JERUSALEM (AP) - Anwar Sadat came to Israel Saturday night on a "sacred" historic mission, risking both his political future and Arab unity in a bid for lasting peace in the Middle East.

The Egyptian president, first Arab leader to visit the Jewish state in its 29-year existence, landed at Ben-Gurion airport, was welcomed in an emotional gathering of Israeli leaders and then rode in the evening darkness to Jerusalem, the ancient Holy City and symbol of centuries of strife between Arab and Jew.

Within three hours he had his first private meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin. Toward the end of the halfhour session, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan and Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin joined the two national leaders.

It was the first time Arab and Israeli leaders had sat down together officially to discuss the future of the war-torn region.

"I had a personal, warm talk with President Sadat, and I may say that we like each other," Begin said afterward. "He has a sense of humor - and I, too, sometimes have a sense of humor. We exchanged views. I think a fitting personal tie has been established between us."

Palestinians Pose

"Shalom," - "peace" - shouted some of the thousands of jubilant, applauding Israelis at the entrance to Jerusalem as Sadat, accompanied by Israeli President Ephraim Katzir, passed by in a U.S.-supplied, bulletproof black limousine

Some in the crowd flourished red, white and black Egyptian flags. Parents held their children aloft to see the Egyptian leader. An old man in a prayer shawl chanted psalms. "It's fantastic, a miracle," said cafe waitress Anna Shandour. Outside Israel, the fury of Arab reaction to Sadat's solitary diplomacy reached a crescendo. Libya broke diplomatic relations with neighboring Egypt. Bitter Palestinian militants demonstrated, sometimes violently, in world capitals. Syria called it the blackest day in Arab history.

Jordan Asks Cooperation

But Jordan, like Egypt a moderate in Arab ranks, appealed for an end to "negative" reactions and for cooperation in preserving Arab unity.

Israel radio, quoting a senior Foreign Ministry source, said a non-belligerency pact between Israel and Egypt was one possible result of the talks. But few expected dramatic shifts by either side on the basic issues of the Arab-Israeli deadlock.

Begin said he and Sadat would hold further talks today in the morning, at lunch and at dinner. He also reiterated his hope for continued talks after Sadat leaves on Monday. Begin has said he would be willing to go to Cairo to maintain the momentum toward peace.

The high point of Sadat's visit will be his address this afternoon to the Israeli Knesset, or parliament.

Arrival Scene Poignant The arrival scene at the airport, 30 miles west of here, was historic and poignant. It took Sadat only 33 minutes to fly aboard his jetliner "Egyptian One" from a military airport near Ismailia, Egypt, to Ben-Gurion

Stepping down from the Boeing 707 at 8:05 p.m. (12:05 p.m. CST) to a bugle fanfare, he was greeted and shook hands with Katzir and Begin, then stood at attention alongside them for the playing of the Egyptian and Israeli national anthems, tunes that so often inspired them in bitter enmity. A 21-gun salute was fired.

Moving down a reception line of Israeli and foreign dignitaries, the 58-year-old Sadat reserved his warmest greeting for former Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Violence Threat; Syria Mourns

By The Associated Press

LIBYAN ENVOYS burned Egyptian flags Saturday and Palestinian radicals called for an all-out attack on Israel in a wave of Arab fury as President Anwar Sadat arrived on his solitary journey to Jerusalem.

In Jordan, however, the government broke its silence on the trip and appealed to the Arabs to "stop pouring oil on the fire" now that Sadat is in Israel.

The Jordanian cabinet issued a statement in Amman, the capital, calling for cooperation and coordination of efforts to preserve Arab unity. It said unilateral reactions to the trip by Arab governments were weakening Arab ranks and yielding "negative results."

At flag-burning ceremonies in Washington and in capitals around the world, Libyan ambassadors declared that Libyan-Egyptian relations had come to an end the moment Sadat stepped onto Israeli soil.

"This flag is now flying in Tel Aviv and has become a symbol of surrender and treachery," Libyan Charge d'Affaires Hassan

Now The Time Has Come"

"I have waited a long time for this," said the Egyptian. "But you didn't come," replied the 79-year-old grandmother who led Israel in the 1967 and 1973 Middle East wars.

"Now the time has come," said Sadat. In Washington, President Carter said "the hopes and prayers of all Americans" are with Begin and Sadat as they meet in Jerusalem.

Sadat's 36-hour visit, made in defiance of almost total Arab opposition, in effect conferred "de facto" Egyptian recogni-tion on Israel, with which Egypt is still formally in a state of war

A deeply religious man, Sadat had described his effort to break the "vicious cycle" of Mideast wars and animosity as a 'sacred duty.'

He insisted, however, that he was not coming to make a separate peace with Israel.

Israel is fielding an estimated 10,000 policemen to protect Sadat both from angry Arabs and from the enthusiasm of the Israelis.

The Egyptian leader was escorted to a sixth-floor suite at Jerusalem's King David Hotel - ironically the scene of a dynamite attack by Begin-led Irgun guerrillas during the Jewish insurgency against the British mandate in Palestine.

Hotel managers said Sadat was staying in the same room oc-cupied by then-President Richard M. Nixon and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during visits here. After meeting with the Israeli officials, Sadat and the rest of

Dilemma Seen In County Courts' Dismissals Of Traffic Appeals

By PAULA TILKER Avalanche-Journal Staff

DISPLEASED that more than 240 traffic case appeals were dismissed last month in county courts-at-law, municipal court Prosecutor James Moore contends they were dropped because the "judges didn't want to try them.

Both judges deny the charge, saying the cases were dismissed because of legitimately defective complaints prepared in the municipal court office.

Although the cases dropped had been part of the first traffic case docket ever set in county courts-at-law, last month's dismissals are but another chapter in an old story.

Moore and the judges acknowledge that traffic case appeals have been quashed because of defective complaints for at least a decade.

If the problem has continued for years, as they say, why hasn't it been resolved? The answer would appear to be that pride and stubbornness mixed with a dash of "us versus them" have caused a seemingly unbridgeable communication gap. Moore said he has not questioned judges Edwin Boedeker and J. Q. Warnick about the dismissals because he can't afford to "antagonize" them. Also, he said, "The district attorney's office doesn't want us over there telling them what to do, and we don't want them over here telling us what to do." He admits that it would be to the city's advantage to resolve the problem in or-der to collect fines from appealed cases.

"But I'm not the person to do it," Moore said, adding that he doesn't know who that person might be, either. For their part, Boedeker and Warnick say their doors are always open and that they are willing to talk about the prob-

In fact, Boedeker said, he already has discussed the reasons for dismissal with City Atty. Fred Senter.

Asst. Dist. Atty. J. David Nelson, who prosecuted the cases in Judge Warnick's court, said he, too, has "communicated (with the city) about the reasons for the major" dismissals.

All of the dismissals were made on legitimate grounds, Nelson and the judges agreed.

Moore disagrees. He says the judges nitpick and that they demand unnecessary inclusions in the complaints.

For example, he said, they require that a five-point star seal be imprinted on all papers accompanying an appeal. But the prosecutor's office doesn't have such a seal. And even if there were one, he added, it doesn't have to be affixed to all papers.

Judge Warnick said he never has dismissed a complaint because of a missing seal, but Judge Boedeker said he has.

"I dismissed some because the legal seal was missing on some papers," Boe-deker said. The missing seal means the appeal was defective, not the complaint.

"The case didn't come up here properly" and he had no jurisdiction to hear it because of the missing seal, he explained.

The law says it has to come up a certain way," and it "sticks in my craw" when the seal isn't applied as is required by the law, Boedeker said.

Although most of the motions to quash a case cited the missing seal mark as a reason, Nelson said, "we didn't mess with that.

"We thought it was too picky," he ex-plained. Besides, he indicated, the com-

FUNCHAL, Madeira (AP) - A Portuguese jetliner carrying 163 persons skid-ded off the runway and exploded while landing during a storm Saturday at this Atlantic island, officials reported. Government television announcers said at least 50 persons were killed.

Medical authorities reported about 50 survivors, and the search continued for others.

Witnesses at Santa Cruz Airport said the Boeing 727 skidded off the end of the runway and a series of explosions blew the aircraft apart. They said the tail section remained on land while the forward portion of the fuselage hurtled forward and stopped partially in the pounding surf

Wind-swept seas around this Portuguese island hampered search and rescue efforts by police, firemen and navy personnel.

Some bodies were laid out on the rocky beach under the glare of emergency lights powered by portable generators. Madeira officials appealed for blood donations

Tangerine Bowl officials resolved any question about the invitation late in the game by saying simply that Tech's selection — as reported by The Avalanche-Journal and other groups last week — already had been announced in Orlando. Robert Clerk, a member of the Tangerine Bowl selection committee, extended the invitation to Tech President Dr. Cecil Mackey following the contest. Later Saturday, the slate was completed when Florida State accepted an invitation to play the Raid-ers. Florida State was on the West Coast to meet San Diego State.

Tech closes its regular season against Arkansas Thanksgiving day in a nationally evised battle.

The Raiders went into Saturday night's game as the nation's 16th-ranked team.

Florida State was tabbed 13th. It will be the second consecutive bowl appearance for Tech, which lost 27-24 to Nebraska in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl last season after sharing the Southwest Conference championship. The Tangerine Bowl, a relative newcomer to bowl ranks, will be staged in a stad-ium recently enlarged to handle 50,000 spectators. The 7 p.m. CST game will be televised by the Mizlou network.

Wealth, Violence Mark Davis' World

AMARILLO, (AP) - Millionaires are as rare in Texas as cattle and oil wells, but Thomas Cullen Davis is in a special class. His wealth is almost beyond accountancy. $150 million? $200 million? $300 million? Nobody knows.

In 1975, Kendavis Industries reported come after taxes of $57 million from its 80-plus companies. Cullen, as his friends call him, owns one half of the conglomerate named after his daddy. And that might made Cullen Davis the richest man accused of murder since Henry

Legends Persist About Davis' Wealth There has been a lot written about Davis since that August night last year when blood mingled with the painting and sculpture in the Fort Worth mansion Davis designed, built and furnished for $6

One of those stories has Davis stopping his airport-bound taxi in New York to browse through an art gallery, picking up pieces the way a housewife plucks Wheaties boxes from the grocery shelf. That night the dealer shipped $102,000 worth of art to decorate the mansion.

An Ill-Fated Marriage

In 1968, on the day his father died, Cul-Jen Davis married Priscilla Wilborn, twice divorced with one daughter from the first marriage and a daughter and son from her second.

The Davises separated in 1974; that is, Cullen moved out of the house and later was kept out by court order. Priscilla, a tiny blonde of eye-popping proportions, took a lover - a former Texas Christian University basketball player named Stanford Farr. The 6-foot-10-inch Farr shared her money, her mansion and her bed. He called her "investment."

On the night of Aug. 2, 1976, Priscilla's daughter Andrea - 12 years-old and just returned from vacation Bible School in Houston - was shot to death with a single .38 caliber bullet, centered perfectly below her breastbone. Only the killer was a witness.

Mrs. Davis and Farr were out on the town. On their return, Farr was shot to death. Priscilla was hit in the chest and lived to testify that the gunmen was her husband, Cullen, Minutes later there arrived Beverly Bass, a young friend of Priscilla's, and date Gus Gavrel, known as "Bubba." Gavrell was shot, the bullet lodging in his spine. It cost him use of his right leg. He said Cullen Davis, the millionaire industrialist, did it.

- So did Beverly.

Who were these people? Let's begin with Andrea, the first vicim, almost forgotten in the trial of Cullen Davis.

Andrea was Priscilla's daughter but she so was Jack Wilborn's and lived with her father, an auto dealer. She chose to spend that night at the mansion.

Andrea was 5-feet-7-inches, rather pretty. She loved arts and crafts and she so much that she took her cat and parakeet to Houston while she went to Bible School. On the last day of her short life, Andrea went shopping with Beverly Bass, a friend of her halfsister Dee, browsing through pet shops. A Life Of Violence, Drugs e Andrea's pleasures, by all accounts, were simple. Her mother and stepfather were on the other side of innocence. It was made clear at the trial of Davis that Priscilla lived in the other world of drugs. There was mention of heroin, cocaine, LSD, marijuana, and a painkiller called Percodan. Those who peopled her life were described as brigands and scalawags and scuzzies.

Oaks Inn in Fort Worth while she still was married to Jack Wilborn. One night Wilborn came with private detectives, kicked the door in, and found the couple in bed. Witnesses said Davis was totally cool, telling Wilborn that he was a business man who dealt with problems every day and this was just one more problem to be dealt with.

Davis, it is said, had a penchant for pornography and people in Fort Worth still chuckle about the time he brought a van to the colonial and held private showings of "Deep Throat" for his friends.

A New Paramour For Cullen

After he and Priscilla separated, he started keeping company with Karen Master, a stunning champagne-blonde divorcee with two children.

Karen met him through a friend and at first knew little about him. "He never bragged," she said. "I never heard him brag about his company or how many companies there were or what they were worth." She learned his identity from her mother who once worked for Cullen's father, nicknamed "Stinky By September 1975, Karen said, "We'd pretty well decided we wouldn't want to date anybody else. It was kind of a mutual understanding. He never got down on bended knee and said will you marry me? But we talked about things for us in

Falling to the floor, Mrs. Davis said she ously crawled. Farr dead in a pool of a blood. And Andrea, the gentle child who screamed to Farr, "Stan, go back. It's Cullen. He's got a gun." She said the gunloved pets, face up, eyes partially open, man shot through the door once and that in the basement. At 4:15 a.m., Police went to the home

The bullet had struck Farr in the lower of Karen Master and arrested Thomas Cullen Davis, one of America's richest men, for the slayings at 4200 Mockingbird Lane.

There is equal justice under the law, but it is a truism that money can buy more equal justice. Cullen Davis could afford the best. To defend himself, he reportedly spent $1.6 million on lawyers and $400,000 on investigators.

He assembled a legal team headed by Richard Haynes, nicknamed "Racehorse," a criminal lawyer whose fame and reputation have been immortalized in the bestseller "Blood and Money.

A news magazine once called Racehorse one of the six best criminal lawyers in the country. Asked before the Davis trial if he considered himself the best in Texas, Haynes replied: "It is my belief that I am. But I wonder why you restrict Texas the defense. Cullen Davis celebrated his 44th birthday while on trial.

The prosecution depended on the testi-mony of the three people who said the gun was barking in Davis' hand — Priscil-la, Beverly and Bubba. There were no fingerprints, and the murder weapon never was found.

Racehorse Haynes' chief witness, Karen Master, said Davis was asleep in bed beside her when she awakened and noticed the time: 12:40 a.m. It was the only alibi offered for his whereabouts. Haynes attacked the credibility of Priscilla as if she were the one being tried. She was on the witness stand 13 days, and Haynes pictured her as "a Mrs. Jekyll and Mrs. Hyde" who framed her husband for his money. He called her the"Queen Bee" who led young people astray. Chief prosecutor Joe Shannon said the

He asked the jury to return a verdict of guilty of capital murder, which is punish-able in Texas by death through injection. It took the jurors four hours and seven minutes to decide the man in black was not Cullen Davis.

Afterward, some of the jurors said they just plain didn't believe Priscilla Davis.

A few hours later, Judge George Dowlen, three of the jurors and three court bailiffs joined Davis and Karen Master at a victory party. Racehorse Haynes strummed a guitar and sang "The Ballad of Cullen Davis," while his client sipped margueritas.

Juror James Watkins, holding a drink, said, "I have it in my mind that he possibly could have done it. But there were other things in my mind that said somebody else could have. There was doubt. I can't sentence a man to death unless I know he's guilty.

The prosecution team went back to Fort Worth to decide whether to try Cullen Davis again perhaps for the murder of Farr.

Davis prepared to fly to Aspen for some skiing after Thanksgiving. He had the reservation made while he was still on trial for his life.

While he was in his happy mood, he intimated in a television interview, he just might know who killed his stepdaughter. But, he said,"I would not supply anybody the name of the killer. Let'em find out who it is."

It was no secret that Priscilla, not much taller than five feet, had silicone implants.

"I dress for the men in my life," Pris--cilla would say, and nowhere did she do it Imore blatantly than at the Colonial National Invitation Golf Tournament where Fort Worth society goes to be seen. Priscilla always wore the shortest of shorts -and a halter top designed to reveal. And around her neck, a golden necklace that spelled out in diamonds what a lot of Texans were saying about her: "Rich Bitch'

Forth Worth's upper crust showed its disdain and she returned it.

"I didn't try to break into the social troup," Priscilla said, "by marrying Culen. I started at the top."

By marrying Cullen, she also got that big house with its 19,000 square feet and indoor swimming pool set in the middle of 181 acres. She also got trips to Europe, a fox bedspread, a Lyndon Johnson-style three screen television set and a $400,000 Renoir painting that she hung in the bathroom. There even was a chess set, one side of solid white gold, the other of yellow gold worth $90,000, and a very exensive security system to guard it all.

Not bad for a girl from Houston's grimy southeast side who said she learned what. it meant to be blonde, bosomy and beau-

Priscilla, who is now 36, said her husand once called Andrea stupid and kicked at her. And there was testimony that he banished Andrea from the house In a rage, after a disciplinary episode involving school math problems.

Davis was notorious for his temper. There was the time he reached into a parking lot attendant's booth and scatered car keys in the mud because he was irritated at the slowness of the service.

Another time, he dashed a kitten to the loor, killing it.

And he broke a $400 pearl stick pin that riscilla gave him in happier days. Mrs. Davis tells of the time when he at her with a crutch she was using after the broke her leg in a skiing accident. There is a calmer side to Davis, too. He

the future. Back in July 1974, before Cullen moved out of the house. Priscilla took a van load of people including her teenaged daughter Dee and two other young girls to a picnic in College Station, Texas, There was testimony about drugs and sex on the trip. One of the passengers was W.T. Rufner, an electrician by trade and a drugdropping rogue by habit.

When Cullen left the house, at 4200 Mockingbird Lane, Ruffner moved in. Priscilla denied it. But a parade of witnesses at the Davis trial said drugs and booze flowed freely, that there were nude swimming parties and group sex.

The Ruffner episode ended on a night when, in a fit of anger, he slashed Priscilla's tires and later was floored in a drunken brawl at the mansion. His place in her bedroom later was taken by Stanford Farr, a friendly bearded giant of a man.

All the while, Davis was pressing for divorce from Priscilla. She had signed an agreement before their marriage that she would not dip into the family fortune if they ever split. Davis was paying her $3,-500 a month temporary support while a divorce settlement was battled through court.

Night Of Frenzy, Death

On Monday, Aug. 2, word reached Dav is that the support money had been increased to $5,000 by a judge. Eight hours later, Andrea Wilborn died violently and alone in the basement at 4200 Mockingbird Lane.

Her mother and Farr arrived shortly after midnight and, Priscilla recalled, "We started to automatically turn the security locks off and I noticed they were already off." Farr had already gone upstairs when Priscilla spotted the bloody handprint on the door leading to the basement

Her night of terror had started. In her own words:

"I started yelling for Stan. About that time, Cullen stepped around the corner and said, 'Hi.' My first picture of him was Cullen standing there with this shoulderlength black wig on. He was dressed all in black. He had a plastic bag wrapped around his hand. Then he shot me."

Earlier that evening, Farr and Priscilla had run into 19-year-old Beverly Bass and Bubba Gavrel, Beverly said her waterbed had sprung a leak and could she spend the night in the mansion.

They arrived just in time, Gavrel testified, to see Priscilla being dragged back toward the mansion. Perhaps it was the sound of their car, but the intruder momentarily released Priscilla, entered the mansion and came back out to confront the arriving couple.

Priscilla, hiding in bushes, said she heard voices and took the opportunity to flee across the estate grounds. As Gavrel and Miss Bass entered, they encountered the man in black at a gate.

'What's going on? Where is everybody," Gavrel recalled asking. "Come on. They're inside," was the answer.

They did not recognize the man in the darkness, but followed him up to the sidewalk. When he stepped into a lighted area, Beverly said she told Bubba, "That's Cullen." At that point, the gunman wheeled and fired the single shot that crippled young Gavrel.

Beverly ran, flagged down a passing motorist and got help.

Police arrived to a grisly scene: Gavrel in a breakfast area where he had labori-

She said women can have different interests, ". . . but we shouldn't be dismayed by the clash of opinions and ideas."

Mrs. Johnson said, "I once thought the women's movement belonged more to my daughters than to me, but I have come to know that it belongs to women of all ages."

But it was Miss Jordan who brought down the house with descriptions of the plight of women. Her fiery brand of Southern straight-talk had inspired dele-gates to the Democratic National Convention last year.

"Human rights apply equally to Soviet dissidents, Chilean peasants and Ameri-can women," she said, adding, "women are humans.' "When our rights are limited . . . when our rights are violated, we need a domestic human rights program. This conference could be the beginning of such an effort." Miss Jordan said. She said delegates should not be brain-washed by those who predict chaos. "Tell them they lie," Miss Jordan said.

Of the 13,000 women in attenance, some 2,000 are delegates to the conference. They and their alternates are debating a 26-item political platform for women's rights.

Former Democratic Representative Bella Abzug of New York, told the delegates that women are speaking for themselves these days.

"And I believe, the whole nation will have to listen to what we say," Mrs. Abzug said. She chairs the federal commission sponsoring the conference. "After this weekend, the whole nation will know that the women's movement is not any one organization or set of ideas or particular lifestyle," she said. "It is mil-lions of women deciding individually and together that we are determined to move history forward.'

Liz Carpenter, a former press secretary to Mrs. Johnson who is a member of the women's commission, spoke to the diversity of the women represented at the conference. "Who are 'we the people' gathered

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-A-5 Sadat Security Poses Tough Problem

JERUSALEM (AP) — Egyptian Presi-dent Anwar Sadat is in range of hundreds of Israeli guns throughout his visit to Je-rusalem this weekend, as Israel mounts its largest peacetime security operation ever.

Guarding visiting VIPs has become routine in a nation that has received Pope Paul VI, former President Richard M. Nixon and Secretaries of State Henry A. Kissinger and Cyrus R. Vance.

The job of creating an impregnable shield for the first Arab head of state openly to visit Israel staggered even veteran police. Sadat's decision to come "as soon as possible" meant police had only two days notice.

Police are reluctant to say much about the massive operation, but admit that precautions for the 1974 Nixon visit paled in comparison.

They must watch for attacks from all sides - from extremist Palestinians enraged by Sadat's peace gesture to embit-tered families of slain Israeli soldiers to elated Israelis wanting to overexpress their thanks.

Israeli airspace was closed five hours before Sadat's scheduled arrival. Police barricades shut off the approaches to Ben-Gurion Airport for an eight-mile radius 12 hours in advance. Those entering the security net were subject to special checks.

Jerusalem's road link with Tel Aviv, the country's most traveled highway, also was sealed off. The shield around Sadat began the instant his jet touched down. Infantry troops surrounded the jet at a distance as it rolled to a stop.

Jeeps mounted with 30-caliber machine guns were assigned to escort Sadat's mo-torcades, with dozens of tough green-be-reted border police carrying M16 rifles following the jeeps.

The King David Hotel, Sadat's Jerusalem headquarters, was emptied of guests and closed to newsmen even before the arrival of an advance Egyptian party Friday. Israeli and Egyptian security agents were seen chatting inside. Border police camped outside the hotel and the Jerusalem theater, which has been converted into an international press center, far from Sadat's route.

Military and police helicopters began patrolling the skies long before Sadat left Egypt.

Sadat's decision to pray at East Jerusalem's Al-Aqsa mosque on Sunday was a security nightmare. In 1961, when the mosque still was in Arab territory, King Abdullah of Jordan was assassinated there by a Palestinian angry at the mon-arch's acceptance of Israel.

From the mosque, Sadat will walk to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, tradi-tional burial place of Jesus, about one-half mile away through streets built for donkey traffic. Besides the bodyguards walking with the president, armed border police will line the rooftops along his route and will take positions in the belfry of the ancient church.

Egyptian security agents flew here Fri-day to inspect the arrangements and see the sites Sadat will visit. They declined to speak to reporters, but Sadat's press secretary, Saad Nassar, said the arrange-ments, security and otherwise, were of "wonderful."

CAIRO (AP) - Egyptian hopes ran high Saturday that President Anwar Sadat's historic trip to Israel will pave the way to lasting peace in the Middle East. But the buoyant mood was tempered by the realization that failure of Sadat's mission could have severe political reprecussions for the Egyptian leader and threaten the tenuous truce between Arabs and Israelis.

"We desperately need peace to build our economy and our country which suf-fered more than any other Arab nation," a taxi driver said, summing up Egyptian weariness after 30 years of belligerency that has brought the overpopulated country to the brink of economic ruin.

Egyptians Hopeful, Optimistic Referring to the opposition to Sadat's trip by Egypt's Arab allies, a low-salaried government employee remarked, "If oth-er Arab countries want to fight, let them do it. They have oil billions. We are beg-ging. We want to raise our children and live a decent life."

Radical students grumbled that Sadat was kowtowing to the Israelis, but a university professor observed soberly that Sadat "is gambling . . . This trip will ei-ther make him the undisputed leader of the Arab world or bring him down, cursed and condemned forever. Ignoring adverse reaction from Saudi ran on their front pages messages of sup-port from President Carter, King Hassan of Morocco and the Shah of Iran.

Newspapers, radio and television called the visit a "historic event" and advised it could be witnessed live on television.

Newspapers stressed that Sadat would not conclude any separate agreement with Israel at the expense of other Arab states.

"It should be known that the principal aim of Sadat's visit is to show the world that Arabs want peace," said the mass-circulation Akhbar el Youm. "We do not expect firm decisions or a certain outcome of Sadat's trip because there are no prior decisions or secret contacts."

Jewish Leaders See Hope In Near East Peace Talks

By The Associated Press

Rabbis and other Jewish leaders in the United States talked on Saturday of hope, courage and peace as Egyptian President Anwar Sadat made his precedent-setting visit to Israel.

The Jerusalem meeting - which many American religious leaders saw as a first step toward peace for the Jewish homeland - became the focus of comments and temple talks as Sadat began meetings with Prime Minister Menahem Begin and other top Israeli officials.

Rabbi Alexander H. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations holding its 54th biennial meeting in San Francisco, termed Sadat's visit "a courageous and imaginative offer, creating an aura which can bring peace.'

The visit, he said, is "more than an acceptance of Israel's right to exist. It is an acceptance of the urgency of peace. A treaty could be arranged in very, very little time.

But Schindler warned the 3,500 delegates - lay leaders and rabbis from 720 Jewish congregations in North America - that "a visit does not spell peace itself."

Beirut Reaction

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - The old man kept shaking his head and singing the words of the Egyptian national an-them to the tune coming over the radio. Tears glistened on his cheeks.

They were tears of sadness. He was a Palestinian in a cafe at the Sabra refugee camp listening to Israeli broadcasts of the unprecedented visit to Israel of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

His fists clenched as the words of the anthem, "It's been a long time, my weapon," were sung.

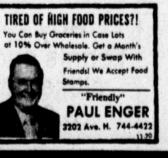

He was one of about 20 Palestinians guerrillas and unarmed civilians - who had gathered in the cafe to hear about Sadat's arrival on enemy territory.

As the radio announcer reported that Sadat's plane had touched down on Israeli soil not a sound was uttered in the shabby room where the group sat around wooden tables drinking tea or coffee, some smoking water pipes.

"Isn't there a single guerrilla in Israel with the guts to pull off a massacre?" shouted a 27-year-old commando.

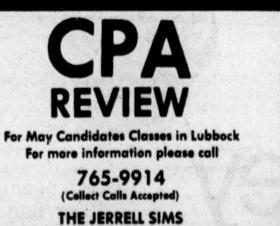

A 20-year-old girl asked, "Will he reopen the road to (the Israeli occupied) Gaza? I would really like to see my mother. I haven't seen her since 1967. Cold eyes turned on her and she quietly

Scotland Yard InTrouble LONDON (AP) - Scotland Yard, home of the indefatigable detective, has a tarnished image. It is now better known as the home of the bent copper - London slang for the corrupt cop. Where the trench-coated detective of fiction and film inched his way through a thick London fog to get his man, now the Yard's detectives track their own. Even that doesn't work. One investigation into police corruption was headed by a man who turned out to be the mastermind of a corruption ring. For the past eight years, since corrup-tion at the Yard was first uncovered, the London public has been exposed to a se-ries of trials. A number of top commanders have been convicted, mostly for tak-ing bribes from criminals, and 400 lowerranking officers have been fired or have

The London Metropolitan Police, offi-cial name for the Yard, remains the only force in Britain immune to outside inspection. Scotland Yard is virtually a law unto itself, guarding its operational independence even in its time of adversi-

That independence is now in the hands of David McNee, a 51-year-old nick-named "The Hammer" for his strikes gainst the underworld. But McNee, who takes over from Sir Robert Mark, must follow Mark's path of coming down hardest on the yard's own men.

Mark, who initiated a series of sweeping reforms, warned before he retired: "Many other police officers, very senior ones, knew what was going on, may have been part of what was going on ... and are still serving today." McNee is following Mark's mandate, replacing many chiefs with officers who played prominent roles in purging the corrupt. But whether he has succeeded is another question, both in the British public and within the 21,000-member force.

Since the Times of London first exposed three detectives taking bribes from known criminals in November 1969, a score of London detectives, some of them top men at the Yard, have been convicted. More than 400 officers have been fired or have resigned in disgrace. Among the senior officers jailed for-up to 12 years are Kenneth Drury, a onetime police commander who headed the Yard's crack gangbusting Flying Squad, for taking bribes from pornography rack-eteer Jim Humphreys: Commander Wally Virgo, former chief of the Yard's 3,500 etectives, holder of the Queen's Police Medal, highest award an officer can win, and 25 commendations, for taking money from pornographers: Chief Superintendent Bill Moody, former head of the Yard's obscene publications squad, known as "the Dirty Squad," and one of the masterminds of the corruption net-work. Moody once headed an investiga-tion into police graft. It failed to turn up any evidence. The corruption scandals shattered the myth of the Yard's integrity and honesty and led the bookish. Mozart-loving Mark to initiate major reforms that broke the long-standing power and virtual indechiefs. He also set up an internal investigation bureau to root crooked cops, and a police complaints bureau that for the first time included civilians. Brian McConnell, a veteran British crime reporter, says the complaints bureau will be effective in fighting corruption because it will make it hard for police officers to cover up graft. But, he warns: "No one can any longer believe that the corruption was carried on without the knowledge and conniv-ance of very senior police officers." The Times says public suspicion still lingers and asks: "How was it that the scale of corruption revealed in ... the corruption trials went unnoticed for so many years by those Yard men who ranked higher than Bill Moody, Wally Virgo and Ken Drury?'

It adds: "The biggest scandal of all still needs to be investigated."

Reporters Barry Cox. John Shirley and Martin Short, who spent three years investigating police corruption, claim in a recent book, "The Fall of Scotland Yard:

"There are still men high up in the re-formed Yard who are lucky to be there."

They did not name them, but McNee's shakeup was seen, in part, as his answer to the charges that top Yard officers at least knew about the graft and did nothing to stop it.

There are signs that "bent coppers" who evaded earlier purges are still active. Three members of the Yard's Drug Squad. which figured in one of the corruption trials a few years ago, are suspended from duty after investigators disclosed a half-ton of marijuana seized in police raids had been resold by detectives. One of the suspended officers, Chief Inspector Tony Rich, has won a fistful of commendations and is one of the top three Drug Squad men.

Rich, 34, was a crack undercover agent who broke up three major dope rings and won the British Empire Medal in 1968 for disarming a drug-crased gunman. John Groves, chief of detectives in Lon-don's East End, home base for several mobs, was suspended last June after an investigation by the Yard's anti-corrup-tion sourd. tion squad.

Groves was a friend of Sir Eric Miller, a property tycoon and bankroller of the ruling Labor Party who killed himself. Miller was being investigated by the Yard's Fraud Squad, and classified police files were found in his office after his sul-

Barry Pain, chief constable of Kent County, was called in last December to head an anti-corruption investigation against four senior Yard detectives. He handed his 1,600-page report to McNee last June.

Coca-Cola Still Seeks Expansion

ATLANTA (AP) — It's been a year of international brush fires for the Atlanta-based Coca-Cola Co., but with 55 percent of its earnings coming from overseas, the giant conglomerate continues its push for international expan-

Despite corporate crises in the middle and far east, in Canada and in Italy, Coke officials say foreign markets still hold the greatest promise of growth for the company that earned $285 million in 1976.

And while the soft drink company is seeking new markets in such countries as the Soviet Union and China, it is also concentrating on resolving its problems in:

-India, where the government wants Coca-Cola to turn over 60 percent of its interests in syrup production plants to an Indian company and to divulge the tightly held secret of its syrup formula.

-The Middle East, where Coca-Cola products have been blacklisted by most Arab countries for the past decade because of its decision in 1965 to grant a bottling franchise to a group in Israel.

-Italy, where a judge banned distribution of bottled Coke, claiming it did not comply with ingredient labeling laws there. The judge later rescinded that order but the issue has not been completey resolved.

And then there's the problem of saccharine, which some scientists-claim may cause cancer. Saccharinne, used in the company's diet drinks, has been nned in Canada. A similar ban scheduled for the United States was postponed for 18 months by congressional action.

Coke officials say they expect to be off the Arab blacklist soon

Egypt has agreed to support the company's re-entry into the Middle East as part of a joint venture agreement under which Coca Cola will aid the development of Egypt's citrus industry.

Coca Cola Chairman J. Paul Austin said the company is awaiting a decision on that issue later this month from the Arab Boycott Committee

The company has also agreed to underwrite an archeological expedition in-Egypt to save tombs of the pharoahs. But company officials say there is no connection between that project and its expectation of removal from the blacklist.

The corporate crisis in India appears to be a tougher problem. The compa-ny as of now "is not prepared to give the formula" for its syrup to the Indian government, and production of Coca Cola in that company has ceased, said public relations spokesman John White.

The bottling companies in that country are all Indian owned. But the syrup production plants are not.

White said negotiations are underway between the soft drink company and the Indian government, but declined to say what offers the company has made

India's foreign minister, George Fernandes, has accused the company of achieving "runaway growth" at the expense of Indian bottlers, and says the nation's scientists have perfected a substitute cola beverage which could be marketed in the event the American firm decides to pull out of the country.

Coke officials say they must maintain local control of the syrup manufacturing operations in foreign countries "to insure the integrity and unvarying quality" of the soft drink.

In Italy, Magistrate Mario Sossi banned production, distribution and sales of bottled Coca Cola because, he said, ingredients were listed on the bottle cap rather than on the glass itself.

Company officials in Atlanta said later the magistrate lifted the ban after Coca Cola bottlers in Italy agreed to post signs in retail outlets listing the ingredients

But meanwhile, the health ministry in Italy announced it is ordering labo-ratory research into Coca-Cola to determine whether any of the ingredients are dangerous "in the light of latest scientific findings." There was no elaboration.

Elsewhere, the company says it has signed agreements with the Soviet Un-ion for an exchange of scientific and technical data relating to the soft drink industry and that it is actively seeking opportunities in the Soviet market. Contact also has been established with Chinese officials, says company president J. Lucian Smith, who adds that while negotiations are not under way for the sale of the soft drink in that country, the company has "long term aspirations.

In a recent presentation to securities analysts, company officials also offered these evaluations of their international position:

-South African operations are "fairly self sufficient" and could continue despite any trade boycott that might develop in protest of South Africa's racial policies because the form employs a "substantial majority of nonwhites," said Claus M. Halle, head of the firm's Europe and Africa group.

-Japanese consumption provides "an extremely solid base" with volume growing 20 percent annually, said Ian R. Wilson, head of the firm's Pacific

-Latin American prospects have "never been healthier ... or brighter," reported Donald R. Keough, president of Coca Cola's Americas group. Besides the soft drinks for which it is known, the company has also acquired the lines of Minute Maid Corp., Duncan Foods and Taylor Wine Co.

Oil Industry Leaders Question Carter Advisers' Competence

HOUSTON (AP) - The expertise, competence and sincerity of President Carter's energy advisers are being questioned by oil-industry officials frustrated at their inability to re-direct the President's energy proposals.

With industry forces and administration officials trying to influence Congress in different directions on Carter's proposed National Energy Plan, oil company spokesmen appear anxious to appear conciliatory.

The official line during a two-day conference of the American Petroleum Institute (API) this past week, as put by outgoing API Chairman Maurice Granville, was "Cooperation must replace condemnation. Compromise must replace confrontation.

But the common theme of private conversations and interviews was: "Why won't they listen to reason in Washington and why won't they at least deliver what they've promised us?" And that theme occasionally leaked into public utterances as well.

Of course, the oil industry has its own view of "reason" and it sometimes conflicts with the view held by the consumer whose winter heating bill exceeds his mortgage payment

But the industry is angry, and no one argues that if the nation's developing energy crisis is to be withstood, the cooperation of a reasonably satisfied oil industry will be necessary.

One of the things being questioned by the industry is the ability of Carter's energy aides to understand the complexities of the oil business, and even a high-ranking administration official finds merit in the argument.

"Most of them (government energy officials) are not energy experts," John E. Swearingen, chairman of the Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) and newly elected API chairman, said during a news conference. "They have no experience in the oil busi-ness. We have a bunch of people chosen to watch the energy business who are naive.

Granville, chairman of Texaco Inc., said the industry wants to help, but often is blocked.

"Today, many federal officials dismiss our views as being prejudiced, as being in conflict with the public interest," he said, almost plaintively. "...I feel some personal disappointment when knowldgeable men from the energy industry are not utilized today in government service or even as advisers because of an unwarranted fear of a conflict of interes

A top administration official, one who generally strongly defends the President's energy proposals, admitted that a problem might exist.

"We have to work with strict conflictof-interest regulations given us from Congress," he said, "so if an industry type comes in, he's got to divest himself completely (of stock in energy-related firms). Not many are willing to do that."

The conflict-of-interest regulations were developed in the wake of numerous complaints that industry officials previously took leaves of absence, went into government service where they made decisions that helped the industry, and then returned to the rewards of better paying. more responsible jobs in the industry.

The word "incentives" was used often during the week, especially in combination with "production and exploration." The industry says Carter's plan does not include sufficient incentives to encourage domestic production of oil and gas.

The administration counters that virtually every drilling rig in the country is being used, so incentives already must be sufficient. Federal officials also claim that the President's plan would increase those incentives; the industry vehemently denies that.

During the convention, another charge arose - this one from George Bush, a former Texas oilman who went on to become a Republican congressman and director of the Central Intelligence Agency. "I believe...President Carter's National Energy Plan was hurriedly conceived by a small number of political and technical advisors, who sought through massive taxation to validate the President's pledge to balance the budget (by 1981)." Secretary of Energy James Schlesinger. who received a lukewarm reception after delivering a speech defending the administration's plan, later touched on that subject.

"It (the plan) is designed not to raise taxes," he said. "the original purpose of the plan was to have a budget wash between additional credits and taxes so there would be a fiscal (balance)."

Concerning industry complaints that it is over-regulated, Schlesinger said: "When supply exceeds demand, there's a hunger in the industry for regulatory methods. When demand exceeds supply, the marketplace acquires virtues that are not perceived in the other circumst-

But one of the hottest issues was deregulation of natural gas. During the presidential campaign, Carter said in a telegram to officials of Southwest oil and gas states that he would work toward deregulation.

His energy plan, however, calls not only for continued regulation of gas shipped through interstate pipelines, but also for regulation - for the first time - of gas produced and sold within the same state.

This infuriated industry officials, and politicians from both parties. Oklahoma Gov. David Boren, a Democrat, said he was "shocked" by the switch. Industry officials said it was an example of duplicity on the part of the administration

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-A-9 Corporate Mergers Dominate American Industry

NEW YORK (AP) - There was a time when words like "romance" were used to describe negotiations for corporate acquisitions and "marriage" was a colorful term for merger.

But the sweetheart analogy scarcely applies to the latest wave of corporate combinations. Some have been fought bitterly by the company pursued. Others are carried out with the cold-hearted cunning of a predator.

Carborundum Co., a Niagara Falls, N.Y., producer of abrasive products, surprised Wall Streeters this past week, in a widely followed acquisition struggle, when it commanded a $66-per-share takeover price from Kennecott Copper Corp.

The price was nearly twice as high as Carborundum stock had been trading for much of the year on the New York Stock Exchange and the purchase offer, which has a total value of more than $521 million, reportedly upset some stockholders of Kennecott.

One reason was that Kennecott was ru mored to be ripe for acquisition itself because of profit problems brought on by a general slump in the copper industry.

Instead, the company took the offensive. It outbid Eaton Corp., a Clevelandbased maker of vehicle parts, which had offered $47 a share for Carboundum several weeks earlier and reportedly felt the need to top a $60 per share "expression of interest" from some prospective bid-

The past week's actions are a good example of what has been going on lately. Analysts say merger deals are nearing the record dollar volumes of the late 1960s. However, the number of individual deals and general trend may show a more cautious and deliberate approach than the furious pace of the late 1960s.

In addition to Carborundum, other big mergers this year have included Pepsi-Co's $313 million acquisition of Pizza Hut: Continental Group's $293 million takeover of Richmond Corp., and Gulf Oil's $440 million acquisition of Kewanee Industries.

According to W.T. Grimm & Co., a Chicago-based merger specialist, the total dollar volume of mergers announced last year came to $20.02 billion and may well exceed that this year. That still is below the 1969 record of $24 billion and no where near the furious pace of individual deals which saw more than 6,000 merger announcements in 1969, against about 2,300 last year.

The figures suggest that predator companies are far more selective and willing to pay more for their target these days. Buyers are being far more careful these days. They are not going into the extreme diversification as they did in the late '60s," says Tomislava Simic, a statistical specialist at Grimm.

One widely cited reason for the rebirth in mergers is simply that inflation has pushed up the cost of construction and equipment so much in recent years that corporations find it cheaper to buy up ex-isting profitable companies than expand or begin new operations of their own.

Faced with rising capital costs, uncer-tainty about the economic future and the relative risks of expansion or starting up new product divisions, more and more corporations are opting for the acquisition of already existing stable companies. The Justice Department's Antitrust Di-vision, which moved against several con-glomerates in the late 1960s, is watching the latest merger developments, but according to one official, it doesn't yet vie the general situation as disturbing. "It's a different environment, the hasn't been as much activity (as in the late 1960s). We just don't perceive the mergers going on as they were in the late

Still, others have expressed concern that by putting money into mergers in-stead of expansion, corporations may be creating broad economic problems. As Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns commented, "such activity neither generates additional jobs nor ad-ditional capacity for our nation's econo-my."

Wall Street More Optimistic About Economy As Year Ends

NEW YORK (AP) - It may be something less than a cure-all for the stock market's problems, but many Wall Streeters are taking a considerably more optimistic view of the economic outlook lately than was common a few months ago. In late summer and early fall, the financial community engaged in a loud and lengthy debate over the chances of a new recession, possibly beginning as early as the fourth quarter of this year. In the face of a series of generally strong signals from the economic of late, however, such projections have been softened or at least postponed. "The recession thesis is out the window as of right now," one broker declared last week as the market launched one of the fitful rallies that have characterized trading for the last several weeks.

The path of stock prices this month has by no means been straight up. For the past week, the Dow Jones industrial average showed a net loss of 10.13 to 835.76. erasing part of the previous week's 35.95point gain.

"an improved and balanced growth rate" for the current quarter She cited data showing a 1.3 per cent

rise in personal income during October - the sharpest increase in seven months — as a good omen for consumer spending as the holiday season approaches. Another current plus is the housing in-dustry, which is enjoying a big year. The government reported Wednesday that housing starts reached a seasonally ad-instead annual match of 2 is million million. justed annual rate of 2.18 million units in October, a 4 1/2-year high. Starts of single-family homes set a re-cord at an annual rate of 1.55 million.

In other business developments this past week: — Tentative agreement in the seven-week-old dock strike was announced at the Port of New York in what was re-garded as a keystone to possible settle-ments at other ports along the Gulf and Atlantic strate Atlantic coa

The 12,000 New York dockworkers were expected to vote on the contract next week. A total of about $0,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association have staged a selective strike generally aimed at container cargo ships in 34 ports.

- The Shah of Iran, head of one of the major oil-producing countries in the world, announced after meeting with President Carter that he would actively oppose an oil-price increase when the Or-ganization of Petroleum Exporting Coun-tries meets next mooth. But the Shah's announcement at a Washington news conference prompted only cautious opti-mism from the White House. White House Emergencement and House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the Shah's position was "an encouraging one" but added, "We ought not to as-sume the difficult process here is complete.

Unem-ployment now is about 7 percent. While Labor Secretary Ray Marshall said he thinks the 4 percent goal can be met, he told a news conference that at least two federal tax cuts of at least $20 billion each would be needed, plus an additional one million public works jobs.

- Construction starts for single family housing hit a record annual rate of 1.85 million units in October, the highest level since the Commerce Department began keeping records in 1959. The report said all housing starts, including apartment and other multi-family units, rose 6 percent from the previous month to an annual rate of 2.17 million units. The report surprised some industry watchers who had expected the construction boom to cool off as winter approached.

Rossie places part of the blame for 'economic illiteracy" on journalists. Business reporting, he says, has traditionally been "relegated to second-class status and hasn't gotten the same kind of treatment and consider ation as so-called 'real' news.

programs, including seminars for reporters and businessmen. Such seminars, Rossie says, might help alleviate misunderstandings arising from what he describes as a traditional hostility between media and business. The seminars are aimed also at helping businessmen understand problems newsmen face in reporting business affairs.

"Our approach is not to teach businessmen how to manipulate the me-dia," Rossie says. "Our approach is to help them understand what it is that news people are doing."

Nixon Uses Federal Allotment

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Richard Nixon has used his $150,000 yearly federal allotment to buy such diverse items as luxurious electric golf carts, telephone taping equipment and a subscription to the Washington Post, two syndicated columnists reported Saturday.

Columnists Martha Angle and Robert Walters said they got their figures from the General Services Administration under the Freedom of Information Act.

They emphasized there was nothing anywhere in the figures to indicate "even a hint of scandal" in Nixon's expenditures.

Here are some of the things they found out:

-Nixon, whose disagreements with newspapers are legend, subscribes to the Los Angeles Times, the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner, the San Diego Union, The New York Times and the Washington Post - the paper that won a Pulitzer Prize for Watergate. -Nixon remains security conscious. He paid to have a lock changed on his safe after he returned to California - and paid $50 last year to have a safe disassembled, cleaned and the lock reset. -He spent $647 in public funds last fiscal year for photo processing, printing and developing. His chief aide, John Brennan, said the former president still gets and fills "hundreds of requests each month" for photos because "when we left the White House, everything was confiscated.

-Although his White House taping system has been dismantled, Nixon - like thousands of other people - has purchased a hand-held tape recorder and a $10 suction cup to record telephone conversations

-Nixon leases a 1976 Oldsmobile station wagon and a 1977 Olds 98 Regency four-dour sedan loaded with extra equipment, including a stereo tape deck. The leases cost $6,142 a year, and from public funds last year Nixon bought $2,290 in gasoline and $72 worth of car washes.

-An avid golfer, Nixon has purchased two electric golf carts that cost more than $2,000 each. Accessories include seven yards of fringe for the canvas roof, new carpeting, headlights, hubcaps, chrome, custom striping and a monogram - all optional extras.

A building where the cats are stored cost $430. Public funds were spent for the carts because they are "required for inter-building transportation for Mr. Nixon and his staff" at his retreat at Casa Pacifica in San Clemente, Calif.

DETROIT (AP) — The Society of Pro-fessional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi has urged that all public meetings and events be opened to coverage by cameras and recorders, criticized South Africa's treatment of newpapers and protested the jailing of reporters who refuse to expose confidential news sources.

The policies were adopted in a series of resolutions approved Saturday at the closing session of the four-day SPJ-SDX national convention.

'Cameras and recorders are basic tools for many journalists in gathering and re-porting vital public information," the society declared.

One resolution commended states, courts, elective and appointive bodies and individuals that already have opened themselves to coverage by cameras.

Convention delegates directed the society's officers to "begin or join efforts to promote the opening of public meetings, judicial proceedings and other public interest events to access by all tools of contemporary journalism.'

The resolution followed a plea by ABC News White House reporter Sam Donaldson, who urged such action in the keynote address Thursday. Ralph Goodykoontz, managing editor

Trustee Resignation

May Be Requested

FINDLAY, Ohio (AP) - Hancho Kris Kim, under indictment in the South Korean influence peddling scandal, may be asked to resign as a trustee of Findlay College, according to the school's president, Dr. Glen Rasmussen.

'The general tenor of the discussions has been that although he was indicted, he has not been proven guilty, and I would assume that he would be presumed innocent until proven guilty," Rasmussen said.

Kim, 52, was indicted by a federal grand jury last month on charges of defrauding the government and making a false declaration to a Washington grand jury of the Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch, Thomas, world-traveler, author, filmmaker, lecturer and radio commentator; and Pauline Frederick, international affairs analyst for National Public Radio.

The society, which has 34,000 members in all fields of mass communications, also adopted the report of the Advancement of Freedom of Information Committee. The committee said the most significant strategy in the FOI battle in 1977 was against judges who sought to compel reporters to reveal their sources and testify in court beyond what the journalist has reported.

Assassination Panel Exploring New Leads

WASHINGTON (AP) - The years have never softened the lingering suspicion among many Americans that somehow there was a conspiracy involved in the assassinations of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King Jr.

So when the House of Representatives launched its own investigation into the political murders of the 1960s it ordered its assassinations committee to conduct 'a full and complete" study.

Whether the panel has been successful in finding new evidence about the murders is undetermined so far, but the investigation has reached into apparently new and startling areas.

For instance, in its investigation of President Kennedy's murder, the House Assassinations Committee says it plans to subpoena dozens of mobsters, mercenaries and anti-Castro Cubans.

The committee already has questioned the first of them, soldier of fortune Loran Hall, who several times claimed he was offered $50,000 to kill Kennedy. Hall also was involved in confusing and contradictory reports about Lee Harvey Oswald's supposed association with anti-Castro Cubans

The Warren Commission, which conducted the initial and until now only maor government inquiry into the murder, decided it was Oswald, acting alone, who killed Kennedy in Dallas on Nov. 22, 1963.

The committee also is investigating whether the FBI's admitted activities against King are linked in any manner to the assassination of the civil rights leader, a congressional source disclosed last week.

King was shot to death by a sniper in Memphis, Tenn., on April 4, 1968, and James Earl Ray was convicted of the slaying. The congressional source said the possibility that FBI harassment of King might have had something to do with his death led the House committee to move immediately to subpoena the files of William C. Sullivan, an FBI official killed in a hunting accident in New Hampshire two weeks ago.

Sullivan had been the No. 3 man in the FBI and he ran Cointelpro, the agency program aimed at discrediting King and others considered by the FBI to be political radicals.

Meanwhile, a subcommittee has been holding secret hearings on the Warren Commission's investigation, looking particularly into the question of whether the FBI. CIA and other agencies cooperated fully with the commission at the time of its investigation.

Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., chairman of the subcommittee, says the hearings have not yet produced the answer to that question.

He said witnesses at the hearings included present and former FBI and CIA employees and former Warren Commission staff members. Those developments are among the few to become public since last June when the assassinations committee imposed a near total news blackout on its $2.5 million inquiry.

The committee imposed the blackout at least partly to try to restore its credibility following efforts to build interest in its work by publicizing the investigation's most sensational possibilities.

When it was formed, the committee was told to "conduct a full and complete" investigation of both the Kennedy and King murders and as investigators understand that, it means they are to try to resolve the lingering question of whether the assassinations were conspiracies and whether federal investigators held back or distorted information on either of them.

As for their investigation so far, committee members and staff employees refuse to give any indication whether present evidence suggests the murders of elther man were the result of a conspiracy. Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, chairman of the assassinations panel, had to reveal his plan to parade underworld figures through his committee room in order to get House approval to grant some witnesses immunity so they would talk.

