Shops began closing at mid-afternoon and several storekeepers were boarding up plate glass windows. Hotel guests were told they would need a special permit to go into the streets after the curfew hour.

> "This raises questions concerning the extent to which retail beef prices, and therefore live cattle prices, will be permitted to increase, said Williams.

> Concern also will develop during the year about the implications of a downtrending supply of slaughter cows and of cow beef, added the economist.

Ranchers, it appears, will be emerging into the sunlight," he said. "The spotlight will tend to center on the restricted and tightening supply of stocker-feeder cattle

The economist estimated that about 41.7 million head of these animals will be available on Jan. 1, 1978, to be placed in feedvards. This would be almost 3.2 million head less than at the same time a year earlier.

Williams said that because of the varied markets for feeder cattle, the effects of feed grain prices and other factors, price predictions are difficult. But he forecast a mid-$40 per hundredweight average for vear-old calves and older animals may bring returns in the upper $40s and lower $50s.

"Strength probably will be most apparent during late summer or early fall," Williams pointed out.

Mild Weather To Continue

SATURDAY'S fair skies and unseasonably warm temperatures were a preview of weather conditions for much of this week

Highs in the mid 70s are expected today and Monday, with a low tonight forecast in the upper 30s. Northwesterly winds at 10-15 mph are expected today, shifting to the southwest Monday.

The warm afternoons and cool nights should continue through Thursday, with highs again expected in the 70-degree range.

No precipitation is forecast through Monday, with about nine hours of sunshine expected today and Monday.

Humidities should range from 50 percent during the early morning hours to 15 percent during the afternoon.

While the mercury climbed to a warm 77 degrees in Lubbock Saturday, temperatures were unseasonably warm over much of the rest of the state as well.

Today's Edition Largest Ever

TODAY'S edition of The Avalanche-Journal marks an important milestone in the history of the newspaper.

The 250-page edition is the largest ever printed, topping by 16 pages the Bicentennial edition of July 4, 1975. The third-largest Avalanche-

Journal was 224 pages, printed on July 26, 1959, when the newspaper plant was moved to its present site at 8th Street and Avenue J.

Today's edition contains many helpful Christmas gift suggestions by local merchants.

Police tear gas kept some 500 youths on the fringes of downtown Hamilton Thursday night. Hamilton is the capital of this cluster of islands 670 miles southeast of New York. It has a population of about 10,000. Bermuda's population is 55,000 -33,000 blacks and 22,000 whites.

On Friday, Gov. Sir Peter Ramsbotham declared an emergency, allowing imposition of a curfew and the deployment across the island of 300 riflemen of the Bermuda Regiment to supplement 600 police and reserves.

above national standards, averages in poverty areas generally are that much below national norms, the report says,

And for the city as a whole, student achievement scores are mediocre, the document shows. Of the three classes tested throughout the Lubbock Independent School District during the 1976-77 academic year, only 10th-graders scored at or above the national averages in reading and mathematics.

Even so, the districtwide figures are not alarming. The fifth-and seventh-graders, the classes in the city that scored below national norms, were in most cases just fractions off the standard.

Also, the report gave strong evidence that Lubbock students learn during the year at a rate faster than the national pace. Had pupils been tested at the end of the school term, the district's averages

Busted Burglar-Junkie Warns Of Addict's Perils, Pitfalls

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Hundreds of Labbockites are victimized each year by burglars. Loss es total in the millions. 'Juan' is one of the lawbreakers who was caught. He was given a pseudonym to protect other members of his family. Juan is not purported to be typical of all burglars, but he talked candidly with reporter Pat Teague about one burglar's motive

By PAT TEAGUE Avalanche-Journal Staff

ALTHOUGH it was common for Juan to net $60,000 a year and more, he never seemed to escape his financial woes.

With his wife, Lupe, tossing an extra $25,000 into the family kitty annually, it appeared the young couple and their only son were within easy grasp of fast credit, quiet neighborhoods and a hefty slice of the American pie. Hardly.

"I always had old cars and we never lived in a nice house," Juan recalls. More often Juan called motels home. His most recent address is Avenue H and Main Street. Now he watches the world from four floors up. He'll be moving again, though. The 27-year-old former U.S. Army medic and Lubbock

High School student is ticketed for a trip from the Lubbock County Jail to the Diagnostic Unit, Texas Department of Corrections. There, he'll be processed to begin serving an eight-year sentence in the state's penitentiary.

Both Juan and Lupe (not their real names) are criminals by trade. In recent years most of their "earnings" have been paid to a single, impersonal creditor.

Both man and wife are heroin addicts. Only through close supervision, when Lupe was on a controlled methadone program during pregnancy, did the couple's three-year-old son escape addiction.

Juan has known the life of the junkie several years now. "I've never had a job over three months," he'll tell you matter-of-factly.

During the past three years, Juan estimates he's pulled an average of three to four burglaries a day.

At the same time, Lupe was adding her financial share with money made by shoplifting.

Juan, whose quiet, articulate speech belies his less than 10 years of formal education, concedes he has very few personal friends anymore

"During the last few years it just got where I couldn't trust anyone," he says.

"I liked to take the initiative (in a burglary). I didn't want to split (the take) with someone else, when they might not have done anything to help. I'd say I could make about $150 a day.'

Despite his financial success, Juan says Lupe used to chip in the lion's share of the couple's income.

"She used to make a whole lot more than I do," he said, his speech shifting unconsciously to the present tense.

Like her husband, Lupe eventually was "busted," Juan says. And with four cases against her she faced a recent hearing to determine whether to revoke her own eight-year parole.

"She beat it, but she's really paranoid now," Juan says. After a six-year marriage they find themselves separated, with Juan in jail and his wife living with her parents.

At the peak of their joint habit, Juan estimates he and Lupe injected $360 worth of heroin into their systems daily. At that rate, the couple's "junk" tab ran to more than $130,-000 a year.

"It makes you do a lot of things you wouldn't ordinarily do," he says ruefully.

For Juan, the trouble may have begun 16 years ago with the death of his father. At least, that's part of his theory for how he went wrong.

"That had a lot to do with it," he says quietly. "After he died, I was pretty free to do what I wanted, to hang around with the wrong types of people, I guess."

That questionable coterie of friends introduced Juan to heroin. He carried his curiosity for the drug to Germany, where an occasional indulgence metamorphosed into addic-tion. Discovered by authorities, his Army career as a medic

DO GOODFELLOWS get any mail besides coupons listing children who need Christmas visits?

"Indeed we do," Chief Goodfellow said. "like this one" "Dear Goodfellows: Please try to provide something for this child this year, as the family's home burned down a few months ago. And the father has been hospitalized for a Geedfelleve length of time and won't be able to provide Christmas for his family."

"There you are." Chief Goodfellow said solemnly

Then he added: "How can this worthy case be handled?" as if asking himself the question.

The answer: the child's name, address, age, and other information must be filled out on an official "Be A Goodfellow" coupon; and the public must contribute enough money to buy this and approximately 8,999 other boys and girls Christmas packages.

Mail either the coupon, on Page 19, Sec. D, of today's Avalanche-Journal, or your contribution to Chief Goodfellow, P.O. Box 491, Lubbock 79408.

Guerrilla Leader Taken In Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) - Irish Repub lican Army commander Seamus Twomey, one of the most wanted guerrillas in Ireland, was captured Saturday after a car chase in a Dublin suburb, police reported.

long been guarded by school officials. They have maintained that release of such data would confuse parents and hurt the school system.

Even after the achievement test report was entered as evidence, Superintende Ed Irons declined to comment on or explain the statistics.

"If you want to write that story, all of your information is coming from those test scores - not from us," Irons told The Avalanche-Journal.

The report details local student performance, by school and as a district, on the Comprehensive Tests of Basic Skills, a battery of standardized tests developed by McGraw-Hill Inc.

The battery measures performance in reading (through subtests in vocabulary and comprehension); language (grammar, expression, spelling); mathematics (computation, concepts, problem-solving); reference and library skills; science and social studies.

The battery comes in varying degrees of difficulty, depending on the grade to be tested. During the 1976-77 school year, the tests were administered to all students in Lubbock grades five, seven and 10. This year, local third-graders were ad-

RIVER WHITE CAPS-White caps were seen Saturday as the Snohomish River rushed by this farm house tearing out supports for the railroad line outside Snohomish, Wash. Western Washington rivers, fed by torrential rains, went over their banks Friday killing at least two people, driving thousands from their homes and causing millions of dollars worth of damage. Washington Floods Begin To Recede SEATTLE (AP) - Rampaging major rivers in western Washington that killed at least four persons receded Saturday as highway crews worked around the clock to patch roads and thousands of homeowners began sifting mud from their belongings.

The flooding struck hardest in Snohomish County, north of Seattle, and in Cowlitz County and the Grays Harbor areas on the coast.

Among the dead were a Fort Lewis soldier missing after falling into a swollen creek near the fort, an Arel man swept into the Lewis River, a Portland man whose vehicle was buried by a slide and an elderly woman whose home fell into a river at Aberdeen.

Authorities said the woman, 71-year-old Blanche Jones, died in bed when her house was lifted from its foundations and carried about 50 feet. A neighbor of the victim, Robert Buck, said he was awakened about 6:30 a.m. by "a horrible noise, cracking like thunder.

He said the roof of his house ripped open as another house plowed over it during a mudslide. He was rescued by another neighbor in a rowboat.

Almost 5 1/2 inches of rain fell in Aberdeen in the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. Friday.

Water flooded streets in much of the downtown. The water stopped rising just an inch or two below many doorways. About 18 inches of water remained in many streets for several hours.

One man was trapped on his back, with water up to his ears. Rescue workers held his head above water until others could free him with a crowbar and chainsaw, Fire Chief Orian DeBay said.

Although officials kept watch on dikes holding back brown, debris-filled streams running over banks, skies were clear over much of the state and showers only were predicted through the weekend.

One trouble spot was at Ebby Island, east of Everett, where high flood waters combined with a high tide to breach dikes, said Bob Hamlin, Snohomish County emergency coordinator. He said crews could probably prevent a collapse of the dikes

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray and Rep. Lloyd Meeds toured the affected areas, as sandbaggers continued bolstering dikes. Ray declared the flooded areas a disaster Friday, and federal, state and local officials were to tour the areas Sunday to come up with a dollar estimate of damage before appealing to the federal government for assistance.

In Snohomish County, the Snohomish River peaked below the 33-foot level predicted, and the flood residents had steeled themselves for apparently was blunted.

Snohomish County officials had said the flooding could be worse than that of 1975, when farmers lost 2,000 head of livestock and the damage to the western part of the state topped $70 million.

Arabs Try Thwarting Sadat

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) - Hard-line Arab leaders moved Saturday to form a "resistance front" designed to freeze Egyptian President Anwar Sadat out of the Arab world and block his peacemaking with Israel.

But as their meeting in the Libyan capital ended its third day, they were in discord over what measures to take against Sadat for his one-man effort to settle a generation of Middle East turmoil Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy urged acceptance of a Palestinianbacked plan to impose an Arab economic embargo on Sadat's ailing Egyptian economy. Khadafy has proclaimed the embargo for his own oil-rich state.

"In each paragraph, Khadafy insists on this proposal," said Zohari Mohsen, head of the Syrian-sponsored Saiqa guerrilla group, in describing the closed-door proceedings which were expected to end Sundav

But President Hafez Assad of Syria was reported resisting such a drastic step, partly out of concern for the poverty of Egypt's 40 million inhabitants. Svria is the only nation here directly involved in the Arab-Israeli conflict, and Assad is evidently opposed to any step that would preclude a negotiated peace or lead to an irreparable break with Egypt, his ally in the October 1973 war.

The Syrian president urged his caution on Khadafy, suggesting a broader front to pressure Sadat and, it was hoped, overshadow the influence of conservative Arab states such as Saudi Arabia, conference sources said.

"The question is not to take spectacular steps to retaliate against Sadat, but to prevent what he is trying to do," said a high-level Syrian source close to Assad. "Whatever measures we may take, it will not be an adventure."

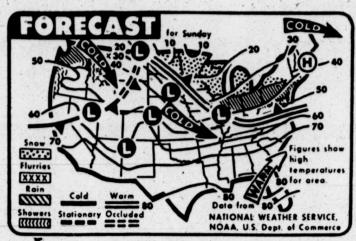

Overall Palestinian leader Yasir Arafat met in individual conferences with other delegation heads at government guest houses around the seaside capital.

In addition to Assad and Khadafy, these included President Houari Bournedienne of Algeria, Foreign Minister Saa-doun Hamadi of Iraq, Popular Front party leader Abdul Fetah Ismail of South Yemen and Dr. George Habash of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

Their private meetings preceded another late night session of formal talks. Habash, a pediatrician-turned-revolu-tionary who leads the radical Marxist PFLP, appeared to win some support for his fervent opposition to resumption of the Geneva Mideast peace conference.

We are not thinking about Geneva any more, because it's dead," according to Nayef Hawatmeh of the Democratic Front, a moderate Marxist guerrilla group which previously followed Syria's lead and supported talks. "The Palestinian resistance is moving out of the Saudi-Egyptian orbit.'

Syrian sources said Assad is convinced the Geneva talks have been derailed for the foreseeable future by Sadat's mission to Jerusalem and the ensuring uproar in the Arab world.

Paducah Chamber Holds Honor Fete work and long hours, we thank you Lynn May reviewed accomplishments of the

A-J Correspondent PADUCAH - Mrs. Donald Love Friday night was named member of the year by the Paducah Chamber of Commerce during its first banquet.

The honoree is a businesswoman, chamber director, chairman of the membership committee and a member of the industrial team.

Highlight speaker for the event, attended by 108 members and guests in the Veterans Memorial Building," was Jerry Heare, director of community development, Texas Industrial Commission.

Introduced by Sherry May, chamber president, Heare spoke of the appearance of a community, the attitude of the residents and demonstrated to his audience how a positive attitude and enthusiasm may be practiced.

He described negative thinking as "hardening of the attitude," which leads to the world's most contagious disease apathy.

"Force yourself to be enthused," Heare said. "Feelings follow actions. Act enthusiastic. Practice feeling enthusiastic. Smile, bring enthusiasm.""Once you've got your attitude sold, ask yourself 'Am I sold? Am I sold on my community?' This is where it begins. If you don't care about Paducah, nobody else is going to," Heare pointed out.

Distinguished service awards went to Joe Don Brooks, Joe Caraway, Joiy Ray Jeter, Mrs. Albert Hollar and Charles Young

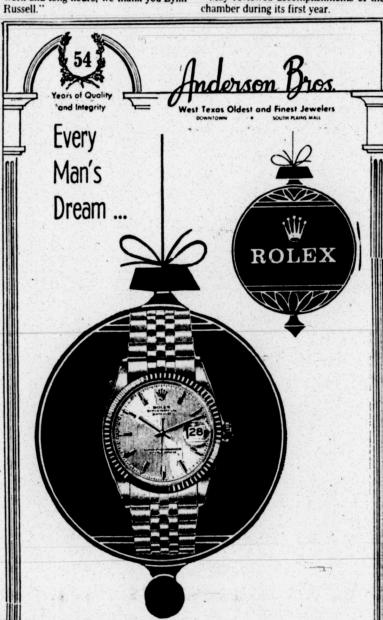

Robert Worley, chamber manager, was master of ceremonies and presented the awards. Selection was by secret committee.

In a surprise presentation special awards were presented to May, chamber president. This award was presented by Mrs. Love. Mrs. I.D Russell, chamber treasurer, also received a special award, presented by Caraway.

May received a wall clock in the shape of Texas with numerals formed from antique barbed wire, for the Okie turned Texan. The inscription read, "Only time will tell how you are appreciated.

A special, one-time award went to Jim Caraway for work he did in forming the chamber

Early Castro Letter Found

WASHINGTON (AP) - A letter written by Fidel Castro to Franklin D. Roosevelt in November 1940, asking for a $10 bill and saying he knew of rich iron deposits in Cuba has just been uncovered.

Specialists at the National Archives and Records Service are convinced that the writer, then a schoolboy, is the man who is now president of Cuba.

The handwriting and the signature are similar to relatively recent examples of Castro's handwriting; he was a student at the Roman Catholic school from which the letter was sent; and the age jibes fairly closely.

Further, Castro grew up in the area where he said rich iron mines were to be found. He did not make payment of the $10 a condition for supplying such information. The offer was more or less a postscript.

Written on a lined schoolboy's tablet and containing some misspellings, the letter to "my good friend Roosvelt" expresses happiness that Roosevelt has just been re-elected to a third term. It continues

"I am 12 years old. I am a boy but I think very much but I do not think that I am writting to the President of the United States.

because never, I have not seen a ten dollars bill green american and I would like to have one of them ...

"If you want iron to make your ships I will show to you the biggest (mines) of iron of the land. They are in Mayari, Oriente, Cuba.'

The letter has just been found bound in a volume of old State Department documents being examined by the Archives' records declassification division by Byran T. vanSweringen, who said the discovery among thousands of routine papers was a pleasant surprise.

"I feel that this letter was indeed written by 'the' Fidel Castro, Cuban head of state." he told a reporter

The writer did not get the $10 he asked for. The letter was sent to the U.S. ambassador in Havana for acknowledgement. Castro got this somewhat unresponsive reply

"Dear Fidel

"The President has directed the embassy to acknowledge, with an expression of appreciation, your letter of Nov. 6, 1940, written on the occasion of his re-election

The letter was signed by Willard L. Beaulac, embassy counselor, who has told officials he has no recollection of the incident.

There have been no diplomatic relations between Cuba and the United States since Castro took over from Fulgencio Batista on Jan. 1, 1959.

Standard reference gives two dates for Castro's birth: Aug. 13, 1926, and Aug. 13, 1927. Assuming the latter to be correct he would have just turned 13 when the letter to Roosevelt was written on Nov. 6, 1940. The reference to himself as being 12 might be human error.

The letter was written from Colegio de Dolores. One biography says that Fidel was transferred by his parents to the Colegio de Dolores, operated by the Jesuits, to complete his grade schooling." Researchers have not been able to find the dates.

"As Castro is quite a common name in Cuba, it is possible that there were other students named Fidel in attendance at that time," vanSweringen says in a memo.

"The writer refers to the biggest (mines) of iron in the land" located in Mayari, Oriente, Cuba. It is known ... that Castro was born in Biran, a district of Mayari, and would of course be familiar with the natural resources of the area.

The symposium is sponsored by the Tarbox Institute, the Texas Tech Medical School and its pharmacology and thera-peutics department and the Office of Educational Development and Continuing Education.

The Tarbox Parkinson's Disease Institute was founded in 1972 by the Texas Legislature, largely through the efforts of Elmer Tarbox, a former state representative and Texas Tech University student.

The symposium was named in honor of the Texas statesman who earlier this year was cited by his legislative colleagues for his "selfless dedication to the health and welfare of his fellow citizens, his energetic pursuit of ideals leading to the betterment of his native High Plains and the entire state of Texas."

cally in the last decade, divorce rates are rising and families are smaller.

A 1975 census showed that only 400,000 to 500,000 - or 30 percent - of Mon-treal's 1.5 million Catholics say they practice their religion regularly. In 1957, the figure was about 70 percent, church officials say.

The census also showed divorce on the increase in the province, rising from about 9 percent in 1960 to more than 23 percent in the early 1970s. Church officials say that couples who never considered divorce because of their religious upbringing now casually accept the idea.

Even Margaret Trudeau's much publicized separation from her French Quebec husband, Prime Minister Fierre Elliott Trudeau, has failed to draw moral indignation on any major scale from provincial residents, once strong defenders of Catholic life in North America.

The Parti Quebecois, the separatist party which has been governing Quebec for a little more than a year, is examining ways to revive the Catholic Church's dwindling flock. "Soon we will need missionaries from

Senate Leaders Plan January Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) - Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd will lead a party of 10 or 12 senators on a trip to India and possibly Syria, Israel, Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Iran in early January, he announced Saturday.

Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker will join the group, but Byrd would not say which other members are involved. The senators will depart around Jan. 1 and travel for about two weeks, "the Lord willing and if we complete our work," the senator said. He predicted that legislation on a national energy policy and on Social Security financing would be completed before Christmas.

The Indian parliament extended an invitation through the State Department for the senators to visit. Then Byrd said he asked Secretary of State Cyrus Vance if visits to the other nations might be helpful and Vance agreed.

Byrd said he would announce details of the trip next week.

ber of children in Catholic Quebec tamilies has dropped from five or six to fewer than three through increasingly popular-forms of birth control and the general, decline in interest in Catholic doctrine and traditions.

The Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops commissioned a study in 1971 to examine why the Quebecois were leaving the church in droves, particularly young Catholics under 35 years old. The study found that provincial residents were rebelling against what they considered to be an overpowering role of the church in their lives

"The Church shaped and molded Quebec life for generations," said the Rev. Barry Jones, spokesman for the Archdiocese of Montreal.

'But it also limited the views of the people of Quebec and made them slaves to institutions and bureaucracy. The 'Quiet Revolution' isn't anti-faith but a rebellion against the shackles of the church.'

Of the estimated 6.2 million residents of Quebec, an estimate 90 percent are Roman Catholic with the overwhelming majority French-speaking. About 125,000

Catholics are English-speaking. From colonial times to the turbulent 1960s, it was almost impossible to live in Quebec without feeling the Catholic Church's influence.

The sick went to hospitals staffed and supported by religious orders. Children attended Catholic schools run by the parish. Secretaries learned their office skills at the convent-operated Mother House. The church took up where government indifference left off. Without the church's presence, many valuable social services would not have been performed by the penny-pinching Quebec provincial administration.

Quebec was an agrarian society until the 1940s when World War II brought many people into the cities for war work. This urban migration sparked the beginning of new consumer society in the prov-

Soon government moved more and more into Quebec lives as it took over the administration and financing of welfare, hospitals, social treatment centers and other formerly church-run institutions.

"Suddenly you have a gap between what the church is ready to do and what the people are ready to accept," said Dr. Thomas Francoeur, chairman of Catholic Studies at McGill University in Montreal. Now, the Catholic Church appears to be changing from an authoritarian influence into a "church of persuasion, cele-brating ideals you can live with," Jones explained.

Fernand Dumont, professor of sociology at Laval University, has been analyzing the future of the Catholic Church in Quebec.

"In my opinion, the most decisive question for the church and Christians is:

What is the status of the church in our civilization?"

Appeals For U.N. Action On Amin Go Unheeded

is on many minds but not on the agenda at the United Nations.

Despite appeals from international human rights groups, condemnations by the British Commonwealth, church organizations and others, and an endless stream of reports of a six-year reign of terror, the United Nations has not spoken out or act-

But many Africans also oppose any ac-tions just now that could distract world attention from South Africa.

U.N. Ambassador Frank E. Boaten of Ghana said the South African situation is one "of the white man treating the black man badly. In Uganda it's the black man treating his fellow black man badly."

Boaten says, nevertheless, he believes the Organization of African Unity (OAU) may act against Uganda, "but it might take some time."

At last winter's commission meeting, the African attitude "did move, not far enough, but it did move," Lowenstein said. "It's a slow process. I can't say any more without breaking confidence. Commission meetings on human rights complaints are held in secret.

Lowenstein, a former Democratic conssman from New York, suggested that in the meantime governments should consider unilateral economic action.

'We can't send the CIA in to destabilize," he added. "God knows, we're out of that period."

DALLAS (AP) - Among the pile of applications submitted to the University Texas Southwestern Medical School last year was one from a student who had compiled a phenomenal undergraduate record.

He had a perfect grade point average and exemplary scores on his medical school entrance exam.

Southwestern turned him down and the chairman of the Dallas school's admissions committee says the case was not all that unusual.

"He had good numbers but had had no people contact. We didn't think he knew what he was getting into. Admission has never been based on numbers alone," said Dr. Bryan Williams.

"Numbers" have become a big question on graduate school campuses. Perhaps the most famous are those of Allan Bakke, a Califonia mechanical engineer who claims he was rejected by a medical school although he had better grades and test scores than minority students admitted under an affirmative action program. Williams said it's not unusual for students with lesser grades to be accepted.

There are several variables that weigh on the admissions committee decisions - and most have little to do with skin color.

"We've recognized for a long time that students from rural areas had relatively low scores on the verbal part of the exam. We didn't penalize them for that. We make that allowance," he said.

The committee also looks at what school the applicant attended and if the would-be student worked his way through school. Scores from Rice are highly considered, Williams said.

Lennert Larsen, chairman of the admissions committee at Southern Methodist's School of Law, agreed that grade inflation has caused an inequity in grade point averages.

"Some schools give points for coming from Princeton rather than Nacogdoches," he said.

Several Southwestern students also tor in the Bakke case. Bakke was 33 when he filed his suit in 1973 after being denied admission to the University of California Medical School at Davis.

The Southwestern students inter-viewed reasoned that the state is making an investment when a student is admitted. The younger the applicant is, the longer he will probably practice. And that means a better return on the investment

But for all the flexibility in admissions, Southwestern's struggle to admit more minority students has been frustrating

"We had 100 fewer black applicants last year," Williams said."It's upset evdy. We've never had a quota, but if eryb we didn't make special allowances we would make almost no beginning in increasing the number of doctors in those communities."

There are 50 Mexican-American students at Southwestern and 15 blacks.

Larsen said the experience has been just as frustrating at SMU. The law school used to have scholarship money for minority students. The money often went unused and the program was abolished.

Admission to the SMU law school is more of a numbers game than it is at Southwestern, and the most important may be 1,750 - the number of dollars it costs per semester for tuition.

Larsen said 80 percent of the students (237 were admitted last time) are picked on their numbers. The other 20 percent make up what Larsen called the "diverse" group, students who did not have the numbers.

The latter group often contains the few minority students who attend the SMU law school. The most recent first-year class included seven blacks and three Mexican-Americans, he said.

Frank Hernandez, a Dallas County judge, earned his law degree at SMU in the early 1960s. In 1976, on behalf of a Mexican-American woman who had been rejected by SMU, he filed a suit alleging the school discriminated against minority students. The class action claimed minority students applications were turned over to one member of the admissions committee.

Hernandez claimed none of the applications from Anglo students were handled that way. Larsen denied a "one-man adsaid age is a factor - an overlooked fac- missions committee" ever existed.

as possible" following a reported, earlymorning robbery Saturday

The victims, described as "very drunk" by police, said they were unsure where the robbery occurred but both men pointed to an area near the 900-block of Avenue C.

Reports indicated the men were held up by two men, one of whom brandished gun. Taken during the holdup was one of the men's wallet and a second victim's hoots

Both men received head cuts, reports indicated. The lacerations were sustained, the victims said, when one of the handits used the boots as a weapon and struck the two men with them.

A police officer driving in the 4600block of Avenue H late Friday spotted a 23-year-old man leaning against a utility pole. As he drove by, the officer said the man appeared to slide down the pole into a crouching position.

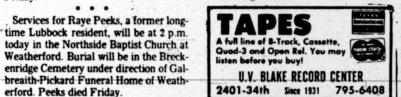

After investigating, the officer arrested the man on suspicion of public drunkeness and transported him to the police station.

Upon arrival, the suspect reportedly told the officer, "Man, I am drunk. Open the (station) door for me.

As the officer did so, the man fled down the alley behind the police station. The officer noted in his report that the man appeared to be running quite well for a man so intoxicated.

About two blocks later, at 10th Street and Texas Avenue, the officer said he tackled the man and cuffed him.

Following his unceremonious return to the station, the man reportedly gave police a false name. He was booked on suspicion of public drunkeness, failure to identify and escape.

A shooting for no apparent reason, according to a witness, left a young Shallowater man with a leg wound early Satur-

A car loaded with an estimated five Mexican-American men reportedly drove by the victim about 2:10 a.m. and a shot was fired.

The shooting occurred at a club in the 2300-block of 4th Street. The victim was not wounded seriously, reports indicated, but his car had been hit by three bullets about an hour earlier, police said. Revenge may have been the motive for

Don Cagle, owner of B&D Construction Co., said someone took $1,600 worth of tools from his pickup and punctured the four tires on the vehicle, causing $400 damage. Cagle said an earlier incident with two employees may have been a catalyst for the burglary and vandalism.

Two women were victimized at a South Lubbock elub-early Saturday. Robin Sue Williams of 3117 26th St. said someone stole her purse and its contents at the nightspot in the 7300-block of S. University Avenue. The victim said her loss was about $487. Meanwhile, Sarah Lynch of 4325 28th St. said her purse and contents - valued at $50 - were taken at the club about the same time. Both women had left their tables momentarily when the thefts occurred.

Five windshields broken on vehicles at a car lot at 3311 Ave. L resulted in more than $500 damage, said Jack Bryant.

About $1,650 worth of goods, including two stereos, a television, records and speakers were stolen from Charles Roberts' 4102-16th St. apartment Friday night, while Jose Bastrado of 2914 E. Auburn St. said burglars stole his $625 television set. Bastrado said the intruders gave up on trying to take his washing machine.

A television, radio and speakers again were the desired items as burglars broke in to Virginia Shuman's 2705 31st St. residence Friday. The loss amounted to $500. the victim said.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, November 4, 1977-A-Family With Two Cancer Victims Retains Faith

Obituaries

By KAY BELL

Avalanche-Journal Staff How, one wonders, can these people be so happy

Jake Florence's easy smile overpowers the bandage covering the left side of his face. The ready laugh of Pat, his wife, puts a listener at ease and gives no hint of the 2 1/2 years of compounded tragedy that has stalked the family

Since April 1975 Florence has been traveling to the Veterans' Administration Hospital in Albuquerque for treatment of the basal cell cancer that has spread over his left cheek and jawbone

In July, the Florences received another blow: they learned that the youngest of their five children, 9-year-old Norman, has bone cancer.

That month the youngster, who attends Stubbs Elementary, fell and bruised his right kneecap. When his limping became noticeable, Mr. and Mrs. Florence took Norman to St. Mary's Hospital, where the diagnosis was made. On Oct. 12 he entered

M.D Anderson Hospital in Houston for treatment. If the treatment fails, Norman's leg will be amputated. With Christmas approaching, the Florence family faces even more problems. Because of his numerous visits to Albuquerque, Florence has been forced to miss work frequently. And Monday afternoon he leaves for his sixth operation.

"Christmas this year will be scarce if Jake has to stay (at the hospital)," Mrs. Florence said. "Our chance to get the children anything will be limited. But we'll make it," she said. Her smile never wavered

That type of faith radiates from the Florences. They have remained calm and full of hope.

"Faith and that book," Mrs. Florence said, pointing at the Bible on the desk in front of her, "are what keep you going through something like this."

But the congregation of Bethany Baptist Church, where the Florences worship, realized that in addition to faith the family needed material help. The church has contributed to the payment of the family's medical bills for several months. And last week they made a community-wide appeal.

The Rev. Ross Spencer, pastor, opened the Jake Plorence and Norman Plorence fund at Security National Bank so Lubbock citizens could help the family, especially during the holiday sea-

Over the years, the Florences have lost track of the exact cost of medical treatments. But, Mrs. Florence said, the hospital bill for Norman's recent eight-week stay at M.D. Anderson was more than $1,000.

"It's something you worry about. But," she said firmly, "if they can cure this, that's the main thing." "You could call it miracles what they do," Florence said.

During his treatment, Florence has undergone five operations, including skin grafts from his forehead to his cheek and reconstruction of his jaw. If no new tumors are detected during his upcoming visit, surgeons will then begin plastic surgery to cover scars on Florence's forehead and a cavity in his left cheek.

Norman received radiology treatments while at Houston and is scheduled to return Jan. 3 to begin chemotherapy. If this treatment doesn't arrest the cancer. Norman's leg will be amputated.

The talkative, dark-haired youngster doesn't look forward to, a returning to Houston, although not for the obvious reasons. 10.00

He is aware of the implications of his affliction, but what wor-ries him most are the routine tests done by the hospital. "They're real nice to me there, but I don't like it when they come to take your blood," Norman said, grimacing. In addition to curtailing Norman's schooling, his hospitaliza-tion has put a crimp in his playtime activities.

"But it hasn't slowed him down any," Mrs. Florence said, glancing at her son who was squirming in his chair and looking in the direction of his brothers and sisters playing outside. The child cannot participate in his two favorite sports, soccer and foothall

The family is nevertheless hopeful that soon it can return to a normal lifestyle. After more than two years of frequent separa-tion, the Florences greatest wish is just to be together as a family again.

"It's still a long way down that road," Mrs. Florence said. "We just take it one step at a time."

LoVaca Rate Case Hearings To Begin

AUSTIN (AP) - The Railroad Commission begins considerations Dec. 12 of its final order in the 5-year-old LoVaca Gathering Co. rate case.

Commissioners indicated they hoped to have their final decision before Christmas.

LoVaca has been operating under an interim order since Sept. 27, 1973. This order allows LoVaca to charge its customers, which include Austin, San Antonio and the Lower Colorado River Authority, the average price it has to pay producers for natural gas, plus a surcharge of 5 cents per thousand cubic feet (mcf).

The Houston-based company and its parent firm, Coastal States Producing Co., are seeking commission approval to charge its average cost of gas plus a surcharge of 16.70 cents per mcf.

Austin and other customers challenged the proposed rate, saying it would raise consumers' rates. A rate consultant for Austin has recommended to the commission that it allow LoVaca to charge 5.67 cents over average gas costs.

The final order also is expected to outline Coastal States' legal and financial responsibility for keeping financially troubled LoVaca solvent and the gas flowing to customers.

For most of 1977, monthly retail sales have topped comparable 1976 figures, and store executives and analysts agree the trend should carry through the all-important final month of the year.

"We've had a very good performance August through November, and I've never seen a case where you have a good trend going and it doesn't hold up in December as well," a spokesman for Donaldson's Department Stores in Minnesota said. "We're looking for a minimum 10 percent increase in sales in December (over December 1976)."

Securities Proposal The Migh #39.57 Market Low #23.98 Closed #23.98 -20.44 Worries Wall Street Week of: Nov 28 -BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) - Some day; Dec. 2 maybe soon, American investors will be buying and selling stocks through something called a national securities market Congress said so in legislation passed two years ago. But when? What will it be like? How well will it work? And will it give investors benefits they can't get now through today's diverse array of stock exchanges and markets around the country.

Wall Street leaders and their regulators from Washington, who have been grappling with and haggling over those questions for years, had another go at it here this past week.

But as the days passed at the winter meeting of the Securities Industry Association, the brokers' trade group, many of the answers proved as elusive as ever. While they debated the future, the stock market itself had its hands full with the present. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 20.44 to 823.98 in the past week but the broader market did not fare as poorly. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index fell 2.02 to 94.67, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost .99 to 52.34. Big Board volume averaged 22.51 mil-lion shares a day against 23.94 million the week before.

To Boca Raton, five of the nation's stock exchanges brought along what they held out as evidence of a healthy step forward toward the central market.

They demonstrated what they called an Intermarket Trading System, designed to provide a computerized communications linkup of their trading floors, and slated for a pilot test next spring. Through this system, they said, brokers who make markets in given stocks at each exchange would compete with each other for buy and sell orders, thus providing brokers representing investors with a chance to shop around for the best price available

He called the Intermarket Trading System "a real step forward" but he also said it was "not a solution."

And, frequently citing the fact that the SEC is under orders from Congress to develop a central market, he asserted, "The commission is not satisfied with the current rate of progress, despite the difficulty of the task.

We are concerned with the inability of the industry to provide its own leadership - even when it claims to feel as threatened as it does." Still another note of uncertainty and controversy was sounded on an element of the central market plan that is already in effect - the full price competition on brokerage commissions which replaced the previous fixed rate schedule May 1, 197

Williams told the brokers here, "L am concerned that some of the commission charges and competitiveness now going on may, in effect, be predatory and destructive.

In addition, he voiced concern that mergers piled upon mergers creating fewer and fewer, larger and larger firms, would result in "undue concentration" of the inhustry.

"Has the concentration gone too far? We need to look at that carefully," he said. "I do not think the verdict is in."

GETTING WITH IT-Capt. Robert Satterfield, a Baptist minister serving as a chaplain at Reese Air Force Base, tries on some firefighting equipment to

THE SMALL PLANE flew over rugged mountain, open sea and glacier plain to deliver the modern circuit rider, a "remote chaplain," to church.

'We tried to make it on a Sunday, but the weather didn't always cooperate so we had services when the plane could make it," Capt. Robert Satterfield, a Protestant chaplain at Reese Air Force Base, said of his last assignment at Tin City, Alaska.

The old mining site was so remote the mainland of Siberia could be seen on a day when fog, snow or sleet didn't obscure the view from Top Camp, a weather station on the mountainside above Tin City.

Regularly, Satterfield climbed into a bush plane to hold services at Lisburn and Kotzebue, going by way of Nome in the Arctic Circle. While he was gone, a Catholic chaplain reciprocated at Tin City.

The chill factor was 135 below zero with winds at 60 to 70 knots.'

Arriving at his remote site assignment in the very cold season straight from his native Florida gave him instant appreciation for cold weather gear.

"I put on normal socks, thermal socks, liners, then bunny boots or mukluks."

Air Force.

The biggest problem wasn't the cold. It was the isolation-men away from home and family while eating, sleeping, working and recreating in a building about the size of the Reese chapel.

Top Camp itself was about the size of the Reese sanctuary "It takes a special breed of person to live there and function. The worst was the marriage thing. It really put men through the ringer. I had to call or write a lot of wives to give a guy support. It was no time to file for divorce

Without the Alaska bush pilot and his daring of "unbeleivable weather" to bring the all-important mail, the job would have been almost impossible. Morale, dragging bottom, buoyed immediately with mail arrival.

MANY A NIGHT Satterfield talked away the hours with a troubled man who couldn't sleep because of his problems.

Being on call any hour of the day and night didn't give him too much time to spend worrying about his own situation, the same as any man's with family "back in the lower 48."

The sites were weather stations combined with early warning systems to locate approaching crafts and call for a scrambele of F-4 Phantoms to identify and escort them out of U.S. territory.

At Reese as in Alaska, Satterfield has a bonus in the empathy department with the enlisted troops. He started that way.

Coming from a sheltered home "with a family that cared," he tried doing his own thing his own way and got lost. When realization came that he was flying too high and living too free, he began looking for other ways, was pointed to the ministry and found it his way.

He finds it more his way while rapping with Reese troops, sharing a lonely runway vigil or a security policeman's lonely rounds or any of many ways to make duty tional Guard, taking supplies into vietna including caskets filled with American dead.

As an Air Force chaplain, Lt. Col. Johnson is proud of the past which makes him more qualified to be a pastor of military communities.

"I have my own scars from life. I've been there, too; I can identify with them. I wouldn't trade those experiences for anything.

One thing he cannot share with those with war experiences. He does not know the feel of a man's life on his shoulders. An enemy never flew in the gun sight of his B-47 where the pilot also manned a tail gun by way of a radar scope.

Johnson is one of less than a dozen Air Force chaplains wearing wings, a sign of service to country as a pilot, bombadier, gunner, etc. before going into the ministry.

THE STRAIN OF undergraduate pilot training, the long hours of winning wings, came at Laredo AFB in 1960 to begin military duty for the Reese AFB installation chaplain.

He came to Reese from Shemya AFB, Alaska, where he fought daily for morale and welfare of men and women separated from home and family in a remote area, persons totally dependent upon the base for 24 hours of each day with no relief.

