in your degree of anxiety.

"As each step is mastered, the person is instructed to generalize the results to the real-life situation," Dr. Wolpe said. Throughout this desensitization process the phobic is aware of how much the feared object can be tolerated without anxiety. This "feedback" of information is a type of positive reinforcement that has been found to speed up improvement.

Last In A Series

It is hoped you will calmly continue to experience the phobic stimulus without tension and anxiety as the mental image of it becomes more and more threatening. The test of therapeutic success, though, is repeating the imaginary encounter in real life with little or no psychic discomfort. In a great many cases, that is exactly what does happen. In fact, it is claimed that systematic desensitization is the most effective method of treating phobia now available.

Before you think about seeking professional help, consider the alternative sources of aid: friends, fellow workers, clergy, teachers, family doctors, social groups, and self-help groups such as Fraidy-cats or Recovery Inc. These might be able to help you through your problem, what you have done to overcome it, and what you plan to do now.

"You must, of course, retain control of what you choose to do, picking as widely as possible among the suggestions made," wrote Dr. Daniel N. Wiener.

"You must further show discretion about the persons you consult. You should not, for example, burden children with problems they cannot understand, or employees or supervisors you hardly know with problems they may use against you because they are unkind or self-serving. But within very broad limits, it would seem wise to expose yourself to nonprofessional reactions before seeking professional ones. It can seldom do harm and can often do good."

But once you decide that the phobia is interfering with your daily life and that you do need professional help, where do you begin to look?

You might contact the nearest university and ask for the chairman of its psychology department. He should know most of the psychologists in your community, the fields in which they specialize, and their approach to treatment. Or he might refer you to one of the men or women in his own department, especially if they are working on a phobia research project.

You might write the American Psychiatric Association, 1700 18th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20009; or the American Psychological Association, 1200 17th Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036. Both organizations can steer you to professionals in your community who can provide referral information.

Another resource is the local health department, or its division of mental health. Then there are community mental health services or clinics across the country which provide therapy at little or no cost.

Many family doctors have taken special training in the psychological aspects of medical care (this is particularly true of the board-certified specialists in family medicine), and they may be able to help patients with mild phobias. Or they may refer you to a qualified therapist with whom they are acquainted.

You are going to invest both time and money in therapy; so once a psychologist or psychiatrist is recommended, it's fair and reasonable for you to check out his credentials. In fact, he probably expects you to do so, particularly if you face extended treatment.

Is he licensed? In some states "counselors" can practice without any check on their training or expertise. How long ago did he enter practice; that is, how experienced is he? Is he board certified in his specialty? This isn't an infallible index, but it's a fairly good one. What professional associations does he belong to? This may be a guide to his continuing education that keeps him abreast of new developments.

What is his general approach to therapy? Is it something you will feel comfortable with?

By proceeding cautiously, you can minimize the danger of ending up with the wrong kind of therapist and the wrong kind of treatment. There is less chance of your having to deal with a therapist who stubbornly sticks to one type of therapy either because he was taught it is the "right" way to do things or because it will earn him more money.

Above all, as you enter treatment, remember that you have nothing to fear: You may be on your way to losing the chains of phobia that have restricted your life for far too long.

Carrying the same price tag for the sixth consecutive month is a large loaf of white bread, priced at 56 cents. Milk is also steady at $1.96 for a gallon, but in September its price tag jumped from $1.92, where it had been since February.

Margarine, at 64 cents for a one-pound stick, is also constant as compared to October, when it dipped three cents from September's survey.

A one-pound package of beef wieners is still $1.39. Wieners hit a low of 99 cents during April and May, then jumped to $1.38 in June where they remained until October.

Youth Hanged During Halloween Fete

MICHAEL CARTER

HOUSTON (AP) — Michael Anthony Carter, 14, was excited about his selection to play the part of a hanged man in a "haunted house". He kept asking his mother to get him a rope so he could practice the role for the Halloween party at the North Main Baptist Church. Michael is dead today.

He apparently hanged himself accidentally in a small room of the church where he was to frighten other children.

The Rev. J.B. Grimes, pastor of the church, said, "It was totally an accident. It is such a sad thing for us to try to give the children a happy and safe time and for this to happen."

The rope was attached to a bolt in the ceiling and the boy was standing on a sawhorse.

Brian D. Runnels, 20, music and youth director for the church, said Michael had the rope looped under his arms but other children had heard the youth say it was not realistic enough and he was going to put the rope around his neck.

Police said Runnels found the boy unconscious. There was enough rope for Michael to touch the floor, but his legs were bent so that he hung by his neck. Grimes said, "The boy was told to keep the rope around his chest and he took it upon himself to move it to his neck. He also decided to tie a knot in the rope, something he wasn't to do. "Even then the rope was long enough so that he wouldn't have been hurt if he jumped down off the sawhorse. He either fell or got pushed off and landed wrong."

Rosendo Lopez, 26, said she saw smoke coming from behind a curtain near where Michael was stationed. "I went in to check and saw Brian (Runnels) holding the young man up and asked me to help." Lopez said he untied the rope and removed it from the boy's neck.

Police said Carter may have left the sawhorse to extinguish the blaze and hanged himself. Children had been given lighted candles to carry as they walked through the dark halls and up the dimly lit stairways.

Michael, one six children of Mrs. Wanda Carter, was a seventh grade student.

In another Halloween incident, a Houston couple was beaten and robbed by three men they thought were trick-or-treaters.

Don E. Perkins, 61, was reported in stable condition after surgery for a fractured skull. His wife, 62, was reported in fair condition.

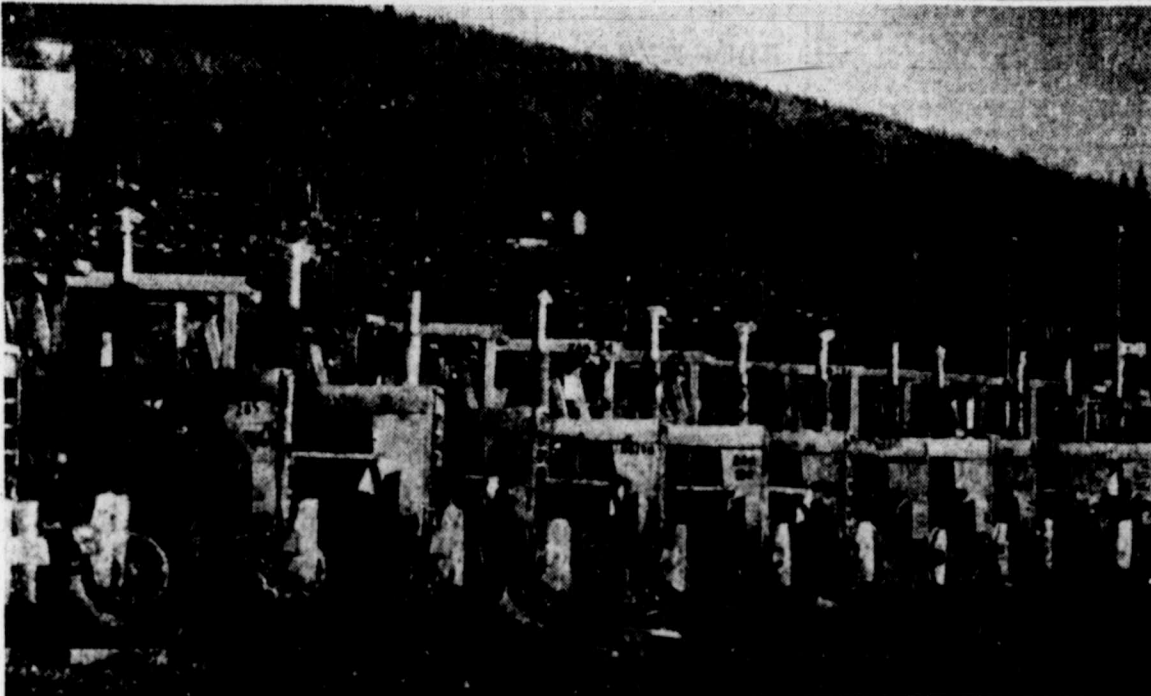

Police said Mrs. Perkins, who had been handing out candy to youngsters when she answered another call at the door and two men with guns forced their way into the house. A third man followed minutes later.

Perkins was beaten with a pistol and both he and his wife were handcuffed to a bed.

Police said the men took an undetermined amount of money and jewelry.

The death of young Carter was the second Houston area Halloween tragedy in three years.

In 1974, Timothy Marc O'Bryan, 8, died of cyanide poisoning after eating a trick or treat candy. His father, Ronald Clark O'Bryan, was convicted of murder and is now on death row at Huntsville. The state claimed O'Bryan put the poison in the candy in hopes of collecting $30,000 in insurance.

PIPELINE LEFTOVERS — A line of heavy construction vehicles stands in a corner of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline surplus equipment yard in north Fairbanks, Alaska, recently. Some $800 million in equipment used in constructing the pipeline is being assembled at the yard, some to be reconitioned and sold, other items to be junked. (AP Laserphoto)

Trail Of Leftover Equipment Marks Pipeline Construction

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The signs of the times are there, among the leftovers from the largest private construction project in history.

Scrawled on the side of a bus that once carried workers on the trans-Alaska oil pipeline are the words "World Famous Metal Fusing Technicians and Preheaters Ground Control."

Welders, no doubt. Another bus is emblazoned across the front, "The Killer Weed Express." And there are the "Hot Cocoa," "Lope Along," "F Troop" and "Foot's Follies."

The buses are just a small portion of the $800 million in used equipment that is being assembled on a 250-acre site in north Fairbanks.