Stokes told the House he needed to be able to assure immunity from prosecution particularly for mobsters and soldiers of fortune. Those were the people, he said, whose testimony was essential for investigating "allegations of conspir-

He said the committee might need to grant immunity to 150 witnesses in the Kennedy assassination alone but sources say the committee probably will not have time to call that many

The major conspiracy theories the committee was investigating before the news blackout was imposed are these:

- Anti-Castro Cubans conspired to assassinate President Kennedy because he refused to commit U.S. military airplanes for the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion, and because the Cubans felt he stood in the way of any new effort to wrestle Cuba from Fidel Castro.

- Organized crime conspired to assassinate Kennedy because he and his brother, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, were campaigning against crim-inal organizations and had jailed then-Teamster boss Jimmy Hoffa. The Warren Commission, in deciding Oswald acted alone, discounted some of the same information on which those theories are based. Loran Hall led the Warren Commission away from testimony that placed Os-wald with two anti-Castro Cubans two months before the Kennedy assassina-tion. Hall said he was there with the Cubans and that the one who other wit-nesses described as Oswald only looked like Oswald. But later Hall changed his mind and said he was not there at all, leaving open the possibility that Oswald was in fact seen meeting with the anti-Castro Cubans before the murder.

Hall also has said in at least four interviews in which details varied that Texas businessmen offered him $50,000 to kill Kennedy. The committee's investigation of the King assassination appears to be focused now on physical evidence to establish if James Earl Ray killed King and if there were any conspirators.

Ray pleaded guilty to the murder and was sentenced to 99 years in prison. But he has claimed ever since that he was set up to take the blame and did not kill King.

The committee apparently has already conducted its own ballistics tests to try to determine if Ray's rifle killed King, even though the FBI had said the bullet was too badly damaged to prove that. Jack Kershaw, who was Ray's lawyer, said the committee has new information. But he said he does not think it has answered the questions of Ray's involvement and whether there was a conspiracy.

Some critics say conspiracy theories can never be put to rest and a few say they certainly can't be put to rest by the House committee. The committee's credibility suffered at the beginning because of a series of internal controversies. The panel's image also was damaged when a transcript, accidentally made public, showed members were deliberately publicizing sensational elements of the investigation in an effort to keep the House from scrapping the committee.

The near total news blackout was clearly imposed last June partly in an effort to halt almost daily public embarrassments. The blackout accomplished that abruptly.

emen's Str For British No End In Sight

LONDON (AP) - Two more elderly fire victims died in Britain Saturday, the sixth day of a national firemen's strike. There was no end to the walkout in sight. The deaths brought to 17 the number killed in fires since the country's 33,000 full-time firemen went on strike last Monday morning. Government officials declined to place the blame on the striking firefighters, as the victims probably would have died anyway. The latest victims were an 89-year-old woman found dead in bed in her smokefilled house at Willerby, near the northeast England port of Hull, and a 68-yearold man who died in a fire at his cottage in Argyllshire, Scotland

Police said that in both cases the victims lived in isolated communities and were dead before firefighters could arrive.

Volunteer firemen and 9,500 soldiers, airmen, marines and seamen tried to fill the breach by tackling fires wherever they broke out.

Seventy-two soldiers have been hurt battling fires in the first week of the

ing a major blaze which badly damaged a power station at Tilbury, along the River Thames east of Londor

The firemen demand a 30 percent wage hike. The government has refused because the raise would violate its anti-inflation program limiting pay increases to land to a mass meeting addressed by Bill Craig, the leader of the Fire Brigades UnHe said: "It appears that everyone in Britain has got the message except the government. We are not going back until we get what we want."

Salvation Army Begins Appeal

Christmas bells will start ringing in Lubbock this Friday as the Salvation Army begins its annual Christmas appeal.

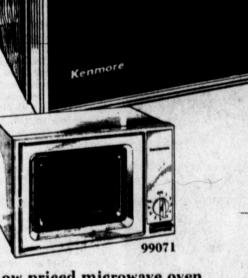

The bell ringers collect money to provide food and toys for needy families in the Lubbock area. A remembrance is also given to patients in convalescent homes and in hospitals.

Last year 900 food orders were given and distributed by the Salvation Army, which also works with the U.S. Marine Corps reserve project, "Toys for Tots." The United Way Christmas clearance provides a central clearinghouse for nee-dy families, a process which avoids duplications.

This year the goal is $30,000, and volunteers are requested to man the stands. The kettle stands will be at the Main Post Office, Gibson's at 50th and Slide, Gibson's at 50th and Ave. H, Woolco, Hemphill-Wells stores, East Mall, Furr's Cafeterias, South Plains Mall, Dillards, Sears, and J.C. Penney. The campaign will close Christmas Eve at 2 p.m.

Lubbock Inn Robbed By Two Bandits; Police Seek Attacker

Lubbock police detectives were seeking two, ski-masked bandits Saturday who held up the Lubbock Inn at 3901 19th St., about 4 a.m. and fled with more than $3,-

Desk clerk Garry Pat Pruitt, 20, said the men entered through a rear door, ordered him and another motel employee, 17-year-old Donnie Jay Herod, to lie face down behind the desk, then tied both men with electrical tape.

The two bandits, believed to have been in their late teens and wearing green ski masks, made off with $2,315 in cash and $932 in traveler's checks, employees said. One of the men reportedly held a shotgun on the motel employees while another raked receipts into a newspaper carrier's bag.

After cleaning out the registers and gathering up the checks, the men reportedly fled through the rear door.

Herod, who freed himself moments later, said he ran to the back door and saw the men leaving in a four-door green vehicle, possibly a 1968 or 1970 Chevrolet. The car's license plate light reportedly was out.

Both suspects were about medium height, witnesses said, and one wore a tan coat, faded blue jeans and black leather gloves

Meanwhile, police were seeking another young man of medium height, who allegedly attempted to rape a 17-year-old woman Saturday near her South Lubbock home.

The victim said the suspect had pulled alongside her car near 50th Street and University, but she had lost the man and his vehicle after that.

Minutes later, as she arrived in front of her home in far South Lubbock, the woman said she climbed from her car and heard someone ask for an address. As she turned around to face the man, the woman told police the suspect grabbed her pants and attempted to rip them down. In the process, the victim said, several buttons were snapped loose and a zipper was torn.

About that time, however, the victim's mother reportedly appeared at the door and yelled at the suspect, who fled on foot to the southwest.

The victim said the man escaped at high speed in in a dark gray pickup. A 67-year-old retired, Lubbock man told police a young, black man tried to run over him with his car Friday in a parking lot at a convenience store at 4th Street and Avenue E. The victim said as he walked across the lot, the man began backing his vehicle up and accidentally struck the pedestrian in the knee. Advised to watch out where he was going, the suspect reportedly yelled at the victim that he'd better watch out or he'd get run over.

With that, the victim told police, the man hit him again - in both knees this time. The victim did not require medical attention, reports indicated.

In a spate of television burglaries, several Lubbockites reportedly lost expensive sets as the week ended.

Reporting stolen sets Friday were Isabel Gonzales of 408 Ave. F. Mary Wogan of 3719-B 53rd St., Juan Sanchez of 3223 Erksine St. and Mrs. J. C. Dubose of 504

N. Flint Ave. Rena Newton of 2720 E. Colgate St. said someone also took her television set Thursday or Friday, in addition to a record player and sewing machine. The goods were valued at $295, she said.

A lone suspect reportedly broke through the door of S & Q Clothiers, 1112 Broadway, Friday and fled with an armload of clothes. However, an alert policeman and several witnesses caused the young man's plans to go awry. Though the suspect escaped on foot, police recovered all the stolen clothing from a dumpster in a nearby alley. But store personnel estimated damage to a front door at $200. Thieves reportedly stole about 40 yards $300 worth — of blue carpet from a business at 2215 47th St. Thursday or Friday and $400 worth of tools were taken from a sprinkler system outlet at 5501 Amherst St. Nov. 10, reports filed Saturday indicated.

Rena Gist of 1102 58th St. said someone stole her CB radio and tape deck Friday and Johnny Vera of 400 Cedar Ave. reported the theft of his $500 citizen's band radio.

Daniel Paiz of Morton said someone entered his room at a motel at 2401 4th St. Friday and took $130 in cash

Coed College Plans To Phase Out Males

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - Lone Mountain College, a one-time women's school which had joined a national trend toward coeducation, will start phasing men out again next fall.

"It all involves a major change psychologically to provide a situation where women can have the chance to be competitive without worrying what young men think of them," said Joan Barr, vice president for corporate planning and development at the college.

The 100 or so male undergraduates currently enrolled will be allowed to finish their studies at the 350-student campus perched on a hill in the heart of the city, Miss Barr told a news conference Friday

But no new male undergaduates will be admitted to the regular four-year degree program, and the school will eventually be renamed the Lone Mountain College for Women. Men will still be welcome in master's degree and creative

Lone Mountain had broken a 70-year tradition in 1968 by admitting male students to its undergraduate program. Many other formerly one-sex colleges, including the prestigious all-male Yale in New Haven, Conn., and all-female Vassar in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., have gone coed in recent years.

Miss Barr said the college will seek to "address the new roles women are going to be playing, and are indeed playing, in the business and corporate world.

It will not be "designed for career preparation per se, but will encourage women to become well-rounded in the sciences, liberal arts, mathematics and the various areas considered men's domain.'

The school, which was formerly affiliated with the Roman Catholic Society of the Sacred Heart, now considers itself non-denominational. "But we continue the Catholic heritage," Miss Barr said.

Tuition - currently $2,700 - will go up next year, she said, but the amount has not been determined.

Court-Martial Slated For Drill Instructor

SAN DIEGO (AP) - The commander of the Marine Corps Recruit Depot has ordered a general court-martial to begin for a drill instructor accused of setting fire to a recruit.

Trial for Sgt. John B. Norris, 22, of San Bernardino, was delayed this week when Norris' defense attorney protested he was denied access to a government witness in Boulder, Colo.

After reviewing the findings, Brig. Gen. James Day, the depot commander, ordered the court-martial to begin.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-A-13 Governor Values Privacy Despite Public Life

AUSTIN (AP) — Often times, in public, Gov. Dolph Briscoe grimaces as if he were in pain. It is the reaction of a private man to public life. But here he is at 54, a rancher and banker worth maybe $50 million, driving around Texas, his wife Janey at his side, hustling votes, buoyed by applause and stung by harsh jokes.

Neighbors say his daddy, Dolph Sr., a Uvalde merchant and rancher, always wanted his son to be governor. Briscoe's tireless 18-hour campaign days indicated, however, that more than a father's dream prompted him.

Fourth among 10 candidates in the 1968 Democratic primary, Briscoe, despite eight years in the state House of Representatives, was described as Texas' first successful political amateur in 30 years when he beat the pros in 1972.

He got into office without a majority vote after the Sharpstown bank scandal wiped away some of the competition. Surprisingly, he proclaimed that politics is not a game for the rich.

Two years later he managed to stay afloat although the Republicans tried to tie George McGovern — an unpopular presidential candidate — around his neck. With a guarantee of six years in office, the man who said in 1972 he didn't think he wanted to spend the rest of his life in office, now asks for another four years.

No Texan has ever been governor for 10 years; Allan Shivers holds the record at 71/2 years. What makes Dolph run?

"I've enjoyed the job," he has said. "It's a lot of fun." Observers doubt that, however, when they hear his nervous laugh or notice his grip tightening on the podium. He is in the most public of Texas political offices, yet he has reclusive tendencies, retreating to his Uvalde ranch for days at a time. At receptions, if Janey should stray, he will guide her back by touching her elbow, apparently feeling more comfortable with her in on the conversation.

Janey's constant presence has led to a spate of remarks about "Goy. and Mr. Briscoe.

"I do no work at all that's political," Janey once told a reporter. Want to be governor about like I want to be the first ape on the moon."

Their relationship, however, is another of the seeming Briscoe paradoxes. Supporters, for example, cite Briscoe's personal integrity as the quality that most appeals to voters, yet he steadfastly refuses to give the public a picture of his wealth. He puts in his financial report only what is required by law of public officials.

"I think some things are a private matter and should remain a private matter," he says. He has abruptly cut off news conferences when the questions turn to his finances.

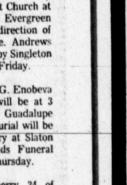

Briscoe is shy, yet he loosens up while campaigning and, according to Rep. Mick-ey Leland, once did the "head wiggle (dance)" in a black section of Houston. He apparently will don any hat that is offered him for a photograph, although most are unflattering.

Liberals assail him, but he passed party loyalty tests by supporting Adlai Steven-son in 1952 and McGovern 20 years later. Although he is a lifelong Democrat, Republicans have cheered his legislative goals, with one exclaiming during the 1977 Legislature, "We've got a Republican in goals, with one exchanning during the 1977 Legislature, we ve got a reepublican in Democrat's clothing." Mexican-Americans have accused him of being insensitive to their needs and he kept the Mexican consul waiting four months for an appointment, yet he has not been hesitant to appoint Mexican-Americans to state jobs. Janey's personal secre-tary is Maria Gonzales.

Briscoe held his tongue for months on something as important as a proposed new state constitution, yet supports controversial appointees with what one reporter termed "determined ferocity."

BREAKFAST WITH THE 38TH PRESIDENT - Marian Blake and former President Gerald Ford lead the way into the 22nd Street Blake home Saturday for a private session Ford held here with area supporters and Republican leaders. Following, from left, are Robert Blake, Ford's Lubbock County campaign chairman last year; Susan Jones and her husband Jerry, former

Ford assistant who hosted the breakfast; Richard Winnecamp, a Ford aide; two unidentified Secret Service agents and, finally, Warner Brown, Secret Service agent assigned to Lubbock. Major Concerns Expressed By Ford At Breakfast With Supporters Here

By PAT PATRICK Avalanche-Journal Staff

Former President Gerald Ford had three big worries on his mind - Euro-Communism, the growth of government bureaucracy and a possible recession when he met here Saturday with area supporters and Republican leaders.

Guests at a private breakfast session with Ford said he told them he feels:

•Euro-Communism is a "much more serious threat than is generally acknowledged" and that the United States must be "firm" with its NATO allies on the subject of communism.

•The growth of government bureaucracy, and concommitant federal spending, is "clearly a threat to the present American system" and that a "thorough housecleaning" in Congress may be the only way to break the bureaucratic spiral.

•Carter's tax reform and reduction policies are "misguided" and that an "immediate and sizeable" tax cut must be passed quickly to regenerate business confidence in the economy.

Friday, in a speech at the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce annual banquet, Ford called for a $25 billion tax cut, in this session of Congress, to spur the economy

Saturday he elaborated on the theme, breakfast guests said.

They said he noted that while the Lubbock area is enjoying boom days, other parts of the country are teetering on the prink of a recession - at least partially ecause businessmen do not kn

They said the former president worried along these lines:

That if Congress does not act now on a tax cut, the economy could begin to falter, bringing on a recession, followed by a political reaction next year that would be bad for the country. The liberal Democrats in control of Congress could hit the spending switch in an effort to prop up the economy just before election time, bringing on more inflation, bureaucratic entanglements and federal interference in private lives, they said Ford fears.

The former president warned the group the United States must not be lulled into thinking that "Euro-Communism is not a threat," sources said.

They said he told them:

"It is in the United States' interest to be firm with our allies in telling them what we will do if Communists gain control of NATO governments - and that is, that it will be difficult for the United States to continue the same military relationship with Communist-controlled NA-TO countries."

"President Carter is telling us we should not interfere in our allies' internal affairs, that we should just let them alone," one breakfast guest said later.

"Well, Mr. Ford said there is a difference in telling them what they should do, and in telling them what we will do if they vote in Communist governments. "His counsel was that we have to be firm," the guest related. Guests said discussion of bureaucratic growth was spawned by their complaints to Ford about local problems with government agencies - in particular, by what the citizens called Justice Department "interference" in new school construction and city land annexation here. Ford said he had learned during his two years in the Oval Office that no matter how much the President may want to cut down on bureaucracy it cannot be done without the cooperation of Congress, persons at the meeting said. They said he told them the bureaucratic growth spiral will not be broken "until voters force the Congress to change the trend, or until Congress itself is changed." "It would be very difficult for a Repub-

a Republican Congress," they said Ford

Ford predicted Social Security funding problems will not be handled properly, guests recalled.

They said he expressed concern that liberal Democrats may borrow from the general fund to make up the Social Security monetary shortfall and eventually "forgive the loan."

Such tactics would have Social Security ending up as a welfare program, sources said Ford worried.

One guest who has been a sharp critic of turnover of the Panama Canal to Panama said he came away from the breakfast "probably convinced" the plan is okay.

Friday, at a news conference after the banquet, Ford reiterated his support of the turnover treaties, saying they will "strengthen" the foreign policy and leadership of the United States in the Western Hemisphere

"If the treaties are not ratified, pick any one of many scenarios, none of them good," he said then.

The guest said he asked Ford Saturday why the U.S. government would give Panama $50 million a year to take the canal.

The guest said Ford replied the U.S. government is not going to be paying out the money, that it will come in increased tolls

Turning to pure politics, sources said Ford told them of widespread speculation in California that Jimmy Carter will the Egyptian contingent went to bed at about midnight, though some lights still burned in the 250-room hotel. The only guests were the Egyptian group.

The groundwork for the precedent-shattering meeting of Sadat and Beginwas laid just 10 days earlier when Sadat, in a speech before the Egyptian parliament, made a surprise offer to travel to Israel. Begin quickly accepted and issued a formal invitation

Arab reaction begin building immediately and by Saturday diplomats at Libyan embassies were burning the red, white and black flag shared by Libya, Egypt and Syria. Libya has been among the most virulently anti-Israeli states. Syria's Damascus radio broadcast a call by the radical Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine for guerrillas to launch an all-out attack on Israeli targets.

"Go to Jerusalem tomorrow and burn Al-Aqsa with your bodies," the Front said in a statement. That is the mosque where Sadat is scheduled to worship early today, and where a Palestinian assassinated Jordan's king 26 years ago. Arrival Ceremony Brief

The airport arrival ceremony on the floodlit tarmac was brief and included no public statements. Sadat passed down a line of dignitaries including the whole

Israeli cabinet, members of the diplomatic corps, Arab notables from the occupied West Bank and others.

Among those meeting the Egyptian leader were some of his country's most implacable enemies from the past — Dayan, who was the Israeli military hero of the 1967 Mideast war; for-mer Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, and Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon, the general who turned the tide of the 1973 conflict against Egypt.

Some Israelis in the airport crowd wept.

Sadat also was welcomed by Samuel Lewis, U.S. ambassador to Israel, who was instrumental in arranging the historic visit. Worship To Start Day

Today, the Egyptian president is scheduled to start his day with worship at the Al Aqsa mosque and then visit the Church of the Holy Sepulcher and Yad Vashem, the monument to Jewish victims of Nazism.

The highlight of his visit will be the address to the Knesset at 4 p.m. (8 a.m. CST). He is expected to make the basic Arab calls for Israeli withdrawal from all lands seized in the 1967 war and a homeland for the Palestinians. Begin will follow him to the Knesset rostrum.

Sadat is also scheduled to make a formal call on Katzir and he may hold private talks with Begin.

The Egyptian president, wearing a pale suit, at first appeared stern-faced and uneasy as he walked down the airplane ramp. But he relaxed visibly when Begin met him at the foot of the ramp and the two men talked and laughed together.

Sadat Shakes Hands

As Sadat moved into the waiting crowd shaking hands, Egyp-tian security men stood at his back, sweeping the scene with their eyes.

Sadat and Begin drove to Jerusalem in separate cars, Sadat's an armored limousine loaned by the U.S. Embassy.

Security for the visit was the tightest in Israeli history.

Police sealed off all roads to Jerusalem two hours before Sadat's arrival. And access to Jerusalem from the Israeli-occupied, Arab-populated West Bank of the Jordan River was closed even earlier to prevent possible infilitration of anti-Sadat militants.

The Al-Aqsa mosque was the most serious security problem. In 1951, King Abdullah of Jordan was assassinated there by a Palestinian extremist because, like Sadat, he dared to accept Israel's existence.

The mosque at that time was in Jordanian territory. Israel seized the Old City and the West Bank in the 1967 war.

Sadat Becomes Moderate

Sadat's trip to Israel completes his transformation from a hardliner opposing any diplomatic ties with the Jewish state to an outspoken moderate urging the Arab world to reach a negotiated peace with Israel.

Begin, too, has gone through a dramatic political evolution. For years leader of a right-wing bloc opposed to any concessions to the Arabs, he has as prime minister suddenly brought deputy, Mohammed Riad, resigned in protest of the pres dent's controversial peace initiative.

Saudi Arabia, whose massive grants of aid are crucial to Egypt's sagging economy, opposed Sadat's trip. The royal pal-ace in Jidda said in a statement that "any Arab initiative must emanate from a unified Arab stand."

The militant anti-Israeli regimes of Iraq, Syria and Libya blasted the Sadat mission as treachery to Arab solidarity against Israel, and Palestinians called it "a stab in the back" to the Arab world.

"Sadat is no longer fit to speak in the name of the Palestinian people or the Arab nation," said Farouk Kaddoumi, foreign affairs spokesman of the Palestine Liberation Organization. Yasir Arafat, PLO chief, met with his top military commanders to re-examine policy.

Only Morocco and Sudan - two pro-Egyptian nations without much clout in the Arab League - openly threw their support to Sadat. Egyptian religious leaders also endorsed the

The Soviet Union accused Sadat of playing into the hands of Israeli warmongers and imperialists and warned that his "flirtation" with the Jewish state could lead to another armed conflict in the Middle East.

Sadiq declared as he burned the joint flag of Egypt, Libya and Syria in Nicosia, Cyprus.

Sadiq said Libya would adopt a new flag and would ask the Arab League to expel Egypt and transfer its headquarters from Cairo, its traditional seat and capital of Egypt.

Only Morocco and Sudan voiced support for Sadat. Conserva-tive regimes in the oil-rich Persian Gulf area were largely si-lent, but Saudi Arabia — the major financial backer of Sadat's impoverished country - criticized the voyage as "inconsistent" with the overall Arab stand.

Syria declared an official day of mourning. At mid-day, all traffic in Damascus stopped for five minutes of silence. Flags were lowered to half-staff and bells tolled as they do for the dead, while prayers droned from minarets of mosques. The official Iraqi news agency reported massive anti-Egyp-tian demonstrations in Baghdad and other Iraqi cities. It also said Egyptian students in Iraqi universities occupied the Baghdad offices of the Egyptian airline.

Palestinian refugees burned portraits of Sadat in their camps in Lebanon, and a mass Palestinian demonstration in Beirut heard speeches branding Sadat a traitor and a spy.

Arafat Meets Commander

Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat met with top military commanders to re-examine polic Countless ordinary Arabs huddled by radios to hear news of the Egyptian president's arrival in Israel. Some were opposed and some favored the trip, but all were intrigued. "I'm speechless. My brain just cannot function," said Maissa Nassar, a Lebanese housewife. Palestinians in Lebanon also gathered to listen to the news over Arab radio stations. In a cafe near the Sabra refugee camp shouts of "traitor" erupted from one listening group. Just as Sadat's plane was landing at Tel Aviv, the Voice of Palestine program on Damscus Radio broadcast an order by a Marxist Palestinian guerrilla group for its men to launch an allout attack on Israeli targets today and to prevent the Egyptian president from praying in the Al-Aqsa mosque.

have serious primary opposition in 1980. They said Ford told them the question, Who's going to be the Democratic candidate?" is as lively a topic as the alternate, "Who will be the Republican candidate?'

The California theorizing is sparked largely, they indicated, by Gov. Jerry Brown's consideration of a presidential run.

The former president said he foresees "healthy competition" that he thinks will be "good for the party" when GOP nomination time rolls around guests said. They said he listed as possible GOP candidates:

Former CIA director and Texas congressman George Bush, father of one of the contenders for the 19th District seat Mahon is vacating next year: former Texas Gov. John Connally; Tennessee Sen. Howard Baker; Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, the vice presidential candidate with Ford last year; Illinois Gov. Jim Thompson, and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, defeated by Ford for the 76 GOP presidential nomination.

They said Ford did not "exclude" himself from the list, and referred to himself and Reagan as "sidelines watching" at the moment.

Ford predicted Republicans will win "at least 20 seats" in the House next year, perhaps more if the economy falters, guests said.

They said he also sees a GOP net gain in the Senate in 1978 of at least two seats. bringing the Democratic-GOP makeup there to 60-40.

The former president, clad in a blue blazer and tan pants, appeared relaxed and rested as he waved to reporters and neighborhood children outside the 22nd Street home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Blake.

The breakfast was hosted there by former Ford White House assistant Jerry Jones.

Guests said Ford was "clearly feeling good" and that he was in an "expansive mood, hoping for a victory by his alma mater, the University of Michigan, foot-ball contest with Ohio State.

They said he inquired about the health of Texas Tech University quarterback Rodney Allison.

Guests said they were impressed by the willing "give and take" of a near hourlong question-and-answer session they had with the former president.

And they said there was plenty of light-hearted banter among Ford and his Lubbock friends and supporters.

The breakfast menu included quail, biscuits and gravy, and the longtime Michian congressman jokingly asked as he filled his plate:

"What do I put the gravy on? The quail or the biscuits?"

It was not known whether the visit would bring any tangible breakthrough toward a Middle East peace. But it is seen as a gamble to break the psychological barriers now standing in the way of reconvening a Geneva peace conference before the end of the year.

The visit is full of political risks. At best, he could achieve significant progress toward Geneva. At worst, Egypt will be cut off from an outraged Arab world politically, economically and militarily.

The Egyptian leader left Cairo under fire from most Arab nations and without unified support within his own country. On Friday, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and his

"Go to Jerusalem tomorrow and burn Al-Aosa with your bodies," the radical Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine said in the broadcast.

But in Egypt, the Arab world's most populous nation, newspapers, radio and television called the visit a "historic event" and hope was high that his trip would open the way to lasting peace in the Middle East.

"If other Arab countries want to fight, let them do it," said a low-salaried government employee. "They have oil billions. We are begging. We want to raise our children and live a decent

The buoyant Egyptian mood, however, was tempered by the realization that failure of Sadat's mission could threaten the tenuous truce between Arabs and the Israelis.

Racial Imbalances In Schools Blamed On Shifting Population

whose lack of transportation elsewhere could cause high absenteeism and dropout rates.

Indeed, that notion was of primary consideration when the district two decades ago decided to build a new Dunbar High School in basically the same all-black neighborhood as the original Dunbar site, he said.

School officials at the time realized the need for new Dunbar facilities, and they did not view the Supreme Court's 1954 ruling as a call for the "mandatory action of schools to really mix the area" racial-Williams said.

Faced with the physical barriers, such as railroad tracks and difficult terrain of the city's east side, the district chose to keep Dunbar in the same area to provide "best possible academic opportunities" for black students whose attendance had been a "very serious problem, Williams recalled.

"We had achieved a very significant increase in academic achievement by students of the Negro race in taking the facilities to them" rather than removing a high school from the Dunbar area, he

The same factors were at work in the placement of Iles and Wheatley elementary schools in Lubbock's predominantly black sector, Williams said.

Decades ago, he said, the district may have considered assigning some Whea-tley students to then all-white schools, but this was "probably not given a second thought" because of the unavailability of bus transportation and the barriers a canyon, cemetery and large open areas — surrounding the Wheatley zone. Also, before Struggs Junior High opened as an all-black school in 1965, the district made "several efforts" to find a site that would offer a better racial mix, Williams said.

But the need to serve students close to home and the physical barriers of the east side dictated that the selected Struggs site was the "best solution," he added

The U.S. Justice Department is attempting to prove the Lubbock Independent School District has followed a strategy of racial "containment," in a deliberate effort to keep white and minority students segregated.

The department contends racial discrimination by the district has been so widespread that a comprehensive systernwide remedy - involving, school officials fear, extensive busing for desegregation purposes - is needed

For most of last week, the department's expert witness detailed alleged manipulation of attendance lines, construction and closing of schools and use of bus routes and faculty assignments to perpetuate segregation here.

School attorneys will continue to counter that argument Monday when they call their expert, Dr. James Jonish, chairman and professor in the Texas Tech University economics department, to testify.

After Monday's session, the court will recess until Nov. 28.

Saturday, Williams said there are many factors and variables the Justice Department had overlooked in making its allegations

He said the school system has treated all areas and racial groups in the city the same in planning new schools. Also, Williams said, the district historically has tried to stay ahead of residential development by buying possible school sites early - at a substantial savings.

The district could not have foreseen or controlled the changes that eventually developed in the racial composition of schools, he said.

The Justice Department has said the placement of the eastside Martin Elementary School was an attempt by the school system to contain minorities south of Fourth Street in the early 1960s.

However, Williams said the district felt the area would be developed racially "mixed." When it opened in 1961, Martin's student body was 13 percent white, 75 percent Mexican-American and 12 percent black; the school is now nearly filled with minorities.

In the same way, Williams said, Alderson, Estacado, the 1966 location of Hunt Elementary and the placement of several northside schools were done in hopes of achieving integrated campuses.

But for the most part, whites have now left those areas, leaving the schools filled predominantly with minorities, he said. Williams also said that contrary to the Justice Department's claims, the closing of the old Hunt and Carter elementaries during his tenure were not racially motivated.

The department charges that the schools were closed to prevent the migration of minorities into traditionally white residential areas, creating a buffer zone between racial groups. Williams said Hunt was closed in 1960 because its service area was going heavily commercial and the facility was a fire and safety hazard.

Carter's 1970 closing, which Williams said was recommended at the time by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, was prompted by a sharp drop in enrollment, in part the result of the tornado that wiped out many homes in the Carter zone that year, the former superintendent said.

Catholics Oust Governor

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) - Catholic officials have told Gov. Michael S. Dukakis that he cannot hold a "town meeting" at the parochial Bishop Gerrard High School because of his stand on abortions

The Rev. John F. Moore, director of communications for the Roman Catholic diocese of Fall River, said it was decided to withdraw permission for Monday's scheduled meeting because "the bishop has publicly deplored the position Governor Dukakis has taken with reference to abortion."

He said the decision was made so "all citizens, Catholic and non-Catholic, will understand that the clear and uncompromising position of the Catholic church is pro-life.

His statement referred to Dukakis' vetoes of legislation that would ban use of state and federal money for non-therapeutic abortions.

There was no immediate response from the governor's office.

Schlafly Eyes Senate

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) - Friends of anti-ERA activist and conservative Phyllis Schlafly are circulating nominating petitions in anticipation of a possible bid to challenge Sen. Charles H. Percy in the Republican primary next year, a Schlafly aide says.

Mrs. Schlafly said she is aware of the petition drive but that she is not personally responsible for it. Mrs. Schlafly, 52, said she is considering a primary challenge to Percy on the GOP ticket.

In 1966, Percy confounded pollsters by defeating incum-bent Democrat Paul H. Douglas in a fourth-term bid. Now, some Illinois Democrats think that Percy, 57, who has strong recognition among Illinois voters, may be vulnerable.

The Schlafly petitions are being circulated by Mrs. Harriet Mulqueeny, of Godfrey, who is the voluntary Illinois chairwoman of STOP ERA. The national group was organized by Mrs. Schlafly to fight ratification of the proposed federal Equal Rights Amendment.

Police Nab Musicians

NEW ORLEANS (AP) - Three members of country music star Willie Nelson's entourage, here for a concert that drew 30,000 people Friday night, were arrested for possession of cocaine, police said.

Police said the three, including Nelson's equipment manager, were arrested Thursday at a routine roadblock set up to check drivers licenses and vehicle registrations.

Officers said they confiscated 1.12 grams of unusually high-grade cocaine.

Free on bonds ranging from $3,000 to $5,000 were Kenneth G. Moore, 33; James R. Locke, 29, and Harry G. Montgomery, 27, all apparently from Austin, Texas, police said.

Court Stops Bionic Posters

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A printing firm has been told to stop selling or distributing posters depicting television's 'Bionic Woman,'' Lindsay Wagner, as the "Bio Baby." Superior Court Judge George M. Dell granted an injunction Friday at the request of Universal Studios, which claims sole distribution rights for bionic items relating to the actress.

According to court documents, Trade Printing Co. of Los Angeles was marketing the posters using a photo of Miss Lindsay taken in 1968, long before she gained fame on the ABC-TV show.

Misplaced Pup Delays Flight

ATLANTA (AP) — A flight from Boston to Atlanta carry-ing President Carter's mother was diverted to Baltimore on Saturday after the pilot said a dog in the baggage compartment was in danger because of cold.

Miss Lillian was en route to Georgia after returning from a Friendship Force trip to Ireland.

The Delta flight was on the ground 17 minutes in Baltimore after the pilot told passengers the animal apparently had been placed in the wrong section of the baggage compartment

Miss Lillian, in the first-class section of the aircraft, was unavailable for comment but a stewardess said she took the delay in stride.

Jurist Undergoes Surgery

ROCHESTER, Minn. (AP) — A cancerous prostate gland was removed in an operation on U.S. Supreme Court Asso-ciate Justice Harry A. Blackmun, a Mayo Clinic spokesman confirmed Saturday.

Blackmun, 69, was listed in satisfactory condition in Methodist Hospital "although he is still a little uncomfortable," his wife, Dottie, said Saturday.

Mrs. Blackmun, 66, said doctors felt confident there was virtually no chance of a recurrence of the cancer.

The clinic official said Blackmun agreed to releasing de-tails of the operation and the nature of the cancer, to help avoid speculation, rumor and inaccuracies in reports on his hospitalization.

The operation, lasting about 90 minutes, was described as routine

The action was taken because federal law prohibits any activities that would jeopardize the bald eagles, an endangered species as well as a national symbol.

Most women probably know there are some risks associated with birth control pills, but, if you're trying to decide whether the Pill is for you, you should know as much as possible about it.

There are some risks and side effects of which you should be aware. For example, the FDA has learned that estrogens - one of the ingredients in birth control pills - are associated with a higher incidence of cancer of the uterus.

Although rare, blood clots resulting from birth control pills are another serious side effect. This risk increases with a woman's age. Clots can occur in the lung, in the brain where they can cause strokes, or in the heart, causing heart attacks.

Less serious effects include nausea in some women, tenderness in the breasts, a change in menstrual flow or a change in weight. These reactions to the Pill usually occur within a few days or weeks after starting the Pill. Sometimes, if the side effects are too uncomfortable, the Pill is discontinued. In some instances, switching to a different brand may be the answer

If you're already taking the Pill, you should tell the doctor about any unusual swelling, skin rash, spotty yellow-brown darkening of the skin (particularly of the face,) changes in eyesight, or severe depression.

If you should experience severe head, leg or chest pain, shortness of breath. weakness or numbness of an arm or leg. or blurred vision, stop taking the drug immediately and call the doctor. The decision whether or not to take the Pill is up to you. Ask a doctor for infor-mation and advice, but the final choice is a personal one.

Dr. Joan S. Hyman, an assistant professor at the University of San Francisco, and a female author of school materials. is acutely conscious of the hidden subtleties of sex role stereotypes in our society. She wrote a manuscript, building into it a careful balance of men and women in all types of roles. She invented characters who broke the sex stereotypes in professions and vocational areas. All were woven into stories that helped teach primary school children to read. Surely, a professional woman so aware of our cultural stereotypes would not generate a sexist uscrip

The couple cannot marry until both their ages add up to 50 years, said Gonzalez. Even then, couples are allowed to have only two children, spaced about four years apart. If for some reason one of the children dies, couples are permitted to have a third child.

The family planning clinics are designed to provide contraceptives to all married couples. Every community, no matter how small, has a neighborhood clinic that provides contraceptives, and elemental medical aid.

The majority of women use birth control pills until they reach their quota of children. Then most women have tubal ligations performed under acupuncture. In cases where the husband is away for long periods of time a 'visiting pill' has been divised. Similar to the morning after pill', the 'visiting pill' is taken for five days when the husband is at home, thus protecting the woman against pregnancy without the burden of taking a pill daily. Women who attend family planning clinics get a minimum amount of care. While conditions seem somewhat primitive by our standards, the clinics do provide services that most peasants would not receive otherwise, said Gonzalez.

Minor health problems are handled by a 'barefoot Joctor' who has had training in basic first aid and some knowledge of the symptoms of dangerous diseases. He handles minor problems but knows when to alert a physician. The people of China seem to be satisfied with this lifestyle, and are content to limit their family size. Because peer pressure is so strong, they live with little fear of rape.

But because they are constantly under surveilance of their peers and supervi-sors, there is little opportunity to publicize any disatisfaction.

China is considered the first developing nation to implement a successful family planning program, said Gonzalez. They also have had tremendous results in controlling premarital sex.

Though China's program would be impossible to implement in a democratic nation such as the U.S. in Gonzalez's view he noted that some of China's ideas could work in the U.S.

"We need family planning clinics that are easily available to all women in the community," said Gonzalez. "Currently Lubbock doesn't reach the women who need help the most - the very poor."

While family planning programs and regulation of premarital sex has proven successful, there is one catch, said Gonzalez. "In China it's (family planning) a number one priority and the people fol-low the rules for the good of the nation and not the individual."

I'm not so sure, however, that the rest of the school community is working hard at this task, and I'm fairly convinced that the rest of the culture is certainly not committed to stamping out racial and sex stereotypes that erode our culture."

Just ten years ago, Dr. Hyman notes, in the basal readers our children used, al-, most all the females were housewives, secretaries, teachers and nurses, but in the 70's there began to appear the effects of publishers' efforts to break these stereotypes

Dr. Hyman noted further it is an unfortunate circumstance that unless the rest of the educational community and the rest of the public joins the effort, the new school materials will have little effect on breaking the pattern. Less than one per cent of school budgets is used to purchase new materials as schools continue to use the old materials over and over again

At that rate, it will be another decade or two before there is enough turnover in materials to replace the old.

"How discouraging, indeed," said the doctor, "to think that students spend over 70 per cent of their instructional time with materials that reinforce sex and racial stereotypes. As long as schools move at this rate, they will never catch up with the pressing demands of socie-

When we jewelers buy diamonds for our stock, there are everal things we look for. Most important, even before color and clarity, is how the diamond is proportioned. Nature does the work of creating this splendid jewel; man's role is to properly cut it to release its prismatic fire.

The science of optics provides the basis for the fashioning of a diamond, regardless of whether the final gem is to be a round brilliant or fancy cut. Besides the angle at which the facets are cut, the proportion of the stone above and below the girdle line is of prime importance. If the lower part of the diamond is too deep or too shallow, an undue amount of light will escape from the bottom facets of the stone. This results in a gem showing little fire or brilliance — one that appears somewhat lifeless.

A well-cut diamond, even of a smaller carat weight, will be more brilliant, and therefore look larger, than a stone that is cut with shallow proportons. Some of the older diamonds often were cut with too much gem remaining below the girdle line, and these, when recut under modern methods, gain greatly in beauty and value.

When buying any diamond, be sure to patronize a jeweler who has had professional training in diamond grading. The American Gem Society title is your assur-ance of this knowledge. The un-trained jeweler may be as much in the dark about what consti-tutes a well-cut stone as the pertutes a well-cut stone as the person to whom he is trying to sell it. The scintillating fire and spar-kle is what makes a diamond so special. Unless your stone is cor-rectly cut, you will miss the dia-mond's matchless beauty and

I have my bags packed and am ready to take off for a weekend with my family over the Thanksgiving holidays. Every time I think of Thanksgiving dinner, my mouth begins to water at the thought of turkey, pumpkin pie, mashed potatoes, gravy and Mom's traditional bread stuffing. Yum!

Ingredients for turkey stuffings for holiday meals are endless, and even though, like my family, most families have preferences, you might enjoy a little variety this year.

Begin with cornbread, white bread or rice, Then add mushrooms, celery, parsley, chestnuts, cranberries, oysters, sausage, onions or nuts. Top with seasonings of thyme, sage, rosemary, celery seed, or poultry-seasoned herbs. Then your delicious stuffing is ready to cook.

TO MAKE STUFFING Bread, the main ingredient of many stuffings, should be two or three days old. Sometimes when we're in a hurry or don't have enough old bread saved, we'll toast bread and break it into pieces. A one-pound loaf of white bread will make about eight cups of crumbs. You can figure on one cup of stuffing for each pound of dressed bird.

turkey can be safe to eat. Stuffing should be placed inside the turkey cavity just prior to roasting. Never hold a stuffed turkey at room temperature or in the refrigerator. Remember the roasting time will be longer to reach the desired 180 degrees F. in a stuffed turkey.

After serving, remove the remaining stuffing from the cavity before storing in the refrigerator or freezer.

You can still bake a dish of stuffing alongside the roasting unstuffed turkey. Our family really likes the stuffing, so we always make an extra amount.

If you decide to stuff a turkey, rinse the bird well and pat dry. It is easier to stuff the neck cavity first. You might consider using two different stuffings - one for the neck and one for the body. Always pack stuffing loosely. Stuffing swells with the turkey juices during roasting. Always skewer or sew the cavity closed. Personally, I prefer to sew the turkey. Allow about one hour at 350 degrees F. to bake a side dish of stuffing.

directions. Melt butter or margarine in small skillet; cook onion until soft. Drain and chop mushrooms. Combine cooked wild rice mixture, onion, mushrooms and parsley; mix well. Stuff lightly into neck cavity of 16 to 18 pound turkey.

My best wishes for a great Thanksgiving to you and your family. Let's all try to be thankful this year for all the little things we've been blessed with. It will make you realize just how fortunate you are. Oh, by the way, have an extra spoonful of stuffing for me

New Fashions: 'Warmed-Over Winter

NEW YORK (UPI) - The pale colors and silky fabrics for spring and summer 1978 are glorious, but many of the styles look like warmed-over wint Dirndls and other bulky skirts, pe-lums, voluminous blousons and ruffles were everywhere as the American Designers Group began its semi-annual showings Monday for visiting fashion reporters from all over the United States.

Gossamer silks, cotton voiles and feath-Gossamer silks, cotton voiles and feath-erweight wools do not lighten the look enough to flatter the average figure. Even willowy models manage to look frumpy in mid-calf length skirts, a strong trend for daywear. Flowered and border prints are strong notes for spring, particularly lovely in vi-olet, silvery grays and apricot. The color surprises are chocolate, dark red and plum. They appear springlike in lightweight fabrics. Peter Pan collars are back in a big way.

New Book Has Tips For Meat Value, Safety

By JEANNE LESEM UPI Family Editor It is, to coin a spelling, a Blochbuster, one of the most important food books of recent memory. "The Meat Board Meat Book," by Barbara Bloch, with the National Live Stock and Meat Board, should be required reading in any household concerned with good value, good taste and safety. In most households, meat accounts for the largest part of the food budget. Yet, hundreds of consumers remain confused by names of cuts and what types of recipes they are appropriate for. Storage is another problem: how long can you safely hold cooked, ground meat in the refrigerator? The freezer? How should you wrap it?

What is safe storage time for frozen meat that has been thawed and cooked? Can you refreeze it safely?

How can you identify misleading advertising? Or rip-off artists among mer-chants who sell in bulk to retail customers?

All these questions and hundreds more about buying, storing, cooking, carving, seasoning and health and nutrition are answered in straightforward language. Color illustrations show exactly what each cut looks like. They are accompa-nied by descriptions, recommended cooking methods and a variety of names recommended by the meat industry. Until a few years ago, many meat cuts had confusing names - some regional, some local, some simply the whim of a meat market manager. The meat book's aUthor is a teacher, lecturer, wife and mother with a healthy interest in consumerism. It shows in such statements as:

- "Research equipment before you buy." Spend an afternoon window shop-ping in appliance, department and hard ware stores and specialty shops to "get a good overview of what is available, how well it is made and what it costs."

- Overcooked pot roasts will fall apart when carved no matter how good your carving knife.

- Well-seared oven roasts can behard to carve because of that luscious brown crust.

10-E-LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977 Injuries, Guilt, Clandestine Love Mark World Of Daytime Dramas

By JON-MICHAEL REED

ALL MY CHILDREN: After a visit from Maureen, Mark's mother, Ellen realized she loved Mark. Phoebe started serving her weekend jail term for drun-ken driving. Ruth didn't agree with Joe's refusal to pay Ray for adoption rights to Tad. Claudette assured Nick she wanted to keep her job after Erica told him Claudette was still on parole. Benny kept Bil-ly Clyde from telling Phoebe about Don-na's operation. Chuck decided Donna actually may be pregnant. Little Phil ac-cused Phil of not having time for him and said his real father would. David and Christina considered kidnapping Dottie. To incriminate Claudette, Erica asked Benny to get her some marijuana.

ANOTHER WORLD: Mac returned to learn Regine was pregnant and Sven told Mac he was the father. Mac finally agreed to sign Rachel's separation agree-ment when Rachel threatened to drag Regine into court if necessary. Regine wanted to tell Rachel the truth about Regine's baby. Alice and Ray argued over the disposition of Gordon Enterprises while Willis told Angie he realized he's in love with Alice and Angie. Olive agreed to hear Clyde's plan to get rid of John when Evan threatened to leave her. Charlie Hobson jogged Ada's memory of

Gil when he brought a gift for Nancy. AS THE WORLD TURNS: Lisa was shocked when Grant wanted time to think about a reconciliation. Grant later told Valerie he didn't know why he was hesitant about returning to Lisa. Alex and Dan clashed over hospital procedure. John had a setback and Mary went to see him. Jane found it difficult not to interfere when she learned Beau and Annie were having financial difficulties. Mark told Susan that he's in love with her. Natalle was upset when she saw the baby things Carol had bought while Jay encouraged Carol by taking an interest in the baby

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Don and Marlene argued over Samantha after Don had her arrested and returned to Salem. Samantha was later released into her parent's custody. Phyllis told Neil and Mary she was taking an extended trip abroad. Neil began drinking heavily after Phyllis left. Tom, who wants to return to work, was shocked when Bill told him he felt Dr. Griffin would not be willing to give up Tom's old job easily. Jean ran out on Fred after an unsuccessful attempt at reconciliation and Fred tumbled down a flight of stairs while going after her. Dr. Griffin confessed to Marie that he operates promptly because his wife died when surgery wasn't done in time. David wasn't happy that Trish invited Toni to stay with them

THE DOCTORS: Steve and Carolee were married. Tom admitted to M.J. that he hit Ricky. Sara brought Luke back home and he offered his interest in Andre's to Doreen in order to repay Eleanor's loan. Greta was upset at hearing Kyle and Maggie discussing their brief affair. Kyle told Doreen his marital troubles. Eleanor made the decision to leave town.

THE EDGE OF NICHT: While in a restaurant Geraldine and Tony witnessed Raven kissing Logan. Mike questioned Laurie to learn when she last saw Adam alive. Miles offered old college chum Dr. David Roper a job at the sanitorium.

her Hollywood offer and decided to keep her baby. Lesley was upset to learn Laura didn't stay with the Taylors while she and Rick honeymooned. Scotty was angry when Laura showed an interest in George Allison, a patient at the hospital. Lana faked an emergency to get Jeff to her apartment. Dorrie accused David of taking the easy way out by accepting Rick's hospitality. Mark was rewarded with a kiss when he told Kate he wanted to consult a specialist before making a decision to operate on Lamont.

GUIDING LIGHT: Rita tumbled down a flight of stairs while Georgene watched unobserved. Eve learned she has an 80 per cent chance of going blind. She didn't tell Ben the truth about the disease, however. Mark will be honored as Man of the Year by the Chamber of Commerce, and Bill decided to stay to see the ceremony. Ed is more sympathetic toward Roger since learning Roger is infertile but said Holly must see what role Roger will have in her and Christina's lives. Jackie was thrilled to see Phillip. LOVE OF LIFE: Meg offered Rick the money to buy out Arlene's interest in Beaver Ridge. Charles insisted to Van that Felicia's baby is his only reason for living. Mia gave Ben's manuscript to a publisher and Ben surprised himself by asking Mia out. Bruce must return to New York for his test results. Dory felt Arlene wasn't given a fair shake by the press. Arlene unsuccessfully tried to discourage Tom's attentions. Cal asked Rick to escort her to a costume hall.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Karen had a case of the guilts after going to bed with a stranger in return for an expensive dress she wanted. Richard saved Becky from Clint's attempted rape in the nick of time. Edwina gloated when Dorian appointed her instead of Richard as Paul's assistant. Brian told Pat he hated her after he saw Pat and Tony in an embrace.

Lana returned to work and tried to or-ganize her life. Will told Jenny and Brad he felt they were making a mistake by wanting to rush into marriage. Samantha was surprised to learn Tony respected Will's advice.

RYAN'S HOPE: Still locked in the store room, Jack and Mary talked about Ryan and found they were less hostile towards each other. Dee, who's being released from the hospital, confessed to her doctor that she faked her breakdown. Jill became jealous of Rae's interest in Frank while Rae feared a hospital strike would endanger Bill's life. Roger sus-pected Alicia knew Dee lied about her miscarriage. Tom regretted helping bring Mary and Jack back together.

CANCER ANSWER LINE

A man in his 20's writes: "I intend to do a lot of underwater snorkeling and diving on my vacation in the Bahamas, and a friend says that I can get sunburned under the water. Is that true?"

ANSWERline: Yes. The sun's rays can search you out - even three feet under water. Since the skin can be damaged by the sun's ultraviolet rays, and most skin cancer is sun-related, it's important for you to be extra cautious under the strong Caribbean sun. A sunscreen lotion containing PABA (para-aminobenzoic acid) protects the skin and permits gradual tanning. But, it must be reapplied when your sun exposure includes swimming. Lifeguards often use zinc oxide, a thick white ointment to totally block out the sun's ultraviolet rays. If you are floating on the water's surface to snorkel, this kind of ointment might help protect the back of your neck. The American Cancer Society Unit in your community has an informative new pamphlet called, "Sense in the Sun." It is yours free for the asking

A woman writes: "A close friend recently died of a rare form of cancer which they say began because of some shipyard work he did in World War II. Is that possible? Also, could you tell me what's being done today to protect workers?"

ANSWERline: During the Second World War, some shipyard workers breathed in asbestos fibers while at work. Scientists have since identified the substance as a cancer hazard. For example, the American Cancer Society and the Environmental Science Laboratory at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City, have done significant research on this problem. But, because of a hazard that wasn't known 30 years ago, some of those former shipyard workers have been dying of mesothelioma, a rare form of cancer. Industrially-related cancer is being widely discussed and studied today and the American Cancer Society, unions, and regulatory agencies, and the National Cancer Institute are seeking to protect both workers and the general public. Alert consumers have to help by making sure that any controls that evolve are enforced in their own workplaces.

A concerned wife writes: "My husband has always had a sprinkling of small brown moles on his right shoulder. But now I notice either a new large one, or maybe it's just one that's grown bigger. Is that a warning signal of cancer?"

ANSWERline: You can help yourself and your husband by suggesting that he see a physician. Then follow up by making sure that he does. Probably this mole is nothing to be alarmed about, but only a physician can make an actual diagnosis. For peace of mind, to say nothing of

BACH

SINGERS PERFORM TUESDAY - The Lubbock Civic Chorale, directed by Jeff Berta, presents its annual fall concert at 8 p.m. Tuesday in St. Paul's On The Plains Church, 1510 Ave. X. Bob Covington, a tenor member of the chorale, holds a copy of Bach's Motet I which will be featured at the concert. The Motet, one of six written by Bach, is an antiphonal chorale composition on a sacred text. The title is "Sing Ye To The Lord." Approximately 40 men and women will perform. Adults interested in joining and performing with the Civic Chorale in concerts planned for the future may telephone the director at 799-1312. The Tuesday concert is open to the public. DALLAS (AP) - Put four black, bald mannequins outfitted in 'punk" fashion amid a setting of high and low-class garbage into the window of a prestigious department store, and what do you have? You have troubles, that's what you have. Perry Bentley did just that for Neiman-Marcus' downtown Dallas store last month.

The mannequins were outfitted in the fashion imported from England - an intentionally disreputable look that features tattered garb adorned with ornaments like safety pins and razor blades. Dallas store officials call the image

tives arrived in Washington to open a new store there.

"I received a call at the airport," said N-M senior vice president Thomas Alexander. "The store director was notified and perhaps a call was put in to Dick Marcus in Washington. Clearly, we'd never put a window in that would offend anyone. In this case ... it just got in without anybody seeing it."

The display was removed.

ART COLLECTION PRIDE OF DIVISION - The graphics owned by the Women's Division of the Lubbock Chamber are often loaned to qualifying businesses and associations. From

There are over 600 women who belong to the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, some of whom are business members and others who are members of the Women's Division of the Chamber.