There, too, he could identify. His own family was in Arizona waiting out his year.

A dream sheet wish to be stationed at an Air Training Command base to help the young adjust to military life brought him to West Texas.

Like instructor pilots and their students, he has "slipped the surly bonds of earth and danced the skies on laughter-silvered wings" as described in "High Flight by J.G. Magee Jr.

With Johnson there is the instant smile, quick humor and sober reflection chasing each other about a face grown to pleasant lines. With it are the bright, alert eyes special to those who tread the sanctity of space, put out a hand and "touch the face of God."

HIS OFFICE is a mixture of pilot and preacher, holding mementos of the past, including wooden replicas of the command pilot wings he wears below his chaplain's cross and the wooden propellor of the target he brought down with his first cannon fire in practice with the B-47's tail

Remote duty in Alaska was the best year of his life for growth in the ministry, the worst for lack of family support for the job at hand.

Shemya was a survival situation for moral fiber for both the isolated and those left at home.

"The sad part of the assignment is problems with families. A man would come up with the feeling that all was well with his world, then problems develop at home just because he isn't there. It's hard for a man to know his career has done that to his family."

Remote duty also is a special time with special advantages for those on the fast merry-go-round of modern living to have the time all of a sudden to stop and think.

It is a time when man's faith takes a serious turn, for a chaplain to know what it is all about and help with a final conscious decision.

JOHNSON'S OWN major decision concerning his path in life came long after marks along the way guided him toward it. Growing up in Minnesota, he was urged early toward the ministry.

Had he gone to the seminary straight out of high school, he believes, he would have quit or flunked out.

It was not until much later-after pilot training and typhoon hunting -that he realized the vast difference in his own life style, one he had pursued since childhood.

Also, in any situation, he always seemed to wind up a counselor.

Entering a Lutheran seminary, using funds saved for that purpose his final years of duty, Johnson found himself the object of much publicity, combining medical evacuation service with the Air National Guard with study for the ministry. Once ordained, he had to quit flying as there was no way to combine the two. With Air Force blue in his blood he became a chaplain, using his own Air Force experience as a springboard to rapport.

Counseling for Reese chaplains "runs through the lines" of religious preference when not related to religion. It involves morale, welfare and the business of the base

THINGS SPECIFICALLY Catholic are Quinn's alone-daily mass and two on Sunday plus other special programs. General chapel programs are non-denominational as chaplains are not alowed to indoctrinate.

For leave or special off-duty time, Quinn has a civilian Lubbock backup to fill in, carrying the radio pager so he may respond to base Catholic needs in addition to officiating at regular mass.

In King Salmon, Alaska, the Air Force's largest remote site with a 450man force, Quinn was assisted with the Protestant end of things by a civilian contracted with by the Air Force.

Black Leaders Sent London Invitati

LONDON (AP) - British Foreign Min-ister David Owen has invited two Rhodesian black nationalist leaders to London for talks on political developments in that white-ruled country, Foreign Office officials said Saturday. Diplomatic sources said the invitation came after the United States and Britain privately agreed on the advisability of a meeting with Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, co-leaders of the militant Patriotic Front. It was not known if the United States would be represented at the proposed talks.

The sources said the discussions would include a plan by Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith to work out an internal settlement with moderate blacks to transfer power to Rhodesia's black majority.

Nkomo and Mugabe, who control the guerrilla armies fighting the Smith regime, have rejected any part in the negotiations between Smith and the moderates. According to the sources, Nkomo and Mugabe are to meet in Maputo, Mozambique, to decide whether they will come to London.

The greater part of Mugabe's forces are based in Mozambique and Nkomo's guerrillas operate out of Zambia.

Owen, in a speech to a Labor Party meeting Saturday, warned, "time is running out for a peaceful settlement" in Rhodesia.

He referred to recent raids into Mozambique by Rhodesian security forces and said, "The slaughter and carnage . . . will not help bring about an atmosphere conducive to successful negotiation and a just and orderly settlement that will win international acceptance."

Rhodesia claimed it killed 1,200 guerrillas in two raids that began Nov. 23. Mozambique's Defense Ministry said 160 persons were killed, and most were women and children.

BOYCOTTS RHODESIAN TALKS -Bishop Abel Muzorewa, believed to command the most support among black nationalist groups in Rhodesia, discussed Friday Prime Minister Ian Smith's reply to the bishop's protest over recent Rhodesian Army raids against black guerillas in Mozambique. Bishop Muzorewa boycotted constitutional talks in Salisbury between Smith and other black leaders because of the prime minister's reply. (AP Laserphoto)

Diplomatic officials in London reported that U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Owen have set up a session on the sidelines of this week's meeting of the North Atlantic Council in Brussels, Belgium. They hope to further align their policies on Rhodesia and South Africa, the officials said.

The U. S. State Department has officially denied any differences between Washington and London in the wake of Smith's qualified offer to discuss with black moderates a new constitution based on adult suffrage.

The two Western powers have also insisted there should be "universal adult suffrage," but they have warned the guerrilla war will continue unless the Patriotic Fron is included in constitutional talks.

Owen thus far has displayed a greater disposition to give Smith's initiative a chance than have the Americans.

The British are said to appear in Washington's eyes somewhat too ready to accept Smith's words at face value.

Nkomo and Mugabe have denounced Britain for its evident tolerance of Smith's move, which militant blacks say is trickery. Nkomo has vowed, for example, that a black government installed by Smith would meet with the same hostility and conflict as the existing Salisbury regime which declared independence unilaterally from Britain in 1965.

Some Rhodesian blacks, already assembling in London for talks, have called attention to an issue the U.S. government has insisted on - that there must be United Nations supervision of any election for a future black-ruled Rhodesia.

The Owen statement on Smith's initiative omitted all mention of that. It has long been a Washington-London hope, shared by Smith at times, by President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and even the Soviet Union, that Nkomo might emerge as the leader of an independent black-ruled Zimbabwe, the nationalists' name for Rhodesia.

But no one knows for sure if he could win a popular ballot. Most observes be-

Elizabeth Pounds, assistant director of the Texas Tech medical school ambulatory clinic, has been named a nominee to the American Academy of Medical Administrators.

The AAMA is an international professional organization of selected medical administrators.

The nominee status precedes academy membership which must follow examinations and at least a year of medical administration experience at the executive, department or assistant department head level.

A registered nurse, Dr. Pounds received her nursing degree from the Methodist Hospital School of Nursing. She received a bachelor of business administration and masters and doctorate of education degrees from Texas Tech. ded to the standardized testing program. Along with the tests, schools here administer the California Short-Form Test of Mental Maturity, which guages pupils' IQ levels. With this information, school officials can compute a student's "anticipated achievement" and compare that to his actual academic performance on the CTBS.

The latter, in the report submitted to U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward, scores students according to a "grade equivalent."

For example, McGraw-Hill researchers say that, nationwide, students who have just completed their first month in the seventh grade should have an average score of 7.1 (seven years, one month of academic development) on each component of the test battery.

Testing specialists warn against the weaknesses of grade equivalents because they can lead to absurd conclusions.

It is wrong, for example, to say that a seventh-grader with a 10.0 achievement test score is able to do the work of a 10thgrader; in fact, he probably has never been exposed to the skills required of a high school sophomore.

Theoretically, such a score means that that seventh-grader can do seventh-grade work about as well as a 10th-grader could do seventh-grade work.

Scores below the standard are mo difficult to interpret. A seventh-grad with a 5.0 achievement score is not nec sarily stuck on the fifth-grade level skills; but he may be having as mu trouble with seventh-grade work as a ty ical fifth-grader would have with s enth-grade work.

Citywide, the achievement test sco averages for Lubbock students are about the national norms.

Last year, for example, the city's 2,445 10th-graders were given the CTBS in October, after the first month of the school term. The norm, according to McGraw-Hill, should have been a score of 10.1.

Local 10th-graders did well in each academic area. In reading, they had a districtwide average of 10.5 - "four months" above the test's national average. Other scores were 10.5 in language, 10.1 in math, 11.0 in reference skills, 10.2 in science and 10.6 in social studies.

Seventh-graders, as a whole, registered a lower performance. When administered the CTBS in October, 1976, their average score by national standards should have been 7.1.

In reading, last year's seventh-graders were slightly under that standard, with a districtwide average of 6.9 - or "two months" behind

They had a 6.4 average in language, 6.2 in math, 6.6 in science and 6.3 in social studies. In reference skills, the seventhgraders last year topped the national standard with an average citywide score of 7.5.

Fifth-graders last year were administered the CTBS twice. The first time was in September, 1976, about the beginning of the school term, when they were rated way, they pulled their reading and math averages from four to six months below against a grade equivalent standard of

During that administration of the test, Lubbock's fifth-graders as a group fell short of the national average. They had districtwide averages of 4.6 in reading, 4.3 in language and 4.4 in math. However, when the CTBS was given again in March, 1977, fifth-graders showed great improvement. That time, they were rated against a standard of 5.6, because they had just completed their sixth month of the school year. The fifth-graders scored a 5.5 in reading, 5.6 in language and 5.5 in math

That indicates that fifth-graders had gained an average of one year, three months of development in language skills during the first six months of the school year - an impressive feat. In the same corded at schools in low-income areas -Guadalupe Elementary, for instance. Fifth-graders at Guadalupe, in a predominantly Mexican-American neighborhood on the city's north side, started out last year with average achievement scores of 3.3 in reading, 2.8 in language and 3.6 in math.

By March, however, they had raised those averages to 5.4, 4.7 and 5.5 respectively - for an average gain of two years' development in each subject area.

Several other schools posted gains of at least a year's growth in one or more subjects, even though they may have finished the year below some of the district or national averages.

Among them were Arnett, Bean, Bozeman, Dupre, Harwell, Hodges, Iles, Jack-son, Mahon, Martin, McWhorter, Posey, Sanders, Southeast, Wheatley, Wolffarth and Wright.

School officials here say the CTBS is used primarily to diagnose the strengths and weaknesses of individual students. Because they are dependent on so many other factors, from home environment to pretest anxiety, test results have a very limited use in evaluating school programs, officials have said.

Also, teachers noted that the tests do not measure perhaps the most important student qualities - attitude and effort. They said students who do poorly on achievement tests still can do well in school by putting out more effort.

The accompanying table is a listing of CTBS averages by school in reading and math, compiled from the report submitted to Woodward. Scores for seventh-and 10th-graders are based on tests given in October, 1976. The fifth-grade scores come from the March, 1977, administration of the CTRS

Study Predicts Property Tax Leap If Farm Value Revised

AUSTIN (AP) - If Texas starts assessing rural land on its productivity instead of its value as real estate, tax rates would jump an average of 19 percent statewide, a House Study Group report says.

Legislators passed an "ag value" taxation bill this year, but Attorney General John Hill has ruled it unconstitutional.

The study group's 20-page report said that since school districts would have to make up the revenue lost by lowering assessed values of farms and ranches, the money would have to come from higher tax rates.

"Tax relief for farmers and ranchers would cause an increase in property tax rates averaging 19 per cent statewide. The amount of increase would vary tremendously in different parts of the state, from zero in some urban areas to 100 percent or more in certain rural areas." the report said.

It found that a third of the state's taxing districts would have to raise their tax rates by 65 per cent or more over what is rate farms and timber lands included prominent members of the study group.

But the new analysis showed that less than 10 per cent of the farm and ranch land in the state is owned by corporations.

A third of the timber land, however, is held by corporations, it said.

It said there was a possibility that under "ag use value," some land owners actually might have higher assessments

Under the present system that allows owners to take advantage of agricultural use value if a majority of their income derives from the land, some ended up with higher assessments, the report said. "They sued the local assessor, but the court ruled that the new agricultural-use values would have to stnd since they had been properly determined and were well below true market value," the study group said.

Break-Ins Easy, Risks Minimal, Matter-Of-Fact Burglar Avers

Getting a foot in the door. It's an American tradition. To get a toehold and exploit your opportunities.

For Juan, it was more fundamental than that. It was a means to a burglar's end.

The slight, tattooed 27-year-old says he's committed hundreds of burglaries in three years.

Awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary following the revocation of his eight-year probation, Juan (not his real name) is matter-of-fact about his "talent."

"You kind of sense when a house is alone. I could probably get into a house with some kind of tool faster than the owner could with a key," he says.

Contrary to stereotypes and myths, Juan said most of his burglaries were daylight break-ins, preferably morning jobs

"I'd just use this tire tool kind of thing, stick it between the door jamb and the knob and put pressure," the former Lubbock High student explained.

To Juan's mind, the best way into an empty house was through the front door. Working alone most of the time, Juan said there are certain limitations on a solo burglary.

"I used to make three or four trips sometime," he said. Those were trips to a safe stashing place, usually a motel room where he'd registered under a false name, and the return trip to the victim's home

If goods are found in a motel, Juan explained, they cannot be traced directly to the criminal, particularly when he's registered using an alias.

And what about the ubiquitous burglar's pickup truck?

"I always used a car. I'd throw things in the trunk...and the back seat and the front seat, anywhere," he said.

What about "fences," persons who buy stolen goods from burglars and re-sell them to "customers?"

"There's not that many (in Lubbock). Usually, you just sell a television to a person and he tells another person and that guy says I want two," Juan said.

Although Juan admits he "got a rush out of doing it" and likes "the feeling" of committing burglary, he says he might never have become a break-in artist had his heroin addiction not been the catalyst.

Some of Juan's burglaries weren't burglaries at all - they were thefts, pure and simple.

He got more money, he says, for a television "in a box." With that end in mind, he says he'd sometime walk into a store and walk away carrying a television set in' its container.

"It's tougher than a burglary, but it could be done. It's a matter of whether anyone's around." he adds.

Juan says he tried passing checks, "but I got caught.' Sometimes selling stolen goods presents a problem for the burglar, Juan

"I'll keep coming down on my price and the guy just won't buy. Then, I'll come down even further. Finally he'll say 'OK.

"Then I think 'This dude's robbing me.' Then I'd stop and think, it didn't cost me anything." Juan says a good television or stereo will bring $150. As for his dealings with his "customers," Juan said he had one hard-and-fast credo.

"I just didn't deal with white peo-ple...or black people. I kept with Chicanos.

Despite his caution, sometimes things got a bit sticky, Juan says.

"Sometimes, I'd be inside (a house) and and I'd hear a noise. I would think 'Somebody's coming up the driveway.' I'd have to dive through a window or run out the back door," he says.

But burglary was hardly fun or profitable in Juan's case. Addicted to heroin. Juan found his drug purchases keeping his own finances in constant turmoil. A new batch of burglaries begat more heroin, and so on, he says.

Paying motel rent - where the chance of being caught at home with stolen goods was avoided - cost him "$16 and $17 a day," he recalls.

Juan hopes to put burglaries and heroin behind him

A trip to prison, he believes, is a step in the right direction. No more drugs and the chance to come back some day "to get my thing together" provide the hope in Juan's future.

"I think the best years of my life have already passed. But ... maybe they're yet to come was over. He was given a general discharge and dismissed.

Today Juan shares a cell block with 18 other inmates in the Lubbock County Jail. He is relaxed and ready to talk about his life as junkie and burglar. His speech is slow and deliberate, without a trace of braggadocio.

He agreed to go public with his story, he says, in hopes of keeping "somebody that hasn't done heroin" from "submitting to the temptation the first time."

For Juan recent years have been a morass of methadone programs, greater and greater dependence on the drug, continuing family and legal problems coupled with the knowledge that he'd eventually wind up behind bars.

"I've been on probation since 1975. I more or less knew I was going to get busted.

"I think the only cure for drug addiction is a long term separation from it," he says.

In Huntsville (where he'll serve three concurrent, eight-year sentences) "it's pretty easy to submit to peer group pressure. And it's harder when you are Chicano. If you're a Chicano and not in a clique, you're nothing," he says.

Juan says he had less problems with heroin withdrawal the latest time around than on a previous incarceration a month ago.

"I had withdrawals the first three days here. It's hard to explain; it's just a sort of anxiety. You just don't know what to do." he explained.

The anxiety, Juan said, was accompanied by a loss of appetite, "real bad cramps" in his legs and weight loss.

Juan says he's concerned now that his wife "will be sent up, too." As for his own marriage surviving an eight-year separation, Juan is hopeful but not optimistic

"I think statistics will show that they don't work out. In my case, I hope that my marriage will survive."

required by assessment according to market value

The study group report also said that the more relief given to farmers and ranchers, "the greater will be the burden on other residents of the district."

A constitutional amendment backing up the "ag value" bill failed largely because the bill would have allowed corporations to benefit from the tax break.

World War II GI, British Daughter Brought Together After 32 Years

MIAMI (AP) - For 32 years, Ralph Stallinger carried a faded photograph of his English daughter - the only image he had ever seen because he couldn't find his GI bride and their baby. Now he and his child are finally together

"If I'm dreaming, I don't want to wake up. The lost is found again," said Stallinger, 64. "I'd given up hope that I'd ever find her.'

His daughter, Vivien Davis, flew here from the London area this week, nearly five months after the telephone call last July 5 that brought her into contact with her father.

"When the phone rang, I dashed down the stairs," she recalled. "The voice on the other end said, 'Hello Vivien. This is your father.' I couldn't believe it. I stood there and cried.

Stallinger was an American soldier stationed at Berkshire, England, in 1943 when he met Vivien's mother, Eleanor Roberts "at a dance at the old Binfield Castle.

"And she was pretty as anything you ever saw ...," Stallinger said. "I guess you could say it was love at first sight

They married without telling his commanding officer and lived happily until June, 1944, when Stallinger was shipped to France and was wounded. He was there when he learned his wife was pregnant and still there when his mother-in-law wrote of Vivien's birth and sent him a picture of his infant daughter.

"I was like an ant sitting on a hot rock," he said. "I couldn't wait to see her." But he said he was ordered back to the United States, without time to collect his family, and lost contact.

"The war ended and I kept trying. I wrote endless letters. They came back unclaimed and unanswered," Stallinger said. "For years, I kept trying ... not knowing if they were alive or dead."

Several years later he met Hildegard, his present wife. They were married in 1949 after he had the first marriage dissolved in court. His new wife encouraged him to keep looking for his missing daughter.

"She (Hildegard) had been separated from her mother in Germany during the war. She understood," Stallinger

Meanwhile, Vivien was learning about her American father even though her mother and grandmother had given up their search. All she knew was that he had lived where in Montana. Her mother died nine years ago. Last February, her grandmother died.

"There I was - alone. My family was gone. I had to find him," Vivien said. She and her husband went to the American Embassy, the Red Cross, the Veterans Administration. In frustration, she addressed a letter: "The Veterans Administration, Montana, U.S.A."

The letter was forwarded to Stallinger, who had since moved to Miami. He called England the day he got it.

"I used to think of her ... wonder what she looked like at 9 or 10," Stallinger said. "I thought about her when she reached the age she should be dating and wondered if she would find someone good enough for her ...

"All these years I've been praying to the Good Lord that he would put me in touch with her before I passed away from the face of the earth."

Strangler. That diversity underscores the random manner in which the killer (or killers) has chosen his victims - 10 young women with different lifestyles who have been strangled and dumped by the side of the road in the last six weeks.

Meanwhile, a robbery suspect was being questioned by police on Saturday in connection with the case.

The random nature of the attacks has stumped police investigators in their efforts to draw hypothetical portraits of future victims. "There is no common de-nominator," said Police Lt. Dan Cooke. "It makes it extremely difficult for us. For instance, where do you put a stakeout?"

Actually, there was one common thread in the first five murders - the victims were last seen in Hollywood. But Cooke says there is not much that officers can draw from that. Police say at least one of the victims had a prostitution background, but would not say which one because we don't want to compromise the parents," Cooke said.

New Sterilization Rules

Congressman Criticizes

Beilenson (D-Calif.) Saturday criticized the government's new 30-day waiting period requirement for poor persons seeking sterilization.

The requirement replaces a former three-day waiting period between the time a poor person signs a voluntary consent form and the time the surgery is performed.

"There has been some sterilization abuse in the past, but I am fully confident that the answer lies in a well-drafted and enforced informed consent practice, not in an arbitrary and lengthy waiting period " Beilenson said.

Suspect May Provide Murder Information

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A robbery suspect was being questioned Saturday by authorities investigating the strangulations of 10 young women whose bodies have been found dumped in bushes of a suburban area during the past six weeks.

Lt. Ed Henderson, head of a 42-mem-ber special task force established to investigate the murders, said he had "no comment" when asked if the announcement meant a break in the case.

LT. HENDERSON Bennett Merrett, 26, of Hesperia, a desert comunity, was booked Friday for investigation of robbery in a separate case that authorities said came to light during their investigation of one of the early stranglings.

"We are questioning him in connection with the strangulation murders," said officer Carlos Figueroa, a spokesman for the task force.

Henderson said Merrett was arrested in connection with a Nov. 12 robbery reported by a woman who was questioned three days later in the death of 20-yearold Yolanda Washington.

The woman, whose name was not released, reported being raped during the robbery, police said.

Miss Washington's body was found Oct. 18 dumped near the Ventura Freeway in Griffith Park. Nine other bodies, all of them either nude or semi-clothed, have been found similarly dumped. Some of the victims were raped; their clothing has not been recovered.

Police said they were checking the black and gray Cadillac driven by Merrett, a clothing salesman, for fingerprints. The car contained women's clothing at the time of the arrest, said Figueroa

The latest strangling victim, 18-year-old Lauren Rae Wagner, was reported to have been driven off in a black and white or gray car, police said.

Meanwhile, beefed-up round-the-clock patrols have been ordered in areas where victims' bodies have been recovered. Some 30 extra officers were assigned to the Highland Park area, with 15 men working in areas normally covered by Kathleen Robinson was a pretty, 17-

Prison Siege Ends, Hostages Released

COXSACKIE, N.Y. (AP) - Conditions were reported calm at the Coxsackie Correctional Facility on Saturday after a 10-hour siege in which disgruntled inmates took two guards and a state prison official hostage.

Prison guards, accompanied by representatives of the state Corrections Commission, a prison watchdog agency, searched cells for contraband in what was described as a "normal proceedure" following a disturbance

About 40 inmates siezed corrections officers Robert Coppage and Lt. Robert Murphy and Kenneth Umia, a corrections specialist from department headquarters in Albany about 10 a.m. Friday.

Coppage was released after several hours, but Murphy and Umia were held by the prisoners until an 8 p.m. agreement was reached to allow inmates to meet with reporters and publicize their grievances.

the next day. She had been strangled.

Kristina Weckler, 20, was in her second year at the Art Center College of Design in Pasadena. She was last seen alive Nov. 19 in nearby Glendale. Her nude body was found in a hilly section of Highland Park the next day.

Sonja Johnson and Dolores Cepeda were schoolmates at St. Ignatius School in Highland Park. On Sunday, Nov. 13, they were together at a local shopping mall. When they didn't come home, their parents immediately notified police, saying neither girl was the runaway type. Sonja, 14, was found strangled to death in Elysian Park on Nov. 20. Near her nude body, 12-year-old Dolores was also found. She was also nude and had been strangled.

The latest victim was Lauren Rae Wagner, an 18-year-old business college stu-dent who apparently was abducted from her car only yards from the home where she lived with her parents. Lauren was described by her friends as a loving girl, always anxious to help other people. She had had a steady boyfriend for about a year, but broke off with him when she graduated from high school because she felt she was too young to be tied down.

She liked to cook and sew, and wanted to become a lega' secretary.

Over-Insulation Costly

Although it's not likely you'll reduce heat loss too much, there is a point at which the cost of adding insulation outweighs the benefits.

Accounting Proposal AUSTIN (AP) - Joe Christie, a candidate for U.S. senator, says that proposed new federal accounting procedures would make it harder for independent oil producers to borrow money. Christie said in a statement that the rules are under consideration by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

"Existing procedures let independent oil and gas producers write off production costs over the long term, but the new rules will force them to take write-offs immediately. Big oil prefers the immediate method, but to smaller producers it will mean a drastic drop in reported earnings and less credit at the bank,' Christie said.

Dr. Clarence Teske, a research asso-ciate in civil engineering at Texas Tech University, explained that after a certain amount of insulation is in place, the "advantages diminish very rapidly" when more is added.

"Anything is going to help," he said. "It's just getting to whether it's economical or not.

To determine how much insulation is enough, you must know the R value of the insulating material.

The Phantom coursed low through North Vietnam skies at 450 knots and a force of four Gs. Its pilot was trolling for enemy gun installations.

"The quickest way to find guns is to get them to shoot at you." according to Col. Richard Anthony Pierson, now deputy commander for maintenance at Reese Air Force Base. He spoke of 500 combat hours in the F-4 Phantom as a forward air controller in "high threat areas" where slower planes couldn't handle the job safely.

He varied altitude from low to 4,000 feet and continually changed the G loads in a meandering route to destroy the gunner's ability to track.

After a gunner gave away his location by shooting, Pierson marked the spot with a smoke bomb, then called in other F-4s with laser-guided weaponry to destroy the site.

Back at the home base, he climbed out of the jet with no thought of what would happen to it until he needed it again. He wouldn't do it that way again.

Today, the vague "something" he knew happened to the plane in between flights is his job at Reese, getting planes ready to fly and keeping them that way.

The magnitude of the operation involves 900 military and civilian personnel to keep 123 T-38 Talons and 91 T-37 Tweets in working order.

This means having a plane ready for everv training sortie scheduled by operations. Every flying day, they must ready 50 Talons and 40 Tweets to carry out 250 sorties.

"If a plane comes down broken, we get it operational," Pierson explained. If it isn't ready by its next scheduled flight noted on a board in the maintenance nerve center where all Reese jets and their individual data are kept - a ready spare aircraft is sent in for the duration of maintenance time.

your prowess." he described action that came automatically while on visual reconnassaince testing his own survivability at high speed. In the midst of doing what a person is trained to do, the senses are heightened to handle the situation. He found it that way flying a fighter or a desk.

Alternating with his flying duties over the years were others, including being aide-de-camp to the commanding general of the 86th Air Division in Germany. There are two types of maintenance at Reese for aircraft, that coming regularly after a certain number of flying hours and that happening when something goes wrong with a plane.

Reese maintenance stretches to wherever a Reese craft is on a mission - at northern bases enhancing co-pilot training for the Strategic Air Command or at any base where a Reese plane malfunctions on a crosscountry flight.

Other craft in the Air Force inventory have maintenance depots to which they are sent. At Reese, where keeping the student pilot flying is the aim of all at the base, the job is done at home.

The maintenance arm does everything from change a wing to tear down jet engines and put them back together in flying shape.

Judges To Select Top Participants In Preliminaries

Preliminary judging for the Miss Lubbock Scholarshop Pageant is scheduled for Sunday, Jan. 15, in the Hodges Community Center, according to pageant chairman Cecil Caldwell.

A panel of five judges will select top finalists from the participants after talent presentations and interviews at the preliminary competition.

The competition is open but contestants should be prepared to be available for appearance in Lubbock if ultimately named the pageant winner.

Also, contestants must be between the ages of 18 and 28 and must never have been married.

Entry blanks are available at the following locations: Mr. Toms's Coiffures, 2721 50th: Mr. Tom's Cutters, South Plains Mall; Maxine's Accent, Briercroft Center; and the Student Life Center in the administration building of Texas Tech University. The deadline for applications is

Toy Standards Emphasized

WASHINGTON (AP) - When shopping for toys this gift-giving season, the Commerce Department recommends that you look for labels that say the toy conforms with Voluntary Product Standard PS 72-76.

Many manufacturers have met the requirements and some toys now display labels indicating this. The standard was developed by the National Bureau of Standards to establish safety require-ments for toys intended for childen under

Half of the Reese jets are kept in mothballs on an 89-day rotation schedule designed to prolong craft life and reduce maintenance costs

Many of the extra planes came to Reese after other bases - Craig and Webb - were closed and Moody AFB's mission changed.

The maintenance end of the flying game is "the most fascinating job with so many facets" for Pierson who sees it as a great challenge met with the ability of 'all kinds of super individuals" in every field.

"I only wish it had come earlier in my career," he added. It would have helped his attitude more when turning over a plane after putting it through its paces in Vietnam and before that in a peacetime Korea assignment.

A maintenance program at Reese helps the attitude of Pierson's crew chiefs who are "the cutting edge of maintenance out there in the snow, sleet and rain launching and recovering craft."

Each month a crew chief is selected to take a flight in the craft he maintains, one chief for the T-37 and one for the T-38.

"It is a tremendous morale builder," Pierson said.

Another aid is the maintenance men sitting in on the ground work of the student pilot to see what he does besides "hop in the plane and fly off and have fun and bring it back" to the crew chief.

Learning what goes on in the "pilot side of the house" gives maintenance personnel more understanding of and pride in what the pilot does with the plane upstairs.

Crew chiefs of the month get their air time with the instructor pilots of the month

Getting the job done the best way possible is a natural for the Mount Vernon native who was a distinguished graduate in the aviation cadet program which began his Air Force career with wings won at Bryan AFB.

He came to Reese from the Air War College where he also was a distinguished graduate.

A fascination with the Air Force began during school days at the College of William and Mary when friends came back with tales of an exciting life. Pierson left college before graduation, but since has returned for the bachelor's degree and also for a master's.

Combat, he explained, is like any other activity.

"You train for it, are finely honed, know your capabilities, feel certain of

African Emperor To Pattern Ceremonies After Napoleon's

PARIS (UPI) - Artisans of France have recreated some of the splendor of Napoleon I for the coronation Monday (Dec. 5) of Emperor Bokassa I of the Central African Empire in the capital city of Bangui

Trailing 12 yards behind Bokassa will be a train of red velvet embroidered in golden thread with bees, symbol of Napoleon I.

An embroidered gold eagle posed over sunrays on the back of the train is identical to the emblem on the front of the robe. The train is sprinkled with embroidered golden stars and leaves and is edged from neck to hem with white ermine. The train will be carried by 12 page boys.

The empress's robe, designed by couturier Michel Tellin for the Guiselin embroiderers, is covered with 935,000 sequins.

'We also made 12 costumes for the emperor, seven for his children, half a dozen for the empress. Some 16,000 hours of work," said the Guiselin spokesman.

"Our house used to embroider gowns for Mary Pickford, Joan Crawford and Greta Garbo but this command for Emperor Bokassa is the biggest since the house made Napoleon's coronation robes.

Other Paris firms made 4,500 uniforms for members of the imperial guard who will accompany the emperor's cortege.

Lack Of Cooperation Hinders Effective Border Control

WASHINGTON (AP) - Law enforcement agencies responsible for halting the flow of illegal aliens and illicit drugs across the U.S.-Mexico border have failed to coordinate their activities. leading to costly overlapping, a congressional report said Saturday.

The government should consider various options for managing border operations ranging from the present structure to consolidation into a single agency, its report said.

The GAO also suggested additional congressional oversight and greater coordination with Mexican officials

Mexico, which shares a 2,000-mile open land border with the United States, is the principal source or transit country for illicit drugs and illegal aliens entering the United States, GAO said.

About 89 percent of the illegal aliens apprehended are Mexican, GAO said. The number of captured aliens has risen sharply from about 29,700 in fiscal 1960 to

In September 1976. U.S. officials estimated that during 1975. 89 percent or 5.2 metric tons of the heroin reaching the United States came from Mexican poppies. 75 percent or 2.700 tons of the marijuana came from Mexico, one-third of Colombian cocaine passed through Mexico and one-third of the dangerouos drugs entered from Mexico.

Foreign Fishing In U.S. Waters Cut Back By Boundary Law

WASHINGTON (AP) - The number of foreign fishing vessels plying U.S. coastal waters has been reduced by nearly twothirds since the United States placed severe restrictions on their operations within 200 miles of this country.

But domestic fishermen, many of whom rejoiced over the restrictions that took effect last March 1, are finding the 200-mile-limit also can restrict their freedom to make a living from the sea.

Nevertheless, says Robert Schoning, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's top fisheries official, "I think it's gone well. I think we are leading the entire world in establishing a rational fishery.

The 200-mile-limit extended the government's jurisdiction over fishing off America's coastlines from 12 miles to 200 miles. Under the new rules, foreign vessels may still seek catches inside the 200-mile territory, but only with permits specifying locations, times and species of fish they may catch.

The law establishing the 200-mile-limit was born of the belief that fish stocks were being depleted by the fishing expe-ditions of U.S. and foreign vessels. It called for establishment of management plans to permit depleted species to re-build populations to provide the "opti-mum yield."

Foreign nations have expressed displeasure at the restrictions placed on their fishermen

"A lot of foreigners are upset thet we're reducing the catch. They think we're being too conservative," Schoning savs

In 1975, he adds, about 2,700 foreign fishing and support vessels operated within the 200-mile limit. This year, he says, the number of foreign fishing and processing ships has been reduced to about 900

The problem is particularly acute for major fishing nations such as Japan and the Soviet Union.

The 200-mile limit isn't the only restriction placed on foreign fishermen. They also are permitted to take only 2.1 million metric tons of fish this year. The to-

The salmon trollers objected to restrictions placed on them, as did New England fishermen when the season was closed for Atlantic groundfish because harvest quotas had been reached.

Proposed Guidelines Prompt Heavy Comment From Public

More than 10.000 "written communiques" from citizens concerned about proposed federal guidelines they fear could close hospitals in the United States, have prompted authorities to postpone the deadline for public comment on those proposals, a Health, Education and Welfare spokesman said.

Dr. C. Ferrill Hamilton, an HEW chief of the health planning and facilities branch stationed in Dallas, said the proposed guidelines contain no intent to close hospitals. But he said he empathizes with local concern that hospitals might be closed, should the proposals be adopt-

The proposals attempt to determine area "need" for certain health services by specifying the numbers and types of the services given by a hospital.

The proposals also specify hospital occupancy rates, number of patient days per year and the number of hospital beds available for every 1,000 persons

The proposals, printed in the Sept. 23, Federal Register, state there should be "less than four non-federal beds" for every 1,000 persons in a health systems area: that such hospitals should have an average annual occupancy rate of 80 per cent-"except under extraordinary circumstances;" that obstetrical units in he admitted that-judging from mail re-population centers of 100,000 persons or ceived by HEW-"provisions about rural cumstances;" that obstetrical units in nually. The guidelines set similar numerical standards pertaining to pediatric units and "neonatal care beds" and to the number of heart surgeries and tests performed

There are, however, exceptions included in the proposals. In fact, exceptions pertaining to rural areas could be especially significant to South Plains hospi-

For example, the Federal Register notes that one exception to to the 4-bedsper-thousand rule states that in "rural areas in which a majority of the residents would otherwise be more than 45 minutes automobile travel time from a hospital, a bed-population ratio of greater than 4.0 per 1,000 persons may be justified."

But the guidelines-while mentioning acceptable conditions under which a hospital might deserve exemptions to the rules-do not assure that such exemptions will be granted.

Daniel I. Zwick, assistant administrator for planning, evaluation and legislation with HEW's Health Resources Administration, told the Avalanche-Journal that "there's nothing (in the proposals) that are going to close down a hospital," but more should perform 2,000 deliveries an- areas have not been effectively communicated.

> And in news wire reports from Washington, HEW secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. is quoted as stating that HEW will "clarify and broaden the exceptions" for rural health facilities before the proposals are adopted.

> "I do not," Califano reportedly told a news conference last week, "and the federal government does not, have the authority to close hospitals."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe apparently con-curred with the more vocal local opposition to the proposals, and in a letter to President Carter stated local and state agencies and groups were "quite capable of determining the health care needs of the citizens of this state without unnecessary federal meddling and interference.

Later in his letter, Briscoe agreed that we all share the same concerns about cost containment and developing a health care delivery system that meets the local health care needs of our people. These guidelines, however, go too far in failing to articulate exceptions and in placing too much importance on the Washington Bureaucrats' as opposed to the citizens' planning efforts.

"Arbitrary formulas that in essence maintain that the health care needs of the citizens of Wichita, Kan.; San Francisco, Calif .; Harlingen, Tex.; New York, N.Y.; and Anchorage, Alaska, are the same, are foolish and unfounded in fact or logic," Briscoe wrote.

Briscoe went on to claim that the "federal government itself has been responsible to a large degree for the tremendous increase in the cost of health care. This is evidenced by the fact that federal facilities are not covered by these 'National Guidelines.

Judge Warns Fischer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) - A municipal court judge says he will nullify his agreement to dismiss battery and trespassing charges against Bobby Fischer if the chess master doesn't appear at a South Pasadena police station for booking by Tuesday.

'He's got less than a week, and then I will just pull out all the stops," Judge Mortimer Franciscus said Friday. "We'll issue new warrants for his arrest and refund court costs he's paid.'

Fischer is out of the country on a chess tour and could not be reached for comment

According to an out-of-court settlement, Fischer, 32, was to appear for booking and pay $250 in court costs in return for having criminal charges against him dropped. The booking is only a formality.

A warrant for Fischer's arrest was issued Oct. 28 on a complaint by Holly Ruiz, 37, of South Pasadena.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977-5-C McGovern, Dole Ask Grain Deal Investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two senior farm belt senators have asked for a hear-ing early next year into the latest surge of U.S. grain purchases by the Soviet Union. Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) said the Russian purchases are "strongly rem-iniscent of 1972," when it bought huge quantities of American wheat at bargain prices. McGovern's request for a hearing into the Soviet grain buying was made this week in a letter to Sen. Herman Talmadge (D-Ga.) chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committée, an aide said Fri-

Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.) made a similar request for a hearing on Nov. 5 after it was disclosed the Agriculture Department and the CIA had overestimated the 1977 grain harvest by 10 percent. The two agencies had estimated grain.

output at 215 metric tons, slightly more that Moscow's goal until Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev announced on Nov. 2 that production would be 194 million

Decorative and

Dole said the Senate should find out more about the Agriculture Department's ability to accurately predict foreign crop production, a factor which has an important bearing on U.S. grain exports and prices farmers receive.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union has been buying U.S. wheat and corn at a steppedup pace to help make up for the harvest shortfall. Currently the Soviets have bought about 5.5 million tons of wheat and corn for delivery in 1977-78, the second year of an agreement committing them to buy a minimum of six million tons annually for five years.

In the first year of the agreement, which ended Sept. 30, the Soviet Union bought about the minimum of wheat and

The United States has given Russia permission to buy up to 15 million tons of wheat and corn this year whithout further negotiations and department officials say that the full amount probably will be bought.

Further, they say much more than that could be sold to the Soviet Union without triggering higher American food prices, because U.S. grain supplies are the larg-est since the 1960s.