The leftovers from the construction of the $7.7 billion, 800-mile pipeline are parked in neat rows and piled in jumbled heaps.

Besides the buses, there are welding units, engines of all descriptions, bulldozers, cranes, trucks, floating bridges, cars, trailers, concrete mixers, heaters, batteries and just plain junk.

"The only thing I haven't run into is an elevator," says Gene Church, superintendent of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.'s Surplus Disposal Yard.

Church's crews are sorting, stacking, labeling, numbering and cataloging the equipment as it is brought in from pipeline construction camps.

He estimates that about 60 percent of it will be sent to a facility at Moses Lake, Wash., for restoration and sale. The rest will be sold in Alaska or junked.

The most imposing feature of the yard is a 100-foot-high pile of pipe, and throughout the pile there is evidence that not all of the torch art of the pipeline welders went into the building of a conduit for Prudhoe Bay crude.

Maps of Alaska have been cut from some sections of pipe, while other sections bear empty holes spelling out words best left unsaid.

Alyeska did authorize welders to cut a few maps of Alaska from the pipe for use as gifts to the influential, but the idea caught on and thousands ultimately were cut.

The company says the pipe from which the maps were cut probably was rejected for use in the line for one reason or another. If not, it was expensive art. The pipe, in 60-foot and 80-foot sections, cost $30 a foot.

Church said much of the scrap pipe now at the yard can be rerolled and recycled.

The graffiti which is printed, scrawled, scratched and pasted on the equipment that is piling up at the yard provides a glimpse of the mood and the humor of the thousands who worked on the pipeline.

Bus Driver Testifies 'We Expected To Die'

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The Chowchilla bus driver who was kidnapped with 26 children testified Tuesday that he and others of one of the nation's most bizarre kidnappings suffered bodily injuries as a result of their captivity.

for parole in seven years.

Madera County District Attorney David Miner won a legal round at the start of the trial when he was given permission to present evidence of the children's emotional anxiety during the ordeal.

Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan ruled earlier that psychiatric testimony from doctors would not be allowed in evidence. The children's parents have refused to let them undergo extensive psychiatric examination.

On the witness stand, Ray was allowed to tell how the children cried and prayed in the darkness, how they wet their pants because there were no bathrooms and how they suffered from hunger.

Ray, supporting the prosecution claim that bodily injury resulted from the kidnapping, told of deep cuts he suffered on his hands while trying to dig his way out of the van.

C NEWS
Lubbock Avalanche-Journal Wednesday, November 2, 1977

the youngsters huddled together, prayed and expected to die.

"I thought we was all gonna die right there," said Ed Ray, the 56-year-old driver who became a hero after he and the youngsters escaped from an underground tomb 16 hours after they were buried following their July 15, 1976, abduction.

"There was a lot of crying," Ray said of the hours they spent in a buried moving van.

"The kids — they thought that they wouldn't see their mummies and their daddies no more," he said.

Ray, testifying at the non-jury trial of the three confessed kidnapers, told how the young men commandeered his school bus as he drove the children home from summer school.

He said they were herded into two vans underground, where the heat and crowded conditions were oppressive.

"It was real crowded," he said. "I laid across the back fender well and the kids piled up against me — on my arms and legs, all over me."

"I got cramps in my legs and tried to move, but I couldn't because the little kids just started crying more ... the poor little kids didn't want to move so I let them lay on me."

The men on trial — James Schoenfeld, 26, Fred Woods, 26, and Richard Schoenfeld, 23 — stared impassively at Ray as he testified.

The three young men, products of privileged upbringings in an upper-income area south of San Francisco, have admitted they were the masked gunmen who hijacked the bus and later buried their captives.

However, they claim they inflicted no bodily harm on the victims. This is the crucial issue.

Kidnapping with bodily harm carries a mandatory sentence of life in prison with no possibility of parole. Simple kidnapping, to which they pleaded guilty, also carries life in prison, but with eligibility

Gubernatorial Candidate Feels Like Don Quixote

AUSTIN (AP) — Ricardo Lopez, 31, who said he feels like Don Quixote, announced Tuesday that he will be an independent candidate for governor in 1978.

Lopez told a news conference he resigned Monday from the Department of Public Affairs "after three years of seeing initiative being turned down by the governor's office."

Lopez said he had registered with the secretary of state as his own campaign manager. He said he was confident he would be able to get the thousands of signatures needed to get on the ballot.

"I am a Mexican-American but I will not be running as a member of the Raza Unida Party or of the Democrats or of the Republicans," he said. "In the last few years I have voted with Raza Unida, and with the Republicans and with the Democrats, and have found that none of them have the answer."

Lopez said he was born in Eagle Pass and attended Eagle Pass public schools. He attended Sul Ross, Texas A and the University of Texas where he graduated in 1971 with a degree in sociology.

Savings for a rainy day makes good sense at Plains.

Everybody talks about the weather. And when it rains on the Southern High Plains that's really something to talk about.

Everybody talks about saving some money for the future. For the children's college expenses. For a special vacation. For emergencies. For security. But, like the weather, talking about savings doesn't cause anything to happen.

Plains National Bank can help you make something happen about your savings. With passbook savings accounts and certificates of deposit. Both pay the highest interest permitted by law. We'll even draft your checking account monthly to help you automatically set aside a portion of your earnings for that future need.

Next time you want to talk about the weather, talk to your rain maker. Next time you want to talk about savings, talk to Plains National Bank.

POLYGLYCOAT
The revolutionary new protective sealant that is not a wax or polish and can only be applied by your new car dealer. GUARANTEED FOR THREE FULL YEARS—Your auto purchase today is a necessity. Buy with the future in mind. POLYGLYCOAT PRESERVES! NO NEED TO EVER WAX YOUR CAR AGAIN!
Polyglycoat is a paint and chrome sealant finish—guaranteed to protect your car against fading, corrosion, oxidation, and loss of gloss for three years. Comprised of Dow 500, paraffin, silicone, with a kerose base, Polyglycoat breaks through the fine paint pores in the surface and penetrates 2-3 layers into the paint, sealing it and shielding it against the foreign elements that cause corrosion, rust, and loss of gloss.
Not only will Polyglycoat eliminate the need for waxing, but it will virtually maintain your car's showroom finish, thereby enhancing resale potential. It should be applied to all new cars and properly prepared used cars. KEEPS YOUR PAINT AND CHROME LIKE NEW!

Hearing Postponed On City Districts

By FRANK PATRICK
 Avalanche-Journal Staff
 The Gene Gaines vs. City of Lubbock districting case has been postponed again, this time because of possible upcoming action by the U.S. Supreme Court.
 The challenge to the city's at-large method of electing city council members had been scheduled to go to trial Monday.
 U.S. Dist. Judge Halbert O. Woodward signed an order vacating that trial date, however, after a conference with attorneys on both sides.
 Both sides agreed to the postponement after it was learned the Supreme Court may review a Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals decision on an analogous Dallas case.
 "The court agrees with the suggestions by all attorneys that there may be substantive principles of law in the Wise case that will be applicable to this case, and that it would be best to await the Supreme Court's decision before trying this case," Woodward's order stated.
 The order went on to say that if the local case were heard and a judgment entered prior to any Supreme Court action, the subsequent action could necessitate a new trial.

Nursing Home Ban Listed

A-J Correspondent
 CHILDRESS — A vendor's hold recently placed on a nursing home here has been lifted.
 Mrs. Joyce Rae Southard, administrator at Leisure Lodge of Childress, has announced that inspectors for the State Health Department toured the nursing home late last week and declared that previously-reported deficiencies have been corrected.
 Approval of the inspectors removes the administrative vendor's hold measure against the facility, Mrs. Southard explained.
 "The inspection went just great," she said.
 A vendor's hold stops Medicaid payments until reported deficiencies are eliminated, the administrator said.
 Leisure Lodge of Childress, along with several other Texas nursing homes, was recently cited by the state health agency as having failed to comply with a number of requirements.
 Reported deficiencies at the Childress facility were of routine or minor nature, Mrs. Southard indicated, including such items as a leaky gasket on a cooler door.
 "And a gentleman listed by inspectors as not being clean-shaven was a visitor rather than a resident," she remarked.
 She also stated that the home has been working toward improvement of its nursing staff with the addition of a new director of nurses.
 Mrs. Mary Pistole, a registered nurse who recently moved to the city from Loveland, Colo., has been named to the post. Her duties include on-the-job training of other members of the nursing staff, Mrs. Southard said.
 "We're working hard to provide the best possible assistance for the needs of the elderly," the administrator stated.

Knee Stops Simpson; Career In Jeopardy?

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The spectacular career of O.J. Simpson, pro football's most recognized star, may be over.

Simpson, who said he would retire from football after the 1978 season, will undergo left knee surgery soon which will sideline him for the rest of this season. The operation may also force the NFL's second alltime leading ground gainer to alter his plans.

"That's a subject I can't deal with right now," Simpson said regarding his future in football. "I have another year on my contract with the Bills. Once the operation is over and rehabilitation is complete, I'll begin to think about the future. But not before this."

The operation to repair cartilage damage will be performed by team physician Dr. Joseph Godfrey in Buffalo. No date for the surgery was set.

Bills spokesman L. Budd Thalman said the decision to operate on the former Heisman Trophy winner was a consensus opinion of Godfrey, Dr. Robert Kerlan and Dr. Karl LaBriola.

Kerlan, team physician for the Los Angeles Rams and one of the country's noted orthopedic specialists, and LaBriola examined Simpson Monday in Los Angeles. Simpson flew there following Buffalo's embarrassing 56-17 loss to the expansion Seattle Seahawks Sunday.

Simpson was unable to pinpoint when the injury occurred but said the knee had been bothering him since a game against the New York Jets Oct. 9.