One of the annual functions of the Women's Division is to honor the wives of military personnel of Reese Air Force Base at a 'Military Wives Coffee.' This event is an opportunity for Lubbock women to become acquainted with our city's good neighbors, the RAFB residents.

There exists also a Hostess Committee, a group of about 50 members of the Women's Division who spend many hours in service to the Chamber of Commerce. They serve as official hostesses in welcoming dignitaries and assist in ribbon cuttings for important events and 'red carpet' welcomes to groups visiting the city.

These women spend additional time conducting tours for groups which are visiting. Some of those tours include viewing church windows, telling the story of cotton and other farm products, visiting cotton gins, oil mills, compress warehouses and marketing associations.

A general Lubbock tour is designed to meet the wishes of any touring group and includes a shopping tour for out-of-town visitors. The tours are conducted for any group of 25 or more persons.

The Women's Division owns an extensive art collection containing some 65 pieces, primarily graphics. The collections contains two parts: the Indian Collection which includes the works of John James Audubon, George Catlin and other well known 19th century artists.

The Cowboy Collection has works by Frederic Remington and Thomas Hart Benton as well as such contemporary artists as Alexander Hogue, Peter Hurd and Justin Wells. Portions of each of the collections are currently hanging in the executive offices of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. At various times they have been displayed on loan to The Museum of Texas Tech University and the United Bank of Denver, Colo, Advisors in the acquisition of the collections were Eugene Kingman and John Meigs. The Women's Division also sponsors tours that visit such places as the Santa Fe Opera in Santa Fe, N.M., the Texas Folklife Festival in San Antonio, "Texas" in Palo Duro Canyon, "Fandangle" in Albany and the Globe Theater in Odessa. The Women's Division is governed by a 12 member board of directors elected by the membership. The board sets the programs based on suggestions from the membership. The organization was founded in 1967 under the guidance of the then Chamber President Lennis Baker and executive vice president John Logan. Mrs. Hurley Carpenter served as charter president of the division. Membership in the Women's Division is open to all women in the Lubbock area who are interested in becoming involved in community affairs. Further information may be obtained by telephoning the Chamber of Commerce, 763-4666.

'Problem Children' Learn In Special Class

By JANICE JARVIS Family News Staff At Overton Elementary School, Beverly Gillen's class of six to eight-year-oldsteeter-totters on the edge of two extremes. Some of her students are hyperactive, bursting into activities throughout the day. Others want nothing more than to sleep the day away.

The students' behavior all have different patterns, but they share a common problem - behavior disorders have practically barred these children from traditional classrooms.

"This kind of student has difficulty functioning in a normal classroom such a child disrupts a class quickly ." noted Miss Gillen." Other students are so withdrawn they may move from grade to grade with an undetected problem, until one day they just explode.

It's not just behavior problems that work against such students. They have learning difficulties and are commonly labeled 'trainable mentally retarded.' Academically they function at a level much lower than their age. Socially their behavior is often unacceptable.

Because these children lack social skills, Miss Gillen's class is structured around developing self-help skills. The academic classes are introduced slowly and gradually.

Reinforcement techniques are used to teach acceptable behavior.

Children are rewarded with a raisin or some type of food for a correct response or appropriate behavior.

Unacceptable behavior is corrected by using a 'time-out' room, a small area within the classroom where a child is isolated from activities until his behavior is corrected. When a child refuses to follow directions he is placed in a 'time-out' room and remains there until he quiets down, said Miss Gillen.

Because of the variety of behavior problems of these chidren, the technique isn't successful for every student. Some children learn to correct behavior by 'earning playtime.' If a student follows directions he earns 10 to 15 minutes of playtime. If he doesn't respond correctly he must sacrifice his playtime for an activity he doesn't enjoy, explained Miss Gillen. When these techniques don't get results, she experiments with other strategies."Some of the children want to go to the 'time-out' room so they can get away from classroom work." she said. When she realizes the student is manipulating her, she tries another method. For example, she may physically force the child to do the work even if that means taking his hand and moving the pencil.

Because of the complexity of each child's problem, no one program works for each student, so Miss Gillen tries to work individually with each student.

One of the biggest problems associated with the children is their unwillingness to participate in activities. Many have spent years in various institutions because their behavior indicated they were functioning at a low level. "Often we just don't know how much they can do because they won't try," said the teacher.

She uses stories and question and answer sessions to solicit answers from the children. Often these children prove to be more intelligent than parents and teachers were led to suspect.

Most of the children speak at a voice level lower than normal. Others talk very loudly and some barely whisper. Miss Gillen uses reinforcement techniques to encourage proper response and the stu-dents also get help from a speech pathologist.

Time is allowed for field trips and special activities. Because these children have behavior problems, many have not visited public places. Their teacher introduces them to restaurants, gasoline stations, anything of interest.

Animals often play an important role as a learning experience. Watching a fish swim can supply a child with the emo-tional release he needs, before he explods into frustration, said Miss Gillen. Both music and animals have a calming effect on the hyperactive students, many of whom have, in the past, been heavily sedated by drugs.

The children also learn from each other. Occasionally Miss Gillen allows a student to teach a specific activity. "They can get through to each other quickly and can recognize unacceptable behavior in each other," she said.

There is little evidence to indicate why these behavior problems occur in these children. Miss Gillen considers the cause less important than dealing with the problems that exist now. "I want to get them to the point where they can at least function close to their chronological age levels," she said. She hopes they will someday function independently, but ad-mits there is little chance that any will at-tend college. Most, she added, will probably work at a simple trade . Her immediate goal is to help these students adjust so they can eventually be integrated into traditional classrooms. But progress is slow, and the teacher works at turning every opportunity into a learning experience. Being hyperactive these children have a short attention span and even so simple an academic challenge as counting to tenis difficult for them to grasp.

Then, noted Miss Gillen, "If watching a tree is something they can enjoy that's what I'll let them do - anything they can absorb will help.

Cornell University Housing Specialist Has Suggestions For Easier Home Winterizing

NEW YORK (UPI) — Housing special-ist Alex Rachun, busy this fall telling people how to winterize their homes, advises home owners to tackle the easier work first - walls last.

Rachun, a member of Cornell University's Department of Design and Environ-mental Analysis, is less concerned than most people over widely reported shor-tyges of wall insulation material. He gives priority instead to installing form windows and doors or weathertripping them, and insulating attics, ements and crawl spaces.

"If you don't first eliminate wind peneration of the house, insulation in the valls is worthless," he said while here to onduct adult education workshops on he subject.

He recommends first blocking up the hidden places ... such as the header pace around the top of the foundation

That's more effective than insulating he basement floor and ceiling, said Rahun, who spends six months a year reaching insulation in cooperation with ounty extension offices. It stops cold enetration at the source. It also keeps old air from moving upstairs, keeps the asement warm without too much ener--using heat, and eliminates the expense heat-taping pipes.

"Besides, it's virtually impossible to inlate floors in many basements," Rahun said. "They're going to be damp." He said storm windows range in price rom about 25 cents for the plastic interitype with cardboard frames to about 25 each for triple-track aluminum-frame indows, with many models in between. For outside installation, he prefers indows because aluminum is such a ood heat conductor it will remove heat

For weather stripping, he suggests any-ing from inexpensive felt tacked or staed to window and door frames to vinyl bing or self-stick foam.

For metal-frame casement windows, suggests either self-stick foam on the ames or vinyl or plastic storm windows ung outside - provided the room has a hopper window that can be opened inard for fresh air.

For extra protection at night, Rachun ecommends sheet styrofoam cut to fit nugly inside windows. It can be decorat-d or covered with fabric if you don't like he looks of the styrofoam.

Even window air-conditioners need in-ulating jackets, he said.

Controversy is continuing over the safeof insulation material for wall stud reas, Rachun said. He suggests consumrs who plan to do this job themselves to stick with fiberglass.

Due to the Thanksgiving holiday, all material running Sunday, Nov. 27, will be due in Family News 24 hours earlier than the usual deadlines.

"You can rent a machine that blows in cellulose or other loose-fill type insulation such as rock wool, but they are really for professionals. The machine needs at least two persons to operate.

"It can be very dangerous. The tines on the machine can whip around. You need a good respirator, goggles and heavy clothes.

If you cannot insulate the walls yourself, Rachun said "it might be better to wait a year or two longer until a very effective form of insulation is devised." instead of hiring a contractor, which is very expensive.

For professional installation, he recommends loose-filled, fire-resistant treated cellulose fiber or rock wool.

He said urea formaldehyde can be 'very effective when properly applied or very ineffective when improperly applied

Cold weather can cause shrinkage and prevent proper jelling of this material, he said. If it doesn't jell, noxious fumes remain that are a strong eye irritant.

He also said urea formaldehyde insulation is dated. If its shelf life is exceeded, it won't jell properly and could shrink.

Consumers who choose urea formaldehyde should be sure to get a binding guarantee from the contractor, Rachun said, to protect against shrinkage and fumes. "It should require the contractor to come back and scan the walls with a heat detector for hot and cold spots. Where cold spots register, he should put in more foam to fill the voids.

Rachun said urethane insulation can be even more dangerous.

"It should never be sprayed in a home without a fireretarding ingredient or oth-er fire-retarding material." Urethane is highly flammable material. It also emits a hydrogen cyanide gas that is quickly lethal when breathed."

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-F-5. Expertise Key To Properly Drafted Wi

"EVERY ESTATE PLAN, without exception, is based upon an up-to-date, pro-perly drafted will," said Lubbock attorney Clarence Brazill.

If a person dies intestate (without a will) in the state of Texas, the statutes of descent and distribution direct how an estate will be divided.

"If a surviving spouse is left, one set of rules apply. If a surviving spouse and children are left, another set of rules applies. If neither spouse or children are left, then still another set of rules apply." he said.

Brazill pointed out that Texas is a community property state which further complicates the distribution of an intestate person's property. Community prop-erty is that which was acquired during marriage. That which was held before marriage, or acquired by gift or inherit-ance after marriage, is considered separate property.

Brazill advised that drawing a will is a highly technical procedure and recom-mended it be done by a qualified attorney.

There are other types of wills than those drawn by an attorney. They are holographic wills, form wills and joint and mutual wills.

A holographic will is one that is written in the person's own handwriting and signed by the individual. Brazill noted this type of will often creates controversies and result in legal battles on the part of the heirs.

"The initial cost may be zero, but the cost of the legal battles that may result. could be many times greater than the fee charged by a lawyer for a professional job." he said.

A form will may be purchased in many stationery stores, but may not carry out the intentions of the testor and can result in lawsuits and dissatisfied heirs, according to Brazill

A joint and mutual will is one in which a man and wife join in a single document.

"These wills also are trequently the source of litigation as they can be ambig-uous and may not distribute the estate as intended," he said.

All wills, even those drafted by a qualified attorney, should be reviewed every few years, or when laws or family situations change.

"A designation of which properties should bear the burden of the debts, expenses and taxes, and in what proportions the various heirs should bear the burden of those debts, expenses and taxes should be included." he said "If the spouse's estate is sufficiently large to secure the survivor for life, the testor might wish to leave the estate directly to children. Otherwise, the testor might want to hold the estate in trust with income for life and upon the survivor's death, the remainder of the estate to go to the children. This is called a testamentary trust and is an important potential for saving estate taxes, income taxes and gift taxes.

"An alternative plan of disposition of property in case of the death of beneficiaries or the termination of testamentary trusts, should also be included. A will also needs trust provisions for any minor that comes into a share of the estate," he Brazill explained if trusts are not provided for minors, then the court appoints a guardian for the child's estate.

"It is desirable that a will provides for trusts for minors as those inclusions are more flexible and less costly to operate,' he said.

If a guardian is appointed by the court it might be an individual of whom the testor might not have approved. Transactions relating to a minor's estate must be approved by the court, which, Brazill aid, may impede operations.

ANOTHER PROBLEM of a court appointed guardianship, in Brazill's view, is that the guardian is awarded a fee and the court also gets a fee. "These costs and problems continue until the child reaches 18 years of age and at that time a less sizable amount may be turned over to the child," he said.

Brazill said one of the most important provisions of a will is the choice of the testor's personal representative. These include the executor, trustee and guardian of the person and/or estate of minors.

"Ordinarily the executor and trustee named are the same person. The execu-tor is the person named to administer the estate. In Texas an independent executor can be named. The courts have very little ontrol over an independent executor," he said.

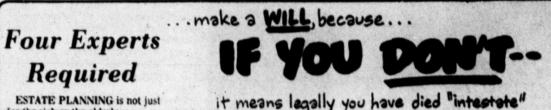

Ordinarily the surviving spouse is se-lected as the independent executor and trustee

"If the spouse fails or ceases to act, the children, or close relatives, are appoint in the will as successor executors of trustees," he said. Brazili pointed out if the estate is a s ble one, the best solution is to name comparise executorization.

trust department of a bank. "Probably the selection of a gus the most difficult to make as the an of a minor child has all the p of a parent," he concluded.

ESTATE PLANNING is not just for the rich or the elderly.

"Everyone has an estate." said Bill Armstrong. trust officer and senior vice president of a local bank. "A young married couple with a car, a home, a bank account and life insurance might find they have quite a sizable estate." he said.

Estate planning is essential as it can assure that children and the surviving spouse are taken care of after an individual's death.

The advice of four estate planning experts - a trust officer, an attorney, an accountant and an insurance agent, is considered essential for complete estate planning.

According to Armstrong, an individual should consider, especially if minor children are to inherit large sums of money, or a business, the setting up of trust funds for their needs.

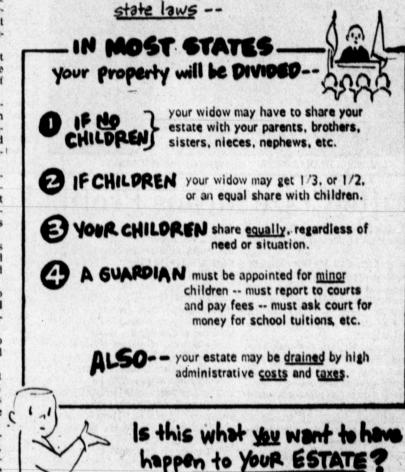

A certified public accountant is necessary to explain complicated tax laws and the changes created by the Tax Reform Act of 1976.

An insurance expert is needed to offer advice on how much and what kind of insurance best fulfills a family's needs.

Lastly, an attorney is needed to put all of these decisions into legal form in a will. Once a will has been made, it should be reviewed every few years to insure the individual's wishes and families' needs are C still adequately fulfilled. Armstrong said that with the advice of the four experts he named. an individual can be sure his family and business interests will be distributed in the manner he has indicated.

Though the tax reform act serves the small and medium estates there are some complications in law, she said.

Complications in law, she said. One of those complications is the carry-over basis of inherited property. In this case, "Beneficiaries no longer receive a step-up on the basis of inherited property. The act provides that a beneficiary's basis is the same as the deceased's basis before his death. However, for purposes of determining gain or depreciation, the basis will be stepped up to the fair mar-ket value of the property on Dec. 31, 1976, plus death taxes paid on appreciation.

heir and a requisite agreement must be filed; 3) The descendant, or a member of his family, must have substantially partici-pated in the operation of business during five of the descendant's last eight years; 4) Percentage tests must be met. The act also provides procedures for re-evaluation if use by heirs changes during a 15-year period. An extention of time for payment of e-tate taxes for a period of up to 18 years is also included in the act. Mrs. Badgett said these many changes and the technical amendments now band studied in Congress have complicated e-tate planning greatly.

AS FATA BELIEVES the man is the generally major breadwinner, in his view the man should be the one most heavily insured.

However, a woman should carry enough life insurance, according to Fata, so in the event she pre-decease the man, funds would be available to provide child care, or a housekeeper. In Fata's opinion it is not necessary for a woman to carry sufficient insurance to support the family in case of her deeth.

said. He noted that a single woman, with a substantial estate should seek life insurance if she is concerned about caring for another family member or to provide the liquidity to pay her estate costs. The insurance can also fulfill business needs. "Insurance money can help ab sort business losses caused by a man's death or supply enough cash to keep the business going until replacement can be made," said Fata. Insurance policies can also create funds for the retirement years, according to Fata in the business has insurance, and will have ensuities during his retirement, will the five years longer than those without any planning, simply because of the peace of mind fliancial security creates."

TRUSTS EVOLVED during the era of English feudalism. The lord of the manor appointed a trustee to act in his place on matters regarding the estate while the lord was off on a crusade, said Bill Armstrong, trust officer and senior vice president of a local bank

"This trustee had legal title to the lord's estate," he said. "He managed the property and cared for the family in the absence of the lord, just as he did for his own."

This is much the same way trusts work today, Armstrong said.

"Trusts should be designed to fit individual needs. A trust will assure a person that his wishes are carried out without court supervision." Armstrong said.

After the provisions of the trust have been determined by the individual, with the assistance of a trust officer, an attorney must be consulted for the creation of the actual legal instrument, said Armstrong,

"There are two types of trusts: revokable trusts, which can be changed at will by the testor, and irrevokable trusts, which which cannot be broken until the time limits or provisions set forth in the trust are met," he said.

Trusts can provide tax advantages for an individual's estate. Because the 1976 Tax Reform Act contains several clauses which affect trusts, Armstrong urges all pre-existing wills and trusts be re-analyzed.

Individuals with substantial estates can establish what is known as a 'living trust.' The trust is in effect during the person's life, and spares the individual day-to-day business management worries.

"THESE TRUSTS are usually set up by older people who wish to travel or just relax and not have to worry about money management," he said.

Trusts are often established so that minors will not have to contend with large amounts of money or with property for which they might not have the knowledge to cope.

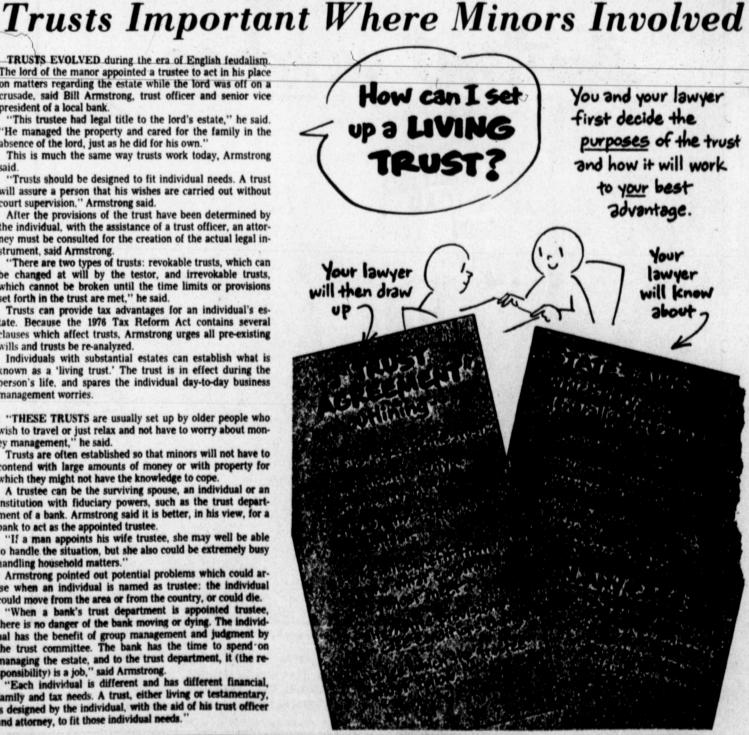

A trustee can be the surviving spouse, an individual or an institution with fiduciary powers, such as the trust department of a bank. Armstrong said it is better, in his view, for a bank to act as the appointed trustee.

"If a man appoints his wife trustee, she may well be able to handle the situation, but she also could be extremely busy handling household matters."

Armstrong pointed out potential problems which could arise when an individual is named as trustee: the individual could move from the area or from the country, or could die.

"When a bank's trust department is appointed trustee, there is no danger of the bank moving or dying. The individ-ual has the benefit of group management and judgment by the trust committee. The bank has the time to spend on managing the estate, and to the trust department, it (the relity) is a job," said Armstrong.

"Each individual is different and has different financial. family and tax needs. A trust, either living or testamentary, is designed by the individual, with the aid of his trust officer and attorney, to fit those individual needs."

CALVIN RAULLERSON, executive director of ICASALS

Speaker Compares Africa To Early U.S.

By MARTHA BOWDEN Family News Staff

Calvin Raullerson, executive director of the International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies (ICASALS) was guest speaker for the Shakespeare Club recently at the Lubbock Women's Club. His topic "New World, Newer World" concerned parallels between the present development of African countries and the early development of the United States as an independent nation.

The parallels actually amount to striking differences, Raullerson said, since America came into its independence when it was truly possible to be independent of other countries and to heed George Washington's words on non-alignment. "Steer clear," Washington said, "of permanent alliances with foreign worlds.

The African countries now developing, Raullerson noted, are not in such a position to enjoy the luxury of isolationism as they struggle for their independence and development.

"Africa, it must be remembered, is a land of crowded, diverse peoples. All are Africans, but Africans from such varied tribal backgrounds that some of the tribal differences are almost tantamount to racial differences.

"We live in a smaller world, too," Raullerson added,"and with the transportation and communication powers of the modern world, it is difficult, indeed, for any country to isolate itself and develop its independence in a leisurely, methodical way."

When America was coming into its independence, Raullerson continued, the technical-industrial revolution had not begun. The economy was simple. Americans had time to experiment and reflect as it perfected its government and began westward expansion by exploration. In Africa one finds high-rise architec-tural structures in the big cities, hears the roar of jet planes in the sky, and meets many Africans who are university students or graduates. But one may also find an African woman in a loin cloth, bending over a stream to do her work, or see a native hauling by cart part of a har-

There is presently much turmoil in Africa. There are new countries in Africa struggling for independence. There are countries, already independent, struggling to understand their freedoms and formulate their governmental policies. There are also young and relatively stable countries dealing with more advanced problems at a different stage of development. Raullerson does not foresee a unified nations of the world are involved in the 'newer world" in which Africa is presently entering. But many of the problems and much of the turmoil must be resolved by Africans themselves as they forge their future. Is is to be hoped the African countries that will emerge and join the world as independent countries in their own right will be genuinely African and not copies of other countries, noted Raullerson.

Raullerson is optimistic. The African spirit is healthy and strong, he believes. Education is a priority in many of the countries, and as Africans educate themselves and come to understand themselves, differences among the Africans may serve to unite rather than divide the young countries that are already involved in and important to the world's future.

As head of Franklin Art Glass Studios, Inc., Helf is enjoying something many manufacturing companies aren't these days - growth plus profit.

In that period, Helf said the studio's annual sales have risen to an estimated $1 million.

"I would say that $200 million is spent on stained glass in this country in a year I would say that is a conservative estimate." Helf said.

dows, but there's a trend towards secular work ... restaurants and homes ... which has grown to about 50 percent of our business in the last five years," he said.

Helf, 56, who took the firm over from his father in the ealy 1950s, anticipated the trend and relocated the studios in the city's German Village during that area's restoration boom in the mid-1960s. Here lived the craftsmen, the artists, with a strong heritage of stained glass. Many homes and restaurants in the community used stained glass to reflect the architecture of the turn of the century.

"I suppose 50 homes in German Village have some of our work and so does every restaurant," Helf said. "There is a definite trend today for the use of stained glass other than churches.'

Helf ranks his firm, with its 35 to 40 employees, as the second largest stained glass studio in the country listed with the Stained Glass Association of America. He indicated the ranking is based on business volume.

All of the glass work - cutting, glazing, waterproofing, piecing together and final installation - is done by hand. Helf points out that even a small project may contain several thousand pieces of glass and take four months to a year to complete.

Stained glass windows can range in cost from $15 to $100 per square foot, depending on the intricacy of the work, Helf said

He says the firm is finding it increasingly hard to find enough glass to keep up with orders.

Helf is a past president of the Stained Glass Association, which he said had 73 active studio members - an increase of 50 percent over the last five years - and five glass factories to supply them.

Helf has also noticed changes in design trends of glass work.

"Design trends are going backward leaning toward the traditional ... more so in secular work than religious work which is 70 percent to 80 percent in the modern style," he said.

As the demand for stained glass as an architectural and decorative accent increases so does its popularity with hobbyists and artists.

By WALDON R. PORTERFIELD Housewives had many other methods of preserving food before the technique of filling air-tight jars was developed. Apple leather and peach leather were prepared by sun-drying halved fruits un-til they resembled their name. So-called quince cheese was made by boiling the fruit all day. Lemons and limes were preserved for winter with the help of alum water. Jellies and jams had only a piece of paper tied over the jar top, re-placed by melted paraffin when it be-came available. Much sugar was used in putting up vegetables and fruits; the sweetener acted as a preservative.

Mixing sugar and cream and boiling the liquid helped preserve the mixture. The perishable, sugared cream then was poured into bottles and corked, with melted resin sealing the tops. Eliza Leslie, author of the popular, "Directions of Cookery," published in Philadelphia in 1828, wrote: "This cream, if properly prepared, will keep perfectly good during a long sea voyage.

Piccalilli and marmalade kept well. Preserved watermelon, trimmed into decorative shapes, was popular, as were similar pumpkin "chips" the size of halfdollars.

Pickling preserved a number of foods. including string beans, mushrooms, cucumbers, peppers, tomatoes, onions, cauliflower, cabbage, peaches, cherries, butternuts, walnuts and slices of muskmelon called "mangoes."

Miss Leslie wrote of several ways to keep eggs. She recommended immersing them in a solution of lime and water, a gallon of the latter to a pound of lime. Another method was greasing them with melted mutton fat and burying them in a box filled with bran.

Miss Leslie also told how to prepare other food for preserving, including how to "keep fresh shad." It should be cleaned, split, powdered with a mixture of salt, brown sugar and Cayenne pepper and, when wanted for cooking, the seasoning should be wiped off and the fish broiled. "This way of keeping shad is much better than to salt it or corn it." she said. It would keep two days without ice. Calves foot jelly was similarly prepared.

In the earliest days earthenware or stone jars were used to hold preserves and other foods. There was no glass then, and, when it did appear, it was not the kind in which hot food could be poured, let alone boil the container as in the later method. The Mason jar was not patented until 1858.

Modern food processing dates earlier than the Mason jar. It began in 1809, when Nicholas Appet, a Frenchman, invented hermetically sealed, vacuumpacked food jars. He was given an award of 12,000 francs by Emperor Napoleon, who had sought ways of keeping army rations from spoiling. Napoleon treated Apper's invention as a military secret, and, in the United States, it was the feeding of armies that boosted commercial canning because of Civil War de-mands for large quantities of preserved food.

At the start of the 19th century, preserving family food was a big part of a housewife's work and, 100 years later, women still were "putting up" vegetaof other vegetables in a single year, 1855. Gail Borden, an inventor, began his concentrated food career before the Civ-il War. According to legend, Borden be-gan thinking about the problem of con-centration as a result of hearing the Donner party, 87 immigrants en route to California, who were tranned in the Sier-California, who were trapped in the Sier-ra Nevadas by a blizzard and survived by eating the dead. Borden declared: "I mean to put a potato in a pillbox, a pumpkin in a tablespoon, the biggest sort of watermelon into a sauce. The Turks made acres of roses into attar of roses...I intend to make attar of everything.

It took him six years to develop a meat biscuit. The Kent Kane Arctic Expedition included Borden's biscuit in its provisions. It was a kind of pemmican, but there was not much market for the food. Country people didn't like shrun-ken meat, nor city buyers, either, when there was plenty in the natural state. Borden also neglected taste in his product. Personally, he wasn't much interested in that. He felt that eating was wasted time and held his own meals to a maximum of 15 minutes.

The inventor dropped dehydrated meat and switched to milk attar, where he made his name and money. Once again, according to story, he was inspired by sympathy after hearing about a boatload of immigrants who made a stormy crossing from England, during which there was no milk for hungry crying babies because seasick cows went

dry. Borden's new product was con-densed milk, which he patented in 1856. The product was an instant success and would have made him a fortune even if the Civil War had not started at a propitious time to give him a huge market for his product in the Union Armies.

Historic names in canning include those of two Englishmen who made fortunes in America. They were William Underwood, who came to Boston in 1819 and Thomas Kensett, who arrived in New York about the same year. Both established companies for preserving food in the manner of Appert, the French-man, using glass containers. Kenset received a patent for tin cans in 1825; in 1839 both the Underwood and Kensett companies switched to tin.

bles and fruit in the bountiful months for meals during long winters. As each fruit or vegetable came into season, housewives bought in quantities in city markets or picked the bounty themselves in the country and stood over cookstoves, canning or, more precisely, bottling.

Preserve closets had floor-to-ceiling shelves full of glass jars, the colors of the fruits and vegetables glowing behind glass, each container displaying a past-ed-on, handwritten label describing the contents and the year they had been canned. There was enough food to take a family through the winter and even longer if the next growing summer had been unfruitful.

The first foods commercially canned were salmon and lobster. However, by the end of the 1840s, quantities of other fish and peas, tomatoes and corn were sold in cans. Discovery of gold in California, where much food had to be imported, meant tens of thousands of cases of canned foods were sent there by sea and also overland.

As early as 1850, some Californians complained about unsightly heaps of empty bottles and rusting tin cans. One Philadelphia company alone, the Mills B. Espey firm, canned 10 tons of cherries. five tons of strawberries, more than 4,000 baskets of quinces, gooseberries and plums, 10,000 baskets of pears, peaches and tomatoes and vast bushels

French History Alive, Well In Quebec City, Canada

By MURRAY J. BROWN QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — Crossing the border into Canada is almost as simple as crossing a street in your home town. Millions of Americans do it every year. No passport, visa, travel card or health certificate is necessary, although documentary proof of identity and citizenship may be required on return to the U.S. Canada offers a variety of attractions for tourists, not the least of which is Quebec, its largest province, where the way of life is more French than British.

French is the dominant language and Quebecers maintain many of the traditions and customs of the founders of New France even though the British took it over more than 200 years ago.

A case in point is Quebec City, capital of the province and Canada's oldest city, founded by Samuel de Champlain in 1608.

French colonial history comes alive on a tour of the city, which is built on two levels — the Upper Town, atop the 330foot-high promontory known as Cape Diamond, and the Lower Town, along the St. Lawrence River.

A $25 million dollar restoration program is underway in Place Royale, the historic center in Lower Town, involving some 70 homes and warehouses. A number of buildings already have been rebuilt and refurnished in 17th and 18th century style.

The centerpiece in the square, however, is the lovely Notre Dame-des-Victoires Church, dating back to 1688. Built of stone, it has a single steeple, a main altar built in the shape of a fort, a large model of a sailing ship hanging from the ceiling and several large paintings, some of which are attributed to Flemish masth ters.

A wedding was taking place when our group of U.S. travel writers visited the church and it was crowded with the bridal party and curious onlookers. We were in Quebec as guests of the federal and provincial governments' tourist offices.

We drove through narrow, winding and steep streets from Lower Town to the Upper Town, which lies within the old city walls. For those on foot, there are the Breakneck Stairs and an elevator from the restored 17th century home of explorer Louis Jolliet.

Dominating the heights is the castlelike Chateau Frontenac, the landmark hotel with its many turrets and gabled roofs dating back to 1892 whose registers read like a Who's Who of the 20th century. It offers 570 recently remodeled and refurnished rooms, a dining roomiounge, tea room and shopping mall in addition the striking 19th century Unglican cathedral; the 17th century Ursuline Conment; the restored Roman Catholic Basilica, dating back to the mid-1600s, and other interesting historic sites. Popular with locals and visitors is the Dufferin Terrace atop the old city walls which offers a spectacular panoramic view of the Lower Town, the river and the surrounding countryside. At the southern end, a series of stairways with observation platforms leads up to the Governors Promenade which leads to the Citadel and the Plains of Abraham. The Citadel was built in the 19th century and serves as headquarters of the Royal 22nd Regiment. There is a military museum and guided tours are available. There is a stirring Changing of the Guard ceremony daily during the summer. The Plains of Abraham, where British Gen. Wolfe's forces defeated those of French Gen. Montcalm and spelled the end to New France, are now part of Battlefields Park. There are monuments to lation of Quebec. Transportation from New York to Montreal was by Amtrak's overnight train The Montrealer. We flew back to New York from Quebec via Air Canada.

Various colors have a strong emotional effect on people for instance blue reduces excitement, but it helps you to concentrate. But too much blue may produce melancholia. Green seems to be cooling and acts as a sedative. Yellow may note sunlight, is cheery and stimulating and attention drawing. It is the most luminous color on a dull day. Red is exciting and a stimulate for the brain. Medium red suggest health and vitality. Red also has an excressive quality and associated with violence. Purple is sedative and soothing. Orang the a stimulating effect and should be used in small amounts. Use with browns, yellows and whites. If the color scheme of a room is made of yellow, cobalt blue, crimson and white, the wall color should be a light beige, the carpet and furniture and color accents may be shades of the same yellow. Red and blue. And colors that are similar, such as yellow, orange, or blue-green. When a color scheme is being planned the walls should be pale or deep in color. The color should be cool or warm. WHICH IS WHICH? - Jack Drake is famous nationwide for his woodcarved birds, art works which are meticulously detailed to the point of each feather's rib being readily visible. For many years, no form of casting could match such detailed carving. Bronze, ceramics and pottery were not good enough for Drake.But still desiring a metallic medium, Drake finally came across Lubbockite Michael Rodgers, who had perfected a metallic casting method called metaloy. The new process allows the same fine line of detail and color to emerge and, as proof, the two mediums are being displayed side by side at the Bak-er Gallery. In the center photo, the birds on the left are

Rodgers' Process Duplicates Wood Carvings

Already becoming more and more popular in the minds of this nation's wooden bird carvers, Mike Rodgers of Lubbock has revealed that his finely developed metaloy casting process is not limited to that solitary medium. Still, there's no denying it is indeed a breakthrough for those seeking both metallic casting and meticulous detail in carved birds.

Famed Carlsbad woodcarver Jack Drake, for example, has for many years produced birds so lifelike in form and color as to draw nationwide praise. His work has been displayed in the Smithsonian Institution, the Audubon Society and the Cowboy Hall of Fame. Orders for his birds are too numerous for him to fill in a normal lifetime.

And yet, over the years, he had sought a means of creating a cast edition to duplicate the precise detail he so skillfully grants the wood. He was familiar with both ceramics and bronze, but neither material offered him the same quality of exactitude in his breath-taking woodcarvings.

As Rodgers put it, "I didn't even know who Jack Drake was in the beginning. But I knew that, other than the original wood, bronzes and ceramics and pottery were the only mediums available. And when it came to detail, they just didn't have it. You see, when you're casting in bronze, you may have up to 2,000 degrees of heat - and that will usually just burn away the detail. Metal like that is also ultra-hard to paint; the paint just won't stick to it. "But Drake had told James Baker (owner of The Baker Gallery in Lubbock, where Drake exhibits his work) to be on the lookout for any new material which he might be able to use."

Fortuitously, Baker brought Drake and Rodgers together. Rodgers had developed the polyester resin casting material, involving a mixture of two resins and at least two "mystery ingredients" known as metaloy. He also has created the method and equipment he uses to mold and then cast sculpture with the material.

At his mill, replicas can be cast which are so exact even a fingerprint on the surface of the original can be replicated.

Rodgers said he worked hard on experimentation for two years prior to first collaborating with Drake five years ago. Rodgers casts Drake's figures in a rich black color. But he later said, "I have full control in regards to color; I can make it any color from clear to, well, any range of colors."

Drake then paints each piece with painstaking accuracy, using acrylic paint which bonds chemically to the resin. As Rodgers phrased it, "Acrylic is an 'our-age' paint. It's a new paint. And when the paint, that is, the colors are applied to the metal they actually become a part of the bird."

When Drake was invited last year by then President and Mrs. Gerald Ford to exhibit his birds at the White House during a dinner for the Chancellor of Germany, he took both his carved birds and several metaloy castings. He and Mrs. Ford spent an hour in private discussing both techniques. At the recent eighth annual Wildfowl Woodcarving & Arts Exhibition at the Wildfowl Museum at Salisbury, Md., Drake's birds were again displayed side by side and his fellow carvers were unable to detect the difference between the resin pieces and the wood without actually picking them up.

Barry Stewart of The Baker Gallery commented earlier in the week that "the weight difference is the only way to tell between the woodcarvings and the metaloy birds. The metaloy is heavier." Rodgers said a bit later, "That's true. But I can weight the casting, also, so it's identical to the weight of the woodcarving

"I can make it so there's no way you can tell the two apart."

A lifesize metaloy roadrunner was presented to then-Governor Bruce King of New Mexico in 1976, and is installed at the state capitol in Santa Fe.

Metaloy has been the answer for Jack Drake and no doubt soon will be for other sculptors. As Rodgers explains his process, it becomes clear that metaloy is a versatile material and can be cast in a wide range of sizes and effects.

With metaloy, all aspects are under Rodgers' control. He can manipulate the hardness through the content of the material in his mixtures and the color can be infinitely varied.

He'said, "Depending on my fillers, my ingredients, I can make the piece as hard or as light ae I want. When I add the catalyst to the liquid, the process actually starts inside the mold. As a result a metaloy piece can wind up five or six times harder than cement. And yet it can be drilled or sawed.

"Right now I'm working on petals which are almost paper thin, yet they'll be able to stand up. They can be broken, but they are much stronger than ce-ramics or bronze. ... Actually, the metaloy pieces can break, yes, but it de-pends on the angle at which it lands and just how far.

"Also, the metaloy piece will break at only one spot and can then be re-paired. Drop a ceramic piece the same way and it will shatter into a million pieces.

If an artist requests a metal effect, Rodgers combines the resin with powdered bronze, which he described as "as fine as face powder. I can put it in the mold and come out with the same weight as bronze.

The resulting piece is given a slight tooth with sandpaper or a file to expose the bronze. A patina can be added to the piece identical in effect to that given to a bronze, using much the same chemical bath. Though bronze has the advantage of durability, metaloy has both durability and the fact that it accepts far greater detail than bronze.

However, it is not Rodgers' intent to offer a duplicate of another material - or to suggest the past ways be discarded. He merely stresses the unique qualities of metaloy. "My material is new," he said, "whereas bronze is ages old. People were probably casting in bronze 6,000 years ago. And bronze will not be replaced. I'm certainly not trying to replace bronze. "But I am offering a medium which offers more detail, better coloring and cast reproduction for 40 to 60 per cent less cost. The versatility is there, and it can also be reworked much more easily than bronze.

can also be reworked much more easily than bronze." Metaloy resists heat. It is not a brittle material and thus will not shatter when dropped. It retains its integrity even when tapped (drilled), sawn through with a powersaw, added to, filed or painted. It withstands acids, fumes and destructive agents. Large pieces cast in the material can be molded sectionally and then put together in a process not unlike that used by a bronze foundry in welding outsized sculptures. Metaloy is to sculptors what the development of acrylic pigments was to the painter: a totally new material with special properties of its own. And, like acrylics, it is strictly a product of our own era.

acrylics, it is strictly a product of our own era.

A sculpture cast in metaloy and then painted by the artist or otherwise treated as a distinct piece through additions to its basic form brings to the buyer more of the actual "hand of the artist" than a bronze. Yet the price differential favors metaloy.

Rodgers must make his own molds for each carved piece brought to him before he casts an edition of it. He works on the outer mold first and then on the inner, liquid rubber that duplicates the exact detail of the original. Loss of detail in most molding and casting procedares is a result of distortion caused by air in the mold.

By an in the mold. Rodgers' system is a vacuum cast technique which eliminates the air effect. The result is what he calls "verbatim casting." In the planning stages is an exhibition of sculptures cast in metaloy, though Rodgers' work will be accessible to the public during Jack Drake's show at the Baker Gallery Dec. 4. Nevertheless, Rodgers wants to feature the variety of effects acievable with his process, the emphasis being on its availability as a line ard medium. fine arts medium.

But birdcarvers need not inquire.

As Rodgers put it, "Jack Drake and I have a wonderful businessmen's agreement in that he has the bird segment wrapped up. I will only cast his birds. I've had countless people call with requests, but I've already made a promise to Jack.

"However, metaloy can be used with any number of aspects. It would do wonders with busts of people and, I feel, would be equally fine for wildlife artists. The detail this process offers is what will sell it to any artist."

Renoir traveled widely in Italy, Germany, Holland, Spain and England. As his work progressed, he placed increasing emphasis on drawing, more solid forms and departing from open-air painting.

He continued to paint in later life, al-though arthritis made working more and more difficult. His late works are mostly nudes or near nudes, noted for their mature, serene beauty and the artist's use of vibrant red as the dominant color.

nated as Black Oak Arkansas, be called was merely a matter of convenience. simply Black Oak. But according to previously published interviews with Mangrum, most people made the transition years ago. Changing his nickname to intials now

But the shortening of the group's name - even though its fans already had abbreviated it to Black Oak - has its basis in personnel change. Mangrum and gui-tarist Jimmy Henderson saw musical differences split up the original Black Oak Arkansas and four new musicians join the fold now called Black Oak: guitarists Greg Reding and Jack Holder, bassist Andy Tanas and drummer Joel William-SOI

The group was in Lubbock a few days back to warm up the Municipal Coliseum crowd which had gathered to see headlin-ers Blue Oyster Cult. Before the show, Mangrum spoke with The Avalanche-Journal backstage, maintaining that "the meaning of Black Oak is still just as strong; it still has that same kind of relativity in there."

The Black Oak relativity to which Mangrum alluded is that raw, energetic presence evident in the band's recorded music and concerts. He added, "The combination is good. It's really off to a good start. The new group has all the power the old one ever had. But the show, which was a big asset before, is better than ever.

"The musicians now have more charisma, they move gracefully, they can become alive at any given moment. These are good ingredients to me."

Mangrum may come across as egocentric with such lines, but he has good reason. Black Oak's new album, "Race With The Devil," is the recipient of critical acclaim, something past Black Oak Arkansas albums never earned. Released two weeks ago, the LP is a departure from the band's original style. Predominantly featuring Holder and Reding, the album also shows off Mangrum's much more flexible voice.

"The original band could only play in about two or three different keys or frets to where they felt comfortable. I was left limited, having to stay in those three keys," he said.

coming show in expensive slacks, with a stylish rope belt, and a brown knit shirt. But the hip grind is still used, and Mangrum's hair continues to hang down his back. Certain concessions will not be made

The backstage Mangrum is also very similar to the Mangrum on stage in regards to ideals. His speech is wrought with the principles which find their roots in religion

"Stand By Your Own Kind" is, for example, a tune very close to Mangrum. The song was written seven years ago, actually during the same week he wrote "Hot 'n' Nasty." But "Stand By Your Own Kind" is very different material.

With the guitarists tuning up in a nearby room, Mangrum leaned forward to make himself heard. "That song indicates very much my Christian upbringing. It takes all the different races to hold hands to make a humanity. That song is kind of common sense, a common language, a way to express it."

Mangrum then related the time Black Oak Arkansas sued an Arkansas preacher in court. He said the suit could not be called sacrilegious because the preacher had accused the band (and rock music) of being in legion with the devil.

Black Oak Arkansas won the suit. Mangrum explained, "It can get tough having your wife and your loved ones at a supermarket 2,000 miles away, where you know rednecks are looking at them thinking, 'Hey, they're immoral devil worshipers.' It just ain't sensible. So we took him (the preacher) to court because it ain't right to lie, especially to be calling people immoral."

The last verse of "Race With The Devil," the title song which opens the new album, says that "the devil can't win, your

ROCK AND BLOODY THEATRICS - The Coliseum will see a lot of both at 8 p.m. today. That's when Detective and headliners Kiss will take the stage for a long, theatrical rock and roll show. Song Records. Kiss, bottom, as all but the hermits know, is a theatrical band with an astounding following worldwide. The music is very loud, but secondary to the theatrics. An extremely large crowd is expected for today's show, but tickets are

He added, "I wrote about 90 per cent of the songs, but I had to write in the keys I felt comfortable with. I had to struggle. I had to do the whole gut-wrench special. You know, where it's very gutty."

Mangrum was referring to his now famous croaking vocals, but came back to the new sound on the recent LP. "It's really Jim Dandy on 'Race With The Devil.' In fact, I mean the real Jim Dandy, because it's in the right key.

The long-haired singer feels his musical liberation has enhanced his stage image by lending it credibility. He said, "It's not a fake, contrived character that is necessary now. Because the keys now have to be put where I can feel it is a unique thing only from struggling through it and pushing through it and becoming an energy force."

But he also says stage personality is still on his side.

Black Oak Arkansas became popular through its energetic performances and Mangrum's visual stage presence. The band's vocalist used to dress in tight leather pants, often appearing shirtless. His sexy, squatting hip grind was popular with the BOA fans.

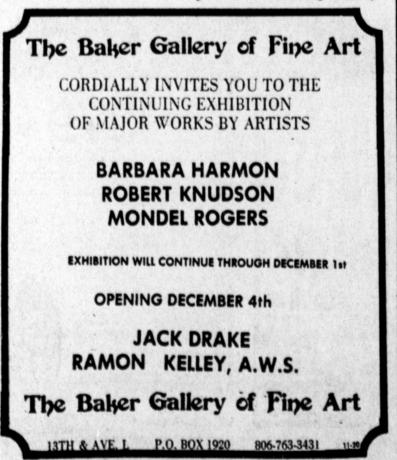

But that image has been toned down. When contacted for the interview, Mangrum had finished dressing for the up-

Wishbone Ash has finally fulfilled its potential and the group's latest album, "Front Page News" (MCA), is the result of that fulfillment.

The new LP is the band's most diverse ever, containing the same cohesiveness evident in "Argus" and the hard edge characteristic of last year's "New England."

Songs range from surly rockers like "Diamond Jack" to pensive, reflective pieces like "Goodbye Baby, Hello Friend."

The best song on the album is most likely "714." Bassist Martin Turner's composition features Laurie Wisefield's expressive lead guitar. Andy Powell's delicate acoustic guitar and a Mike Lewis string arrangement round out the instrumental ballad.

The straight rock and roller "Right Or Wrong" is also good. Powell's guitar is decidedly rough. Wisefield's guitar is biting. Turner's vocals are tailored in such a way as to fit the callous feel of "Right Or Wrong."

Wisefield has finally adapted to Wishbone Ash's smooth rock and roll style, intricately interplaying with fellow axeman Powell. The resulting sound is one of exquisite textures and moods.

The two guitarists manage to complement each other in each song on the new LP.

"Front Page News" is the synthesis of what Wishbone Ash seemed capable of doing and what the group has actually accomplished. No doubt the album will come as good news to Wishbone's fans and prospective listeners.

Steve Tillage used to play lead guitar for Gong. For those remembering that European group's off-the-wall music and lyrics, Hillage's new album should come as no surprise.

"Motivation Radio" (Atlantic) is Hillage's second solo venture into the expression of mind-bending theories of self-fulfillment. Hillage's new album is more articulate and less complex than last year's "L."

The new LP is patterned after what one might expect to hear while tuning a radio for about 45 minutes. "Light In The Sky" is reminiscent of the 1930s radio serials. Mirquette Girandy mechanically sings, "Oh me, oh my, there's a light in the sky" to give the song that dated sound.

Malcolm Cecil's TONTO synthesizer complements Hillage's virtu

Evening Of Dance Planned Dec. 1

"An Evening Of Percussion & Dance" will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Dec. 1 in the Center Theater at Texas Tech University. The event is under the joint sponsorship of the Tech Dance Division, Lubbock Civic Ballet and the Tech Percussion Ensemble.

A varied program of five dances will be presented, with music by such diverse composers as Dvorak and Jelly Roll Morton. Four choreographers are represented on the program: Diana Moore, Mannie Rowe, Kristina Gintautiene and Luke Kahlich.

Moore, associate professor in the department of health, physical education and recreation, is dance division program coordinator as well as artistic director of Lubbock Civic Ballet. Her experience includes seven years of ballet, modern and jazz instruction at Texas Tech.

Rowe, head of his own dance company in Atlanta, Ga., has received international recognition as a dancer with performances in France and Canada.

Gintautiene, who is also director and choreographer for the Revolving Dance Company of Lubbock, is working on a Ph.D. degree at New York University in the creative arts. She has had experience in teaching and in choreography, with performances in Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and New York.

Lubbock audiences may remember Kahlich, who received undergraduate and graduate degrees at Texas Tech and has performed frequently here. He has received additional experience with the Houston Contemporary Dance Theater, and with New York University while on a doctoral teaching fellowship. Kahlich is now artist-in-residence at Tech, as well as assistant artistic director of the Lubbock Civic Ballet.

'Hummingbird' Joins Display

"Hummingbird," a weaving by Jerry Forburger, has been hung in the Garden & Arts Center library and will remain on display through the end of the year.

Mrs. Forburger's all-wool weaving is an abstract pattern in black and rust on a natural background. The hoop frame is trimmed in long fringe of the same colors. A crocheted flower form in the center is made three-dimensional by short, cut-fringed knots.

The GAC library is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday, and from 1 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. It will be closed Nov. 24-27 due to the Thanksgiving holidays.

Circus Festival

Set for Monaco

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (UPI) — The 4th International Circus Festival will be held in this Mediterranean resort city Dec. 8-12.

The festival will feature performances by the world's leading circus artists, including six groups from the U.S. Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus, performers from the French Bouglione circus, the Polish, Czechoslovak, Bulgarian state circuses and from private circuses from West Germany, Norway, Denmark, Italy, Mexico, Switzerland, Norway, Great Britain and South Africa.

According to Moore, one of the program's outstanding features is the accompaniment of live music, with Ron Dyer conducting the Texas Tech Percussion Ensemble. An associate professor in the music department, Dyer brings to the program several years experience with the dance division on programs which have been praised for creative and dynamic qualities.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-G-3

namic qualities. Wayland Winstead, known for his lighting designs and previous collaboration with the dance division, will serve as lighting designer for the "Evening With Percussion & Dance."

Dancers for the production include Tech dance majors, members of the Lubbock Civic Ballet company and dancers from the Revolving Dance Company. The program ranges from a humorous, tongue-in-cheek version of the Garden Of Eden to a silent piece to a "blues" number which offers the dancers an opportunity to exhibit their array of talents and skills.

Ticket information is available by calling the Tech University Center ticket booth.

Tech Slates Madrigal Dinner

The Texas Tech University music department has slated its first annual Madrigal Dinner for 6:30 p.m. Dec. 9 in the campus' University Center Ballroom.

The doors will open to the public at precisely 6:30 p.m. and, due to the nature of the program, will close promptly at 6:50 p.m. Tickets are limited. All seats are reserved. Prices and additional information are available by calling the University Center ticket booth.

Publicity states, "Imagine England in the 15th century during the winter and yuletide season fast approaching. In the great dining halls of the castles which dot the quiet, snow-covered countryside, preparations are already underway for the Christmas feast. The green of holly, ivy and pine is being gathered to decorate the tables. Musicians are rehearsing in earnest and the kitchens echo with the voices of the cooks and the huntsmen as they put together the annual boar's head dinner.

"The traditional wassail bowl, the boar's head and the flaming plum pudding — served to the accompaniment of trumpet fanfares and the sweet voices of the madrigal choir — all combine for an evening of comfortable and happy yuletide celebration."

And now the Christmas 1977 season will find the University Center Ballroom lit with the soft glow of candlelight and the Madrigal Singers, dressed in appropriate medieval costume, will sing of the Christmas season. The wassail bowl, boar's head dinner, plum pudding and entertainment will be announced by trumpet fanfares. And the scene will be brilliantly decorated with red and green colors.

guitar playing. Much of this fine work can be heard on side two's "Searching For The Spark" and "Octave Doctors."

Norman Petty's "Not Fade Away" is given the Hillage treatment to conclude "Motivation Radio." Tillage's version is quite different from those of Buddy Holly or The Rolling Stones. No doubt Petty could not care less, though, probably satisfied with the royalty checks resulting from the song being recorded by Hillage and Black Oak this year. Hillage gives "Not Fade Away" a futuristic touch. The song is merely his way of saying his transmission will neither weaken nor cease. If Hillage is indeed sincere about his beliefs in fulfillment through power and inspiration, his message certainly won't fade away. Perhaps some portion of the public other than his cult following, consisting primarily of Gong freaks, will find themselves accepting his musical and theoretical Camei's latest album, "Rain Dances" (Janus), is a pleasing and eclectic representation of the group's various musical styles. The album goes so far as to depict every musical style the group has ever attempted.