McGovern told Talmadge past experi-ence indicates there is "little reason to doubt" that the Soviets had secretly arranged with private grain companies or their intermediaries for the grain before Brezhnev's harvest announce "The chain of events is strongly remi-niscent of 1972, when the Russians took advantage of then-current low grain prices at the expense of U.S. producers and consumers," McGovern said. Five years ago, the Soviets secretly bought huge quantities of U.S. grain, including about 12 million tons of wheat or approximately one-fourth of the U.S. harvest that year at prices well below those that developed after the deals became public. McGovern said the Soviets "largely ignore" agreements with the United States made since 1972 that call for an exchange of information on crops and grain re-

"This, coupled with the secret agree-ments between the Soviets and our pri-vate grain traders, continues to spell bad news, particularly for the U.S. wheat growers who continue to be amongst the hardest hit," McGovern said. In other agricultural news:

Preliminary Agriculture Depart-figures show, as expected, retail prices edged higher again last beef The figures, published Friday, sh that on the average consumers paid slightly more than $1.42 a pound for beef in November. That price is based on all cuts of beef sold in stores and is used pri-marily to show how it is divided among producers and middlemen. In October, the all-cut beef price was

$1.411/2 cents a pound, meaning that the November price was up seven-tenths of one cent. Department officients have been premaining synagogue, suffering from a dwindling Jewish population and aging membership, came alive briefly Saturday as members turned out to greet the first Israeli Jew to attend Sabbath services in many years.

Tears rolled down the wrinkled cheeks of Rose Sachs as she embraced Tamar Golan, the Paris correspondent for the Israeli newspaper Maariv.

Mrs. Golan, who holds both British and Israeli citizenship, came to Cairo to cover the meeting called by President Anwar Sadat to prepare for a Mideast peace conference. Israel has announced it is sending a delegation to the meeting, although none of the Arab nations are.

A dozen elderly Jews clustered around Mrs. Golan, anxious to talk to the Haifaborn Israeli.

Thirty years ago there were nearly 100,-000 Jews in Cairo and 15 synagogues. But

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) - Cairo's last re- now there are only about 200 Jews and only 14 or 15 usually attend services at the 70-year-old synagogue. "I am the last of my family," said Rose Klein Belahovsky, one of 16 Jews at the Saturday services. "We were a large family. My mother came from Russia, my father from Romania. There were many aunts, uncles, cousins. When my husband and I were married, 85 relatives came to my parents' house.

Texas Taxpayers Lucky

By BILL KIDD A-J Austin Bureau AUSTIN — "Taxes." What a singularly ugly word. But so necessary to the opera-tion of government. Texans have been more fortunate than denizens of other regions in that regard, since Texas ranks 39th in per capita state and local taxes.

But how long can that situation last? Idenfinitely, Gov. Dolph Briscoe says - he's seized on the theme of "no new taxes" (and who can be against that?) as the base of his political efforts.

On that issue, he's not likely to get any disagreement. Indeed, his major primary opponment, Atty. Gen. John Hill, also has come out publicly that he, too, sees no need for any new taxes.

And Comptroller Bob Bullock, another no-new-taxes man, should have been able to dance with delight after signing the

1977 annual financial report for the State - since he could write that the fiscal year ending Aug. 31 "was, again, a record year" for revenu

However, as Bullock also noted, it was also a record year for expenditures. Texas ended up the yetr "with money in the bank and cattle out west," as folks used to say (when cattle prices were higher). Revenues and an opening cash balance amounting eo $9 billion allowed expenditures of $7.02 billion - leaving $1.98 billion on hand, $336,000,000 more than the cash balance at the beginning of the fiscal

That would appear to indicate that when lawmakers return in 1979, they'll find another surplus on hand. But where are the surpluses of yester-year? Eaten up by those economic preda-tors known as inflation and increased demand While the percentage of increase in the state's budget has slowed in recent years, the total dollar amount has gone up.

State spending rose 10.1 per cent for fiscal 1974 compared to the year before - amounting to $4,019,400,000 in spending. The next year, the increase was 21.5 per cent - for a total $5,377,300,000.

For fiscal 1976, the increase was 15.4 per cent - and the total was $6,203,500,-000

And for the last fiscal year, the increase was 6.5 per cent - with a total $6,606,-000.000.

With continuing inflation, continu population growth, and continuing demand for more services, the budget isn't likely to decrease in the years ahead. Thus far, Texas' healthy economy and increased prices for oil and gas have allowed the general sales tax (the biggest money raiser for the state) and mineral severance taxes to grow - and to cover the increasing expenditures. But the House Study Group, made up of House members who have helped decide spending, warns that some future members will eventually have to decide on new taxes - or increasing some old

None of that is likely to happen soon since few folks are anxious to be remem-bered as sponsors of tax legislation . . . unless it lowers or removes or reforms some tax.

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977-D-19 Hidden Chair Factory Flourishes In Ozarks

BEN'S BRANCH, Ark. (AP) - Everyone knows that a factory will surely fail if it is not located near the Interstate, or at least on the banks of a great waterway.

Ben's Branch is hardly a great waterway. Nor is Big Creek, which you have to ford twice to get to Ben's Branch, since Big Creek flows right across the road leading here. The road is hardly the Interstate, either, as it is made of unmistakable dirt.

Even so, the factory operated here by Charles Christian and his brother-in-law, Jack McCutcheon, flourishes. way behind on orders now.

Charles Christian and Jack McCutcheon make chairs.

"The way they make chairs is as old as the hills, the Ozark hills that surround them, isolate them, comfort and inspire them, and, back in pioneer times, gave birth to their vanishing craft.

They use no nails or screws or even glue to hold their chairs together, yet they seem as durable as the hills, too. Hundreds of chairs made by Jim Nichols, Charles Christian's father-in-law, are still in daily use in homes throughout the Ozarks, and so are some of the chairs made by Jim Nichols' father.

Thirty-five states have ratified the ERA, leaving it three states short of the

tion. The amendment needs to be ratified by March of 1979, but that time period can be extended by the Congress. Three

The Christians and McCutcheons repre-sent the entire population of Ben's Branch. At one time the community was more populous, with its own post office. The deserted post office became Charles's shop when he went into the chair business full-time 15 years ago; now he has to drive 10 miles on that rut-ted dirt road to the hamlet of Mount Ju-dea (pronounced Mount Judy, locally) to mail his chairs to customers too far away, or too lacking in nerve, to drive to Ben's Branch to get them. ponents among both married and single women and among women with children and those without any. Abortion on demand drew widespread support.

Among the younger age groups, 62 per-cent of those 18-24 supported abortion, compared to 34 percent opposed. Oppostion to abortion was stronger among those over 50 years old, but even among that group the split was smaller than the error margin.

Among every religious group in the poll, abortion found greater support than But, again, the error margin was larger than the difference, meaning that one can only say opinions are divided among

With this poll, as with every sample survey, the results can vary from the actual views of all Americans simply because of chance variations in the sample. For a poll of 1,604 adults, it can be said with 95 percent confidence that interviews with all Americans would vary no more than three percentage points up or down from the results of the AP-NBC News poll.

WASHINGTON (AP) - A majority of Americans agree with positions taken by the recent national women's conference in favor of the Equal Rights Amendment and abortion on demand, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

The poll also found an overwhelming 92 percent of the 1,604 adults interviewed agreed with another position taken at the Houston convention - women doing the same work as men should be paid equal

Both the ERA and abortion got majority support from both men and women. Opposition tended to come from older people, Catholics and more conservative Americans, the telephone interviews Tuesday and Wednesday found.

Fifty-three percent of the respondents said they favored passage of the ERA, which would write into the U.S. Constitution a prohibition against sexual discrimination. Thirty-seven percent said they opposed the amendment, with 10 percent unsure.

On abortion, an issue that has tied up congressional action on a major appropriations bill for months, 53 percent agreed with the statement that "Every woman who wants an abortion should be able to have one."

Opposition to abortion on demand was expressed by 43 percent, with the rest saying they were unsure.

On the issue of non-discrimination in wages, only six percent of those interviewed said they oppose equal pay for equal work - versus 92 percent in favor of equal treatment. Two percent said they were not certain.

The ERA drew wide poll, with men slightly more positive than women. Fifty-six percent of the men favored passage, while 50 percent of the women backed the amendment. In all but one age group, ERA backers had the edge. For example, those 18 to 24 favored the ERA 74 percent to 23 percent. In the over-65 group, ERA was opposed 48 to 42. However, because the error margin for that subgroup is larger than the six-point gap, this finding can best be described as a close-to-even split.

Missouri Youths Burned

'Beyond Recognition'

JOPLIN, Mo. (AP) - Two teen-agers were killed early Saturday when a fire swept through an enclosed plywood tree house where they apparently had spent the night, police said.

The victims were identified through dental records as David Lee Kearney and Marilyn Day, both 15. Their bodies were burned beyond recognition, according to Sgt. Dave McCracken.

McCracken said neighbors reported the teen-agers had used a candle to light the tree house, and police speculated it may have tipped over.

Firemen who answered an alarm at 6:20 a.m. said by the time they arrived, the tree house was already destroyed.

cans. She said the SALT agreement limits U.S. use of cruise missiles but not Soviet use of "Backfire" bombers. The United States also cannot give cruise missile technology to its allies under the agreement, she said.

The former child star, who was also protocol chief in Washington and a United Nations delegate, said Cubans are intervening in Africa. "playing the role of socialist saviors in one bloody mess after the other.

"I stand with those who seek normalization of our relations with Cuba," she said, "but only in a degree which permits us to remain faithful to our moral principles and intrinsic international obligations."

Guilt Overtakes Gunman

MILWAUKEE (AP) - A man wearing a ski mask and brandishing a handgun walked into the Tosa Pharmacy in suburban Wauwatosa and demanded that Edward Stein hand over a bottle of prescription sleeping pills.

Stein, 56, took the bottle from a shelf and handed it over. The gunman told Stein Friday night that he wanted the pills for his wife. But as he turned to leave he pulled two $1 bills from a coat pocket and tossed them on the counter. "Apparently he felt guilty," a police spokesman said.

Burns Called 'Loser'

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) - Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., says the monetary policies of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns have made him "a loser" and he should resign. Burns' policies, Proxmire said, have created a serious inflation problem in the United States and the highest prime interest rate in the nation's history. But he said Burns is "a fine man" and "an excellent economist."

Proxmire, speaking at a fund-raising dinner for Rep. Alvin Baldus, D-Wis., said Friday that the nation's unemploy-BURNS ment is "a very painful, unfortunate and sad situation." The latest figures placed the unemployment level at 6.9 percent of the labor force.

A tax cut would be one means of easing the problem, Proxmire said. He said lowering taxes would promote increased spending by consumers rather than the government. He said the tax cut should be at least $25 million.

Ford Calls War Act 'Mistake'

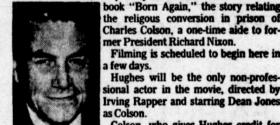

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The enactment by Congress in 1974 of the War Powers Act was a "serious mistake that will come back to haunt us," former President Gerald R. Ford

Besides being an unconstitutional invasion of presidential powers, the act is impractical and doesn't work, Ford told an international law class at the University of Southern California on Friday.

He said that when members of Congress had to be informed under the act's provisions of the use of U.S. troops to evacuate Americans and others from Danang, Vietnam, some of the lawmakers were in hard-to-reach places such as Mexico, Greece and China because of a holiday recess.

During another crisis requiring notification, Ford recalled, one senator's press aide refused to give the senator's unlisted phone number to the White House. In another case, a

WASHINGTON (AP) - Harold Hughes, former Iowa governor and senator, will portray himself in a film based on the

the religous conversion in prison of Charles Colson, a one-time aide to former President Richard Nixon. Filming is scheduled to begin here in a few days. Hughes will be the only non-profes-

Colson, who gives Hughes credit for HUGHES his own awakening to Christianity, helped convince the former three-term governor and one-term senator to take on the role. Hughes, 55, now living in Easton, Md., devotes much of his time to lay religious work and is writing his autobiography.

Center Names New President

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) - The Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions has elected the chancellor of the University of Denver as its new president.

The center's board of directors Friday named Maurice B Mitchell to succeed the late Robert M. Hutchins, founder of ; the scholarly institution. Mitchell, who was in Santa Barbara as his appointment was confirmed, was expected to assume." his new post after Jan. 1.

A former president of Encyclopedia Britannica, Mitchell worked closely with Hutchins in setting up joint research projects between the encyclopedia firm and the center when it first opened in 1959.

A former newspaper reporter and radio broadcaster, Mitchell has also served as chairman of the Denver branch of the Federal Reserve Bank, trustee of the Committee on Economic Development and director of the Foreign Policy Association. He was named chancellor of the University of Denver in 1967.

Guitar Replica Planned

NASHVILLE, Tenn.(AP) - Country music singer Webb Pierce says he'll build a $1 million replica here of his famous guitar-shaped swimming pool after officials in his home town banned tour buses from stopping to see the real thing. The replica will be built on Nash-ville's Music Row across from the Country Music Hall of Fame.

The ornate pool has long been a tour-ist attraction at Pierce's suburban Oak Hill home. But Oak Hill officials obtained a court order banning tour buses

The state's original 45-foot white spruce, set up with holi-day pomp and publicity in the Empire State Plans across from the Capitol, was given the ax Friday on grounds it was scraggly and undeniably lopsided. Wilson Not Sure Of Standing

By CARTER CROMWELL Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Texas A&M offensive coordinator Tom Wilson, thought by many to be the No. 1 candidate to replace Steve Sloan as head football coach at Texas Tech, told the Avalanche-Journal Saturday evening that he's not certain of his standing in the matter.

"I really can't say exactly what the situation is," he said. "I just don't know anything. As far as I know, no decision has been made."

Tech athletic director J T King said Friday that a decision will probably be made in "three or four days," which would mean Monday or Tuesday,

Wilson, a former all-conference quarterback and assistant coach at Tech. said the A&M staff members will have a recruiting meeting today and fan out to their respective recruiting areas Monday. Wilson's area is the portion of West Texas from Midland-Odessa up through the Panhandle.

"I'm definitely interested in the job," he said. "It would be ridiculous if I wasn't. Tech is a great university with a great football program. "I've always wanted to come back there. I guess every coach has a desire to become head coach at his alma mater.'

The 33-year-old Wilson and Tech offensive coordinator Rex Dockery are considered by many to be the top contenders for the post, vacated when Sloan resigned Thursday to accept a similar position at Mississippi. The names of Baylor head coach Grant Teaff, former Tech aide Richard Bell-now at South Carolina-and Raider secondary coach Gary Wyant have also surfaced in regard to the job, but Wilson and Dockery appear to be the frontrunners in the race.

Teaff withdrew his name from consideration Friday, and Bell has never been thought to be a serious challenger for the position. Teaff, Wilson and Bell were all in the race for the Tech job in 1974 when Jim Carlen left for South Carolina, but Sloan was the eventual choice.

Sources have indicated that Tech may not go "outside" for a new coach this time. The previous two coaches, Carlen and Sloan, came from West Virginia and Vanderbilt, respectively. Carlen was here five seasons and Sloan three.

What is certain is that Tech is looking for a coach that is likely to remain at the school for a good length of time and not use the job simply as a stepping stone

Meanwhile, the situations of Sloan's assistants at Tech are still uncertain. Four-Mike Pope, Romeo Crennel, John Cropp and Tommy Limbaugh went to Mississippi with Sloan, but, reportedly, have not decided to stay or look elsewhere.

Sloan said in his first news conference at Mississippi Friday that all four "have a decision to make, but they're interested enough to come here and help recruit."

Bob Patterson, Sloan's defensive line coach and administrative assistant at Tech, is going to Mississippi and investigate the situation. Dockery is expected to go to Mississippi if he doesn't get the Tech job.

DALLAS (AP) - All-Americans Earl Campbell and Brad Shearer led a stampede of 13 University of Texas players on the Associated Press All-Southwest Conference team and new Longhorn Coach Fred Akers landed the coveted Coach of the Year laurels.

In balloting by the SWC coaches, champion Texas placed seven players on the first team and five on the second place team while runner-up Arkansas had nine players on the first two teams.

Texas Tech placed offensive tackle Dan Irons, defensive end Richard Arledge, linebacker Mike Mock and cornerback Eric Felton on the first team. Irons was an all-league choice last season, while Mock and Arledge received recognition on other listings

Texas, the No. 1 ranked team in the country going into the Cotton Bowl against Notre Dame Jan. 2, swept player of the year honors and also had the punting specialist.

Campbell, the most prolific rusher in SWC history, and Shearer, a devastating tackle and catalyst of the Longhorns' rugged defense, were unanimous choices as the offensive and defensive players, respectively. Russell Erxleben was the punter.

Akers, who replaced Darrell Royal, was on every ballot as coach of the year. except his own.

Parks Helps Tech

By DON HENRY Executive Sports Editor If every member of the Falcon basketball team is later assigned to the Air Defence Command, it'll be no wonder. And, if Raider Tommy Parks ever faces any military duty, it'll be no wonder if he zooms up the leadership ladder. With Parks as the catalyst, Texas Tech jumped to a lead midway of the first half and then staved off the hustling, physical, defensive-minded Air Force Academy Falcons 70-63 Saturday night. The win left the Raiders unbeaten through four games this season-this week, too-and the visitors from the mountains are now 1-1. Despite leading practically the entire distance, it was a chore, as the Falcons overcame a poor shooting first half and mounted a second-half surge and never let up on the pressure. And inside, where the traffic was heavy. . .

'Well," said AFA coach Hank Egan, "we're not going to back off."

Defense is where the Air Force teams have established their reputation, and defense was the key factor for them Saturday night. For Tech, after Parks fouled out late in the game, it was a case of trying to generate some offense and keep the ball moving. That the Raiders were able to do for the 7-point verdict.

It was not so much a game of field shooting as free-shooting, and in that category, the Raiders had an edge-the winning edge.

Officials whistled a total of 51 fouls in the game-26 of them against the Air Force. And, when Tech was at the line, it hit 22 of 34; the Falcons made only 13 of 27. The visitors actually had one more field goal. They had the edge 48-43 on the backboards, too.

"It was a helluva a ball game," said Egan. "It's too bad a couple of people got in the way.

Egan had his troubles with the refs, as he was whistled for a technical in the first half. And it was during one of Tech's two first-half spurts that Egan ran afoul -literally-of the officials.

Tech held a 26-19 lead with 21/2 minutes to play in the half when Parks stole from guard Steve Saleck and drove.

Parks drew a foul and hit both. Then, the Raiders started a parade to the line. First freshman Ralph McPherson stepped up, missed, but Tech rebounded, and Mike Edwards drew a foul. This brought Egan up, and official Dennis Bishop signalled a technical. Edwards hit two shots, Parks hit a pair -a bench technical is worth two shots.

In all, 15 free shots went toward the goal in the final 2:25 of the half. And Tech got 11 of them.

It was earlier, however, when Tech took over. From a 12-all deadlock, the Raiders went searching for loose baskethalls

After Tim Harris hit for the Air Force, Mike Russell turned a power layup into a 3-point play. Parks then 5 straight points -off a layup following a steal, another layup off a steal by Kent Williams, and a free shot.

Parks then stole and fed Thad Sanders who hit a 10-foot bank shot, and Tech was in front 22-14.

In the last half, Parks drew his fourth foul with 10:34 left and Tech leading 50-37. The Raiders were able to maintain that 13-point pad until the junior college transfer returned with 5:33. He lasted less than a minute, however, and the Raiders had to go without either floor guard—Geoff Huston being in street clothes with a badly sprained ankle. They were able to hold off the Falcons, however, with free shots and movement

The visitors stayed in the game off the shooting of Bob Djokovich's 16 points, 15 points from Tom Schneeberger and the 13-point, 17-rebound effort of 6-7 Randy Gricius. The Air Force's inside game was the strongest.

The Falcons' rebounding edge con-cerned Raider coach Gerald Myers. "We have to improve in that area.

"I'm sure our guys were showing a lit-tle effect of the week (four games since Monday). And when we lost Parks, we lost our leadership. We just kinda ran out of gas, and Air Force has a good club. They're big inside and strong

Russell and Parks hit 20 each for Tech, Williams and Edwards getting 10 each. Tech will be off until next Thursday

Local Man Finds Record Marlin Off Hawaii Coast

By TED J. SIMON

Avalanche-Journal Outdoor Editor Robert H. Weems caught a fish, and the fish now hangs on a wall of his home. That practice isn't unusual for a proud angler. But, this fish takes up one complete wall.

When Weems found time to take a vacation trip to Hawaii, the Lubbock farmer decided to try some deep-sea fishing. 'I'd been there one other time," said Weems, "and I fished for about three days, but didn't get a bite.

Still, he remembered the thrill of bringing in a sailfish off the coast of Acapulco back in 1951. "It was the prettiest fish I'd ever seen." recalled Weems.

There were other fishing trips after the sailfish adventure, but nothing really exciting. So this year's vacation offered another opportunity "to catch a big one."

Weems and three other stateside anglers chartered a boat with a crew of two and headed for the deep water off the coast of Kailua-Kona, Hawaii.

As the morning sun rose higher and the minutes became hours, the anglers figured their half-day charter was a lost cause. No one was surprised when the boat's skipper decided to change course and head for port.

A moment later one of Weems' fishing companions had a strike. As the fish leaped above the water, its color and dorsal fin showed it to be a striped marlin. After the fish was hauled aboard, it tipped the scales at 170 pounds.

With the striped marlin safely tied down, artificial bait was thrown back into the water and some of the 80-pound test line stretched out. Immediately there was action. A fish streaked along the surface toward the lure. "It looked like a battleship going across there when it took the bait." recalled the Lubbock resident. The line jerked taut -the battle had begun.

The fish started away from the boat and went for the ocean's bottom. "He'd get down so deep, you couldn't move him." recalled Weems. "Sometimes I thought I had a dead bull on the line by the feel of the weight.

A quarter of a mile away, there was an explosion of water as the fish leaped above the surface. There was a flash of blue and silver.

"It's a blue marlin." said the skipper. Then he took a closer look and added, He's a big one.

Three times. Weems managed to get the marlin close to the boat, but three times the fish gathered new strength to swim away, taking most of the line with

Minutes ticked by and somebody noted that the fight had been going for an hour. The skipper kept his eye on the line and the fish so he could maneuver his boat accordingly. The crew offered encouragement and kept an eye on the Lubbockite. "I think they thought I was going to pass out." explained Weems, "I guess some people do. I was getting pretty tired. but I wasn't about to give up on him An hour and 15 minutes after the initial strike, the fish tired and was brought alongside the boat. "At that moment," Weems reminisced. "if he'd taken off one more time. I don't know if I'd ever got him or not.

One of the fishermen looked at the fish bumping the side of the boat. "He looks like a whale.

The skipper surmised that Weems had a record-size marlin for that area of Hawaiian waters as a line was thrown around the fish.

Too big to be hauled onto the boat, the marlin was towed to the Kailua-Kona port. Reporters from all media gathered at the dock to appraise the big fish and interview the Lubbock angler.

Weighing 782 pounds with a girth of 67 inches, the blue marlin measured 13 feet 4 inches in length. It was a record size for

Drought Affects Waterfowl

CANYON (Special)-Panhandle water fowl are finding playa lakes fast becom ing mud holes, as the area continues to have dry weather.

"Many of the ducks that usually winter in the Panhandle are moving on south, or are concentrating on dwindling playa lakes where hunting pressure is increasing," reported biologist Max Traweek.

Normally, the Panhandle records from one to two million ducks, but the lakes that had water in August are drying up, and weather forecasts do not predict any favorable forecast for substantial rains to help the situation," he added.

One lake in Castro County was estimated to have from 30,000 to 75,000 ducks stretching from shore to shore. Hunters should be especially careful when hunting where large concentrations of waterfowl are crowded, as a misplaced shot could put the hunter's take of ducks well over the daily limit.

Goose populations are near normal as the short-grass prairie geese utilize the feeding areas of the Panhandle. These subspecies of Canadian geese do not winter any farther south in Texas, and normally will not go to the Gulf Coast, even if there is little water in the Panhandle. The larger reservoirs such as Meredith. Greenbelt and Mackenzie will show gains in the overall waterfowl population, as more playa lakes become dry this winter. Pheasant Hunting Season A

By J.D. PEER Parks & Wildlife Dept.

The ring-necked pheasant population has shown another increase in the Panhandle, according to Parks & Wildlife Department figures compiled during early fall census counts.

"Survey lines are run every year along designated roads throughout the Panhandle and South Plains, and a 6.4 percent increase was tabulated, which is about normal," said David Dvorak, project vildlife biologist.

"Last year, a 58 percent increase set the record for hatches and numbers of pheasant counted on our survey lines, but this will not happen every year," Dvorak said.

Another indication of a stable producing pheasant population is the ratio of one male pheasant to every female pheasant. This ratio will drop during the son as pheasant cocks are harveste by hunters leaving the desired ratio of one male bird to three or four females during next spring's nesting season. The Panhandle pheasant season is next Saturday through Dec. 25, with a daily bag limit of two cock birds and a posses sion limit of four. The Panhandle regulatory counties open for hunting are Armstrong, Bailey,

One county (Terry) of the Permian Basin regulatory district will have a nine-day season, Saturday through Dec. 18. Terry will be open to this limited hunt with the same daily and possession limits as the Panhandle, although the pheasant popu-lation is very small, compared to some northern counties.

Indications show a carrying capacity that will not increase unless landowners furnish more habitat suitable for phes ant. The short season should interest in downers in planting more grain and cov-er, even though most landowners will not allow any hunting this season.

Sportsmen are reminded to leave the head and feet attached to the pheasant carcass until the bird is delivered to its fi-nal destination. This allows law enforce-ment officers to inspect birds and insure that they have been legally bagged.

Most successful hunters use dogs to find the birds or to retrieve the wounded. Hunters familiar with ringnecks know that the bird can run all day as he eludes the sportsman

Los Angeles has a two-game margin in the West and can clinch a fifth consecutive division crown by beating Oakland, provided Atlanta loses. On the other hand, a Raider victory against LA, combined with an Atlanta victory over New England and a Baltimore victoiry over Miami Monday night would clinch the AFC wild card slot for Oakland.

The Cowboys, 9-2, need one victory in their three remaining National Football League contests to sew up the East division championship and with it the home field advantage to start the NFL playoffs later this month. By JANE CONDON Special Projects Editor, womenSports Magazine

There in the Bahamas, among the cloudy-white pina coladas, bright blue skies and string bikinis, is a running camp. The camp, at Freeport, Grand Bahama Island, is neither an Olympic runners' camp nor a yogi's ashram. It is an unusual physical and mental training experience led by Michael Spino, director of the Esalen Sports Center in Big Sur, Calif. In the camp, Spino, a 32-year-old middle distance and marathon runner, uses a unique mind-body approach based on his 15 years of running experience and his four years at Esalen.

It's 9 a.m., the first morning in camp. A gawky group of 15 men and five women follow Spino from the lobby of the Princess Towers Hotel to a grassy field sprinkled with palm trees and withered coconuts.

Although Spino has coached Olympian Lee Evans, world record holder for the 400-meter dash, he says he'd "rather reconstruct a '64 Chevy than fine tune a racing Porsche." Spino's primary goal is "to train millions of people to run one mile rather than a selected few to run marathons."

Spino has a lot of Chevy material to work with in his group of 20, including a novelist in his first pair of running shoes, a housewife in bermudas and an overweight travel writer.

WHILE THE CHEVY-like people nervously ask, "How far do you run?" the Porsches look ready to hum over miles of the lush green terrain. Everyone is tense and ready to run. Instead, Spino focuses their energy on relaxing and breathing

The two-hour morning and afternoon sessions combine running over golf greens and around the track used by the TV Superstars with meditation under paim trees and on the beach.

Spino directs the group, "Close your eyes. . . Breathe into your abdomen. . . Exhale through your fingertips. . . Breathe into your chest. . . Exhale. . . Breathe into your head. . . Exhale. . . Keep your eyes almost closed—soft eyes.

Non-shuffle and think of a his hand in your back pushing you along." Twenty runners shuffle-landing on the next, using 5.15 percent effort-up the field. As the group walks back, a New Jersey soccer player keeps notging his head, yes, yes. A New York actress calls the shuffle "effortless motion. The image works for them.

For the second 100-yard interval, Spino tells the group to visualize a sail until they reach the first palm tree, and to then let out a spinnaker as they continue running. Obligingly, a smiling Westchester housewife speeds up as she passes the palm tree and lets out her imaginary spinnaker.

For the third 100-yard interval, he tells the runners to invent their own visualization. The novelist smiles as he runs along with 20 pounds of extra weight. "I was the perfect runner," he announces afterwards.

But a 34-year-old New York businesswoman is quite distressed. "I tried to get the spinnaker out of the bag again," she complains, "and I still couldn't."

TO DETERMINE WHICH of the six levels is appropriate for each runner, Spino has the fast and the slow running together during the first half of the pro-gram. So an out-of-shape man from Philadelphia shuffles alongside a California boy who averages 20 miles a week.

During the second half of the workshop, the runners are grouped and given different interval distances to run.

The California boy runs good swing (60-80 percent effort) with a New York actress, a New Jersey soccer player, and an Indiana high school basketball player. The novelist runs fresh swing (20-40 percent effort) with a Chicago nurse, a Los Angeles publisher and a New York businesswoman. Spino's mental techniques, a synthesis of Zen, yoga and Esalen philosophy.

just don't work all the time for everybody. But he is the first to admit it. He recalls the time meditation backfired on him. "I felt so spacey after meditating for a week before the 1977 New York Marathon that

Each participant gets a copy of his book, "Running Home: The Body/Mind Family Fitness Book," which outlines a six-week shortcut to fitness.

Cost for camp instruction, accomodations and three meals a day at the hotel is $269. Runners have use of the tennis courts and pool, and play a lot of lunchtime water volleyball

ODESSA - There's usually enough time in those gangster movies for the hero to whip out his sixshooter and gun down the villains before THE END sign shows up on the screen

But the script didn't work out that way on this sunny Saturday for Monterey gunslinger Ron Reeves. It all ended about a minute too soon in the Permian Basin shootout. And so the Plainsmen leader trotted into the sunset with coaches and players from Permian congratulating him. But all those words seemed meaningless.

"I don't remember what any of them said as I was walking off," said the Monterey quarterback, unwrapping the pads and bandages in the disappointed Monterey dressing room. "I feel a few plays either way would have made a lot of difference. They've got a good team but field position hurt us a lot.

through the early stages of the second stages of the fourth quarter, the Plainsfailed to score that go-ahead touchdown.

much. I think the inside trap plays off the unbalanced line were what hurt our defense the most," he said. Some of Moegle's defenders felt Permian's sweep dented the Plainsmen defense the most. Senior tackle Bo Taylor echoed those sentiments. "I think personnel-wise that Permian asn't really any faster. I think they called some aubiles on the line of scrimmage that hurt us a few times," Taylor said Monterey's defense played nearly the entire second half without the services of middle linebacker Sam Laine, who injured his right ankle on the third scrimmage play of the second half. The injury forced Reeves to serve double-duty. Laine also figured Permian's sweep earned plenty of hard yards. "I would get out there on the sweep and the guard would cut me off," Laine said. "On the play I got hurt, I think somebody sat on it and pushed it after the play had ended."

Two Permian players also injured their ankles during the game, halfback Gregg Lambert and fullback Alan Swann, Lambert twisted his right ankle early in the second half and Swann bruised his left ankle in the first half. Each appears doubtful for next week's semifinal game.

One of Mojo's top players, linebacker Brian Harris, praised Reeves and the Plainsmen's passing game.

"He (Reeves) was just sitting back there and threading the needle. He had lots of time and his line was doing a good job of blocking," Harris said. Among those blockers was offensive

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) - Fired California football Coach Mike White has been contacted by schools with coaching vacancies, but hasn't made a decision about what he is going to do.

Missouri and Wisconsin, both with coaching vacancies, have contacted White, as did Colorado, where a vacancy is expected, the Oakland Tribune reported.

The Tribune also said White was offered the position of athletic director at the University of Idaho.

"It's been a tough 48 hours." White said Friday. "But the sun always comes up. I'm still not sure what my future direction will be."

Meanwhile, the specific reasons for Cal athletic director Dave Maggard's dismissal of White have remained a wellkept secret between the two men.

Two Million Plus

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Southwest Conference football teams drew more than two million fans in 1977 for the first time in the league's 63-year history, it was announced Saturday at the Texas A&M-Houston game.

The season ended at College Station with 51,790 fans in the stands. That pushed home attendance at 53 games to 2.076.682.

Texas led in average attendance with 57,070 and Texas AM was second at 53,-927. Both Texas A&M and Arkansas drew at more than 100 percent of seating capacity with a 25.9 percent hike.

Auction Helps Raider Netters

More than $1600 was raised in an auction prior to the Lubbock Country Club's Tech Scholarship Tennis Tournament which will be concluded today.

LCC members teamed with Tech men and women tennis players in the two-day, round robin tournament. Winners will be decided on percentage of winning games.

The monies were raised as LCC members "bought" the Tech players for partners.

Jack Alderson and Raider Randy Clayton grabbed the lead after Saturday's play with a winning percentage of 70 in the men's division.

Play resumes today at noon.

Ferguson fumbled after catching a pass from Montana and the Hurricanes re-covered at Notre Dame's 20 to set up the field goal by Dennis.

After forcing a Notre Dame punt on the next series Miami closed to 14-10 as Al-vers took McMillian's pass and sprinted between two defenders to score.

Montana set up Notre Dame's next score with a 15-yard pass to Haines then found Ferguson in the end zone for a 23-yard touchdown pass. Dave Reeve's point after was blocked. And the Irish led 20-10.

Notre Dame struck again in the third quarter on a 77-yard drive that concluded with Montna's first touchdown pass to MacAfee.

On the first play of Miami's next series, cornerback Luther Bradley intercepted Ottis Anderson's halfback pass and returned to the Miami 38. Eight plays later Mitchell plunged in from the 4-yard line to extend Notre Dame's lead to 34-10.

Montana and MacAfee teamed again with 1:50 as the agile tight end grabbed Montana's pass even though it was deflected in the end zone. Notre Dame's final score came on a 1-

Late MHS DriveRuns Out Clock

down at the Mojo 49, the snap squirted away from Reeves and Permian's Brian Harris covered the loose ball at the MHS Monterey's defense refused to wilt and allowed only 3 yards on the next three plays before Permian's Greg Rodriquez punted 32 yards into the end zone. So the Plainsmen started their one last series 80 yards away with 2:51 to play.

Again, Reeves connected with is wide receivers for passes of 19, 4, 12 and 8 yards, moving to the Permian 45 with 1:24 remaining. A 9-yarder to wingback Dudley McMinn moved to the 36 with 1:02 to play. Then Reeves frantically dashed around his right flank for 8 more to the 28.

But Permian's defense, which refused to yield a touchdown, caught the MHS passer for losses on three of the game's last four plays.

Tackle Tommy Sager dropped Reeves for 3 yards, and end David Arldridge caught him for a 10-yard loss to the 41 with 41 seconds left.

Reeves kept his poise and hit split end Eric Voyles across the middle for 22 to the 19. But end Hayden Frost corralled the passer for a 3-yard loss as the buzzer sounded

"We just needed another minute," said a disappointed MHS coach James Odom. "The field position in the third quarter just killed us. We were moving the ball on them pretty well, but we just waited a little bit too late to start throwing.

Odom felt his defense played well to allow Permian only 7 points, but Permian coach John Wilkins claimed his offense was the difference in the outcome.

We moved the ball well, and we did the things we had to do," Wilkins said. "Tim Hayes came in at quarterback and took us down the field for the score. You have to give credit to Reeves, though. He's a great player. We had him boxed in and he scrambled around and threw one 40 vards downfield."

Reeves tried the airways for the first time with six minutes left in the first quarter. The quarterback faked to his dive back, rolled to his left and tossed a 45-yard pass to McMinn, who leaped with defender Huey Chancellor all over him at the Mojo 16. A holding penalty against the Panthers on the play advanced the ball to the 7.

Monterey tried three runs on the next three plays and Odom elected to take the field goal on fourth at the 2. Reeves booted the ball through the uprights from the left hash mark with 5:06 left in the first quarter

Permian started moving effectively late in the first quarter by staying on the ground from its 42 to the MHS 12. Then, on first at the 12, Mojo fullback Alan Swann escaped into the clear on a trap play and headed for an apparent touchdown. However, the Plainsmen pursuit forced a fumble and MHS tackle Bo Tavlor covered the slippery ball at the MHS

Gaining only 9 yards on its three tries. Plainsman punter Phil Bruedigam booted a 44-yard punt to Brian Vickers, who returned it 12 yards to the MHS 44. Three plays later, quarterback Vic Vines tossed a 14-yard pass to halfback Greg Lambert at the 30. But, the MHS pass rush slammed Vines to the turf and out of the game.

Hayes, a starter at safety, entered at quarterback and stayed on the ground until he reached paydirt. Lambert gained 6 on a sweep to his right. Fullback Mark Graves bulled ahead for 6 more on a trap to the 18, and Swann banged through a hole at right tackle for a first-and-goal at the MHS 5

Graves carrired straight ahead to the 1 on the next two plays, and Lambert dived over the pile on the right side for the TD. Robert Orosco booted the PAT kick with 2:50 left in the half, capping a 44-yard drive in nine plays.

Permian took the second-half kickoff and went from its 8 to the Monterey 9. But the Plainsmen defense refused to open the goal-line door this time, and Orosco's 30-yard field goal sailed wide to the right

Later in the third quarter, a towering 50-yard punt by Bruedigam backed up Permian to its 3. But the Panthers escaped their own dungeon and handed MHS a taste of its own medicine. Permian moved the ball out to Monterey's 44, and Rodriguez's punt was killed by teammate Mike Madison at the MHS 1

On a day when the defenses and kicking games dominated, those punts meant a great lot. And so did the time clock, which finished a bit too soon for Monterev

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Freshman quarterback Mark Mosley came off the bench to enflame sluggish Texas A &M with two touchdown runs Saturday and the 17th-ranked Aggies clinched third place in the Southwest Confeence with a 27-7 victory over the Houston Cougars.

The 6-2, 176-pound Mosley, entered the nationally televised game late in the second quarter and posted two touchdowns in a 79-second span to daze the Cougars, who led 7-3 before that burst.

Mosley guided the Aggies on an 83-yard drive in eight plays, clmaxed by his 13yard touchdown run with 1:23 left in the

FSU Raps Florida By 37-9

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) - "We ain't second rate no more," Florida State football Coach Bobby Bowden croaked as he joined his players in celebrating a 37-9 victory Saturday over bitter-rival Florida before a stunned crowd of 63,563 and a regional television audience.

Bowden was hoarse from hollaring "WHOO-OO-OO" in the jubilant winners' dressing room celebrating the first football victory over Florida in 10 years.

"We thought they were weak in secondary," Bowden said. It was an understatement as his quarterbacks, Jimmy Jordan and Wally Woodham, completed 20 of 31 passes for 344 yards.

"I just go back, look and the guys would be open," said Jordan, who hit wide receiver Roger Overby with three touchdown tosses

Florida Coach Doug Dickey said the outcome was a matter of FSU's strength concentrated in the area where Florida was weakest - in its injury-plagued defensive secondary.

"We knew they talked all week about defensing Larry Key, so we faked the ball to Key and threw downfield," Bowden said.

Key, who became the first Seminole in history to gain more than 1,000 yards rushing, wound up the day running for 143 and a season total of 1,117.

Florida State's reserves made another scoring threat in the closing minutes, but ended a yard short of the goal when time ran out.

Jordan completed 13 of 19 passes for 240 yards, and Woodham hit six of 10 for 86. The Seminoles gained 570 yards total offense compared to 200 for Florida.

The Gators best effort was by Tony Green, who rushed 71 yards in 16 carries. LeCount completed only five of 16 passes for 45 yards and Brantley was good on one of three for 14 vards.