"I'm naturally tremendously disappointed but the doctors agree that the cartilage be removed," Simpson said. "As the condition deteriorated, it became more and more difficult for me to play."

Simpson, who holds the league's single-season rushing record with 2,003 yards gained in 1973, touched off speculation as to his future following the Seattle game. He picked up just 32 yards and sat out the second half.

Published reports have indicated that Simpson, who wants to pursue an acting career following his pro football days, would not return to the Bills next season if his knee needed surgery.

Simpson has gained 10,183 yards in nine seasons with the Bills, including a league single game rushing mark of 273 yards against Detroit last season. During a two-year college career at Southern California, he gained 3,423 yards, winning the Heisman Trophy in 1968.

He was bothered by nagging injuries during the current season. A blurred vision problem in his left eye during training camp was diagnosed at Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore as a self-healing condition.

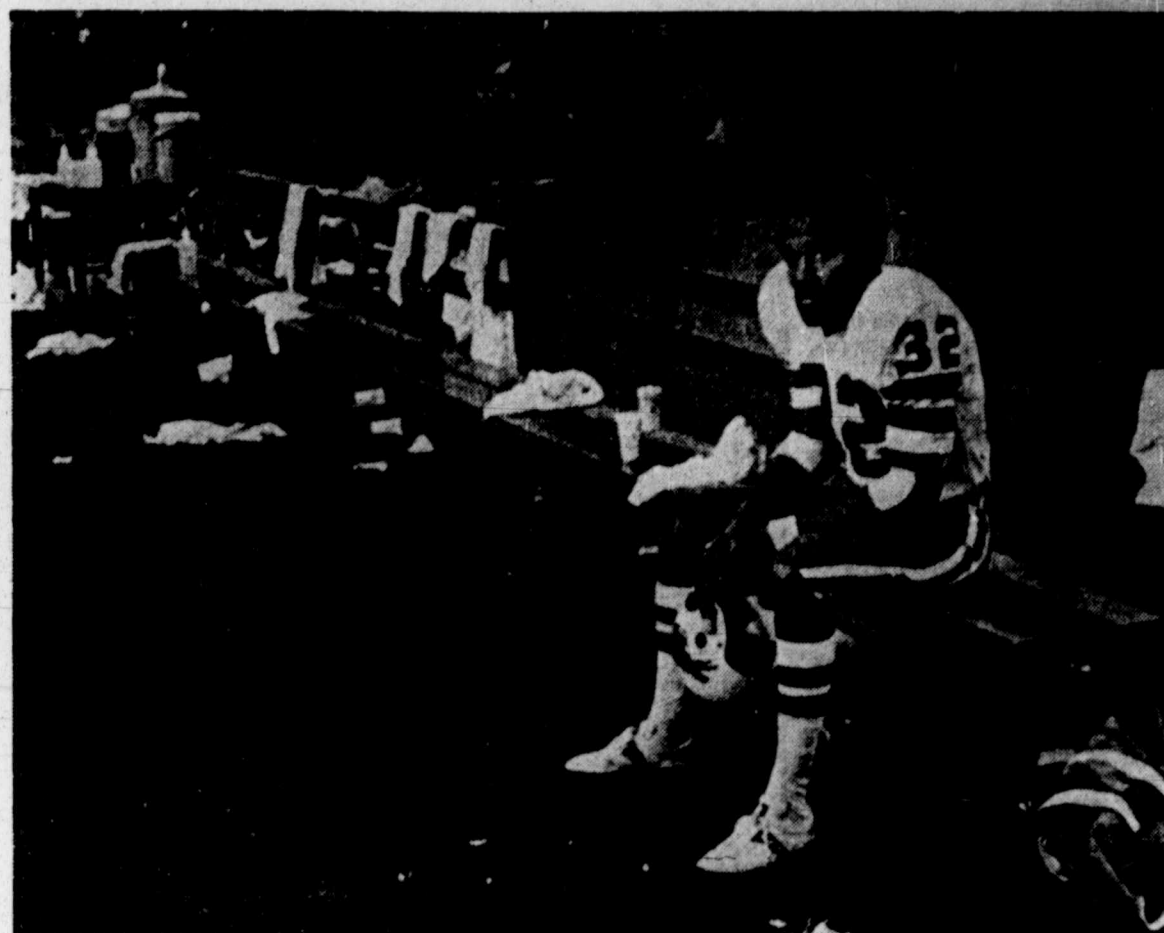

He suffered a right ankle injury in the Bills' season-opening loss to Miami. He also missed six games of the 1970 season with a knee injury that did not require surgery.

Simpson, who has been somewhat critical of the Bills' trading away of veteran players, gained 557 yards on 126 carries this season as Buffalo stumbled through seven games with a 1-6 record.

Coach Jim Ringo, already facing enough problems, now has to contend with the loss of Simpson.

"Everyone on the team and the coaching staff is upset at the prospect of losing O.J. for the season," said Ringo. "We all pray for a successful surgery and a swift and complete recovery."

"It's an enormous loss to football and the Buffalo Bills," said Bills owner Ralph C. Wilson Jr. "Our No. 1 concern is O.J.'s health. He has contributed too much to this game and to this franchise to have any other considerations."

New Starting Point

THE COACH WALKED in, shook his head, then looked out the window at a stadium being combed by a strong north wind. He shook his head again and remarked, "Man, I'm coachin' fast this week."

A smile which accompanied the succinct observation had more sincerity to it than humor. He was serious, man, about that coaching gait.

Five victories and a couple of losses isn't anything to send a coaching into hiding. But, coming after a summer and autumn of high hopes, the complexion changes, and new challenges form.

Texas Tech has five victories socked away—and it has prospects for more. The two losses have come at the hands of Top Ten teams—including No. 1. Those two defeats came by a sum of 42 points, though, and after spending all fall in the Top Twenty, last week's 26-0 loss at Austin triggered the trap door out of the select list.

TECH'S VOICE ONLY joined a nationwide chorus in singing the misery song over injuries and effects on seasons.

Before they unlocked the gates to Jones Stadium—even before they unlocked the equipment room—the Raiders had a sick list. Guard Greg Wessels pulled up with a back injury lifting weights during the summer, and from there, the medical list grew.

What was a veteran line split into two groups—the red cross brigade and the pass blockers. Then, on top of this—as well as some injuries in the secondary—triggerman Rodney Allison went out in the A&M game.

Only lately has the list begun to show some eraser marks. Safetyman Alan Emerson is still out, as is Greg Davis. However, Kenny Thiel, Wessels and Gregg Adkins at tight end are on the mend and playing, along with wide receivers Brian Nelson and Godfrey Turner.

And Allison is slowly recovering. His return to the lineup Saturday appeared to observers to have an effect on both clubs. The Raiders seemed to play a bit better, and the Longhorns appeared to hang a bit looser on defense, in anticipation of something deadly.

SLOAN, SPEAKING THIS week, observed that now, the Raiders will aim for the best record possible, what with championship objectives all but wiped out. That best record will mean a bowl trip of the highest level possible.

And with just 15 teams claiming none or one loss each, and with 24 bowl berths available, there will be some attractive

Longhorns' Johnson Honored

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas' Johnnie Johnson may be the only punt returner in college football with a theme song.

Johnson settles under a kick at home games, the Longhorn band strikes up the theme from Johnny Carson's "Tonight" show, and the crowd shouts, "Heeeeeere's Johnnie."

Johnson ran a punt 82 yards into the Texas Tech end zone Saturday as No. 1 Texas whipped No. 14 Texas Tech, 26-0, but it was rubbed out by a clipping call.

"Johnnie played great pass defense and he had a beautiful punt return for a touchdown which failed to put up on the board," Akers said.

Even without the return, however, Johnson had such a good game that The Associated Press selected him as the defensive player of the week in the Southwest Conference.

He tied middle linebacker Lance Taylor for the most tackles with 11, including eight unassisted.

"He's played great football all year," said Akers, "and he will do better with experience. He's already the finest (defensive back) in the (Southwest) conference, in my opinion."

It was Johnson who made the key tackle on Oklahoma quarterback Thomas Lott to preserve Texas' 13-6 victory over the then second-ranked Sooners. His jarring tackle on a kickoff forced a Southern Methodist fumble that helped Texas to pull from a 7-3 deficit to a 20-7 halftime lead in a game Texas won 30-14.

He has intercepted two of the four passes picked off by the Texas secondary this year and broke a punt 52 yards for a touchdown against Virginia. He has returned 27 punts for 405 yards this season, an average of 15 yards per return, which puts him among the national leaders.

Asked why coaches selected Johnson, a safety on defense, to return punts, Akers said, "We looked at who could catch the ball and run with it the fastest. Johnnie — no doubt about it — has a knack for it."

"I'm not very fast," says Johnson, although he has been timed at 4.5 seconds for 40 yards, "but I've always had the desire to get to a place and get there in a hurry."

No one needs to tell Akers that the La-Grange sophomore has more than two years to play.

"He's got a lot of football ahead of him," said Akers, "and if — as they say — experience is the best teacher, you're talking about real potential."

Barry, Parish Pace Warriors

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Rick Barry and Robert Parish combined for 26 points in the fourth quarter Tuesday to key a late Golden State surge and give the Warriors a 108-97 National Basketball Association victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

The Warriors, who trailed 79-71 in the final period, tied the score at 86-86. Barry hit 16 points and Parish added 10 in the fourth-quarter rally.

Barry led all scorers with 28 points. Clifford Ray added 21 and Parish had 16. The Spurs were paced by George Gerwin's 22 points, while Allan Bristow added 20 and Larry Kenon had 19.