"First Light" and "Unevensong" are rockers which feature the guitar prowess of Andrew Latimer. The guitarist's style is smooth and melodic, and quite reminiscent of Mick Taylor's.

Latimer also expresses his skill through songwriting. Most of the songs on "Rain Dances" were co-written by Latimer and keyboardist Peter Bardens.

Songs like "Elke" and the title track are indicative of another Camel musical style. Eno's picturesque synthesizer work is displayed on "Elke," complementing the keyboards. The song is colored with melancholic tones.

"Rain Dances" is also an instrumental but, while "Elke" reminds one of a beautiful European blonde, the title track is more abstract and hard to define. No doubt each listener will leave with his own interpretation.

Camel's vocal numbers, sung by bassist Richard Sinclair, don't measure up to the instrumentals. "Metrognome" is an unimaginative song. "Tell Me" paints a pensive mood, but the vocal presentation sounds too much like 10cc.

"Rain Dances," the album, is a satisfying effort despite its slightly bothersome faults. Any admirer of classical classically influenced rock like that provided by Genesis, Gentle Giant, Yes and EL&P will most likely appreciate the new Camel album. "Rain Dances" is rather enjoyable to the unsuspecting ear.

Black rolls 4-2. How should be play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM Although White has already borne off 12 of his men, Black is still very much in the game. Even if White manages to get his men around to his home board without exposing one of them to a shot, Black is hardly behind in the race. And should White stay out for a move or two, or should he enter on the 2-point and should Black then point on the blot, Black would be a huge favorite. Therefore, Black should strive to play as safely as possible. His plan must be to bring his men into his home board without getting hit, for that would give White additional time to get his men out.

Therefore, it would seem that White should play the man from his 8-point to his 6-point for the 2, and from the 5-point to the 1-point for the 4. That does not expose any man to being hit. However, that is a very short-range view of the position

If Black plays as above, he will leave himself with four men in his outer board and he will have great problem is getting them home safely. In addition, the extra man on the 1-point will be out of play, and Black will have reduced the number of builders that he has bearing on the 2-point.

Strange as it seems, we suggest that Black play a man from his 9-point all the way to the 3-point. With a White man on the bar, that exposes Black to a shot only if White rolls 5-2 or 5-4. In other words, Black will be an 8 to 1 favorite to escape being hit.

And even if White does succeed in hitting Black, Black will not yet have lost the game. For White must break his point in Black's home board to hit, and he now exposes himself to a barrage of return shots.

The slight risk now should mean greater safety later, since Black will have cleared a point in his outer board.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider what you want to do that is of a different nature in the days ahead. Study whatever comes to your mind or attention and use your most dynamic qualities in planning new circumstances. Being hasty can find you with poor judgment. ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr.19) Be more objective where emotional wishes are concerned and get good resluts. Decisions you reach now can improve your position in life

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A new plan you have should be discussed with an adviser before you get into it. Show you are an alert and clever individual. GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good time for contacting friends, particularly those in a different line of endeavor from your own. Gain personal aims with less effort than in the past.

Every Night Halloween With New 'Punk' Culture

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Youth will have its day and today it's punk. Punk is the generic term for what used to be flaming youth, bobby soxers and the bubble gum set, but it is kinkier and grungier than its forebears. Punk's physical manifestations are outrageous outfits, multi-colored hair, freaky jewelry and filthy language set to the driving blast of amplified guitars of new wave punk rock.

It's adherents range in age from 9 to 25. It's hangouts are discos.

While punk has no high priests, its apostles are such rock groups as The Sex Pistols, The Ramones, Blondie, The Germs, The Zippers and a couple of all girl groups named The Slits and Snatch, which gives you an idea. Curiously, the groups abhor the term punk. But rock radio stations and under-ground record companies won't have it any other way. Punk fans show up in discos dressed in garbage sacks, torn jeans — some-times with the seat torn out to reveal buttocks — tank tops emblazoned with four-letter words. Anything soes the more revolting the better four-letter words. Anything goes, the more revolting the better. Grease-painted faces, not unlike Zulu warriors, are the rage. Hairdos are tinted green, purple and orange. Half a shaved head is not uncommo

Bizarre jewelry includes a safety pin stuck through a nostril and attached by a chain to a pierced ear lobe. Razor blades entwined in coiffures, chains and manacles are the rage. The swastika is a popular emblem.

Every night is Halloween.

Many punk rock groups spit and hurl obscenties at their audiences while the children on the dance floor pogo jump up and down in frenzied response to the ear-splitting noise — pushing, chanting, hitting and sometimes kicking one another. They revile the bands with gestures and vulgarities.

For the most part punksters are anti-drugs, anti-alcohol and anti-religious. There is some use of angel dust, PCP, a dangerous hallucinogen, not unlike LSD, but it is expensive and not an important part of punk culture.

Punk apparently has no philosophy and certainly no leaders - lunksters are also anti-hero - in the movement except an underlying catchphrase, "Don't trust anyone over 20."

Common sense dictates that punks are simply spoiled products of an affluent society working hard at drawing attention to themselves. But early on it did have political overtones

Punk began in England two or three years ago among working class kids re-belling against the dole and stifled lifestyle, according to youthful historians of the punk movement.

The Sex Pistols were in the forefront until they were banned by British radio and television — after using obscenities on an English TV show.

Recently The Sex Pistols signed a contract with Warner Brothers Records, a punk rock breakthrough to the establishment.

Bob Merlis, a Warner's spokesman, predicts a big future for the group. "This music doesn't try to please or soothe," he said. "It's reactionary music to the excesses of the 60s and 70s. It represents the mood of today's youth.

"The punk movement is a reaction to the hipple ethic. It's anti-peace and love. It's hate and war. The punks are bored with the saccharine Haight-Ashbury tradition of love." Beards and beads and other accouterments of the hippie culture are shunned.

Merlis and other observers of the punk culture say the new wave rejects ecological conservation, the Woodstock generation and all politics. "Look," said Merlis, "when President Carter quotes Bob Dylan you know Dylan is over. Today insurance salesmen wear beads and indian shirts. Yesterday's hippie is today's businessmen. The kids want no part of them.

Japan Turns To Big Cars For Funerals

TOKYO (AP) - Japan may be known for its compact cars, but there is one field here where big American vehicles dominate. This is the reikyu-sha, or "soul forever" car used as a hearse and complete with a built-in, Buddhist-style temple to hold the casket.

"Engine output, size and dignity make us use the full-size American cars," said Kivoshi Yoshikura, director in charge of vehicles for one company in Tokyo, in an interview.

"Japanese cars are too small to carry caskets as long as 7 feet," he said, "and the temple itself weighs at least 1,100 pounds. American cars with their bigger and vocalist — are a top attraction. Sexual overtones are everywhere. Emphasis on genitalia and sexual inter-course are explicit in the lyrics of punk rock to the bane of radio stations and record companies which are attempting to clean it up to enhance record sales. Gregg Turner, 22-year-old publisher of Back Door Nian, a bi-monthly punk magazine based in Hollywood, sees punk as a marketing phenomenon. "People are making money on punk," he says. "I think it's already reached it's peak and won't be around much longer. The term punk itselves implies short longevity. New wave music is terrible, but at least it's a change from the boring 1971-75 music. Record companies hope it will hype the market." Jim La Penna, who manages the Whiskey, says, "I don't see punk fading. It's a social reaction to frustration. It's more than just a protest.

"But you must distinguish between punk rock and new wave punk rock. The new wave groups are pretty terrible musically." Some punk rock groups say they represent the "blank generation," as good a

description as any. They sing of glue sniffing, loneliness and, inevitably, sex. Older observers have written that nihilistic punk originated with Marlon Brando in "The Wild Ones" and continued with James Dean on up through such other anti-establishmentarians as David Bowie and Alice Cooper. But punk is formless, without goals and somewhat forlorn. In repose, when the music stops and the kids aren't throwing trash at the bands, they sit, slack-jawed, waiting for the music to galvanize them once again. Because the punk culture has no leaders its growth has been slow and limited to large cities. By no means does it reflect the majority of teen-agers in the United States.

United States.

One distinguished psychiatrist, Dr. Arnold L. Gilberg of UCLA, does see punk in a serious light. "The punk children are an expression of a tragic epic of Amer-ican culture and society," he said. "The sense of aggression is so overwhelming that the adolescent child, inundated with a variety of problems, is unable to cope with it.

They cannot distinguish between goal oriented behavior and destructive ac-tivity. Therefore the punk child has allowed himself to become part of a move-ment that expresses his most feared thoughts.

"Only a culture and society that recognizes the devastation that young people are experiencing today can possibly bring a halt to this type of chaos and hope-fully some order to our future lives.

"I'm not certain I see the punk movement as a rebellion. They are expressing what adults don't say openly. Adults have been involved with a hypocritical li-festyle for so long the youngsters are striking out in any way possible to find something for themselves, even though it is unwholesome and ultimately destructive.

"They are so overwhelmed with anxiety they will attach themselves to any group which allows them to express feeling, even if it is alienating. It's an expression of a decrease in religiosity."

So far punksters haven't drawn much attention from the constabulary. Drugs are not a factor. Discos catering to punks painstakingly demand proof of age before serving liquor.

Violence may be thematic in punk dance floor rites, but the line is drawn at bloodshed. It is said that punks are all pose and no content, make-believe ruffi-

Yoshikura's company owns 12 Ameri-can funeral coaches. Mechanics cut away the rear section of body to install the heavy, decorated temple structure. Each temple is made of select Japanese cyprus wood, its walls and ceilings covered with silken cloth. The floor is of tatami, the traditional Japanese straw matting. Each costs $27,000 to $34,500.

The reikyu-sha leads the funeral procession to the site of the service, to the crematory, the cemetery and then back to the home of the deceased. Each of Yoshikura's 12 American cars is used an average of 47 times a month. The trip usually covers about 16 miles and costs 18,000 yen (about $68.)

It is "a very modest fare, set by govern-ment regulations," Yoshikura said. Driving the soul forever car is a difficult task in Japanese traffic and on narrow Japanese streets.

"You have to be very careful not to make a sharp turn, which happens fre-quently in Tokyo," Yoshikura, the son of an undertaker, said. "The car is topheavy and may capsize if banked more than 49 degrees.

The first motorized reikyu-sha in Japan appeared in 1923 when a Tokyo undertaker converted a Model-T Ford into a funeral vehicle complete with Buddhist temple, Yoshikura said. Before that the temple cart was pulled by animals, usually cows. And before that the pot-shaped caskets then in use were placed in a temple-like structure carried on human shoulders

Burn Victims Suffer Lung Complications

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) - Although burn victims are carried through their first day by the latest advances in medical treatment, they later become subject to insidious lung complications, accord-ing to a report by radiologists at the Medical College of Virginia Hospitals.

In the past decade, the radiologists said, a more vigorious approach to anti-biotic therapy and fluid replacement has resulted in effective control of wound infection and circulatory shock, a major cause of early death in patients with thermal injury.

However, the physicians pointed out, the increase in the survival rate of these patients has been accompanied by an ap-parent increase in the incidence of lung complications. Drs. Hushang Kangarloo, Michael C. Beachley and Gary G. Ghahremani stud-ied 66 patients during a 12-month period. In 28 of the patients, chest X-ray studies revealed various lung problems.

Did You Know ...

- (1) That because LP&L, your electric company, exists in a competitive situation, you pay no connection fee or deposit when you "hook up" for electric service.
- (2) In most non-competitive markets, the deposit required for electric service ranges from $15 to $25.

In cities & towns where electric service is provided by a monopoly you are required to make a "hook up" deposit. Yes, competition does make a difference.

Fire Sleuths Capture Arsonists

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Identifying an arsenist and ringing him to trial is a tedious process that can ske years. But the city of Seattle has found the key a an unusual team of fire slouths, whose success an be measured in deliars and cents.)

By TERI BURKHART SEATTLE (AP) — Jim Reed and Jim Dixon enter the charred remains of a house in the city's south Capitol Hill District, where firemen still are mopping up after their early morning battle.

Oblivious to dripping water and sooty timbers, the two members of the Seattle Fire Department's "Marshal 5" arson task force continue the investigation begun while the house was still in flames. "We have strong reasons to believe this fire was set," Reed says. "Now our job is to prove it."

The two men study an uneven burn pattern on the floor. "This indicates there was a flammable liquid," Reed says. The depth of floorboard charring, the darkness of smoked glass, the manner in which flames licked doorways and walls all seem to bear out his conclusion.

Investigations like this can take years, but Dixon and Reed stand a better chance of solving the crime than fire investigators in other cities. It's a grim task - arson is now estimated to cost the country $1.88 billion a year.

Seattle's answer is its Marshal 5 squad, set up in 1975 after predictions that the city's arson cases would double between 1974 and 1978.

Eight fire and two police investigators, each with 286 hours of special training, are the core of the squad, led by a fire captain and lieutenant. The team is on duty from 7:30 a.m.

until 2:30 a.m. and on standby the rest of the time. Each investigator handles an average of six to eight cases, plus whatever comes up during his shift.

The results: In 1974, property loss from arson in Seattle cost $3.2 million. Two years later, 18 months after the arson squad was formed, it had dropped to $1.9 million. But perhaps the most significant aspect of the squad's success is its apprehension and conviction rate. Of 569 arson incidents in 1975, 118 arrests were made, or about 21 percent. The arrest rate jumped to 39 percent a year later and rose to 65 percent for the first two months of 1977.

In Denver, a city roughly the same size as Seattle, arrests were made in 17 percent of the arson cases in 1975 and 21 percent in 1976, according to statistics compiled by Vic Palumbo, arson program manager for the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration in Washington, D.C.

Palumbo says comparisons are difficult because many cities do not keep accurate arson statistics and others are reluctant to release what information they do have.

"There aren't enough adjectives to describe the fine job they're doing in Seattle," Palumbo says.

"And then there are people who set fires in retaliation. That's very common between spouses whose marriage is on the rocks - the husband will set fire to the wife's clothes to get back for something," Hargett says.

In 1975, Seattle was plagued by a series of fires in taverns.

"Some of them were obvious cases of arson," investigator Reed said. "For exmple, in one bar all the money had been taken from the till, all the booze was gone and most of the glasses."

Since the task force was created, "we haven't had a major restaurant or tavern fire" due to arson, Reed says.

The suspect taverns and bars were ubjected to irregular spot checks, sometimes as often as twice a day. The suspicious fires stopped.

The spot checks were part of the arson quad's bag of 'prefire procedures.'

Failing businesses are a likely target for an arson attempt, Hargett says, and the squad often gets tips from other essmen that a company is not doing well. "That's when we might do what we call a prefire procedure.

"We bring in the trucks and lay hoses to see how much would be needed in case there was a fire, inspect the fire afety equipment and remove flammable liquids or trash that's building up.

"Then we might have the fire inspector come through the building, and sometimes even notify the insurance company, which may even do its own

"It certainly acts as a deterrent."

Last year insurance companies refused to pay more that $700,000 in fraudulent claims because of Marshal 5 investiga-tions, and another $1 million in disputed claims are pending in civil courts, says

Hargett. "What we're trying to do is make it so tough for arsonists here that they'll try some other method or go somewhere lse," he said.

Arson destroys more than buildings. Peripheral losses, in lost jobs, rent and company business, is estimated to reach still billion nationally each year. Pire officials in San Francisco, An-

By DONALD SANDERS WASHINGTON (AP) - Director George Stevens Jr. says the American Film Institute's rescue work on the first half century of U.S. films is nearing completion, but enormous salvage jobs lie ahead. Color film fades, and so special efforts must be made to save it.

The institute recently sought out a col-or, print of "The African Queen," the much admired film starring Humphrey Bogart and Katherine Hepburn.

"There was great doubt as to whether it existed," Stevens said. "When we finally got to the laboratory in London where they had a good copy, they said only 60 per cent of the color was left." The organization which Stevens heads has just observed its 10th anniversary with a celebration of film and television at the John F. Kennedy Center, where it has its headquarters and a small theater with nightly screenings. The 12-day festival featured premieres of six major international films, appearances by a number of actors, actresses, directors and others. The highlight was a benefit in the Kennedy Center Opera House on Nov. 17 to hear the choices of AFI members on the greatest American

That event will be broadcast by CBS-TV on Nov. 21, from 9:30 to 11 p.m. EST. President Carter sent greetings, saying in part: "I join with many other Americans in applauding the institute's important work in preserving the great American films of the past, nurturing new filmmakers for the future and bringing the public an ever larger choice of what is best and lasting in American film ...

"Film is America's native art form. It is representative of our lives and our society, and it helps to shape the course that is ahead of us

The institute was formed 10 years ago with a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and supported since then with federal and private money. It has sought out and deposited with the Library of Congress some 14,000 films which were in danger of being lost.

"There's a lot still to be done, sad to relate," Stevens said. "Old nitrate has to be transferred to safety film, which takes time and money. Most of the rescue work has been done.

Occasionally, a film thought lost will be located in some warehouse or film buff's collection, and so preserved. An example is the classic western "Stagecoach," res-cued years ago. John Wayne, the star, had preserved a copy in his private archives.

Stevens recently told the Society of Mo-tion Picture and Television Engineers that a big investment must soon be made or the motion pictures made in the past 25 years will have lost their color by the year 2000.

"Single strip color negative continuou ly fades and many will deteriorate be-yond recovery within 25 years," he said. The only recommended way for a color film to be preserved is by the costly production of three black and white separa-tion negatives - one for each of the basic dye colors.

"Already there are harrowing stories of instances where fine films are selected for re-issue or festival showings and the negatives will not produce a satisfactory print.

He cited as an example an old Walt Disney film. It was converted into black and white separations, and the finished product was better than the original

"Further, we must turn our attention to the beast sitting behind you," Stevens said, pointing to a television set behind a reporter.

Even the networks have done little to preserve their old programs, many of which already have been lost for all time. The AFI in the coming year has a budg-et of about $7 million, of which $1.1 miltional Endowment for the Arts and about 1 million from the same federal agency for intern and other special projects. After years in relative neglect, the film industry is giving more money. "It wook some education. They had to see it before they'd believe it," Stevens said. "The endowment believed it before they could see it. The industry has increased its support, but they don't do enough for us.

The old film preservation effort is run in cooperation with the Museum of Mod-ern Art in New York, the Library of Congress, and the International Museum of Photography at George Eastman House in Rochester, N.Y. Both the museum and Eastman House were early pioneers in film preservation.

Stevens, the son of a major Hollywood Stevens, the son of a major Hollywood director and himself the producer of doc-umentaries, is perhaps proudest of the in-stitute's growth in membership from 6,-000 to 35,000 in the past two years. There are now members in each of the 50 states and a number of foreign countries. They pay $15 yearly for which they receive subscriptions to "American Film," a monthly magazine, discounts on books about film, special seating at the theater here and word about showings in other cities. citie

The institute assembles special series about such things as new Soviet films, the works of directors such as John Ford or Enest Lubitsch, and then sends them to major cities around the country. "I think the wave of AFI's future has to be to move across the country," Stevens said. "We devoted the first 10 years to organization and innovation.

"Hopefully, the Carter administration arts policy, as I understand it, calls for both quality and accessibility, which is what we can do. It's more difficult to get the Metropolitan Opera to towns across the country than it is our highly portable nodity

By CARL A. VINES CRAB ORCHARD, Tenn. (UPI) - Spiders, com husks, hornet nests and August fogs foretell a cold winter ahead for this area of the country, but nothing near last year's bitter, record-setting freeze.

"I don't believe it will be as bad as last year," said weather prophet Helen Lane after reviewing the signs she reads in making predictions which have won her nationwide attention through the years.

This year's signs are not nearly so dramatic as last year when spiders invaded Mrs. Lane's home by the hundreds, seeking protection from the cold to come. She and her husband, Jimmy Lane, still live in the house where she grew up on the edge of this little mountain community.

'I'm still getting lots of spiders inside the house," she said. "But there are not nearly so many as last year.

August fogs indicate two big snows this winter for the Cumberland Mountain area of East Tennessee. "I counted two sizable fogs in August," said Mrs. Lane.

"There were three or four little fogs," she added. This would mean two major snowstorms for the winter and three or four periods of snow when accumulations would be relatively light.

Corn husks also indicate a cold winter. 'The husks are sort of heavy this year.' But they aren't nearly as heavy as they were last year.

Mrs. Lane said she had not been able yet to examine any woolly worms, another key to the winter prospects. A solid black woolly worm means a really bad winter. But if it is tipped with brown at each end, winter could be expected to start out mild, worsen and then tail off at the end to another mild period.

Because of her fame as a local folk weather prophet. Mrs. Lane is called on to speak frequently at club meetings. And she said there are many who think of her as a fortune teller.

"I've had people come here wanting me to tell their fortunes," she said. "I guess they think there's something magic about it. If I wrapped my head in a scarf and wore gold earrings I guess I could go in business as a fortune teller.

But she insists her predictions are just observations from nature passed down through the years from her parents and grandparents. There's nothing mysterious about it at all, she says.

"It's just nature protecting its future," she said of the signs she reads in animals and insects which show heavier fur or choose protected spots to nest.

MOTORIZED TRAFFIC BAN MONTREAL (UPI) - About 90 per cent of Montreal's Mount Royal Park is closed to all motorized traffic. Transportation within the park is offered by 20 horse drawn carriages, called "caleches," in the summer, which are replaced by sleighs during the winter months.

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — The school cutup, the show off, the clown or the withdrawn, unfriendly child may be veering toward violence which might be headed off if communities established early warning systems

That's the advice of an authority on the blackboard jungle, Rodger Bybee, professor of education at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., and author of the book, "Dimensions and Dynamics of Classroom Violence.

"Violence in the classroom is not a discrete event but the final stage of a network of circumstances that leads to conflicts in the classroom," Bybee said in an interview. "Teachers who recognize the var-ious stages of discipline problems can do a great deal to prevent terror in the schools.

"Teachers must understand that classroom violence is not a momentary disruption in the continual flow of education, but the final stage in a sequence which begins with a student's feelings of powerlessness, insignificance and repression of personal

Bybee, who also is a consultant to the New York Urban Coalition, said teanhers can identify the problems early and try to help the student. "But the community must pitch in and give the teacher help," he said.

Bybee sees the problem student as going through four stages of recurring behavior patterns: - Affirmation and alienation: The student will consistently do such things as show off, clown or be a nuisance through incessant questioning. — Assertion and withdrawal: The student forces

the teacher to pay attention by being tardy, defiant, angry and talking back. This student may become withdrawn, depressed and sullen or take to drugs and join gangs. - Aggression and depression: The student withdraws further and may try to take over and control situations by disobeying openly and maliciously; or completely withdraw from the classroom. - Violence toward society, school and self: In the final stag0, the student seeks his personal place in the sun by outright damage or injury to others or self, even to suicide.

Among Bybee's recommendations: — Teachers should negotiate rather than resort to corporal punishment, which could lead to further

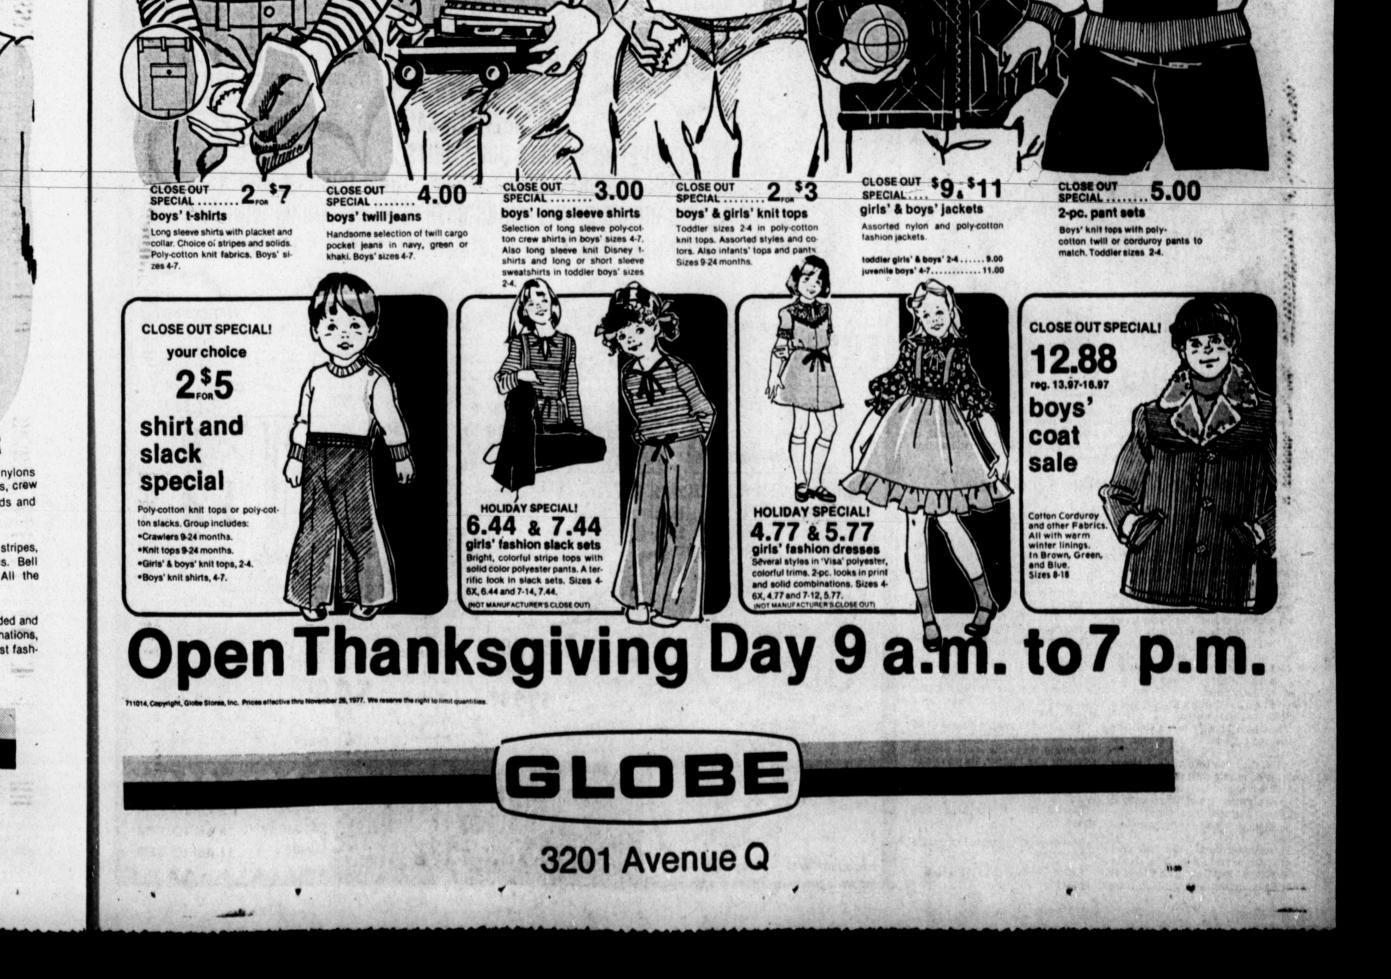

- School counselors and administrators she maintain close contact with social agencies that help youths in trouble.

 The community should be involved in the development of the school's discipline policy.
 Colleges and universities should give greater emphasis to early identification and prevention of discipline problems to students entering the teaching field. ing field.

"Now is the time," Bybee said, "to start working on the problems where we do have the power to make constructive changes, in our classrooms and schools.'

Pasternak's Mistress Breaks Silence On 'Zhivago'

By DOUGLAS STANGLIN

MOSCOW (UPI) - Boris Pasternak's dark, piercing eyes stare down from a photograph in Olga Ivinskaya's cramped, two-room apartment. It has been 17 years since the author-poet's death, but his presence is everywhere.

Snapshots and clippings are piled on her desk or stuck to the bookcase. Now - as during their 14 turbulent years together - their lives remain entwined.

Olga Ivinskaya, 62, was Pasternak's companion and mistress - the woman after whom he patterned the memorable character Lara in his internationally acclaimed novel, "Dr. Zhivago."

"It's not only that I slept with Boris Leonidovich, I was his right hand," she said, in the first interview she has granted a Western correspondent since Pasternak's death. "I knew his thoughts, his deeds, his plans."

She also shared his agony in the international furor created by the publication abroad in 1958 of "Dr. Zhivago," which was denounced by the Soviet Union's official Union of Writers.

After he won the Nobel Prize for literature, Pasternak was forced to choose between accepting the award in Stockholm and never returning home or renouncing it. Under immense pressure, he chose the latter.

Olga said the venomous attacks on Pasternak scarred his memory and forced her to write her memoirs.

"I had no other way out. I did what I had to do."

She said she did not intend for her manuscript to be published abroad, but that, through friends who had read copies of the book, it turned up in the West. It will be published in February.

She said she did not want to stir up "noise" - she just wanted to tell the truth.

Asked if she fears repercussions, Olga said quietly, "Everything is possible." Sipping Bulgarian wine, Olga swept the air with her hands as she talked, saying editors at the Soviet magazine Novy Mir held Pasternak's controversial Zhi-vago manuscript for seven months without acting on it.

'They were saying to me that they won't be able to publish all of it, but parts of it in segments," she said.

The Soviet Communist party Central Committee seemed to favor the book, she said, but the Union of Writers wanted to ban it.

Olga said there was a "struggle for priority" and that Zhivago came very close to being published.

"They even made arrangements for a contract to the State Publishing House, but then they demanded to delete something."

Olga said months passed and nothing happened. Then Pasternak took a gamble.

"I recall him meeting me at the railway station." said Olga, staring out her apartment window. "Very guiltily, he said he had given the novel to an Italian (publisher) and I knew already what it smelled of.

"I rushed to get it back, but I couldn't," she said.

Olga said the publisher told Pasternak he would "stay in the shadow" for a year and give Soviet authorities a chance to publish it.

But when it became known the novel was in the hands of a foreign publisher, the editors of Novy Mir hastily wrote a letter rejecting the manuscript, Olga said

In that letter, written in 1958, the magazine editors attacked Pasternak for political comments expressed by several characters in the book. They referred to the central character - Yuri Zhivago - as having "egocentric views."

The letter criticized the novel at one point because "neither (the character) Alexandr Alexandrovich, nor Zhivago have the least trace of a sense of duty to the revolution or to the people.

Olga said the reaction "had nothing to do with the very gist of the novel." She said the thoughts of secondary characters could have been held by anyone during the upheaval of the 1917 revolution "but all of them were ascribed to the author and they were saying this was his political credo." "He didn't plan (the book) as a challenge and was very reluctant to take part in any political life. He kept saying it, but you know that people who keep saying that they don't want to get involved in politics - do it all around themselves.

"Willy-nilly, we became the heroes of a certain political situation," Olga said. But the uproar scared her and, in turn, Pasternak.

"It was I who got frightened," she said. "Let my faults be my faults. In the situation which Pasternak would have behaved better and in a nicer way here, I interfered."

She said she pressured him to try to get the book back.

"Then followed the line of those people who wanted to force Boris to reject his novel. And, being afraid for his life, I did what they wanted me to."

In the harsh critique from Novy Mir, the editors said the Pasternak who wrote "Dr. Zhivago" was a different man from the beloved poet of earlier years.

Olga agrees. The years had changed him.

"It was the hard time of Stalinism," she said. "Many of his friends suffered." "Life made him face such things and made him reconsider, and think it

Olga, speaking loudly in Russian, said that's why the characters in the book hold a vast array of political viewpoints.

Yuri Zhivago "was not trying to pose as a hero," she said.

"That was the very essence of the book — that he is not a hero."

Olga said that since Pasternak's death, authorities have hinted they planned to publish a collection of his works, including "Dr. Zhivago." But she called the talk "political smiles" and said nothing has ever come of it.

Pasternak's final years were spent in the village of Peredelkino, a farming and weekend resort community of rolling hills and onion-domed churches 20 miles south of Moscow. Olga and Irina, her daughter by an earlier marriage, also lived there.

Pasternak, who also was still living with his wife, maintained two households.

The feeling of isolation around Peredelkino is not unlike Varykino, the secluded, snow-covered summer home in the Urals where Zhivago and Lara spent their final winter together.

Pasternak's grave is in Peredelkino and Olga says she often visits the hilly churchyard where he was buried in 1960.

At home, her memories are at her fingertips. Two albums chronicle their lives together. One shows Pasternak sitting in a window at his Peredelkino dacha, with patches of snow melting in the backyard.

Although she has never seen the film based on "Dr. Zhivugo," Olga has pic-tures of actor Omar Sharif, as Zhivago, and Julie Christie, as Lara.

She smiles when asked if there is any doubt Pasternak patterned Lara after her.

"Lara and I are not identical persons, naturally. But I think that some of the statements she makes are mine, and, of course, there's the lyrical situation.' She said Pasternak once inscribed a book for her: "To Lara, from Yuri."

Indeed, their lives, like those in the novel, were filled with frantic, fleeting moments together and painful departures.

Olga was twice imprisoned because of her ties to Pasternak - the second time after his death.

Perhaps such uncertainties in their life together found a voice in the words spoken by Zhivago as he and Lara made their last trek to Varykino.

"Our days are really numbered," he told her. "So at least let us take advantage of them in our own way."

AUSTIN (Special) -The value of total construction authorized in Texas declined slightly from August to September, according to Janet K. Tandy, research as-sociate at the Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas.

The reduction followed usual seasonal patterns of slower building activity during the fall months.

During September, the value of new residential construction authorized in Texas was $323.2 million. Over the first nine months of the year, residential construction costs were 57 per cent higher than in the same time period in 1976.

One-family dwelling unit permits ac-counted for almost 75 per cent of the cumulative dollar value. The recorded valuation for apartment buildings in Texas was $540 million, nearly double the figure reported for the January-September, 1976, period.

Nonresidential construction over the nine-month period in 1977 was only 14 per cent higher than for that period in 1976. The dollar volume fell in several major categories: hotels and motels (down $31 million), hospitals (down $3 per cent), and public works and utilities (down more than 50 per cent). These loss-es were offset by substantial gains in the construction of industrial buildings (up 84 per cent in dollar volume), stores and retail ence (un A7 per cent) and office. retail space (up 47 per cent), and office-bank buildings (up 29 per cent). During the first three quarters of 1977 different patterns of construction activity occurred in the 25 standard metropolitan statistical (SMSA) in Texas. The number of new one-family dwelling units author-ized was below the 1976 level in three metropolitan areas: Galveston-Texas City. Texarkana, and Wichita Falls. However, these decreases in single-family permits were relatively small.

In contrast, the drops in apartment building construction were substantial, ranging from 22 per cent in the Killeen Temple SMSA to 89 per cent in the Amar-illo SMSA. Other cutbacks in multifamily units in the first nine months of 1977 oc-curred in Galveston-Texas City, Midland, Odessa, and Texarkana

Another indicator of the differences among metropolitan areas in Texas was among metropolitan areas in Texas was the range of the average cost of construc-tion for one-family dwelling units. The differences were attributed to the inter-action of numerous factors, such as labor costs, building materials costs, impact of governmental regulations, and local mar-ket demand for houses selling for more than $50,000. The lowest average cost of construction for single-family houses was construction for single-family houses was in the Laredo SMSA ($20,560). The high-est cost was in the Midland SMSA ($46,-190). Lubbock's average cost for singlefamily home construction was $41,890.

In largest metropolitan areas of Texas, Dallas-Fort Worth and Houston, the total cost of construction for all building per-mits issued reached the $1 billion mark during the January-September period. At $1.250 billion, total construction val-uation in the Dallas-Fort Worth SMSA was 32 per cent higher in 1977 than in 1976. Of this cumulative total cost 62 per cent was for new dwelling units and 30 per cent for new nonresidential

The total construction valuation in the Houston SMSA, $1.058 billion, was more evenly split with 45 per cent going for new units and 39 per cent for new nonres-

new units and 30 per cent for new induction idential development. In the two large Texas SMSAs new resi-dential units were being built at an accel-erated rate in 1977. In the first three quarters, permits were issued for 31,068 new dwelling units in Dallas-Fort Worth, up 85 per cent from the same period in 1976.

The year-to-year increase in new hous-ing in the Houston SMSA was only 21 per cent. The surge in Houston housing con-struction occurred during the first three quarters of 1976, when 20,069 units were authorized. This was a 142 per cent in-crease over the 8,297 units authorized in the same period in 1975.

Recreation Vehicle Show Slated For Civic Center

A full-scale Recreation Vehicle (RV), Boat and Sports Show entitled "Show 1978" has been scheduled for Memorial Civic Center here Feb. 3-5, according to Wayne "Mickey" Henly, sales and mar-keting director for the event.

"Show 1978" will feature a large number of free-standing and booth exhibits, covering more than 40,000 square feet of column-free space in the $16 million facility. The show is being held in coopera-tion with recreation vehicle dealers, boat dealers and other allied sporting good dealers and firms.

Henly said exhibitors from throughout Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Oklahoma will be displaying recreation vehicles, sports and marine equipment, boats, trailers, cycles, aircraft and special

The heat pump is the electric savings machine. And usually a machine of such sensitive operation calls for a lot of space and some pretty technical installation procedures. NOT SO WITH THE HEAT PUMP! "Split systems" - most adaptable to homes - consist of an outdoor and indoor section, easily tucked away in a closet, garage, basement or attic. The single package unit looks very similar to a central air-conditioning unit that's placed outdoors. Both systems can be instailed in most every home or office that has central air ducts. Costs Of Shoplifting, Larcenous Employes Mount

By JAMES J. DOYLE LOS ANGELES (UPI) — As holiday sales push profits up in the retail industry businesses also will be counting the cost of the fastest growing crime in the nation shoplifting.

Experts estimate the loss this year, and the cost of trying to contain it, will total about $26-billion nationwide.

Included in the overall estimates of shoplifting costs are employe thefts. Studies by private security firms here indicate that for every dollar's worth of merchandise a shoplifter grabs, a store employe will take $3.

The euphemism for such loss is "shrinkage.

Loss figure reports have varied but not widely over the last several years. Industry Week Magazine, in 1975, assuming only a percentage of losses reported, estimated shoplifting costs at more than $25 billion. It turned out to be very close to home. U.S. News and World Report placed the 1974 figure at $20.3 billion, or 30 per cent higher than losses in 1971.

In the greater Los Angeles area alone shoplifters and larcenous employes will get away with about $190 million worth of goods this year. The estimated loss to stores in Southern California will be about $250 million.

Shoplifting and employe thefts take quantum leaps unnually, about 10 per cent, police statistics show, despite increased efforts to combat the problem. Gerry Lauritzen. director of Stores

Protective Association, a retail security company owned by a group of the largest department stores in Southern California, said between 35 and 45 per cent of the year's total loss will occur during the final quarter due to increased traffic in stores during the holidays.

From Thanksgiving to Christmas, when stores are jammed with shoppers and salespeople are busy, thieves of all ages and both sexes will just about steal the merchants blind.

Most of the thefts will occur in receiving, shipping, delivery and mail-order departments by employes, security experts said.

Security officers said the rule of thumb is one in every 10 customers in a store is a shoplifter. The National Retail Merchants Association said that 42 of 500 shoppers kept under surveillance in a large metropolitan area store had sho-plifted by day's end - one in 12. Either is a dismal statistic for business

The association gave a rounded figure of $100 million a year as total sales of some large department stores in major cities. The shrinkage is five per cent, or $5 million. And that is the tip of the iceberg.

June-Elizabeth Thorsen, editor of Security World Magazine, noted that much more than the retail value of the item is lost in a theft. For every $10 theft enough additional merchandise must be sold to pay the $10 out of profits before the normal gain cycle can be resumed.

Thus, the store that realizes a five per cent profit must sell $200 worth of merchandise over the counter to pay for the theft of a single $10 item.

An even more disturbing viewpoint, the 14th annual computerized study of shoplifting by Commercial Service Systems of Van Nuys looked at 16,100 apprehensions during 1976 in 727 supermarkets from 14 companies.

Commercial's general manager, Roger Griffin, added that no more than one in 20 shoplifters is ever caught.

Based on that percentage of apprehensions and recovery, Griffin reached a figure of 322,900 actual thefts in his survey of the 16,100 supermarket shopifting incidents. The average cost of the items recovered was $5.90.

He drew a logical sequence that means more bad news for merchants - and the honest consumers who eventually have to pay for the loss It goes like this:

Multiply the estimated thefts by the dollar amount and there is an estimated total loss of $1,899,000.

- Consider that supermarkets operate on a one per cent profit margin and multiply the nearly $1.9 million by 100 and you have the amount the supermarkets must register just to make up for shoplifting losses.

- The stores would apply the proportionate amount of the first $189 million of their year's sales to offset the shoplifting

- Therefore, each of the 727 stores would apply an average of $261,320 in sales to break even.

- That means a store doing $100,000 in sales per week would have to operate for more than two and one-half weeks just to pay for thefts.

Lauritzen said, however, that departments stores get hit even harder. The average cost per item stolen is about $50.

In Griffin's analysis of the 16,100 case, 31.7 per cent of the shoplifters were actuully charged and 68.3 per cent were released. The release figures rose significantly when juveniles were involved.

In the total cases, 51.4 per cent were men and 48.6 per cent were women.

There is no profile of a shoplifter. Kids do it, parents, men and women in slightly varying numbers.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, in a new booklet published for merchants and security personnel, listed five categories.

They are amateur, juvenile, professional, kleptomaniac, and the vagrant-alco-holic. But true kleptomaniacs, the chamber noted, are rare.

There are some known motivations. The amateur steals because he or she gives in to sudden temptation and seldom from necessity. Juveniles frequently do it for status with a peer group and often work in gangs.

Pros are the real danger to the merchandiser in that they can take valuable items in quantity. Lauritzen said a good pro can rip-off $2,000 worth of merchandise a day and can walk off with a 25pound ham or eight cartons of cigaretes locked between the thighs.

In Griffins study of supermarkets, drug stores and discount stores, no more than four-tenths of one per cent of the apprehensions were professionals. Lauritzen said, however, that about 20 per cent of department store thefts are committed by pros.

Less than half of those caught are ever prosecuted, Griffin said. Historically, prosecution is not just to recover property and punish the offender, but also to deter others from the crime. However, there are many problems in prosecution and costs above the already estimated

The expense includes time in surveillance and apprehension, and administrative processing of each case - from the taxpayers' pocket.

That cost rises for the businessman and taxpayer alike when additional time is spent in appearing to sign the criminal complaint and in making one, or several, appearances in the trial court.

The standard of proof is high. The fact that a suspect took merchandise without paying for it may be very clear. But it is very difficult to prove "intent to steal."

The final rub for the merchant: If he detains a suspect and there is an arrest but no conviction, Griffin said, he most probably will be sued

Q. Once and for all, please settle this question. Is it or is it not legal to use a CB in a car in all states. A guy near here tells me that some states don't allow CB at all. -Victor Olson, New Orleans.

A. According to a survey by the United States Citizens Band Association, no state presently prohibits use of a CB. Connicticut was the last stumbling block. The state had an old, confusing law on the books which prohibited radio-telephones in a moving, non-police vehicle. Some state troopers were overly zealous in enforcing the law, including CB rigs as radio-telephones. A couple of other states also had laws prohibiting one-handed driving. But, bowing to the pressure of CBers, all those regulations have been reinterpreted and CBers can now modulate across the country without worry. (Mike Wendland's new book, "The Wendland CB Glove Compartment Bible," has been especially designed for the CBer. The book's washable cover, handy size and current information on the whole range of CB-including 40-channel rigs and the largest guide to slanguage available-make this a must tool for every CBer. The Voice By RICHARD LESHER President of the of Business L.S. Chamber of Commerce

WASHINGTON - In his iconoclastic beck Plagues & People, author William H. McNeil divides the critters that prey man into two classes: microparasites and macroparasites.

The former are the viruses, bacteria, etc. The latter are governments. In either e. McNeil points out, the most successful of these parasites are those that maintain themselves at the least expense to their hosts. That is, if you expect to ive off the milk from your cow, it makes ense to take good care of the cow.

Conversely, diseases - and governments-that treat their hosts harshly breaten their own ability to survive. A fisease that kills too quickly wipes out all the available hosts in a short space of time and then has nowhere else to go. A dvernment that takes too much from its bjects reduces their ability to earn future income, with which to pay future

All of which is a long way to back into essay on tax reform. There is, obviousa point somewhere between zero taxa-tion and 100 per cent taxation at which entive is sufficiently penalized that the igtal tax take of the government begins to fecline, even with higher tax rates. An dightened society will see that the tax orden remains below that point. Within this limit, whatever it is (and ome experts think we may already have eached it), there are inumerable ways to tagle the figures. And juggling the fig-tes is often what tax "reform" comes own to. The game is not an easy one to play, en for the most dedicated and consciious. There are tradeoffs everywhere.

Here are just a few examples: — Simplifying the language. Sounds The a good idea. But a tax code that is easier for the layman to understand may also be less precise. And the lack of precisharpies - Ending "loopholes" that mostly "benefit the rich." Charitable contributions and tax-free state and municipal bonds are usually included in this category. Trouble is, they benefit a lot of people, not just the rich. The local governments and the charities need the money. If they don't get it from "the rich," they cow's feed rather than her milk What kind of reform would I favor? First — and above all — it's time for an across-the-board tax cut. Such a move would help businesses and individuals to save a buck. From these savings would come the capital to invest in new or expanded enterprises. And from that investment would come more jobs, increased productivity (which is anti-inflationary), and ultimately, higher tax revenues from a bigger economy

There are several other changes that would promote saving and investment. A more liberal depreciation allowance and a 12 per cent investment tax credit would encourage business to modernize and expand. Elimination of the double tax on corporate dividends would help, too.

Some of these suggestions are rumored to be included in the Carter Administration's "tax reform" package. To that extent, I can support it.

But there are other rumors about what's in the package that sound dangerous, petty, inequitable, or a combination of all three. One of these is the proposal to put a ceiling on the deduction for morthgage interest and other interest on personal loans. The ceiling would be a high one at first. That's the sugar coating on the pill. But don't think it won't affect health insurance and other "fringe benefits." Can you believe it? The very same people who fret about the high cost of health care want to make it still more expensive for you! How will it all come out? It's too early to tell. But there's one thing you can count on: Don't expect much tax relief if you're in the broad "middle income" range. That's where the money is, in this country. And the tax "reformers" know it. There's only one route to a significant, lasting tax cut: Cut government spending.

HY GARDNER HAS THE ANSWER: Glad You Asked That!

Q: Why does Farrah Fawcett enjoy doing all her own cooking and housework? Does it bring her down to earth and make her feel she's one of us? —Lenore Crouder, Seattle.

ISSUED 'ULTIMATUM'—Farrah Fawcett-Majors told hubby Lee: "If you want me in the bedroom, get someone to do the dishes."

A: That ain't ncessarily so! "At the beginning of my marriage to Lee," she told Claire Susans, "I'd whip up a good meal and we'd take our food into the bedroom where it is very cozy and there is a firepace. After we'd eaten, I would want to start cleaning the dishes. But Lee would say, 'Forget about them!' He'd want to kiss and hug and everything. When we finally got tired and wanted to go to sleep I'd have to attack the dishes, which is the worst thing in the world to me. And that's how I talked Lee into hiring a housekeeper. I told him, 'If you want me in the bedroom, Lee, you will have to get someone to do the dishes.' He hired a housekeeper the next day." However, Farrah admits she still enjoys doing some of the household chores when time and energy permit.

Q: Who is going to publish Queen Eizabeth's memoirs? And about when, do you know? — Mrs. P. De-John, Edmonton, Alberta.

A: We should live that long! Elizabeth has been keeping private diaries almost since her coronation, June 2, 1953. (First time the crowning of a queen was ever seen on TV.) She's never given an interview, and, being a shy person not given to gossip nor controversy, her memos to herself probably won't be made public till the year 2050!

Q: How much of a bonus did the oldtime baseball superstars get paid?

A: We threw that question at Hall of Fame pitching ace Bob Feller. After laughing lustily he answered: "I was a bonus baby. Know what I got? Two autographed baseballs and a scorecard from the 1935 Al-Star Game!"

Q: Is Penny Marshall of "Laverne and Shirley" married to Peter Marshal of "Hollywood Squares"? Or is she his sister? — Edgar Gregory, Milwaukee.

A: Neither. In private life she's the wife of Rob Reiner of "All in the Family." Anything but a Hollywood Square, Penny lived by the rules of her Bronx neighborhood. "Don't beat a guy at anything, let him win, remain a virgin, get married. I didn't question it, I accepted it."

Q: How do stars react to dream-up items palmed off as "news." Do they resent it or do a lot of them say, "Who cares as long as they spell my name right"? -M.R.G., Phoenix, Ariz.

A: Only a rare handful of stars care. One is Henry ("Fonzi") Winkler. "I realize it's pragmatic for my name and picture to appear in print a lot because it's really necessary for my career," he explains. "But a Washington newspaper used my picture taken as I was coming out of a Los Angeles restaurani with a girl I had never been out with before. And then, in their accompanying horoscope, the paper predicted I'd be married soon. It was terrible publicity for me and my mother was very upset."

Q: I see where Chuck Barris, producer of "The Gong Show" and other TV game shows, just wrote a book. How is it going? — E.R.G., Detroit, Mich.

A: It must be going good since he didn't get the Gong from the critics. An idea of what to expect can be seen from the book's preface written by a doctor in a New York rehabilitation center. "We have all our patients watch 'The Gong Show.' It's a way of reintroducing them to reality."

Q: Was it Lester Maddox or Gov. George Wallace who said there is a physical difference between the white and black races which could forever forbid them living together on terms of social and political equality? - C. Clemens, Baltimore.

A: Neither. It was uttered by the great emancipator, Abraham Lincoln (during a debate with Stephen A. Douglas in 1858).

Q: No celebrity vanished from the headlines faster than former Congressman Wilbur Mills. What keeps him busy these days? - L.E., Syracuse, N.Y.

WRONG MARSHALL-Penny Marshall, costar of "Laverne and Shirley," is married to Rob Reiner, not Peter Marshall.

A: Mr. Mills has set a good example by facing his family, friends and neighbors stone sober and thoroughy breaking his ties with Fanne Foxe. (Not easy to do once you've met this intelligent and attractive woman.) We hear the very human senior citizen is a member of an outstanding Washington law firm, majoring in tax laws.

TIPS FROM YOUR BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

ONLY THE HARDY survive our recent tough winters. And, this includes your car. Common cold strikes more cars than any other motoring malady. Prevention, says the Better Business Bureau, is the surest way to maintain a healthy car this winter.

Now is the time to get those snow tires on! They can increase traction 50 per cent in loosely packed snow. But, contrary to popular belief, tire pressure should not be lowered in winter. (Check your owner's manual for the correct pressure.) If you plan on using studded tires, know that some states do not allow them, while others permit studs only during specific months.

Did you know that starting capability may be reduced 60 per cent in sub-zero weather? To make sure your car can stand up to winter's extra power requirements, clean and tighten battery terminals. In only a few minutes at a service station, you can make sure the battery is fully charged and check its fluid level. And, don't forget the starter and alternator they can be a source of battery drain.

For do-it-yourselfers, the following steps are advised for putting in antifreeze: drain the present coolant; flush the system with a quality chemical cleaner and neutralizer; examine the hoses for signs of weakness (a squeeze or tug is sufficient) and replace them if indicated; ex-

Brokerage Firms Announce Plans For Merger

Thanksgiving Day Almost Died Out

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Americans' celebration of Thanksgiving Day almost died out during the presidency of Thomas Jefferson, between 1801 and 1809, according to Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins.

The first proclamation of Thanksgiving Day was made in 1789 by George Washington, but by early 19th century the holiday was being celebrated only in a few parts of the United States, and on different dates. In 1827, a Boston magazine editor named Sarah Josepha Hale started a one-woman campaign to have Thanksgiving Day properly recognized. Finally in 1863 President Lincoln proclaimed it a national holiday.

amine the drive belts for possible slippage — fraying, cracks or a glazed appearance are sure signs (there should be no more than 1/2 inch give when the belt is depressed half-way between the pulleys); and, finally, install an antifreeze solution with 50 per cent concentrate.