The last time FSU beat Florida was in 1967 also on Florida Field, by a score of 21-16. In the series between the two rivals. Floridia still has a commanding lead of 16-3 with one tie.

The swift Mosley, who was a blue chip all-state player at Humble High School, dashed 35 yards for a touchdown on A &M's first play in the second half and the Aggies poured it on.

A 57-yard field goal by barefoot Tony Franklin, who had kicked a 27-yarder earlier, finished off the Aggies scoring. third quarter.

A&M finished the regular season with a 8-3 record and the Aggies were 6-2 in SWC play. Houston was 6-5 and 4-4.

The explosive Cougars grabbed a 7-3 lead midway through the second quarter when quarterback Delrick Brown flicked a 3-yard scoring pass to tight end Willis Adams

The Aggie offense floundered under senior quarterback David Walker. The Cadets only had 45 yards offense until Mosley stepped on the field with five minutes to play in the second quarters

Mosley completed passes of 12 and 11 yards to wide receiver Doug Teague on the 83-yard drive that put he Aggies ahead to stay.

Mosley had only carried the ball 27 times all year and had only played in three games.

The Aggies padded their 17-7 halftime lead when Mike Williams returned a Cougar punt 23 yards to the Houston 35. On the next play, Mosley followed a crushing

This gave heart to the Aggie defense which had yielded 57 points last week against No. 1-ranked Texas. There were five new starters for the Aggies on defense including Green who was the outstanding defender on the field.

The elusive Mosley rushed 12 times for 109 yards against the shocked Cougar defense to delight the partisan crowd of 51.-790 in Kyle Field. Mosley completed 12 of 23 passes of 104 vards.

Houston's big offense weapon was Blackwell, who gained 160 yards on 29 carries.

The Aggies will play Southern California Dec. 31 in the Bluebonnet Bowl. The game had a bizarre ending as Houston flanker Rickey Maddox caught what appeared to be a touchdown pass in the end zone on the last play of the game. However, both sides were penalized for offsides and it negated the touchdown. There were bitter feelings throughout the contest as Houston had two players ejected. Offense guard Jim Wells and linebacker Hosea Taylor were tossed out. For the Aggies, offensive tackle Cody Risien was thrown out of the game for

Schmidt, who trailed Conaway for much of the race, outkicked the Monterey junior over the last 250 yards to finish one stride in front. El Paso Austin, which had all five of its runners finish in the top 25, captured the Division A (Class AAAA) team title with 66 points. Austin was followed by El Paso-rival Riverside with 81 points.

In the Division B (Class AAA-AA-B) competition, Brownfield captured the team title by outpointing Socorro by a wide 31-82 margin.

Cub Tony Argollez edged teammate Rudy Garcia by a full second to win the . Division B individual crown. Argollez concluded the trek in a time of 10:26, Garcia at 10:27

Winning the Division A girl's title was Amarillo High with 51 points. Lorie Scott paced the Sandies by finishing first with a time of 11:47.

The Division B girl's crown was copped by the Brownfield fems. The Cubs defeated their closest competitor, Socorro, by 49 points 22-71.

Winning the title was Annabell Morin with a time of 12:38. She defeated teammate Liz Holguin by 50 seconds .

The top three teams and top 10 individuals in each division qualified for the state meet, to be held in Austin next Saturday.

Brownfield could be the favorite in the Class A boys division, after finishing second to A&M Consolidated last year. Austin Westlake, the defending Class A girls champion, will be favored again. Brownfield's girls were third a year ago.

Stacy-Pate Keep Mixed Team Lead

LARGO, Fla. (AP) - U.S. Women's Open champ Hollis Stacy converted long birdie putts on two of the last three holes Saturday as she and partner Jerry Pate blended their talents for a 3-underpar 69 that enabled them to retain a three-stroke lead in the third round of the $200,000 Mixed Team Golf Championship.

Pate and Stacy, leaders since a spectacular 61 in the opening round. compiled a 54-hole total of 200. That put them 16 strokes under par on the Bardmoor Country Club's 7,015-yard North course, still wet and slow from a drenching rain that delayed play for two hours Friday.

That delay caused Pate, a two-time winner this year despite missing much of the season with an injury, and Stacy to be stranded by darkness in the second round. They had to come back Saturday morning to finish off a round of 70 and then went into regular third round play with a three-stroke advantage.

The margin dwindled to one in the face of a challenge by rookies Curtis Strange, 22, and Nancy Lopez, 20. Bouncy little Hollis built it back to three, however, with her birdie putts of 25 feet on the 16th and about 20 feet, from the back fringe, on the 18th:

Strange and Lopez were second with a 69-203.

They appeared to be the only team with a chance of catching the front-runners. It was another three strokes back to the teams of Tom Purtzer and Sandra Post and the defending titleholders, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Jo Ann Washam, tied at 206, six strokes back of the leaders.

The Post-Purtzer team had a 67 in the bright, warm, sunny weather and Rodriguez-Washam shot a 68.

The unique format calls for both members of the team to hit tee shots. The man then plays his second shot on the woman's drive and vice versa. They then decide which one they want for their third and play alternate shots on that ball for the remainder of the hole.

"I think it's important for me to get it close to the hole and let her putt it," Pate said. "It's not that I'm a bad putter, I just can't seem to get the ball to the hole on these greens. She putts them much better than I do. Any time there's a choice, I want her to do the putting."

It worked perfectly in the run down the stretch.

Lopez has birdied the eighth and ninth holes and a bogey by the Pate-Stacy team on the 15th had cut their margin to one. On the par-5 16th, Pate and Stacy appeared in trouble until Pate hit a third shot 25 feet from the hole and Hollis rolled it home. It was the same situation on the 18th, another par 5.

Pate had to hit a 200-yard third shot 20 feet behind the pin and again Hollis rapped it in, hopping happily in the air when the ball ducked in the cup, then running over to give her partner a hug. "A three-stroke lead is a lot better than two," Pate said. "That last putt was a big one, very important.'

House

's Club Toda omen By HELEN DIXON

Family News Editor The Lubbock Women's Club has been transformed into a Christmas fairyland and today from 2:30 — 4:30 p.m. will welcome members and their guests to share the beginning of the holiday season at the clubhouse at 2020 Broadway.

A dazzling ceiling-high tree, flocked in glistening snow, festooned with white doves on its branches covered with sparkling crystal prism icicles flanks the fireplace which is decorated with a wreath and flowing garland.

In the Will Rogers room, an elegantly decorated tea table will be laden with delicacies, 'red satin' punch in a gleaming silver punch bowl and sil-ver tea and collee services.

The Blue Room is a brilliant Christmas fantasy, the tree and ornaments reflected in a shimmering blue mirror which covers the entire east wall of the room.

In keeping with another tradition of the Women's Club, a 'Christmon' tree is set up in the Assembly Room. Here a natural tree is always deco-rated with hand fashioned Christmons.

I'p the garland bedecked staircase to the Florentine Room youngsters will find a children's old-fashioned Christmas fairyland, complete with Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus in attendance.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT - Tea will served, and a Christmas punch along with holiday cookies and cakes will be offered members and guests today during the hours of visiting at the Holiday Open House at the Lubbock Women's Club. From left

NEW DOWN & COMPANY & CONTRACT & STUDIOUS

Here are some Christmas wrapping ideas to make your gifts look festive. They take a little more effort, but your labors will not be in vain when you see how nice the packages will look. (Pretty doesn't have to mean expensive.)

Wrap with two layers of tissue, the under color will show through. Then tie with the same color ribbon as the inside tissue

When using a shiny solid color wrap, write the "for" and "from" right on the wrap. Using clear glue or rubber cement, write the appropriate names. Then while the glue is still wet, sprinkle with gold or silver or multicolored sprinkles. (You can even use the kind that are sprinkled on cookies.) Or, you can write the name on the ribbon used to tie the package. First write the name in glue, then immediately sprinkle the ribbon.

You can make "lace" wrap by cutting small designs from a sheet of solid color gift wrap, then overwrap the gift that has been covered with another color paper.

Just before tying the final bow on the package, why not add a practical touch? Tie a cookie cutter, a small bell, a miniature picture or vegetable peeler. The housewares departments of most stores are filled with wonderful gadgets to use. Mix and match. Tie and tape. Whatever gift wrap or ribbon you use, it will be a brighter day on Christmas because you took the time to add a personal touch.

More bad news from the Postal Service. They're thinking about eliminating some non-essential services - like home delivery.

Men's wear figured prominently during 1977

In Waco, a defense attorney lambasted a police officer who testified in a local trial that he found only a few items of food in the defendant's house during a search for evidence. The lawyer said the officer was making fun of poor people.

Additional evidence turned up suits with Neiman-Marcus labels, and expensive shoes and suits.

The defence lawyer hastily dropped the poor-folks angle.

Blue denim in various forms made news in 1977. A 73-year-old judge in Cincinnati called his new denim robe "a silent way of cummunicating with young people." He assured questioners that he would wear it and hoped it would become a judicial trend-setter.

Jeans are popular everywhere, perhaps even more in foreign lands than they are in this country.

On Moscow's black market a pair of jeans sells for $133 and the black market between Italy and Yugoslavia is equally strong

In South America, jeans are more popular than drugs or even emeralds. They're smuggled from Argentina where they sell for $14 to $20 - to Chile, where the price is a hefty $40 or $50.

In Detroit, a chimney sweep was seen working his craft wearing top hat and tails. Another chimney sweep, this one north of Seattle, found his trade growing

Early Mammogram Women Sought

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) - A search is underway for more than 500 women who underwent breast X-rays 20 years ago to determine if they have suffered any side effects from the examinations.

But Dr. David Sklaroff, a radiologist at Albert Einstein Medical Center, stressed the women had no reason to be concerned.

Between January 1956 and December

1965, he said, 1,120 women participated in a pioneer mammography program for early detection of breast cancer.

"To date we've located about 495 women from the Gershon-Cohen project," said Sklaroff, who began his investigation in 1976 as part of a research project for the American Cancer Society

'It took the major part of one year to find that number due mainly to incomplete records for the mid-1950s," he said. Each of the women in the original program got several X-ray examinations. The followup, Sklaroff said, is to look into the long-range effects of those X-rays. "This new study is an outgrowth of many opinions that have been voiced in recent years concerning the benefits versus risks of not only mammography, but other procedures as well," he said.

in importance since more people are using their fireplaces as an economy measure. He charges for his services but often finds himself posing for pictures before he makes his climb

In every administration, the new president shows his fashion feelings. President Carter, known for his casual attire, was probably the first American president to appear before the nation wearing a sweater. Some say that the Chief Executive has done more for the sweater than anyone since Lana Turner. (Sweater people are even talking of a new style -'Cartergan.")

Now that's really jumping on the bandwagon.

We know some folks who are 'college bred' - in their case it was a four year loaf made from the flour of youth and the old man's dough.

We wonder how many of us remember Albert Einstein's remark which appeared in the November 1945 issue of the Atlantic Monthly magazine:

Since I do not see that atomic energy is to be a great boon for mankind for a long time, I have to say that for the present it is a menace. Perhaps it is well that it should be. It may intimidate the human race into bringing order into its in-ternational affairs, which, without the pressure of fear, it would not do."

Remember "average" means you're as close to the top as you are to the bottom!

That occasional joshing remark about having a little drink "for medicinal purmay not be such a joke after all if the drink is a glass of wine. While the remedial and regenerative powers of wine have been part of legend and literature since the beginning of written history, only recently has contemporary scientific research come around to upporting that view. Vitamin B is present both red and white wine in significant portions. Red vines are somewhat richer in iron, calphosphorus, potassium and other elements. White wines lead in riwhile while while a lead in rids the value of fresh milk!

recent medical paper noted that "it been demonstrated that the natural e sugars in wine are readily absorbed man system and are desirable in the diet, that the alcoholic content in wine is a quick source of caloric ener-gy..." and also concluded that certain elements in wine, other than the alcohol, revent or impeded the growth of certain germs in the human body.

main ingredients for making the fireplace the center of interest and the lively spot in your home

By log treating, red, green, blue, orange or purple flames can be produced. The flame color depends on the chemicals used to treat the material burned in the fireplace. Calcium chloride can be used to produce orange colored flames; copper chloride, blue: potassium chloride, purple; strontium nitrate, red; lithium chloride, carmine; and copper sulfate, emerald green. Most of the chemicals can be purchased from chemical suppliers or local drugstores.

Dry pine cones or small blocks or chips of wood soaked in these solutions will produce multi-colored flames when placed on a bed of hot coals.

Husband May AffectWoman's Risk Of Cancer By ANA HONIG

NEW YORK (WNS) - The woman who marries an executive may be safer from cervical cancer than the one who marries an unskilled laborer.

Evidence that the low man on the socioeconomic totem pole is more apt to sow the seeds of cervical destruction comes from reseachers here and abroad. For instance, Dr. Albert Singer, obstetrician-gynecologist at the University of Sheffield's Jessup Hospital for Women in England, points to a study of cytologic records of a quarter-million women. These records show that cervical cancer occurred three to four times more often in the wives of manual laborers than those of men in so-called intellectual jobs.

And Dr. Bevan Reid of the obstetricsgynecology department at the University of Sydney in Australia, notes in the publication Medical Tribune that "much as we try to deny a class society, it looks as if the incidence of cancer among the classes may give the lead to where the real differences between us lie.

To treat the cones or wood, a pail and an open mesh sack are needed. Place the cones or chips in the sack and immerse them in a solution containing one pound of chemical dissolved throughly in one gallon of water. Weight the bag so the material is completely covered by the solution. Allow the cones or wood to soak at least 10 minutes. The drier the material before soaking, the better the results. You may want to soak them a second time

After soaking, allow the treated material to dry thoroughly. Use old newspapers to protect the floor or surface of the drying area. The treated material will be ready for use in the fireplace after drying. overnight. Then sparkle away

Now for those homemade logs. Take 10 to 20 sheets of newspapers and roll tightly. Tie at intervals with fine wire or string. Soak in an epsom salts solution made by adding 1 tablespoon epsom salts to 1 gallon water. Soak 2t least 2 days. Dry thoroughly. If time permits, another soaking and drying will be better. When rolling and tying the newspaper, try inserting a ruler, broomstick, or yardstick to help you roll the paper, then remove and tie the "log". This makes a vacuum in the center that causes a better flame.

When friends drop by my home, I like to serve hot spiced tea or hot chocolate, so I keep home-made mixes on hand for those special occasions.

WDWDWDWDWDWDWDWDWDWDWDW

The cancer epidemiologists are telling us that cervical cancer is related to class," he said. "As a matter of fact, there is some evidence that this is so for cancers of the stomach and lungs as well.

Curiously, the picture of the women most likely to get cervical cancer fits nicely into this theory: She often comes from a low socioeconomic class. Her first sexual encounter came at an early age. She may be a prostitute. She married young and often and has many sex partners. And she is likely to have had a venereal disease

So sexual factors seem to be involved in cervical cancer. And the male partner seems to be implicated as the causer of the disease

But what is it that triggers the changes in cervical cells that lead to cancer?

Dr. Reid and his associates, among other researchers, think the sperm of some men is overloaded with the basic protein cystine. And cystine-rich histone, a protein in the sperm head, may be the carcino-

The idea gains strength from the work of Dr. Aaron Bendich, chief of cell biochemistry at the Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York, who has reported that sperm can penetrate and change body cells in a way similar to changes observed during the malignant process.

Even more, Dr. Bendich thinks a backfiring of sperm into prostatic tissue may be the cause of prostatic cancer in men. Interestingly, a higher-than-expect rate of cervical cancer is found among the wives of men with prostatic cancer.

More evidence implicating the male in cancer of the cervix comes from Johns Hopkins School of Hygience and Public Health in Baltimore.

There, Dr. Irving Kessler, professor of epidemiology, kept records on the husbands of Baltimore women who developed cervical cancer from 1950 to 1969.

What he found was ominous - if a man's first wife was struck down by cervical cancer, his subsequent wife (or wives) had more than three times as much chance of developing the malignan-cy as would be expected in a control group.

AFTER ALL

TWICKENHAM, England (WNS) -Eye specialists gave up hope of saving the sight of Maggie Barton, who was slowly going blind. That is when the 40-year-old teacher prayed for help and soon after met Julia Owen and her unusual cures. Mrs. Owen, 70, has bred special bees who carefully sting Miss Barton three times a week. "My sight is improving after each treatment," reported Maggie. "Soon I'll be seeing better than I ever did.

Larson now 73, has collected musical instruments ever since. He is the founder of a collection, which musicologoists say is one of the world's largest.

It is shown in part, at the Shrine to Music on the University of South Dakota campus in Vermillion where Larson is professor emeritus of music. The Mis-. souri River town near the Nebraska-South Dakota border is more likely a home for a rodeo than for Larson's collection

The display at the W.H. Over Museum ranges from a Viking bullhorn to a pipe organ. There are strange-looking instruments, like a one-string pitch fork and a musical saw, and exotic ones, such as organ chimes of the South Sea Islands and ornate Indian sitars.

Larson can play each instrument in the collection.

He became interested in the history of music as a teen-ager. He traded tea and canned goods during World Wur II for British collectors' items. Later, he supplied willing missionaries with staples in exchange for more exotic instruments.

His collection has grown so large, Larson said, "it would take 30 or 40 rooms to provide enough space.'

With a trace of Norwegian accent, he quoted from Plato:

Show me a country with good music, and I'll show you a country with good government; show me a country with bad government, and I'll show you a country with bad music.

Larson said rock 'n' roll grew out of social problems and "the turmoil in people's minds.

"Who did we sing about in the middle. 60s?" he asked. "Ourselves. Come and love me ... Give me ... I must have. Those were the messages. Before, we sang about love and sentiment.'

But the musical scene is changing, he said. The emotion of country western songs will meld with present-day rock for more mellow, sentimental music

If the world stays at peace, Larson said, the tones of popular music in the 1980s will soften and become more melodic.

But, if war breaks out in the Middle East or Africa, he said, prepare for more electronic music, brass and lots of drums. Larson said music also is linked to economic trends. He cited the music of the Great Depression, like "Show Me the Way to Go Home," reflected the loneliss in men's hearts.

Other economic trends, like the energy crisis, could spark a resurgence of municipal bands, he said.

"There won't be this hysteria of driving 20 miles for a 25-cent hamburger," he d. "People will have to stay in one

DEAR ABBY: I am 41 and Mel is 44. We've been married for 20 years and have three nice children - one is still at home. We have no money problem and no sex problems, but all of a sudden Mel says he wants to be "free," No divorce, mind you, he just wants to be free to come and go as he pleases, so he rented an apartment and bought new furniture. I even helped him move.

He was gone for a week, then he came home. He said he missed our dog. I prayed night and day that he'd stay home, but three days later he went back to the apratment for the weekend.

I told him I loved him and begged him to give up the apartment. He said he like me as a person, but he didn't think it was "love." Also, he didn't want to hurt me, but he had to be "free."

I don't think there's another woman. (There's hardly enough for me.) I'm so

Dear Part-Time: Marriage is a fulltime commitment with no time off for good (or bad) behavior. If your husband wants to be "free", give him his freedom (legally) and you take yours. If the dog dies, he'll have nothing to come home for.

DEAR ABBY: I met this great-looking man when I was hunting for a house to buy. (He's a real estate agent.) I like everything about him. He's not married and neither am I. I finally bought a house through him.

DEAR ABBY: My girlfriend's husband got on the wrong side of the law and might have to spend some time in prison.

My friend will be living all alone in a trailer, and she is very much pregnant. I want to go and stay with her at least until her baby is born. I know she needs me. She's my dearest friend. She and her husband took me in when I really needed it. They proved to be true friends, and I will never forget.

My problem is my boyfriend. He says, "Forget them - they aren't worth bothering about."

'Little Girl' Pageants' Popularity Grows Rapidly

By JANICE JARVIS Family News Staff Five-year-old Kimberly Kimble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Kimble of Lubbock, wrestles with stiff-layers of petticoats, tugs at lacy socks and twists a stray hair into a curl.

Unconsciously she strokes the satin ribbons which adorn her taffeta dress. Suddenly her grin becomes an ear-to-ear smile as the spotlight is trained upon her. Kimberly, who has been modeling since she was two, is a veteran of the world of little girl pageants.

Little girl pageants are not something new, but only recently has their popularity become so widespread. Mothers and daughters flock to local pageants, then travel to Dallas or Houston for state finals. A few even try for national titles.

Those who have traveled the pageant circuit know what to expect from the week-long event, but novices quickly discover they must face a grueling schedule of activities which often ends in disappointment.

It takes a combination of beauty, poise and talent for a girl to reach the finals, and that winning combination doesn't come naturally for many girls.

After attending a few pageants, most-girls become aware of what the judges use as guidelines: usually a wholesome and composed youngster. Pageant rules state that girls are not judged on dress, high fashion modeling techniques or interviews, but experienced pageant-goers claim that everything counts.

Stephanie Scholz, 19, and her sister Suzette, 17, daughters of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Scholz of Lubbock, have been entering various pageants during the last ten years.

"During our first pageant everything went wrong: our hair was too fluffy, and our clothes, too skimpy," said Suzette. Now they know judges look for a girl whose dress is neither too sexy nor too plain.

Donna Powers of Abernathy, who organizes pageants (and also enters her daughter in them,) said she advises judges not to be swayed by a pretty dress or a flashy modeling pose.

Brenda Becknell, a model agency owner in Lubbock and pageant judge, said 'Talent is a key factor in these pageants, and the girl who has talent and polish has a good chance to win, even if she isn't the prettiest girl on the stage.

SCIENTIFIC JOCKEY

LONDON (WNS) - Elaine Mellor was studying chemistry at Oxford and headed for a scientific career when she decided to marry jockey Stan Mellor instead. After the honeymoon, Elain became a jockev and Stan was promoted to trainer. "I finished my first race, but then my husband taught me that the easiest horse to ride is the winner," said Mrs. Mellor. She won the women jockey's championship last year and held it this year by riding eight winners. Now she would like to face the men with her horse Jave River; a

But even a good talent may not be the particular talent the judges are looking

"A child who can sing and dance has a better chance than one who twirls a baton," said Mrs. Powell. Judges are usually more impressed with singing, but, she added, "that doesn't mean that my daughter is going to sing when she's bet-ter at tap dancing." The idea is to enjoy what you're good at, not just to do something to win.

Since only a few girls who enter contests actually win, there has to be has to be another factor which attracts so many girls.

Sheri Scholz, 12, followed in her sisters' footsteps because they enjoyed the fun part of the pageants.

"I like going places and meeting new friends," Sheri said. While Sheri, Suzette and Stephanie admit they go to win, they also go to have a good time. "If you go to pageants, you have to get more out of them then just competing," said Suzette. Parents often send their children to such contests to help them gain confidence. Mrs. Scholz explained, "Most important they learn how to be good losers, and that will help them throughout life." Mrs. Kimble said she enters her daughter Kimberly in pageants to help her gain confidence and overcome her shyness. The benefits little girls gain at pageants come at a price. A contestant usually pays for modeling lessons, talent lessons, as many as three different outfits for modeling, a costume and the registration fee. Traveling expenses add to the bill. Parents usually spend as much as they can afford, and many mothers sew the dresses themselves to help cut down on cost as well as to guarantee a 'one-of-akind' dress.

While most mothers said they were willing to pay the price, they were often met with criticism for entering their daughters in the contests.

"I'm a stage mother," said Mrs. Kimble with a frown. "Whenever Kimberly is on stage, I know I do the smiling for her, but Kimberly enters pageants because she wants to, not because I push her."

Mrs. Powell agreed that most mothers don't push their children to enter pageants. "Who wants to continue investing money in something their children don't enjoy?" she observed

Then there are those exceptions - the mothers who push too hard. Those are the people who pick fights with judges or stomp off stage in tears, noted Mrs. Kimble. There are also some mothers who go to extremes to produce a winner. In one daughter's brunette hair, because blonds

AGNIESKA OLSZEWSKA with Christmas 'Sekacz'

Favored Pastries Enrich Polish Holiday

NEW YORK CITY - The Poles are well known for their hospitality. and Agnieska (Agnęs) Olszewska is no exception. To be invited to her home is truly an enjoyable experience. She is a charming young woman who is here on a sabbatical from Warsaw University where she is an associate professor in social psychology.

She loves cooking, and her conversation is spirited when she discusses her favorite foods. Since her husband is with the Polish consulate general in New York City, she does a great amount of entertaining and delights in impressing her guests with such spectacular desserts as her Log Cake. "sekacz."

The cake takes a little care in assembling and decorating, but this can all be done ahead and refrigerated until serv-

To spare the cook, she suggest a simple dinner of fish or roast served with potatoes or noodles and a vegetable salad Poles enjoy their food and have hearty tates. And often the main course is accompanied by traditional Polish wodka.

When this masterpiece of pastry is served. Agnes guarantees that one serving will lead to another, so it's well worth the preparation time involved. But don't expect leftovers

Sift together flour, salt and 2/3 cup sugar three times. Beat four egg whites with remaining 2/3 cup sugar to stiff peaks. Fold in vanilla and four stiffly beaten egg volks. Gradually fold in sifted flour mixture. Pour batter evenly into 1512x1012-inch jelly roll pan lined with waxed paper. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 minutes or until center springs when lightly touched. Immediately invert onto towel sprinkled with confectioners' sugar and carefully remove waxed paper. Roll up in towel and cool comepletely on wire rack

Meanwhile, combine 1/4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup water and 11'z tbsp wodka in 'saucepan Boil for about 3 minutes or until syrupy Cool

Prepare frosting: In saucepan, combine remaining 2/3 cup sugar and 1/3 cup water. Boil to 240 degrees (syrup forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water). Beat two egg volks until lemon colored Gradually add sugar mixture and continue beating until mixture is cool. Gradually beat in butter, chocolate, coffee and wodka

To assemble cake. Unroll cake and brush with half of syrup. Spread with mocha frosting. Roll up jelly roll fashion, removing towel. Wrap in waxed paper and chill completely Remove waxed paper and cut off ends diagonally to use as branches. Brush outside of cake and branches with remaining syrup Frost outside of cake with frosting Run fork along frosting to give appearance of bark. Attach branches and press into frosting. Frost with remaining trosting Chill until frosting is set.

Expectant Mothers Can Reduce Extra Expenses With Planning

NEW YORK (WNS) - Memo to the expectant mother: You don't have to go broke just because a baby is on the way. Careful planning will help you cut down on the extra expenses

A key step in any such move is to look for maternity fashions that are comfortable and fashionable from first to last days of pregnancy - and then later on, when your figure has gone back to normal size. One expert who has pioneered in such thinking on the fashion economics of new parenthood is Myrna Tarnower, owner of Mater's Market, a maternity boutique on New York's East Side. Her grow-alongwith-the figure French-tuck dress has a tie-back sash that be loosened and behtened as needed. This is an excellent example of how a maternity wardrobe can become a chick non-maternity wardrobe as well

In general, you can keep your maternity wardrobe budget at a minimum by concentrating on basics and by purchasing items with an eve to the future:

pregnancy and after, such as in one-sizefits-all underwear and panty hose.

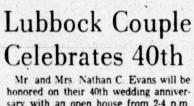

one or two skirts and pants, and they may even be worn later on if you find them with elastic waist bands.

- A-line and tent-style dressed are guite suitable for post-maternity wear. - Instead of investing in a special coat, buy a poncho or cape - again standard items that you can always use.

But sound economics can be practiced in many other areas besides fashion as well. Here are some other such moneysaving tips for parents planning an new additon

- Nurserv furniture can be recycled with a touch of new paint and a bit of bright ribbon, and can be made to look fresh and new. You can avoid the cost of new items by attending garage sales or just asking neighbors

- If you do buy new items - high chairs, car seats, infant seats, walkers, playpens - get those that can be converted for use by the child when he or she is older. Many high chairs convert to youth chairs for the in-between time when the baby is too big for the high chair and not-

sary with an open house from 2-4 p.m. today in their home

Evans were married Dec. 1, 1937, in Brownfield, and lived in Brownfield until moving to Lubbock this year. Children of the couple are James B. Evans of Lubbock and Elaine Hawkins of New Home strictly for the nursey, look for a regular dresser that will be useful when the child is older. Formica-covered furniture tends to last longer than wood, and is more durable

- While wallpaper with nursery designs is understandably tempting to new parents, it is also tempting to children to try to remove it. Instead of paper, consider paneling, which is more durable and cn easily be washed. If you want the room to look like a new baby has arrived, try decals or murals that can be easily glued, then removed later on.

- When baby arrives, you can save money by mixing your own formula instead of getting the expensive ready-made kind. The best money-saving milk is mother's You can also prepare your own baby food in a blender, which should be more nutritious as well as more economical than the supermarket brands.

New mothers particularly are very often concerned about baby, and tend to rush to the pediatrician with the slightest question. Try using the calling service that many doctors provide, to relieve such concerns, and save money on costly visits

- New parents often forget they are entitled to some free time away from baby once in a while. Instead of hiring an expensive babysitter, work out a baby-sitting arrangement with a friend or neighbor on an alternating basis.

Certain expenses are inevitable but sensible economics will help you cut costs.

The French serve a similar cake at Christmas called Buche de Noel, and Americans serve their variation as Lincoln Log at the holiday in February. This version rivals any you may have previous ly tried. The Polish consider the crowning glory of any festive meal to be the pastry, and it is their national specialty. Each cook guards her recipes like the precious jewels they are, passing them on from one generation to the next.

Ms. Olszewska suggested serving frosted grapes as a garnish for the cake. These can be prepared simply by dipping small bunches of 3 or 4 grapes in slightly whipped egg whites, then into granulated sugar. Set to dry on wire racks. Arrange them around the cake just before serving

Another prized recipe offered to guests with coffee after dinner or as a snack is a delicacy known by many names such as bowties, favors or Chrust-Faworki. These rich vet light pastries are best served well dusted with confectioners' sugar or drizzled with warmed honey thinned with a few tablespoons of wodka LOG CAKE

Sugar Blues

By GLORIA SWANSON AND BILL DUFTY

I'm an alcoholic. When I first came to AA four years ago, old-timers told me to eat candy when I had the urge to drink. It didn't work. Besides craving more booze, I craved more sugar. No amount satisfied me. I abandoned that strategy but continued with sweets - lots and often. When I quit smoking I craved sweets so much I couldn't stand it. It scared me as much as my alcoholism. I fought with all my might - and gained 40 pounds. When I heard about hypoglycemia and diabetes, I ran to the doctor for tests. Negative, he told me. I knew I'd have to suffer through withdrawal from sugar eventual-

I tried, but then I'd binge. My longest period without sugar was two days. I prayed, cried, tried every trick I knew. Doctors told me: "Your weight problem is strictly emotional."

Then one night I was guest speaker at Overeaters Anonymous. Since OA is based on the AA experience, they often ask AA's to come tell their stories. When I listened to them, I tried their program, and lost a little weight but couldn't stay off sugar any longer than before. I prayed and cried some more. After a sugar binge I had the same hangovers I remembered from boozing. AA hadn't worked for me until I realized booze did me more damage than momentary pleasure was worth. But how could I hit bottom with sugar?

Sugar hangovers were bad, but the urge to binge was stronger than the fear of pain. Then a friend gave me your book. When I saw you called yourself a sugar junkie on the cover and had a whole chapter on kicking, I felt I'd found a soulmate. It helped me understand my pri-dicament, make it easier to handle the discomforts of withdrawal. Now I'm optimistic about staying off. Anymore tips for us strugglers? - Diane H., Chicago.

Dear Diane: It helps to recognize our kinship with other junkies, to accept personal responsibility for our own addiction and not try to make it on "willpower" alone. Kicking cold turkey is the best way to go. Collect everything in your house with sugar in it, toss it in the garbage and start over.

Make one decision at the store (reading labels) instead of trying to fight temptation fulltime at home. If you go out, forget your money. Without it, you can't binge. Walk five miles a day with empty pockets or purse. Try not to panhandle. Pull the plug on your TV, read books and sweet it is. Reward yourself with an occasional apple a day. Try sprouting mung beans, alfalfa, lentils and wheat berries. Chew them by the handful. Sweet! Grow wheat grass in a window sill pot with wheat berries. Cut the grass and chew ike gum. Cut back - way back - on dairy products, meat, fats and oils. Kick coffee too if you're used to it sugared. Try natural herb teas for a new taste you don't associate with sugar. Browse through the new sugarfree natural food cookbooks. But don't mess with honey, molasses or maple syrup. Later - much later - you may be able to handle them in small amounts as special treats. But not now. If your friends say a little bit won't hurt you, kick them too. Invest in a chic vacuum bottle and take tea to work, avoiding the coffee cart pastries and colas. Carry your own lunch. Keep a journal, recording what you actually eat and how you feel. And stay tuned. When we get other tips from other soulmates, we'll pass them along. Nobody can tell you it's there are other cuts of this meat that do not cost so much. What's more, they can form the base for a gourmet meal.

Instead of the choice loin, try shoulder chops or lamb steaks. They are not only cheaper, but a good deal meatier than the more expensive cut. And if you like your meat grilled, rare or well done, you are missing something unless you try lamb steaks.

The heaviest supply of lamb comes to the market in the fall, but thanks to the geographically widespread nature of the meat industry today, lamb is now available every month of the year. • The supply of fresh U.S. lamb has been

You And Your Pet

By ROBERT L. STEAR, D.V.M. Each year dog and cat owners purchase large quantities of worming compounds to control intestinal parasites in their pets. Often pet owners decide worms are present by observing their pets eating grass, rubbing their hindquarters along the ground, or suffering from diarrhea. However, these symptoms can be characteristic of all sorts of diseases, including indigestion, protozoa infections and others. The only reliable indication of a worm infection is identification of the worm or its eggs in the feces. Your veterinarian is best qualified to do this by a microscopic examination Coccidiosis is a major parasitic infection often mistaken for worm infestation. It is caused not by worms but tiny onecelled animals called coccidia that invade. the small intestine of young animals and destroy tissue as they multiply.

Coccidia thrive in dirty, overcrowded and damp living quarters where animal feces are allowed to accumulate. Young animals can ingest the parasite eggs as they groom their feets after walking across a dirty run. Pets also become infected by swallowing eggs or larvae deposited in food by flies and other insects. Once infected, pets show symptoms of coccidiosis that are frequently confused in a dose determined on the basis of your pet's age, weight and general condition. If the pet survives the primary infection without treatment, it can become a carrier for the disease. Suspected carriers must be treated, and their quarters and runs cleaned with a disinfectant. Strict sanitation is the major factor in controlling and preventing coccidiosis. Kennels should be dry and clean; runs should receive sun part of each day and feces removed daily. Shaded, moistground, although comfortable in warm weather, increases survival of coccidia eggs and is not a good location for your pet's living quarters.

pet's living quarters. Coccidia have successfully developed parasitic relationships with a number of warm-blooded animals. Cattle, sheep, poultry and pets are all attacked by different varieties of cocidia. Dogs and cats are susceptible to infestation by three principal forms of the parasite. Recovery from an attack by one form does not offer immunity to attacks by the other forms.

If you feel your pet has contracted coccidiosis, I recommend you contact your veterinarian promptly. Your pet's weakened condition will make it more susceptible to secondary infections such as pneumonia or distemper.

Window Washing Termed 'Statistically Safe' Job

BOSTON (UPI) — John Zabaski has what most people would normally regard as a dangerous job, but in fact, it has become statistically one of the safest. He is a window washer of skyscrapers.

Zabaski is so safe in his work nowadays that Massachusetts state inspector William Shipps believes the mechanical platforms now used by such window washers could become a part of evacuation rescue plans for such buildings in event of fire or other emergencies.

"When the movie Towering Inferno was popular, I suggested that there be some kind of ground floor control on these platforms so that people could use them to get out of buildings and firemen could use them to get up to the fire," Shipps said.

He said the suggestion didn't go very far because, "You have to file legislation and there's always so much effort to that - so much resistance to new ideas."

But he still believes in the idea. He cited U.S. Labor Department statistics showing there were 7.6 work days lost in 1974 because of injuries per 100 fulltime employes in building maintenance work — which includes window washing. He compares that with the 1974 national average for all occupations — ranging from bank teller to construction worker — of 10.44 work days lost per 100 employes.

"We look at every mechanical window washing platform about once a month," Shipps said. Every building over 200 feet tall with hermetically sealed windows is required to have mechanized window washing platforms.

The platform is suspended by cables and rides down the side of the building on small tracks embedded in the sides of the building, much like a vertical railroad track.

One such platform is installed on top of the John Hancock Building in Boston. The Hancock platform — like most current models — is enclosed with safety rails on four sides. When it begins to descend the side of the building, it locks into tracks to prevent it from swaying in the wind.

The Hancock building has 10,344 windows made of 13 1/2 acres of glass. When one side of the Hancock Tower is washed, the platform is lifted up onto the roof where the entire mechanism then shifts around on a 928-foot length of track and is then lowered into tracks on another side of the tower.

"Twe had people working on building maintenance who asked to be taken off the rig and given a job inside," said Joe Musil of the Prudential Tower window cleaning crew.

"I guess it's fear of heights," he said. "I don't feel it myself, but then again, I go parachute jumping on weekends."

with those of other intestinal disease. Chronic diarrhea (often blood-tinged) is the key sign. The diarrhea causes the pet to become dehydrated, with listless eyes and no appetite. In more severe cases, the pet may show cold symptoms along with a slight fever.

Should you recognize the warning signs of the disease, medical treatment should be provided by your veterinarian. Haphazard administration of home remedies could worsen the condition. Worming your pet certainly is of no benefit. Many pets die each year when their owners treat the disease improperly or delay seeking treatment from a veterinarian. The proper medication must be provided

Italian Holiday Most Elaborate

By TOM HOGE AP Newsfeatures Writer

The observance of Christmas varies from nation to nation, and one of the most elaborate is in Italy where they start festivities the night Jefore the big day and keep going until Jan. 6. The colorful details were disclosed to me by Dr. Lucio Caputo, personable Italian Trade Commissioner for America's Eastern Seaboard states.

"Christmas was very much a family affair when I was young," he recalled. "Dinner was usually served at the home of grandparents. Actually it consisted of two dinners. On Christmas Eve we had the first meal, which usually centered on seafood, such as spaghetti and shellfish, or Capitone, the traditional jellied eel. This was an evening in which no meat was served, but there were plenty of other good things, like dried fruit and nuts and Pangiallo, a rich honey cake. After that the family trooped off to midnight Mass.

"The main meal was on Christmas day," Caputo continued. "Some sort of fowl was usually the main dish. It might be turkey or chicken, or it could also be quail or pheasant.

"Times are changing," said Caputo. "When I was a boy we did not have a Christmas tree, only a creche depicting the Christ child in his cradle.

"Nor were any gifts exchanged till Jan. 6, or the Twelfth Day of the Feast of the Epiphany. Traditionally, La Befana, a witch-like old woman with straggly hair and a hooked nose brought gifts to the children.