The victory was Golden State's third in a row, while the loss snapped the Spurs' two-game winning streak.

Cavs 110, Nuggets 83 — Jim Chones scored 21 points and Austin Carr added 15 to pace the host Cleveland Cavaliers to a 110-83 victory over Denver.

The Cavaliers shot 54 per cent as they roared to a 70-54 halftime lead with Chones scoring 15 points and pulling down eight rebounds in the first two periods.

Hawks 102, Seattle 99 — Forwards Ron Behagen and John Drew hit two baskets apiece in the waning minutes to trigger the Atlanta Hawks to a comeback 102-99 victory over the Seattle SuperSonics.

Torrez, Gamble Pitch Caps Into Bidding Ring

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Oscar Gamble and pitcher Mike Torrez officially joined the list of baseball free agents Tuesday, declaring their intention to go through the re-entry draft later this week.

And Bill Veck, whose Chicago White Sox employed Gamble last season, declared his intention to keep his wallet in his pocket when the numbers start to climb after Friday's selections.

Both Gamble and Torrez could have pulled out of the draft as late as Monday night by signing with their old clubs but both decided to test the free agent waters instead and added their names to the lengthy list of players up for grabs.

Torrez won 17 games for the New York Yankees and had two victories during the World Series. Gamble slugged 31 home runs and batted .297 for the White Sox.

Both are 6-year veterans, one of a number of categories supplying the player pool for the draft. Two other players, outfielder John Hale and pitcher Diego Segui, were removed from the list of eligibles as clubs entered the closed pre-draft period with no further signings permitted until after the re-entry process.

Besides Gamble, the rich list — soon row richer — of available talent includes another White Sox slugger, outfielder Richie Zisk. Veck said it would cost $1 million a year to sign the two players and that he wouldn't pay that price.

"It would cost $1 million a year to sign them for anywhere from three to five years," said Veck. "That's what their two paychecks would have added up to in 1978."

Two Football Games Moved

Two area games have been moved up to Thursday this week so the schools involved may attend a teachers meeting in Amarillo Friday.

Sudan will be at Silverton and Lazbuddie at Valley Thursday night in Dist. 2-B North Zone games. Sudan has an opportunity to tie for the title with a win over Silverton, but Motley County will represent the zone.

The Matadors, ranked No. 10 in the state, will face No. 7-ranked Groom in a nondistrict battle this week and will meet No. 5-ranked Ropes for the zone title Nov. 11. That game will be played at 7:30 p.m. in Petersburg.

Winner of the Nov. 11 game will face No. 1-ranked Wheeler in bidistrict Nov. 18.

remaining in the game when Behagen sank a backhand layup to give Atlanta a 92-91 lead. Seattle came back quickly as Paul Silas hit a pair of free throws, but Behagen put Atlanta back in the lead 94-93 with a five-foot jump shot with only 2:13 left.

Cropp Seeks Stronger Tech Passing Attack

By CARTER CROWWELL
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

It's hard for John Cropp to evaluate his receivers and not look at Texas Tech's total offensive picture up to this point in the 1977 season.

"I'm not disappointed with any of our receivers, individually," he said, "but it's kind of like it is with our whole offense. I don't think any of us are satisfied with our performance as a team, offensively."

"The passing game just hasn't been what it has been in the past or what it needs to be for us to win. We've had difficulty in all areas."

Inexperience at quarterback and in the line because of injuries have been the principal reasons for Tech's inconsistency on offense this season.

Last season, after seven games, Tech had completed 54 of 94 passes for a 57.4 completion percentage. The total passing yardage was 952, or nearly 18 yards per reception. This year, the Raiders have thrown more, but had less success, connecting on just 60 of 118 for slightly less than 51 per cent. They've totaled 725 yards for a 12-yard average per catch. The passing game has been inconsistent most of the time.

Currently, fullback Billy Taylor is the club's leading receiver with 18 catches, while split end Sammy Williams has 14. They are the only players who have caught more than 10 passes.

Cropp is high on Williams, although his pace is well behind that of the past two seasons, in which he caught 34 and 32 passes, respectively.

"I think he's an excellent player," Cropp said. "He's unselfish and team oriented. We've used him as a tight end a number of times when we've gone to a two-tight end setup, and he's been willing to get in there and block to help the team move the ball."

Redshirt sophomore Howie Lewis backs up Williams. Godfrey Turner and Brian Nelson alternate at flanker and James Hadnot and Gregg Adkins split time at tight end to give Tech a good group of receivers.

"This is the best group I've ever had," Cropp said. "We've been able to play a lot of people all year. We're able to alternate at tight end and flanker. All those guys have played in every game, except Howie, who didn't play against Texas."

Injuries have been a factor at flanker, as both Nelson and Turner have missed a good amount of time because of leg injuries.

"That's made it a difficult situation at that position for most of the fall," Cropp said. "When they've been healthy, they've played well, but the missed practice time is going to make a difference."

Cropp has been pleased with the tight end play.

"Adkins has been very consistent, and Hadnot is improving. You have to have two good tight ends to be a good team nowadays," Hadnot, a 6-2, 235-pound sophomore, is one of the team's best athletes.

The receiver situation is much different than what it was in 1975. Tech's first season under Sloan. The Raiders had little experience at receiver then, and had less speed and depth than they possess now.

However, sophomore Williams came on well that year. Last season, Nelson, then a soph, made good contributions. Turner, who had walked on in 1975, became eligible, giving Tech another solid receiver in 1976. Adkins was moved from the offensive line last year, too.

Pat Felix and Sylvester Brown performed well, too. Now, Tech will turn four of those top six receivers next year, losing Adkins and Williams.

"Receivers are a recruiting priority for us this year because we need to get some young receivers in here and train them. It's awfully hard to play for a receiver to step right in and play in our system."

"Still, things look pretty good as far as next year goes. We do have a lot of receivers coming back."

NOTES: Tech drilled for over two hours in the cold Tuesday afternoon, preparing for Saturday's 2 p.m. contest with TCU in Jones Stadium. Head coach Steve Sloan said that quarterbacks Mark Johnson (bruised thigh) and Rodney Allison "still can't run."

Offensive lineman Wilbert Cunningham (knee) and cornerback Craig Harris (leg) were injured Tuesday. "We'll have to wait and see how badly they're hurt," Sloan said.

Youth Testifies Yank 'Stomped' On Wrist

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 14-year-old Bronx boy testified Tuesday that World Series star Reggie Jackson chased him from the parking lot at Yankee Stadium after the All-Star game last July and "stomped" him on his wrist.

Chris Howe told a nonjury trial in Manhattan that the alleged attack by the New York Yankee right fielder opened a half-inch cut on his right wrist.

Howe, a high school freshman, was the leadoff witness at the trial before Criminal Court Judge Harold Enten on the boy's complaint that Jackson "harassed" him.

Nine witnesses for Jackson are scheduled to testify during the afternoon session.

If convicted, Jackson faces up to 15 days in jail.

Howe said he attended the All-Star game on July 19 and went to the parking lot to get autographs. He said he saw Jackson standing near his car, signing autographs for about 20 persons.

As he approached, Howe said, he heard Jackson say, "No more autographs, I'm going home."

A few seconds later, Howe said, "someone made a comment about his mother and he looked at me eye to eye and I ran."

Just outside the gate, Howe continued, another teen-ager joined the chase and began wrestling with Jackson. It was during this struggle, Howe said, that Jackson "stomped" him on the wrist.

Brownfield wasted little time in defeating Dunbar Tuesday night in District 3-AAA girls' volleyball action as the Cubs downed their hosts in straight games 15-6, 15-8.

In other 3-AAA action, Snyder downed Sweetwater 15-2, 15-1.

The paychecks produced from Friday's draft will total considerably more than that. Last year's most expensive free agent was slugger Reggie Jackson, the first player selected, who signed for $2.9 million with the New York Yankees. And Jackson's success, particularly during the World Series when he set a host of records, seemed to justify the investment.

The expansion Toronto Blue Jays own the opening selection in Friday's draft followed by Atlanta, Oakland, the New York Mets, Seattle, San Diego, Milwaukee, Montreal, Cleveland, San Francisco, Detroit, the Chicago Cubs, and California.

Then Houston, Minnesota, St. Louis, the Chicago White Sox, Cincinnati, Texas, Pittsburgh, Boston, Los Angeles, Baltimore, Philadelphia, the Yankees and Kansas City.

Chatham Gains Coach's Praise

"There's no doubt about it, he controlled the ball game last Friday night." And that's right from the coach's mouth.

The man doing the praising is Estacado mentor Louis Kelley, the praisee is Matorador linebacker Mike Chatham, the Avalanche-Journal's defensive back of the week.

Chatham, who sat out the past three games with an ankle injury suffered against Monterey, had 12 unassisted tackles as he roamed from sideline-to-sideline, end zone-to-end zone and locker room-to-locker room hitting everything that moved during the Mats' 21-14 victory over Snyder.

The victory keeps the Matadors tied with Dunbar for second place in the District 3-AAA chase, only one step behind league-leading Lake View.

Yep, the win was a big one all right. And Chatham played an important role in it, claims the coach. "We are really pleased with the way he (Chatham) came off that injury and played against Snyder," Kelly said, adding that the 195-pounder would probably see some action at quarterback Friday night in Sweetwater—which indicates Chatham has recovered completely from the ankle injury.

"If Mike hadn't been hurt he would have been starting at quarterback all along for us," Kelley said.

Kelley pointed out that Chatham, a rugged tackler who can take the hard knocks just as well as he can deliver them, is one of the more valuable players on the team despite being only a junior.