A tune-up before the chill sets in is a must for careful winter drivers. It is a wise investment which can save many a warm body from a dreaded cold, snowy night when the car won't start.

Car windows often are rolled up tightduring the winter months. This increases the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning. It is important, therefore, to have the car's exhaust system checked now for leaks. Even if the system is given a clean bill of health, it is the best to drive with at least one window cracked a bit.

There are other suggested preparations for a safe winter of driving without the discomfort of a "cold" breakdown. Replace worn windshield wipers and add a washer antifreeze solution to the windshield washer reservoir. Make sure the heater is working properly for your comfort and check the efficiency of the defroster.

To guard against gasoline freeze, add a de-icer to the gas tank at least twice a month. As temperatures go down, oil thickens, so a lightweight, winter-grade oil should be used during the next few months.

And, now you are ready to go out on the road. Winter driving is tricky enough without added problems of a steering wheel with too much "play." Have this checked, and then...slow down. "Winter driving conditions require greater caution" than usual, says the Safe Winter shields. Visibility through "portholes" is never adequate.

Accelerate slowly and avoid spinning wheels. Traction is greatest just before the wheels spin. (If spinning is avoidable, then "rock" the car backward and forward to loosen the wheels.)

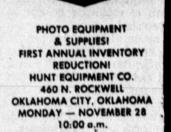

Allow greater distance than usual between cars. It takes ten times as far to stop on ice than on dry roads.

When slowing, pump the brakes to avoid skidding.

-During a skid, steer in the direction of the rear skid. Avoid braking at all and do not "oversteer."

Some helpful items to have in your car this winter include a flashlight, ice scraper, snow brush, rag (to clean headlights and inner windshields), spare containers of washer rluid and gasoline antifreeze and a small shovel. The BBR says the safest rule for driving on snow or ice is...don't. Stay off the roads until they are cleared.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The number of U. S. farm families feeding America and helping feed the rest of the world is declining steadily.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture's latest figures, for 1976, show the number of farms at 2,778,000, compared with 3,-257,000 in 1966.

The farm population in 1966 was 11,-595,000 and by 1976 had declined to 8,-253,000, the department said.

In 1966, 5.9 per cent of the population farmed. By 1975, it had dropped to 4.2 per cent, by 1976 to 3.8 per cent.

Richard Edwards, research economist with the USDA, said the largest single factor in the decline in numbers was that smaller farms, when they came on the market, were being purchased by neighboring farmers to increase their own business. tributed to a stabilization of MBPXL's production volume and earnings, a spokesman said.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Time For A New Direction

PRESIDENT CARTER is fast approaching the end of his first year in office. For both the President and the nation, it has been a most unusual and at times confusing petiod.

On the one hand, the nation's economy has maintained a more or less steady pace, showing signs of sluggishness only in the past few weeks. Generally, a strong base still prevails.

On the other side of the coin, unemployment remains high in certain areas, yet at the same time the job work force also is at a near-record level.

ON MATTERS of foreign policy, a similar pattern of conflicting policies and results has prevailed.

As measured against past periods, for most parts of the world a state of peace prevails. However, two major "flash points," the Mideast and Southern Africa, remain volatile. At the same time, Mr. Carter's human rights crusade, which in itself is a noble goal, nevertheless has come off in a selective and at times highly hypocritical manner.

Despite such policies, for much of the President's first few months in office, he has maintained a high degree of personal populatity with the voters.

TODAY, THAT is changing. For the first time since his election, Mr. Carter is showing up on the negative side of the surveys, on everything from restoring confidence in the White House to how he is handling the energy problem.

The American people in the past have been most lenient in the manner in which they treat their public servants. Forgiving almost to a fault, they have permitted mistakes and weaknesses that in the final analysis cost them, the voters, dearly.

However, since Watergate and what many regard as excesses by some members of Congress, a new attitude is emerging. The public expects leaders to lead, results to be forthcoming. It's a tall order.

PRESIDENT CARTER came to the White House as a "new face, an outsider" with new ideas of how to run the most complex government in the world.

He surrounded himself with what many regarded as top men who should have been able to guide him in the ways of Washington, and especially Congress.

ke their advice,

The result was a stalemate which exists to this day.

IN HIS TAX rebate package, heavily pushed and just as quickly withdrawn, the President gave a picture of a man who wasn't quite sure what he was about.

In permitting U.S. Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young to spout off unchecked for months in the face of mounting foreign and domestic criticism, Mr. Carter came off as a man who either did not grasp the more refined rules of diplomacy or a person who didn't care.

The result was a polarization of relations with some nations and especially the Republic of South Africa to the extent that instead of accomplishing his intended goal, he only made matters worse.

THE PRESIDENT'S controversial and complicated Energy Program is another item in the "most confusing" category.

The average American, although aware that somewhere down the road there may be no more gas, has not bought the idea that the U.S. indeed faces a major crisis. If not in how much oil and gas will be available, at least in where it is coming from.

Mr. Carter is quite correct in attempting to get this urgent message across. He is most wrong in the manner and solution.

Instead of coming off as a leader who has convinced the American people that their own, as well as the future of their children is at stake, he has come off as a man who offers a "soak the rich oil companies" and "tax the users" person. Neither the public nor the oil companies are buying.

MR. CARTER has been pictured as a man willing to learn fast from past mistakes, a man willing to meet friend and foe halfway for the good of the country.

From this distance, we perceive him as a man who has spent far too much time worrying about an image rather than working with Congress, business and the people on programs that will work.

He comes off as a man who sacrificed much stature abroad with an adamant and unyielding "human relations" stance that at times seemed pitched toward domestic minority voters than aiding those who need help.

It is no secret that we have been most critical of some of Mr. Carter's policies, at home and abroad. However, he is the President and as such, certainly for the next three years, will do much to affect the lives of all of us. In that context, we sincerely hope he learns from what many regard as past mistakes, that he restores the needed confidence in government, the economy and foreign policy. It's still a big order, but he is the man in the driver's seat at the moment.

Lubbock Woman Is Upset

With Traffic Light Setup

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

My gripe lies strictly with the city employes, no matter what their titles, who seem to think they can reduce speeding on our streets by timing the traffic lights to turn red in the drivers' faces. Nothing could be further from the truth!

There are no speeders on the main street through Amarillo going north and south. Why should there be? After all, if anyone speeds he just has to wait at the next light for it to catch up with him.

The lights in Lubbock are so poorly timed that you have to stop at almost every downtown light, and people drive 35 m.p.h. up and down the Brownfield Highway in a 50 m.p.h. speed zone, and 50 m.p.h. up and down Slide Road where the speed limit is 40 m.p.h.

And we've always known that if there happens to be a shortrage of lobsters, we'll be the ones who wind up munching macaroni, not the ty-cooons with their six-figure salaries and their cor-porate jets and fancy executive fringes.

SO IT'S ONLY human to gloat a little when we read that a biggie like Bethlehem Steel is reeling under a $477 million loss; that Kennecott Copper has lost $22 million, or that LTV is down almost $20 million.

And we aren't visiblu upset when we hear that Gulf and Western's earnings are off 51 percent, Union Carbide's 20 percent and Dow Chemical's 13.4 percent.

Serves 'em right, we say when the big oil companies, whom President Carter keeps attacking as profiteers, report in with almost flat earnings. Maybe we're still grumbling over the fact that earlier this year, Big Business crashed through the hundred-billion-buck ceiling for the first time in history. Not only crashed through, but crashed through big, with profits pouring in at an annual rate of $104.3 billion.

Thanks to the sweat of our brows, we told ourselves. And when the third-quarter figures came in and the rate slipped to around $98 billion, we smirked at the $6 billion drop.

We shouldn't. Because no matter where we are on the payroll scale, when the corporate giants lose out, so, eventually, does everybody else.

FACT IS, IF business doesn't generate any money, there isn't any. In the early years, there was reason for labor's resentment against bosses who refused to pay a living wage.

That's what led to labor unions and contract negotiations and escalation clauses. But when steel corporations report disastrous losses, it follows that thousands of steel workers will lose their jobs. Which means that, after their unemploment benefits run dry, they will either stop spending or wind up on welfare.

THINGS AREN'T exactly whoopdedo in the automobile industry at the moment, either. The biggies reported in with a 32-percent increase for the quarter, but that's misleadi

Most of it was due to the 527-percent profits boost at Ford, which had been hit hard by last year's third-quarter strike. So any comparison had nowhere to go but up.

Everybody's selling lots of cars, which looks great on the charts. But industry profits seem to be slipping into slow gear. General Motors managed to eke out only a one-percent increase for this quarter, and Chrysler earnings fell 50 percent. They've just closed some plants and offered price rebates on two of their larger cars.

BY THIS TIME you don't need a government expert to tell you that when Detroit begins to feel pinched it closes down assembly lines, which means the loss of thousands of jobs. More bad news for everybody.

On the average, corporate profits across the board turned fairly flat for this quarter. Sales were up 13 percent from this time last year, but earnings managed to squeak up only nine per cent. And profit margins slid from 5.7 percent to

Lynn Hospital Man Sees

How It Is On Health Care Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

After reading the proposed guidelines from HEW concerning health care planning, I can imagine the following telephone conversation between President Carter and Joseph Califano, secretary of HEW

"Hello, Joe. I have just finished reading your proposed guidelines on health care planning and, to be frank, I simply do not understanding how rationing health care is going to lower the cost." "Well, Mr. President, you are rather new in this job, but don't worry, we know exactly what we are doing over at HEW." "Maybe so, Joe. But hospitals all over the na-

It was apparent that some of his closest advisers, among them campaign stalwarts. were creating more problems than solutions. Mr. Carter ignored the old dictum that Presidents advise and Congress consents.

ART BUCHWALD:

Dear, Guess Who Isn't Coming To Dinner...

WASHINGTON-Most Americans are relieved that President Carter has postponed his trip abroad to nine countries in 11 days. Not only has it saved the American taxpayer millions of dollars but there was a feeling that the President would not be able to accomplish much in that short time.

Yet when the word was announced, it caused great disappointment in the countries President Carter had planned to visit. Preparations had been in full swing and excitement was building up for Mr. Carter's short stay.

WHEN ONE head of state's wife was informed that the President was not coming she broke into tears.

"But I've been cleaning the palace ail week," she told her husband. "I don't want to hear about your troubles," he said. "I've been painting all the buildings from the airport into town." The wife asked, "What do I tell the caterer?"

"Tell him the dinner has been canceled. I'm sure he'll understand." "That's easy enough for you to say. But he turned down three parties to do our dinner. You know this is his busy season.' "Listen, I'm not responsible for Carter canceling his trip. Why are you bothering me with your problems'

"YOU THINK it's easy to get the palace ready for an American President? Do you know we bought new draperies and slipcovers for his visit? And I had all the rugs shampooed. I think he has a lot of nerve telling us he's decided not to come at this late date."

'Woman, will you shut up? I gave all the schoolchildren in the capital the day off so they could cheer for the President. Now I have to go on television and tell them I was only fooling. How does that make me look?

"Do you realize we invited 800 generals and their wives and two members of the opposition party to a reception before the dinner? We're going to be the laughingstock of the town." "So we'll uninvite them. I had to get the air force in shape for a fly-over. Only two out of the 400 planes the United States sold us can still get off the ground." "I never should have sent to Paris for a new evening dress."

"I DON'T WANT to hear any more. I've hung American Flags on every lamppost in the city. What am I going to do with 130,000 American Flags?" "Won't the American exporters take them back?"

"I didn't get them from America. I got them from Japan. They've been dumping American Flags in every country Carter was supposed to visit." "I think you should send a formal note of protest to the White House telling them we have been personally insulted.

"I've done that already.

"What did they say?"

"I got a note from their daughter Amy telling me she was studying our country in her geography class and asking me to send her any information we had on our raw materials.

"YOU KNOW our children are furious with us because I made them clean up their rooms?"

"That's just too bad. Do you realize how shaky my regime has been in the last six months? I was counting on Carter's visit to solidify my position with the military junta. The army military band has been practicing 'Dixie' for three months. What do you think they're going to say when I tell them they can forget it?"

"I think if the President of the United States had any feeling at all he would at least have sent his brother Billy Carter in his place."

They offered us Billy Carter, but he charges $10,000 an appearance, and no one in my cabinet President on March 15, 1978. thinks he's worth it."

Reader Takes Issue With Military Pension Editorial

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

How would you feel if The AJ were to arbitrarily and unilaterally look at its retirement program, decide it costs too much, and change the timing and amount so that the cost would be lower?

In your editorial of Nov. 10, 1977, that is exactly what you are suggesting that the U.S. government do with its servicemen and employes. It is their retirement pay. If the government promised them retirement pay after 20 years, then it should keep its promise.

If the retired pay system is changed, the change should affect only new employes who are aware of the new system when they make their commitments

I for one do not believe the present system is excessive. It is what is necessary to attract and hold the quantity and quality of people they need. If the service retirement is so great, why don't you enlist in the service of your choice. In only 20 years (providing you can survive hardships, the separations from your family, the many hours of unpaid overtime and the possibility you might get killed), you, too, can receive half-pay (actually a little over a third of total pay) which is fully taxable.

I notice in your comments on the Military Compensation Panel that you quote only remarks from two military retirees.

Did you know that this is a civilian panel and its president and the overwhelming majority of its members are civilians from the private sector? They will be meeting for several months, have not yet made any decisions and probably won't until shortly before their final report to the

"I'm surprised at you Mr. President. You should have realized by now that the Congress and HEW have a vast amount of expertise in the health care field and, after all, the private citizens are not complaining yet. The hospitals are the ones that are going to have to tell the patients that services will be cut back. This should direct the public's anger at the hospitals and make it easier for us to pass compulsory national health insurance."

"Maybe you're right, Joe. Golly gee, all this stuff is giving me a headache. Do you know of a physician still willing to treat politicians?" "I know just the physician, Mr. President. He

Carter's 'Bought' Statement On Texas Stirs Up Reader

Editor, Avalanche-Journal

I have never written a newspaper before

But that statement by Mr. Carter about Texas being bought and paid for stirred me up, as it should have all Texans.

I always thought that everybody knew that Texans under Sam Houston whipped Santa Anna with no help from anybody except Tennessee volunteers.

Why don't you start a letter-writing deal and flood Washington with a demand for a public apology for that "bought and paid for" remark? If there were any U.S. dollars floating around, the guys at the Alamo never saw any

We give money and arms to Israel today, but those Texans and Tennesseans never got so much as a rifle from the U.S. as far as I know. Texas was too much of a hot potato.

Why don't you remind the public that the U.S. wouldn't have anything to do with Texas until Texas won her independence?

If that doesn't make you gloomy, it does Big Business. And when the Executive Suite gets the glooms it stops building news plants, hiring new workers and raising dividends to stockholders

President Carter is trying hard to to keep things from getting that serious. To boost the confid-ence of businessmen he's promised them everything from a balanced budget to corporate tax cuts. On the other hand, he's busily spending money and raising taxes.

Now everybody's hoping the upcoming Christmas shopping spree will put executive planners in a more optimistic mood. So let's hear it for the tycoons. They may live higher on the hog than the rest of us, but when they don't, we get the ears and tail.

Imposing Of Sentence Most Critical Point In Criminal Justice System

Copyright 1977 by the Regents of the University of California.

By ALAN M. DERSHOWITZ "THE IMPOSITION of sentence is probably the most critical point in our system of administering criminal justice," observed Marvin Frankel, a distinguished jurist, in 1973.

It may, literally, mean the difference between life and death, freedom, freedom or confinement, short - or long-term imprisonment.

The power of the sentencing judge, in many jurisdictions, is awesome. Without giving—or even having—reasons, a judge may decide to sentence one robber to probation and another, different in no relevant respect, to 20 years in prison. Nor can these sentences generally be reviewed by a higher court.

Despite the enormous power of the sentencing judge, the process of im-posing sentence is essentially lawless. There are few guidelines and virtually no accountability

Both observers of, and participants in, the American criminal justice system are almost unanimous in viewing the process of imposing sentences as a dismal failure by any standard.

Yet the imposition of sentence is "crucial" because, for many defendants, it may be the only point in the criminal justice system - other than bail determination - where a judicial decision is made. Despite popular fascination with the drama of the courtroom trial, the vast majority of criminal cases are disposed of without any trial. The defendant agrees to plead guilty to a given crime, in exchange for some concession by the prosecutor — a reduced charge or a promise to recommend a reduced sentence.

IN SOME JURISDICTIONS, judges participate overtly in this bargaining. In most jurisdictions, however, judges remain aloof from the negotiation. They retain the power — at least in theory — to accept or reject the prosecutor's recommendation and to impose any sentence within the statutory range.

The unfairness and uncertainty of this sentencing system has been amply documented.

In one recent study, 50 federal judges were given 20 identical files, drawn from actual cases, and asked to indicate the sentence they would impose on each defendant. In a case of possession of barbiturates with intent to distribute, one judge gave the defendant five years in prison, while another put him on probation. One judge sentenced a defendant convicted of securities fraud to two years imprisonment, while another fined him $2,500.

This study, commissioned by a group of judges, concluded that there were "glaring disparities" in sentencing. Similarly, a recent study of sentences imposed during a two year period in Montgomery County, Ohio, disclosed that a certain judge imprisoned defendants four times as often as other judges for the same offense.

DISPARITIES OF THIS KIND cannot be explained by differences among criminals. They are - as one judge recently observed - a func-tion "of the wide spectrum of character, bias, neurosis and daily vagary encountered among occupants of the trial bench.

There is also evidence that some of the disparity is a function of prejudice: social, economic, and cultural. An exhaustive study of state and fed-eral sentences for larceny and assault disclosed that blacks have a oneand-a-half times greater chance of being imprisoned than whites with similar records Other studies have shown that defendants appearing in low status dress are significantly more likely to receive prison sentences than comparable defendants wearing higher status clothin

Two centuries ago, Blackstone, the great English legal commentator, observed that the sentences handed down by judges are not "their" sent-ences, but the sentences of the "law." Today, it is the judge – as an individual - who decides who shall be imprisoned; and it is the judge and the members of the parole board, not the "law" as an abstraction, who decide how long an imprisoned defendant shall serve.

RECENTLY, THERE HAS been mounting criticism - from the left and right alike - of a sentencing system that makes so much depend on the idiosyncrasies of individual sentencing judges.

QUESTIONS:

- 1. Why can the process of sentencing be characterized as lawless?
- 2. What is an "indeterminate sentence"

3. What appears to be the underlying cause of sentencing disparity? 4. What are some of the reforms currently being considered by legislatures?

ANSWERS

1. There are few guidelines and virtually no accountability.

2. A sentence in which the parole board decides the actual amount of time the offender will be incarcerated from a rather broad range of minimum and maximum time.

3. The unchannelled discretion exercised by all sentencing decision mak-

4. Flat-time sentencing, presumptive sentencing, and other proposals to limit the discretion of sentencing decision makers.

Liberal critics believe the sentencing system discriminates against poor and minority criminals and in favor of white-collar and privileged criminals. Conservative critics argue that current sentencing practices result in nals. Conservative critics argue that current sentencing practices result in the early release of dangerous, violent people. The specific focus of much of this criticism has been the so-called inde-terminate sentence — a mechanism by which the amount of time a con-victed criminal will actually serve is decided by the "parole board" or " adult authority" while the prisoner is serving his sentence. Both the legis-lature and the sentencing judge still play important roles; the legislature sets the outer limits of the permissible punishment for the type of crime, while the judge decides on the desirable range for the crime and crimi-nal. But these limits are often, broad, and the parole agency thus be-comes responsible for deciding what really counts: when the defendant will be released. will be released.

The indeterminate sentence is merely one manifestation of the existing disparity in sentencing. The underlying cause is the unchanneled discretion exercised by all the sentencing decision-makers — judges, prosecutors, parole boards, and adult authorities.

IN AN EFFORT to impose some uniformity of sentencing, a number of legislatures — including Congress — are now considering significant reforms. Some of these reforms, however, address only a small part of the problem.

For example, mandatory minimum sentencing for certain offenses deals only with discretion at the low end of the sentencing spectrum. It "requires" judges to impose a certain minimum sentence (perhaps a year) upon everyone convicted of a specific offense (for example, illegal possession of a handgun, as in Massachusetts).

Flat-time sentencing retains "judicial" discretion by allowing the judge to select the "appropriate" sentence from a wide range of alternatives; but it eliminates "parole board" discretion by requiring the inmate to serve his entire term (minus "good time").

The approach that seems to be attracting the most attention is a compromise solution called "presumptive sentencing." Under that approach, or its many variants, the legislature decides not only on the minimum and maximum sentences for a given crime, as it does today, but also on the "presumptive" sentence for a "typical" first offender convicted of a 'typical" instance of this crime.

The legislature might thus decide that the typical burglar - an unmarried, unemployed, uneducated male in his early twenties who broke into an inhabited house late at night without a weapon and took several hundred dollars worth of valuables — should generally serve one year. One year would thus become the presumptive sentence for this crime.

IN THE ABSENCE of legislatively specified aggravating or mitigating circumstances, the sentencing judge would be expected to impose that sentence on all first offenders convicted of that crime. If the judge departed from the presumptive sentence, he would have to detail in writing the reasons for his decision. All sentences departing from the presumptive one by more than a specified percentage - for example, 25 per cent - would be automatically appealable. The sentence would be reversed unless the appellate court concluded that the judge's reasons had overcome the presumption in favor of uniformity.

Under this approach, the parole board would retain only limited power under unusual circumstances to release the inmate before the expiration of a statutorily fixed percentage of his sentence (for example, 75 per

In the end, neither this nor any other proposed solution to the dilemma of sentencing will be a panacea. The elusive quest for the fitting punishment has occupied the collective wisdom of mankind since the beginning of recorded history.

THE PENDULUM appears now to have swung in the direction of greater certainty and uniformity in sentencing. Undoubtedly some re-form will be forthcoming, and we will see not the demise of individuali-zation in sentencing, but its waning influence. Perhaps a decade from now a reaction will again set in and the pendulum will swing back in the direction of interview of methods. direction of increased flexibility.

The views expressed in COURSES BY NEWSPAPER are these of the authors only and do not necessarily reliect those of the University of California, the funding agencies, or the par-ticipating newspapers and colleges.

NEXT WEEK: David J. Rothman, Professor of History at Columbia University, discusses the history of our penal system.

Broken Heart' Often Proves To Be Fatal Illness

By PETER VANDEVANTER

BALTIMORE (UPI) - Loneliness can kill.

The bachelor who hops from one singles bar to another, the middle-aged divorced man who spends his nights watching television, the elderly widow who seeks companionship from her poodle - all are likely to die from illnesses aggravated by the same disease: their feelings of isolation.

At least that's the theory of Dr. James J. Lynch, a specialist in psychosomatic disease at the University of Maryland's medical school.

Lynch argues in his bestselling book, "The Broken Heart," that loneliness is a cruel "king without clothes" in America which often leads to heart disease and premature death for the single, widowed and divorced.

He believes that human "dialogue" - both physical and emotional - is the single most disregarded factor in modern medicine.

"We live in a society in which King Loneliness has no clothing, yet, because everyone believes he is the only one who feels lonely, we tell ourselves that loneliness must be a mirage," said Lynch.

In his book Lynch cites a wealth of statistics to demonstrate the unhealthy aspect of being lonely and then gives clinical data to corroborate the magical power of human contact, especially in a family setting.

According to Lynch's statistics covering the years 1959-61 and Americans aged 15-64

- Of white males per 100,000 population, 176 married men die of heart disease compared with 362 single men

- Of nonwhite males per 100,000 population, 142 married men and 298 divorced men died of heart disease

- Of white females per 100,000 population, 44 married women died of heart disease and 67 widows.

-- Of nonwhite females per 100,000 population, 83 married women and 165 widows died of heart disease

Lynch says that for every listed cause of death - cancer, suicide, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatic fever, pneumonia, diabetes, turberculosis, syphilis - the single, widowed and divorced had significantly higher death rates than did mar-ried people, both white and nonwhite and both sexes.

"How in the world did we become a society of bad relationships blind to the health implications of loneliness?" Lynch asks.

Lynch said that historically American doctors and laymen consider disease to be an assault by nature, such as the infectious diseases polio and tuberculosis, that have been effectively controlled by scientific medicine.

"The return to a medicine - and a society - that once again recognizes the healing power of human contact will meet resistance from many sources within the medical community," he said.

But he maintains it is absolutely necessary. Lynch said that persons who are critically ill are helped toward death in many hospitals by being denied human contact, especially with spouses and family He said in the case of heart disease, statistically the leading killer in the United States today, the primary case study of the causes of the "silent killer" disregards the factor of loneliness and emotional instability.

"The scientists chose to study over several decades the people in Framingham, Mass., which is a small city of socially stable people most of them married with families. The group has a lower index of coronary trouble than the rest of the country," he said.

Lynch pointed to bordering states Nevada and Utah in making his point that

HAPPY RETURN - Jack Rodd, left, a private flyer for 35 years, and Harold Benham, a fighter pilot veteran of three wars, hold keys to the city of Cortez after completing an around-the-world flight in a record-breaking 11 days and 33 minutes. the family situation is a key factor in health. Nevada, which has the highest divorce rate in the country, also has the highest rate of premature heart diseas

But Utah, which has one of the lowest divorce rates in the nation, has the lowest rate of premature heart disease.

'But this is not to say that someone can't be happy and healthy who is unmarried," said Lynch. "There are definitely ways for single people to have strong, meaningful relationships with others."

He said his book only lends meaning and significance to the statistical reality that single, widowed and divorced persons more often die before they reach the age of 64 well below average life expectancy for American men and women. "I don't limit myself to some kind of treatise on the family in America," he said. "You can't have a healthy family in a society in chaos. What each of us has to do is learn to live within a community of people." Lynch, who has become a sought-after lecturer since publication of his book, said he was inspired to begin writing when he witnessed his 75-year-old father die with his wife of 48 years at his bedside holding his hand.

He said he has seen death come for so many people that same way - in sil-

"The essence of those encounters is dialogue, nonverbal dialogue (and) communication between those who are alive and love.

"This dialogue is the elixir of life. If that elixir somehow dries up, people begin to whither and die."

Despite his criticism of American science - which he says disregards natural human caring — Lynch said the reaction from the professional medical com-munity to his book has been positive. "We must evolve a medicine that moves beyond science," he said. "We have to treat humans as more than man-machines that can be fixed up with pills and technology. We must realize that feelings cause disease.

But Lynch said the mass audience reaction to his book has been most surprising to him.

So many people keep telling me 'Whew, I'm glad somebody's finally written what I believed all along'." said Lynch, who himself is married and has three children aged 8, 10 and 12.

Lynch said he has been interested in the "mind-body" problem since college. "Maybe I blushed at an early age," quipped Lynch, 38, who graduated from Boston College in Boston, Mass., and went to graduate school at Catholic University in Washington, D.C.

He has taught at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia and Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

In his book, Lynch moves beyond statistics to show the affect of human caring upon one's health by describing observations and experiments he made as a staff doctor at the Maryland Center for Emergency Services.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (Special)-Old Man Winter officially is just around the corner, according to Religion News Service.

It therefore is time again for church congregations to start thinking about conserving fuel and en-

In 1975, 120 members of the Martin Luther King. Community Church in Sprinfield paid $750 for oil. Last winter, the bill hit $2,000, and the Rev. Ronald Peters said it placed a "terrible strain" on members of the United Presbyterian congregation. But things are looking up. Energy conservation analysis revealed how the bill could almost be halved at very little cost to the church. The church was one of three here in which Total Environmental Action, Inc. (TEA) conducted intensive analysis for use at a seminar on energy stewardship, sponsored by the American Baptist Extension Corp., the United Presbyterian Synod of the Northeast, in cooperation with the Presbyteries of New England, and the United Methodist Church Board of Global Ministries.

The seminar drew clergy and lay leaders from 12 states representing six Protestant denominations and three Roman Catholic dioceses.

They learned that the first thing a church should think of when it comes to saving energy is not storm windows but heating plant efficiency and turning back the temperature in church areas not in use

Consider the Martin Luther King Community Church. It is a 100-year-old wooden frame building. When the burner operates, it heats all areas of the structure. But, as in most churches, the sanctuary is unused most of the time during the week.

TEA's suggeston: Turn off the radiators in the sanctuary manually after the Sunday worship service. Estimated savings: $570 per year

The oil burner in the church was in poor repair. A new burner would cost between $200-$300 but would increase efficiency as much as 25 per cent and could save as much as $369 in oil the first year. Regular maintenance of burners is a must for churches that want to cut costs, TEA said. At Trinity United Methodist Church, where the seminar was held, a drop in burner efficiency of as little as 2 per cent would mean as much as $500 a year in wasted oil

Cutting the temperature in areas of the church not in use is the most straight forward way of saving energy, a according to TEA (and this applies to any sector of the nation).

Sometimes this is possible by using automatic thermostats that are timed to set back the temperature at certain hours of the day or certains days of the week

Sometimes it requires more ingenuity to save. At Church in the Acres (American Baptist), the same thermostat controls the temperature in the sanctuary and the minister's study

TEA suggests turning back the thermostat 15 degrees when the sanctuary is not in use, and buying a small electric heater for the study.

The saving in oil (an estimated $310 a year) would more than offset the price of the heater and electric heat, it was said.

Evelyn Fitzgerald of the energy team of the American Baptist Extension Corp., told seminar participants that churches have a dual reason to take stock of their energy use.

"Money is an obvious one. But a church that squanders heat 'because it can afford it' violates the basic premise of being a good steward of the earth's resources," she said

$1.9 Million Auditorium Due Completion In 1978

Lubbock's Sunset Church of Christ, facing south on 35th Street adjoining the present church auditorium at 3723 34th St., will be completed about March 15. 1978, elders of the church have announced.

The handsome, fan-shaped structure will span an area of 30,000 square feet.

WHILE THINKING about a Thanksgiving column, I found a story from the life of Abraham Lincoln which embodies an important point that should be made at this great national Thanksgiving observance.

The farmer was awakened and witnessed this extraordinary phenomenon. It frightened him and excitedly he called out to the sleeping Lincoln: "Abe, get up! Look out the window. The world's coming to an end.'

Lincoln quickly thrust his long body out of his comforable bed and sprung to the window. He put out his lean neck and looked up at the sky. A slow smile spread over his face. He drew back into the room, went up to the farmer and put a reassuring arm around his shoulder. "Dont be alarmed," he said. "Go back to bed. There may be some shooting stars, but the great constellations still stand

It is so in American life. If upheaval follows upheaval, and conflict follows conflict, yet we can give thanks to Almighty God that the great constellations still stand. The ancient landmarks are there. The outlook for the future is not an unhappy one unless we make it so

WHAT ARE THESE ancient landmarks that still remain? Think a moment. For one thing, you are a free citizen; you are free, for example, to read this column or this newspaper, or not, just as you choose. And you are free to agree or disagree with what you read. The fact that you are reading it in a free press is another landmark. And you have the freedom to participate in a free election in which you have a free choice of candidates.

Perhaps the most precious of all these landmarks our ancestors left us is the right to worship as we please. Not only is religion one of the most important bases on which American was founded-strong, but it is getting stronger all the time. This is especially significant because a free state rises or falls with the re-These are some of the great constellations, the large things. We have much to be thankful for in them. But every constellation is make up of a myriad of smaller stars, and for these tiny stars we ought also be thankful. For these are the things that have to do with individuals, and it is upon the sacredness of individual human personality under God that our whole system of free government rests. So we should also be thankful for our deep ingrained American respect for the personalities and rights of others which, in our own turn, gives us the opportunity to develop as we please within these self-same limitation.

Rev. Tietjen Still Believes In Miracles

By DALE SINGER ST. LOUIS (UPI) - After being branded a heretic, dragged through lengthy and bitter trials and investigations and rejected by his church, the Rev. Dr. John H. Tietjen still believes in miracles.

As the head of moderates who left the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod over the basic question of whether the Bible is history or allegory, Tietjen battled conservative leaders of the synod who argued that everything in the Scriptures is fact

Tietjen lost the fight but in the proces he gained insight into what God had in mind for him, he said in an interview

"I learned there's a big difference between compliance with the law and the pursuit of justice, both in the church and in the world. There can be times when you have to ignore the law and maybe even break the law if it stands in the way of justice

'It was a tough lesson for me because I'm a law-and-order man. It took me a long time to learn that one.

Once president of the world's largest Lutheran seminary, Concordia, Tietjen now heads Christ Seminary-Seminex, formed by him and his followers who left Concordia in 1974 because of the doctrinal dispute. He was formally expelled from the Missouri synod this past September

The charge on which Tietjen was convicted and which he refused to appeal was the teaching of false doctrine. He said the charge was merely an excuse and he was a victim of political infighting.

What really happened in the Missouri Synod was a backlash against change that came with its acculturation as an American church

We went through changes and politicians got hold of the controversy. People said we were leaving our moorings, getting away from our roots. The politicians needed an issue to grasp and gain power, and they used the issue of false doctrine

At the height of the struggle between followers of Tietjen and officers of the synod, led by the Rev. Dr. Jacob A.O. Preus, synod president, the example of Jonah and the whale was often used to explain the controversy.

Preus and conservatives took the story as unvarnished truth. The Tietjen camp said it could be viewed as a parable.

We were arguing about what is right and wrong in Biblical interpretation," Tietjen said. "They said it was okay to use different methods as long as we got the same conclusions. When the conclusions were different, they said the methods were bad.

"Other Lutheran groups have had this problem too, but they rode it through because they didn't let it fall into the hands of the politicians.

At 49, a veteran of nearly eight years of controversy, Tietjen appears to be re-

Citywide Service Here Cancelled

A citywide Thanksgiving service traditionally held prior to the holiday here has been cancelled for 1977, according to an announcement by the Rev. Charles Dunnam, president of the Lubbock Ministers Association.

The reason listed for cancellation was described as a desire to avoid duplication since so many churches held Thanksgiving observances their own, according to the LMA spokesman.

laxed, at peace with himself and his role in the fledgling Association of Evangelicul Lutheran Churches, a newly formed group whose thinking closely mirrors his own.

Christ Seminary-Seminex now has 28 students and a 97 percent rate of placing its graduates "in spite of impossible odds," he said. More than 100,000 Lutherans in 225 congregations have joined the new church body.

In his small ninth-floor office at a midtown building that ouce housed a posh private club - "the marble slab they used to slice meat on is now our altar" -Tietjen is surrounded by few of the trappings that one might associate with his position quietly of the man with whom he once had frequent contact but hasn't seen for two years.

The showdown between the two men and their philosophies came at the synod's 1973 convention in New Orleans when Preus called for Tietjen's resignation as head of Concordia. Tietjen refused

"He knew it wasn't a viable alternative for me," he said. "He planned to take over the school. He understood the political situation, he had the votes and they did what he wanted them to do.

But it was more than four years before Tietjen was officially removed from the church, charged with "holding and defending, allowing and fostering false doctrine." At the end, he refused to answer the charges.

"It was quite clear there was nothing to be gained," he said. "Someone sent me a clipping that said if you agree to participate in an immoral legal process, you are then bound to accept the results.

"I guess in the secular world, if they take you to court, you have to go. But you don't have to take part in an ecclesiastical court.

Helped through his long struggle by his wife and four children and by expressions of support from leaders of other faiths, Tietjen can laugh about his ordeal now. But some things have never been easy to

"It's not a pleasant experience, being called a heretic. It's not nice to hear that people think you're a teacher of false doctrine when being a teacher of true doctrine is your highest goal.

'But that's the type of interpersonal hurt you can endure when you know the charge is not true. I now literally live by the Gospels. I put my future in God's hands and rest assured in his promise for the future.

The outlook for the future of Lutherans in America is not so assured Tietjen said about 45 percent of the Missouri Synod's membership is moderate in outlook, though he doesn't foresee an early mass exodus to join his new association.

'It's too much of a hassle for them to get out. There is a Missouri mystique. We were an inbred family for so long that it's inconceivable for some people to leave the synod.

He doesn't expect any reconciliation with Missouri for at least a generation unless the synod has what he termed a Watergate scandal'

However, Tietjen does see a realignment including moderates from his group. and the denomination's other major bodies, the Lutheran Church in America and the American Lutheran Church.

Eyes Claimed Key To Person's Inner Mind

DETROIT (UPI) - Your eyes reveal all sorts of things about you. Knowing how to read eyes, says Frank Augusta, can be invaluable in social settings and the business world.

"In relaxed conversation, sooner or later your eyes will give you away," said Augusta in an Eye Language Dynamics lecture series in the Detroit area.

"Eyes are the key to the inner mind. "Just think of how it would help you, man or woman, walking into a room and wondering who's available.

"Sure you can tell something by the way the peo-ple sit. You know, body language signals. But the best thing to do is look into their eyes and find their comfort zone."

Augusta and psychologist Les Zalewski, who de-veloped the series, are businessmen. Zalewski developed his theory on eye language, the basic positions and what they mean, by observing couples who came to him for marital and individual counseling, and by a year-long study of re-search on subconscious reactions and facial positions.

Augusta is a sales consultant and personal friend. Both believe more can be learned from a person's eyes than from conversation. "For example, as a person looks to his upper right, he is mentally visualizing pictures," Augusta said. "On the other hand, lower left relates emotion-el fealings." al feelings al teelings." The first four lectures at Detroit area colleges were primarily for salesmen, marriage counselors and psychiatrists. Now, Augusta said, they are ready to let the public in on it. Tentatively, they plan to hold a one-day, six-hour session, "crammed with information." The class would cost between $100 and $125. Illimately, Augusta said, they intend to spread

Ultimately, Augusta said, they intend to spread the lecture out over two or three days, and possibly hold evening sessions.

"We want to show people how to recognize pat-terns of eye movement, and to adjust their conver-sation to compensate for the eye action response," Augusta said.

You must watch for basic positions, such as upper right or lower left, he said. Those used most often are the ones individuals are most comfortable with.

their "comfort zones."

Finding a person's comfort zone is similar to meeting a person in his own home, Augusta said, "except we meet them at a mental level verbally in terms they naturally relate to.

"We communicate in the English language, but meaning interpretation is often obscure. Have you ever wondered why some people work with figures easily and others are superior in spelling? "Their comfort zones are in visualization."

He said comfort zones are not necessarily related to intelligence, but to how the thought process functions.

"We teach people to use their basic senses by lis-tening and watching for verbal clues and sub-cons-cious eye dynamics," he said. "In so doing, they can influence people to their own way of thinking.

"Learning about eye language is necessary for ev-eryone, from a newspaper boy trying to get a tip from a housewife, to a highly trained professional businessman."

Bernardi: A Big Showoff

By WILLIAM GLOVER NEW YORK (AP) - There's no mystery about acting for Herschel Bernardi.

"The showing off, that's what it is for me," the man of many voices unabashedly admits.

Like many performers, he used to probe darkly when asked about psychological urges, technical complexities and the possibly schizoid balance between self and role. "Then I stopped doing that. The reason being I get such satisfaction from the mere act of acting." He pauses to emphasize that this outlook doesn't mean lack of concern lack of concern.

"Sitting here, sure, I'm showing off but I mean every word I say. And when I'm on stage I mean everything I'm word 1 say. And when 1 m on stage 1 mean everything 1 m saying. Right? You got it." That's his favorite phrase — "you got it" — used to en-courage empathy through all subsequent remarks. After an eight-year hegira to the highly remunerative fields of television and cinema, the husky actor returned to Broadway Nov. 17 in "The Confirmation."

The play is his first non-singing role hereabouts. His Main Stem debut was in 1964 as a gypsy king in the musical "Bajour." That was followed with "Fiddler on the Roof," where he was ethnically at home as Tevye, and then by "Zorba," which transformed him into a lusty Greek.

Playing dialects for him is "having a good ear and learning how to break words down." His range has included French, Germans, Italians, Hungarians, Russians, a southern Civil War general. For TV commercials he immortalized an eclectic assortment extending from a talking tuna fish to a garrulous flower pot. Major television series included "Peter Gunn," "Arnie" and more recently "Seventh Avenue." He's on the movie circuit now in "The Front."

Although his acting parents got him started in the Yid-dish theater at age 3 and he was a juvenile lead at 9 — "washed up at 14, another pudgy adolescent" — Brooklyn-born Bernardi's advent in English-speaking theatricals was no instant triumph.

Unable to land on Manhattan's midtown stage, he went West. His first movie job was as a laborer, cleaning up for the elephants in a circus picture. A tour eventually in "The World of Sholem Aleichem" got him a film role — as a Frenchman, the start of his long inguistic odyssey.

Broadway finally beckoned with three musicals. Upward thrust was halted when a serious throat ailment knocked him out of "Zorba." The tumor was benign, but convalescence took him to Mexico for three months of no-talk. Bernardi looks back on that illness as a profound turning point in his life. "I wasn't reborn, I don't want to get into that area, but something then has made me not only a better actor but a better everything.

'Dee Dee'Van Ark Fastest Gal Around

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - Joan Van Ark, who stars as Dee Dee in the new "We've Got Each Other" series, is the fastest actress in Hollywood. She probably is in better shape than any female in television, too.

Joan is a dedicated jogger, running 12 miles a day in a secluded area of the Hollywood hills and has participated in four AAU marathons. She tries to average 7-minute miles on her daily runs. She has been married nine years to Los Angeles newsman John Marshall, who is also a jogger. But because of their work schedules, Joan runs in the evenings and John runs in the mornings. Headquarters for this running family is the San Fernando Valley. Their daughter, Vanessa, 7, eschews jogging in favor of splashing in the family swimming pool

Other non-joggers in the household include Streaker, an enormous sheep dog, and Hampsie, a lazy hampster.

Home reminds Joan of the Dutch farmhouse in which she grew up in West Nyack, N.Y. It is a cozy white dwelling with green shutters, shake roof and sur-rounded by towering shade trees.

The Marshalls entertain often, serving drinks and hors d'oeuvres at home before taking guests to dinner at nearby restaur-

The green-eyed blonde is particularly addicted to Japanese food, the result of working in "The Last Dinosaur" in Japan several years ago. Her favorite is sushi, a raq fish dish with seaweed and rice. Joan is up each morning at 7 and off to CBS studio center less than a mile from home. She rehearses from 10 a.m. until 6 p.m. most days. Thereafter Joan heads for the hills and her long run. After that she stops by a gym where she works out on a variety of complicated machines. "When it's light enough in the evening I study my script as I run," Joan says. "People gawk at me like I've lost my mind. But running can be boring unless you occupy your mind."

The health-conscious Marshalls have installed a sauna and whirlpool bath, both of which are used regularly. Inside, Joan has furnished their traditional home with antiques, lots of glass, mirrors and Tiffany lamps. Bright colors lend an airy feeling to the house. The living room is citrus yellow and white. The chief conversation piece is an ancient Russian samovar which is destined to become a lamp one of these days.

Joan has taken pains to make each of the rooms distinctive. The den, which contains a bar, is all black and red. The walls are crowded with framed certificates and awards collected through the years, one of which is Joan's Tony nomi-nation for her role in "School For Wives" three years ago.

The color scheme of the formal dining room is black and white. The sunny kitchen is done in yellow and blue with terra cotta highlights.

But no matter how inviting the kitchen, Joan spends little time in it. She likes to say she barely knows how to boil water. A housekeeper does most of the cooking, which suits the actress. She's on a constant diet and prefers steamed vegetables to other fare. John usually settles for a steak and salad.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-H-11 101 John Wayne Finally Succumbs To Lure Of Tube

By VERNON SCOTT HOLLYWOOD (UPI) - Duke Wayne, who has filled movie screens for 50 years in more than 200 movies, is turning his massive image to television which may not be big enough to hold him.

Wayne spoke of his new career at his Newport Beach home. He sat in a comfortable chair overlooking the harbor, squinting at the sun glinting off the water. It was noontime and he polished off a pre-lunch bloody Mary made with tequia, his favorite booze.

His home tells more about the man than he would ever say of himself. The entry is a Japanese garden, light and airy. His living room and study contain one of the world's largest private collections of western art including priceless Remingtoon and Russell sculptures. Two exquisite Japanese screens and other Oriental art make his spacious dining room a treasure of taste and style.

The sensitivity of this roughhewn man is reflected in his paintings and books. Evidence of his work for fuel conservation and preservation of ecologically endangered species can be found in the household office.

The big man is a doer, not a talker. He expounds on his conservative politics from time to time, but his charitable and humanitarian works go unpublicized. He expects no thanks from any quarter and, in truth, receives none.

"My father told me back in Iowa when I was a boy not to expect gratitude and I'd never be disappointed," he rumbled in his deep bass. "I knew he'd been hurt many times. But I took his advice and he was right."

Wayne is strong on loyalty and grati-tude himself. Long after his generation of stars — Jimmy Stewart, Hank Fonda, Robert Taylor and the rest - had bowed to television, the Duke held out,

New York is working hard to accommodate film makers and recently allowed a company to burn down a derelict building in Brooklyn for the movie "Nunzio." It meant money for a far from affluent neighborhood, jobs for kids as extras, and the company shelled out part of the replacement costs of the building. Ohio made $1 million last year from film makers attracted by the state film bureau's promotion.

Cronyn-Tandy Starring In 'The Gin Game

By YILLIAM GLOVER NEW YORK (AP) - For Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy there is an apt element of reward in their new Broadway play. The distinguished acting couple are among theater's most indefatigable travelers and have sgent more time than other stars in residence with regional companies

What could be nicer, then, than to uncover a script well suited to their adroit Stem stages?

Arts of nine resident troupes when Louisville director Jon Jory showed him Coburn's script, slated for presentation there a bit later.

"I read it. I bought it and I sent it to Mike Nichols," the man from London, Ont., describes the selective process. Nichsls agreed to direct him and Miss Tandy. They did a test run at the Long Wharf in New Haven, Conn.

That maneuver - "going somewhere to do the kitchenwork where critics ple's addiction to travel.

Miss Tandy joins the dialogue with "it was never a question of getting away from commercial theater. You simply want to do other things, too. You gain a great deal and are able to do classics which aren't likely on Broadway."

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-H-13:

Adds Cronyn with amiable candor: "There was some selfishness in it all, not just an effort to elevate theater else-where. We're not being philanthropic on such occasions or 'gracing with our presence.' I hate that. What it adds up to is that you are able to work. If you just sat, as a lot of very good actors do, and waited for the next thing to come along, the sit can be awfully long

Miss fandy recalls that she began her itinerant performing before she arrived in this country, working with the Bir-mingham Rep and Old Vic in London, on repertory tour of Canada in 1939.

Oil Technique Discussed By Tech Faculty

Three Texas Tech University geosciences professors presented theories in petroleum exploration and production at the annual meeting of the Gulf Coast Association of Geological Societies recently in Austin.

Dr. Grover E. Murray, past president of Texas Tech and professor of geosciences, presented the opening address entitled "Indigeneous Precambrian Petroleum," a discussion of petroleum produced from Precambrian geologic structures.

Murray said most petroleum exploration has occurred in areas where the rocks are relatively young. He said U.S. geologists should consider searching for petroleum in sedimentary deposits of Precambrian age, which cover large areas of the world.

Murray commented that Russian geologists have had significant discoveries of hydrocarbons in Precambrian rocks. He suggested that U.S. geologists "take a hard look at the petroleum potential of Precambrian rocks.

Dr. David K. Davies, professor and chairman of the Department of Geosciences, discussed the "Porosity and Permeability of Gulf Coast Hydrocarbon Reservoirs.

Davies said the productivity of a large number of wells could be significantly increased at minimal cost. Sands considered to be full of water could produce water-free oil, he said.

Davies urged that geologists pay attention to clay minerals deposited in the pore spaces of sands. These clays can control quality of a hydrocarbon reservoir and often cause serious production and completion problems. Such problems can be overcome through correct design of drilling and stimulation propected to be reached soon by the firm. The completion earlier this year of a $475-million expansion project at the Baytown refinery increased Exxon's refining capacity by 250,000 barrels per day, or 20 per cent over that of last winter.

New Job Deals With Watching Energy Usage

By JOLLY SCHRAM A-J Correspondent

One of the newest jobs in industry is an "energy manager." Such a-title means monitoring energy usage and keeping aware of conservation possibilities.

Today, "energy managers" are just one of the trends seen in the Southwest scene for industry and business. Yet, no one's going overboard in a new set of studies at the university level, said Dr. Harry Parker, of the chemical engineering department at Texas Tech University.

"We just teach students to practice good, straight engineering," as an engineer "has to look into the economic justifications," he said tion,' well, that's fine," he added, without stating the basic credo in business of cutting overhead to improve profits.

His view has/been backed up by other spokesmen in industry who state that when fuel costs start to escalate, "industry starts getting a little more aggressive" in finding ways to cut fuel costs. "Co-generation (making electrical generation along with process heat) has been fashionable for years," related Parker, though interest has been renewed in it recently

"Adding insulation to installations (to save fuel) is a little more trendy," he remarked, "but even there, you reach an optimal point eventually.

Andy Anderson of the FEA regional office, Dallas agreed: "There is even more being done in business 'housekeeping' than we in the office realize" as companies without fanfare are insulating ceilings, walls and eliminating loss from steam-heat pipes.

Along other conservation lines, he noted, large stores and plants are installing

HOUSTON (AP)-John E. Swearingen has some rather definite ideas as to what should be included in any compromise that might develop during the debate on a national energy policy. Swearingen is the chairman-elect of the American Petroleum Institute. He hopes there will be a compromise but acknowledges the Carter administration as yet has given no firm signs in that direction. The board chairman of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) said the problems facing the industry today are as serious as anything in his 37 years in the oil business. "In my way of thinking it is essential any energy policy our government adopts recognizes that private business should be the basis on which we undertake to cure our supply problem, whether the supplies be oil or gas or coal or other forms of energy, rather than have the federal government attempt to do it itself," Swearingen said. "I further believe strongly an important part of any such compromise legislation should be a reliance on the market systems rather than to have government regulation and government control strictly from the top to the bottom."

Swearingen said there are no oil and gas experts working on the administration's program.

"None of them have ever really had any experience in the oil and gas business," he said.

"I think we have a bunch of people there who are trying to run the oil and gas business, at least from the administrative standpoint, who are naive."

Swearingen said some of the oil profits estimates made by the administration have been grossly exaggerated.

'The ones in the President's speech of about three weeks ago were grossly exaggerated," he said.

'I don't know where the President got those figures. There have been spokesmen from the administration that indicated the President misused the figures which he had. My own opinion is they were grossly exaggerated and did the President no service and certainly did the industry no service for him to imply them the way he did.

Swearingen said he has been unable in his company to make any computation that would support a $70 billion estimate.

"I believe that kind of figure assumes that in a period of about five or six years all gas will be completely deregulated," he said.

"This is not a part of either the House legislation or the Senate bill nor of the President's own proposals. I think the figure is hot air.

Swearingen said he has great hopes for the nation despite the problems of today.

"I hope the country has sense enough not to pursue the course of having the government to take over and try to run everything like they are now running the railroads and the post office." he said.

Swearingen said he hopes some sort of acceptable energy policy compromise would be forthcoming

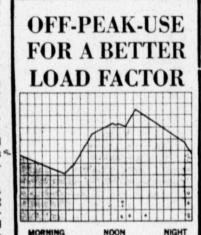

"After all, it has been four years since the oil embargo of 1977 and this nation as yet has not adopted a comprehensive or sensible energy policy," he said.

Swearingen has been board chairman of Indiana Standard since 1965. He also is the immediate past chairman of the National Petroleum Council, an advisory body to the Interior Department, and a director of Chase Manhattan Bank

He becomes chairman of the Institute, oil's largest trade group, on Jan. 1.

"I would hope we will find a renewed desire on the part of all elements of the industry to work together to address ourselves to the interface between industry and government on a comprehensive and concerted basis rather than as a bunch of horses which go off in different directions," he said.

"I think I sense some real desire on the part of the various pieces of the industry to do so."

By keeping the air relatively clean, natural gas has helped boost industrial growth in the state, Barnard says.

In a special report published in the bank's monthly Review, Barnard said that more manufacturing plants are currently being constructed in Texas than in any other state. "Part of the explanation is that the air in most of the country is so dirty that tight restrictions have been imposed on the construction of new plants.