"Nowadays Babbo Natale (Santa Claus) has replaced La Befana in many homes," Caputo said. "And a tree trimmed with lights and ornaments has joined the creche as a symbol of Christmas much the same as in America." Dr. Stear regrets that he is unable to personally answer letters from pet owners. He suggests that readers consult

Italian Designer Plans To Bridge Gap Between Custom Clothes, Ready-Made By JOHN MOODY Men's Fashion Editor NEW YORK (UPI) - For years, fer.' Professor Claims Depiction Of Boarding House Too Harsh

mara Hareven says the boarding house has been too harshly depicted by her fel-low historians and she is out to repair the shoddy reputation of that vanishing institution

She has no strong feelings about board-ing houses, but she does feel strongly about how everyday life in America's past is depicted, and boarding houses once played a big role in everyday life.

Mrs. Hareven would also like to stamp out the notion that mothers used to devote their lives to raising a family and the belief that grandparents, their children and their grandchildren commonly lived together in a single household in the good old days - those, she says, are nostalgic

Mrs. Hareven is a pioneer in the new field of family history, which in the last eight years has become a recognized academic discipline. About 20 colleges offer family history courses.

She says what happened to the boarding house typifies the way history becomes distorted.

his landlord on the positive side

Until the 1930s the boarding house was the natural transition place for young people on the move who weren't ready to settle down.

Boarders often became a member of the family, helping raise the children. Mrs. Hareven says that was important because mothers were far too busy to devote much time to child-rearing.

"So in a sense it was a very orderly pattern," Mrs. Hareven says. "It worked well, especially for old people."

In 1973, she published a scholarly paper on "An Examination of Boarding and Lodging in American Families."

Mrs. Hareven teaches family history at Clark University in Worcester, Mass, and is a research associate at the Harvard Center for Population Studies and editor of the Journal of Family History. She was interviewed during a visit to Washington.

She's had quite a history, too. Born in Czernautz, Rumania 40 years ago, she fled to Israel at age 11 just before the Communist takeover. She came to this country in 1961 and earned her doctorate at Ohio State University.

To reconstruct the unwritten past. Mrs. Hareven pores through letters, diaries and census records and interviews old people

She spent five years going through the files of 5,000 workers at the old Amoskeag Mills in Manchester, N. H., where 19.000 people once worked in the world's biggest textile factory.

The company kept lifetime records on each employee, noting who was habitual-ly late for work, who flirted with the Mrs. Hareven says much of what is taken for granted about the past is not necessarily true. For example, "the three-generational household" as the dominant family struc-ture, though greatly morned, is largely a myth, she says. In 19th Century, she says, grandpar-ents, parents and children lived together in fewer than than 1 percent of households

Americans have always migrated, from farm to village, from east to west, with the young leaving elders behind.

So the "nuclear family" (parents and children, living alone) is old, not new. "Households have been predominantly nuclear" for centuries, she says. "In the late 19th Century, a father would barely survive until the marriage of his oldest child '

Marriage was postponed because it usually led at once to parenthood. And once a family was started, child-raising lasted a lifetime, Mrs. Hareven says.

The "empty nest" phenomena - moth-er isolated at home in the suburb with no role after the children move off - is new to these times, she says.

But the concept of motherhood occupying a woman full time was unknown through most of American history, Mrs. Hareven says.

In working class families, mother was too busy - processing food, making garments, working on the farm of in the fac-tory, or doing laundry in someone's home - to devote much time to the youngs-

"The notion that a woman should spend her whole time rearing her child-ren is a fairly recent idea, and a middle-class notion." she says. "It lasted about a century century." Now, of course, it appears to be on the way out — especially in the middle class. In the old days, Mrs. Hareven says, "Other relatives living down the street, or strangers or older siblings took care of the children. Children those days were expected to a greater variety of people."

exposed to a greater variety of people." Mrs. Hareven concludes that family structure is no weaker now than it ever was. Most of today's practices (sending the baby to nursery school while the mother goes to work, for example) had their counterparts a century ago. One function of family history is to find that out - and point it out, she says.

AVOID THE JOINT PARIS (WNS) - Dr. Andrew Landier has warned French wives not to open joint bank accounts with their husb The joint bank account can wreck your wedded bliss," insisted the psychaitrist. "Hubby is almost sure to complain if you spend more than he does. Separate bank accounts will give each partner the needed feeling of independence." The Frenchmen also recommended that couples hold jobs with different employers.

Of course we have a ladies department!

Historians depend heavily on written records. They found plenty of accounts by social reformers deploring boarding house life and little from the boarder and Social crusaders of the 1800s thought the boarder tended to disrupt family privacy, corrupt daughters, endanger wholesome family life. Mrs. Hareven calculates that a century ago one person in four spent some of his life either as a lodger or boarder or as a member of a family that took in boar-

Recipe For Zesty Fish Dish Comes From Puerto Rico

By CECILY BROWNSTONE Associated Press Food Editor

My friend Pancho taught me how to " make a great dish that's popular in Puerto Rico. That's when Pancho comes from.

Here's how I acquired the recipe. I was sitting in Pancho's hair salon one day when I overheard one of his Spanishspeaking customers teaching another how to prepare salt codfish salad. It sounded so delicious I wanted to try it right away, but I couldn't hear what all the ingredients were. No, I wasn't under the dryer, but the instructress was talking too fast for me.

On my next visit to the shop, thinking he'd be amused, I told Pancho of my plight. He immediately volunteered his help - with gusto. It seems he grew up on the salad and it's one of his favorite dishes. He said his wife excelled in making it and that he had seen her prepare it so many times that he knew just what she put in it.

Salt codfish is available in some supermarkets. If it's not in yours, find a fish market patronized by people of Spanish, Portuguese or Italian descent. There the fish is usually available at this time of year because cooks whose families come from Puerto Rico, Spain, Portugal or Italy like to use it in special dishes prepared before and during the Christmas holiday season.

PANCHO'S COD SALAD 1 lb. large pieces of skinless, boneless

salt cod 1 lb. potatoes, boiled in their skins and peeled and diced (1/2 inch)

1 small or medium onion, finely diced 1 clove garlic, minced

1/2 of a large green pepper, diced (1/2 inch)

1 medium tomato, diced (1/2 inch) 1 medium avocado, diced (1/2 inch)

2 hard-cooked eggs, quartered and sliced

Olive oil to taste Red or white wine vinegar to taste Salt and pepper to taste 1 small carrot, grated medium-fine Generously cover the salt cod with cold water and soak for 12 to 24 hours, depending on how salty and thick the pieces of fish are - experiment or ask your fish market person to advise you. (Some cooks shorten this period by draining the fish several times and covering with fresh cold water each time.) Drain: in a large saucepot generously cover the cod with cold water; bring to a gentle boil; simmer; uncovered, until tender -10 to 20 minutes, depending on the thickness of the fish. Drain and coarsely flake or cut into about 1-inch pieces. Toss the cod with the remaining ingredients except the carrot; garnish with the carrot. Best served at room temperature. Makes about 1 1/2 quarts.

Note: When we made this salad we added 1/2 cup oil and 1/4 cup vinegar. then adjusted the proportions to suit our own taste. - C.B.

Cardin' Important Name In Life Of New Designer with her present husband in the Gramer-

By Edward Craig UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) - The name Cardin has played an important part in the life of fashion designer Inia Costa-Beyer. Not only did she work at Paris with THE Pierre Cardin, but it was a family of the same name that provided her entry to the United States and the start of her budding fashion business. The Cardins were not related.

She runs a business known as Inia's Fashions, specializing in blouses, skirts and dresses trimmed with hand-woven silk lace. She has a small shop in New York's garment district, trying to make a go of it in a notoriously cutthroat industrv.

So far, she has found "everybody around here helpful and friendly." She has been in business only about a year. Once in New York and married to husband No. 2, she made dresses and blouses merely for herself and friends who admired her craftsmanship. Her husband, Robert Beyer, an economist, insisted she make housewifery her main concern and put a foot down when anyone suggested she make a career of her designing talent. It was only after a divorce and a third marriage to Wolf von Schoenwalder that Inia's Fashions came into existence.

Wolf offered me lots of encouragement, even insisted that I start my own business." she said.

an congressman, Inia Costa-Beyer was one of 16 children. In a family this large, dressmaking at home was a necessity, a chore which fell to the female members. Thus, by the time she was in her late teens, she had had lots of practice and, native talent figured in, her output bore the look of the professional product.

All this, however, had to be subordinated to the real world of making a living, and she went to school to become a nurse. Subsequently, she worked for several years in hospitals, turning out dresses and blouses in her spare time to supplement her meager nurse's salary. "I made as much money in a day's work on a dress as I did in a week as a nurse," she said.

Now 38, she left Brazil in 1969 to go to Paris on a nursing scholarship. While there, a mutual friend introduced her to Cardin. She put aside nursing temporarily to go to work for Cardin. But, with no impressive credentials to break in with him as a designer, she spent six months at sewing and other minor chores. She also made dresses on the side and one of her customers was Mrs. Christian Cardin, wife of the president of the New York branch of a French bank.

With Mrs. Cardin's help, she obtained a U.S. visa and traveled to New York with the Cardin family, working in their home as a combination maid and governess for the Cardin children. Lonely, like newcomers everywhere, she gravitated to the

Selecting Toys Requires Common Sense

NEW YORK (AP) - By using a little thought and common sense, adults this holiday season can help children discover a toy that will occupy a special place in their lives and development, says a child psychologist who is a research consultant to the Toy Manufacturers of America.

'Many children develop a long-lived attachment to certain playthings," says Dr. Brian Sutton-Smith, consultant to TMA, the industry association. "One of the important functions of toys is to help a child develop this kind of enthusiasm, playing with the object in new ways as he or she grows.

In addition to being suitable for a child's age, interests and ability level, the 'ideal" toy should offer a degree of realism, especially for younger children, closely representing the object it models, he says. The toy should do or suggest something that can be controlled or learned by the child, perhaps allowing the child to take it apart and put it back together. The toy should be usable as is or in different arrangements - for example, blocks that can be put together to represent a train - in order to provide a variety of play experiences.

'Few toys can have all of these properties," Dr. Sutton-Smith says. "That's why an assortment of playthings promotes a variety of play situations. Selectivity is important and presenting children with a confusing array of toys all at once may distract them and possibly diminish the satisfaction that is essential to happy and productive play." A well-planned toy "inventory," spread out over the growing-up years should in-clude certain central toys, he suggests: rattle, ball, soft animal or doll, a pushpull vehicle, blocks, clay, tricycle, construction toy, paints, card and strategy

games, sports gear and crafts material. A youngster may pick up a soft toy "be-cause there is a need to clarify feelings of closeness and affection," Dr. Sutton-Smith explains, but other toys offer a more distinct learning opportunity - for example, toys with numbers and letters or those that require sensory-motor manipulation. Many playthings help child-ren to discover their effect on the environment and to learn from this, he adds. "A rattle that chimes when the baby shakes it or a jack-in-the-box that appears when the baby turns the handle are two examples of 'exploratory' of 'trial and error' play," he notes.

More and more toys are being designed to appeal to both boys and girls, the TMA consultant observes, with "scientific" toys such as chemistry sets finding popularity among both groups. Toys such as mini-kitchens, traditionally bought for girls, are now being purchased for both sexes

"While many parents will continue to select playthings that reflect traditional sex-role distinctions, more and more are trying to give their children equal access to whatever they wish to play with," says Dr. Sutton-Smith, who advises parents to encourage both their sons and daughters 'to experience more variety in play and playthings."

However, he warns, child psychologists agree that although adults may provide toys that offer the principles of learning.

it is contact with other people that has the most important effect on child development.

"It is only when children are sure of your love that they can be sufficiently independent to enjoy and develop through their toys," he says. "It is my hope that adults will make a greater effort to be in touch with children by keeping in touch with their feelings about their own childhood.

"More than anything, children need to spend some time with parents or other adults who are involved, playful and loving. Children seem to grow best in an atmosphere that combines a full and stimulating environment with lots of love.'

If you want a fresh view of the food of Italy, the recently published "The Fine Art of Italian Cooking" (Quadrangle) by Giuliano Bugialli can be your guide. So authentic is it that a major Italian publisher has taken an option to translate the original American version into Italian and bring it out in Italy. Should this project be completed, it will be to my knowledge the first time such a reversal has occurred.

Born and brought up in Tuscany's Florence, Giuliano Bugialli has lived in the United States for the last four years. During this time he wrote his cookbook, experimenting with American ingredients and working out recipes that truly reproduce both the simple and complicated dishes of Tuscany and demonstrate the diversity of fine Italian cooking.

But his cookbook is not limited to Tuscan favorites; it includes dishes prepared throughout Italy. Although every region has its specialties, the author points out that "very rarely does one region restrict its cooking to those dishes that are 'alla' that region. Coteletta alla milanese is made all over Italy, as is Pizza alla napoletana.

Bugialli is a dedicated researcher as well as an extraordinarily gifted cook, and his book is full of interesting and helpful material. In an introductory essay he traces the historical background of Italian cooking: here and in later asides he points out that Italian cooks invented some of the great dishes usually attributed to the French.

Americans who meet him are quick to call him by his first name because although he has the customary Florentine dignity and reserve, he is friendly and unostentatious. His interest in cooking goes back a long way; until recently, however, he was not a professional culinarian. When he first came to the United States, he taught Italian language and literature, giving this up only when he started his extensive cooking classes in New York City during the fall, winter and spring and in Italy, in Florence, for part of June, July and October. "But I miss teaching Italian." Giuliano told me recently. Perhaps one day he will conduct some of his cooking classes in his native language.

in our co nn this week, we d like to discuss somethin g we thou interesting. It's about how a theory has come to interior decorating not from the usual sources of books or experts but from, of all places, nature.

Oddly enough, years ago, leading decorators everywhere said it was wrong, for example, to use blues and greens together. Then, it finally dawned on the experts that one of the most beautiful sights in the world was green grass under a blue sky. If such a scene of green and blue was pretty outdoors, why wouldn't it be pretty inside? And that's how it happened. People realized that Mother Nature was ahead of everybody when it came to creating beauty, and gradually the use of greens and blues were accepted. It's reassuring to know that nature showed the way, ahead of men and machines.

And this is true of more than just greens and blues. Years ago, people thought that many colors - and materials - didn't go together. Now we know they do, and if you question this, just look at a pretty flower garden where all color combinations are used together beautifully by nature, or at a scene where different kinds of woods blend beautifully.

Behaviorist By PATRICIA MCCORMACK UPI Health Editor

All you parents: take it easy on yourself

Here are ways to get started.

1. Don't bite your nails over failing to heed the child-raising rules from Dr. Benjamin Spock, Dr. Lee Salk, and other experts who make or made their living telling you how to parent - as the art of child-raising is called these days.

2. Don't think all is lost because you didn't tell junior the facts of life before he was out of the sandbox.

3. Don't become suicidal because child's career development plan isn't solidified by the time he's 10. 4. Don't feel you're related to a rat when you decide against being pals with the kids. 5. Don't be afraid to demand that the schools simply teach reading, writing and arithmetic - and maybe a little world history.

6. Don't worry about injuring your kid's psyche when you blow your top. Parents have a right to blow their tops. And the kid's psyche? Well - it might be bad if you don't rough it up on occasion.

7. It's okay to playdown all the lesson stuff, too. Tennis, golf, ballet, piano, fingerpainting, ceramics, sculpting, kite flying, top-twirling. You won't cheat your child if he doesn't get enriched by all that. He's exposed to all that, anyway, it's questionable that it will make much real difference.

The tips are not from a book that might be titled, "The Backward Book of Child Raising.

Rather, they are part of what a child psychologist from the University of Chicago calls the hottest trend in child-raising today.

Dr. Bertram J. Cohler, associate professor at the university's department of behavior sciences, said the trend is that a lot of theories are being questioned by maverick psychologists.

"We have not found any strong evidence to date," he said, "that a lot of theories work.

"Psychologists are re-examining older developmental data and I think it's going to throw the United States Office of Child Development into a tizzy — and the Na-tional Institutes of Health."

And, then, there are the people who write child-raising books!

Cohler's contribution to upsetting the child-raising cart of theories was a lengthy study of the headstart program - a costly federal program meant to give poor children a helping hand in the preschool years.

It's Cohler's professional judgment that headstart doesn't do much good. Besides, as he sees it - most kids turn out, no matter what. They just do - it's a part of the human condition and natural development.

One of the ways he backs this up: fewer than ten per cent of the kids who grow up in poor urban areas turn out poorly.

All the rest - exposed to rotten environments, no enrichment, perhaps even gutter life - grow up okay in spite of their deprived childhoods.

It is his theory, by the way, that kids of the great depression in the thirties turned out to be better adults than the coddled kids of the sixtiews, raised by liberal parents in the child-be-all period.

Cohler believes the miserable showing of young Americans in the sixties is proof that the liberal theories in the childraising arena didn't work.

- Keep your problems to yourself. Don't burden your kids.

- Sex education happens. Kids learn from the best teachers in their own time, their peers. They learn better than if the parents teach them. Besides, too many facts, too early robs a child a chance to fantasize about sexual feelings - a necessary stage of development.

- All boys 9 to 12 should be taken out of school and put in something like a CCC Camp, forestry-type camps that were activated in America during the great de-pression of the thirties. They are very uncomfortable in school. Keeping them in school is a waste of their time and a waste of money. They could learn something useful in a camp - how to use their bodies.

- Girls of this age should stay in school. That's what they do best at those ages. Boys are lousy students until adolescence. Then they turn around and pass up the girls.

For example, one theory in child raising likens kids to trees. "As the twig is bent the tree will grow."

That might be okay for trees but it's not the way humans develop. They grow and develop in stages and put something from the past and something of the future into their development.

There's not much anyone can do about programming the lifelong human development to make a person something it's not in nature's cards for him to be.

Some of Cohler's theories on child-raising and child development:

- Schools should teach reading, writing, arithmetic and some world history. For 12 years. That's all students need to know to get started in life. Teaching economics, psychology and sociology is folly. Students aren't ready for it.

- Being pals with your kids blurs the generation line. Kids should know they are kids and parents are adult. (Cohler is leader of Cub Scout Pack 4504 in Chicago, a pack to which his 10-year old belongs. He also has a son, 7. He does not

1 large egg 2 cups milk

On wax paper thoroughly stir together the flour, sugar, soda, salt, allspice, cloves and cinnamon. Halve the persimmons and put through a food mill; discard the skin residue; there should be 2 cups pulp. In a large mixing bowl beat the egg and milk until blended; add the 2 cups persimmon pulp and beat until blended. Add the flour mixture and beat well until blended. Turn into a buttered 2-quart oblong glass baking dish (11 3/4 by 7 1/2 by 1 3/4 inches) or similar utensil. Bake in a preheated 325-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean - about 1 1/4 hours. The pudding will look dark brown. Serve warm with whipped cream. Makes about 12 servings. Leftover portions may be reheated.

tieups, especially in miniature "personality dolls" and board games. tieups, One leading retailer even has said that if a toy doesn't have a TV tieup there's no use promoting it.

The toy manufacturers have found a new way to double your spending if not your pleasure, by promoting multiple doll sets. Now there's the Charlie's Angels set, with three dolls; also, Donny and Marie Osmond, The Captain and Tennille, and Starsky and Hutch.

Many of the TV personality dolls are half the size of a standard uncelebrity doll like Sleep Time Baby at a similar price. Some of the TV celebrity dolls are cheaply made, often don't even resemble the character very much, and are packed in boxes with extra flaps that made them noticeably bigger than the product in-side, researcher Jane Harmon reports. But as many parents have learned, buying these dolls is only the start of a series of purchases. All have accessories, often priced as much or higher than the original doll.

The Charlie's Angels dolls actually have 10 extra outfits that cost about $4.50 each. The Cher doll has some of the costliest accessories: $14 for a dressing room playset and $12 for her "Makeup Center." The tag on the Cher doll itself has jumped. Apparently the more notorious Cher's behavior, the more they charge for her doll; $9 for this year's model compared to $6 for an earlier model still shown in some stores.

The big promotion is for beauty kits for the personality dolls. Charlie's Angels also have a hair-care set, especially since they include Farrah Fawcett-Majors. Even Marie Osmond is plugging a beauty kit. Like the others, it has inexpensive items like a cheap comb, brush and mirror. You could save by making up a beau-ty kit yourself for any of these dolls. And you'd be adding a personal touch to the gift.

Board games also have many TV tieups, such games as Baretta, Welcome Back Kotter, Charlie's Angels Game, Barney Miller, Bionic Woman, and so on. Most are the basic game; spin and race to the end of the board. Most also are the smae price or even more than such standard games as Monoply and Clue, except that the Donny and Marie Osmond TV Show Game at $8 costs almost twice as much as most others. But a thoughtful gift buyer, seeking to buy gifts of more lasting play value and financial worth can still find in the same stores good values in basic playthings. Many of these cost noiticeably less than the TV tovs.

Many times you can save on sets by assembling them yourself, such as tool sets, tea sets, and wood block sets. Toy tea sets cost as much as $11.

Since most of a child's playthings for the whole year will be those he gets for Christmas, test the value this way: Can you see the child playing wit this item two or three months frm now? Does it teach him anythign about the world around him? In the case of many TV toys on the market, the child's interest may scarcely survie for weeks. Carefully chosen playthings can be im-portant to a child's development. They can be tools for discovery, stimulating a child's will to learn.

Toddlers (ages 1-3) need activity and a chance to explore the objects around them. Educators recommend playthings that help them recreate their environment. These include building blocks, toy houses, play people, miniature towns and farms (but don't buy a city child a farm set) and housekeeping toys. Equipment like magnifiers also help a young child understand the world around them.

Young school children become interested in real "work" as distinguished from makebelieve work. They can use: craft materials; model kits; tools; sewing materials; introductory scientifici equip ment such as magnets, microscope and micro-viewers; math and science games and materials; musical instruments; field glasses; and many other materials and equipment of lasting value.

Care, Effort Can Prevent Pests' Visits

By VIVIAN BROWN AP News

Those little and big holes that might be found in your fieldstone house foundation should be plugged up to protect householders from little animals or insects that might want to spend the winter indoors.

Some people might be amused that tiny animals - chipmunks, field mice, squirrels and others they admire in the wild --could harass a householder, but it isn't funny when they unexpectedly come across one of the creatures in their cellar.

A young man who works for a fix-up service was called by one client at dawn. She said she hadn't slept all night because she thought the screen he had hung over an attic opening would not keep the field mice and other varmints from getting into the living area of the house. She wanted the screen replaced by a solid wood covering. New rural residents may be especially wary of such intrusions

One woman became hysterical when she encountered a swarm of bees in her house. She didn't know what to do - and still doesn't know where they came from but she happened to have the vacuum. cleaner nearby and used the tool to suck up as many of the insects as possible as they went to the window seeking bright light.

Another woman sensed something sailing above her, as she sat in her living room, and when she called out to her husband - "It's a bat - catch it," he laughed. He knew that bats avoid objects, including men trying to catch them, by a very sophisticated sonar system. They can fly through caves or houses using, their built-in sonar without touching any ... solid object, and they are almost impossible to snare when in flight.

The bat in this case took refuge behind a large picture. The man of the house brought a large towel and a stepladder to the spot and peered carefully behind the painting in anticipation of the bat's flight. from behind it.

But no bat! Where did it come from? Where did it go? It was anyone's guesse and the lady of the house declared she could not sleep there: it might be anywhere, she pointed out. The fact that the bat appeared on Friday the 13th didn't make things any better.

The man, however, decided that since e: it had appeared during the winter season, it must have come out of the kitchen chimney flue. And, when it disappeared. had probably found its way back. Most bats hibernate for the winter, but this one apparently had stayed around a while longe

In fact, chimney flues are a good source of unwanted birds (bats are mammals but they fly!). Several birds, including an owl, had fallen down the chimney and there was no way to escape. The man ofthe house was finally persuaded, after the bat's appearance, to close the flue when it was not being used.

If a house is a new experience, it is best to hire a professional mason to plug up foundation holes and a chimney man to cap chimneys. Experienced do-it-yourselfers would know how to go about treating. the foundation and books can be helpful. Many amateur fixers do a fast but inefficient job of stopping up foundation holes, and Unwanted visitors of the animal variety are adept in wriggling through the smallest opening.

After a person has lived in a rural area for a while, most intrusions can be taken in stride. But even the most blase sometimes jump when the unexpected hap-thu pens. One woman told her husband that eo she had thought there was a long limb of the a tree stretched over their house path.

"Oh it's just a garter snake." he said after looking at it and recovering his composure. "They're very beneficial and shouldn't be harmed." he added. The la dy wasn't amused. Any snake is a bad snake was her conclusion.

Author Eases Fear Of Dentists

By JOY STILLEY NEW YORK (AP) — Marcia Hatfield, whose only previous contact with the dental profession had been "as a very bad patient," has not only found herself in a new career involved with dental hygiene but is making an impact on dental care among children throughout the world.

It's all the result of her creating the 'Toothbrush Family,'' a set of characters who caper in the bathroom at night "when a magic beam of moonlight creeps over the windowsill and enters the room.

The stories she has written about Tess and Tom Toothbrush, their family and friends, have the blessing of such professional groups as the World Health Organization's Oral Care Unit and the American Dental Assn.

"Once upon a time I was a mother of oung children," relates the middle-aged Mrs. Hatfield, an award-winning writer of children's books and television scripts in her native Sydney, Australia, "and like all mothers of young children I ran into the problem we all encounter. My young-er son rebelled, dug his heels in and threw his toothbrush down.

"I felt there should be some better way than forcing to get him to brush his. teeth." she explained in an interview in New York on her way back from the Annual World Dental Congress in Toronto, where she had been invited to discuss her Toothbrush Family.

The better way proved to be the tales she invented for her sons, then 5 and 7, and her daughter, then 9. She wrote 13 stories. which began to draw an appreciative audience from the primary school four doors from the Hatfield home.

That was 12 years ago, and as the children grew up she put the stories away and forgot about them, having failed to interest a television producer to whom she had shown them.

"A few years ago I bumped into the producer in a local fruit shop," she recalls, "and he said he'd been looking for me - he was ready for the Toothbrush Family, now that preventive dentistry was such a big thing. I couldn't get home fast enough to see if I still had the stories.

She found them, they became a child-ren's record: then a book illustrated by SNACKTIME FARE 1 cup all-purpose flour 1/2 cup fine whole wheat or rye flour 1 tsp. baking powder 1/2 tsp. baking soda 1/4 tspisalt 1/3 cup butter or margarine 1/2 cup sugar 1 egg 1/4 cup dark corn syrup. 2 tsp. vanilla On wax paper stir together the flours, leavenings and salt. "What I've tried to do is make tooth care a fun thing. The stories are fantasy adventures, meant to entertain rather than lecture, but the children get to know the Toothbrush Family as funny little characters and it takes away the tedium from dental care." says Mrs. Hatfield, who had her material checked for accuracy by the Dental Health Education and Research Foundation at the University of

Mrs. Hatfield, a widow who has been traveling all over the world recently in connection with the enterprise, finds-"life is anything but dull." She is still writing for, TV, but has another project in mind as soon as she finds time.

By SALLY LOGUE Family News Staff Teaching Americans to cook Chinese food without a lot of fuss and expense is the goal of Mrs. P.K. Koh.

"Americans need to eliminate the idea that Chinese cooking requires many unusual ingredients," she said.

Mrs. Koh has been living in Lubbock since her husband, a material scientist, accepted a teaching position at Texas Tech University in 1966.

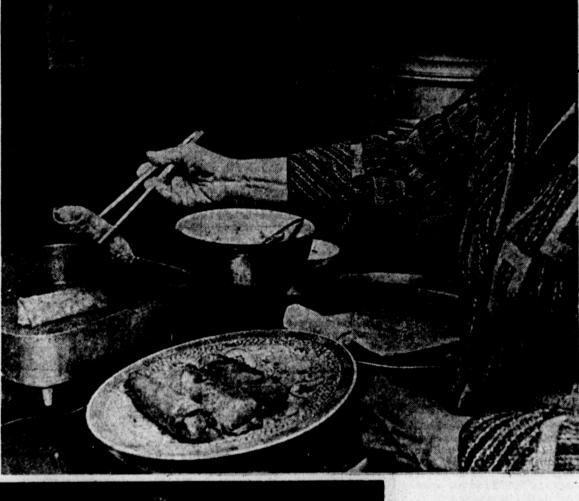

The Kohs moved to the United States in 1943 from Kum-Ning, Yunnan, in southern China. "During the war that city was the only way left open out of China," she said.

Having grown up as one of seven children in a wealthy family, Mrs. Koh said she never had to learn to cook.

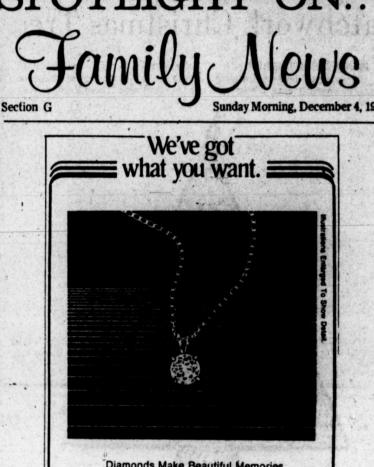

"I learned by myself after I married. During the war when there were no maids, I had to teach myself by experimenting."

Mrs. Koh said she has to thank her husband for encouraging her and putting up with all the trials and tribulations of bad cooking and ruined rice.

Since those early days of experimenta-tion, Mrs. Koh has mastered the art of Chinese cooking. She opened the first authentic Chinese restaurant in Lubbock, which she has since sold.

a Chinese dinner is available in one's own kitchen or in the nearest grocery store, she said.

"If you don't have one of the Chinese ingredients you can usually just omit it," she added.

Mrs. Koh said the only things that are really essential are soy sauce, ginger, scallions and sesame seed oil, and these, she said, are availiable in local grocery stores.

Mrs. Koh said she has all the utensils used in traditional Chinese cooking, but when asked what the most important thing in her kitchen is, she replied, "My skillet.

Mrs. Koh also is an instructor, and originated the Chinese language classes she now teaches at Tech.

The cooking lessons and the language classes are all part of what Mrs. Koh calls her 'purpose.

"I want to make the people of Lubbock aware of Chinese culture. If even only one person can now say that he can make egg rolls because of Jean Koh, then I will be happy."

Springrolls, or as they are more com-monly known, egg rolls, are one of Mrs. Koh's specialties. "The secret of good egg rolls is the filling," she said.

Patchwork Christmas Tree Requires No Maintenance

By JOANNE SCHREIBER Will someone you love be spending Christmas in a nursing home or hospital?

Make a cheerful patchwork Christmas tree to hang on the wall, at the window or on the closet door. These trees are easy lower edge of tree trunk. Tear paper to make, require no maintenance and may be used year after year. Furtheraway, trim seams at points, and turn to more, real Christmas trees are sometimes not allowed in health-care institutions, for many sensible reasons and a patchwork tree should meet with no official objections.

The following directions will make a nice tree about 30-inches high and 25inches wide. Cut your basic pattern piece from cardboard: a perfect equilateral triangle, 5 inches on each side. This will include one-quarter-inch seams.

You will need: a selection of red and green cotton prints three-fourths yard of green print or solid for the back 1 yard dacron polyester quilt batting few yards red knitting worsted

7 jingle bells

Sew patches together, following dia-gram. Take one-half-inch seam allowance and make five rows of triangles. Sew rows together to form tree. The tree trunk is made from one full triangle and. two half triangles. Cut and stitch to tree. Using the finished tree as a pattern, cut backing and two layers of quilt batting.

Place back on a flat surface, wrong side up. Place the two layers of padding on top and pin in place. Turn over. Place pieced Christmas tree over backing, right sides to-gether. Baste. Stitch one-quarter inch from edge, with pieced tree uppermost. Slip strips of tissue paper under the batting to keep it from catching in the feed dog as you stitch. Leave opening at make your own stuffed and colored Christmas ornaments, Start with bastiste or other soft white fabric to stuff with polyester and use colored fabric markers to draw angels. Santa Claus, canes, pets, bells, toys and other cheerful objects.

Materials need are: Less than one yard of hastiste or other soft white fabric fabne-and leather decorating markers for coloring, a detail pen, a pattern, a plastic pattern pencil, yarn or ribbon for hangng, polyster fill and a needle and thread.

Cut out rectangular pieces of fabric about 6x8 inches, which will be large enough for both front and back of ornament. The designs for both front and back should be drawn or traced on before the fabric is cut for the two sides.

First draw your own design or trace one from a publication or pattern book.

The fabric is placed over the pattern, which will be visible through the material. Trace the sewing line only (a solid black line) with a plastic patern pencil on the wrong of the fabric. On patterns that have a separate pattern for the back, trace the sewing line.

A high school student writes: "I have been very interested learning about the body's powerful immune system in my biology class. Why doesn't the system work agaisnt cancer?"

ANSWERline: It does, but why it is not more successful is a question being attacked by a small army of cancer researchers. Many scientists strongly suspect that in the cancer patient the immune system has either been fooled into not recognizing a tumor as foreign, and therefore something to be destroyed, or the immune system itself is deficient.

It has been observed that cancer incidence can go up six to 100 times normal when patients with other health problems such as those receiving kidney transplants are given immunosuppressive drugs to prevent rejection of the transplant

Medical scientist have tried various methods with different levels of success to boost the immune system to fight cancer. In general this approach works best when used in combination with other forms of therapy such as chemotherapy. There are many ways of manipulating the immune system - everything from introducing tubercular bacterial vaccines into ment. These volunteers, however, only work with patients on physician approval. . . .

A secretary explains: "I have recently read accounts of a brassiere that a woman can wear to help her find breast cancer. Is this true?"

ANSWERline: A thermal or heat pattern sensing brassiere has been developed that may be - but has not been proved - useful as a device for detection of possible breast cancer. It is in the testing stage, and is primarily important as a way of reminding women to do breast self-examination each month.

Use of the brassiere depends on very exact instructions because the wearer must compare the pattern that shows up on the brassiere when she wears it with a photograph of herself wearing it at the time she is given the brassiere by her physician.

First Wine Sisterhood Formed In France

By RAFAELA SEPPALA PARIS (UPI) - The Order of the La-dies of the Duchess Anne could have been a knitting society or a women's bridge club, but it would not have caused so much commotion.

The organization is France's, and possibly the world's, first wine sisterhood. It is named for a Breton queen of France.

It was organized this year by Odette Kahn, an energetic, attractive food and wine critic and magazine director. She decided one day she had had enough of being an "associate member" of hundreds of French all-male wine brotherhoods. She realized quite a few women in France knew at least as much about wines as men.

Mrs. Kahn has been involved with wine since she was a secretary for the late Madeleine Decure, founder of one of France's most respected culinary magazines "Cuisine et Vins de France" ("Cuisine and Wines of France"). With the late chef Curnonsky, she was aware such a wine sisterhood would need the moral support of a similar male organization to be taken seriously.

Mrs. Kahn took her idea to an old friend, the Murquis Robert de Goulaine, head of Knights of the Bretvins, a wine brotherhood of the Nantes region. He readily agreed to sponsor the sisterhood.

"Since for most women wine does not come alone." Mrs. Kahn said. "we decided to make the association of wines with French cooking one of the objectives of our sisterhood

"Hundreds of regional wine brotherhoods in France work to promote only one kind of wine but we decided that our order should be unique and promote all the wines of France.

The statutes of the new order read:

"This association is aimed at enhancing the wines of France by their association with cooking, culinary arts, regional products and tourism."

"We will hold meetings twice a year without the costumes the male brotherhoods use at their meetings," Mrs. Kahn said in an interview in her souvenir and book-cluttered office. She is director of "Cuisine et Vins de France" and the specialized wine magazine, "Revue du Vin de France" ("French Wine Review"). The order's meetings will include wine tastings, testing of prospective members' knowledge of wines and discussions of French wines and ways to promote them. Full membership is open only to women. Men can become associates. Foreign chapters will be known as embassies.

So far the order has about 100 members. They include Mado Point, wife and successor of the late French master chef Fernand Point; Gisele Berger, president of the newly founded Association of Women Chefs and Restaurant-Owners, and several women winegrowers and wine dealers.

Mrs. Kahn said creation of the order prompted a great deal of interest in the United States and Belgium. "Embassies" are about to be created in the latter coun-

The order has been received enthusiastically by women, but many French male food and wine critics have scoffed at the idea.

Mrs. Kahn good-humoredly dismisses critics with a wave of her manicured hand:

"Nothing is more fascinating than the world of wine. Wine is a work of art, like a Monet painting."

ATLANTIC RECORDS SIGNS JAY BOY — In the early 1970s, a familiar face in the through gigs at the now-defunct Texas Tech coffeehouses and then through appear-Lubbock entertainment scene was Jay Boy Adams, a long haired folk singer hailing from Colorado City. Gradually, Adams earned stronger and stronger followings, first

Jay Boy Adams A 'Recording Artist' At Last

By WILLIAM D. KERNS A-J Fine Arts Editor

Back when this decade was first coming out of the chute. Lubbock had a bit more trouble lining up concerts. Musical entertainment then consisted of 'major" attractions like Grand Funk Railroad and James Taylor and The Carpenters, yearly appearances by John Denver and The Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and a local boy named Jay Boy Adams playing at the Texas Tech coffeehouse damn near every Saturday night after the Big Game. Folk music had not yet been completely trampled by heavy metal. Elton John had yet to discover electricity And Adams gained a following.

Admittedly, it was a local following. But it was enough to earn him a Municipal Auditorium date with Jackson Browne. The fans got even more vocal and, at a private post-concert gathering in Lubbock for John Denver in '72, the blonde headliner was forced to listen to Adams play. It was hoped Denver would pull a few strings, perhaps give Adams a plug with the record company. But John Denver was tired and unimpressed, as well as rude, and ended up telling Jay Boy he owned a beautiful guitar but his songs "didn't make sense.

Five years later, those disagreeing most with that weary judgment are record producer Bill Ham and the major recording label of Atlantic Records. About four months ago, you see, Lubbock record stores were promoting a new album simply titled "Jay Boy Adams." It seems that coffeehouse singer had followed previous Lubbock area artists like Buddy Holly, Waylon Jennings and Joe Elv into the world of record contracts and nationwide tours. But Adams' music remained an individual entity. The songs, most inspired by personal experience, are still mellow and still reminiscent of the scented candles and h typified the coff ISPS Jay Boy Adams, like his music, also remains an individual entity. And in a two hour interview with the Avalanche-Journal at his Lubbock home, he discussed the Atlantic contract and the events leading up to it, his music and the important role his family has played in his career. The hair is still long, the body thin and the voice still broken with long thought-filled pauses. With a cat on the doorstep and a living room full of plants. Adams retained a "country boy" atmosphere and, indeed, made it more than clear he'll never leave West Texas.

Still, just getting signed by Atlantic had to be a surprise. Atlantic is not exactly known for mellow sounds, not with a popular stable of talent including The Rolling Stones, Led Zeppelin, Bad Company and Aretha Franklin. Adams said, "Firefall is the only Atlantic act comparable to my music. So I guess maybe they signed me just to stay competitive with the other labels. But really, all of the reasons I could think up would amount to only 10 per cent and my manager's efforts would total 90 per cent. He really worked for me."

The man managing Adams is Bill Ham, who's not done too shabbily with ZZ Topp. Adams first met that band, becoming friends with guitarist Billy Gibbons, in early 1971. But it was a difficult time in his life, as he explained, "the night I met ZZ was really the start of the beginning of the whole thing (career). But it took me eight months more to mature enough, because I'd been living in the mountains at the time. I didn't know what I wanted to do. I dropped out of school here and just sort of left West Texas.