"We are glad he's back and no one else has him," Kelley said. "He is just a versatile athlete. He can play anyone of seven positions really well."

Also nominated by local coaches for the honor were Coronado's Richard Brown, who had one interception; Monterey's Mike Wooten, one interception and eight tackles; Christ the King's Edward Robless, one interception and five unassisted tackles; Dunbar's Daryl Green, one interception and six tackles; Lubbock High's Jimmy Garza, two interceptions and four tackles and Lubbock Christian's Shawn Williams, one interception.

Garnering the offensive lineman of the week award is Gregory Cooks of Dunbar. "Gregory really came around this week and played a great game for us," coach Van Jefferson said.

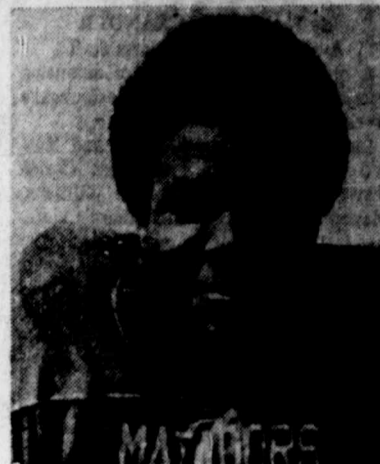

Also cited were Shawn Williams of LCHS, Jim McGann of CTK, Larry DeLeon of LHS, Mitchell Harris of Estacado, last week's winner George Morris of Monterey and Ben Pollard of Coronado.

George Tellez of Lubbock High collected eight unassisted tackles and two quarterback traps during the Westerner's heart-stopping win over Hereford to garner the defensive lineman honor.

Danny Jacobs of Coronado, Neil Sayles of Estacado, Phil Bruedigam of Monterey, McGann of CTK, Tim Howell of LCHS and Jeffery Crawford of Dunbar were also nominated.

Jeff Harp of Monterey, rushed for 98 yards, caught one pass for 9 yards and scored a pair of touchdowns to garner the offensive back of the week award.

Harp, a 160-pound senior, did much of the dirty work during the Plainsmen's 40-7 win over city-rival Coronado.

Other backs performing well last week were John Bouillon of CTK with 124 yards on 19 carries; Kent Allison of LCHS, who hit four passes for 65 yards; Dunbar's Kenneth James, who scored three TDs; Bobby Mitchell of LHS with 48 yards rushing; Mike Sims of Estacado, who turned in a 75-yard rushing night against Sweetwater; and Coronado's Buck Williams, who scored the Mustangs' lone TD.

Cheerleaders Share Cowboys' Spotlight

DALLAS (AP) — They are young and female. Most are single, and they smile a lot. And most of the time they are students, or secretaries or grocery checkers.

But once a week they slip into something sexy and revealing and prance before network television cameras while thousands of male football fans try to keep their minds on the football game.

The girls are, of course, the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders whose reputations are spreading across the land.

They are the subjects of wall posters and have appeared on the cover of Esquire magazine.

There are 32 cheerleaders for the Dallas Cowboys and there are probably just as many reasons why they auditioned for the coveted positions that this year attracted nearly 600 applicants.

They began as a sideline frill to dress up the playing field and get the spectators cheering, but in the six years since they were established, they have worked their way into the hearts of Cowboy fans and the pages of national magazines.

"We've sort of become celebrities ourselves," said Linda Kellum, a 22-year-old second-year cheerleader. Last summer when she was first selected, she was awestruck in the presence of the players, she recalled.

"But now I think: 'So he's a Dallas Cowboy—I'm a Dallas Cowboy cheerleader.'"

Linda and her roommate Cheryl Russell, also in her second season with the team, said they are often approached by autograph seekers and people who want to have their pictures taken with a cheerleader.

But in addition to the attention lavished on them by the public and the media, they said being cheerleaders has given them a new self-image.

"I wasn't very popular in high school," said Linda. "I didn't have much self-confidence and I was sort of shy. I guess you could say I began to blossom after I went to college, but I never really developed any self-confidence until now."

Cheryl said she tried out for the position because her boyfriend said she couldn't make it. He isn't her boyfriend any more.

"I wasn't really sure I could do it either," she said. "But I felt challenged. Being picked was good for my ego. I never thought anyone thought I was pretty before."

Tryouts are not the usual cheerleader tests of agility, strength and lung power. Appearance is not the only criterion for selection, but it is important.

Cheri Adams, a cheerleader who works as a receptionist for a downtown firm during the day, said applicants are judged on their "overall sparkle," but particular attention is paid to their smiles, figures, legs and ability to move well to music.

Many of the cheerleaders have been on high school or college drill teams, some have studied dancing and a couple are former Kilgore Rangerettes.

Shannon Baker, a 19-year-old sophomore at SMU, has been dancing all her life, she said. Trained classically in ballet, she performed with the Russian Bolshoi Ballet when she was 9.

Linda and Cheryl work part time as checkers at a grocery store. But Shannon is carrying a full load in school and Cheri and several of the other cheerleaders have full time jobs during the day.

Practice once a week is mandatory and lasts about two hours. More than two unexcused absences can cost a girl her place on the team.

And they must attend all home games, where they perform in the heat and in the cold.

They are required to abide by a list of rules and decorum that forbids such things as jewelry and cigarettes on the playing field. And they must watch their weight religiously.

All this for only $15 per game.

But you won't hear them complain. They are quick to point out that fringe benefits can make the position both socially and financially lucrative.

Cheerleaders don't accompany the Cowboys to out-of-town games, but they regularly are offered personal appearance promotions for businesses and charities. They ride on parade floats, appear at new car showings and make commercials. Several of the girls appear in the movie "Semi-Tough," filmed in part in Texas Stadium.

The promotions have taken them to several states and Canada. All expenses are paid and the girls usually receive an appearance fee. For some, the appearance fees match the salaries they make at their regular jobs.

Official cheerleading duties end in December with the football season, unless the Cowboys play in the Super Bowl. In that case, they will accompany the team.

Schoolboy Player Dies Of Injury

OXNARD, Calif. (AP) — Greg Cole, a 17-year-old high school football player, died Tuesday of injuries suffered in a game last Saturday. St. John's Hospital officials said.

Cole, a 6-foot-3, 220-pound senior tackle for Agoura High School, died of a blood clot on the brain, officials said.

Cole was injured in his school's game against Channel Islands High School. He made a tackle, seemed stunned, but made it to the sidelines. He collapsed moments later and was taken to the hospital, where tests disclosed that he was hemorrhaging.

Cole underwent extensive surgery Sunday, but scan tests following the operation showed no brain waves.

Funeral services are scheduled for Wednesday at Hillside Memorial Park in Culver City, Calif.

Brother Act Features Lazbuddie Win

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

A brother act and a pair of defensive specialists head The Avalanche-Journal's weekly area honor roll list.

Lazbuddie's Mike Windham and Russell Windham, along with Kress' Carlos Amador and Sudan's Lonnie Williams, played major roles in their team's victories last week.

Both Windhams are 6-0, 155, but senior Mike carried 16 times for 161 yards and three TDs and had a 2-point conversion run in a 55-7 romp over Siverton. Then on defense, the safety had two unassisted tackles, 11 assists, and carried back an intercepted pass 35 yards to the 2-yard line to set up another Longhorn score.

Freshman Russell caught two passes for 77 yards and a TD as well as carrying four times for 30 yards. From his middle linebacker post, he had eight unassisted tackles, 15 assists and recovered a fumble.

Amador, a 5-10, 198-pound defensive tackle, had his personal high with 24 tackles in a 19-6 win over Bovina. Amador, who doubles as the Kangaroo center, has managed at least 13 tackles in every game this year.

Williams, an all-stater last year, continued to anchor Sudan's line from his nose-guard berth. In just over two quarters of action in a 69-6 romp over Smyer, he had nine assists, eight unassisted tackles and caused two fumbles.

Others with top performances last week include:

- Sudan runningbacks Joel Williams and John Miles both went over the 1,000-yard barrier. Williams had 1,062 yards and an 8.2 average and Miles had 1,041 yards and an 8.3 norm. Both had nine carries against Smyer, with Miles getting 122 yards and Williams 102.
- Crosbyton's Marvin Wiley had 25 carries for 162 yards and one TD in a 21-7 win over Hale Center. Junior halfback Kelly Feree had 13 carries for 93 yards and had punts of 40, 51 and 62 yards against the Owls.
- Petersburg's Mike Jones was limited to 137 yards and one TD in a 23-14 win over New Deal but upped his season's rushing total to 1,623 yards and his point total to 130.
- Whitharral quarterback Jimmy Don

Polk carried 17 times for 162 yards and hit 14 of 22 passes for 232 more yards and accounted for five TDs in a 45-43 loss to Cotton Center.

• Three Way's Albert Rand blasted for seven TDs and had 241 yards on 14 carries in a 75-29 victory over Grady that was called at halftime because of the 46-point rule.