Plant construction has been held back less in Texas mainly because of the availability of natural gas. "Cleaner burning than other fuels, gas has made pollution standards fairly easy for most Texas companies to meet," he said.

Barnard compares conditions in Texas with those in other states, especially Pennsylvania, another big manufacturing state with plans for above-average expansion of its manufacturing.

"Although Pennsylvania ranks among the top 10 states with the most plant construction to be started over the next few years, spending in that state -where most production is fueled by coal-does not amount to a tenth of the spending on new plants expected in Texas."

THE IMPORTANT DIFFERENCE is the quality of air, he says. "For all the growth in Texas, its big cities still have comparatively clean air.

Figures compiled by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency indicate that carbon-monoxide levels in Pittsburg average more than 60 per cent higher than in Houston. In Philadelphia, they are almost 90 per cent higher. Sulfur-dioxide pollution in Philadelphia is typically four times greater than in Houston and 12 times greater than in Dallas. The differences are mainly attributable to the advantage Texas has had in natural gas, according to Barnard. By depending almost exclusively on gas to drive their local economies, Dallas and San Antonio rank as the two cities with probably the least sulfur-dioxide pollution in the country, he added. As gas reserves decline in Texas, these advantages will go, almost regardless of any energy program the government puts into effect, Barnard said. "With increases in gas prices and the Texas Railroad Commission trying to curb use of natural gas as a boiler fuel, industries are already shifting to other hydrocarbons. Utilities are converting to coal, and much of the expansion in petrochemicals is based on imported oil," he said. Barnard pointed out that with the shift to other fuels the costs of building new plants in Texas will be going up sharply because companies will have to add expensive anti-pollution equipment already required in other states.

"If people want to call that 'conserva-

One of Jacka's papers was an invited contribution to a special symposium devoted to carbonate rocks.

Company Announces

New Gas Discovery

NEW YORK (Special) -Wilshire Oil Co. of Texas has announced a significant gas find in the Gulf of Mexico off the Louisiana Coast.

A recently completed test well, on the 5,000-acre Ship Shoal Block 320, tested between 2,900 feet and 3,080 feet, discovered 79 net feet of productive sand formation. A 12-well drilling and production platform is on order for the development of the acreage block.

Siggi B. Wilzig, chairman and president of Wilshire, said, "Based on the above producing structure, a find of this magnitude could generate 60 billion cubic feet of recoverable gas. The gas from just 20 per cent of this acreage block would more than double Wilshire's entire domestic gas reserves."

Wilshire owns a 50 per cent working interest in the strike.

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE reports oil companies throughout the nation spent about $2.3 billion on environmental protection during 1976.

In a survey of environmental expenditures, participating companies were found to have spent $11.3 billion over the decade which ended last year.

While API's survey does not represent total industry spending on pollution controls, questionnaires were sent to all member companies plus those affiliated with the National Petroleum Refiners Association.

Expenditures last year were approximately $250 million higher than those for 1975, according to API.

A PETROLEUM tax shelter specialist, Victor D. Alhadeff of ENI Corp., thinks the industry could be hurt more-in a back-door sort of way-by immediate decontrol of gas prices than if controls were continued.

Citing a tremendous backlash of opinion that might be precipitated against the industry following a lifting of controls, and ultimately a greater punitive legislation. Alhadeff suggested an alternative to deregulation in a statement issued from the company's home office in New York.

"I know that the position of supporting controls is contrary to the industry, but what I would like to see happen is that the federal government control both the interstate and intrastate markets for natural gas at a regulated national price of $2 to $2.25 per 1,000 cubic feet, as opposed to having deregulation or a phased-in deregulation.

Alhadeff, who says his firm is the largest single source of financing for the domestic independent oil and gas drilling companies, warned that in the event of across-the-board decontrol of prices, "a small percentage of the natural gas in this country, maybe only 2-3 per cent, would sell at $3-$4 per 1,000 cubic feet, while potentially, some gas would sell as high as $5 per 1,000 cubic feet simply due to the fact that a certain industry will pay a premium for fuel in order to maintain production.

"If it should ever come to pass that gas starts selling at $4, the backlash from that type of pricing could result, I believe, in consumer reaction that would lead to even more serious, more punitive legislation than the Congress has considered up to this time.

apor lights with timers for shu ting off lights in parking-lot areas.

And business is soliciting conservation ideas from the top man to the bottom ones," he said as the business sector "doesn't run out of interest" when it can curb operating costs."

More emphasis has been noted about converting the fuel supplies from natural gas to other fuels, a trend started with such an order by the Texas Railroad Commission and apparently to be supplemented through passage in Congress.

The cement industry all over the Southwest has been converting "with a number going to diesel fuel or pulverized coal" while many manufacturers are changing designs for better combustion of materials in process heat. Both moves have proved economical in such instances, Anderson said.

Another direction in conservation is the use of solar energy in large buildings for both heating space and hot water, the FEA specialist said.

Yet, conversion in the Southwest doesn't approach the drastic efforts in the North, pointed out Dr. Parker, where industry faces cut-offs. "In the North, some companies are putting propane sources in, and coal gasifiers could come to insure independency of federal action.

Also, energy management courses have been more in vogue in northern metropolises as Boston, Denver, Chicago and New York are frequent sites for such seminars. Less frequent are such courses found in Albuquerque, Houston, and Atlanta.

Another rising effort has been seen more recently in both car and van pooling, particularly by companies in the Houston and now in the Amarillo area. said the FEA office.

"This trend is picking up tempo quite fast and it is healthy," said Anderson.

Pioneer Hybrid 8311 was planted at rows per 40-inch bed on June 15. A fourinch irrigation was applied before planting on May 14 and dry, hot winds made it necessary to apply a two-inch watering on June 18 to assure a good stand. Six inches of rain fell from emergence irrigation to Aug. 6. This was enough water for vigorous growth until plants were starting to boot. When plants started to wilt at early boot stage, the scientists used 11 differperiods varying from 12 to 50 days. Stress intervals at different stages of sorghum growth were achieved by irrigating or not irrigating at early boot, heading, early grain filling, mid-grain filling, and late grain filling.

Full irrigation with no stress from early boot to maturity required four, 3-inch irrigations applied at early boot, heaing, early grain filling, and late grain filling. This took a total of 18 inches of water and produced 6,690 pounds of grain per acre

The most efficient treatment received three irrigations applied at early boot, early grain filling, and late grain filling. This treatment produced 6,700 pounds of grain per acre and required only 15 inches of water.

Missing two consecutive irrigations resulted in 24-day stress periods, date showed. Yields on treatments missing irrigations at both early boot and heading or both heading and grain filling were reduced 27 percent to 4,870 pounds per Yields on treatments missing irrigations at both early and later grain filling were reduced only 12 percent to 5,860 pounds per acre. Harvest operations have made rapid progress this fall due to the ideal harvesting weather, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Open weather has allowed harvesting to run ahead of schedule throughout the state.

However, the dry weather still plagues stockmen concerned about lack of fall grazing and a shortage of stock water. Small grains are making little progress, with some planting still under way. SOUTH PLAINS: Seventy to 95 percent of the cotton crop is out in southern counties and 30 to 50 percent of the harvest complete in the northern half of the area. Cotton yields and quality have been excellent. A large amount of cotton has been stored in modules. Sugar beet harvesting is almost complete and a few carrots are still being harvested. ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting is past the halfway point; yields have been good. Some guar remains to be harvested but the mung bean harvest is complete. Moisture is needed to complete the planting of small grains. Grazing is below average and supplemental feeding is under way in most counties.

News

THE BUREAU OF RECLAMATION HAS TAKEN it upon itself to legislate

over the Carter administration's proposed new rules to implement excess land

Andrus issued the proposed regulations a year after a federl court ruling in Washington, D. C., had ordered the Interior Department (through its Bureau of Reclamation) to update its rules and criteria for the sale of federally-irrigated lands in excess of 160 acres.

That was it.

The Andrus regulations far exceed the scope of the court ruling.

THE RULING ITSELF CAME ON A SUIT brought by a California-based land reform organization called National Land for People (NLP), headed by George Ballis, a veteran of New Left politics of the Berkeley 1960s and a long-time confederate of Cesar Chavez and his United Farm Workers. On the record, the NLP is pledged to break up larger private farm land hold-ings into small plots for "family farmers." The chosen instrument to effect this reform is, of course, the government - by edict and without any professed re-gard for market factors of fair price and established private land transaction.

A national impression has been given that agriculture in the West, and espe-cially in California, is dominated by large absentee business conglomerates, and that the smaller family farm is being squeezed out. And this was the contention of the NLP suit, originally directed against an association of farmers in California's Westlands irrigation district.

BUT THE WESTLANDS EXPERIENCE is a good case in point to prove quite the opposite:

Since its major water delivery project was begun in the 1960s, the number of landholders in the Westlands has increased by two-thirds; the average acreage per owner has dipped 40 per cent; the average size of farming operations has been reduced by almost half; the number of farms has almost doubled.

The Westlands district has lived under terms of the 160-acre multiple interpretation, and about 233,000 acres of excess land remaining under recordable contracts is being sold off to new users under existing law and procedures. The overwhelming majority of the holdings in the district belongs to family farmers — who have much to lose. The average investment in 320 acres of West-lands farm property is just under half-a-million dollars.

It is much the same as in the other irrigation districts. Theirs is a profile of farming in America: a few larger corporation farms; a great majority of medi-um-sized family farms; some smaller farms and some larger farms, all very much in the family.

AT THE BASE, FARMERS SEE A LOT MORE involved than the mechanical aspects of reapplication of a 1902 reclamation law. They see increasing evid-ence of an agrarian reform movement that seeks basic change in our market enterprise system and the principle of private property rights. With audacious guile, the movement professes to champion "the family farm." But its true concept is best revealed in the text of a resolution adopted recently by the third national convention of the United Farm Workers in Fres-

True to style, the resolution bears the title, "The Small Family Farm." What it proposes thereunder is that the government "initiate a land reform program to include both limitation of corporate acreage and...redistribution of land." This is the ally, this is the doctrine of the National Land for People. To farm-ers is is omen enough of an apparatus that seeks to dismantle private agricul-ture in America.

Dr. Mark Hellman, animal science instructor at Texas Tech, believes the High Plains will become one of the top areas for the dairy industry in the country in the near future.

"We now produce as much milk as South Texas does," Hellman said, 'whereas 10 years ago that area pro-hot, humid and cold, such as the High Plains possesses. While Wisconsin and Michigan are top markets now for dairies, according to Hellman, their climates are too cold. He feels sections with climates similar to that of the High Plains are the future cows to its present size of about 60, which have produced as much as $1,500 to $2,000 per month over operation costs of the dairy.

The Tech herd has gone from 12 to 15

Hellman said the "rolling herd" average of milk production, which is mea-sured in pounds, has been more than 16,000 pounds of milk per cow for the 305-day measuring period. The average in Texas was about 13,000.

BUSHLAND (Special)-Declining water tables, increased cost of energy, and low grain sorghum prices make irrigation farmers ask, "How long can sorghum wilt without reducing yield?".

Department of Agriculture soil scientist at Bushland, studies the effect of water stress on nutrient uptake in grain sorghum.

Dr. H. V. Eck and J. T. Musick have conducted research to help answer the question. Their studies were conducted in 1975 at the Southwestern Great Plains Research Center at Bushland

Eck presented the results earlier this month at the 69th annual meeting of the American Society of Agronomy in Los Angeles,

The researchers used mid-afternoon leaf curling as an indication of stress. They found that 12 days of wilting during booting, heading, or grain filling did not affect yields.

However, drought periods of 24 or more days reduced yields. Also, stress during booting and heading was more detrimental than during grain filling. These results are applicable to furrow irrigated clay loam soil in the southern High Plains, according to Eck.

The Agricultural Research Service scientists conducted their experiment on level borders of Pullman clay loam that were 35 to 92 feet in size. The soil was sampled to determine nitrate content and enough area fertilizer was added to give the sorghum 200 pounds per acre of

A 12-day stress period between heading and early grain filling was not detrimental, they said. Other treatments that missed one irrigation at either early booting, early grain filling, or at late grain filling produced about 6,460 pounds per acre.

Yield of stalks and leaves was not reduced by 24-day stress, but were cut if stress continued for 35 days or more. Measurements taken at weekly intervals showed that stalk and leaf weight accumulation ended when heads emerged from the boot

Grain Cutback Seen Producing No Price Jump

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Carter administration tentatively plans to order a cutback on production of corn and other livestock feed grains next year, but officials say it won't translate into higher consumer prices.

The administration, concerned that another huge corn crop could depress the grain prices that farmers receive, has announced that corn producers will have to set aside 10 per cent of their land from production to qualify for federal price support benefits.

Deputy Agriculture Secretary John C. White said the tentative set-aside plan for corn, sorghum and barley, subject to review in late January, will result in a estimated 3 percent reduction in U.S. feed grain production next year.

But he told reporters the declines are "not expected to have an effect on consumer food prices" since U.S. grain stocks are so large.

duced two to three times the amount of the High Plains.

Because of the dairy industry growth on the High Plains and in El Paso areas, Hellman said, Texas Tech is upgrading its dairy herd.

He gave three reasons for the dairying increase, including grain availability, cli-mate and market closeness.

"The dairy industry is moving in the same direction as the cattle industry," he said. "A few years ago, feed lots began relocation to where grain was being grown, and now the dairy industry is doing the same thing." Feed availability is better in this sec-tion of the state than in others, Hellman said, and feed prices are favorable to the industry. He said dairy cows like a climate that

"Here in the Plains area and in El Paso we are not too far from the markets in Dallas and Houston," Heliman explained.

A breeding program also is getting un-derway, he said, to produce the replace-ment cows needed periodically because of production, breeding and other prob-

Many Youngsters Feel 'Tugs' Of Love Divided

By ANN BLACKMAN

Associated Press Writer Tracy Tuthill is 11 years old and his heart feels the tugs of love divided. Between his mother, with whom he

And his father, with whom he visits on weekends

He has known his new stepmother less than a year.

Quite frankly, he says, "I wish things could be the way they were before."

Before his parents were divorced, he means. Before he became one of about 10 million stepchildren in America whose livelihood and loyalties often are divided between the parent they live with and the one they visit when the divorce contract allows.

Tracy's father, John Tuthill, says he would like to see his son and I4-year-old daughter more often, perhaps alone for dinner once each week. "It wouldn't be like living with them all the time, but I could ask them about school and tests and problems and the things they care about," he says.

But Tuthill's ex-wife, Donna Lou, says the children have many after-school activities, and she wants the three of them to have dinner together at least one night a week.

Like so many of the 5 million couples in America who live as stepfamilies, John Tuthill, 46, and his new wife, Lorelei, 39, are trying to re-build their lives - his shattered by divorce, hers by the death of her husband. And both lives were later shadowed by loneliness.

"Daddy was always upset because he didn't have anyone," says Tuthill's 14-year-old daughter, Julie. "When he got married, I was happy for him because he wasn't sad anymore.'

Comparing stepfamilies is like comparing marriages: no two are the same. "The reason ours is successful," says

Tuthill's 16-year-old stepson, Jeffrey Ritholz, "is we realized the necessity of becoming a team, became a team, and now work cooperatively as a team.

"If one of us has a problem, our step family jointly tries to solve the problem as fairly as possible for all involved. If we cannot find a solution, we try to analyze and understand the situation as best as possible, but never try to ignore it."

The Tuthills are quick to admit that hey have some problems. But converathey have some pro tions with each of them indicate that they are, in general, happier than many of today's stepfamilies who find themselves embittered by family jealousies and rivalries, as well as financial strain.

The Tuthills live in the seaside village of Bellport, Long Island. But families like them probably live on your block.

The government doesn't keep a record of how many there are. But Census Bureau demographer Dr. Paul C. Glick estimates that one out of seven children in America under 18 is a stepchild; that one out of every 14 married couples has stepchildren.

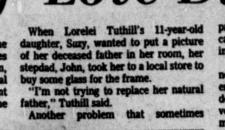

And as the divorce rate climbs, and the number of divorced persons who remarry grows, the number of stepfamilies in America increases

The latest Census Bureau figures show that more than one in 3 American marhaven't learned to trust."

Miss Lofas started her foundation to counsel potential stepparents and step-families on how to adjust to their new

One of the biggest problems many families have, she said, "is the expectation of instant love - the 'I love you, I'll love

It never works that way, she said. "The most successful stepparents are the ones who don't push the children to like them, the ones who don't try to replace the real mother or father. If you don't confront the fact that you're a step removed, the kids get all these weird feelings."

TRYING TO REBUILD LIVES-John Tuthill, 46, his new wife, Lorelei, 39, and her daughter, Susy Ritholz, 11, sit with family cat Rocky in their home in Bellport, Long Island. Like so call a stepparent or stepchild or how to introduce him.

For example, Donna Lou Tuthill does not like her children to refer to their father's new wife as their stepmother. "I don't use the word 'stepmother' for a di-vorce (like ours)," Mrs. Tuthill said. "To me, it means 'instead of,' and I am their

On the other hand, 10-year-old Katoiya Catchings, who lives in Los Angeles, had another problem. "I was wondering if I would have to call him 'daddy," she said of the stepfather her 30-year-old mother, Patricia, married two years ago after a divorce. "I didn't think he liked me at first, and I was scared."

Katoiya said she only calls her divorced stepfather, William Thomas, "daddy" when she gets "carried away." But she said she usually introduces him as her father, unless people already know that he isn't. "But a lot of my friends have steptathers, so I have nothing to be ashara-d of."

Children sometimes feel rejected when a divorced parent remarries. Nine-year-old Matthew Keshet, whose mother lives in Cambridge, Mass., and whose father lives in nearby Somerville, cried like "a wounded dog" when his father told him he was going to marry again. Harry Keshet, Matt's father, added that when he took his son to the Brandeis chapel where the marriage ceremony would be, Matt yelled, "I don't want you to get married. You can get married in a dog house." Yet, when it was time for the ceremony, Matt's dad said the little boy was, like most children at a wedding. 'very excited."

A year and a half later, Keshet's wife, Jamie, says that Matthew still doesn't get angry in her presence. "I think he's afraid of me," she said.

Keshet and his wife are counselors in a Cambridge organization called Divorce Resource and Meditation Center, Inc., which provides guidance and counseling to persons divorcing or separating.

"For now, the family system is in flux," Mrs. Keshet says. "People are living in a period of transition. It's almost like living in a war."

There may not be much new in the shape of toys," de Vries said. "What's new is in play value - how much fun a toy is, the possibilities for play."

Bogi's line includes battalions of male dolls with accessories that take them from camping to war to outer space. Children set the stage and write the dolls' lines to put them in any number of interesting combinations of activities.

Nasta (Hong Kong) Ltd. carries the character dolls a few steps farther. Manager Jerry Steinberg demonstrated Nasta's play accessories designed to enhance dolly's leisure hours - a range with rotisserie oven, tumble-action washing machine with safety door that turns off the water when opened, a sink with running water and very elegant miniature wicker furniture.

The Hong Kong Federation of Industries maintains and manages the Stand-ards and testing Center, which pits toys against rugged tests for durability, flammability and mechanical, chemical and electronic safety.

The tests ensure toys will not break into pieces that can be swallowed or splinter, catch fire or poison children.

Farm Wives Have Lead Role In Feeding America

MANHATTAN, Kan. (UPI)-These women are not flying eqaul rights bannners instead of scarecrows in the cornfields. But they have a new and potent role these days with an awareness of their strength that will be a major factor in how America feeds itself and helps to feed the world in the future-and at what price and in what abundance.

They are the farm wives of the U.S.A., a true minority group, working a daily schedule that would cave in their suburban or city sisters.

But their new roles go beyond farm duties.

They are the voices heard at local, state and national levels on farm issues. They have become regulars on the Washington congressional scene.

They're also organizing to educate the consumer about depressed farm prices, reasons for the rising cost of living, and to alter the image of the farm family as a bunch of clods.

"If you do nothing more than show that we are literate, you will have done us a service," Mrs. Harold (Jeanne) Mertz of Wamego, Kan., told me. Mrs. Mertz is active in the United Farm Wives of America, Inc.

Farm families make up a small segment of the U.S. population - the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates it now at 3.8 per cent of the nation's total. Farmers are a steadily dwindling species, down from the 5.9 segment of the population in 1966.

No wonder the women have become the nation's newest activists, although hardly as militant as some of the other feminist movers and doers of the 1960s and 1970s.

Whether they will support the called-for farmers' strike Dec. 14 will be largely a matter of individual choice, not organizational.

You will find that some farm wives support the Equal Rights Amendment, some are anti

'Any woman who wants to come out here and burn her bra and ride a tractor across my terrace. I say come on ahead," said Mary Jehrt, 26, college-educated farm wife, also of Wamego, on a rural route outside Manhattan. Kansas has ratified the ERA.

And liberation, after all, is a state of mind.

"I always say I attended Easter sunrise services ... seen from the dairy barn," said Mrs. Wayne (Irene) Bailey, talking of the early hours a dairy farmer starts in the milking shed. Mrs. Bailey, 65, a chic, handsome woman, taught school one year before beginning her career on the farm nine miles southeast of Manhattan

"Heavens, I read poetry while I drive the tractor," said Mrs. Robert (Joy) Ankeny, of Dalton, Neb., president of a new farm organization called Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE). WIFE was organized last December "dedicated to the promotion of agriculture, to improving the status of farming and the status of the farm wife.

Mrs. Ankeny said WIFE has about 5,000 members and 50 chapters in eight farm states. She and her husband have a 320-acre winter wheat operation just north of the Colorado border. And with her sister, she runs a book store in Dalton (pop. about 500).

WIFE, along with other new farm women's organizations, has testified before the Senate and House on farm legislation and has a group of speakers to talk toconsumer groups. WIFE is newer than the United Farm Wives, formed in April, 1973, in response to a threatened national meat-buying boycott because of high prices to the consumer, and also to fight a bill before the Congress that would have rolled farm prices back to the January 10, 1973, level. The organization sent a delegation to Washington and their efforts plus those of other farm organizations led to the bill's defeat.

I think the meat boycott woke us all up," said Mrs. Ivan (Barbara) Bausch, 46, of Highland, Kan., 18 miles north of Topeka.

The Bausch family operates a 2,000-acre farm growing calves and grain (milo and soybeans, selling 'the surplus not fed to cattle).

United Wives' membership primarily is in Kansas and Missouri and their slogan is, "From Producer to Consumer with Understanding."

They are reaching out especially to the consumer. Members write their congressmen, the secretary of agriculture, and the president on matters concerning agriculture. They're available for personal appearances before interested groups such as 4-H club, Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, chambers of commerce, women's groups, school assemblies.

Farm women's organizations are springing up like seedlings sprouting and many, including the United Farm Wives, are under the umbrella of America Agri-Women, a national coalition of farm women and women's groups

It was formed Nov. 11, 1974, in Milwaukee with the slogan, "We Can Do It Together.

As one spokesman put it, "One of every four persons in this country is supported by agriculture. If the family farm goes, the average consumer won't be able to afford to eat .

"Our food is cheap compared with other countries."

Agri-Women has 15 state organizations, three national and one regional, and a membership of around 12,000. Its affiliates include such diverse organizations as the National Grange, National Peach Partners, and the American Hereford Auxiliary

The farm wife is the newest activist, but is the farm woman herself a liberated breed in today's society, where the nine-to-five job is pretty standard, week-

"Last year," said her husband, "We spent more than we made. After being in one place 30-some years, you ought to have something to show for it. I don't know about the strike movement, whether I would participate, but it needs to grow for the education of the people out there..." "Somebody is going to farm," he added, expressing deep fear of the giant corporations taking over and the family farmer disappearing. There is no such thing as the typical farm wife. Yet all have common denomi-nators.

First off, they wouldn't trade jobs with anyone else, they say.

"I need elbow room," said Mrs. Harold (Grace) Goff, 68, whose family farm is so near Ft. Riley, the military post, that artillery practice rattles the win-dows. "I don't like the idea of looking out on my neighbors."

Mrs. Goff is so active in local, state and national organizations you wonder how she finds time for award-winning needlework and for state fair judging that of others. There is time too for helping her husband, 70, with a cattle and grain operation on their 209 acres near Manhattan.

The Goffs have eased up a bit on farming — some breeding of dairy cows, and cultivation of milo and alfalfa for feed. Once theirs was a full dairy operation and Mrs. Goff recalled with a laugh how "liberated" she was as a bride - the day she married she came home with Harold to help milk the cows.

Mrs. Goff, mother of three, grandmother of four, taught school for six years after her graduation from Kansas State University.

She has taken on more outside activies than many of her farm sisters. She was president of the Kansas State Extension Homemakers' Council; is a member of tha Associated Country Women of the World, whose goal is bettering living conditions, nutrition and health globally (this has meant conferences in Edinburgh and Oslo); both she and her husband long have been 4-H leaders; she's been named national homemaker of the year; is a deaconess in her Presbyterian church; on the board of the Kansas Council of Women; and judges needlework for the Kansas State and Topeka Fairs. And she farms. "I've milked cows, driven tractors, hauled grain. Last year my husband and I filled a 310-ton silo by ourselves.'

In general, the social life of the farm wife centers around church, school, various farm organizations including 4-H and extension services. Mrs. Jon (Evelyn) Lurson, 39, of Green, Kan., plays the church organ.

The Kames Distler family, which farms 400 acres near Jefferson City, Mo., is among the many families who square dance when they can get time off from their farm work. But with six children, ages 22 to 9, all at home, and a dairy herd that needs daily attention, the occasions are rare.

Ruth Distler, 44, laughed as she talked about time - "There's not much to spare. I do several loads of wash midweek and usually on Saturday, 18 more."

Farm families read. They read their nearest daily and weekly newspapers and they all take farm publications to keep up with what's affecting them directly.

They tune in regular farm market reports on radio. Television sets rarely are turned on, even when there are small children in the family. "I've got two color sets, neither operating," said Mrs. Andrew (Celeste) Suth-off, of St. Thomas, Mo. "We don't seem to have missed them." The Suthoffs, who have eight children aged 29 to 7, farm 377 acres of grain, pasture and live-treak stock.

Many farm wives do the sewing for themselves and family, usually on rainy days. Mrs. Richard (Helen) Bausch, 33, of Mayetta, Kan., makes all her clothes plus those of her five small children, plus taking in dressmaking assignments. Farm wives are worried about mortgages on machinery and additional land acquisition. I didn't meet one who didn't recite the debit side of their operations. But one told me, "If you don't owe on something, you'd spend the money foolishly.

Generally, farm women keep the books; they seem to find more time.

All I met run diversified gardens and freeze or can the products. The family supply of meat, pork and chicken comes right off the farm, usually going into the freezer.

"I freeze meats and vegetables, can a lot," said Mrs. Larson. "When I run out of freezer space at home, I just rent additional in Clay Center," a nearby com-

And they all can handle heavy machinery. "I don't think there's anything on the farm I can't do," said Mrs. James (Mary) Jehrt, 26, of Wamego, Kan. "We repair our own machinery, we designed and built our milking barn, we've been remodelling - this summer we put in a new bathroom.

Italian Garden Formed Over Old Market Site

LONDON (UPI) - A corner of the former market at Covent Garden has been transformed into Italian Gardens in celebration of the Queen's Silver Jubilee.

On the site of a former tin market, ballustrated and pillared terraces are special features. Discovery of the cellar of an old hotel provided a sunken garden and pool. The gardens are near the world famous Royal Opera House and London's West End.

ends are free, and family vacations are a regular event? She says a resounding 'Yes

But her role has changed, and so have her obligations. Increasingly she is the partner, often part of a legal partnership or corporation, in operating today's agricultural industries.

Long since gone is the image of "the farmer tills and sells, the wife cares for house and children.

Her role has changed because farming has changed with mechanization, specialization, farm labor shortages, and gradual consumption of farm land by suburban sprawl.

Today's farmer takes a wife, as in the children's game-song.

But he also marries an accountant, bookkeeper, budget expert, butcher, baker (no longer the candlestickmaker for there's electricity down on the farm), carpenter, cleaning woman, combine and tractor driver, cook, dairywoman, dressmaker, electrician, family disciplinarian, girl Friday, food processor, gardener, handicraftswoman, housekeeper, improviser in emergencies, machinist, manure shoveler, organizer, CB radio operator, veterinarian, youth leader, and now the zealot.

If you put together her days, with no days off, with vacation often a dream, with no regular hours, she is not liberated in some interpretations of the word liberalization.

But ask the women. I asked, "Are you liberated?" on swings through Missouri and Kansas. I asked in telephone interviews around the nation. Other UPI reporters asked in their areas of the country.

There's consensus. The farm wife has her rugged moments but she wouldn't trade her role for that of any of her suburban or urban sisters.

"Look at it this way," said Mrs. Al (Pauline) Brunnert, a widow who operates a 300-acre cattle farm outside Jefferson City, Mo. "I like my independence. Maybe I don't go to concerts and opera as often as you do in New York City, but when I go, think how much more I appreciate them.

Mrs. Brunnert is one of another type of farm wife - the woman on her own Mother of three daughters and one son, she is holding on to the acreage owned by the family for a century to see whether son Andre, now 14, wants to be a farmer

While she waits for him to grow, she works part-time in the bank in nearby Maries, pursues her hobbies in interior decorating (she panelled the living room in the big Victorian-looking house which started as a log cabin), chauffeurs her son and his friends to and from basketball practice, and - clad in stylish jeans - takes off on her tractor to check the prize herd of calves she is feeding

"I don't feel handicapped, if that's what you mean about being liberated," said Mrs. Harold Mertz, of Wamego, Kan.

"The restrictions I have are my own making, my choice," said the city girl (Kansas City) who married a fourth-generation farmer and now lives in a handsome, remodelled 1884 house.

"I value my independence. I can come and go as I please." said Mrs. Mertz, who helps run a sophisticated conglomerate of about 5,000 acres of diversified crops and livestock. Some of the acreage they own; some is on lease or annual rental.

"When I married Harold, my vows were to him. I remember before we married, one evening he said, 'Look at my hands. They're farmer's hands. I can never change. I always will farm.

"I didn't ask him to change. We've been married 28 years ... our decisions all are made mutually. I don't resent the long hours. I'm part of the input.

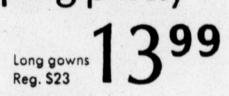

The Mertz operation, River Creek Farms, now involves three of their four sons. The three grown ones, after graduation from Kansas State University. came back to farming and with pop's financial help on mortgages are buying their own land. A fourth, in his teens, hasn't decided on a career, but daughter Jane, 20, is at KSU studying speech therapy.

Mrs. Mertz, up at 6 a.m. at the latest, winds down her day when all the outdoor and indoor chores are done - around 11 p.m.

The day can include everything from fixing family breakfast and baking a birthday cake for her husband - "He's 50, and the way this day is going I'll freeze the cake and we'll celebrate later" - to inviting a group of United Farm Wives to meet with me one afternoon and taking me around the farm in a pickup truck that like every other major vehicle on the farm is equipped with citizens' band radio.

Her office is the family den where a big, rolltop desk is the central feature, where also sits an electric calculator that was a bithday gift and where she keeps all the books on the purchase and sale of livestock -- including 6,000 lambs. The lambs first will be sheared for the wool and then fattened for the market. They are the major cash crop, she said.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-1-3

By BRUCE NICHOLS

HOUSTON (UPI) - Theddis Roosevelt Coney, the new U.S. marshal for the southern district of Texas. may be the only federal law enforcement officer who ever made a part of his living shooting pool. He doubtless is one of few who ever picked cotton.

But even as a poor black boy picking cotton in Many, La., for 65 cents per 100 pounds to help support his family, he was long on savvy, dreams and faith

When he graduated from high school in 1958, he hopped a bus to Houston, arriving with 35 cents in his pocket. His first job was driving a truck for a paint company.

"I didn't even know how to read a map," he said. "I got lost. I didn't get back until 7:30 that evening."

smile and a jovial nature. Coney set out making asked me did I ever think about getting into law en-forcement. I said, 'Yes, I did.' I'd been wanting to be a policeman all my life.

Kern added Coney to the force as a reserve deputy in 1965 and made him a regular deputy in July, 1968. He advanced and went to school when he could. He graduated from the FBI Academy in September. 1976.

He was a sergeant of detectives when Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., recommended him for marshal. President Carter and the U.S. Senate agreed and he took office July 31.

Today, Coney, 38, is a U.S. marshal in charge of 30 deputies and responsible for 45 counties extending from Houston to the Rio Grande.

"This is history for Texas," Coney said. "I am the first black in Texas and the South to become a U.S. marshal. I'm not sure about the U.S.'

Coney shot pool so his wife, June, whom he married in 1961, could finish college. They now have five children, aged 4 through 14. Coney, of course, gave up shooting pool for money when he went into law enforcement

"I was considered as one of the sharks here in Houston in the 1950s," he laughed. "I made enough money shooting pool to send her through school." He's proud that his career record is free of violer incidents

"I am probably one of the only polcemen that has policed from 1965 until 1977 in a county like Harris County with a population of 3 million ... who can actually say I've never shot a man and never even been

"I give the credit for that to two things, speaking with authority and maintaining control." He attributes his success in part to a strong religious faith.

"I give credit to God. It is not a day that me and my family don't put the Lord Jesus Christ first. We was raised that, if you put Lord Jesus Christ first, nothing was impossib

"I have been straight and fair to every person, even my enemies. Treat every person the way that you want to be treated and you will succeed.

"Color doesn't mean anything to me. I evaluate a person on merit. I didn't see (the worst) racial prob-lems back in Louisiana. We played together, worked together, ate together. Everybody knew everybody else

HAVE you ever condidered collecting coins with very brief issue period? Let's look at our regular-issue coinage and see what this collection would include.

The Fugio Cent, usually grouped with Colonial coins, was issued only in 1787. Its sundial design and "Mind Your Business" motto have been credited to Ben Franklin

A chain on the 1739 cent was supposed to symbolize the nation's unity, but it made people think of slavery. It was quickly replaced, but the Wreath reverse also was discarded before the year's end. Liberty Cap cents, with a small liberty cap beside the Liberty head, lasted only 1793-96

The beautiful Flowing Hair design ap-peared on half-dimes, half-dollars, and silver dollars only in 1794-95.

Its successor, the Draped Bust obverse and Small Eagle reverse, lasted 1795-98 on the dollar, and shorter times on halfdollars, quarters, dimes, and half-dimes. Miss Liberty wearing a tall liberty cap (Capped Bust) with the Small Eagle reverse appeared on $10 and $5 gold coin (eagles and half-eagles). This lasted only 1795-97 on the $10 piece an a year longer on the $5.

The half-cent got into the act, too. It shows Miss Liberty facing left in 1793. For the next three years she was shown looking right, with a small liberty cap.

Such brief coin issues would be impossible today. But not until 1890 was there a law limiting how often a coin's design could change. And there still were a few short issues to come.

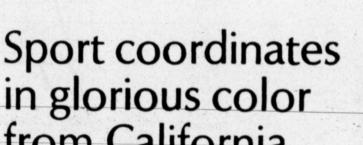

One was the first type of Liberty Seated silver dollar. It was issued only in 1836 and, with some disign changes, 1839. Some collectors class this as a pattern, or trial coin.

An equally famous short-timer was the Flying Eagle cent. Even if we include the 1856 coins, which usually are considered patterns, this coin lasted only three years. The long-lived Indian Head cent ed it after 1858

PRE-THANKSGIMING

The strange 20 cent coin is another member of this group. Its Liberty Seated design and near-quarter size made it too easily confused with the quarter. So this denomination was issued for just four vears, 1875-78.

There are three more short-timer coins, and I'll bet you've already thought of them.

They're the circulating commemoratives whose special reverse designs mark our National Bicentennial - the guarter (Drummer), half-dollar (Independence Hall), and dollar (Liberty Bell and Moon) issued only in 1975-76.

'Lost' Sea Unaffected By Drought

By ERIC NEWHOUSE SWEETWATER, Tenn. (AP) - America's worst drought in decades has not affected the world's largest known underground lake, the Lost Sea

"It's unbelievable." advertising manager Joe Grant said. "It hasn't rained here in three or four weeks, but the water level hasn't dropped any. In fact, we've had to pump water out."

Lost Sea, mentioned in the Guinness Book of World Records, is a 4.5-acre lake about 300 feet underground discovered 70 years ago at the end of Craighead Caverns.

"Ben Sands, who was 13 years old at the time, crawled through a 30-inch opening of mud and water in 1905," Grant said. "He used to tell us that he made a bunch of mudballs in the dark and threw them out as far as he could. All he could hear was splashes in every direction."

Two decades ago, that crevice was blasted out. Now Lost Sea, Inc., is an Eastern Tennessee tourist attraction drawing about 130,000 persons a year from the interstate between Knoxville and Chattanooga.

After a long walk down a picturesque cave, tour groups find a vast, murky room with a 40-foot dome ceiling. Boats take the tourists around the dimly lit lake, which is about 800 feet long by 200 feet wide. It's stocked with rainbow trout, which are fed by guides. The lake ranges to 55 feet deep, except for a hole divers tried to explore two years ago.

Thief May Set Target Based On Holidays

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE Odessa Police Department With each new season we find an array of changes that not only affect our patterns of expectations, but also have an influence on what items are most often found on the thieves shopping list. This phenomenon should not be surprising if we remember that unlawful acts are crimes of opportunity.

Obviously there are more opportune moments for a thief to steal a pleasure boat in the summer than in the winter. and certainly it would be much easier to fence the ski rig during summer months. As winter draws ever closer our expectations once again give rise to a predictable conduct that is very similar to that of previous years. Just as we plan and prepare for the coming holidays and big turkey dinner, thieves also will plan their targets based not only on seasonal changes, but also upon reasonable opportunity, and the chance for a quick sale.

To this end we all need to be especially mindful of what might have become a 'reasonable'' target for an alert thief. In some parts of the country snow is already blanketing the country side. In other areas the lawns have just been cut for the last time this year. Regardless of your geographic area, care should be taken to winterize your tools and equipment. Small gasoline engines should be drained and cleaned. Hand tools and power tools should be adequately cleaned and properly stowed. Admittedly, such items as tools probably generate the least of your worries as far as potential losses to a thief are concerned.

But what if the unthinkable happens? What if a thief does break into your house, workshop, or tool shed? Could you positively identify you property as be-longing to you and to no one else? Most people would have to answer no to that question, even though identifying characteristics can be quickly and permanently embedded in the surface of your T.V., sterio, firearms, lawn tractor, or outboard engine, or anything elso of value around your home, farm, or shop. Ideally you should inscribe your drivers license number into the surface of the valuable items - this number along with the prefix of the state in which you live serve as a permanent record of indentification.

There is no doubt about it, thieves and robbers are preparing their fall and winter shopping list, and if you don't want to be listed in their address book you had better lock your premises while you are away, and mark your property with your drives license number.

The final step is to put a warning decal on the doors telling the thief that your property is marked.

View A&M University. Thomas, president of the predominantly black university since 1966 and before that dean of industrial education and technology, said he be-lieves in giving personal attention to his 3,600 students.

"We strive to give our students personal attention at Prairie View - whether they're black, white, or brown," Thomas said. "And because we're a small university, we can do that."

Thomas sees nothing contradictory in providing his students personal, sometimes paternal, attention while telling them not to think they are elite be-cause they are black and not to expect the same per-sonal attention from society. "We've created a lot of black pride, which should've been done a long time ago, but we also created a lot of things that weren't too helpful be-cause we created the impression that just being black would do it," Thomas said. Rather than teach black elitism, Prairie View teaches achievement of certain standards — the same standards required by predominantly white universities, he said.

"We realized we weren't going into a black situation — we were going into a majority situation." Thomas said the institution's goals are defined very clearly as providing opportunities to whites, blacks and browns who are locked out of the majority system. "We're taking them that are locked out of the sys-tem altogether and giving them portholes through which they have access to a quality of life, a quality of professional opportunity and metric that they have a chance, acting on their own merit, to achieve it," he said.

Farm Wives Have Own Rights Version

MANHATTAN, Ka. (UPI) - The United Farm Wives of America, Inc., has its own version of equal rights in a state which already has ratified the Equal Rights Amendment.

The organization, representing wives in Kansas and Missouri, issued a set of resolutions for 1977 designed to protect the farm wife as well as preserve the family farm.

One resolution reads: "Be it further resolved that families be recognized as the business unit in operating farms, i.e., that husband and wife are engaged in farming as equal partners, that their ef-forts in accumulating the marital estate are equal."

Tick-Tacks, Kick Flips Abound In Skateboard Park

By MICHAEL BLUMSTEIN

EXETER, R.I. (UPI) — Steven Ellis says give him five minutes, and he'll have you riding and turning a skateboard without getting hurt. Give him another five minutes, and he might sell you one of his handcrafted skateboards for $65.

The 26-year-old native of Long Beach, N.Y., runs Yawgoo Valley Skateboard Park. If you're serious about doing "tick-tacks", "kick flips" or "lightning bolts," it's Rhode Island's only place to go.

Ellis and Richard Downs — owner of Yawgoo Park which doubles as a ski slope in the winter built the asphalt bowl for $10,000 in May 1976. Since then, they estimate 10,000 people, mainly kids, have come to skate at a rate of $2 for six hours.

"If the kid can stand up, he can probably learn how to stand on a skateboard," said Ellis. "And, that's just enough to light the spark, no matter how old he is."

"I had a 60-year-old woman here one night. She learned to roll the skateboard and turn it," Ellis said.

Nevertheless, kids who toddle or adults who waddle are not your average skaters. According to Ellis, most of Yawgoo's clients are "very interested and eager 10 to 16-year-olds." Take Cory Little, of East Greenwich, R.I., for ex-

Take Cory Little, 6f East Greenwich, R.I., for example. At age 11, he's 82 pounds of primarily shaggy blond hair, padding and thick gloves. He goes whipping around curves — not always staying with his skateboard — but knows no fear.

"He's got style," Ellis said as Cory tried to spin around on a skateboard and then ride two of the wooden planks at once.

"The little kids are getting unbelievable," Ellis added. "Everyday someone is doing something else."

Already there's been a little bit of local competition. Just recently, a second skateboar park opened in New England — in Brookline, N.H. — and Ellis and Little went to show off their stuff.

Ellis said about 1,000 spectators turned out to watch six enthusiasts zip up, down and around the asphalt bowl.

But, according to Ellis, the sport will really take off in 1980 or 1984 when he predicts slalom skateboarding around a series of cones will become part of the Olympic competition.

"Contests upgrade the level of skating." Ellis said. "The only problem is that Rumania and Russia will kill us. They'll just stick all their kids on skateboards instead of parallel bars."

Magazines and the equipment manufacturers who advertise in them are also doing their best to give skateboarding a lift.

Full color ads promote the advantages of helmets, padding, and slightly different boards. After all, those serious about the sport — as well as their safety — don't use 4 skateboards from the local five-and-dime.

"You can't walk out of here without spending $65," E'llis said standing in the small "pro shop" he runs at Yawgoo. His hand-crafted "Woodflow" boards of kiln-dried oak go for around $20.

And then there are four urethane wheels for $25 and two steel "trucks" that hold the wheels and let you steer the board for $20. That's $65 before adding sales tax.

Ellis cuts his own boards on a jigsaw he keeps in the backroom. He said he makes 500-to-600 boards annually — "enough to make me happy." They have a beveled top and "it's the most copied skateboard in the whole country.

The bridegroom of Pham Thi Kim, 19, also had an embarrassing past.

Nevertheless Kim and her husband received flowers and gifts from the Women's Union and the Communist Youth Union when they walked down the aisle in the main hall of Ho Chi Minh (Saigon) City's "For Tomorrow" school recently.

Kim "graduated" from the school after 18 months of training. She was sent there after the Communist victory in South Vietnam in April, 1975.

The first six months of her "schooling" Kim spent being cured of venereal disease at the "School for the Restoration of Women's Dignity

As the official Vietnam News Agency said in a recent frank report, the school is a "craft training school for former whores."

Kim's new husband. Hoang Tat Dac, 23, had been a soldier in the South Vietnamese Army, defeated by the Communists in 1975.

He fared better than tens of thousandr of his former comrades-in-arms who have been sent to reeducation camps.

After the defeat, "Dac returned to his home village where he started life afresh as a farmer," VNA said.

The union of Kim and Dac in wedlock was a resumption of a childhood freindship interrupted by the war.

"Kim met Dac when she was at high school," VNA said. "Their romance was interrupted bq Dac's conscription into the Saigon army and it was then that Kim became a prostitute."

But the war, the life of prostitution and separation are behind them now, and with the state's blessing.

VNA said the government-run school has retrained 700 former women of ill repute.

The government has reported sending several thousand former prostitutes to be reeducated. It has officially claimed there were 300,000 of them in Saigon at the end of the wur.

"This wedding ... was the first performed at the 'For Tomorrow' school." VNA said.

Banners, garlands of flowers, and sweets made from coconut meat graced the wedding hall.

"Everyone has been preparing for my wedding as if it were their own," Kim told VNA.

And the bride wore a traditional ivorywhite tunic, the report said.

Tech Likes Tangerine Better Than Cougars

By CARTER CROMWELL

Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff HOUSTON-It had been widely reported earlier in the week that Texas Tech would receive a bid to the Tangerine Bowl, regardless of the outcome of its contest with the University of Houston Saturday night.

That report proved to be correct, and it was a stroke of good fortune for the Raiders-one of the few that came their way Saturday.

Houston, you see, spoiled things quite well. Playing superbly and seemingly gaining momentum every second, the Cougars mounted a 21-point third-quarrer blitz and smashed Tech 45-7 before 43,989 fans and two shocked Tangerine Bowl officials.

They kept their promise and invited the Raiders to play Florida State in the Dec. 23 bowl, but the crushing defeat-Tech's worst since a 49-7 whipping by Texas in 1969-obviously removed the edge from matters.

From the middle of the second quarter, Houston could do little wrong, and nothing went right for Tech. The Cougars consistently made the big play on offense, and their menacing defense held the Raiders to 108 yards total offense. Houston put on a furious pass rush, sacking Tech quarterbacks 10 times and often hurrying the Raiders into incompletions and mistakes.

The Tech attack, which had shown considerable improvement lately, was limited to minus-7 yards rushing for the game and lost 54 yards in the second half, when the host team thoroughly dominated the proceedings.

Field position-and the ability, or lack of it, to convert it into points-was a tremendous factor. Early in the game, Tech had good field position for the most part but didn't often take advantage of it. Beginning midway through the second period. Houston had superb field position and made the most of it. Houston held a 14-7 advantage at halftime, as Tech failed to take proper advantage of good field position.

The Cougars opened the scoring with 1:45 remaining in the first quarter when Blackwell cracked at left tackle, found enormous running room and raced 71 yards down the left side for a touchdown. Hatfield's extra point upped UH's margin

10 7-0. Early in the second period, though, the Raiders tied the game with a 10-play, 77yard march that culminated when quarterback Mark Johnson kept around the right side, cut inside at tackle and rambled 16 yards for a score.

A couple of big third-down plays had kept the march alive. On third and 6 from the Tech 27. Allison scrambled to the right and finally found flanker Brian Nelson open in the middle of the field for a 13-yard gain and a first down.

A little later, again on third and 6, Allison dropped straight back and connected with Nelson down the middle for a 20yard gainer to the Houston 12-yard line. Allison, limping noticeably, left the game. Johnson replaced him and lost 4 yards on the first play, but scored on the next. Adams' extra point kick, good with 9:39 left in the half, tied the contest.

Tech then had a terrific scoring oppor-tunity when UH's Don Bass fumbled on the kickoff return and Doug Streater cov-ered it for the Raiders at the Cougar 20.

However, on second and goal from the 6. Allison's throw over the middle for tailback Mark Julian was intercepted by Houston linebacker Willis Williams at the goal and returned to the 11.

The hosts then mounted a 10-play, 89vard TD drive that ended when fullback Dyral Thomas bolted over left tackle, broke away from Tech end Olan Tisdale at the 10 and compleded a 12-yard scoring Hatfield again kicked the PAT, giving the Cougars their halftime margin.

Tech had fine field position at the beginning of the game but came up empty. Houston took the opening kickoff and moved to the Tech 34 before stalling and sending in Hatfield for a 52-yard field goal try. The Raiders' Don Kelly rushed into block it and end Richard Arledge picked up the ball and returned to midfield.

The visitors made one first down but could advance no farther and had to punt

On their next possession, the Raiders drove from their 36 to Houston's 15 but bogged down, and Adams' 34-yard field goal attempt from the left hash mark was wide to the left. In the second half, UH possessed the ball eight times and began in Tech terri-tory six of those times. The Raiders, on the other hand, began at its 20-yard line five times and started one time each at its 10, 34, 28, and 35.

An 89-yard touchdown march midway through the second period gave Houston a 14-7 halftime advantage that the Cou-gars quickly expanded early in the third quarter.

its sensational place kicker and punter Russell Erxleben.

Texas Coach Fred Akers activated redshirt quarterback Ted Contanzo to do the punting and linebacker McMichael took over the place-kicking chores. Akers brought in miracle-worker McEachern in the second half as Baylor keyed on the Longhorn running game. McEachern had missed two games with a strained knee and was a catalyst in theh victories over Oklahoma and Arkansas. Reeves, Odom Reap City Grid Honors

By TOM HALLIBURTON Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff After Scott Gardner vacated the Monte-

rev football fields two years ago, coach James Odom used an elementary selection process for choosing his quarterback-elect.

"I try to play my best athlete at quarterback whenever I can. Not all good athletes can play quarterback, but that's something you have to find out," said the Monterey coach.

Two regular seasons or 24 opponents later, and plenty of folks have found out the choice of Ron Reeves turned out pretty good. The Plainsman quarterback earned the Player of the Year honors on this year's All-City prep grid team selected by the Avalanche-Journal.

Reeves finished second in the running for the honor last year as a junior behind Dunbar's versatile Dennis Gentry. The senior tank-type field general received the award this fall and convinced most of his doubters by slamming right into them. Shoulder pad to shoulder pad.

"He s just a great competitor. He really had quite a temper to him in junior high but he's learned to control it and he's matured a lot," Odom said.

The Monterey coach thinks the change from linebacker to quarterback might have triggered the maturation process a bit

"I think it helped him a whole lot. He knew that the whole team was depending on him and that it was up to him to lead the way," Odom said.

Reeves thinks an extra year of school may have helped his athletic career, too. The Plainsman quarterback repeated the seventh grade which allowed him to return with his original classmates. "In elementary school, I was moved up a grade in the third grade but I continued to run around with the kids in the grade below me. I think it helped me a whole lot as a football player because I wasn't important to any of my youth athletic teams when I was little," he said.

When Reeves turns 18 years old next March, he will rate mighty big on many of the recruiters' checklists. But the senior hopes the Plainsmen wrap up four more wins and a state grid title before he worries about college.

A few other members of the bidistrict champion team will draw the eyes of many talent scouts, too. Seven other Plainsmen joined Reeves on the all-city list. They include most of the players which really attract the scouts.

"Reeves and (free safety Greg) Iseral are receiving the largest number of letters and interested coaches. (Defensive

Tar Heels Top First Cage Poll

By The Associated Press North Carolina's Tar Heels are the nation's No. 1 team in the Associated Press preseason college basketball poll.

A nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters have judged the Atlantic Coast Conference team best in the country by a slim 34-point margin over Kentucky

The Tar Heels polled 873 points to 839 for the Wildcats of the Southeastern Conference, with each team collecting 21 first-place votes in a wide disparity over the rest of the field.

Marquette, conqueror of North Carolina in last year's finals at Atlanta, was a distant third with 581 points, some of them fashioned on four first-place votes. Notre Dame, another of the country's top independents, was close behind the Warriors with 577 points. The Fighting Irish received two votes for first place. San Francisco, defending champion of the West Coast Athletic Conference, and Pacific-8 titlist UCLA received the other first-place votes from the panel and finished 5-6 in the voting. The Dons collected 536 points to 443 for the Bruins.

Arkansas, the top team in the Southwest Conference last season, finished No. 7 in the voting with 344 points and Nevada-Las Vegas, a Far West independent which was in the final four last season, was No. 8 with 344.

Two Metro-Seven powers-Cincinnati and Louisville-rounded out the Top Ten, Cincinnati was No. 9 with 304 points and Louisville No. 10 with 236.