"I was trying to get it together. I didn't want to go to school. I didn't want to play in a rock and roll band. I was tired of playing clubs. Anyway, I had friends with a cabin in Ruidoso and they offered it to me. They're horse trainers and they weren't using it in the winter time, and I think they kind of wanted me to look after things, too. So I just took my guitar and my clothes and went on up there and started experimenting with my writing."

Adams stayed not only through that winter, but on into the next year's autumn. He returned to Lubbock when a friend named Steve Moss urged him to open ZZ Topp's show at the Municipal Auditorium. Jay Boy said, "I was really afraid to play in front of that many people then. But Steve kept bugging me and hassling me and kidding me. And I knew Gibbons and wanted to see how ZZ was getting along. So I did it.

And after the show ZZ's manager, Bill Ham, told me to give him a call if I

The album's release date was postponed continuously though. First the color compositions weren't turning out right. Then extra money was found for a lyric sheet. The lyric sheet was optional and would take extra time. Jay Boy's father was extremely ill and the young songwriter wanted very much for his dad to see the album: "I called home," he said. "and told daddy about it. The record was a big thing for him, too. I told him about the lyric sheet and he said. 'What the hell. If it's gonna help you, do it.'

"Shortly after that he went into the hospital - and he died before the album was released.

Though he still appears saddened when speaking of his father's death, the singer remains happy with his relationship with Atlantic. "When I met everybody, it wasn't like a business relationship at all. And they take care of us when we go into a new town. They make sure the album is in the record store, and they make the time-buys on the radio. They hold up their end of the bargain

Adams' friendships, new and old, mean a lot to him. When local critic Doug Pullen commented unfavorably on the use of string arrangements of Adams' album, Jay Boy said, "I thought the strings may have been overbearing at times. But it was our first album, and we were just ape about having them at all. All Ham had produced before was three-piece, hard rock, foot stomping, bluelight, boogie rock and roll. And he's no amateur, not after earning four platinum albums with 7.7.

"But I thought David Bentley - he's our bass player - did an excellent job writing those strings. I was hurt as much for him as myself, because I know how proud he is of those parts."

"I've never really left Lubbock," he said. "I don't know if you were aware of that. Sometimes it feels like I have, because we're on the road and traveling so much. But my home, where I was raised and all, is south of here in Colorado City. Some of the guys are from Lubbock, though, and it's just hard to leave Our manager has been after us to move to Houston since he lives there and it's hard for him to get with us at rehearsals.

We haven't worked Lubbock since we played Fat Dawg's about six months ago. Though we'd like to play here, we just haven't had time. Lubbock is, well, we look upon Lubbock as our home. We don't want to blow off the people here, but we feel that, since we played here so much the past couple of years, we needed to concentrate elsewhere. And we've been trying to promote the record in the East, Midwest, South and, next month, the Far West.

Asked about the reaction to his music in other parts of the country, Adams revealed it's "ranged from mediocre to great. A lot of places have been just like home. Especially recently. On the East Coast below Washington, D.C., before you get too far up north where the really crazy people are, it's great. In Virginia and West Virgina, people are just like here. They like the music. They like having a good time. They listen to the words, but they're also willing to stomp their feet a bit."

But "Jay Boy Adams," the album, is a very laid back LP. Very little material on it would inspire such foot stomping. What about the reaction to his folkish style?

'That's a hard question to answer," he said. "In the live show, you see, we don't just do the album material. We do some of my newer stuff, which is more into the Marshall Tucker or Allman Brothers feel. ... I think it would be really hard to sit down and play an hour of super laid back tunes and keep everyone's attention. For the simple reason that people outside the West Texas region don't know who I am.

"My music direction has changed so much from the times I played at Tech. still like to play with a cello or a string quartet. (Cellist Arthur Follows of the Tech music faculty has played with Adams on numerous occasions.) I still do, when the money's right and the timing's right and it's easy to locate the musicians to do it. But I've tried to change my direction some, too.

'Like Jackson (Browne) is still playing all his old, good stuff like 'Jamaica Say You Will' and 'A Song For Adam,' but it would be hard for even him to go on stage in front of 6,000 people and play only tunes like the ones you listen to before you go to bed at night." ever decided I wanted a musical career.

Months later, Adams was in Houston visiting his ill father at the medical center and, while there, called Ham and said, "To the best of my knowledge, I think I want to attempt a career in music." Ham spent the day with Adams, listening to him play, and told him to expect a call in a couple weeks. No one, though, expected Bill Ham to move so quickly

He called Adams on a Friday afternoon and told him to be in Dallas the next day. Adams recalled, "I flew into Dallas and a couple boys met me and took me to a hotel. They said there was no time for me to sound check because ZZ was having some problems. They left and said they'd be back at 7:30 p.m.

"Man, I was so naive at the time I didn't even ask where I was playing or how much I was making. I liked Bill, you know, I trusted the guy. Anyway, we pull up in front of the Memorial Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. and it still doesn't hit me. Then at five minutes after 8, a guy comes up and asks me how I want to be introduced. Nobody ever asked me that before. I said. 'Just introduce me as Jay Boy Adams from Lubbock, Texas.' And I follow him up these steps.

"Then it hits me that something is happening. People are running around everywhere. I walk on stage and find myself facing a sell-out crowd of 12,000 people! It was like I didn't have time to get excited. I didn't have time to get scared. Because I probably would have backed out the minute I knew what was going on.

The next two years saw Adams living on the road, traveling with ZZ Topp He opened ZZ's shows, but he also labored as a roadie. Setting up equipm and tearing it down. Driving it to gigs. Taking care of Gibbons' guitars. Ham kept working with him and even managed a verbal contract for Jay Boy with Epic Records until the deal fell through because "we had some disagreements over song titles and secrets got out on the streets before they were supposed Ham negotiated with Atlantic Records between January and April of this year, then called Adams and said, "How does it feel to be a recording artist?" Adams told the A-J, "I asked him what he meant and he said, 'I just signed your contract with Atlantic Records 30 seconds ago.' ... You know, getting signed to a contract had taken so long I'd told myself I wouldn't get excited if it happened

"Well, I bounced around this room for about three hours. It just totally blew my mind. It was one of the happiest moments of my life. My dad was real sick at the time and this was real important to him, too. Ham said to call my folks, but we'd all been let down before when Epic fell through. I didn't want it to happen again. So I called Ham back and said, 'Do you PROMISE this is for real?

"He said yes: so I called my folks and said, 'Does my voice sound any different? It should. Because now I'm a recording artist.' Both of them got so tickled. They were squalling on one end of the phone in Colorado City. and I was out of my mind up here in Lubbock.

Steel guitar player Cal Freeman, highly respected in West Texas, recently left the band. But Adams response was, "Calvin's been in the music business a long time, and I think he's just kind of tired at being in the middle of the rat race trying to make it. Man, it can get old after awhile. A thousand miles of strange beds and you start saying what the hell am I doing - especially when you're not bringing home very much money. ... So we parted on real good

"But the band hadn't undergone a personnel change in two years. We've been like a doctor and his staff in the operating room. You never had to ask for something; it was already there. Besides Cal being my friend, his leaving is also tough in this respect. Consequently, we're not replacing him on steel guitar: we went after Woodrow Key, an Amarillo boy who plays guitar and just kind of doubles on steel.

Meanwhile, Adams says he is continuing to use his personal experiences as a breeding ground for songs "Cactus Cafe" tells the story of a broken down old cowboy he once saw in a cafe in Bronte. Turned out his father knew the man. "Nine Hard Years," a story about a cowboy forced to shoot his horse when the animal breaks a leg, came out because "Daddy gave me my first horse when I was six. I immediately wanted to run high tail through some tall grass. but he said that if my horse hit a hole and broke a leg. I'd have to shoot it. That stuck out in my mind and, even now, I'm still aware of it every time I get on a horse.

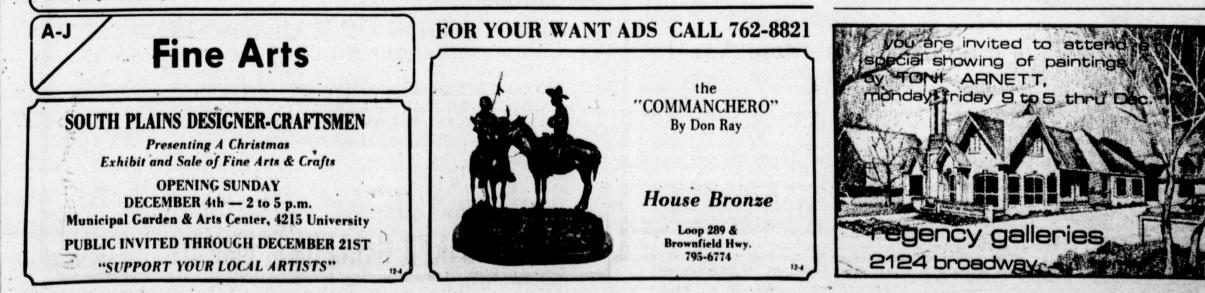

The tune "In Rain In Spring" is a story blasting discrimination against long hair. The plot is fiction, with the idea born out of a time Adams and a friend were brutally beaten solely because of their appearance. And "The Legend Of Jack Diamond" is a take-off on John Brown with an anti-slavery (anti-rascism, really) message. Adams explained, "I come from a little bitty town and, if you chose to classify your friends, you'd be running around with just one or two friends

"I hung out with black folks, Mexican folks, white folks, didn't much matter to me. As a matter of fact, I learned to play guitar over across the tracks with a couple of black boys who helped me. It was a black kid who taught me to tune my guitar.

And of course the inspiration for the moody "Mitchell County Sunset" is already obvious to anyone who knows Jay Boy.

"Colorado City is in Mitchell County," he said. "And to me, there's nothing more beautiful than to watch the sun go down in West Texas. Or watch it come up. I love this part of the country. I was brought up here. I hate the wind storms, but I sure do miss them when I'm in New York or some place like that. And I much prefer a dust storm to a city riddled with smog."

Indeed, with music and words and spirit, Jay Boy Adams is still not only his father's son, but also an offspring of West Texas. Odds are neither parent will ever let go.

6-G-LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977 ovie Utilizes Lamera Tricks

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) - Walt Disney supplied the screen with one of its most unusual pictures when he released "Darby O'Gill And The Little People," now playing at the Showplace Four theater complex in Lubbock.

For the first time it featured masses of the Little People, cavorting about in a vast underground palace where their king, Brian Connors, plans his assault on the human race in general and Darby O'Gill in particular.

The whole thing is managed by an extensive bag of camera tricks, including the use of mirrors, oversize props, split screen photography and something called force perspective - the trick of putting people who will appear normal-sized in the foreground and the "wee folk" off in the distance, carefully matching sets and lighting to make the illusion complete. But as important, if not more so, to the picture's marvelous plot is its cast. It stars Albert Sharpe, who created the first Finian McLonergan role on Broadway; Janet Munro, the pert little British actress; Sean Connery of James Bond fame; and the late Jimmy O'Dea, top comedian and mime of Dublin. The film features Kieron Moore as a delightful heavy, Estelle Winwood as his shrewish mother and Walter Fitzgerald as Lord Fitzpatrick, owner of the local manor and Darby's employer. A half doz-en players from the Abbey and Ulster theaters in Ireland fill out the role of more important players over and above, for instance, the 150 extras and dancers who portray the Leprechauns.

Sharpe plays the title role as Darby, a feisty old Shanachie or traditional Irish storyteller, who essays to cope with the Little People in order to wrest from them their gold and the other good things of life. O'Dea portrays Brian Connors, King Of The Leprechauns, who does his best to foil Darby in achieving his selfish

Miss Munro and Connery provide the love interest, turning out an on-again-offagain topsy-turvy romance as exciting as the picture itself, with its ghostly death coaches and banshees and devilish spirit horse. Connery has come a long way in stardom since the making of "Darby O'Gill" but the excellence that has brought him to where he is shows plainly in this performance.

Rather than move the production to Ireland, where it is set, Disney created his own "little bit of heaven" in two of his biggest and newest sound stages, on the backlot where the town of Rathcullen was erected, and on the Albertson and Rowland V. Lee ranches near Los Ange-

It was a vast undertaking that required four months for the filming. One sound stage alone, big as a football field inside, was required to house a single set, the underground palace of Brian Connors under the storied mountain of Knocknash-

No stone was left unturned to make the whole thing as realistic and believable as possible, for Walt, half Irish himself, professed to believe that Leprechauns do really exist in Ireland and liked to think that he was convincing his movie audience that some of them did indeed come over from the Old Sod to play in his mov-

Museum Features Fireboard Display

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) - The Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Collection has put on display a 19th-century fireboard with a landscape called "The Castle of Montgomery.

Fireboards were used until the mid-19th century to cover hearth openings when the fireplace was not in use, but well-documented Southern examples such as this one are rare. The subject of the landscape is believed to have been derived from a print or book illustration.

The painting was given to the museum in 1974 by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Moore of Spartanburg, S.C. It was too fragile for exhibition and was therefore restored by trainees in the Cooperstown, N.Y., Graduate Program for Conservation of Historic and Artistic works.

ALICE COOPER LIVE - The photograph of singer Alice Cooper squatting before a cyclops is appropriate since the Coop has just released a live album called "The Alice Cooper Show." However, A-J rock correspondent Doug Pullen claims that Cooper's debut live recording lacks planning. He also introduces Cooper as Hollywood's newest "nice guy.

'Alice Cooper Show' Has Shortcomings

By DOUG PULLEN A-J Rock Correspondent

A student who studies for an exam the night before will usually wind up with a disappointing grade. The error lies in lack of preparation for the test.

That same sort of rushed preparation will also cause the downfall of many a rock recording. "The Alice Cooper Show" (Warner Brothers) fails because of such shortcomings contained within the live recording.

Alice Cooper toured the United States this summer, the first time he's made the trek of American one night stands in two years. The singer's show was so popular that sellouts occurred everywhere it was booked. Cooper's show was both visually and musically entertaining.

The singer utilized a large stage with a TV-like facade. Films, dancers and tapes enhanced Cooper's vaudevillian rockerama.

Such a show doesn't feature much rock and roll, though it supplies a good deal of escapist entertainment (as does Kiss). But the Coop doesn't shortchange his audience. Ace session men Steve Hunter and Dick Wagner were employed as guitarists, Ex-Vanilla Fudge keyboardist Mark Stein was with the tour initially, with Fred Mandel later taking his place. Famous rhythm section sessionists Prakash John (bass) and Whitey Glan (drums) rounded out the group.

Last summer's Cooper tour was indeed successful. But one wouldn't know that from listening to "The Alice Cooper Show." Poor and rushed production by Bob Ezrin and Brian Christian blurs the musicians' apparently good play.

Cooper himself is guilty of uninspired singing, with but a few exceptions, which makes the album less appealing.

Ezrin's tampering with the instruments is typical. He did a good production job on Hunter's solo album this year, but reduced Hunter's work on Cooper's spring release of "Lace And Whiskey." Ezrin managed to do Hunter the same injustice on Peter Gabriel's solo spring release.

Hunter shines despite the obstruction. His guitar playing is less conventional than Wagner's.

Side one is typical of the inadequacies of "The Alice Cooper Show." The sole song in which both Cooper and the producers work in consonance is 'Only Women Bleed." The melody of Cooper's first hit ballad is deliciously instrumentated with Mandel's keyboard and the empathetic guitars of Wagner and Hunter.

The material on side two is more indicative of how good Cooper's summer shows were. "Billion Dollar Babies" is sung with the same decadent

ISH MAGIC - At the command of Jimmy O'Dea, playing the king of the Leprechauns named Brian Connors, Albert

Sharpe as Darby O'Gill plays a lively Irish tune for the nimble feet of his royal highness in Walt Disney's live action feature called "Darby O'Gill And The Little People." The story of love, laughter and Leprechauns in Ireland was directed by Robert Stevenson and also stars Sean Connery and Janet Munro. Rated G, it is currently playing at the Showplace Four theater complex in Lubbock

Arkoff 'Debunks' Predictions

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (Special) -Predictions terming the virtual demise of the motion picture theater by 1985 are foolish and untrue, but dangerous," according to Samuel Z. Arkoff, board chairman and president of American International Pictures.

Speaking at the annual convention of the National Association of Theater Owners, Arkoff blasted a report issued by David Fishman for the Arthur D. Little Consulting Firm, declaring that Fishman had "no real facts and had no standing as an authority."

Arkoff went on to say, "If those statements had been made about any other business, even by a somebody, people would have said 'the Fishman stinks from the head' and it would have been a one day sensation. But our business is almost always in the news, and people are aware of the numerous squabbles. A lot of people believed Fishman and quoted him, and even those who didn't quite believe him thought maybe there's something there.'

Arkoff chided the theater owners for disunity that has arisen in the industry with suits and countersuits filed by exhibitors and distributors and indirectly

"But, we believe so much in this business that we are progressing. We aren't satisfied with what we've been and where we've been. We're reaching, out and gearing ourselves for bigger and better. We're not going for broke because we're not philosophically geared that way. But, in our own way, we've made progress

Domestic theatrical revenue for AIP has more than doubled in the past four years. Arkoff also said AIP's foreign revenue is four times what it was only four years ago.

Arkoff again stressed his company's faith with, "We refuse to let the tangle of all the trees obscure our vision of the forest. The same vision that led us to form a company in 1954 when the Cassandras of the industry, both exhibition and distribution, were predicting doom, at that time, leads us to believe that this industry has better days to come.

In spite of the nonsense, the stupidity, the bickering, the nancissus love, the sometimes terrible waste, even the closing of some theaters - we believe that the industry will survive and thrive."

The delegates also were shown a product reel with excerpts from AIP's 1978 film releases, including "Force Ten-From Navarone," "Meteor," "Mean Dog "Grayeagle" (which begins at Blues." Lubbock's Showplace Four this Christmas), "Record City," "Island Of The Doomed," "The Incredible Melting Man," "Starcrash," "California Dreaming" and "Our Winning Season.

He also expressed displeasure at the fighting between National Association of Theater Owners (NATO) and the National Independent Theater Exhibitors (NITE).

Neither NATO or NITE will save this business or your business," Arkoff asserted. "They may help. All well meaning organizations can be helpful, but not all the efforts of the Department of Justice, the Army, the Navy or the ships at sea will save your business. Only your faith, your own efforts and, most of all, your own commitments can do that.

'At American International I think everybody knows that we love the business and I think everybody knows that we are totally committed. We have no other business. We have no companies of any kind. We are totally committed to the motion picture business, and we are confident. We never had a losing year and we can stay in the framework of what we've been and, I believe, continue to have winning years.

Kwouk To Appear With Sellers Again

NEW YORK, N.Y. (Special) - Burt Kwouk has been signed to co-star once again as Peter Sellers' cook and karate companion Cato in "Revenge Of The Pink Panther," now filming in Paris with Tony Adams as executive producer.

Sellers ' as previously announced for the role of Inspector Clouseau and Hertert Lom for the role of Drevfuss.

Kwouk was featured as the karateopping adversary of Clouseau in both Return Of The Pink Panther" and "The Pink Panther Strikes Again.

"Revenge Of The Pink Panther" is written by Frank Waldma and Ron Clark, based on an original story by Edwards.

Ely Gains Honor In Bullet Awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (Special) Coun-try Music Magazine held its first annual Bullet Awards for new talent recently, with MCA recording artist Joe Ely of Lubbock winning best "New Male Runner-Up" with James Talley.

The Bullet Award winners were decided through secret ballots by more than 50 of the top country m sic journalists.

Ely and his band have been in Nashville recording a se ond album, the follow-up to his critic lly acclaimed debut on MCA.

Walon Green To Adapt Novel

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) - Walon Green has been set by Lorimar Productions to write the theatrical motion picture screenplay of "Elizabeth," based upon the gothic Random House novel by Jessica Hamilton about a contemporary American teenaged girl possessed with possible supernatural powers.

Steven North will produce the picture, with shooting slated to commence in mid-1978.

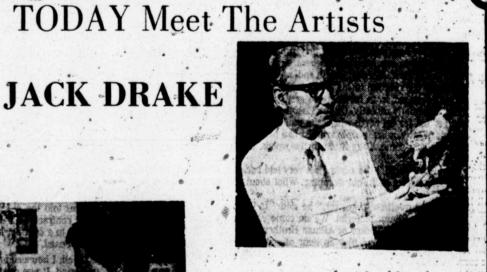

Green will begin his adaptation immediately upon completing his current writdirector William ing assignment for Friedkin on "Brinks.

Green previously received an Academy Award nomination for scripting "The Wild Bunch." He also adapted this year's 'Sorceror," also for Friedkin. He has also written the script for Bob Rafelson's upcoming film "At Play In The Fields Of The Lord.

"Elizabeth" represents another Lorimar production. The others are "The Choirboys," premiering Dec. 23 at Lubbock's South Plains Cinema; "Someone Is Killing The Great Chefs Of Europe," now filming in Europe; "Avalanche Express," set for European production next February: "The Big Red One," beginproduction next April; and "The Fish That Saved Pittsburgh" and "The Big Biazzaro," both now being scripted. beauty which characterized Cooper's studio version of the hit.

Hunter's work stands on the medley of "I Love The Dead/Go To Hell/Wish You Were Here." Again. the guitarist plays in his off-beat way, Cooper's encore, "School's Out," lacks the rebelliousness of its studio predecessor. Cooper is no longer the shocking creature who disgusted parents. Now he is Hollywood's "nice guy" - the type who answers questions on "Hollywood Squares" and "The Tonight Show.

"The Alice Cooper Show" would have made a decent live recording had more time, care and effort been poured into it. Instead, I think someone may have had too much greenery on his mind.

Red Buttons Stars In 'Pete's Dragon' Coming To Lubbock

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) - There is one roast in which Red Buttons does not wish to participate - his own, in Walt Disney Productions' "Pete's Dragon," a musical fantasy combining live action and animation about a boy and his sometimes visible friend, Elliott the dragon.

"Pete's Dragon" is slated to open Dec. 16 at the Fox Fourplex in Lubbock.

The veteran entertainer, known lately for his witty remarks at celebrity dinners, stars in the film as Hoagy, reluctant sidekick to a quack who wants to cut up the dragon for expensive medical potions. It is Hoagy, the little man in the bowler hat, who is sent to fetch the beast and is almost fried in the process.

Buttons stars with Helen Reddy, Jim Dale, Mickey Rooney, Shelley Winters and juvenile Sean Marshall.

Red was born in The Bronx, New York. His parents, Michael and Sophie Schwatt, christened their middle child Aaron. The family lived in a four story walkup apartment where four families shared one bathroom. Only a few years later, the boys began singing on the street corners for pennies.

His career 'really began when he was hired as a singing bellhop at Dinty Moore's City Island Tavern. The shiny buttons on his uniform and his red hair gave him a nickname which has become one of the most famous names in show business

He smiles, "I was going to call myself Blue Zippers, but they wouldn't have let the marquee read Blue Zippers Opening Tonight." On weekends, while attending Evander Childs

High School, Red sought jobs as a comic emcee, taking almost anything that was offered. On one occasion, he unknowingly officiated at a Nazi Fund Rally

After the streets of New York, Red began working the nightclub circuit in the Catskills up the Hudson River. From there he joined Minsky's burlesque shows

A comedian has to have timing and, for a long while, it seemed fate was not on Red's side. In 1941, Jose Ferrer put Buttons in a leading role in "The Admiral Had A Wife," a comedy about the shenanigans of Naval officers at Pearl Harbor. He was chosen Dec. 6. The Japanese attack on the Hawaiian base was the next morning.

Then Buttons was set for his movie debut at Par-amount when his draft notice arrived. However, timing began to improve. As an Air Force private, he received a break when cast in a leading role in Moss Hart's "Winged Victory," which ran on Broadway several months, toured the country and was filmed. Entertaining for the USO while in the service is one thing, but Buttons recalls performing at the Potsdam Conference before an audience including President Harry S. Truman, Josef Stalin and Winston Churchill.

After the service, Buttons returned to Broadway in Max Schulman's comedy, "Barefoot Boy With Cheek," and he continued on the nightclub circuit. In 1952, he starred in "The Red Buttons Show" on television. It ran for three seasons with top ratings. One of his lines, "Strange things are happening, entered into the idiom of the time. He won a Michael Award (later renamed the Emmy Award) as best comedian of 1953.

In 1957, he fought for and won the role of an American GI in postwar Japan in "Sayonara." It won him an Academy Award as best supporting actor. He also garnered a Golden Globe Award from

In "Pete's Dragon," Buttons incisively un-derplays the role of sidekick to British actor Jim Dale, who portrays the dandy quack in his Ameri-can movie debut. "Pete's Dragon" was written by Malcolm Mamorstein from a story by Seton I. Mill-er and S. S. Field. Don Chaffey directed the pic-

A very special one woman show by noon Tuesday in the courtyard of Texas There is no admission being charged for either performance.

Miss Verhein descibes the show as dramatic portrayals of nine women drawn from the pages of famous plays: a progression through such works as

Lark," "The Lady's Not For Burning," House." Glass Menagerie" and "Luv. Each portrayal sees Miss Verhein fully costumed in her appropriate era, from ancient Greece to the present. She links the roles with informal commentary offering historical and dramatic settings for each cameo characterization.

According to the actress, "It is not a militant women's lib kind of thing. It is an historic perspective on the status women have held and the several kinds of power they have exercised in ancient Athens, the Roman republic, the Middle Ages, the Restoration period, the Victorian era, pre-World War I, the depression of the 1930s and in the 1960s. The performance is one hour long.

New Double-Deck Reservoir Planned

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - The future energy needs of central Ohio could be met with the construction of a giant double-deck reservoir to produce hydro-electric power, some believe.

The futuristic idea was presented recently by a group of businessmen who met with Columbus utilities director Robert Newlon.

The businessmen proposed constructing one reservoir on top of another reserir, and using the flow of water from the top reservoir to the bottom one to power generators for electricity.

Newlon said finding a source of water to fill the reservoir could be a problem in contral Ohio. He said the businessmen were thinking of filling it from area streams and rivers

Newlon said the businessmen expected the double-deck reservoir, costing an estimated $500 million, would produce the mammoth total of 1,000 megawatts, or to supply the electricity needs of

Widmark Launches 30th Year In Films

CULVER CITY, Calif. (Special) - Ri-chard Widmark has launched his 30th year in motion pictures as one of the stars of MGM's mystery drama "Coma." playing the chief of surgery in a large Boston hospital. "Who knows how many movies I've made," he commented. "I never count-Nevertheless, as he begins his third decade in films, Widmark has never been busier in his entire life. Without a single day off, he has played starring roles in four straight films: "Twilight's Last Gleaming," "The Domino Principle," "Rollercoaster" and "Coma." And less than 24 hours after his work in 'Coma'' was completed, he was ensconced at Warner Brothers as one of the stars of Irwin Allen's latest crisis movie

Tech Faculty Recital Slated

Pianist Judith Burganger and violinist James Barber, both members of the Texas Tech University music faculty, will be featured in recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the campus Recital Hall. There is no admission charge.

Featured on the recital will be representative works of Robert Schumann, Ludwig van Beethoven and Richard Strauss.

Opening the program will be Schumann's "Sonata in A Minor, Opus 105 for violin and piano," a poetic work exhibiting long melodic lines and alternation of the reflective and impetuous elements of Schumann's personality.

Beethoven's "Sonata In C minor, Opus 30, Number Two," a work of driving rhythm and intensity and one full of a dark and tempestuous color, will serve as the second part of the recital.

Following a short intermission, the recital will conclude with Richard Strauss' "Sonata In E Flat, Opus 18." Music department publicist James Toland describes the piece as a compression of the orchestra into the trame of a twosome, "a highly virtuosic period piece from the Victorian era which exhibits romanticism at its zenith.

Baker Gallery Opens Final Major Art Exhibition Of Season

The Baker Gallery will open its final major art exhibition of 1977 with an open house from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. today. The exhibition will feature the extraordinary work of New Mexico artist Jack Drake and Colorado painter Ramon Kelley, and both artists will be present today only to answer questions concerning their philosophies and their work.

The show, however, will remain on display through the end of the month. The Baker Gallery, 1301 13th, will also hold an autograph party for co-authors Kelley and Mary Carroll Nelson in conjunction with the exhibition. The two have recently completed a new book titled "Ramor Kelley Paints Portraits And Figures." Figures.

Nelson, a contributor to American Artist magazine, will also be present at the exhibition.

Woodcarver extraordinaire Jack Drake has more often than not turned down exhibition offers, due to the demands placed on his time by a multitude of orders. But with this show, his first in a long while, Drake once more brings to the forefront the incredible beauty of an ancient form of art: painted woodcarvings. Though the art form has been around for thousands of years, Drake is known nationally as one of the best in that specific media.

An active minister of God, Drake has altered the field of bird carving from mere decoy carvings to a fine art. He first introduced his work in the National Fly Ways annual exhibition years ago with beautifully carved flowers and birds so lifelike as to fool the eye.

Carvers from around the nation have, for years, traveled to see his work on display not only at the Baker Gallery, but at the Smithsonian Institute in Wash-ington, D.C., and the National Audubon Society's offices in New York.

During the past year, Drake received additional acknowledgement through a special invitation to exhibit with the National Academy of Design at its 151st annual exhibition. The usual process of acceptance by jury was disregarded. Drake displayed a family of master carved bobwhite quail, which will also be on display at the Baker Gallery today.

Drake also received an invitation from President and Mrs. Gerald Ford to display his carvings and castings at the White House during a state dinner for West German Chancellor Schmidt. Mary Carroll Nelson also wrote a feature story on Drake for American Artist, the top art magazine in the country. In striking contrast, Ramon Kelley is one of the nation's brightest young visual artists, successfully combining various mediums into singular paintings. In the new book, Miss Nelson writes of him and his work:

"Continuing practice at the easel gives Ramon a chance to keep exploring, to keep learning. Each finished piece is evidence of his pleasure in trying new methods, new surfaces, new combinations. His work has an identifiable Ramon Kelley handwriting of vigorous brushwork, made dynamic by contrasts in direction

"Usually he surrounds his subject with abstract color. This prevents a dated look. His subjects are real people, but not too closely tied with our rapidly changing era. Their faces and clothes have a kind of permanent validity. The Taos Indians and the peasants of Mexico appeal to him. When he does a scene, rather than a figure, he chooses a village or market over the more urban subject. And, of course, a nude is forever.

ject. And, of course, a nude is forever. "The energy in Ramon's work and the emotional impact of his models give the impression of an artist who works only with his heart — in the white heat of a creative urge. That is only partially accurate; he's always working things out and guiding his hand with decisiveness, so his head is involved in his work." The book itself is divided into three parts. In the first, the artist discusses his material, methods and working habits in a question and answer interview with Miss Nelson. Here he discusses his philosophy and professional goals and de-scribes how he adjusts from one medium to the next. The second part consists of six step by step demonstrations of paintings of portraits and figures. The final section is a one man show of Kelley's finished paintings, all reprod-uced in color with detailed explanations.

Wyoming born, Kelley has gained membership in such prestigious art socie-ties as The American Watercolor Society, The Allied Artists of America, The Pastel Society of America and the National Arts Club. His work has been pub-lished in American Artist, Southwest Art, Today's Art and, in France, La Revue Moderne

He is listed in Who's Who in American Art, Who's Who In The West and Who's Who in Art In England.

"WHAT IS DON RHODES doing interviewing Tiny Tim for his country music column?," you may be asking yourself

Frankly, that's what I was asking myself the other night as I was being driven by a True Records Co. representative to Tiny Tim's hotel suite in Nashville

a Country Queen.

Nashville, I accepted out of curiosity.

People attending the convention that week receive free newspapers, magazines, records and publicity material promoting various artists. Faron ("Hello Walls") Young gives out free shopping bags with his picture and name on the sides for people to carry their other free merchandise.

Playing a switch on Tiny Tim - who is known for carrying a shopping bag on stage and pulling his ukulele out - I put my camera and notebook in my Faron Young Shopping bag, and carried it into his suite for the interview Upon meeting the singer. I reached inside my bag and pulled out the notebook

IT DIDN't FAZE him a bit. He just told his manager to get him 50 of the Faron Young bags "because they have such strong handles." He then went to his own shopping bag and pulled out his ukulele, and settled down to sing me some old country and popular music tunes from the 1920s and 30s.

"I definitely think early country music artists are better remembered by country music fans than popular music artists are remembered by popular music fans," he said. "For one reason, you still can buy the records of early country music artists like Roy Acuff, the Carter Family, Jimmie Rodgers, Bob Wills and Merle Travis. Many of the early country music artists also are still performing today.

In that motel suite (which oddly enough was just down the hall from the roof-top nightclub where 1977 Country Music Association Entertainer of the Year Ronnie Milsap got his first big break in Nashville), he talked of early country artists like Vernon Dalhart, a Texas-born opera singer of the 1920s, who recorded country music's first million seller, "The Prisoner's Song" ("If I had the wings of an angel, over these prison wall, I would fly").

He also talked about the great trumpeter. Louie Armstrong, playing on one of Jimmie ("T For Texas") Rodgers' blue yodel records. "I've loved old western songs like "Sue City Sue" and "Jingle Jangle" for a long time." Tim said.

HE WAS REMINDED by this reporter that Grand Ole Opry star David Houston once described in Gainesville, Texas-born godfather and 1920s singing star, Gene ("My Blue Heaven") Austin, as saying, "He was was just a country music singer with a big orchestra in back of him.

"I would like to go back into the old country music and popular music files and record songs in tribute to those early artists," Tiny Tim said, adding he did not like his first single ("I Want To Be a Country Queen"), but did it for the publicity value and to fulfill a contractual obiligation.

He observed, "What the public expects from me is nostalgic songs. People have told me I started this period of nostalgia today. I don't know about that, but I do know we should honor our early recording artists. Recording means more to me than anything in this world."

After an hour and a half of talking to Tim, I went away still not liking his single record or his appearance. Yet, I believe, if given the right opportunity, this intelligent fan of old recordings could play an important role in preserving country music's early recorded songs.

ARTHUR C. CLARKE. Edited by J. Olander and M. Greenberg. 246 pages Taplinger. $10.95

ISAAC ASIMOV. Edited by J. Olander and M. Greenberg. 236 pages. Taplinger. $10.95

These are the first two volumes of Taplinger's Writers of the 21st Century series. Each book contains several studies of various aspects of its subjects works. There is some criticism, but the articles are largely favorable and attempting to illuminate rather than find fault.

Both Clarke and Asimov are writers sci-fi fans respect. Clarke wrote "2001: A 48 Space Odyssey" and Asimov already has had more than 180 books published, both science fact and science fiction. These two volumes will give readers a deeper understanding of the writers' work, what they did, and why and how they did it.

Science fiction is no longer underrated. and science fiction writers are no longer being overlooked. Their fans have always been vocal, but now they are numerous as well. And films like "Star Wars" and Close Encounters Of The Third Kind have made fans out of skeptics and turned fans into fanatics.

These books are valuable to the ardent sci-fi fan, but it's fitting that Clarke and Asimov are now honored in this way, too. Their ideas and extrapolations have given science fiction much of its shape.

THE RANDOM HOUSE ENCYCLO-

PEDIA. Editor in chief is James Mitchell. 2,856 pages. Random House. $69.95

It is doubtful that anyone not connected with the production of this encyclopedia has read the entire three million word volume. It is equally unlikely that any one person is qualified to review it. This age of specialization has made Renaissance man extinct.

However, though no one may be competent to review it, we are all capable of appreciating it. The editors hoped to put all the world's basic knowledge between the covers of one volume. This goal certainly forced them to make decisions every step of the way, decisions like what should be included and when had they explained enough. They made few poor decisions.

In order to be as brief and clear as possible, they made extensive use of pictures and drawings, over 13,000 of them, most in full color. And the pictures and text have been integrated so well that information is passed with minimum effort by the reader

The entire family will find this book fascinating and useful. Questions of health and history are as easy to answer as ones dealing with math and machines. There is even a huge section showing the world's flags and another devoted to maps. At times the book may not give all the information desired, but seeking an-

Fire Truck Color Changes Noted

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Fire companies around the country are trading in their old, red trucks for shiny, new yellow ones - mainly because of a long-ignored fact: red is hard to see.

Fire-engine yellow came into vogue a few years ago after an optometrist. Dr. Stephen S. Solomon, urged the switch, the National Geographic Society says. His studies showed the traditional fire truck to be a hazard to firemen and the public because red is hard to distinguish during the day and is even more difficult to see at night.

Also, most people who are color blind one in 12 drivers — don't see red crime-suspense-detective-espionage gen re. This new volume contains all of Mac donald's short fiction featuring detective Lew Archer.

These nine stories, most of which are rather long, were originally published be-tween 1946 and 1965. If they are read in chronological order, they show how Macdonald evolved as a writer and an artist.

The first Lew Archer novels appeared at about the same time as the first Mike Hammer books. The Hammer books were a great success immediately. Lew Archer, on the other hand, enjoyed only modest sales but slowly built momentum. Today, the popularity of the Hammer books is recognized as a flirtation with bad tast that couldn't - and didn't - last. However, every new Ross Macdonald novel makes the best seller lists and is reviewed as serious mainstream fiction.

Lew Archer is certainly one of series fiction's most popular characters. Archer fans will be glad to know his briefer adventures have finally been collected between the covers of a single volume Though most longtime Macdonald fans have read some of these stories belose. this book gives them a chance to see the ones they missed

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF. (Special) - Scientific data from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will be incorporated into "Meteor," the $16 m1llion film being filmed here.

Producers Arnold Orgolini and Ted Parvin have obtained reports on Project Icarus from MIT that concerns an asteroid approximately one mile in diameter that passed within four million miles of the earth in 1968.

If the asteroid had struck, the impact would have created a crater 10 to 15 miles in diameter and set off a shock wave two levels above the strongest earthquake ever recorded, according to the MIT report.

Sean Connery, Natalie Wood, Karl Malden. Henry Fonda, Trevor Howard and Donald Pleasence star in the film, being directed by Ronald Neame.

THE INCOMPLEAT ANGLER. By Robert Deindorfer. Dutton, 155 Pages. $8.95.

You don't have to be a fisherman to enjoy this book. You don't even have to like

For in "The Incompleat Angler," Robert Deindorfer succeeds marvelously well in seducing the reader away from the cares and troubles of the everyday world with his marvelous prose descriptions of nature and the pastoral life.

The solitude, the limestone bluffs rising on the far side, the whisper of the Dove (river), blotted out melancholy headlines from the morning newspaper," Deindorfer muses as he settles down to fish and recalls the words of his famous mentor Izaak Walton, whose age also was out of joint, that "for when the lawyer is swallowed up with business, and the statesman is preventing or contriving plots, then we sit on cowslip banks, hear the birds sing, and possess ourselves in as much quietness as these silent silver streams, which we now see glide so quietly by us."