- Plainview's Royce Coleman had 111 yards on 11 carries including a 37-yard TD gallop in a 39-6 romp over Pampa.
- Ropes' Gary Means booted field goals of 15 and 22 yards, scored on a 9-yard run and booted three PATs in a 28-0 victory over Anton.
- Eunice's Kevin Davidson carried 25 times for 118 yards in an 18-14 win over Jal. Jal's Ricky Jennings had 17 carries for 106 yards and two TDs.
- Post's Randy Baker tallied TDs on gallops of 3, 9 and 99 yards in a 20-6 win over Post and also caught a 31-yard pass which helped set up one of the shorter runs.
- Danny Clark of Lockney carried 19 times for 120 yards including a 66-yard TD burst in an 18-17 loss to Tulia.
- Hobbs' Roy Gomez managed 106 yards on 16 carries including TD gallops of 19 and 50 yards in a 31-14 victory over Roswell Goddard.
- Derwin Huseman rushed for 157 yards and scored on a 20-yard run as Nazareth upset Valley 14-6. Huseman had missed the two previous games with injuries.
- Clay Freeman neared the 1,400-yard mark and scored three TDs as Loop blistered Bethel Christian 64-19.
- Rudolph Smith sparked Littlefield with 130 yards and one TD on 19 carries and Raymond Baiza had 24 totes for 82 yards and two scores as the Wildcats blanked Olton 33-0.
- Jeff Whiteside rambled for 154 yards on 12 tries and Glen London had 18 for 115 in Friona's 13-7 upset over Muleshoe.
- Dimmitt's Jack Stewart hit only three of 10 passes in a 28-14 win over Morton, but all three went for TDs and accounted for 201 yards. Stewart's tosses went 56 yards to Robin Touchstone, 81 yards to Thompson Mayberry and 64 yards to Reggie Washington.
- Borden County's Craig Peterson scored five TDs and ran across two PATs, gaining 88 yards, and caught 38-yard TD pass.

Petersburg's Jones Retains Scoring Lead

Mike Jones only managed one TD last week yet managed to hang onto his area scoring leadership. In fact, he increased his pad over runner-up Jerry Lee of Mottley County from 1 to 7 points.

The Petersburg junior now has 130 points on the season and is also the area's top rusher with 1,623 yards, despite getting only 137 yards in a 23-14 win over New Deal last week.

Clifford Bailey jumped from fifth to third in the scoring race as the Tahoka junior—also well over 1,400 yards rushing for the season—scored three times in a 28-7 win over Cooper.

But Three Way's Albert Rand continued to be the big scorer on the South Plains. He had a seven-TD performance in a 75-29 homecoming victory over Grady and now has 229 points on the year. His nearest rival in the six-man world is Loop's Clary Freeman, who had 133.

GAMES NEEDED
WOLFFORTH (Special) — Coach John Parchman needs a game for either Sept. 15 or Sept. 29 to complete his 1978 football schedule. Parchman, who can be reached at 866-4480, will play any Class A, AA or AAA school.

Plains Game Causes Concern For Eddins

By WALT McALEXANDER
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Seagraves is rolling along undefeated through eight games of the 1977 season and closing in on its fourth consecutive district championship.

However, coach Jim Eddins is taking nothing for granted right now, especially with Plains looming just ahead.

Eddins said he was definitely surprised that Stanton, a team Seagraves beat 27-7, could score 25 points on Plains (in a 25-0 win last week). "But they did."

Winner of the Plains-Seagraves tilt the past five years has captured the league crown. "It's always a good game when our two schools get together," Eddins said, "and it doesn't make any difference who's favored."

"The last six years, with maybe one exception, the games have been extremely close."

In those last five games, Plains won 7-0 and 8-6 in 1972 and 1973, then Seagraves took over, winning 22-2 in 1974, 55-7 in 1975 and 20-14 last year, when Plains entered the game undefeated.

The Eagles have been No. 1 ranked in both state wire-service polls most of the year. "I'm happy that the people think enough of us to rate us No. 1," Eddins said, "but actually, as far as we're concerned, it's made it tough. Everyone has played us tough. Now, the scores may not indicate that, but everyone seems to give that little extra when they play Seagraves."

Eddins feels his Eagles may have a little more depth now that at the beginning of the year. And the main reason is that he had to juggle the lineup because of injuries.

"We haven't had any major injuries, but we had a couple of nagging-type injuries early and had to do some switching, and that has given us more depth. Also, we've moved a couple of kids up off the JV, and that's helped."

"Our offensive line was inexperienced at the first of the year even though all seniors are playing there. But only David Welch at left guard and Wesley Smith at right end started last year."

"And, to my way of thinking, the offensive line is the hardest place to play in football."

"Right now, because of the line's maturity, we have been able to move the ball fairly well and that's probably the biggest reason we've enjoyed the success we have this year. We've given up quite a few points, but our defense is playing a little better now than it did earlier and it's because of the whole unit."

"But this game (Plains) is important to both clubs. They can force a possible three-way tie by beating us and, even if we win Friday and O'Donnell beats Stanton—which could happen—then we'd have to win that last game to represent the league."

Schoolboy Leaders Retain Positions

The Associated Press Schoolboy Football Poll has become an exclusive fraternity the past few weeks with the top 50 rated teams mostly holding their own against upset bids.

There was one big surprise and one mild shocker last week when Beaumont Hebert, the defending AAA king, had its 23-game winning string ended by Crosby, and No. 4 Decatur in AA lost to No. 6 Jacksboro 16-13.

Neither however, dropped out of the rankings and no newcomers made it in.

The leaders in all class, Port Neches-Groves in AAAA, Gregory-Portland in AAA, Bellville in AA, Seagraves in A and Wheeler in B, all held onto their top billings.

Hebert, which ripped to an unbeaten record last season and was 7-0 prior to last week's game, dropped from seventh to 10th following its 6-0 loss Hebert, which beat Crosby 72-16 last year, reached Crosby's 12-yard line with 3:24 in the game but fumbled away its last chance.

Decatur fell from fourth to ninth after its narrow loss to Jacksboro, which jumped to fourth this week.

Port Neches-Groves, which had an open date last week, polled 13 of 18 first place votes. Runnerup Temple had one first place vote. No. 3 Odessa Permian got three and unbeaten Highland Park got the other first place pick.

Gregory-Portland, which massacred Sinton 71-0 last week, continues to rule its division but is getting strong competition from runnerup Humble and No. 3 Brownwood.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS — Petersburg 23, New Deal 14, Sour 18, Rails 28, Crosbyton 21, Hale Center 7, Lorenzo 0.

RSVPs floating in the fall air come Nov. 19.

At least seven bowls (Cotton, Orange, Sun, Fiesta, Bluebonnet, Hall of Fame) have been on hand—either in Jones Stadium or on the road—to watch the Raiders or have put out feelers in this direction.

Thus, Tech is on the list of some bowls. Now, the challenge is to stay there and enhance its position. And, although the assistant coach did not mention rewards (bowl), adding a couple of numerals to that win column is as much reason for coachin' fast as personal pride.

SLOWLY, THE OFFENSIVE line is returning, and Allison's broken leg is mending. In addition, the younger Raiders who filled in for the veterans—both line and back types—are, by this date in the season, well seasoned.

Thus, a sophomore who has been playing steadily is not a soph in the sense of the word as it was on say, Aug. 15.

Emphasis this week will be on bouncing back. The Techsans catch TCU at their homecoming, before heading for Dallas to play SMU. Solid or spectacular performances in these two games would attract some of the bowl scouts that might have been scared away by hearing the outcome from Austin.

Then, on the day of invitations, Nov.

19, the Raiders will be playing Houston in the Astrodome. They remember well Houston; they remember well the Astrodome. Both should act as additional incentives.

By that time, with no additional misfortune, the Raiders should be hearing pre-season strength, physically. And victories for three straight weeks would bring Tech to 8-2, a very attractive record for a bowl in these times of well tattered banners.

Thus, the challenge for coach and Raider alike is plain. History—and the U. of Texas—intimates two league losses is too much for title hopes. Thus, a high standing in the league and return to the Top Twenty has to be the objective.

This is the basis for coachin' fast.

Ringer Probe Continues

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — A state Supreme Court judge reserved decision Tuesday on whether suspended veterinarian Dr. Mark Gerard, accused of being involved in a thoroughbred race-horse switch scandal, should be granted a hearing from the New York Racing and Wagering Board.

Earlier Tuesday, Judge Francis X. Altieri, who had been expected to render a decision, referred the case to Judge Theodore Velsor. After hearing arguments for 1½ hours, Velsor denied application for an injunction by Dr. Gerard's attorneys and reserved decision.

Dr. Gerard has been accused by the state Racing and Wagering Board of killing a horse named Lebon on June 12 and running a faster horse named Cinzano at Belmont Park under the name of Lebon. On Sept. 23 at Belmont, a horse listed as Lebon won at odds of 57-1 and Dr. Gerard's attorneys admitted that the veterinarian won a big bet on the race. One bet reportedly won more than $78,000 on the race.

Meanwhile, officials in the town of Huntington, N.Y., revealed that a horse was delivered to their waste disposal area on June 13. Their report showed that horse, believed by the state to be Lebon, died of a fractured skull. A town official said the horse, one of 45 buried there since June, was now buried under an estimated 60,000 tons of garbage. State officials said they would seek to find the carcass in an effort to determine its true identity.

State Racing and Wagering Board officials have said the horse who won the race is not Lebon and is believed to be a superior horse, Cinzano. Lebon and Cinzano were imported from South America by Dr. Gerard.

The mystery horse is under heavy guard at Belmont Park while the state, Nassau County and federal officials continue their investigations.

According to a report from Montevideo, Uruguay, the former owners of Lebon and Cinzano said Monday they have never seen Dr. Gerard. Cinzano's former owner, Roberto Forne, said he sold Cinzano for $80,000 last April 4 to a Uruguayan horse importer. Lebon's former owner said he sold the horse for $1,000 last April 24 at auction. The auction house refused to name the purchaser.

The State Racing and Wagering Board also is investigating Dr. Gerard's alleged horse-switch involving two other South American horses, Enchumao and As De Pique II.

The New York Post reported Tuesday that Dr. Gerard and his wife Alice were the principal, but hidden, owners of Enchumao, a horse who broke down in Florida last February. Veterinarians in New York State are not permitted to own any part of a racehorse. According to The Post, each held a 33 per cent interest in Enchumao.