The remainder of The AP's ranked teams: No. 11 Syracuse: No. 12 Purdue: No. 13 Michigan; No. 14 Maryland; No. 15 Alabama; No. 16 Minnesota; No. 17 Wake Forest; No. 18 Holy Cross; No. 19 Detroit and No. 20 St. John's.

North Carolina-Charlotte, one of the final four in last year's national playoffs, uniquely did not make it into the preseason Top Twenty despite a team that returns most of its starters.

The AP's final Top Twenty last year: 1. Michigan, 2. UCLA, 3. Kentucky, 4. Nevada-Las Vegas, 5. North Carolina, 6. Syracuse, 7. Marquette, 8. San Francisco, 9. Wake Forest, 10. Notre Dame, 11. Alabama, 12. Detroit, 13. Minnesota, 14. Utah, 15. Tennessee, 16. Kansas State, 17. UNC-Charlotte, 18. Arkansas, 19. Louisville, 20. VMI.

By The Associated Press David Dumas booted a 37-yard field goal with two seconds left in the first half Friday night as the Conroe Tigers stunned high-powered, No. 2-ranked Temple 3-0 to lead a parade of upsets in the first round of Texas schoolboy playoffs.

The unbeaten Wildcats, who had already trimmed Conroe 10-0 earlier this season and were averaging more than 30 points per game, could manage only 153 yards against the unranked Tigers in the Class AAAA bidistrict clash.

Conroe will advance to meet ninthranked Plano, a 17-7 bidistrict victor over Lufkin.

In Class AA, unranked teams whipped through four unbeaten Top Ten teams, including No. 3 Idalou, which lost 13-8 to Littlefield, and No. 4 Jacksboro, stunned by Breckenridge 24-12. Fifth-ranked Newton fell 14-7 to Anahuac, while defending Class AA champion Rockdale surprised No. 9 Brady 21-7. Meanwhile, Spearman, the secondranked Class AA team in the final Associated Press poll, fell victim to No. 10ranked Childress 19-3.

The Class AAAA bidistrict matchups featured two games between top ten teams. Fifth-ranked Stafford Dulles was upended by La Porte 16-14 while No. 7 San Antonio Highlands fell victim to San Antonio Lee 20-14. La Porte and Lee were tied for 10th.

Gregory Portland, the unbeaten, topranked Class AAA team, easily thumped Raymondville 69-0 to advance to a quarter-final showdown with No. 7 Dickinson, a 55-0 winner over Uvalde.

Will the Monterey Plainsmen ever play in Lubbock again? If it is left up to head coach James Odom—which it is— the answer is no.

Odom, in true form Saturday morning. lost his fifth straight coing toss in two years. So now, the Plainsmen must pack their bags and head to El Paso for the second consecutive year.

Monterey, ranked sixth in the state by the Associated Press, will put its 10-0-1 season recond on the line against El Paso Bel Air (6-5) in a Class AAAA regional state playoff football game Thursday night at 8:30 p.m. (CDT) in the Sun Bowl.

Odom's luck over the past couple of season as taken a change for the worse. As the head mentor at Petersburg in 1963, Odom won five straight coin tosses. And the Eagles went on to win the Class A state title.

PORTALES (Special) - Eastern New Mexico University built a 35-0 lead in the first half and then coasted to a 49-7 win over Bishop College to close out the football season at Blackwater Draw Saturday afternoon.

Sophomore George McTear went on a tear for the Greyhounds, scoring twice and picking up 165 yards rushing on 17 carries. Sharing the game spotlight with McTear was Bishop's Marvin Patterson, who picked up 140 yards receiving on seven catches. He scored once.

The win lifted Eastern's record to 4-6 and Bishop fell to 3-7.

McTear started the scoring avalanche, sailing in from the 1 in the first quarter, and Mark Dayhoff kicked.

In the second, Joe Martin threw to Tony Castle for 4 yards and an ENMU touchdown. Dayhoff followed with his second of seven extra-point boots.

Stanley Read scored next when EN-MU blocked a Bishop punt, and Stanley Read scooped it up and returned it 18 yards. Before halftime, Julius Hill scored from the 21, and McTear sprinted 55 yards for a TD.

ENMU was scoreless in the third but tacked on a pair of TDs, Darrell Talley on a 1-yard run and Sam Zackery on a 17-yard sprint. Bishop finally scored with the score 49-0, as Lester Gillespie hurled a 22-yard pass to to Patterson. ENMU bruised to 380 yards rushing, and its defendera held Bishop to only 45 yards on the ground.

KENOSHA, Wis. (AP) - Garry Henry of Pembroke State set a new meet record of 24 minutes, 11 seconds over the five-mile course Saturday, as he finished first in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics cross country championships.

Adams State College of Colorado, with four finishers in the top 25, won the meet, held at the University of Wisconsin-Parkside, with a team score of 102 points.

Lubbock Christian College and Way-land Baptist College finished 30th and 32nd, respectively, in the affair.

Willie Sang, running his last cross-country for the Chaparrals, finished 15th in 24:54 and received All-America honors for that effort, as did all who finished in the Top 20. Mike Jenkins finished 182nd, Joel Koach 222nd, James Cook 232nd, Kip Mibey 241st and Harold Stewart 318th. The first five counted toward team points

Wayland's first finisher Rick Riemer 106th and Daryl Reimer was 142nd. Some 411 athletes finished the race, but almost 200 dropped by the wayside.

Henry, a native of Australia and a omore at the North Carolina school, beat out a field of 411 and broke the previous record of 24:21, set last year by John Kebiro of Eastern New Mexico. Henry was the top individual runner

TCU's star receiver Mike Renfro hauled in a 12-yard touchdown pass from Steve Bayuk just before halftime to break Jerry LeVias' SWC career reception mark of 155 and tie the SWC record of nine touchdown receptions in a season.

The crafty Renfro then snared a 21yard pass from Bayuk, but coughed up the ball at the goal line where Carlton Kile grabbed it for the second Horned Frog touchdown. Bayuk later connected with Michel Milton for a 17-yard touchdown pass in a brief third-quarter rally. Renfro ended the game with a career

Regional Victors

Seminole and Fabens advanced to the state girls volleyball tournament Saturday by capturing Region I championships at Coronado High School.

Seminole, 28-6 for the year, defeated Borger 15-4, 15-5 while Snyder defeated Brownwood 15-4, 15-3. Then Seminole downed Snyder 11-15, 16-14, 15-5 for the AAA honor.

Fabens, 33-1 overall, beat Childress 15-1, 15-1 while Denver City eliminated Muleshoe 15-1, 15-0. In the regional final, Fabens outlasted Denver City 15-10, 12-8, 16-14.

The state tourney is set for Dec. 2-3 in Austin.

All-tournament members in Class AA are Gail Moore, Jaymie Qualls and Kellie Mull of Denver City along with Lori Devolin, Valnita Nichols and Nancy Bell of Fabens.

All-tournament members in Class AAA are Dana Elrod, Sheily Nutt and Kathy Harrell of Snyder along with Irene Ra-mirez, Valerie Earl and Freda Morris of Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff Joe McWilliams looked as though someone had just tried to stuff a couple of pairs of Converses down his throat.

The Dunbar head basketball coach for the past three years had just learned his Panthers had been selected to win the District 3-AAA basketball crown by the loop's bosses for the second consecutive year. And the news appeared to throw him into shock."I don't see how they could pick us, " McWilliams said.

"We're just average height and there are some other teams in the district that have more players coming back."

Don't worry, fans, that is the usual reaction of any coach whose teams has just been placed on a pedestal. Although McWilliams may have some reservations concerning the haves and have nots of his team, the other loop bosses didn't.

Dunbar, which finished the district

chase last year with an impressive 11-1 mark (The only Panther loss was to. cross-town rival Estacado), garnered six of the seven first place votes cast to collect 36 total points.

Estacado, the only other team in the loop that collected a first place vote, was seven points behind the defending champions with 29.

Lamesa, which has won the title five of the last seven years and also collected a state championship trophy in 1975, wound up in third with 27 points, just a couple of tallies behind the Panthers.

Rounding out the poll are Snyder with 22, Sweetwater with, Brownfield with 10 and Lake View with 8.

Of the coaches contacted, everyone mentioned the name Billy Don Hardaway when asked to evaluate the overall strength of this year's Panthers:

"He's just one player," McWilliams said about Hardaway. "And one person doesn't win a district."

But if one player could, it might just be Billy D.

During his first year on the varsity. Hardaway was named sophomore of the year. Last season, his junior year, the 6-6 postman collected the loop's most valuable player honor.

In the Panhandle loop, District 1-AAA, Borger edged Perryton by one point, 15-1 14, to grab the favorite's spot. Borger, the defending loop champion and a state finalist, had three first place.

Bulldogs Win State Battle

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) - Quarterback Bruce Threadgill scored one touchdown and passed for another Saturday as Mississippi State's Bulldogs survived a disastrous start to overpower arch-rival Mis-sissippi 18-14 in college football.

State, showing little defense and no offense throughout the first quarter, fought back to take control shortly before intermission and never relinquished it again.

After adding two field goals to narrow the halftime gap to eight points, Threadg-ill raced 42 yards for a third quarter score and hit split end Mardye McDole on a 26yard touchdown pass in the fourth.

The Rebels, fighting for an invitation to the Hall of Fame Bowl at Birmingham, Ala., scored on two Tim Ellis runs, the first for one yard after an 80-yard drive and another for seven vards on the third play following an interception.

But that was all the offense the Rebels could muster in a game called a key factor in whether coach Ken Cooper keeps his job next year.

The Rebels all but blew State off the field in the first period. After a fumble aborted its first possession, Ole Miss marched almost unhampered on its second possession with Ellis sweeping the final yard to cap the long drive.

On the third possession, after safety Gary Jones returned an interception to the Bulldog 21, Ellis scrambled in on the final play.

But everything changed inexplicably when the second quarter opened. It was all Mississippi State from that point.

State drove 49 yards to set up a 44-yard field goal by Dave Marler and then moved 53 yards to set up a 30-yard Marler kick before intermission.

Threadgill scored his touchdown on the first State possession of the third period and he drove the Bulldogs 52 yards on the first possession of the fourth.

Following Borger and Perryton are Canyon with 10 points, Levelland with seven and Dumas with 4. In District 2-AAA, Odessa Ector ran away and hid as it collected four of seven Mon ans and Pecos each were awarded the other two first place votes cast.

Although Ector was picked head-andshoulders above the other six teams, the race for second place is the tighest of any

Pecos gets the nod for second with 16 points, followed in order by Fort Stockton with 15, Monahans with in order by Pecos with 16, Fort Stockton's 15, Monahans' 14, Seminole's 13 and Andrews' 10.

Orantes Gains

Tennis Finals MANILA (AP) – Spain's Manuel Or-

antes moved into the finals of the $75,-000 Philippine International Tennis Grand Prix Saturday, eliminating Dick Crealy of Australia 6-2, 3-6, 6-0 before 7,-000 spectators.

The top-seeded Spaniard, sixth-ranked among the world's professionals, slipped while returning a Crealy volley and sprained his left ankle in the fourth game of the first set while leading 3-1. But after a 10-minute interruption and with Crealy's help bandaging the ankle, Orantes recovered with a variety of passing shots, steady baseline play, accurate smashes and drop shots to take the set 6-

Crealy, fourth-seeded in the tournament, tried to force the lefthanded Orantes to use mostly backhand returns in the second set in an effort to put stress on the injured ankle. But the wily Spaniard allowed the taller Australian to repeatedly rush the net and win the set.

However, Orantes never lost a game in the third set to rout Crealy, who obviously tired from the second set exertions.

After the match Orantes said, "For a while I thought my ankle might force me to give up but after a few minutes I knew it was okay."

Orantes will face West Germany's Karl Meiler in the championship match Sundav

The champion will get the top prize of $13,135 while the runner-up will receive $6,525.

Meiler, unseeded in the tournament, upset No. 7 seed Geoff Masters of Australia in the other semifinals match 7-6, 6-3.

Masters was ahead at 5-1 in the first set but allowed Meiler to get back in the match.

Both losing semifinalists won $3,450. THE CITADEL STANDS

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)-Citadel quarterback Marty Crosby hit freshman split end Mark Hunt for a 37-yard gain to set up Sam Scadlock's 7-yard touchdown burst with 25 seconds left to play as The Citadel defeated Furman 10-3 in an intrastate Southern Conference battle Saturday afternoon.

ABILENE (Special) - Odessa Permi-an's defense allowed 68 total yards, and the Panthers finally busted loose for 23 points in the fourth quarter to beat Denton 26-0 Saturday

The Class AAAA bidistrict playoff victory advances Permian (11-0) into the regionals next week against Arlington Lamar, a 29-24 victor over Fort Worth Arlington Heights.

Permian's defense didn't permit any Denton first downs in the second half as the teams were scoreless until in the third quarter. Robert Orosco booted a 29-yard field goal into the wind, giving Permian a 3-0 with 2:46 left in the third quarter.

Fullback Mark Graves, the game's leading rusher, smashed straight up the middle for a 37-yard scoring run, giving Permian a 10-0 lead with 10:33 left in the game. Orosco booted the PAT kick. The touchdown followed an identical 21yard burst by Graves on the previous play. Graves rushed 11 times for 88 vards in the game.

Denton failed to move after taking the ensuing kickoff. So Permian regained possession after a punt on its 48. On the first play, Panther quarterback Vic Vines tossed a 52-yard touchdown pass to split end Brian Vickers. Orosco kicked the PAT with nine minutes left in the game.

Seconds later, Permian tackler David Clyburn tackled a Denton runner in the end zone for a safety with 8:47 left in the game, lifting Permian ahead 19-0.

Permian immediately retained possession after Denton's kick. The Mojo men moved 48 yards for their final score in eight plays. Quarterback Vines ran for the final yard and Orosco added the extra-point kick with 5:06 left in the game. CORE BY OUAPTER

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-8-9

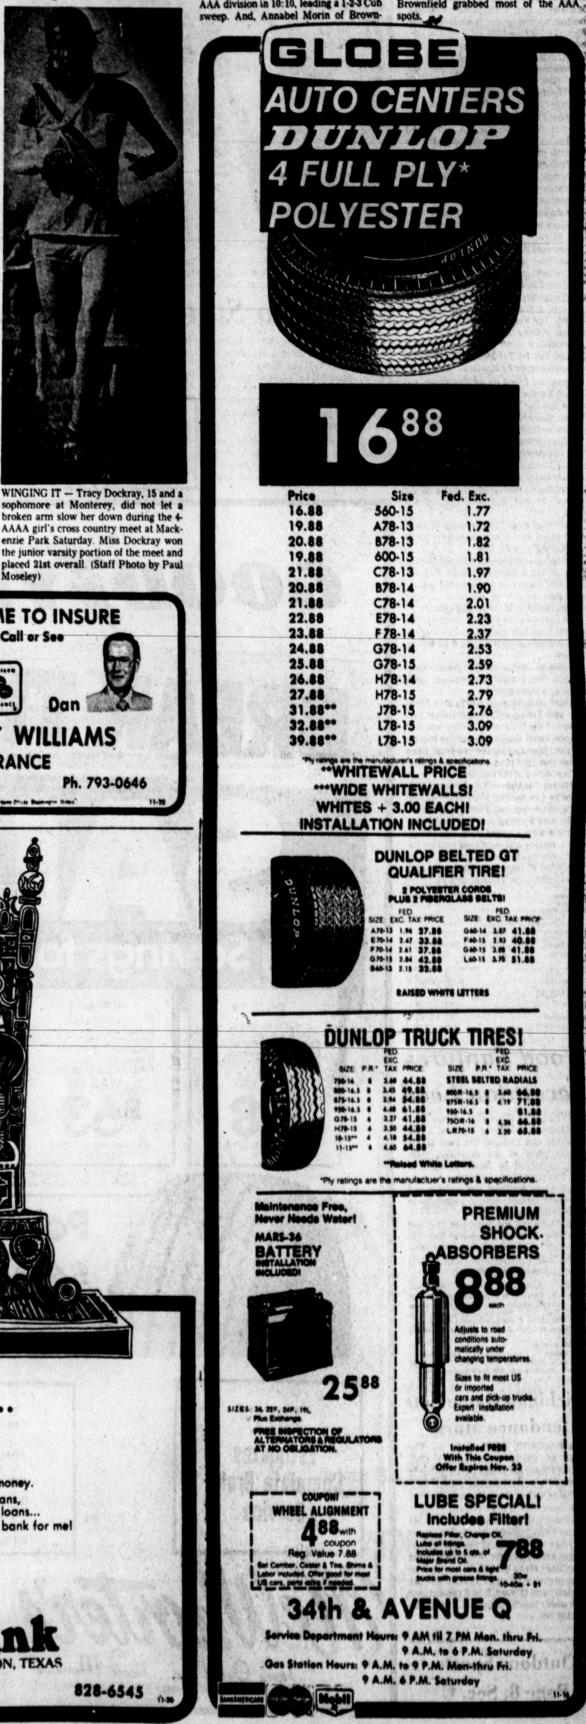

Monterey's Karla Leslie won the girls division with a time of 13:14, ahead of Hereford's Velma Arroyos who clocked 13:34.

Tony Argueliez of Brownfield won the AAA division in 10:10, leading a 1-2-3 Cub sweep. And, Annabel Morin of Brownfield won the girls bracket by a wide mar-gin over Kathleen Weems of Estacado.

In all divisions, the top three teams and top ten individuals form district qualify for the regional meet, to be held here Dec. 3.

Thus, Monterey, Coronado and Here-ford qualified teams in 4-AAAA, and, Brownfield grabbed most of the AAA.

Runningback Steve Dean scored from the 6-yard line with 1:53 left in the game, then Dean took a 2-point conversion pass from Dale Kelton for the winning points, and the host Cardinals nipped Jal 20-19 for the state championship.

It was a rematch, too, as the two teams had played in district, with Eunice winning. Both teams then advanced to the state playoffs, and to the state finals.

Following Dean's scoring, Jal took the kickoff and barged to the Eunice 35 before running out of time.

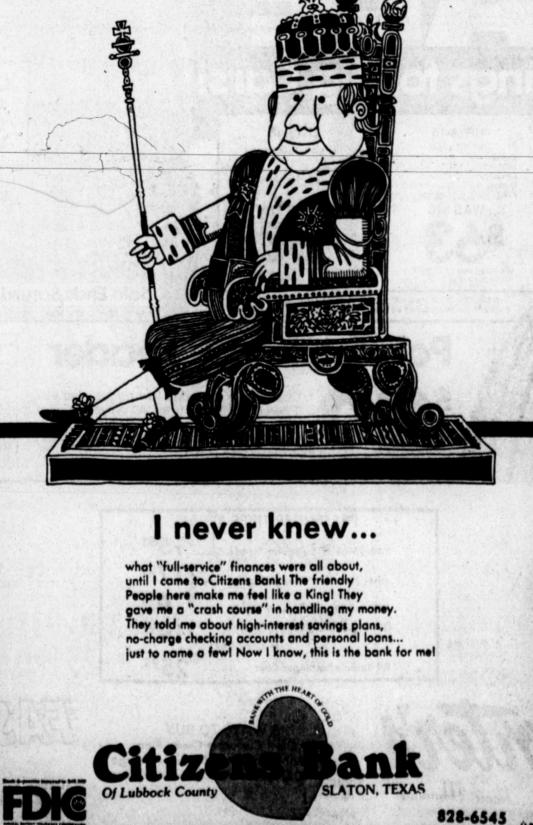

Eunice had mounted a 12-0 halftime lead as Dean scored from the 1-yard line with 2:48 left in the opening period, then Ricky Ziegler scored from the 1 with 3:50 left in the half. Consecutive kick and pass tries for extra points failed.

Jal began a furious rally in the second half, as Ricky Jennings scored from the 13 with 9:16 left in the third quarter, and James Rainey kicked the extra point. With 4:47 left in the same stanza, Jennings scored from the 4, but a running try for points failed, leaving the Panthers in charge 13-12 going into the final 12 minutes.

Kentucky Topples Tennessee

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) - Derrick amsey's 1-yard plunge capped an 80ard fourth-quarter touchdown drive that gave seventh-ranked Kentucky a 21-17 Southeastern Conference comeback potball victory over Tennessee Satur-

The Wildcats, completing their best season in 27 years with a 10-1 record, got the winning drive under way on a 36ard pass from reserve quarterback Mike Deaton to Felix Wilson.

Ramsey, playing dispite a bruised houlder, returned on a third-and-five situation at the Volunteer 39, hammered yards on the first play and drove his am the distance.

Ramsey's score came with 5:29 left in the game and completed Kentucky's first perfect season in conference competition with a 6-0 record.

Kentucky is under probation and therefore ineligible for the SEC title and bowl play.

Tennessee had taken a 17-14 lead early in the final quarter on a school-record 67-yard field goal by Jim Gaylor.

Kelsey Finch scored two touchdowns for Tennessee, which lost its seventh game in a season for the first time in history. The Vols are now 3-7 overall and winless in five conference games.

Kentucky's other scoring came on a 14-yard run by Freddie Williams and a one-yard keeper by Ramsey.

Tennessee failed on its first series following Kentucky's fourth quarter touchdown, but the Vols got another opportunity at midfield when they recovered a fumble by Ramsey.

Jimmy Streater, who directed the at-tack flawlessly throughout the game, fired a 15-yard pass to Reggie Harper at the Kentucky 26, but two plays later Kelly Kirchbaum recovered a fumble on the Wildcat 24 and Kentucky ran out the clock.

Tennessee scored first, moving 67 yards on 11 plays, with Finch accounting for 37 and scoring from the four.

Kentucky came back with an 80-yard drive in which Ramsey carried 35 yards on three carries and completed an 11yard pass to set up Williams' 14-yard scoring run early in the second quarter. The Cats went 56 yards, helped by two offsides penalties, and took a 14-6 lead on Ramsey's one-yard run with 6:46 left in the half.

Tennessee then got a break that hanged the game's momentum until Kentucky's winning drive.

A short punt touched Kentucky's John Bow, and Tennessee's Steve Porter reovered at the Wildcat 21. Five plays latr Finch raced nine yards for the touchdown and then ran for the two-point conversion that tied it at 14-14 with 90 secnds remaining in the half.

Tennessee marched 68 yards to the Kentucky five on the first series in the third quarter, but had a five-yard motion enalty and Streater was dumped for a 0-yard loss by Richard Jaffe and Dallas Owens, forcing a 37-yard field goal try by Gaylor which sailed wide right.

Finch led all runners with 84 yards, and

Colorado State Upsets Sun Devils

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) - Colorado State's aroused defense, spearheaded by tackle Mike Bell and linebacker Dana Isoline, accounted for a touchdown and a safety, and Tom Drake kicked three field goals as the Rams upset 12th-ranked Arizona State 25-14 Saturday in Western Athletic Conference football.

The Sun Devils, suffering their first loss in conference play, were unable to move the ball effectively against the Ram defense, which received an assist from

Irish Trample Air Force 49-0

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) - Vagas Ferguson blasted for three touchdowns including a 56-yard romp on Notre Dame's first play from scrimmage to send the sixth-ranked Irish to a 49-0 victory over Air Force Saturday and a trip to the Cotton Bowl.

The triumph was the eighth-straight for the Irish, now 9-1 with a Dec. 3 date remaining at Miami, Fla., before the Cotton Bowl meeting Jan. 1 against topranked Texas.

Air Force closed its season with a 2-8-1 record as Ben Martin called it quits after 22 years of coaching, the last twenty at the academy.

Notre Dame scored on its first three possessions to take a 21-0 lead at the quarter. After his 56-yard touchdown run, Ferguson went across from the nine-yard line and Jerome Heavens added a one-yard touchdown run.

Notre Dame made it 35-0 at the half as Ferguson capped a 64-yard drive with a two-yard touchdown run and quarterback Joe Montana hit Chris Haines with 33-yard scoring strike.

Coach Dan Devine yanked his firststring backfield after the first half and went with his reserves the rest of the way, but the Irish were able to add two more touchdowns to complete the romp.

Air Force's deepest penetration was in the first half to the Irish 48-yard line. The Falcons were unable to get a first down in the second half.

Tony Dorsett is in but Jack Lambert and L.C. Greenwood are probably out of today's National Football League showdown between the Dallas Cowboys and Pittsburgh Steelers.

Dorsett, the sensational rookie runningback for the Cowboys, will start his first game in his return to Pittsburgh, where he set all sorts of collegiate rushing records and won the Heisman Trophy last year.

Used strictly as a substitute so far, Dorsett nevertheless has been the leading rusher for Dallas with 522 yards. That's eighth-best in the National Conference and his production also includes seven touchdowns. Coach Tom Landry has decided to take the wraps off the youngster this week and will start him for the first time in his professional career.

When Dorsett carries for the Cowboys on Sunday, he is unlikely to find Lambert, the Steelers' All-Pro middle linebacker, or Greenwood, the tough defensive end, waiting for him. Both are nursing banged-up knees.

Their absence was obvious last Sunday when the Steelers hung on for a 35-31 victory over Cleveland that was not exactly a defensive showcase. The Cowboys, meanwhile, had their eight-game winning streak ended by St. Louis 24-17 Monday night.

Both Dallas and Pittsburgh go into today's clash as first-place clubs. The Cowboys still have a two-game lead over St. Louis in the NFC East and the Steelers share the American Conference Central lead with Cleveland.

In today's other games it's Denver at Kansas City, Houston at Seattle, Miami at Cincinnati, New England at Buffalo, the New York Jets at Baltimore, Oakland at San Diego, Atlanta at New Orleans. Los Angeles at San Francisco, Minnesota

the New York Giants. In the Monday night game Green Bay

visits Washington With five weeks left in the regular season, all six NFL divisions still have competitive races The largest lead in any division is two games. Dallas has that margin, as does Minnesota, two ahead of both Chicago and Detroit in the NFC Central. The Vikings, however, face the final five games without quarterback Fran Tarkenton, who suffered a broken ankle last week. In the NFC West, Los Angeles is one game in front of Atlanta and two up on San Francisco, which has won four straight games after losing the first five. The really tight races are in the AFC with the Central and West divisions tied at the top and only one game separating first-place Baltimore and second-place Miami in the East. In the Central race, Pittsburgh and

Cleveland share first place but both Cincinnati and Houston are only one game off the paace. In the West, Denver and Oakland both sport 8-1 records for a share of that division lead. We are going to have to get as hungry as other teams if we are going to win the Super Bowl," says Landry of the 8-1 Cow-at Chicago, Philadelphia at St. Louis. Tampa Bay at Detroit and Cleveland st the National Conference – East.

"I want to play a whole game to see what I can really do," says Dorsett, the former Univerity of Pittsburgh recordbreaker who has rushed for 522 vards despite only parttime rookie duty. Meanwhile, the Steelers, 5-4, share first-place with Cleveland atop the American Conference - Central. Yet it has been an especially severe season for Steeler injuries. And it contrasts sharply with 1975, when the Steelers started the season with the same 43 players who beat Dallaain Super Bowl X.

Lambert, Greenwood and safety Don Shell will all likely miss the Dallas game with knee injuries.

Those injuries mean Dallas will likely test Pittsburgh's defense up the middle. where rookie Dennis "Dirt" Winston will start at linebacker and converted corner back Jim "Spider Man" Allen will start at safety.

Beyond their physical problems, the Steelers face some mental challenges against the complex Cowboy offense.

There's a preparation problem for our whole defense because of things they do we don't normally see," said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll, citing Dallas use of the shotgun formation, men-in-motion and assorted shifts.

The Cowboy "flex-defense" also presents a preparation problem for Pittsburg.

The Steelers had their best offensive game of the season last week as quarter ack Terry Bradshaw led them to a 28-3 halftime lead over Cleveland. And Bradshaw will start against Dallas even though the Cleveland game left him with a left shoulder bruise to go with the cast he wears on his fractured left wrist.

However, the Dallas defense has allowed the lowest percentage of pass com-pletions in the NFL and it leads the league in quarterback sacks.

And Safety Cliff Harris says the Cowboys are playing a more physical brand of defense than in seasons past.

We've got guys like Harvey Martin, Tom Henderson, Randy White, Bob Breunig, Benny Barnes, and they're all in there hitting," Harris says.

'We didn't use to have that many hard hitters. Now we've got more guys who make the real smashing hits."

THEY THINK ALIKE

LOS ANGELES (AP) - When the Atlanta Falcons upset the Los Angeles Rams, 17-6, on opening day of 1977 in the National Football League, wide receiver Harold Jackson of the losers thought he was seeing double. "Atlanta coach Leeman Bennett is a lot like our coach Chuck Knox," Jackson said, "He and Knox both have about the same knowledge of what a sound football team should do. After all Bennett and Knox were on the same coaching staff in Detroit and when Chuck took over in Los Angeles he brought Ben-

Two-Way Picks Rule Loop Units

Five gridders from 2-B's North Zone and two from 2-AAA landed spots on both the offensive and defensive All-District units announced Saturday by their respective leagues.

District 3-B (Six-Man) North also announced its picks, with Albert Rand and Bill Hodnett of Three Way, Clay Freeman of Loop and Terry Sansing of zone champ Wellman being picked to represent the zone in the All-Star game next summer at the annual coaching school. In 2-B North, Sudan's Lonnie Williams and Edgar Tamplin, Valley's Darrell Dowd, Motley County's Jerry Lee and Nazareth's Derwin Huseman were twoway picks.

Williams was a unanimous choice at both offensive tackle and a down lineman and Tamplin was a unanimous defensive end pick. Dowd and Lee were both unanimous picks in the backfield. Other unanimous choices were: Sudan offensive guard Derwin Beauchamp, Valley down lineman Kenny Chandler and Sudan secondary man Joel Williams.

The team also featured a brother act, Lazbuddie's Mike and Russell Windham. Mike, a senior, was a secondary pick, and Russell, a freshman, the wide receiver

In 2-AAA, the two-way picks were Fort Stockton offensive tackle-down lineman Roman Lomas and Pecos offensive guard-down lineman Craig Woods.

District Champion Andrews filled eight of the 22 spots, including five on offense where quarterback Booger Brooks and Kenny Hearne landed backfield spots. That team also features a twin set, the Munsells of Andrews. Mark was an offensive tackle pick and Micky the center choice. Mark goes 6-1, 215 and Mickey 6-2, 205.

The 3-B (Six-Man) team actually had 14 players including place-kicker Joe Lozano of Grady, but none was a two-way pick. Zone champ Wellman filled four berths and runner-up Three Way three. A tie developed at quarterback between Gilbert Basquez of Loop and Jimmy Polk of Whitharral.

Rand, Hodnett, Freeman and Sansing were the All-Star picks in that order. If one of those is unable to play, the alternates, in order, are Ron James of Wellman, Basquez, Frankie Valdes of Southland and Mitch Grant of Whitharral.

The 26-man 2-B North Zone squad saw co-champs Motley County and Sudan divide 14 spots, with Valley getting six, Nazareth four and Lazbuddie two. No one from Happy was picked.

Only two juniors made the 23-man 2-AAA unit. Fort Stockton had six picks, Pecos four, Monahans three and Seminole and Ector one each.

DISTRICT J-B (Six-Man) NORTH OFFENSE - RE - Jimmy Avery, Whitharrai; LE - Ron James, Wellman; C - Brad Tankersley, Wellman; GB - (Ite) Gilbert Basquez, Loop, and Jimmy Polk, Whitharrai; HB - Albert Rand, Three Way, and Alan Berryhille, Wellman. Texas Still Allows Family-Run Burials

By RAYNIE HARDESTY Avalanche-Journal Staff

The family-conducted burial, thought to have died with the settler and his homestead, still persists in West Texas. Although families choosing to conduct their own burials number less than 10 a year in the Lubbock area, those willing to follow local and state laws can avoid common expenses for commercial funeral arrangements and burials, morticians here have said.

back when an adult dies.

Families are often told by hospital personnel that the body of the deceased relative must be embalmed before burial, a local mortician said.

However, according to the State Board of Mortician's Annual, a body does not require embalming if the body is buried within 24 hours, or is being frozen or cremated.

Embalming is necessary when the corpse is being carried over a state line or is being transported by a common carrier such as an airline company.

A family member may transport a body over a state line simply by having the consulted funeral director complete and sign a transit license

A death certificate or report of death A death certificate or report of death also must be properly filled out and turned in to the county registrar's office where a burial permit may be obtained if the family wishes to bury its own dead. In such a case, the family has the option of burying in a public cemetery or on private property. Most director's recommend burial in public cemeteries to avoid legal hassles. The Avalanche-Journal learned

For members to dig a grave in a public cemetery, state laws only require that the top of the corpse's "container" be at least two feet below the earth's surface. For an infant, the grave is generally about four feet deep, while an adult grave is about six feet deep. Occassionally, park officials also may set up additional regulations to maintain a neat appearance on the burial grounds. To prevent the collapse of a grave, Lubbock cemetery administrators insist that a cement covering be placed over the coffin.

However, no supervisor is legally required to oversee such private burials.

The strictest legal provisions are encountered when burying on private property.

According to Vernon's Civil Statutes of the State of Texas, a family establishes a new cemetery when it buries its dead on private property.

Citizens who might attempt to bury their dead in a backyard within city limits most likely would be faced with a mass of injunctions from neighbors, advised one funeral director.

The legal sources used against the intown burial probably would come from the state civil statutes which define a cemetery as "a place dedicated to and used and intended to be used for the permanent interment of the human dead." State law also provides that cities may pass ordinances concerning the burial of the dead within city limits. The statutes also forbid new cemeteries to be established within a specified number of miles from any city limits, as determined by the city's population. As a result of these laws, the state seldom opposes graves dug on ranch or farm property far enough from the city limits.

en. Texas state laws do allow families to avoid the expense of a commercial funer-al and burial, by performing funeral and burial duties themselves.

Electronic switching (ESS) and Zero-Plus dialing, the latest in telecommunications technology from Southwestern Bell, will be introduced for the Lubbock tele-

ESS, a computerized electronic switching system, offers faster, more reliable, service than current electro-mechanical switching. Custom service features such as three-way conference calling, call forwarding from one phone to another, abbreviated dialing of frequently called numbers, and call waiting, a "hold" feature for incoming calls, will be offered beginning in December.

Rather, "the issue between the House and Senate is whether the Medicaid program will pay for the cost of abortions," Mahon explained.

"It has been argued," he noted, "that the well-to-do can seek abortions, but the poor are unable to do so (due to costs).

"The House has taken the position in the Hyde Amendment that abortions can't be subsidized by Medicaid unless the life of the mother is endangered." he said.

"But the Senate insisted upon a more liberal approach to the problem, although it doesn't want abortion on demand.

The question now, Mahon said, is "whether to stand by the House position or make concessions to the Senate

Several compromises submitted by both sides all have been voted down, Mahon said.

The most important factor in the delay of the bill, he said, is that all funding to the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare has been held up, including payroll money.

'The new fiscal year began on Oct. 1," Mahon said, "and we were supposed to have fininshed the bill by then.'

Congress passed a continuing resolution so the departments could operate at a certain level and pay their employees, he said, but the resolution expires Nov. 30.

"After that they can get no funds legally," Mahon said. "We've got to settle the issue and we're going to have to try to do it Nov.

"I'm hoping some kind of compromise can be reached," he said. "We're nearer to agreement than we've been before," the representative said, "but it's obvious that neither the House nor the Senate will be able to completely prevail." The legislator said he has "never seen an appropriations bill dur-

Carter's energy proposal

"The bill which passed the House was a disaster from the standpoint of oil and gas producing states. It was more of a tax bill than a bill calculated to produce additional energy," Mahon said.

He estimated a final vote on the energy packaage might come by mid-December, but it "could be delayed until after Christmas." Congress reconvenes on Jan. 17.

Asked if he were following campaign efforts by those candidates seeking to replace him, Mahon replied he hadn't had time. But, he added, "it would be very improper for me to influence the selection of my successor. 'The people of this district have done such a wonderful job selecting their congressman for 43 years, they don't need any help from me now," Mahon said laughingly.

Mahon seems to have few regrets about his decision to retire from public office. "I have served long enough," he said. "This is the most rugged session I've ever attended - the problems seem insurmountable "The hours are so long, it's become a real problem to serve in Congress," he said. "The average citizen does not realize the long hours and pressure" a congressman endures.

Because of the mounting burdens, Mahon predicted, "I don't expect the time will come soon when anyone will equal my record (43) years in Congress).

Mahon said only six of the 8,000 persons who have been elected to the House have served longer than he.

Zero-Plus dialing allows customers to dial their own operator-assisted long distance calls. Collect, credit card, person-toperson, calls billed to a third number and calls from pay phones may be dialed using Zero-Plus.

Zero-Plus works just like One-Plus dialing. The customers dials zero, plus the area code (if other than 806) and the distant number.

One-Plus is still the cheapest way to call long distance. However, when operator assistance is required, Zero-Plus insures faster completion time and more accurate billing.

Numbers beginning with 745, 746, 742, 743, and 828 (Slaton) cut to Zero-Plus dialing November 7-8.

Juvenile Repeaters 'Real Problem' For TYC, Workman Says

Sometimes banker, rancher, scholar and rodeo laureate. Don Workman also has worn the hat of a Texas Youth Council board member.

The council, responsible for administering the state's correctional facilities for delinquent children, was formed in 1957.

Workman was appointed to the board in October, 1973, after Robert W. Kneebone of Houston resigned in the wake of rioting at Gatesville and Mountain View, two council institutions.

Four years into his job as a board member. Workman says the state may have to remove its kid gloves in dealing with chronic lawbreakers.

That outspoken position has placed Workman on opposite sides of the fence with civil libertarians and others who argue in favor of expanded privileges for the youngsters.

But Workman argues that "many times at 16 it's pretty evident that he or she will never be able to function" in society. "It's almost criminal to release (the inmates).

"But due to the federal court and general opinion pressure we go ahead and release (the inmates). Workman argues that it might be safer for the community to transfer the youngster from a TYC institution to a state prison unit when the young offender reaches 18, or adulthood.

At the moment, however, that prerogative has not been granted the TYC board or anyone else

Under section 54.05 of the Texas Family Code "all dispositions automatically terminate when the child reaches his 18th birthday." In simple terms, the youngster must be released.

Workman, and others, argue that releasing some of the youngsters at 18 is tantamount to putting timebombs back on the street.

Capt. Bill Cox of the Lubbock Police Department juvenile division says two Lubbock men, who had "made the trip" to Gatesville, recently were indicted on capital murder charges

The record of one Lubbock juvenile indivists - present a real problem at the dicates he had been handled 36 times by city officers on 60 crimes by the time he was 10 years old. In fact, most of the offenses occurred between the child's seventh and eleventh birthdays, Cox said. It is these types of offenders, Workman says, that often tips the balance in his mind in favor of further incarceration. "I'm just saying I'd rather be unkind to a young person that's got problems and maybe make him be in a secure setting than to turn him out in a place where he can't handle his emotions. If there's a benefit of the doubt, the victim deserves not to be hurt.

Workman says he'd limit the transfer of juvenile offenders to adult incarceration areas to those "charged on serious offenses.""The chronic rapist, for example, or a person charged with murder and malice aforethought," might be a candidate for transfer from the council facility to an adult penal institution, Workman said.

Gary Kelly of the local chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union said he did not believe the ACLU had any position that he knew of on such a proposal.

"I don't think the ACLU has ever taken the position that someone who has committed a crime ought not to be punished," he said. "But the ACLU would be concerned that the rights of the criminal be protected, that nothing be done that would deny him due process of the law."

For the moment, Workman's ideas are simply food for thought since any transfer from a juvenile detention facility to an adult facility is not allowed under the Texas Family Code.

Workman also has been outspoken the past two years on a suit, styled Morales v. Turman, et al. and TYC, which would grant the federal government sweeping powers over the Texas Youth Council. U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice of Tyler previously had ruled in favor of the federal government. Workman, and others, say the ruling would allow the federal government to initiate $20 million worth of changes in the Texas Youth Council — an amount he says that

No Major Political Shakeups Forecast For 1978 Elections

WASHINGTON (UPI) - With a little less than a year to go before the 1978 elections, Republican and Democratic strategists are in rare agreement: There will be no major political shakeup in the Senate.

"No way," said a Republican when asked if the mid-term elections would produce a large gain or loss of seats for the GOP.

A top Democrat put it this way: "Unless some disaster happens, we should hold our own. I would be pleased if we held our own."

If those predictions hold, the Democrats will retain their overwhelming edge in the Senate during the last two years of President Carter's term.

Democrats now have 62 seats to the GOP's 38. Thirty-three seats - 17 Republican and 16 Democratic - are on the line in 1978.

The estimates had to be hedged due to several factors: The elections are a long way off; there remains the possibility of four more retirements which could change the outlook: and in most states the candidates are not known although possible lineups are beginning to crystal-

Despite these uncertainties, the competing strategists are remarkably agreed on who might be in trouble, who is in good shape and where the big battles will be fought

The Republicans list as their "strongest" candidates five incumbents - Senate GOP Leader Howard Baker in Tennessee: his deputy, Ted Stevens in Alaska: James McClure in Idaho: Mark Hatfield in Oregon; Charles Percy in Illinois.

Democrats don't really challenge that. They do feel they could take McClure if Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus would step down and make the race - which they do not expect - and claim Baker "can be had" although not sure who could do it.

For their part, Democrats consider the 'safest'' candidates Joseph Biden in Delaware; James Eastland in Mississippi; Jennings Randolph in West Virginia; Walter Huddleston in Kentucky: Bennett Johnston in Louisiana.

Neither side discounts the possibility that the 75-year old Randolph - the only person now in Congress who served when Franklin Roosevelt was first inaugurated - might decide to retire. If he does, the Republicans are eager run former Gov. Arch Moore, who Democrats think might be formidable Republicans talk hopefully but vaguely of unseating Eastland as they do about defeating either incumbent John Sparkman or Gov. George Wallace of Alabama if the two get into primary brawl.

But they frankly concede they have no chance against Biden, Huddleston or Johnston. They also say "nothing there" when asked about Arkansas and Georgia. which along with Louisiana and Kentucky they consider to be in the "classic building" stage.

Rep. Max Baucus is considered the best GOP candidate in Montana, although eight or nine others are interest. Although listed as vulnerable, Democrats claim "I think we can hold that seat."

According to both sides, Minnesota Sen. Wendell Anderson seems to be in trouble for one reason - he appointed himself to succeed Vice President Walter Mondale. Only one governor who has done that in recent times, Kentucky's A.B. Chandler, has been able to win in his own right.

The Republicans claim "we have great potential" in Minnesota and are counting on Rudy Boschwitz, head of Minnesota Plywood, to become the GOP candidate. He is known statewide because he does his own television commercials and is also a Republican National Committeeman

The GOP lists as its most vulnerable states Nebraska, Michigan, Kansas and Virginia - where Carl Curtis, Robert Griffin, James Pearson and William Scott are retiring.

The Democrats think they can pick off Nebraska with Gov. James Exxon. But they fear a bloody primary could do them in in Michigan - especially if Gov. William Milliken runs for the Republicans: feel they can win Kansas, probably with former Rep. William Roy; but are uncertain about Virginia, especially if former Gov. Linwood Holton runs against them. Democrats agree that Nebraska and Kansas are good states for picking up a seat but also Texas and New Jersey. One strategist said the victory of Gov. Brendan Byrne "has changed a lot of things" in New Jersey and added the 'big sleeper" for the Democrats could be former pro basketball star and Rhodes Scholar Bill Bradley.

A Democrat said that if Bradley shows up well in the polls, there is a chance Clifford Case, the Republican incumbent, will retire. The Republicans may have a backup of their own, former Treasury Secretary William Simon.

The same Democrat said "I think we've got a real good shot" in Texas with Rep. Robert Krueger, who is already off and running. And Republicans concede incumbent John Tower, although a tough campaigner, "is not going to have an easy time because no Republican has an easy time in Texas."

Two conservative incumbent Republicans, Strom Thurmond in South Carolina and Jesse Helms in North Carolina, face formidable opposition. But Democrats fear both may be helped by their leadership in opposition to the Panama Canal treaties - a volatile issue in the South.

In the other states: Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., despite two operations for lung cancer, plans to run but the GOP could be in trouble if he doesn't; Dick Clark, D-Iowa is on the rebound and safer than before Gov. Robert Ray decided to stay home: Peter Domenici, R-N.M. will have opposition but the GOP tabs him as one of the stronger candidates.

The Democrats, when pushed, say their most vulnerable incumbents are William Hathaway in Maine and Floyd Haskell in Colorado and the seats left vacant by the announced retirement of James Abourezk of South Dakota and Lee Metcalf of Montana

That coincides very closely with the states where the GOP thinks it has the best chance to make gains: South Dako-ta, Colorado and Maine plus Minnesota. Rep. William Cohen is going after Hathaway and either Rep. William Armstrong or former astronaut Jack Swigert will challenge Haskell.

A Democratic strategist said Colorado was going to be a difficult race and in Maine, "Hathaway has a tough race on his hands...Cohen is tough.

In South Dakota, the GOP candidate is expected to be either Rep. Larry Pressler or Rep. James Abdnor and a strategist said, "South Dakota is ours if we can keep everybody from killing each other off.

Republicans think they have a chance to dump Thomas McIntyre, D-N.H., but Democrats say he is in "fairly good shape" since Gov. Meldrim Thomson decided against a challenge; Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. may get challenged by Providence Mayor Buddy Cianci: Democrats hope to find a candidate to go against Sen. Edward Brooke, R-Mass.

Republicans feel they can hold the GOP seat in Wyoming being vacated by Sen, Clifford Hansen. They have a string of possibilities.

'Elizabeth I' Termed Play Within A Play

By WILLIAM D. KERNS A-J Fine Arts Editor

Those attending the Texas Tech University Theater's production of Paul Foster's "Elizabeth I" are first greeted by the sovereign herself winking at them via the program cover. This could be more significant than it first seems since director George Sorensen and his cast are most likely also winking at us, daring us to take virtually anything seriously throughout this three-hour, alternately fascinating and baffling production.

History, after all, was never like this!

'Elizabeth I" - and without reading the play itself, it is difficult to tell whether the innovations are born of Foster's or Sorensen's imaginations - is situated in that no man's land which separates Elizabethan drama from ribald, nonsensical Monty Python humor. And if my money were involved in the betting, I'd lay odds the emphasis was placed closer to the latter.

It is indeed, as claimed, a fitting of virtually contemporary characters into a late 1500s setting. For example, no one would expect an excommunicated queen to exclaim, "I got an eviction notice from God himself." Francis Bacon's description of "God's bowels," along with a few other choice epithets, may surprise the more conservative theater goers.

Yet more important to note is the fact the play is always interesting, although sometimes only visually. Whether it is entertaining is another question. And as to the purpose, or whether this "tub of eels" of a production even has one, is a point much debated by those leaving the theater.

'Elizabeth I'' has also been slated Texas Tech University's entry into the American College Theater Festival and, boy, will those contest judges have something to talk about.

The play opens with, well, actually it starts before anybody even arrives. As the audience is guided to its seats, the cast is already on stage. Goofing about, chasing each other, throwing hot potatoes (in the form of rolled up socks) into the crowd and urging the first two rows to applaud the set. The program offers no guiding director's notes and individuality is further stripped by listing cast nbers without their specific roles.

What we get, therefore, is a play within a play. A rake stage stands on the wider stage. And the cast of actors portray actors: a troupe of thespians preparing a play about Elizabeth I. (In truth, only the more masochistic actors of that era would present this play before the actual queen). The principles, not always historically accurate, are all present. Sir Francis Bacon; Mary, Queen Of Scots; Catherine, Queen of France; Philip, ruler of Spain; and more. But they are presented in more comic style.

Mind you, there are dramatic moments, one example being the beheading of Mary. Donna Dorsett (despite the ridiculous use of the body microphone we must presume she wears because of a recent bout with laryngitis) shines in the prior scene in which she signs the death warrant.

But never will Sorensen allow us to take any small bit of this seriously. He teases us. So instead we get Ron Quade's Philip doing penance by beating him-self on the chest with his shoe. We have the sun, earth and moon introduced to us as a stylized fashion show. Wild-eyed Robin Stanton, as Catherine, suggests the religious Philip get money with, "Go melt a cross." Then all go to our ster-eotyped Jewish moneylender, John Hardwick with a humorous fishwife's voice; in search of funds to send or fight the Armada. There is a particularly bizarre scene involving a discussion between a Russian, played by Tommy Culpepper, and Dorsett's Elizabeth. Played with such props as water balloons, both members are shouting and their voices are echoed by cast members whose heads bob up and down on the edges of the rake stage.

Mind you, I laughed as hard as the next guy. But don't ask me why. The set is as fascinating as the ostentatious Sorensen imagination. Jungle-gym bars surround the rake stage, quite suitable to the cast's animalistic characteris-tics. This cast, which earned dozens of purple hearts through rehearsal injuries, seemed to master the physical difficulties and gymnastic effects Friday, with Matthew Posey particularly good as he slithered more than walked through his role as Francis Bacon.

role as Francis Bacon. Sorensen's actor's actors (yes, you read that right) were also meticulous with detail. The decapitation scene offers a rivulet of blood and the body still kicking behind the executioner's block. But the comedy shines through again when the decapitated actress, Cindy Phaneuf, reveals herself at the real Elizabeth's ap-pearance with, "Oh my God, she'll kill us." In short, this "Elizabeth I" is both as absurd and as avant garde as we'll prob-ably ever see in Lubbock. It is unexpected, enthralling in its pretenses without ever really succeeding in expressing itself. Purpose is only implied. Heck, the audience Friday couldn't even tell when the play stopped and intermission be-gan.

It is not a play for everyone and I, for one, am most anxious to hear the comments of the theater festival judges when the play is again performed at the Lubbock-hosted contest. They, too, will no doubt be giving this effort serious contemplation before they speak. "Elizabeth I" will be staged at 8:15 p.m. today through Wednesday. Call the University Theater box office for details.

Ashore, though, in a musty loft, a weathered old building that looks as if it might collapse at any minute, Henry Brown sits at his bench practicing a craft as old as the sea and the sadness is that when he is gone there will be no sailmaker to succeed him.

There will be sailmakers, to be sure, for as long as wind blows across water, but Henry Brown is a special sailmaker in a special place.

His oaken bench is the same one his father used, and his grandfather, and so are most of the tools he uses. The venerable loft is the same that has served all three generations. On the front the sign remains: "Albert E. Brown Bro. - sailmakers." They are Henry's father and uncle. When Henry took over from his father in 1956 he never bothered to change the sign.

"I don't know which will go first, me or this old building," Henry Brown said.

"Anybody can cut a dacron sail. It stays ist like you cut it. With canvas you have to allow for both shrink and stretch. It takes a sailmaker to cut a canvas sail."

Henry Brown says the word sailmaker as if it were in italics and sneers at less meticulous practitioners.

After Holidays Energy Heads Congress' Agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) - New efforts will be made to resolve a protracted congressional battle over the Carter administration's energy program when lawmak-ers return following a Thanksgiving re-

While major decisions lie ahead on such perplexing questions as natural gas deregulation and oil taxation, Congress also must come to grips with such emotional issues as federal funding of abortions and proposed increases in Social Security taxes.

Here is the status of major legislation near the end of first session of the 95th Congress;

ENERGY

· Senate and House conferees negotiating the non-tax provisions of the energy legislation took a holiday break Friday. The action followed five weeks of talks and preliminary votes on conservation plans, industrial conversion from natural gas and oil to coal, and electric rate programs.

The conferees decided to recess along with their compromise-seeking colleagues who are dealing with the energy tax proposals. President Carter had called off an overseas trip, originally set to begin next Tuesday, so he could be in Washington while the lawmakers produced energy compromises.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill (D-Mass.) sought to keep the conferees on the job but Senate conferees insisted on taking time off to give a break to staff workers.

Compromise efforts are expected to continue behind the scenes next week between energy conference leaders and the Carter administration.

In August, the House approved most of the major energy plans Carter had recommended in April. During September and October, the Senate scaled down or rejected key features, sending the issues to the House-Senate negotiators.

· On other energy matters, Carter cast his first veto Nov. 5, rejecting a bill authorizing $80 million for the Clinch River nuclear breeder reactor project in Tennessee. That legislation was sent back to the Senate where it is pending.