As Deindorfer goes about his self-appointed task of fishing the British rivers that Walton had fished several hundred years before, he soothes and calms the reader with his lyrical descriptions of the idyllic settings in which he finds himself. He is witty also. Witness his descriptions of some of the people he meets on his travels. The old man in a pub, for example, "With a good thatch of white hair and rather less than the normal ration of teeth, his face was blotchy red, like a stale salmon, probably because he was a bit late in the season himself" or the fisherman who was "a red-faced sack of muscle who looked as if he might be a splendid rugby forward if he could only remember the signals."

Truly, a most congenial book

A SHADOW OF GULLS. By Patricia Finney. (Putnam, $8.95)

This book accomplishes an extremely difficult task - the evocation of Celtic legends in a believable tale of love and the struggle for power in Celtic Ireland. Some of the most famous legends are woven into a fictional story line - the Cattle Raid at Cooley, the flight of Nasai and the beautiful Deirdre of the Sorrows and their pursuit by Conchubar, King of Ulster

Moving through the narrative are such bigger-than-life figures as Cuchulain Mac Sualtim, champion of Ulster, and aging, shred Queen Maeve.

The author, remarkably a 19-year-old girl born in London, treats the body of rich Celtic lore with respect and has immersed herself in the detail of its rites with obvious care.

The story revolves around the fictional Lugh Mac Romain, son of an Irish Princess and a Roman centurian. The story of Lugh's conception is one of the most effective descriptive passages in the book close look at the social set of the colorful West Coast city of San Francisco.

Lugh kills the queen's consort when the old king attacks him for no apparent reason. He flees to Conchubar's stronghold in Klster where he is befriended by Cuchulain and the other mighty Celtic warriors.

Combining this experience with some historical research, she has come up with a detailed, often hilarious account of the doings of the so-called Upper Crust of San Francisco. It dates back to the mid-18th century when society was dominated by the gold prospectors, butchers and storekeepers who had become millionaires overnight and were living it up in this raw frontier town.

Gradually a society as elite as that of any eastern city did emerge, featuring such figures as Mark Hopkins, Charles Crocker, Collis Huntington and Leland Stanford whose names would become part of American history. This foursome conceived the bold idea of ramming a railroad through the rugged western mountains and linking the West Coast to the East. They succeeded and over this line rolled the wealth that would build the greatest fortunes in the West.

Soon ornate mansions began sprouting like mushrooms, the finest ones put up on a bleak, windswept peak that leaders of this new society called Nob Hill. Most of the houses were gingerbread monstrosities, distinguished mainly by their size. One boasted a 50-foot observation tower, another a 75-foot dining hall.

The earthquake and fire of 1906 turned many of these palaces into huge bonfires, but the city slowly made a comeback and new castles began going up; a parade of baronial manor houses and French chateaus along the countryside south of San Francisco

Most of the lavish livers were replaced by the jet set of the 1960s who preferred Nehru jackets to tuxedos. And now these swingers are being squeezed out. It began a few years ago when the Russians opened a consulate in San Francisco's once-exclusive Pacific Heights neighborhood. Then a mansion in the heart of that area was taken over by a group of drug addicts trying to kick the habit. You might say San Francisco has come full circle.

Q & A. By Edwin Torres. DVIAL. 1/4? & Pages. $7.95.

There is no good and bad, no black and white in "Q & A," a tough, taut novel about crime in New York City and the men who try to fight it.

Some of the cops and some of the attorneys are mostly good people but do have a tinge or two of badness. The same applies to the criminals; some are evil, but with some redeeming characteristics. Right up to the very end of this most absorbing novel it often is difficult to tell the bad guys from the good guys.

The protagonist of "Q & A" is Al Reilly, a street cop who has been to law school and now is a newly appointed as-sistant district attorney. Although he has been guilty of some unpleasantries in the past, Reilly is largely a devoted law enforcement officer who sincerely wants to do something about crime.

He is not a hard nose, however. His years as a cop on the beat have instilled in him a sympathy for the underdogs who make up the criminal class. He understands crime and what drives men to it. Now he is presented with his first big

THREE TYPES OF FIRE AND WHAT TO USE ON EACH CLASS A - Fires in wood, textiles and other ordinary combustibles containing carbonaceous material. These are extinguished by cooling and quenching with water which wets down material and prevents glowing embers from rekindling. Tri-Class dry chemical extinguishers are also effective on this type of fire and achieves extinguishment by fusing and insulating.

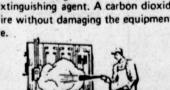

CLASS B - Fires in gasoline, oil, grease, paint or other liquids that gasify when heated. These are extinguished by smothering, cooling and heat shielding. Carbon dioxide and dry chemical are effective on this type of fire.

CLASS C - Fires in live electrical equipment. These type fires require a non-conducting extinguishing agent. A carbon dioxide extinguisher smothers the fire without damaging the equipment. Dry chemical is also effective.

Applications Being Taken By Nursing Home Here

No. 2 Mary

The Lubbock Nursing Home, located at 4120 22nd Place, is now open and accept-ing resident applications, according to administrator Sandra Curry.

Open since Nov. 19, the home can accommodate up to 120 residents in private and semi-private rooms with a staff that will number around 100 when the resident quota is filled. The staff includes nurses and nurses' aides, a medical records librarian, secretaries, activity directors, maintenance personnel, maids, a dietician and dietary employes and laundry service, along with Mrs. Curry. Also, a physician and pharmacist are on call 24 hours a day.

The home is licensed by the Texas Department of Human Resources. However er, Mrs. Curry says she hopes to exceed the standards set by the state. "We don't want to just meet the state's requirements, we want to go one better. We hope to provide the best nursing service and the best facility to keep the people happy. Good meals and good activities are what makes happy residents. We are running the home for people, not for owners or employes and we try to put the residents together who are congenial," she said.

The activity roster at the Lubbock Nursing Home is varied and future activities will be geared to the desires of the residents. Local singing groups will per-form; game tables are available; art les-sons will be taught; church services will be offered which are non-denomination-al: and even a beauty operator will style hair in the beauty shop at the home, she said said

Home Plan Provides Generous Living Space 'From Beginning'

By HIAWATHA ESTES

Farsighted home builders realize the dvantage of planning ample recreation and living space for all the family from the beginning, rather than attempting to add or convert rooms later. This home not only provides a generous living-din-ing area, but also a large family room which is partially open to the kitchen.

A maximum of privacy has been achieved in this design by locating the informal living area to the rear of the design. The family room is completely separated from the more formal living room so the grown-ups and teenagers can easitraffic but end up with a very efficient operating plan. These areas are separated here by the entry and hall which leads to the patio.

The generous amount of storage space is ahousewife's dream. There are nearly sixty lineal feet of closets and wardrobes. All bedroom are spacious, The master bedroom in additonal to having its own bath and dressing room has access to the partially roofed patio.

Candidates must satisfy the eligibility qualifications in effect at the time of their initial registration. Additional information may be obtained by calling Marilyn Armstrong at 765-5731.

'Voyage Into Evil' Features Top Cast

LOS ANGELES (AP) - John Forsythe, Christopher George, Lynda Day George, Ray Milland and Hugh O'Brian star in the ABC movie "Voyage Into Evil

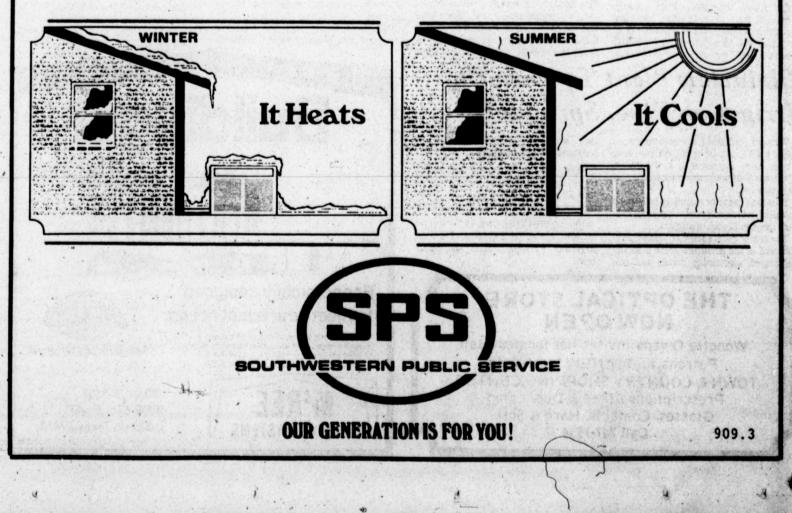

The psychological mystery takes place on a ship in the Gulf of Mexico. It will be filmed on Catalina Island and other coastal locations.

Think of it as a two-way electrical wonder, an amazing machine that cools your home or office in summer . . . then automatically reverses itself to heat in winter.

Think of it as a savings machine that costs less to operate than other electric heating/cooling systems now on the market. You know that all air — even frigid arctic air — contains heat. The heat pump just puts this simple principle to work. In winter, it squeezes heat from outside air and pumps it inside. In summer, it extracts unwanted heat from the inside air and pumps it outdoors.

Or consider something already in your home that accomplishes the same thing as a heat pump: your refrigerator. It removes heat from the interior of the box and expels it. Like a refrigerator, the heat pump's basic components are simple - electric motor, compressor, condenser, evaporator, and blower system. Unlike a refrigerator, the heat pump has a reversing valve that lets it change the direction warm air is pumped - inside in winter, outside in summer.

Switch To Coal May Lead To Serious Health Problems

By STEVEN SCHNEIDER Pacific News Service President Carter's proposal to switch to coal as a principal source of electric power may lead to serious health problems, experts warn. The President's plan to have coal replace natural gas and oil in power plants and industries has received the unanimous support of House and Senate conferees. The compromise bill Congress will now consider would prohibit new plants from using oil or natural gas, give the federal government power to force existing plants to shift to coal, and would outlaw most use of natural gas by utilities after 1990.

Utilities serving large cities with grave air pollu-tion problems, like New York and Los Angeles, will probably be allowed to continue to use oil and natural gas, but most others would be required to switch to coal Critics fear that burning coal without strict environmental safeguards could lead to rising death rates among urban dwellers.

Emissions from coal-burning plants, health experts say, are among the causes of bronchitis, emphysema, lung cancer and cardiovascular diseases. Dr. Bertram Carnow, director of environmental medicine at the University of Illinois School of Public Health, foresees a rise in "illness, disability and death among urban dwellers, particularly those with heart and lung disease" unless stringent control measures are adopted and enforced.

The burning of coal releases sulfur compounds into the atmosphere. These compounds greatly aggravate respiratory problems, according to Terry Lash, staff scientist with the Natural Resources Defense Council. For people who already suffer from such problems, he said, the increase of the sulfur compounds."could lead to death.'

Although Congress passed legislation this summer that would require coal-burning utilities to in-stall "scrubbers" by 1983, these sulfur-cleansing devices would not cut down on the total amount of harmful sulfur emissions in the atmosphere, if the Carter coal plan is enacted.

Government energy officials estimate that a 69 per cent increase in coal use would result in a 5.2 per cent increase in sulfur dioxide emissions by 1985, even with the scrubbers installed.

In addition, the scrubbers do not capture oxides of nitrogen or other fine particles released when coal is burned. If coal usage increases, the levels of these pollutants in the atmosphere will rise too. some by as much as 18 per cent.

The compulsory use of scrubbers recently received a setback, however, when a federal judge in Indiana ruled that the Environmental Protection Agency could not force a power company to install the anti-pollution devices in two coal-fired generating stations.

Some scientists such as biologist Thomas Hayes of the Lawrence Berkeley Laboratory, a principal center of government-funded anti-pollution research, believe the dangers of coal use may be ex-aggerated. "We're making significant progress," Hayes says. "The problems are real but not insurmountable because with coal we at least know what we are dealing with. It's not like nuclear power where the problems are relatively new."

There are, as Hayes points out, a number of coal processes-including one now in use in Britain -that either chemically capture or "wash off" the coal's sulfur and other toxic properties before combustion. Other promising technologies which minimize pollution problems are coal gasification and liquification. But while these processes are now being developed, all are costly and none is com-mercially available today.

Nonetheless, the energy crunch has generated substantial political support for the switch to coal. Among those in favor are the oil companies, which own one-third of the estimated 437 billion tons of coal that can be economically recovered in this country.

WASHINGTON - "Creating jobs" is a topic much in the news these days. Various special-interest groups are pressuring the President to launch a massive federal employment program of some sort

High levels of umemployment are not in anybody's best interest. But the way the problem is tackled is of critical importance.

Before you can create a job, you have to know how jobs are created. That sounds obvious enough. Nevertheless, it's positively amazing how many otherwise intelligent proponents of federal jobs programs seem to have overlooked the acquistion of this rather basic knowledge. Jobs are created by investment. If you want to open a store, for example, you need a lot of start-up money; money for such things as rent, stock, advertising, and pay for your staff until the cash starts coming in. The same principle applies to heavy industry, only more so. Big industrial processes require big, expensive machines. On the average, it takes $40,000 today to create one blue-collar

Where does this investment money come from? Ultimately, from savings. Yours, if your store is small and your bank account large. On a somewhat larger scale, the money may be borrowed from a bank. Then, the savings of many of the bank's depositers will be involved. Or, savings may be borrowed directly from individuals through the sale to them of stocks or bonds. And finally, a going concern may pay for diversification or expansion with its own savings, usually called "retained earnings."

Why should people risk their savings in this job-creating process? To earn a profit on their investment, of course. Which means that the product or service offered must be sufficiently attractive to the consumer

That, in a peanutshell, is the story of our economy. From it, you can deduce that job creation requires both consumer demand and adequate savings to finance the means of meeting that demand.

Now, let's take a look at that mythical federal product: "Instant Jobs" (just add money and stir).

The first thing we can tell about such jobs is that they will be producing something for which there is little individual consumer demand - otherwise, the private economy would already have creat-

The next thing we can tell about the "Instant Jobs" is that they will — like all jobs - require investment. But where will the money come from? The government doesn't have any savings (except on those increasingly rare occasions when there is a budget surplus).

There are only two ways for the government to get the money: Higer taxes or borrowing. Now consider the effect of those two alternatives on private job-creation. Higher taxes discourage savings. And government borrowing reduces the amount of savings available for private borrowing. Therefore, in the process of creating government jobs, the government reduces the ability of the private sector to create private jobs. Worse yet, the jobs created in the private sector are those for which there is a genuine demand, whereas the jobs created by government to "cure' unemployment are likely to be more of a drag on the economy than a stimulus:

A healthy private sector, then, is the best source of new jobs. To get that, we need a few less government programs, not a few more.

It's a fascinating subject, and an important one, but a little hard to cover in one short column. If you'd like to know more, we have an informative booklet titled "Who Is The Real Employer?" Plainview Plant To Turn Out Irrigation Pipe, Sprinklers

Western Ag Sales Co.'s plan to manufacture PVC plastic irrigation pipe and center pivot sprinklers at its Plainview plant has been announced by officials of the company

Two high capacity extruders have been installed, which will produce pipe from 6inch through 12-inch diameters.

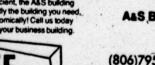

The center pivot sprinkler being manufactured in the Plainview plant is totally galvanized, electrically driven and features solid state controls, according to Newton C. Vance, president.

When completed, Western Ag's manufacturing plant building will have over 16,000 square feet devoted to the manufacturing of the products.

Other district operations of the company are located at Seminole, Lubbock, Hereford, Farwell, Dumas and Spearman.

Arsonists Blamed For Hikes In Fire Insurance

By LeROY POPE

NEW YORK (UPI) - If you think your fire insurance is costing three times as much as it did only a few years ago - you are right. But you probably don't realize that the arsonist is much more responsible than inflation for what you are having to pay.

If you were paying less than $50 a year for fire insurance on a small house in 1968. you may be paying $175 now. But the house is insured for two and a half times as much now and the insurance companies' operating cost has gone up because of inflation.

premium and around half the increase in rates since 1968 is due to the spectacular rise in fires set by arsonists.

The spreading incendiary flames now are responsible for 40 cents of every dollar insurance companies pay out in fire claims. Ten years ago it was only 10 cents.

"Since 70 per cent of the money insurance companies take in goes to pay claims and only 30 per cent to pay operating expenses, the huge rise in incendiary fires obviously is a bigger factor than monetary inflation in the skyrocketing cost of insurance," says Phyllis Popper of the Arthur Milton Organization, a New York insurance brokerage house.

ble to pin down the exact impact of incendiary fires on insurance rates but they agree that it has been very large. In the "fair plan areas," the poor neighborhoods where abandonment of buildings and incendiarism are so rampant people no longer can get insurance at anything remotely like standard rates, the cost of arson is astronomical.

rates, yet they started out in 1968 virtually at par with ISO rates.

The fair plan then was originally started just as a way to allocate risks. Since its inception, the New York fair plan has paid out $250 million in fire claims. At the presently accepted national average of 40 per cent of the total going for arson, that would be $100 million in New York atone.

But Kirschbaum added: "It is generally accepted that every dollar paid out in fire insurance claims means a loss of $9 additional in wages, rents, taxes and other economic costs to the community, so our $100 million arson loss in the New York fair plan areas alone really is a $1 billion economic loss.'

accepted national average for arson losses is much too low for the slums and

Robert Krischbaum, director of New York's fair plan, said fire insurance rates in some fair plan areas now are two to two and half times the standard ISO other fair plan areas. They think much more than half of all fires in these areas are incendiary.

TIPS FROM YOUR

Police officials and fire department officials tend to agree. It is in these fair plan areas that the more spectacular arson rings, such as those that resulted in numerous arrests in Boston, Detroit and other cities, have operated.

What arson in the areas where more or less standard fire rates prevail has done to insurance costs is stated pretty dramatically by W.D. Swift, vice-president for property claim services of the American Insurance Association, one of the leading trade groups.

'About 20 per cent of all the fires in the United States are intentionally set," Swift told a recent meeting of fire chiefs in Massachusetts. He said that, at the 40 per cent of claims paid rate, the loss amounts to $1.5 billion a year nationally and the additional economic cost to the nation is from $10 billion to $13.5 billion Swift also said the 40 per cent figure may be much too conservative as a na-tional average of direct incendiary losses by the insurance companies and he estimated that "the number of incendiary crimes is growing by 20 to 25 per cent. every year.

Arson is burning things for profit, incendiarism includes arson but also includes fires set by vandals, pyromaniacs and people seeking revenge.

Will Perry, an assistant to Swift, said one of the less appreciated aspects of the cost of incendiarism is the tremendous shrinkage in the tax base when areas like New York's South Bronx are leveled by incendiary fires.

New York fire records show that 30,000 buildings have been burned down in the South Bronx in ten years.

Naturally, the insurance companies have looked for ways to take the quick profit out of arson but they are hampered by the fair claims practice laws enacted in most states years ago to protect property owners from stalling by insurance companies and their lawyers.

These laws in the main require the settlement of fire insurance claims within 15 to 30 days after they are filed. If the company smells a rat, it must get permission of a court to hold up payment or risk being sued for punitive damages. The organized arson rings often include in their members shady lawyers and crooked real estate people, and even crooked fire department officials, who know how to set up an arson operation to take full advantage of these laws so they can collect the money and run.

In consequence, arson is a comparatively easy crime to get away with. Philip F. Simpkins of the Fireman's Fund group of insurance companies on the West Coast says it's the toughest of all crimes to prove and that only three of every hundred arsonists ever go to jail. The New York state legislature recently passed a law to deduct any taxes due the state or muncipalities from fire insurance claim settlements, but some legal experts doubt the law will stand up in the courts. State laws give the companies the option of replacing any burned property in-stead of paying cash. That formerly was used to make arson a crime that could not pay off, according to Howard D. Tipton, administrator of the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration. Tipton has been urging insurance com-panies to use this option and insist on rebuilding instead of settling claims in each.

But inflation has driven rebuilding costs so high that the companies seldom can afford this option; instead they must pay the cash settlement and take ad-vantage of the clause allowing them to take depreciation for the age of the building

Tipton blames landlords, police, fire officials, insurance officials, social work-ers, local politicians and the public all for the rise in arson. He says landlords burn down buildings in some big cities because they consider rent control laws

Tenants and neighbors are terrorized by the arsonists in the big cities and fear to help the police stamp them out. In slum areas of Boston and New York, youth gangs have been forcing tenants out of apartment buildings, taking the buildings over and stripping them of everything that can be sold, then setting them afire for kicks. This has been going on for the last two years.

Tipton said prosecutors, juries, politicians and social workers still tend to see arson in the David and Goliath terms of little people against the giant insurance companies and to excuse arson as a form of justified reaction against social injustice.

The operations of the arson-for-profit rings vary a lot and are quite complicated but they all follow the pattern of getting title to a rundown building for a song, inflating its paper value by a few rigged changes of ownership until a big insurance policy is obtained on it. Then the building is torched, the insurance company that has been careless or betrayed by one of its own agents or employes has to pay off and the ring splits the gravy.

How about the motivation for other incendiary fires? New York Police Chief Anthony Bouza said recently the motivation for that kind of incendiarism grows out of the fact that "we are creating where what the Romans did in Rome - we are creating a permanent under-class of unem-ploved and desperate people ... and if these people weren't permanently pacified by alcohol, we'd all be in trouble.

It's time for our annual CB Break Christmas gift buying guide and, this year, there are so many offerings available that even veteran shoppers will face confusion.

Among other things, the market is flooded with Japanese-made CB transceivers being sold for as little as $39. Our plenty of them, particularly those offering almost give-away bargains, are doing just that. So, for those of you planning to buy a CB transceiver for a Christmas gift.

here's what to look for. Power Output: Here, the maximum is set by the FCC. And that is four watts, no more. Most sets on the market average 3.5 watts output. And the difference between 3.5 and 4 is almost impossible to detect. But some of the cheapies are putting out no more than two watts. And that makes quite a difference. Ask the salesman to hook the rig you are considering up to a watt meter. You want as close to four watts as possible ...

Modulation Percentage: Again, the maximum is set. A CB rig cannot modulate in excess of 100 percent. Most good sets average around 85 percent. Some of the cheapies are as low as 40 percent. Ask the salesman what the rig's average modulation is. Try for a minimum.of 80 percent Receiver Sensitivity: This refers to the rig's ability to detect a signal and convert it to audio output. There are two sets of numbers used here. The first is for the signal output. expressed in microvolts (mv). Here you want the lowest number possible, preferably below 1. The next number is the degree of quieting, expressed in decibels, or dB. Here, you want a high number, at least 10. A good rating of sensitivity would be 0.7 mv or less for 10 dB.

Receiver Selectivity: This refers to the set's ability to reject unwanted signals.

static and noise when no signals are present: an "S" meter, which measures the strength of incoming signals: and a noise blanker, which reduces the static level even more.

Features you can do without include a PA. or public address, switch; and a delta tune, which shifts the receiver to compensate for off-frequency signals. These features are seldom. if ever, used with today's solid state rigs and can easily be skipped.

There are sets on the market which sell for way under $100 that meet all of the ballpark figures we have recommended.

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU

SO. YOU THINK you have written the Great American Novel - or something close to it. Yet, no conventional publisher will take a chance on your work of art. Some would-be authors give up at this point and miss the beginning of a budding literary career. Others may try to publish by themselves (with varying degrees of success).

But, the Better Business Bureau has unfortunate experience with a third option: a publishing house which asks the writer to subsidize publication with his or her own money. The BBB advises extreme caution for authors who are asked to pay all or part of their own publication costs

Unlike conventional publishing houses which put up their own money for publishing and promoting accepted works, certain "vanity" publishers assume no such investment or risk. With false promises of promotion and misleading statements about their operations, they ap-

Program Aimed At Helping Artists In Need

NEW YORK (AP) - A federally-funded program aimed at the development of jobs for unemployed and underemployed artists has been established here at the Foundation for the Community of Artists

* The program, which is called Art Work, is New York's first such project under the auspices of Washington. It is designed to serve both visual and performing artists from the area who meet federal eligibility requirements. It will offer free job development, counseling and placement.

To qualify for the program, artists must be unemployed for five consecutive working days, or receive some form of public assistance, or be underemployed and-or "economically disadvantaged," that is, have a yearly income below the current federal poverty-level standards.

Not at all, says Ed Sanders, a retail chain store executive.

Hair nets are no longer a fashion accessory, except for some elderly women, Sanders said.

But they are still widely used in hairdressing salons, and worn for safety's sake by women in some manufacturing industries and in laboratories where environmental control is critical. Some women also wear nets to protect their hairdos while they sleep.*

Sanders's firm, the F.W. Woolworth Co., has been selling nets since the 1920s. but their forerunners date back at least to the Middle Ages. Women then wore crocheted snoods and elaborate caps.

The first nets introduced by the chain were American-made copies of imported Chinese nets, handwoven and handknotted of real hair. The originals were $5, the knockoffs, 10 cents. Today, similar nets made by and for the same companies retail for 17 cents each or three for 37 cents.

per cent or even less of the money provided by the author may actually be used for such purposes.

According to the Federal Trade Commission, one vanity publisher who promised active promotion of one book, was reported merely to have taken out a small classified ad in The New York Times. And, listed along with the book in question were several others also published" by the firm.

Despite claims by vanity publishers, commercial potential for their books is very slim, especially for books already rejected by conventional publishers. The latter do, generally, have a more accurate understanding of the market potential of various books.

Before deciding whether to contract with a vanity publisher, an author should find out if the book could be edited, printed or bound elsewhere for the same or lower cost. (Many of the major vanity publishers operate in or near New York City.)

Look at the contract carefully before signing. Consult a lawyer about specific provisions. Find out, for example, if the publisher is obligated to bind out those books for which an order is received. Will the author have to pay an additional price to buy back the unsold copies?

It also is a good idea for a vanity-bound author to find out what book reviewers, bookstores and librarians in local communities think about the books published by a certain publisher. And, before making a commitment to pay your own publishing costs, ask how many authors have successfully recovered their investments within the past year. If possible, obtain proof of these claims.

Keep in mind, says the Better Business Bureau, that publishers cannot exist without authors. Conventional publishers take a substantial risk almost every time they accept an author. However, with the vanity press only the author assumes any risk. A vanity publisher can make money without ever having to make a sincere effort to promote an author's work.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

School Issue--Logic At Stake

FEDERAL JUDGE Halbert O. Woodward will have worked together as friends and has heard the evidence, the government's theories, the school district's facts, and now holds in his hands the educational futures of 33,000 Lubbock school students today and of generations to come

On Jan. 6, he will hear final oral arguments from attorneys for both sides. Shortly thereafter, he will decide whether and to what degree to modify his 1970 school desegregation order here.

It is an awesome responsibility.

THE ESSENCE OF the U.S. Justice Department's allegations is that Lubbock's white majority has deliberately and with evil intent sought to perpetuate racial segregation in our schools.

School officials counter that they have acted in good faith, under supervision of the court and with the Justice Department's own sanction, to comply with the 1970 desegregation order and to maintain a constitutional neighborhood school concept.

The Justice Department contends that official actions here are so tainted with racial overtones that the only remedy is to throw out the 1970 plan and order a systemwide mixing of white, brown and black faces in the classrooms.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS believe, on the other hand, that educational ends are best served by taking the schools to the pupils instead of the pupils to the schools.

They seek a go-ahead to construct new schools, as approved by the voters in an $11.9 million bond election, in newly developing subdivisions.

For every one of the Justice Department's theories about a racial bias behind decisions to build schools, close schools, implement optional attendance zones or utilize portable buildings, the school officials had logical and persuasive rebuttal.

At the bottom line, the question boils down to whether bureaucratic meddling from afar is better for Lubbock's children than are the decisions of their parents, their elected trustees and their school administrators.

IF WE HAD IT in our power, we would wipe out every vestige of poverty, of discrimination, of educational disadvantage.

We would rip away every bar to equal op-neighbors to bridge the gap and to attempt to solve our problems and make life better for all.

We have not fully succeeded, not by a long shot, but we are much farther along that road than can be said of any city we know about, or about which we have read, in which the federal courts and bureaucracy have forced disruptive and divisive "remedies" upon the people.

That includes cities in which the government's "expert" witness here, William D. Lamson, has had his theories implemented.

IF IT COULD be demonstrated, in fact rather than in theory, that wholesale busing or other devices to achieve racial balance actually have positive results outweighing the negative factors, then we would abandon our unqualified support of the neighborhood school concept.

Such, however, is not the case. Objective studies have shown no demonstrable improvement in classroom achievement and, in many cases, racial tensions and frustrations actually have been exacerbated by overblown integration plans.

What, then, is their purpose except to 'punish" today's children for the failures of past generations?

AS HE CONSIDERS the case before him, Judge Woodward will look to his lawbooks and to the options left open to him by the Supreme Court and the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

He will see there glimmers of light that the higher courts have begun on occasion to retreat from the more activist and dictatorial rulings of the Warren Court.

Further reflection and experience have shown that remedies which were perceived as ideal in theory have not worked out in practice and in some instances actually have done violence to our constitutional rights as free Americans.

WHEN IT REVERSED itself in 1954 to rule that assigning pupils to schools on the basis of race was unconstitutional, the Supreme Court acted in its proper role to secure the equal rights of individuals and ethnic groups.

In subsequent rulings, however, more so elsewhere than here, the courts have crossed over that line between protecting rights and violating another's in an attempt

Also why, if it ever does, you're one of the lucky ones. Either that or you work for the government. (In which case, you are in a special class we will get around to in a minute.)

"They." those fellows in charge of statistics. keep telling us our incomes are going up-at an annual rate of $15 billion. But that depends on what you call income; whether it's just wages or whether you lump in outside sources like interest, dividends, inheritances and other nice things we can't all count on.

Even if you limit it to wages, it depends on a lot of other variables. The whole paycheck picture, in fact, is suffering from a terminal case of "depends.

ONE SURVEY says the gross average weekly pay has gone up from $101.19 in 1967 to $189.28 today. But when you figure in inflation and higher taxes, the average wage earner works just about as long to buy what he needs now as he did 10 years ago. (And more than twice as long for a lousy pound of coffee.)

But those wage totals depend on what you call an "average" worker.

According to the Labor Department, there's the full-time wage earner; the white worker, the black worker, men, women, married men, wives and teen-agers. What they're paid depends on which category they're in.

The "average full-time worker" received a $15a-week pay increase during the year ending last May, but practically all of that was gobbled up by higher prices.

Although his salary went up to $212, a 6.9-per cent boost, that was only a drop-in-the-budget compared to the 6.7-per cent increase in inflation.

BUT EVEN THAT depends on whether you're in a blue-collar or a white-collar job. Pay hikes for the blue-collars over the past 10 years have gone up as high as 8.9 per cent annually, meaning they might still be able to pay their bills on time. Not so lucky are those stuck with white-collar raises. Their salaries have gone up only around 6.5 per cent a year in that time. And with inflation zig-zagging between 6.5 and seven per cent, those folks are not only treading water, they're sinking fast.

Back to the "average" worker. Another "depends" is where your paycheck comes from. If you work in tires, aluminum, oil, gas or automobiles, for instance, you're ahead of the inflation game.

The big losers include farmers, construction workers, bank clerks and metal-container workers. Their purchasing power went down this year.

BUT ALL BETS are off if you work for Uncle Sam. And there are 15 million of you, more than double the total 20 years ago. As payrolls go, the federal one is a beaut and job-seekers know it. There are 76 applicants for every opening.

Here again, though, how civil servants make out at the end of the month depends on the color of their collar. Better it should be white, because 1.4 million of those folks just got the biggest general raise in total dollars in government history: a seven-per cent boost that brings the average federal employe up to $17,350 a year.

That's on top of fringes like vacations (up to 26 working days), retirement (50 per cent of top salary at 55 after 30 years), automatic cost-of-living boosts and three times more sick leave than private workers get.

THERE'S MORE. Promotions are automatic at

Writer Says Non-Smokers

Also Have Few Rights Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Just read the article concerning Rick Arnold and his new anti-anti-smoking group. I admire his courage in the face of opposition by non- and anti-smokers.

The fact of the matter is, that smokers have been exerting their "rights" for many years now, and only just lately have non-smokers even been recognized, much less had any rights.

To re-phrase an old cliche, the smokers right ends when the smoke reaches the other fellows nose. I have no fuss with the people who want to engage in the habit of smoking, just as long as they don't cause me discomfort. Those of us who are allergic to cigarette smoke, and have children with either hay fever or asthma, just don't have much sympathy with those that smoke.

I'm sure Mr. Arnold didn't like not being able to smoke on his recent airplane trip, but I seriously doubt if he were as uncomfortable as my wife and I were on this summer's trip to Hawaii, when we had to put up with smoke for five hours straight-headaches, nausea and breathing trouble-which, needless to say, ruined the whole trip for us. At the time, we didn't realize that we could have demanded an extension of the nonsmoking section; from now on we'll know better. I'm also not quite sure how I feel about Rick Arnold's comment about those of us who nag smokers, their being a threat to our health and all, but the message from here is that y'all who are smokers have been threatening others health for many year now, not to mention their own health (that is their business, of course), but the time has come, I believe, when that threat has come to an end-at least a great deal of it. William G. Byars, 5521 28th St.

This, rather than the racially prejudiced motives ascribed to us by the federal minions, is the all-prevailing attitude of Lubbock's citizens of all races.

We are not proud of the way our racial minorities were treated prior to the Supreme Court's school desegregation ruling in 1954, nor are we satisfied with the progress that has been made in the 23 years since.

BOTH BEFORE and after 1954, however, Lubbock has fostered and enjoyed better racial relations than has been true of the nation as a whole.

This is because men and women of good-

ART BUCHWALD:

Take 'Em To Carter? But They Said Leader

WASHINGTON-A group of us were jogging in Rock Creek Park the other morning when a flying saucer from outer space hovered over us and then made a perfect three-point landing. Out of it stepped a dozen little green people.

One of them, who wore four stars on his shoulders, seemed to be in charge.

"Take us to your leader," he said. We all looked at each other perplexed.

"What did you say?" Sullivan asked.

"I SAID take us to your leader. Don't you understand English?"

"We don't really have a leader," my friend Guggenheim said. "But we have a President." "Maybe," said Lindstrom, "we should take him to Sen. Robert Byrd. He has more clout than the President.

"I'm not sure." Redfern said. "Sen. Russell Long is the real power in this country. Nothing gets through without Long's approval."

"HOW DO you get things done if no one is in charge?" the green leader asked.

We don't get much done," I told him. "We just seem to go along with everyone doing his own thing. The President says he wants to do one thing, Congress says it wants to do another, and finally a compromise is made which doesn't satisfy anyone. Would you like to meet Arthur Burns?

"Is he your leader?"

100

"No, but he's in charge of our money supply and he's giving President Carter fits."

THE GREEN person thought we were putting him on.

"Every country has to have a leader," he said, macing us with what looked like a laser pistol. "Please," begged Redfern, "we're trying to be helpful. But no one has ever asked us to take him to our leader before. Carter promised to be our leader but he's still trying to get the hang of it. It isn't easy to be a leader in the United States. If you had landed in the Soviet Union you would have been taken to the Kremlin right away.

The green person said something to the other green persons that we didn't understand. They all started chattering at the same time.

THEN THE green leader turned to us. Since you don't have one, they want to know if you would like me to be your leade

'I wouldn't mind," Guggenheim said. "Suits me," Redfern agreed.

'It's up for grabs if you want it," Lindstrom told him. "But as a matter of courtesy you ough to clear it with Fritz Mondale in the White House

Another Plea Made For Protection Of Animals

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

In regard to your article on Page 2-A of the Avalanche-Journal Saturday, Nov. 26, entitled "New Law Gives Animals Highway Rights," our family would like to know what procedure would be required to have a simular law passed in Lubbock and Lubbock County.

Not a day passes that you don't see not one but several animals run over. Some motorists seem to take pleasure in going out of their way to run down family pets and we among many citizens of Lubbock are fed up with this wanton destruction. Not only are they run down and in effect murdered, but they are left to lay for days on end. Can't we as citizens stop this needless slaughter? Please help us put an end to our families losing their pets who are a part of their families.

Lubbock Man Has Doubts About Sadat's Purpose

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

As much as I appreciate Sadat's courageous and gallant step with its resulting improved prospects for peace in the Middle East, I cannot but notice the one-sided view of your Evans/Novak column of Nov. 24.

They would have us believe that because of Sadat's unprecedented gesture it logically follows that "intransigent" Israel must reciprocate, not only wit a gallant gesture of its own, but by giving in to what they call minimum concessions including putting the country at the mercy of PLO murderers.

Even if their (Evans/Novak) demands were not so disproportionate, I do not remember Mr. Evans nor Mr. Novak demanding Egypt to reciprocate to Israel when that country pulled back enough for Egypt reopen the Suez Canal and regain much needed income. Where were they when Israel later on handed back the Abbu-Rudeis Oil Fields, at a one-sided loss, without even a political payback?

Is it that for Evans/Novak being rich in petrodollars makes Arab intransigency right?

As much as I'm delighted with improved chances for peace, when Mr. Sadat came to Israel and said, "We will not make the Mediterranean Sea red with Jewish blood; You have the right to exist," I feel that this welcomed gesture is but Mr. Sadat's political payback for the previous Israeli concessions. The score for peace is now even. Let's hope that both sides compromise and that real peace comes to that part of the world.

Former Philadelphia Man Can't Understand Lubbock

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Maybe I'm only a naive person from the suburbs of Philadelphia, but I just can't understand something about Lubbock.

Texans have fought and died (so have Pennsylvanians) for freedom and for principles that have made our nation a world leader, such as free competition and freedom under law, yet the town doesn't permit over-the-counter sales of liquor and beer.

As a result, we citizens have to waste time and gasoline to drive to distant stores. Paradoxically, however, in town, clubs and bars abound. Maybe the stores and clubs want it that way. Maybe the college students do too. Most of the students I've met enjoy drinking, but when I ask why people tolerate the situation, they usually shrug their shoulders. They don't know what to do either.

And I can't imagine Christian groups opposed 'to alcohol sales in as much as Christ's first miracle was to convert water to wine at a wedding feast.

But at least we freedom-loving people can buy handguns over the counter at the pawn shops here in Lubbock. Prostitutes, too, but not at

e federal trough. The loye v the more he earns, thanks to a three-per cent raise every year or two. This year's seven-per cent general raise was extra.

And the job is theirs for as long as they want it. no matter how much they goof off. And no matter how many of us think they're not worth what we pay them, it's almost impossible to get fired from the government.

(One exception: an underling who blows the whistle on his boss' dishonesty, bungling or fraudulent ways)

There's been some preliminary scratching around to change this. President Carter asked a management group to look into federal salaries. and last week it reported back with a suggestion that pay boosts be less automatic.

The present "merit system," it said, is a farce. It even offered up the startling idea that raises should be rewards for "good work." (Don't hold vour breath.)

IN DEFENSE OF their pay boost, federal workers argue that the last time they got anything like that was back in 1969, when white-collar employes received a 9.9-per cent "catch up" raise. During the double-digit days, they point out, prices went up 41 per cent while their increases averaged only 35 per cent

Well, as of now, they've caught up, all right: 12 raises since 1967, or and increase of 94.8 per cent. And the average salary for all federal workers, no matter what the color of their collars, has doubled from $7,642 to $15,738.

Compare this to wages for the rest of us, which went up only 88 per cent in that time, from $6,-179 to $11,627. Put another way, government pay now averages $4,000 a year more than pay in the private sector.

There's a reason the rest of us are having trouble making ends meet.