'No Bonafide Offer' Made, Says Finley

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley said Tuesday a New Orleans group seeking to buy his baseball team has not yet made "a bonafide offer" for the American League club.

Finley, noted for his colorful behavior — and language — told the San Francisco Examiner in a telephone interview from his Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. retreat that he told the prospective buyers, "bull walks, money talks."

"If they get the money together and something can be worked out between San Francisco and Oakland, I think the problem can be solved," Finley said.

He reportedly is asking $12.5 million for the A's, which finished in last place in the American League West, 38½ games behind the Kansas City Royals.

Finley confirmed that he met last week with representatives of the group which wants to move the A's to the Superdome in time for the 1978 season. He said they were "serious, very serious," about purchasing the team.

Finley also said that he told the group that he would not demand to retain 20 per cent of the team.

"I told them if I did make the sale that could be optional with them," he said. "If they wanted me to retain 20 per cent, I would. On the other hand, if they wanted to buy 100 per cent that would be okay."

Pro Coaches See Red Over Yellow Flags

By HAL BOCK
NEW YORK (AP) — Whistles blew and men in striped shirts stood waving their arms overhead. It was, of course, just one more National Football League penalty in a season that some coaches believe has resembled a sea of yellow penalty flags.

Ask around the league and people tell you that penalties are definitely up. The funny part is, though, that the total through seven games is actually down.

A year ago, 1,383 penalties had been called through the first half of the NFL season. This season, 1,328 have been whistled.

"For awhile, more fouls were being committed this season," Art McNally, supervisor of NFL officials, said Tuesday. "But in the last two or three weeks, they've come down. The coaches and players realize the calls are going to be made and try to avoid them."

That is faint consolation to some teams who have felt the sting of those yellow flags lately though.

In Monday night's 28-0 loss against St. Louis, the New York Giants, who can hardly afford that kind of handicap, were penalized for 103 yards—the length of the football field and then some. The Cardinals' second touchdown came on an 85-yard drive and 67 of those yards were the result of penalties.

Two of those penalties were long pass interference calls, neither of which the Giants thought were justified. The touchdown was scored when offensive guard Conrad Dobler recovered a fumble in the end zone in another disputed call.

"How could they call it a touchdown?" asked Giant linebacker Brian Kelly, who contended that he and not Dobler had controlled the ball. "It was a bad call."

"The calls went against us... they broke our backs," said defensive end Jack Gregory, a central character in the fight that broke out on the field following Dobler's TD. There was plenty of pushing and shoving but no players were ejected by the officials.

But New York's misdemeanors, real or imagined, were minor compared to the Pittsburgh Steelers, who had 17 calls against them for 122 yards in a 31-21 loss to Baltimore Sunday. The Steelers tied an NFL record, surrendering nine first downs on penalties. "There were a great number of penalties," said Pittsburgh coach Chuck Noll, weighing his words carefully. "We tried to review them a little bit."

Of course, if Noll wanted to review the season's penalty toll on the Steelers, he might not have time to do any other work. Pittsburgh leads the league with 66 penalties for 520 yards.

Five of Sunday's calls were for defensive offsides caused, according to Noll, by Baltimore tackle David Taylor. The Steelers claimed that Taylor's movements after taking his three-point set stance were illegal but the flags went against Pittsburgh, not Baltimore.

Bum Phillips, coach of the Houston Oilers, was still steaming over a disputed call in his team's 13-10 overtime loss to Cincinnati.

His anger was directed at line judge Vince Jacob, who ruled that an Oiler kickoff, which Houston recovered in the end zone, was touched out of bounds by Cincinnati, giving the Bengals the ball instead of resulting in an Oiler TD.

"If he (an official) can cost me my job, I'd like to be able to cost him his," said Phillips. "Right now they can go back to their insurance business or whatever they want to do but I don't have an insurance business to go back to."

Football is the only major team sport that does not have a fulltime staff of officials. Jacob, for example, is a special apparatus wireman. Five other NFL officials, Phillips will be interested to learn, are involved in insurance.

"That comes up periodically," said McNally of the full-time officials question. "I don't have an opinion on it. It's like a proposed rule change. It would be up to the owners."

But McNally points out that football is different from the other sports because it has only one game day each week instead of five or six like baseball, basketball and hockey. "What would the officials do the rest of the time?" he wondered.

McNally defended the level of work of his staff. "Our men consistently do a fine job," he said.

Landry Doubts Unbeaten Year

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry said Tuesday he has no visions of an unbeaten season.

Told he was a man without problems at his weekly press luncheon, Landry said, "Just stay around; they will develop. The race will tighten up."

The coach of the National Football League's only unbeaten team even went so far as to say "I'm sure we going to get beat, and if we do I hope we can come back strong."

Landry said he would take a 5-2 record over the second half of the season.

The 1968-69 Cowboys won 11 consecutive games, but Landry said "That was a poised and mature team. The best thing this team has going is confidence. We feel like we can win even when we don't play well."

Landry reiterated "I'll still take an 11-3 record and go fishing."

He added "I just don't see us riding along like we have been. We will have a difficult time in the future. We get New York, Washington, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia on the road. We have two tough home games against St. Louis and Denver."

"It was an unusual first half of the season," said Landry. "Nobody really played well against us except Minnesota."

Noting his gloomy forecast, someone asked Landry if a loss would help the Cowboys psychologically.

He looked at the questioner and snapped off a quick "No."

"If we go 14-0 then we REAL-LY know we have something," said the only coach Dallas has ever had.

Landry said he was somewhat concerned about swelling around quarterback Roger Staubach's bruised hip but added "He should be ready to go against the (New York) Giants Sunday. The bruise has filled up with fluid at the joint but we feel he will be OK."

Staubach suffered the injury in one of the few times he was touched in Sunday's 37-0 thumping of Detroit to run the Cowboys victory string to seven.

Landry said one of the keys to Dallas' success is...

Shorter, Viren Head Peace Race

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Frank Shorter of the United States and Lasse Viren of Finland will lead a class field of 1,000 runners in the first annual United States International Peace Race, a 25-kilometer event Nov. 12 at Mill Creek Park.

Promoters say the event will feature internationally famed runners from four continents.

Viren won the 5,000 and 10,000 meters at Montreal in 1976, a repeat of 1972 at Munich.

early success has been a strong pass rush. "Harvey Martin and Randy White have been excellent," said Landry. "If we keep getting that pass rush we will be fine. If we don't, then we fall subject to the quality of the opposition's passers and receivers."

Landry concluded "There's always the danger that we think we can coast. That would be a big mistake."

Predecessor Prevented Bettis From Quitting

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Tough-guy Tom Bettis, the newest head coach in the National Football League, would be just another unemployed assistant today if his fired predecessor hadn't talked him out of resigning.

Bettis, 44, the defensive backfield coach for the Kansas City Chiefs since 1966, was named interim head coach moments after Paul Wiggin's surprising dismissal Monday.

Wiggin and Bettis, who had become close friends during Wiggin's 2½ years in Kansas City, had an emotional meeting in Wiggin's office just after Wiggin was ousted by owner Lamar Hunt and club president Jack Steadman.

"Tom is a very loyal guy," Wiggin said, indicating he had urged Bettis not to resign in a show of loyalty.

At a news conference later, Bettis, flanked by Hunt and Steadman, was understandably evasive on the subject.

"Any time you get a shock like this, there's bound to be a lot of wild thoughts going through your head," he said after becoming the third head coach in the club's 18-season history. "Paul and I had a long conversation."

The matter was pursued no further.

An all-America linebacker at Purdue, Bettis was Green Bay's No. 1 draft choice in 1955 and earned a championship ring with Vince Lombardi's Packers in 1961. Two years later he concluded his playing career with another champion, the 1963 Chicago Bears.

He retired to private business in the Green Bay area the next year but was talked into joining the Chiefs organization in 1966 by Hank Stram.

His 1969 secondary of safeties Johnny Robinson and Jim Kearney and cornerbacks Emmitt Thomas and Jim Marsalis was a key factor in Kansas City's Super Bowl championship. Two years ago he began building a secondary from scratch and today that phase of the team is recognized as about the only bright spot in a 1-6 start.

Ironically, he makes his head coaching debut Sunday against his old team, the Packers. And Wiggin's last game as Chiefs' head coach was a 44-7 loss to his old team, the Cleveland Browns.

"We hope Tom Bettis will be our head coach for the next 20 years," Hunt said Monday but emphasized that Bettis' status will be reviewed at the season's end.

"Tom Bettis is an intense, dedicated coach," Hunt said. "This is a tough profession. He was a tough player and a tough assistant coach and he is going to have a tough football team. And that is what it's all about."

A teammate of Bettis' at Purdue was former Chiefs' quarterback Len Dawson, who remembers him as a "Jekyll and Hyde football player."

"He was a pleasant guy but he was entirely different when he'd get you on the football field. He played with great intensity."

Sensibaugh Regains Stature With Mates

ST. LOUIS (AP)—For safety Mike Sensibaugh and the St. Louis Cardinals defense, it ranked as a moment of atonement.

Each made up for previous National Football League performances which had been hard to live down. And together they showed they had put down their tendency to lose Monday night football games. They had lost their last five Monday ventures.

"A week ago no one wanted to be around my locker," the beaming Sensibaugh said during the revelry that followed the Cards' 28-0 victory over the New York Giants, a conquest climaxed by his 79-yard interception return.

"This week, look at all you guys here," he added. "It's a good feeling. I had to shovel dirt for eight days."

His earlier embarrassment stemmed from tackles he missed as St. Louis outlasted New Orleans 49-31 a game earlier. He permitted the Saints four touchdowns and 440 total yards.