SOCIAL SECURITY

· Later this month or early next month, congressional conferees are expected to work out a Senate-House compromise Social Security financing bill. The measure would increase payroll taxes for the nation's more than 100 million workers and their employers.

The tax boost is aimed at helping keep the system from running out of money to pay the more than 30 million Social Security recipients. The Senate and House are at odds over the size of the tax increase and whether the tax burden should continue to be split 50-50 between workers and employers.

Whatever tax increases are approved will be in addition to those already scheduled under existing law. A higher-paid worker's top Social Security tax payment of $965 this year already is scheduled to rise to $2,012 in 1987, for example.

While Carter recommended the tax be boosted to $2,271 for such a worker in 1987, the House approved $3,025 and the Senate voted for $2,407.

ABORTION

· New attempts to end an argument between the Senate and House over federal PANAMA CANAL

 The Senate battle over ratification of the proposed Panama Canal treaty is expected to get under way in February. While congressional conservatives oppose the treaty, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd says human rights pledges by Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos has improved prospects for ratification of the pact. The treaty would have the United States transfer control of the waterway to Panama by the year 2000.

HEALTH

 Plans to limit hospital cost increases to about 9 percent annually, advocated in April by Carter, are to be put to a vote in Congress next year. Such increases are estimated at about 15 percent a year.

. The Carter administration also is expected to outline proposals next year for a national health-insurance program.

· Legislation imposing harsher penalties on doctors and other providers of health care who defraud the Medicaid and Medicare programs was approved by Congress and signed by Carter in October.

• On another matter, Congress sent Carter legislation prohibiting the federal government from banning saccharin, the artificial sweetener, for 18 months. The measure would also require products containing saccharin to bear labels warning that the substance is a potential health hazard in humans and has been found to cause cancer in laboratory animals.

• The $2.30 hourly minimum wage will rise to $2.65 next year and continue going up in annual stages until it reaches $3.35 beginning in 1981. Some five million workers will be affected by the hike, the product of a congressional compromise signed into law by Carter on Nov. 1.

ELECTIONS Carter supports a constitutional amendment providing for election of the president by direct, popular vote rather than through the present electoral college system. The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved the proposal, which is set for a Senate vote next year.

BUDGET · Operating under its new budget control system, Congress placed a $458.3 bil-lion ceiling on the federal government's spending for the year that began Oct. 1, meaning a deficit of $61.3 billion. The national debt limit was set at $752 billion through next March 31.

· Congressional supporters of a "full employment" bill are predicting favorable legislative action next year on a toned-down measure setting a goal of re-ducing the current 7 percent jobless rate to 4 percent by 1983. Congress wants to make this a target rather than a requirement in the nation's economic programs. · Economic-stimulus legislation, de-jobs chiefly for young people and construction workers, was approved by Congress and signed by Carter in May. A law took effect in August that will ensure jobs or job-training for some 200,000 young persons.

URBAN · In October, Congress passed and Carter signed legislation authorizing $13.7 billion over a three-year span for housing and community-development programs in attempts to improve urban living conditions, especially in older cities and among lower-income persons.

AGRICULTURE . An $11 billion-a-year bill to increase grain farmers' income, revise the nation's food-stamp programs and expand agricultural research activities during the next four years was signed by Carter in · Congress approved Carter's decision to halt production of the B-1 strategic bomber which had been proposed to replace the present B-52s.

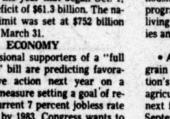

CONSUMERS

• Carter signed legislation intended to protect consumer borrowers from overzealous debt collectors. It bars collection agencies from cursing, threatening or as-saulting borrowers, and from harassing them with midnight phone calls.

ENVIRONMENT · Changes in clean-air laws approved by Congress and Carter give automakers a delay in meeting tougher new vehicle-exhaust standards, the fourth such post-ponement received by the industry. It put off tougher standards until 1980 model cars, rather than having them take effect on 1978 models. The measure also set new rules for nearly all sources of air pollution.

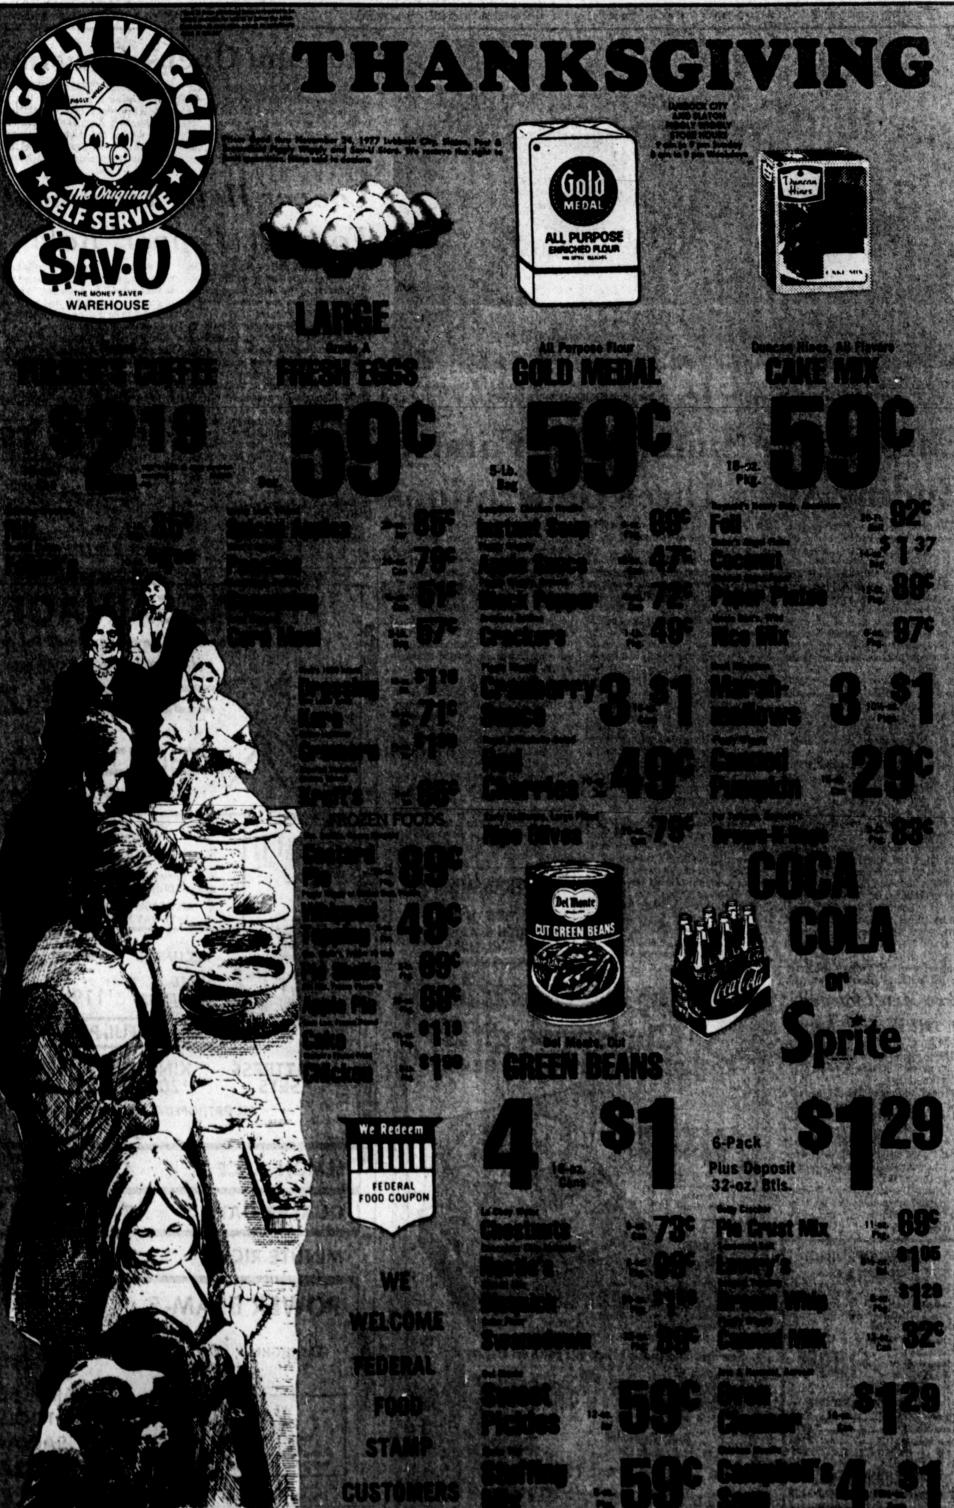

GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION • Carter got authority from Congress to submit his plans for reorganizing the federal bureaucracy. Plans are to take effect automatically unless rejected by either the Senate or the House within 60 days.

funding of abortions for poor women are expected when the lawmakers return. The dispute has blocked action on a $60.2 billion appropriation for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

WELFARE

· Several weeks of hearings by a special House subcommittee are setting the stage for consideration of Carter's $30 billion overhaul of the nation's basic welfare system. The plan envisions absorbing a wide variety of existing programs into a unified program. Votes are expected next year.

INCOME TAXES · More income tax changes, designed to acompany an economic stimulus package produced earlier this year, are expected to be considered by Congress next year after Carter discloses his recommendations. While Carter has promised to seek a restructuring of the basic system, indications are that priority might go to tax cuts to spur the economy once more. · Congress already has passed - and Carter has signed - legislation producing $34 billion in tax cuts over three years and computation changes aimed at making it easier for Americans to fill out their income tax forms.

Brown's Foe Sees Carter Assistance

SAN DIEGO (AP) - California Attorney General Evelle Younger, a Republican gubernatorial hopeful, says he thinks President Carter may be trying to decide how to help him against Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

Younger said that in the election next year, "the Carter people probably would like to support somebody against Brown but fear getting caught." There was no reaction from the White House.

The attorney general said he expected Brown's possible bid against Carter in the 1980 Democratic primaries to be an issue in the California gubernatorial campaign

At least one incumbent president has aided a gubernatorial candidate of the opposite party. In 1970, President Nixon secretly sent $400,000 in leftover campaign funds to assist Democratic Gov. Albert Brewer of Alabama in his unsuccessful primary race against George Wallace, according to testimony in Watergate investigations in 1973. The attorney general is expected to formally announce his candidacy for the governorship in January.

A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN — Ever wonder just what it is that politicians use those campaign conributions for? Right. Campaign expenses. But such as

Well, for instance, postage. And tele-phones. And rent. And typewriters. And travel. And printing. And computer ter-minals. And salaries. And advertisments. And parking for volunters. And consultants. And even to pay for car repairs for folks who have an accident while running errands for a candidate.

That list could go on, of course, but undoubtedly everyone has the idea by now. All that costs money - lots of money. when it's a statewide campaign, especially in a state such as Texas, which covers a good bit of real estate.

At the top of those statewide races both in terms of importance and money - is the governor's marathon.

And in recent years, the price of political trackshoes has been increasing. If you want to run for governor - at least with some hopes of success — you'd better around to campaign rallies the governor have a million dollars to commit — or a can't personally attend. friend with a million dollars, or a million friends with one dollar, et cetera.

Because that's what the tab will be, judging by recent races. And it's getting more expensive each time. Gov. Dolph Briscoe's campaign staff is playing its hand close to the vest as far as spending plans. Reporting the media budget is being developed by George Christian, Austin public relations consultant, and campaign treasurer David Dean.

State campaign manager Ken Clapp agrees media will be "the big thing" in the campaign budget. Meanwhile, office expenses alone are running some $15,000 a month.

But Briscoe's crew apparently doesn't need to worry about funds too much; the Dallas campaign kick-off Nov. 7 included an original musical score and a multi-media presentation, with a $50,000 price tag. A shortened version of that will be sent

John Hill's campaign office is more open on the challenger's spending plans, reporting Hill had projected an $800,000 budget for 15 months (including the primary, but no run-off).

Now, plans call for spending $1,200.000. So far, Hill's invested some $260,000 in the effort - $140,000 of that for media. Some $42,000 went into the "Good Job. John Hill" fund raiser that raised $357 .-

That $1.2 million is what the Hill people think it will take in order for them to win. Briscoe's folks haven't said what they think it will take to keep Briscoe in office, but it will be a surprise if the figure isn't well over that $1.2 million.

Campaigns can spend whatever they take in, naturally - and the more money that comes in the better.

It's easy to see why when you consider that a 30-second "spot" on the 50 TV stations in Texas costs (one campaign officials says) $25,000 during prime time. Polling 300 Texans will run $1,250. Poll-ing 600 requires an outlay of $8,500. A session with the photographer will run the candidate $600.

Then there's travel - $9,000 for John Hill in September, and the amount will be higher later in the campaign.

And printing - 12 cents apiece for bumper stickers, and anything from half a cent on up for campaign literature -which gets run in hundreds of thousands of copies. And there are always lots of projects a candidate would like to do but doesn't bumper stickers, and anything from half a cent on up for campaign literature -

State Committee Retains Power To Save Buildings

A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN - What one official describes as a "velvet brick" has been quietly tucked away by the Texas Antiquities Committee as a last-means weapon to stop the destruction of significant state historical structures . That brick is a section of the new Natural Resources Code which requires any-one wishing to alter or destroy a registered historical or archeological site or structure to obtain a permit from the an-structure to obtain a permit from the an-tiquities committee. This may surprise many development groups which assumed the permitting provision had been thrown out by the Texas Supreme Court last spring in the well-publicized dispute over the destruc-tion of several historic buildings on the El Centro College campus in Dallas.

But, while the high court was ruling on El Centro, the Legislature was busy next door recodifying the state's natural re-source laws. Although it was the stated intention of the lawmakers not to make any substantial change in the laws, within days after the Supreme Court disallowed the permitting provision, it was wrapped up along with several hundred other laws in the new Natural Resources Code, pas-sed and signed into law. sed and signed into law.

And there are some who will argue that the permitting provision never actually was tossed out by the court, which decid-ed the issue on a 4-4-1 vote. While the El Centro case was lost, they claim, the per-mitting suthering was not mitting authority was not. Either way, the antiquities committee has regained its ability to issue, and sig-nificantly, deny permits for tampering with historical places. So far, the committee has kept its brick be threatened. Members of that panel, in fact, may have been fingering the legal projectile last week as the University of Texas Board of Regents was debating the fate of the historic Little Campus, adjacent to the multi-million dollar Special Events Center on the south side of the UT Austin campus.

The dispute over the Little Campus centers around the so-called "Custer House" which was built in 1858-59 as part of the old State Blind Asylum and was occupied by General George Custer from November, 1865, to February, 1866, when he was commanding the federal occupa-tion of Texas after the Civil War.

After more than a year of discussion, the regents decided to retain and restore the Custer House, but demolish an addi-

They also agreed to conduct a feasibility study of a third Lit-tle Campus structure known as Building H. constructed in 1888 as a boys' dormito-ry for the Blind Institute. "We feel this can be worked out amica bly without the necessity of using it (the permit denial authority)." So perhaps the velvet brick will remain in its resting place for a while longer. In any case, it is unlikely anyone will find it being used as a paperweight on the desks of the Texas Antiquities Committee members > Together they represent nearly 11 million Americans from Seattle to Springfield, Mass., and they've gone back to school to help serve them better.

They are newly elected mayors of 18 cities who accepted Harvard invitations to attend five days of classroom lectures on how to run their cities. The smallest city represented is Utica, N.Y., its population dwindling below the 100,000 mark; the largest is New York City, with more than seven million people.

The insurance man is Ken Harris, who says he is the first Republican mayor in Charlotte, N.C., this century.

Besides Harris, the only mayor-elect who lists himself as a Republican is Charles E. Whitlock, the certified public accountant from Lakewood, Colo. Four call themselves independent and 12 are Democrats.

'The only thing bigger on the ballot than the candidate's name in Toledo is the word Democrat," Doug DeGood said. At 30, he is the youngest in the group.

What we should be getting into is the cities' relationship with the federal government," said Morial after listening to one lecturer suggest the mayors-elect follow, as examples of organizational talent, Jesus Christ and Socrates.

"We need a controlled bull sesion around the table," Harris said after listening to one long lecture too many. "We should be asking one another, 'What are you doing in your city?'.'

Ira Jackson, seminar coordinator and senior assistant dean of Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, told the mayors as soon as they arrived: "We don't have all the answers.

one or two feet from the full lotus, a position with the left ankle on top of the right thigh and vice versa, and then move forward three, six, maybe 10 feet.

Could a skilled gymnast perform the feat? "No way," says Dick Mulvihill, director of the National Academy of Gymnasts in Eugene, Ore. "With the full lotus, there's no way to gain thrust."

In addition to the beginning, or hopping stages, TMers talk of reports about initiates actually hovering with greater mastery over gravity

For now, the TMers tell but don't show (with one exception when the results left outsiders and some insiders unimpressed) They're also buying foam rubber by the truck load.

"At this stage, we have most control in taking off," says flier Gale Merman, secretary to magician Doug Henning. Landings tend to be rough.

450 TM executive governors in the United States: .. "There is a great deal of group consciousness. If one person begins to fly, it starts the other people up. It's like popcorn. Once it goes, they all start going. Konhaus runs the Capital of the Age of Enlightenment near this Catskills community. The guests usually are serious professional men and women. The men wear three-piece suits, the women afternoon apparel or party dresses. The atmosphere is serene, the meals vegetarian and those who smoke must do so outside. Visitors are welcome to see the flying rooms - one for men and one for women. The floors are covered with foam rubber, and there's more foam rubber stacked in the hallways.

Konhaus says he believes the Maharishi Mahesh Yogi, the guru of the movement who lives in Switzerland, eventually will allow a demonstration that will persuade the skeptic.

"We don't want to create a circus atmosphere," says Konhaus. "Our people aren't circus performers. The more serious a person is about gaining enlightenment, the less likely it is that he or she would wish to demonstrate." "Enlightenment completely oversha-dows the flying part," says Sherry Burns, another TM executive governor. "The point is gaining enlightenment, and this is just a short cut. It's the bliss, the happiness that's important. That is impossible to demonstrate.

As Konhaus puts it: "It's an unbounded awareness. That feeling is a much greater joy than flying ever could be." Konhaus, a student of Eastern religions before he turned to TM, says he learned levitation in Switzerland.

Pamela Chun, a 26-year-old retail buyer from Hawaii, says: "When you hop, you release an incredible amount of energy." If you want to learn to levitate, as some early TM ads beckoned, bring money.

First, you enroll in preparatory classes from four to eight weeks, depending upon one's stage of meditation. That's Phase I and costs $245 a week, including room and board. Phase II is four twoweek courses at $375 a week.

You don't get your money back if you don't fly. Miss Chun spent $2,000 this summer at

South Fallsburg and thought it was worth every penn

"A lot of people spend that much on their vacations and come back exhausted. Retail buying is a tough field and I am very relaxed. After I meditate I feel as if I had been asleep for eight hours.'

At least one case regarding TM advertising has been filed. A student at the Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa, says he was told his course would take four weeks. Then he was told it would take eight.

"They promised levitation, and then halfway through they said come up with another $1,500," says Steve Rozman, an associate professor and chairman of the social science division at Tougaloo College near Jackson, Miss.

He complained to the Iowa attorney general's office and was blacklisted, he says. "They wanted me to operate on a show-my-faith basis. They told me I didn't have the proper attitude.

(c) 1977, NANA LONDON - An elite Nazi assassination squad was ordered by Adolph Hitler to assassinate Josef Stalin, according to recently declassified Allied World War II documents. President Franklin D. Roosevelt was next on the list had the Stalin attempt suceeded.

The Stalin murder squad, which included fluent Russian-speaking personnel, was flown to its target in a captured Soviet bomber operated by KG 200 --Kampgeschwader 200 - the secret fighting force which was under the personal direction of Reichsmarshal Herman Goering.

According to the official documents, the KG 200 team assigned to kill Stalin was actually dropped by parachute into Russia, close to Stalin's headquarters. The team's members were all captured or killed, the documents add. No details have been released as to how the attempt was exposed and stopped

Allied intelligence interrogation reports obtained from captured KG 200 personnel also reveal that other special mission squads and spies were dropped behind Russian lines by the organization. These squads were usually dressed in Russian army or partisan uniforms

Interrogation of the captured KG 200 men revealed that the group assigned to kill President Roosevelt was to have been parachuted into the United States from a captured B-17 still bearing U.S. Air Force markings. All of the members of the group spoke fluent English with American accents.

Whether the Roosevelt operation was in fact attempted is stil secret, but special operational "Flights to America" are definitely listed in the intelligence interrogation of the key KG 200 operations officer. Werner Baumbach. The details he supplied to the Allies has now become a declassified secret document

The Germans' most dangerous and experimental wartime special operations, including assassinations, were assigned by Reichsmarshal Goering to his undercover KG 200 organization which mainly flew captured Allied aircraft - especially Flying Fortresses and Liberators - under false colors.

Baumbach was the Luftwaffe's greatest and most decorated bomber pilot. He wore the Oak Leaves with Swords to the Knights Cross - the highest decoration awarded in World War II to a Luftwaffe bomber pilot - and commanded KG 200, which got all the newest aircraft, weapons and equipment, until the war ended. He was appointed general of bombers in 1943 and then took over the secret force

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 20, 1977-7-C

Just before V-E Day, Baumbach was summoned by Himmler to stand by for "special missions." He was captured at Flensburg soon thereafter, howev-er, and brought to Britain for interrogation in August, 1945, where he spent nearly six months in an English prisoner of war camp. He was threatened with trial as a war criminal because of KG 200 activities and allegations that he had fired on survi-vors from bombed ships, but was eventually re-leased in February 1946 - into the custody of U.S. intelligence headquarters, which wanted him for further interrogation.

Baumbach was subsequently interviewed for a year by a Harvard University historian, Dr. Bruce C. Hopper, and worked with the profesor in helping him to document different aspects of the secret history of World War II. But Baumbach was never forthcoming about KG 200 or his career with them. He was so reticent about it all that he even deliberately omitted to mention these activities in his au-tobiography which he published some years after the war

KG 200 was so secret that even today most of the official diaries and documents dealing with it are, according to both Allied and German authorities, either "missing" or "destroyed."

As for Werner Baumbach, he joined a group of German engineers in Argentina to work on advanced flight research and was killed there in a flying accident. His body was returned to his home in Coppenburg, Germany,

American Nazis Delay Suburban Rally

ST. LOUIS (AP) - The American Nazi Party here called off a rally that had been scheduled for Saturday in suburban Florissant.

Michael Allen, district leader of the party, said Saturday the Nazis would attempt no further activities in the suburb until a lawsuit against that city has been settled.

'We don't want to complicate the court case by violence," Allen said. The American Civil Liberties Union filed suit Friday in U.S. District Court on behalf of the Nazis to compel Florissant to grant the Nazis a permit to hold a rally in a city park

In return for the ACLU's help, the Nazis agreed to call off the rally scheduled for Saturday

"Now don't get us wrong. We're not backing off," Allen said in reference to threats by the Jewish Defense League to come to Florissant with baseball bats to "smash" the rally

But for the present, our fight is with Florissant. We want only the right of free speech and access to the public so that they can see and hear us for ourselves rather than listen to the flow of propaganda against us," Allen said.

On Oct. 8, a demonstration staged by the party in front of Florissant City Hall ended in a brawl between 10 brown-shirted Nazis and members of a group called the Committee Against Racism. Several persons were injured in that melee.

Allen said the party might seek permits to hold speaking rallies in the city of St. 7 Louis in the next few months.

Castro Foe Dies Of Liver Cancer

MIAMI (AP) - Dr. Manuel Artime, a former officer in Fidel Castro's revolutionary army who turned against Castro and helped launch the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion, is dead at the age of 45.

He died of liver cancer Thursday at Miami's American Hospital.

Artime defected from Castro's forces in 1960, then served as a leader of Brigade 2506 in the Bay of Pigs invasion on April 17, 1961. He was taken prisoner.

He was freed in 1963 along with 1,100 prisoners in exchange for $53 million in food and medicine demanded by Castro and paid by the U.S. government.

Included in the total was $500,000 for Artime's life. The same was demanded and paid in exchange for Jose San Rooman, the military leader of the invasion, and Erneido Oliva, the second-in-command of the invading forces. Artime, a familiar name among Bay of

Pigs personalities, reportedly arranged for the CIA sponsorship and recruitment for Brigade 2506

He had served as a lieutenant in Castro's Rebel Army and helped the Castro forces depose President Fulgencio Batista in 1959.

Workman says he's pessimistic about how much rehabilitation works at the TYC facilities since "the average stay is eight months

When I first went on the youth council I had the concept that to be successful you had to have a 90 to 95 percent reha-bilitation rate to be successful. Unfortunately, that's completely unrealistic and impractical."If you can turn a young monster around to where he's helping someone, you've got a good one," Workman noted With that in mind, Workman says he believes there is too much optimism in the council's "Positive Peer Culture" program, a plan that allows youngsters who show promise to be placed in a position of authority.

Too often, he said, the youngsters learn what to say, how to act, "to manipulate other people."

"They form little groups inside (the centers). You need constant evaluation and constant supervision to make the program work.

But despite his reservation for PPC, Workman said "I think the good outweighs the bad."

Though he's concerned with the eventual criminal behavior of some youngsters released from TYC facilities, Workman expressed faith in the system.

"We're on the road to becoming the best juvenile treatment agency in the United States. We're not there, but we're on the way.

Ranks Of Texas Trappers Up As Fur Pelt Prices Increase By J.D.PEER

Parks & Wildlife Dept.

Texas trappers are preparing for the 1977-78 fur-bearing season, and the ranks of these outdoorsmen are increasing as the sale of pelts showed a substantial price increase last year. The first fur-bearer to head the lengthy list of animals considered as prime tar- civet-can be legally trapped Dec. 1-Jan. gets for trappers is the mink, and the season is Nov. 15-Jan. 15. Muskrat season is

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake- Some of the night. The lake is clear and the water fishing has slowed, but channel cat continue to provide plenty of action. Barnie Greenfield at the concession recommends using stink bait on the lower lake for the bigger cats. Anglers that have been able to locate the bass are bringing in 2 and 21/2 pounders. Carp are very active at both ends of the lake; stink bait and big red have been attracting quite a few carp in the 10 and 12-pound range. Crappie fishing has slowed, but bream remains good. The lake is in good condition with clear waters.

Lake Colorado City-Floyd and Paul Ham from Monahans caught some black bass with several weighing from 31/2 to 4½ pounds. Crappie have been biting real good. Several good strings of crappie, carp and catfish have been produced at the Fisharama. Don Henderson from Lubbock caught a yellow cat that weighed 11 pounds and a black bass that tipped the scales at 6% pounds. Mr. and Mrs. C.J. Danley from Seminole caught a total of 109 crappie. The lake is in good temperature is 60 degrees. Oak Creek Lake-Crappie are drawing the most attention and some are going over 2 pounds. Bass fishing remains good with several lunkers brought in last week that hit 6 pounds, plus a couple that tipped the scales at 7 pounds. Buddy Dyess of Oak Creek caught a 51/2-pound bass while crappie fishing. Crappie fishing has been best during the early morning and from 4-8 p.m.

Lake LBJ-Black bass are hitting topwater lures. White bass are hitting slabs on the sand bar, and trollers are getting good results with slabs. J.T. Herrington B.F. Cady of Lorenzo baited a trotline with perch and took a 30-pound vellow cat and several 2-pound channel cats. Crappie are going for minnows day or 62 degrees.

White River Lake-Fishing is good with the crappie producing the best results. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bertrand of Lubbock used minnows to catch 50 crappie: some weighed 144 pounds. O.C. Moyer of Crosbyton brought in the biggest black bass weighed at the marina. He used a large minnow to land a 4pound 11-ounce lunker near the cliffs. The lake is in good condition and the water temperature is 62 degrees.

Lake Whitney-Black bass and stripers created the most action on the lake this past week with all other species biting well in all areas. Gary Sartor and Keith Jones of Cleburne teamed to produce 60 sand bass and 16 black bass to 4-pounds 14-ounces on crank bait. Henry Jenkins of Dallas quickly landed 10 black bass

A resident trapping license for $5 is required for those who take commercially pelts of any fur-bearing animals in the state. A nonresident trapper can participate for a fee of $200. A beaver-otter trapping license is required of any resident operating outside his home county. For persons interested in purchasing pelts from trappers only, a special $5 retail fur-buyers' license is required. It allows a person to legally handle pelts for shipment or barter.

Because of reduced habitat, controlling wildlife populations is of increasing importance, and trapping provides the only logical means of controlling certain species of wildlife if carried out in accordance with Texas regulations.

Each spring, the animals produce surpluses that insure winter survival of the species. For instance, muskrat have the natural capacity to reproduce at a rate exceeding 50-80 percent annually.

Left to her own devices, nature will take her own harvest, far more devastating and complete than the most skilled trapper, and inflicting more pain, prolonged suffering and misery than the most devout anti-trapper would care to witness.

While hunting is the best method of controlling deer and other large animals, including coyote and bobcat, it is extremely inefficient to control smaller animals, such as skunk or raccoon.

Trapping methods vary across Texas, from the traps that kill instandly to those that restrain the animal. The commercial "killer" trap is the conibear type. This sts of two square, m trap co connected by a spring. Thses type traps are most effective when used for smaller animals such as muskrat and skunk.

Magic Triangle Area Appears Best For Pheasant Hunters

By JIM STEIERT

Avalanche-Journal Correspondent HEREFORD-It looks like another highly successful pheasant season is in store for hunters in the Magic Triangle area of Deaf Smith, Castro and Parmer counties, with opening day less than a month away.

Chuck Cosper, Hereford-based game warden who rides herd on some 4,400 square miles of the South Plains territory, reports that the ringneck population is similar to 1976, when a success ratio of 1.5 birds per hunter was registered during the opening weekend of the season. The 1977 season begins Dec. 10 and will continue until Dec. 25. Bag limit is two birds per day and possession limit is four. "I think Deaf Smith County has reached its carrying capacity for pheasant, but Castro and Parmer counties continue to see growth in their pheasant population," Cosper reported. "There seems to be more birds in those counties than we saw last year. The outlook is excellent.'

Cosper reported one problem: A lack of stalk fields to offer cover for the birds. "Burning of stalks has been prevalent, and this has pushed the birds into waterways, overgrown tailwater pits and other areas where they can find little cover. I don't think this concentration of birds in these areas will present any danger of overharvesting, though, mainly because these old birds are too smart to be seriously overharvested," he said.

Although as many as 10,000 hunters have invaded the area on opening day in recent years, Cosper feels the huge numbers are dropping and the heavy pressure placed on the local pheasant resource is slackening a bit. "The area around Plainview, Lockney, south of Tulia and in the Silverton vicinity has taken some of the pressure off of us here. But there will be plenty of outof-state hunters here to try their luck," Cosper explained. The warden reported that most conditions in the spring helped the nesting of upland game birds, and the ratio of cocks to hens will be about 50-50 this year. "After the opening weekend (when hunting is the heaviest)," said Cosper, "it's a good idea to hunt the areas that the big hunting parties can't cover. Small weed patches, overgrown fences and cover around reclaim pits are good bets.' Cosper mentioned the "hot spots:

Deaf Smith County-northwest of Hereford, extending to the Simms community.

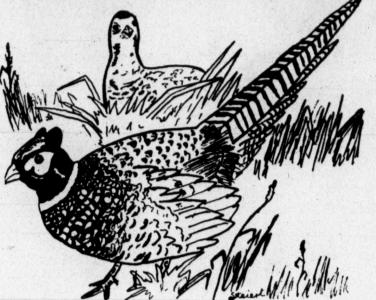

Castro County-Large concentrations of birds may be found east of the Hart community westward to Dimmitt. The area near the Easter community has proven highly productive in recent years and should be the same in 1977. Parmer County-Hunting is good around Friona and in the Hub and Oklahoma Lane vicinities.

Cosper advises hunters to use 2%-inch loads of No. 6 shot in 12 or 20-gauge guns to avoid problems with crippling the birds.

One of the major violations each pheasant season is trespassing. The warden urged all hunters to obtain permission to hunt from landowners prior to going onto property.

RUN FOR COVER-Ring-necked pheasant season opens in the Panhandle and the Permian Basin areas Dec. 10. This pheasant season may be one of the best ever for hunters in Texas.

Tires Serve As Fish 'Attractors'

A special 25-foot, steel-hull barge was hauled to Lubbock's Yellowhouse Canyon Lakes last week by the Parks & Wildlife Department, and more than 1,000 old vehicle tires were banded and sunk in two of the lakes.

These artificial fish "attractors" are part of a statewide plan to help replace some of the natural cover that was eliminated during lake construction such as trees, rocks and brush which are considered undesireable in the lakes.

Tires were used in the Lubbock project because of their availability, and the city parks and recreation department furnished the tires, as well as several crews to help in the two-day operation. Each fish attractor consisted of five tires banded together and placed at strategic spots in the lakes. These areas are ible to anglers, and each attractor hould concentrate fish for harvest, P WD officials reported.

For years, management of public lakes for sportfishing consisted of stocking these freshwater lakes with desireable game fish, but many times the fish were not available to the bank fishermen or were scattered over the lake.

This new technique assists in improving fish habitat and provides an area where fish can hide from predators, rest, find food and, in some cases, spawn. Other forms of attractors have been. used in various Texas lakes and all should help provide better fishing, P&WD officials reported.

Navy's Shipbuilding May Be Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy has proposed to cut its program for bund-ing new warships by one-third over the next five years so that more money can be spent on overhauling the current fleet.

Pentagon sources say the Navy wants to shift from $5 billion to $7 billion in future spending to improve the readiness of existing vessels, many of which have fallen into disrepair.

If carried out, the decision will mean a reduction from 160 to 101 in the num-ber of new warships and support vessels funded for construction over the fiveyear period. For some time the Navy has sought to eliminate a backlog in vital ship overhauls and aircraft maintenance.

A major cutback in new ship construction, however, would force abandonment of the Pentagon's goal of increasing the present fleet of around 460 to 600 vessels by the mid 1980s.

Defense Secretary Harold Brown is expected to reach a final decision in early December. At that time he will be completing the overall military budget for the coming 1979 fiscal year and a five-year defense program through 1983. The ultimate decision will rest with President Carter, who is scheduled to submit his budget to Congress early next year.

The problem involves choosing how best to spend available dollars. And the Carter administration has shown from the outset that it places urgent priority on upgrading the readiness of the vessels already in service.

While the Carter administration trimmed former President Gerald Ford's fiscal 1978 defense budget by about $2.8 billion, it added about $280 million to pay for delayed maintenance on ships, planes, and other equipment of all the armed services.

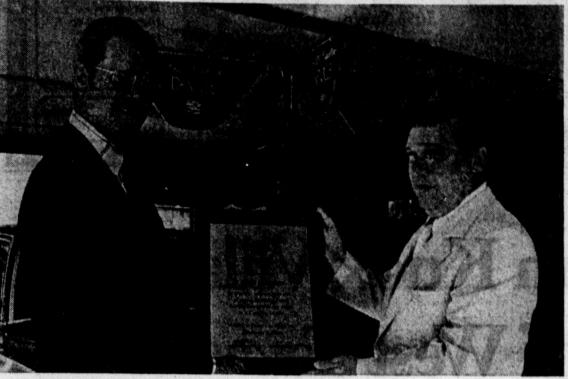

Sources said there is no major controversy over the new direction of the ship-building program. They noted that Adm. James Holloway, chief of naval operations, has strongly urged measures to correct the ravages caused by late overhauls, spare parts shortages and the backlog of war plane maintenance. Navy officials have blamed the situation on unanticipated inflation which ate away funds previously approved for maintenance and upkeep of major equip-

The Navy proposal is proposing a budget that will include nearly $7 billion for 19 new ships, including nine frigates, a new class of guided missile cruiser, two nuclear powered attack submarines, a Trident missile firing submarine and six support vessels, such as tenders. The proposed five-year program totaling 101 ships would include 74 war ves-sels. The plan also calls for modernization of 26 ships to extend their operating

The reduction of nearly 60 ships in the previous program will bear beavily on ocean escorts and other surface warships, but there will be no eliminations of submarines. The proposal would continue to provide for construction of a new type of 60,000-ton aircraft carrier, able to handle both conventional planes launched by catapult and advanced aircraft designed to land and take off verti-

The plaque award was presented here by Vic Poleni of Dallas, district manager of Cadillac Motor Car Division. Only two dealers in the district and 18

cured the Cadillac franchise for Lubbock and five surrounding counties Sept. I, 1949. The award recipient has served on the Cadillac National Dealer Council, and in 1974 was cited as one of the 40 Cadillac Master Dealers throughout the U.S.

A former city councilman, Alderson also has been a director of the Chamber of Commerce, served as chairman of the administrative board of First United Methodist Church, currently serves as an officer of the Red Raider Club and served as co-chairman of the Pacesetter Division of the United Way. He and his wife Linda have three married daughters.

Vance Sets Latin Trip, Talks On Carter Goals

WASHINGTON (AP) - Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance takes off Sunday on a three-nation trip to South America to discuss three dominant foreign policy themes of the Carter administration human rights, nuclear non-proliferation and oil prices.

The four-day trip, which will take Vance to Argentina, Brazil and Venezuela, is in keeping with the administration's emphasis on "personal diplomacy" with hemispheric nations. A steady stream of top officials have toured the region since Carter took office 10 months ago.

Vance will be carrying to Argentina a list of 7,500 names of people who alleged-ly are either in jail or missing. The list was compiled by several groups which accuse Argentina's military government of human rights violations. As of Saturday, no final decision had been made on whether Vance wouldpresent the list to Argentine President Jorge Rafael Videla. The indecision on this issue reflects a

Mourners Pray For Unknown Lad

ASHLAND, Ohio (AP) - None of the mourners who prayed in a small graveside gathering Saturday knew the the identity of the little boy they buried. His bruised, broken body had been dumped along a nearby interstate last month. Investigators say the death looks like a classic case of child abuse.

"We're dealing with a kid who was alive for two or three years," said Arthur

M. Elk, Ashland County prosecuting attorney, who has distributed sketches of the boy around the nation. "We hope somebody, somewhere is going to recognize the child."

The boy was found Oct. 28 by a highway maintenance worker about 100 feet from the southbound lanes of Interstate 71, three miles north of the exit to this northern Ohio town of 19,000 persons.

Investigators feel he was taken to the location from Cleveland, Akron or Toledo, or perhaps from out of state. They say he probably died a day or two before his body was found.

"He had a cast on his right arm, bruises on his face and severe bruises and scars on his back," Elk said.

An autopsy showed his left arm was also broken, he said.

The boy, a 3-foot-2, 26-pound black, was wearing red pants, a yellow terry cloth undershirt and beige short shirt, Elk said. Hospitals and welfare agencies in Ohio were sent copies of the artist's sketch in hope that someone will recognize him. David E. Matteson, a funeral director in West Salem who saw a television news account of the death, helped with the burial. "We got personally involved because we just couldn't sit back and see that little boy lying up in the county morgue and nobody coming forth to do anything,"

The casket Matteson provided sat alone in his funeral parlor three days before a hearse carried it to an Ashland cemetery, where a woman donated a plot.

Racial Resentment Seethes

continuing struggle within the adm tration on how to deal with natio where human rights problems exist and where the United States has other competing interests

Some officials believe the time has come for the administration to confront, come for the administration to confront. Argentina vigorously on the human rights issue. Others, citing Argentina's status as Latin America's most advanced nuclear power, feel a more cautious approach on-human rights will help promote U.S. in-terests in the area of nuclear non-proliferation eration. U.S. relations with Brazil, Vance's sec-ond stop, have deteriorated sharply this year. In contrast to former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who lavished praise on the Brazilians, the Carter ad-ministration has, according to one spe-cialist, left some Brazilians wondering. whether we really take them seriously."

The Brazilians were outraged last January when they learned from newspaper , reports that Vice President Walter Mon-dale had gone to West Germany to seek revision of an agreement to sell Brazil nu-clear power facilities that would give it a nuclear weapons capability. Brazil also has ended virtually all mili-

Exasperated Motorist Hates Inventor Of Parking Meters

By ROBERT WAITE Pacific News Service

I hate Carl C. McGee. Now you have to understand I hate very few people.

For instance, I don't hate Richard Nixon. Or Howard Cosell.

I don't even hate Idi Amin Dada, although I must admit he's not the kind of guy I'd particularly want for, say, a bridge partner.

Anyway, back to old Carl McGee. What did the gentleman, now deceased, do to incur my wrath?

He invented the parking meter.

And after he invenete dit, back in 1935, he had the gall to go out and market the thing. At first he found the idea difficult to sell, but Oklahoma City, Okla., (which, when you consider how original its name is, does't figure to be the innovation capital of America) agreed to install the newfangled meters in July 1935.

Of course they were an isntant success. Towns and cities got revenue. Local merchants got quicker turnover in front of their establishments. And little girls got to grow up to be meter maids.

Parking meters popped up everywhere, like fiddlehead ferns in a forest. Originally, parking in a metered space cost you a penny.

Gradually the price inched upwards, first to a nickel, then a dime. More recently the little silver monsters have been programmed to accept quarters. In ome urban areas it is possible to drop two quarters into a meter before the thing will withdraw the silly red "expire" disk and actually give you some parking time Now for 50 cents the thing should at least shine your shoes, or whistle a tune, or do an imitation of R2D2 from Star Wars.

But parking meters do absolutely nothing. Except run down too quickly.

Today's parking meters are pretty sophisticated, I must admit. After all, it takes a fairly advanced technology to produce a piece of equipment that can sense, with unerring accuracy, exactly which denominations of change you are out of enve before you pull into the space.

And have you ever tried to get change for a meter? The local merchants know a good thing when they see one and put up little signs telling you that you much make a purchasebefore they'll make change. Now I don't mind spending a little money to secure a spot for my car, but I draw the line at having to purchase a 21inch color television simply to get a dime for the meter. I still don't believe they guy didn't have a black-and-white set somewhere in the back.

A friend of mine has his own theory about parking meters - he thinks they're just the first step in the introduction of the metric system.

"Everybody knows they should be called parking yards," he reasons. Now who can argue with logic like

The real reason I hate parking meters goes back to a little incident that took place back in 1967

It was summertime. A group of us were standing around shooting the breeze in a downtown square. I was leaning on a parking meter and anotices it wasn't too securely affixed to the pavement below. Well, as best as I can remember, before I knew it the meter had leapt out of its hole and was going for my throat. There's nothing quite as frightening as a crazed meter intent on physical violence.

Naturally, I felt compelled to wrestle the offending metal object to the ground. Unfortunately, just as I did so a man in blue appeared and arrested me.

I was charged with malicious damage to public property and attempted meter molesting.

To make a long story short, I beat the rap on a technicality. It turns out meters make lousy witnesses, and the policeman had forgotten to inform me of my rights. but ever since that incident I've hated parking meters and all they stand for.

Carl McGee is dead - his time ran out, I guess you might say. But his legacy lives on, with row upon row of parking meters dotting the landscape.

I sometimes wonder if he didn't bring his idea with him to the next world. Maybe each one of us will have our own little space, with our own little meter, once we drive through those parly gates in our shiny, new cosmic Eldoradoes.

In Boston's White Areas

BOSTON (AP) - The white people of Charlestown don't hold rallies or motorcades anymore. But within their neat wooden tenements, grim resentment toward court-ordered busing still seethes. No blacks live in this small, isolated neighborhood built around the Bunker Hill battleground. And, except for unsuspecting out-of-towners, they rarely venture onto Charlestown's streets.

Charlestown, like South Boston, is a center of white opposition to court-or-

2nd Royal Baby Born In London

LONDON (AP) - Four days after Princess Anne had a baby son, the Duchess of Gloucester gave birth Saturday to a 7-pound, 11ounce baby girl.

The second royal baby this week arrived at 2:05 p.m. at St. Mary's Hospital in west London, the same hospital where Princess Anne gave birth last Tuesday to Queen Elizabeth II's first grandchild

Unlike the queen's grandchild. born a commoner, the latest royal infant automatically takes the title Lady Windsor, as the daughter of a duke, but through the same quirk of British law that makes Anne's child a commoner, the new Lady Windsor has no royal rank

Princess Birgitte, Duchess of Gloucester, 31, is from Denmark and is married to the queen's first. cousin, 33-year-old Prince Richard, Duke of Gloucester.

They already have one son, the Earl of Ulster, age 3. The duke is ninth in line of succession to the throne, his son 10th and his new daughter, 11th.

Princess Anne's new baby, Master Phillips, is fifth in succession. He was born without a title because Anne and her commoner husband, Army Capt. Mark Phil-lips, declined titles of nobility to pass on to their children.

The duke inherited his titles from his father, the late Prince Henry, the was a younger broth-er of King Coorge VI. dered integration. Four years after busing began, these neighborhoods are re-garded as still off-limits to blacks.

Generally, blacks do not challenge these ground rules, because there is little to attract them to either neighborhood. Charlestown, a largely Irish-American, working-class neighborhood of about 17,-000 persons, is cut off from the rest of the city by rivers, railroad yards and highways. Residents call it The Town and themselves "townies.

But last week, Boston's racial boundaries drew new attention when a group of black teenagers from Pennsylvania went to Charlestown on a school trip. They vis-ited Bunker Hill Monument, and afterward, as they waited on a corner for a bus, five white men attacked them with golf clubs and hockey sticks.

Both blacks and whites attributed the assault to the tensions that grew out of integration.

"It's sad, but this city just isn't going to change overnight," said Mayor Kevin H. White. "We still have a virus here, and that virus is ugly." Ironically, the attack came just two weeks after three opponents of mandatory busing were defeated in citywide elections.

Louise Day Hicks, longtime busing foe, and John Kerrigan failed to win re-election to City Council. Elvira Pixie Palladino lost in a bid for a second term on the School Committee. Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Palladino lost by narrow margins in the non-partisan elections and have asked for recounts.

The blacks - 12 students and two adults - were from Pine Forge Academy, a school run by the Seventh-day Adventists in Pine Forge, Pa. None was seriously hart, but five required hospital treatment.

Three white men were charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. "There was only one apparent motive for this assault," said police Lt. William A. MacDonald. "Race prejudice." Black and white city leaders said they were shocked by the incident. "But, we weren't surprised," said Marilyn Ander-son of the black-oriented Roxbury Multi-Service Center Service Center.

"It's the kind of thing that is anticipat-ed," she said. "We didn't have these difficulties until busing began. There are a lot of people who may have been racists all along who have used busing as an op-portunity to act out their own emotions and incite other people.

She said she warns blacks who are u familiar with the city to be prepared for ment. Asked if blacks are afraid to go there, Chief Ranger Frank Montford replied, "That's probably a good surmise." Charlestown has an active antibusing group called Powderkeg. It issued a statement blaming the "prejudice that exists in our community and our city to-day" on what it termed "the insensitive treatment of our children by Judge (W treatment of our children by Judge (W. Arthur) Garrity and his court-appointed experts." Garrity has been chief architect of the school busing plan. "I think we will always fight busing," said Pat Russell, Powerkeg's president. "No way we will ever give up. There are plenty of kids still boycotting school. We have kids who haven't been to school in three years.'

The attack was an obvious embarras ment to city officials.

White went to the emergency room at at Massachusetts General Hospital to apolocity paid their hotel bill, gave them a dinner at City Hall and treated them to theater tickets. State legislators gave them personal tours of the city, and a beauty parlor even offered them free hairdos.

Leader Says Growth Of Klan Due To Better Understanding

WASHINGTON (AP) - A Ku Klux Klan leader said Friday recent growth of the segregationist organization results from a better understanding of its message, not a change of tactics.

"I don't think the Klan philosophy has changed at all, except that the public is beginnning to understand what we stand for," said David Duke, imperial wizard of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith said Thursday the Klan has grown 20 percent over the past two years, reversing a decade of decline following the civil rights movement of the 1960s.

The League estimated that three major Klan organizations have about 8,000 members, compared to 6,500 in 1975. The number of Klan sympathizers, who attend some rallies and speeches, was put at about 40,000.

Irwin J. Suall, director of the Jewish organization's domestic fact-finding unit, attributed part of the increase to Duke's "packaging" of the Klan's message in public appearances around the country.

"Duke is extraordinarily clever in manipulating the media," Suall said. "He tones down his views for public consumption and he is given platforms all over the United States.

Duke, a 27-year-old college graduate, rejected Suall's remarks and attacked

The canoe, which predates the Seminoles and is believed to have been used by Timuquana Indians, was pulled from its watery resting place amid shouts of surprise and delight by curious bystanders.

Tom Ryan, former president of the Clay County Historical Society, headed the excavation effort in which Clay County Public Works Director John Bowles, County Commissioner Thad Crossley and other county employees took part.

Years of erosion had etched away the sides of the 19-foot canoe. Only the bottom of the cypress dugout, scarred by burning, remained.

A pump was used to dislodge the sand surrounding the canoe. The workers lift-ed it onto a ladder and carried it to the beach

"The whole purpose is to smear any group that challenges predominant Jewish power in this country," Duke said in a telephone interview from his Louisiana home. "The ADL's got a lot of nerve, being the most racist organization that I know of on earth

He said the Klan's growth stemmed from its defending of white people's interests.

"White people are beginning to realize that they're becoming second-class citizens," Duke said. "We've been the only organization willing to stand up for the rights of the white majority.

Duke also denied that the Klan condoned violence and blamed attacks on blacks and civil rights workers in the South during the 1960s on individuals opposed to integration

'The violence that took place by white people got blown way out of proportion," he said.

Duke also said he does not call for a return to the old form of segregation but advocates "voluntary separation of the races," eventually leading to separate countries for blacks and whites

Suall charged that the Klan would quickly return to violent attacks against blacks if it was politically acceptable.

"If the climate changes and they feel it would be possible to perpetrate acts of violence and get away with it, we think they'd do it," the ADL official said.

The ADL estimates that the Alabama-based United Klans of America remains the largest group with 3,000 to 4,000 members. The Indiana-based Confederation of Independent Orders of the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan has 2,000 to 3,000 members, the ADL said.

Duke's group, despite its leader's recent notoriety, remains the smallest organization with about 1,000 members, the League said. Duke disputed that figure as "far too low" but refused to give his group's size.

Abused Children Want To Stay With Parents

who separate battered children from their abusive parents may be doing the family more harm than good, according to several experts.

Specialists attending the annual meeting of the American Association of Psychiatric Services for Children, which ends here Sunday, say separation can be traumatic for a child, who probably would choose to stay with his parents despite their abuse.

Dr. Andre P. Derdeyn of the University of Virginia Medical School says removing child from his home may leave him eeling rejected by his parents. Separation also fails to solve the underlying problems that led to the abuse.

"Many workers dealing with abuse preathe a sigh of relief when the child is taken away, but this is no time to relax," Derdeyn said at a news briefing.

"This is a critical time for the child and we have to be careful the child isn't just orgotten and allowed to drift into the oster home situation," he said. Dr. William Stone of the Psychiatric In-ditutes of America agrees that efforts hould be made to keep the family toether and to treat the conditions leading child abuse, such as feelings of isolaon and frustration.

"These children don't know any other home and want to stay in their homes even when there is abuse," Stone said. The kids can know something is wrong. but I think they feel that someday they

WASHINGTON (AP) - Social workers will hit upon a magic formula to set the family right again.

Catherine Ayoub, a nurse dealing with child abuse at the University of Oklahoma and the Hillcrest Medical Center in Tulsa, says the exact incidence of child abuse cases is unknown. But professionals estimate one million children are beaten, burned and otherwise abused each year in the United States, and about 2,000 of them die from their injuries, she says.

Although child abuse is more common in low-income families, it crosses all social, ethnic and economic lines, she said. Abuse is more common among very young parents, those who tend to use violence to settle arguments and those going through a social or economic crisis, such as loss of a job, she adds.

"Despite some denials, abusive parents often know that they are abusing their children." Mrs. Ayoub said. "But actualcontrolling this behavior is hard for them.

Parents who abuse their children often feel isolated, inadequate and unappreciated and take out these frustrations on their offspring, the experts said.

Stone adds that the desire to be a better parent can ironically lead to abuse. For example, he says, an unemployed parent who wants to do more for his family may feel inadequate because of his economic position. So, he may take his frustration out on the same child for whom he wants to provide a better life.