"All of us don't do quite as well some days as we do on others," the Cards' forgiving coach Don Coryell said, however.

He (Sensibaugh) had a very bad shoulder. He said he still has one hit coming for "one missed tackle."

Against the Giants, the maligned St. Louis defense bent but never broke.

A 68-yard drive carried the Cards to a 7-0 lead early in the second quarter. Then burly offensive guard Conrad Dobler pounced on a teammate's fumble in the New York end zone to make it 14-0.

In the second half, cornerback Lee Nelson's pass piracy sent St. Louis on another scoring excursion, culminating in Jerry Latin's four-yard dash off the right side.

Finally, after Joe Pisarcik's aerials ignited a belated Giants surge, the alert Sensibaugh stepped in front of intended receiver Jimmy Robinson and raced unchallenged to the goal line with a pass the New York quarterback threw on fourth down.

"We were in zone coverage," said Sensibaugh, whose touchdown was his second in seven NFL seasons. "We were waiting for the play-action pass. I think it's the longest I've ever run."

Unneeded during the easy victory was the full thrust of a Cards offense which totaled only 258 yards to the Giants' 301.

"They've got a hell of an offensive football team," New York coach John McVay acknowledged, however. "Their defense surprised us. We were able to move the ball, but it didn't mean much."

The Cards are 4-3. The Giants dropped to 3-4.

World Eyes Germans' Answer To Terrorism

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — For all its wealth, ordered institutions and model democracy, West Germany is a troubled giant these days.

Twice this century, a powerful but unstable Germany has led the world into war.

So the world now watches warily as the Federal Republic seeks to sustain its democracy in the face of ruthless terrorist attacks and maintain the economic advance that has made it Europe's main engine of growth.

Political Polarization

Terrorism is problem number one for the moment, not only because of its own frenzied nihilism but because of the political polarization it is helping to create.

But looking ahead, some Germans fear the nation will be confronted within a decade by an energy shortage that could erode the economic foundations on which democracy rests.

Even in the short term, Germany's economic prospects — while brighter than those of most other industrialized nations — can hardly be described as buoyant. Inflation is under control at the cost of about one million unemployed. Economic growth this year has been scaled down from a planned 5 per cent to about 3 per cent. And there are fears about the nation's ability to keep up the flood of exports which now give employment to one worker in four.

West Germany At Top

Even so, in economic terms West Germany still stands alone at the top in Western Europe.

But the economy, and virtually all other national considerations, have been overshadowed in recent weeks by the brooding menace of international terrorism.

Germany's successful commando operation in Somalia, rescuing 86 hostages after five days of hell aboard a hijacked Lufthansa airliner, was an enormous morale booster for a nation baffled by the destructive zeal of the terrorist campaign waged against it.

But after the euphoria, uneasiness quickly returned. First came the suicide of three terrorists in their maximum security cells, followed by leftist demonstrations in other parts of Europe claiming the trio was murdered.

Body Discovered

Then followed the discovery in France of the body of Hanns-Martin Schleyer, 62, the spokesman for German industry whom terrorists had kidnapped Sept. 5 in their attempt to win the release of jailed cohorts.

After this, the government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt launched an unprecedented nationwide dragnet for 16 terrorists suspected in the Schleyer killing.

Schmidt expressed fear the urban guerrillas might soon attack again to avenge the three suicides and the killing of three of the four hijackers — all apparently Arabs — at Mogadishu.

The Schleyer case and the nail-biting drama of the kidnap has left Germany with a disturbing experience to digest.

Aim Of Terrorists

One aim of the terrorists, in so far as they have a coherent policy, is to provoke violence by violence and thus expose the state in what they say are its true authoritarian colors.

However indirectly, the terrorists have succeeded in causing some political polarization and confrontation.

The Right accuses the Left of creating a climate of woolly sympathy which provides an ideal culture for the bacillus of terrorism. Even chief opposition leader Helmut Kohl attacked Schmidt for going along "all too long with the frivolous experimental theater of the leftwing ideologists."

Accused Of Witch Hunt

In turn, the Left accuses the Right of trying to embark on a witch hunt — turning the nation down an authoritarian road along which terrorism would be inflamed rather than checked.

Despite such accusations, the political center held together during the Schleyer and hijack crises, giving Schmidt the vital support he needed.

Abroad, left-wing intellectuals unhesitatingly talk about the danger of rightwing authoritarianism in Germany. The government rejects such accusations.

"Anyone who says Germany is a repressive police state doesn't know it, doesn't want to know it or has evil motives," President Walter Scheel declared recently. "We have the most free state in our history in which the safeguarding of civil and human rights is second to none."

And Schmidt pledges, "We shall see to it that no one can abuse our determined fight against terrorism in order to restore a surfeit of state authority or even a repressive state."

Left Seen As Threat

Many Germans say the threat to democracy clearly comes from the left. Millions of them voted their fear of Communist East Germany. They look on the communists as the instigators and armers of the terrorists. They form a large part of the majority which, according to opinion polls, would like to see a tightening of law and order.

One of Schmidt's main tasks now is to head off a dangerous clash of extremes.

After the suicide of terrorist leader Andreas Baader, his "revolutionary bride" Gudrun Ensslin and another gang member, one newspaper published a cartoon of a dragon labeled "terror" with three of its heads cut off. But other heads continued to wave.

Exactly how many heads remain — apart from the 16 believed to be directly involved in the Schleyer case — is a mystery. The new breed of terrorists accused Baader — a man with five murders and 59 attempted murders to his name — of being too soft. Authorities say a small core of such superterrorists may be surrounded by hundreds of active sympathizers willing to supply safe houses, automobiles, documents, weapons, money and sympathy.

Terrorism Extends Abroad

The terrorist network extends abroad: to France, Italy, Holland, Sweden as well as the Middle East.

Many leftist students are reported willing to justify the action of the terrorists even if they do not carry a gun themselves. One of the hardest questions to answer is why in the midst of so much prosperity is there so much alienation?

At a time when Germany has most needed help from its friends — particularly from its partners in the European Common Market — it has found misunderstanding and criticism in some quarters.

The theme of the "ugly German" is a live one in part of the European press.

Common Market Paymasters

As virtual paymasters to the Common Market, the Germans had become used to a certain amount of jealousy from World War II's victors towards its losers. But the wave of "schadenfreude" — satisfaction at another's woes — found in some allied countries appeared to go further than mere envy.

The newspaper Le Monde printed an article by playwright Jean Genet saying terrorist violence was a just response to the "violence" of German capitalism. The tone of another article by former French foreign minister Michel Debre was set by its headline: "Germany — A Danger Again?"

Concerned that anti-German sentiments might damage the 15-year friendship between Bonn and Paris, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing offered diplomatic and other help in combating terrorism. But Germans questioned whether the French police and judiciary was active enough in tracking down Schleyer's kidnapers.

Anti-German Feelings Erupt

In Italy, anti-German feelings erupted into riots protesting the deaths of the three terrorists in their cells. But Italy had been seething with such sentiments ever since the escape this summer of convicted Nazi war criminal Herbert Kappler and Germany's refusal to extradite him.

Despite Ideological Rift, Two Germanys Conduct Lively Trade

BERLIN (UPI) — Although divided by ideology, separated by minefields and walls, East and West Germany conduct a lively trade.

More than 100 companies specializing in trade with the east have their headquarters in West Berlin, 110 miles inside East Germany. No less than a third of the "interzonal" trade between East and West Germany is estimated to pass through the city.

Two big mail order houses in Berlin specialize in selling cheap goods from East Germany: refrigerators, electrical products, dresses, radios and tools. Included in domestic West German statistics in line with the principle that East Germany is but a separated part of the same country.

It means that East Germany gets tariff arrangements in West Germany equal to or better than the countries of the European Common Market. In fact, some Germans joke the Common Market has 91.2 members if East Germany is included.

West Berlin buys many of its supplies from East Germany but avoids becoming too dependent.

For example, it will take only up to one third of its electrical supplies from East Germany. But it insists on producing the rest on its own, despite the extreme difficulty of sitting power stations in the limited amount of available space.

West Berlin buys gas, lignite and building materials from East Germany, but ships the bulk of its food from West Germany. An offer by East Germany to supply all the city's milk was turned down too avoid reliance on a single source.

East Germany now buys goods made in West Berlin, including railway rolling stock, electrical equipment, machinery and clothing. It disposes of West Berlin's garbage. It has eased restrictions on West Berlin's rail, road and river transport.

West Berlin has accepted such preferred signs of good neighborliness with considerable wariness. For experience has shown that concessions can quickly be taken away and restrictions clamped down again.

Contacts, severed by the building of the Wall in 1961, have been considerably eased since the signing of a quadripartite agreement in September, 1971.

This enables West Germans to cross over to the East with relatively little formality. But under normal circumstances East Germans have to be more than 65 before they are allowed out.

Eight million West Germans last year went to the east, a staggering influx in a country that has a population of 17 million. The same proportion in the United States would mean more than 100 million foreign tourists.

The presence of so many obviously well-heeled visitors makes it hard for communist authorities to impose political orthodoxy. But an even more pervasive factor is at work: television.

West German TV can be received in all but one southern corner of East Germany, and even reaches parts of the country unserved by Communist broadcasters. This leads to the anomaly that some East German border guards in the northern part of the country can watch only West German television programs.

East Germans therefore have easy access to Western views and opinions. They know what goods are available and what the prices are on the other side — putting pressure on their own government to give them a high standard of living as well.

Groups of young people from West Berlin go regularly to the east for contacts with friends in homes and cafes. In between visits they can make and receive direct-dial telephone calls to and from the other side.