6-H-LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977 Consumer Complaint Guide List

By MICHAEL J. CONLON WASHINGTON (UPI) - Dear readers:

Go now to the place where you keep your scissors. Then cut this out.

The following list of names, addresses and phone numbers is by no means complete, nor does it constitute an endorsement of any of those mentioned. But we hope it will help you deal with some of the most common consumer problems. Some sources have toll-free hotlines to call. For others, a letter might be the best bet. - You've just opened a can of tuna and suspect you got catfood. The Food and Drug Administration has offices in more than 100 cities that will accept consumer complaints about food safety. Check your telephone directory or write the FDA, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Md., 20852.

- Your new deodorant gave you a rash or the shampoo you've been using burned your scalp. The FDA again, but this time write Heinz J. Eiermann, director, division of cosmetics technology, FDA, 200 C St. SW, Washington D.C., 20204.

- Your electric skillet shocked you and that new toy looks as if it might cut your 2-year-old. Call the Consumer Product Safety Commission free at (800) 638-2666 (Maryland residents, 800-492-3927).

- You've just moved and the moving company lost Aunt Sarah's breakfront. Or you took the train to Denver and got there a day late. The Interstate Commerce Commission has a free hotline. (800) 424-9312. Or write the Office of Communications and Consumer Affairs, ICC, Room 1211, Washington, D.C. 20423. cil of Bar Examiners says bar admissions

Black rolls 3-1. How should he play?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM No, your eyes are not deceiving you—this problem is indeed very similar to last week's. As a matter of fact, the Black position is identical. The change is in White's position—his men in his home board are rather more advanced. Black's roll is the same as last week. Then we suggested that Black should take advantage of the fact that he is ahead in the race to break his 9-point, and so make it easier for him to bring home his men without leaving a blot.

Now, however, White is ahead in the race. Should this make any difference to the way Black plays the 3-1?

All the difference in the world. Last week, Black was not at all interested in containing the White men on his 5-point. As long as he could bring his own men in safely, he was sufficiently ahead in the race to win if he did not roll badly.

But in this position Black will in all probability lose the game if White succeeds in escaping with the two men partially trapped in Black's home board. So Black must make it as difficult as possible for the men to escape, and he can only do so by keeping all the points in his outside board. He should take the 3-1 by slotting a man on his 2-point.

Only 6's and 5's allow the White men to escape. To escape safely with both, White must roll 6-5 or better. If, in this position, White should roll 6 and any other number than 6 or 5, he will be forced to run with one man from the Black 5-point, leaving a blot there. Should Black succeed in pointing on that blot, or even in just hitting and not getting hit back, he will have swung the tide of battle from White to himself.

Thailand Tin Mining Goes Underwater

By PAUL WEDEL BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Offshore tin mining produced more than half of Thailand's total tin production in the first six months of 1977.

Tin from dredges and small boats equipped with suction devices totaled more than 7,500 metric tons while total production from all sources was 13,400 tons, according to figures of the Department of Mineral Resources and the Bangkok Bank.

At the present price of about 11,000 per ton, that means a six month income of $121 million.

With that kind of money to be made it is no wonder the competition for undersea lucre is fierce and potentially violent. Small scale mining — especially when the tin was sold to smugglers could bring fantastic profits with a minimum of investment.

Miners on the beach at Ban Taay Muang in southern Thailand told of clearing 10,000 baht ($500) in a single night. Even split among ten crewmen and the boat owner, it brought in somewhat more than the going construction wage of 20 baht ($1) per day.

Illegal mining still goes on but a government clamp down has made significant inroads. All tin from the small miners must now be sold to the provincial organization at a price fixed to include government royalties.

Recently, the Thai government cut itself in for an even bigger slice of the pie by adopting a sliding scale of royalties that goes up with price. Since the spurt of tin prices on the world market the royalty has gone up to 32 percent and promises to go higher.

The new royalties have made smuggling even more profitable.

One southern Thai miner who described himself as a retired smuggler said much of the smuggling is now controlled by provincial officials in their role as purchasers of tin from the provincial concession set aside for the small-scale miners. "They buy up 2,000 kilos of tin, register 1.500 of it and make a tidy profit on the 500 they smuggle out," the ex-smuggler said.

So far, no evidence of such dealings has come to light, but the opportunity is there and the money is big. It remains to be seen whether the Thai government can control its own officials as well as it has controlled the offshore miners.

Small Company Specializes In Log Cabins

NORTH FORK, Calif. (AP) — Using old tools and methods, a small company here offers to build you the log cabin of your dreams.

With long-handled bark spuds, trimming adzes and axes, and bowing to modern technology long enough to accept the chainsaw, employes of the company, an offshoot of a wilderness survival school, will furnish a prospective homeowner with a log cabin of any size and shape.

John Somverville, an ex-Marine and head of both the company and school, said the work is done predominantly by hand because to date they have found no better way.

Selected trees are cut and the logs hapled to the location where they are peeled, dried and then hand-notched. When in place, each must be carefully trimmed to fit its neighbor.

THIS CHRISTMAS GIVE YOUR

WASHINGTON (UPI) - A public in-terest group has told the government it thinks TV commercials for a new cookieshaped cereal should be banned, on the grounds that children will grow up thinking cookies are a good thing to eat for breakfast.

Action for Children's Television filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission asking that Ralston Purina be banned from showing the commercials in question for Cookie Crisp, a pre-sweetened cereal.

The commercials depict a cartoon character. Cookie Jarvis, who "transforms children's cereal bowls into cookie jars," the group said. "The child in the advertisement states that the cereal 'looks like little chocolate chip cookies to me.

The cartoon character adds that the cereal is "shaped like little cookies from" a cookie jar," and "tastes like sweet crunchy cookies," the group added. ACT President Peggy Charren said:

"It is incredible that a major manufacturer has to resort repeatedly to manipulative tactics directed to children in order to stay in business.

The group told the FTC it believes the commercials are unfair and deceptive because they are "designed to intentionally confuse the child as to the nature and carbohydrate information on the labeling of its cereal products."

The group told the FTC it believes the commercials are unfair and deceptive because they are "designed to intentionally confuse the child as to the nature of the product by implying that the cereal is actually composed of small cookies."

"Ralston Purina is in no way advocating the consumption of Cookie Crisp cereal...television commercials emphasize that the product is a vitamin-fortified, ready-to-eat cereal, to be consumed as part of a complete breakfast. This message is stressed in both the visual and audio elements of the television commer cials. Further, Ralston Purina is one of only two ready-to-eat cereal manu turers that reveals sugar and carbohydrate information on the labeling of its cereal products.

NEW YORK (UPI) - Fire is like the weather. Many people talk about it, but precariously few do anything about it, says Glen E. Jorgensen, whose company is a major source of home improvement financing

Sixty-two hundred persons died in fires last year, and property losses totaled more than $3.5-billion, said Jorgensen, president of CIT Financial Services. The company's current customer publication offers these fire prevention tips:

Make certain everyone in your house, including babysitters, knows the location of the nearest fire alarm box. Keep the phone numbers of the fire and police departments beside the telephone.

Plan escape routes from all parts of the house or apartment. Tell everyone how to evacuate the building in case of fire. Install at least two workable home fire

River Kwai Gets New 'Span' For

'Deer Hunter'

RIVER KWAI, Thailand (UPI) - The River Kwai has a new bridge but it is very shaky and even more temporary.

Film makers involved in the movie, "The Deer Hunter," have strung a swaying bamboo bridge over the 40-yard river, about an hour's trip by boat upriver from the most famous structure.

The film bridge is the third known span over this muddy river that was made famous by a book and a movie about the World War II Allied prisoners who built it under Japanese guard.

The original bridge was not used after the war. It later collapsed. Only a few pilings can be seen today.

A second, steel bridge over the river is used by the State Railways of Thailand. It carries hundreds of tourists a week to and over the river.

Now the EMI-Universal film starring Robert De Niro is going to use a third bridge.

"The Deer Hunter" is set partly in Vietnam but the war scenes are being filmed here in the jungles of Kanchanaburi Province.

Stars De Niro, Christopher Walker and John Savage fall from the bridge (stuntmen will handle that part) after a brief fight with a Viet Cong guard. And that's it for the bridge in the movie.

The bridge will come down afterwards. A clause in the production contract requires the moviemakers to return everything to its original state.

The newest bridge over the River Kwai is shaky on purpose. It's supposed to be a jungle bridge used by villagers. Unlike the first two, it does not have to support trains.

Some Not Filled With Spirit Of Giving

By Sgt. SIDNEY LYLE Odessa Police Depatment As most people busy themselves for the holiday season they must assuredly give consideration to their many reasons to be thankful. However, not everyone strives for family togetherness, unanimity of thought, or consideration for others. Many people roam the streets thinking of ways in which they can steal your property and get away with it. They are not interested enough nor patient enough to work out their own achievement within the framework of the American legal system.

Certainly there is no need to look fearfully over your shoulder in constant anticipation of being victimized, but there are those who think they have a thousand and one legitimate reasons for inflicting physical injury or financial loss on an unsuspecting victim.

Therefore, while we should not be constantly fearful, we would be foolish in believing - it can't happen to us. Personal safety and property security is not difficult to achieve in that most crimes are acts of opportunity which can be altered by reducing or eliminating the existing circumstances as an example, in almost all cases you can keep a thief or rapist out of your car by simply locking the doors and keeping the windows rolled up. Remember that suggestion the next time you get in your car.

Whether you are considering personal safety or money security the principals are the same: Don't walk down dark or dangerous streets. Don't go out at night open your door to someone without finit knowing who is standing there. As for the handling of money, use good judgment. Keeping an excess of cash on hand is not "good judgment". Neither is keeping the days receipts at home over hight "good judgment". After all you home is not a bank. in unfamilar areas alone, and don't th

Warranty Problem Cited

By MICHAEL J. CONLON WASHINGTON (UPI) - From a reader in Illinois who returned a five-weekold calculator to the manufacturer:

It was guaranteed for 90 days. We sent in a sales slip with it showing the date of purchase. They sent us a card a few days later telling us the calculator was out of warranty and (were) sending it-C.O.D. for the cost of the repairs ($6).

We would not pick it up because we didn't trust them. We called them and told them we would not pay the C.O.D. They told us if we would pay the C.O.D. they would refund us the money. We told them we would not pay the C.O.D."

The reader said nothing further has been heard from the company, and the the calculator is still at the post office.

We asked Tom Chadwick, consumer advocate for the U.S. Postal Service, how he would handle such a complaint. He said he gets many letters with similar problems

Chadwick said he usually asks postal inspectors to check on the reputation of the company. If it has a good one, he said he would advise the consumer to pay the money and ask for the refund.

He also advised that you make sure before paying any money that you have the name and title of the person at the company who told you it would muke the refund. Pin the company down now, so it doesn't come back with a "who told you that?" later on.

You have an additional right because you used the mails to implement a warranty. If the company goes back on its word, you can take the case to inspectors at your local post office.

If they should determine fraud is involved, they can move against the firm. If they decide it is more a case of misrepresentation, the Postal Service's consumer section may be able to do something about it in conjunction with the Justice Department.

As the company involved in your complaint is well known, and we have received no similar complaints about it, our Padvice is pay the $6, then ask for the refund, citing the specific persons who promised it to you. If that doesn't work, get back to us or write Chadwick.

His address for this and other mail problems is: Office of the Consumer Advocate, U.S. Postal Service, Washington, D.C. 20260.

Chadwick has no legal authority to force anyone to do anything. But he said he has been successful in resolving 90 per cent of the cases brought to his attention.

"It's usually a misunderstanding in the vast majority of cases," he said.

Industry sources tell us "false alarming" is no longer the problem it once was.

A greater danger of a false alarm exists if the detector is in the kitchen, where smoking ovens or burning foods might activate it

A smoking fireplace can also set off an alarm, but the smoke has to be heavy, generally so heavy it would also annoy anyone in the room. As you say your fireplaces are used constantly, we presume they don't smoke very much, and you should have no problem with a smoke detector.

Boot Production For Women Up

NEW YORK (UPI) -Bootmakers apparently expect a long, cold winter.

The Sole Leather Council says women's boot production for the first seven months this year is up 63 percent over the same period last year. The council also said boots now represent six per cent of the total shoe production in the United States.

The trade organization, which represents leather sole manufacturers in the U.S., has these tips for consumers:

Shop at the end of the day when legs and feet are a little bigger. Avoid boots with tops that fit so snugly they cut off circulation.

Be sure boots allow toe room. The foot is pushed forward with greater force when walking in boots than in shoes.

The council also said leather boots can be waterproofed with several applications of saddle soap.

By JOHN J. SANKO

DENVER (UPI) - An old two-story home, its red bricks faded and its cement porch aged with cracks, serves as headquarters for the third oldest political party in the nation - the National Prohibition Par-

Carrie Nation and her famous hatchet are long gone, but there still are those who support the temperance movement for which she fought. Among them is Earl F. Dodge, a 44-year-old father of seven who ran as the party's vice presidential candidate in 1976 and is its only paid staff member.

Dodge has devoted more than half of his life to the cause. He spends his days alone in the building squeezed between another old home and an office supply firm along a busy west Denver street. He also is frequently on the road, delivering talks to high school and college students.

"In our party, executive secretary (Dodge's official title) is Latin for 'he who does all the work."" said Dodge, a Massachussetts native who moved to Colorado in 1971.

"It is a one-man operation as far as our office is concerned. I'm the office manager, the office secretary, the mailer, the stuffer, the stamper, and the field worker, too.

He is also the man who mows the back yard and who carpeted and painted the old house - with the help of his wife and seven children, ranging in age from 16 to 25. The Dodges also have four grandchildren

Dodge says it takes him a while to recall the ages of his youngsters. "I've been accused occasionally by friendly Republicans, saying if we're not going to outvote them, we're going to outbreed them.

He delights in showing visitors his vast collection of old temperance buttons, miniature axe pins and pictures of "demon rum" fighters,

But much of his work is devoted to convincing people his party is not now a collection of little old ladies who want to smash kegs of beer and pour the brew on the ground. He says that is a picture too many people have and one encouraged by the news media

"We don't want to soft pedal the liquor issue," said Dodge, leaning back in an office chair beneath a picture of himself and his running mate of a year ago - Benjamin Bubar, a Baptist minister from China Lake, Maine.

"But what we want to do is get away from the image that most people have of us as being a one-issue party. We try every election to hit hard on all of the issues but a lot of the time - when the news media do cover us - they will only give a line or two to the other issues we mention. Then they'll concentrate all of their fire on the alcohol issue.

When photographers show up at the scene, they inevitably aim their cameras at the oldest members they can find, he said. The pictures he has seen are enough to convince everyone "all the people come from the old folks' home

"Fifteen or 20 years ago, this was fairly true (that membership was made up primarily of older people)," he said. "But that has not been the case in recent years. I'm 44 myself, and most of our state chairmen are under 50. Some of them are in their 20s and 30s.

The party picked up 15,900 votes in seven states last year and next year. Dodge said prohibitionists will run under a different party name - perhaps The National Statesman Party - to see if it makes a difference at the polls.

If successful, an official change will be made. Dodge said the reason for the change is to convince people the party is concerned with more than one issue - the banning of alcoholic beverages.

ues to push for prohibition, even though only 19 per cent of the American people favor such a law. Dodge said his party would not try to enact such legislation until 65 or 70 per cent of the people support

Gas Lamps Ruled Out In Minnesota

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) - Minnesota has banned decorative outdoor gas lamps, as a means of conserving natural gas

Although widely promoted by utility firms a few years ago, the lamps are now viewed as a waste of natural gas needed for heating homes.

The ban was ordered by the 1976 state legislature but was postponed until Oct. 1, 1977, giving time for homeowners to convert their lamps to electricity.

Homeowners who don't comply can be fined up to $500 and given up to 90 days in jail, but there were no early reports of prosecutions.

The law allows homeowners over 65 and certain other persons to seek variances, allowing them to keep their lamps in operation.

The ban also applies to any commercial use of decorative gas lamps.

By United Press International The United States rocketed an 84-ton space station called Skylab into orbit around the Earth on May 14, 1973, and during the next nine months it served as home for three-man crews for as long as 12 weeks at a time. The Skylab program borrowed hard-ware and technology from the preceding Apollo moon landing project and demon-strated that men could live and work in weightless space for long periods of time. Its scientific payoff was great. A power-ful telescope aboard the 118-foot-long ship produced extraordinary photographs of the sun; it studied the comet Kohoutek; a special array of cameras and sen-sors looked down to study Earth re-sources; an electric furnace processed materials in ways they could not be worked on Earth and other instruments carried out a variety of experiments.

An accident during launch that ripped off a solar generating panel and jammed another gave astronauts an opportunity to prove they could carry out repairs in orbit to save a mission that cost $2.5 bilLUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977-H-15 against the aluminum structure will cause it to break up and the friction of air rushing by it will cause much of it to burn up as it falls. Some pieces are expected to survive re-entry and hit the planet's sur-

NASA, however, hopes to keep Skylab in orbit. The agency has plans to send its new space shuttle rocket plane up to Sky-lab in early 1980 to hook a special rocket pack to the space station to propel it into a higher orbit where it would last for many more years.

Detroit Symphony Gets New Conductor

DETROIT (AP) - Werner Torkanowsky, formerly conductor and music director of the New Orleans Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra, has been appointed guest conductor and associate to the music director of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra.

Antal Dorati, orchestra director, said Torkanowsky will assume his new post in time for the 1977-78 season. The new guest conductor had his debut with the Detroit orchestra in 1961.

Recently selected by violinist Isaac Stern to conduct for him in Paris, Torkanowsky has had a distinguished musical career since he came to the United States in 1948 to study the violin.

Two Women Stařt Own Sweep Firm

By DAVID LAWSKY

SEATTLE (UPI)—Carol Anderson switched occupations—from probation officer to chimney sweep.

The decision was a hard one because Mrs. Anderson has an eight-year-old daughter.

"I had to quit that job as a matter of principle," she recalls. "Without juvenile delinquency I wouldn't have had a job. In the end, it was selfserving."

Her friend, Beliz Brother, had become interested in sweeping channeys and researched the subject. She noticed that Seattle had no one who cleaned chimneys exclusively and decided to start a business. After some convincing, Mrs. Anderson agreed to join.

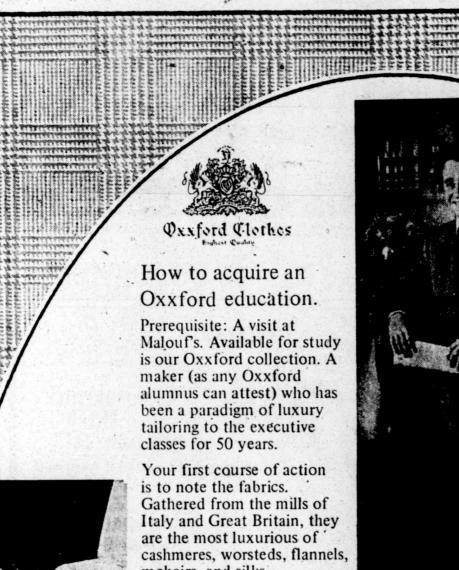

"Sweeping chimneys is a necessity in Europe," said Miss Brother. "In the United States at one time there were places where citizens who didn't get their, chimneys swept were fined because chimney fires could endanger an entire town.

"If there was no sweep, it became the mayor's job to sweep the chimneys."

The increasing cost of other fuels has encouraged the use of wood to heat homes in the Pacific Northwest, which has an abundance of wood. And that's led to some problems.

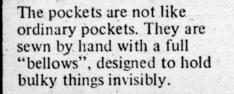

"When everybody heated with wood people knew how to care for their chimneys," says Bill Watkins, president of Fireplace Distributors in Seattle. "But it's been several generations and much of the folk knowledge has been lost."

Miss Brother went to Connecticut and apprenticed with a practicing sweep to learn her business. Then she and Mrs. Anderson set up business as August West Chimney Sweep Co., the same name used by the Connecticut firm. The sweeping cleans out not only soot and dust but also creosote, the same material used to protect piers from rot. Creosote tends to build up most when pine is used. It can catch fire inside the chimney.

The firm charges $35 for a sweep. With a giant vacuum cleaner and a weighted brush which drops down the chimney, the sweepers can do four or five chimneys a day.

"The English once used children as chimney sweeps, because they were able to crawl in tight places," says Miss Brother. "They used geese for the same reason. Adult sweeps wore tuxedos they got out of garbage cans because they were free. They wore top hats for luck — to keep from falling off roofs.

"We don't wear tuxedos — we wear black clothes — but we do wear top hats on the roofs and we haven't fallen yet." Some customers have, at first, been skeptical because they are women.

"People say things like 'are you sure you girls can do it?" said Miss Brother. "Once we clean their chimney quickly and efficiently, and show them how to check their chimney so they'll know when to call us next, they are enthused. They call their friends and recommend us

"It's very satisfying." Three Generations Of Family Took Pictures Of Art

FLORENCE, Italy (AP) — For three generations, the Alinari family photographed Europe's works of art, monuments, landscapes and architecture. One thousand of their photographs, documents and pieces of photographic equipment recently went on display at Fort Belwedere here.

The exhibit, a sampling of the 120,000piece Alinari family archives, is arranged in six categories: documents and photographs of the Alinari family, images of Florence, art treasures, cameras and accessories and pictures of European cities and landscapes.

Leopoldo Alinari, an engraver's son, became involved in commercial photography in the 19th century when it was still a relatively new concept. He was joined by his brothers, Giuseppe and Romoaldo. Their sons, Giuseppe and Vittorio, and grandsons, Leopoldo and Carlo, also became photographers in the family firm.

The company, Fratelli Alinari S.P.A., was sold in 1920. The current owners expanded the archives and are managing the exhibit.

Next, to understand what puts Oxxford ahead in its rarefied class, consider the construction. To shape the collar and lapel, an Oxxford tailor must become a sculptor of fabric. He does this by painstakingly placing hundreds of fine hand stitches on the underside of the fronts, collar, and lapels. Though you won't see his labor, you will see its result: a softness and roll that is sewn in for life.

'Big House' Image Of Prison Life Greatly Misleading In U.S. Today

(Editor's Note: This is the I4th in a series of I3 articles explaining "Crime and Justice in America." COMPLEX NO.

By JOHN IRWIN

MOST OF OUR ideas about male prisons are mistaken because they fix on a type of prison - the "big house" - that has virtually disappeared during the last 25 years.

In the "big house" the prisoners - mostly white - lived according to the "convict code." Primarily, this meant not informing on other prisoners. "doing your own time," and not talking to guards.

Prisoner leaders - "right guys" - taught and enforced the code A tew prisoners carried on illegal activities like making "pruno" - a nasty lasting preson brew - and got involved in prison sex, a peculiar sexual world with "jockers" - the masculine partners. "punks' - prison-made homosexuals, and "queens" - self-admitted homosexuals.

But most prisoners stayed close to a few prison friends, worked at their job assignments, took up hobbies, played sports, read, and tried to stay out of trouble

Administrators ran the "big house" with one overriding concern: to keep the place running smoothly and out of the public's attention. Guards kept the peace by striking a bargain with the convicts: "Don't get too far out of line and I won't bother you, but if you cause me any trouble I'll bust vog."

BY AND LARGE the big house was a mean and monotonous place, but peaceful. Contrary to popular belief, most prisoners didn't learn crime there, but they didn't learn how to live outside either. They learned how to do time and about half came back to serve more.

· Today's prisons, in contrast; are torn by violence, with inmates assaulting both each other and their guards. Gang warfare is common, and by 1973 the murder rate inside San Quentin was 20 times higher than that in the outside world.

Meanwhile, penologists, prisoners, and the public have all come to recognize that prisons are failing to rehabilitate convicted criminals or deter others from crime

What has caused such turmoil? And what can be done to end the war behind walls and ensure that prisons serve their purpose?

THE DECLINE OF THE big house began after World War II. when many states seriously tried to "rehabilitate" prisoners.

Innovative penologists accepted the idea that criminals were sick and could be cured, and they developed elaborate classification systems to diagnose criminals' sicknesses; therapy, education, and vocational training programs to cure them, and indeterminate sentence systems to release prisoners when, but not before, they were cured.

In the early years of rehabilitation many, perhaps most, prisoners accepted the idea that they were sick and willingly participated in the new 1-

Communication flowed more freely between prisoners and staff, and the gap between them narrowed. Many prisoners stopped thinking of themselves as "criminals" or "convicts," and the ties of the convict code that had held prisoners together weakened.

うったん はっかん デーアム・焼いたい やしか しょういい

By the 1960s, however, social scientists and prisoners began questioning the worth of rehabilitation. The new programs had not really helped exprisoners faced with the same conditions that, in the past, had pointed them toward crime

FURTHERMORE, under the dogma of rehabilitation, prisoners were ubjected to indeterminate sentence systems. Parole boards fixed and refixed sentences for reasons that were quite clear to the prisoners. On the average, prisoners served more time. In California, for example, the median sentence increased from 24 months in 1950 - the real beginning of the rehabilitative era - to 38 months in 1963.

Harshly punitive measures, such as indefinite segregation in adjustment centers," were slipped in as "rehabilitative" devices. The discrepancy between rhetoric and reality produced a sense of rage and injustice among prisoners.

At the same time, racial hostilities soared. Prisons in the East, North, and West that formerly housed predominantly white prisoners now contained half of more non-white prisoners.

Black prisoners began organizing religious, cultural, and political groups. Chicanos in the West and Puerto Ricans in the East followed the lead of black prisoners. Violence between races increased drastically, and many prisons became tense battlefields with voluntary segregation by race.

OUTSTIONS.

What effect did the attempt to rehabilitate inmates have on prisons and prisoners"

2. How does the modern prison differ from the "big house"

Why will prisons most likely continue to exist in the future?

4 How could we increase deterrence and reduce turmoil in prison?

INSWERS

1. It brought about the indeterminate sentence: longer sentences and the failure of rehabilitation produced a sense of rage and injustice.

2 The "big house" contained mainly white inmates who lived by an inmate code. Modern prisons, comprised of more racial minorities, have much more tension among the inmates and are much more brutal 3. Because the public will ordinarily demand that those convicted of sen-prisons and began working to improve them and to help prisoners organize. For a short period a political "movement" grew among prisoners of all races. Prisoners planned strikes, formed unions, and even ran a prison ous crimes be imprisoned. 4 By being honest about what we are doing-gunishing prisoners-and delivering shorter sentences to all persons convicted of serious crimes. IN THE LATE 1960s outside political activists became interested in the in Walpole. Massachusetts, for 11 weeks after the guards walked out in protest over the administration's lenient policies. Although the old "big house" order based on a single convict code and respected prison leaders had been torn apart, involvement in political organizations and demands for prisoners' rights temporarily created a new form of solidarity among inmates and reduced racial violence.

Prison administrations across the country acted swiftly to stop this new development. They identified prison leaders as "revolutionaries" and segregated, transferred, or paroled them. They succeeded in halting or stalling the prison political movement.

HOWEVER. WITHOUT a unifying purpose, the prisoners have again split into hostile factions. These divisions, particularly racial divisions, prevent prisoners from following a single code.

Many inmates have formed gangs or cliques to protect themselves and to control drugs and other contraband, including money, which is now in the prisons in large amounts. Gang members attack rivals and retaliate when attacked

Most prisoners, as always, try to avoid trouble, but this is now more difficult. They must obey the informal rules of racial segregation enforced by the gangs and tiptoe carefully around violent gang members. Even then they run some risk of being assaulted; robbed, raped, or murdered

Prisoners now assault guards much more frequently. Accordingly, guards have grown more hostile towards prisoners and towards the ad-ministrators, whom they blame for the dismal state of the contemporary prison. Prison guards are organizing into labor unions that demand more punitive policies against prisoners, in addition to such traditional labor benefits as higher pay

Unfortunately, we are stuck with our contemporary prisons. Despite talk about "alternatives to incarceration," the public will accept no substitutes that are more humane

SOME CONVICTED persons may be placed on probation or in halfway houses. Others may be sentenced to volunteer services or some alternative to prison. But the public will ordinarily demand that those convicted of serious crimes be imprisoned. Actually, the expansion of "community corrections" has increased the number of people in the control of the criminal justice system by adding new categories of minor offenders, as the number of offenders in prison also rises.

Since we are stuck with prisons we must understand their limitations. Presumably prisons deter many free citizens from committing crimes, yet, our selection process for prison actually reduces their deterrent value. Less than 10 percent of the persons charged with a felony are sent to prison, and by and large these are the poorer and less deterrable criminals, not necessarily the most serious. Consequently many citizens accurately conclude that they will not be sent to prison even if they commit crimes and are caught.

PRISONS PUNISH people But "heaping" punishment upon the few sent to prison embitters and damages them. They perceive that they are carrying the entire punishment burden, and they break or rebel under the strain.

We could increase deterrence and reduce the turmoil in prison if we were honest about what we are doing - punishing prisoners - and delivered shorter sentences to all persons convicted of serious crimes.

I believe that prisoners should be allowed to form organizations that would unify their warring factions. These organizations would have to have some real responsibility in running the prison so prisoners would actually participate in them. They should also have access to outside grievance mechanisms so that many of the practices which unnecessarily degrade, injure, and embitter prisoners would be discouraged. It is likely that these measures would reduce the turmoil greatly.

However, such changes would not make prisons into "country clubs. Prisons are inherently unpleasant and are intended to be.

Jackson Trying To Re-Ignite 'Spark' In Struggle

By DAVID SMOTHERS

CHICAGO (UPI) - Mention Jesse Jackson's name, particularly around Chicago, and you could be in for a heavy argument

Trouble maker, loud mouth, publicity hound, clothes horse and phony are some of the more attractive characteristics variously ascribed to the Rev. Jesse Louis Jackson

He is Chicago's most visible symbol of what used to be known as the civil rights movement. As head of Operation PUSH, his activities are nationwide. He is a specialist in applying pressure and getting people mad'at him - sometimes, it seems, deliberately. Right now, Jackson is engaged in a campaign with which his most choleric critics might find it difficult to disagree.

Put simply, it is to make black youth smarter, more disciplined, and more fit to take advantage of opportunities now available to them. The same goes, Jackson says, for white kids.

Jackson, at 36 a relatively young veteran of the civil rights struggle, believes what the movement badly needs now is a kick in the pants. He says his program is the way to do it ad indicates he is the man to do the kicking.

He fears the fight has gone out of the old freedom fighters: the doors they pried open in the 60s are now closing again: the youth who should be preparing themselves for struggle are hung up on alcohol, drugs, sex and self love.

"Where is this generation of strugglers, where are they?" Jackson asked in an interview. "Many have been victimized by the alcohol epidemic, many have been victimized by the drug epidemic, there is an unusual high level of premature pregnancy

"There is a new level of narcissism, an inward turningness, a self-love movement. You cannot fight ... if an entire generation of people is preoccupied with looking into the mirror.

The Vietnam War, Watergate and all the attendant ills led youth to conclude "that whatever the adult generation had, it was not worth having," Jackson ... so the marches stopped, voter registration slowed down, the drive for said. " excellence and productivity slowed down.

"What does it matter if the doors of opportunity are wide open but you're an alcoholic and can't get through that door? What does it matter if you have the right to go to graduate school but you can't read, write or count?

"There are fewer blacks in medical school and fewer blacks in law school than you had 10 years ago. The doors are now closing that once opened. Whatever one may think of Jackson, he has the credentials to speak out.

He enlisted in the movement at the start. Demonstrations, sitins, marches, are, whatever was needed, Jackson did it.

When Martin Luther King Jr. was felled by an assassin's bullet on a Memphis notel balcony in 1968, Jackson was there, one of King's inner circle. When the edia looked around for new young black leaders, Jackson was there. He made the cover of Time magazine.

On an end run into politics, Jackson was one of those who did the manifestly impossible - kept the late Mayor Richard J. Daley of Chicago out of the 1972 Democratic convention. Daley was a party potentate, but Jackson and his fellows managed to bar him on grounds the choice of Chicago delegates was rigged. When the convention opened, Jackson was in the Illinois delegation but Daley was not.

When those who inherited King's official leadership of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference implied Jackson was getting too big for his britches, Jackson cut himself loose

Now, the Stokeley Carmichaels and H. Rap Browns - those who used to be called firebrands - are gone for practical purposes. Ralph Abernathy and Roy

REV. JESSE JACKSON: Changing With The Times

Wilkins, establishment figures of the black movement, appear to be fading. But Juckson is very much around, operating out of Chicago, whipping about the country, preaching his doctrine that it is black youth's responsibility to push for excellence

Those last three words happen to be what Jackson calls his current program. It is off to an impressive start.

After a test in Washington, D.C., his project got an invitation to see what it could do in Los Angeles with a $402,000 appropriation from the board of education to work in 12 schools. The Los Angeles program is operative, Jackson said. and Push For Excellence also is working in 11 Chicago high schools, although apparently to a lesser extent.

Nevertheless. Jackson demonstrated he has something going for him in Chicago when he led an exuberant march of 100 units through the Loop Sept. 30 in the cause of excellence.

Basically, Jackson appears to be trying to browbeat young people into being what they can be

He demands commitments that they will turn off television and radio and study at least two hours a day. He makes their parents promise they will see to

We are not so durnb that if we study we will not learn." Jackson said. "But we're not so ingenious that we will learn if we do not study.

The school system (in Los Angeles) can't very well mobilize 200 churches as easily as we can. It can't relate to parents as we do. We have challenged the students and they have responded magnificently, because somehow we have a relationship that many other social types don't have.

"We're getting stars. We've got Dr. Jay (Julius Erving, basketball forward of the Philadelphia 76ers) and Reggie Jackson (right fielder of the world champion baseball New York Yankees) and other artists and disc jockeys and other media people to create the atmosphere and make this the feasible and likable thing to do.

"We thought in the 1960s all we needed for real upward mobility was opportunity. We've now found we need more. We must excel because the competition is keener, because we are behind.

'At this point there is a kind of national rowback on black demands."

Maybe Jesse Jackson has changed, too. He does not deny it.

He used to meet visitors in tacky offices at the top of rickety stairs, in store front social service centers, even in the back rooms of saloons.

He was something to be experienced - lean, elegant, cool, mod; bell bottom trousers: shirt opened half way down to his belt buckle: a medallion with King's likeness on his chest; his big eyes flashing, his voice hypnotic.

Now, in a rather antiseptic community center built of concrete on Chicago's South Side. Jackson accepts visitors in an office which would be in place on the executive floor of a corporate headquarters.

RELIGION NEWS

POSITIVE THINKING by Norman Vincent Peale

A PHYSICIAN asked me to see a patient who had been admitted to the hospital with seemingly genuine symptoms of a heart attack, including shortness of breath and pains in the chest. "But." explained the doctor, "I am inclined to suspect that it is not a real heart attack but rather an anxiety heart. Will you talk to him and explore the psychological and spiritual basis of his anxiety?

After counseling, it was ascertained that the patient did, indeed, suffer from acute anxiety. I discovered that this man, now in his sixties, had committed several moral offenses in earlier life. As far as I was able to determine such incidents were limited to that early period and his conduct, subsequently, had been impeccable. But he had lived in constant fear, however, that his wrongdoing would be discovered.

A deep sense of guilt had hatched a flock of fears and tensions that had haunted him for years until now they actually had him back in a hospital, with symptoms of a heart attack. His illness was entirely due to those long held anxieties. We were able to help him achieve healthy-mindedness about the entire matter. His physical symptoms gradually disappeared, and he returned to normal health. The doctor expressed the opinion that, had the guilt-worry complex continued, the man could actually have died of the physical condition which it stimulated.

Frequently you hear people say, "I'm sick with worry," or "I'm worried near-ly to death." There is more truth in these statements than you might suppose. for worry can indeed make you sick and has even been known to cause death. It is a fact that by overcoming worry we can, in all probability, live longer and certainly live much better.

THE BASIC SECRET of overcoming worry is the substitution of faith for fear as your dominant mental attitude. Two great forces in this world are more powerful than all others. One is fear and the other is faith; and faith is stronger than fear. Basically, then, the method for overcoming worry is deliberately and consistently to fill the mind with faith until fear is displaced.

Normal fear is a healthy mechanism built into us for our protection. Abnormal fear, on the contrary, is a pattern of unhealthy thinking-that is both destructive and disinteresting. It is one of the most potent enemies of personality. Abnormal fear possesses the inherent power to cause ill health and even disaster. A doctor felt this keenly so that when called to a home where he found members of the family clustered anxiously and apprehensively about his patient, projecting to him their fear thoughts, he took direct action. He told them, vigor-'s room so

> Former Rhodesia Rainmaker Becomes Christian Convert

LUBBOCK AVALANCHE-JOURNAL-Sunday Morning, December 4, 1977-

GATOOMA. Rhodesia (Special)-For more than 20 years. Amai Shingai led her tribe in the strange rituals of its pagan worship.

As its svikiro, or rainmaker, she would fall into a trance while the chief and leaders listened to and obeyed the "spirit voice" which they believe spoke through this religious leader.

Today, after six years of patient witness by a Southern Baptist missionary doctor, all this is changed. Amai Shingai has become a Christian and is demonstrating a new kind of power-her own witness in Christ.

When Dr. Frances Greenway first met her, the rainmaker wore dull black robes. the mark of her office. Long before this meeting, she had left her husband and children, since custom dictates that svikiro is supposed to remain chaste.

But after many years of service in her religious role. the rainmaker had given birth to a son, Shingai. Because she believed the ancestral spirit wanted the child dead, she refused to feed him.

Dr. Greenway, who devotes much of her time to the nutrition and feeding of undernourished children, saw Singai's pathetic state and invited the rainmaker and her son to come live in her home.

The tribespeople did not believe the rainmaker would be allowed to come. She had been warned never to associate with Christians, for fear that her powers in the spirit world would be lost. But in answer to Dr. Greenway's prayers, the chief granted permission for a visit.

It was the first of many visits. In spite of the rules against it. the rainmaker even accepted some of Dr. Greenway's medicine for herself. But she wouldn't accept Christ. For Fear that the ancestral spirit would kill her kept her from responding to the plan of salvation.

The rainmaker kept coming back, although months passed between visits and her relationship with Dr. Greenway was not always smooth. She (the rainmaker) once became angry with the doctor for trying to influence her religion and pronounced curs-es of snakes, lions and fire against the Greenway home. The spirit she worshipped failed to deliver because Dr. Greenway saw only a single cobra, not unusual for Africa, and no lions nor fire appeared. Year after year, Dr. Greenway worked with the rainmaker. She cared for and fed little Shingai, and rejoiced when he finally learned to walk. He is permanently dam-aged from the neglect but at the age of four his speech finally began to develop. Today at age seven he is mentally slow, but still alive and growing.

This past spring, the ancestral spirit left the rainmaker and inhabited a new svikiro. The spirit voice "speaking" through the new svikiro said that Shingai's mother had been too close to the Christians.

So now Singai's mother was free from the spirit voice, free to rejoin her family. She visited Dr. Greenway and listened to cassette tapes prepared especially for her.

healing efforts were valueless. To dramatize his concern, the doctor threw the windows open wide. A strong gale whipped the curtains straight out.

"I've got to fumigate this room of fear germs," he explained brusquely. "Unless you people start thinking faith instead of fear you are going to make it very hard for me to help. As that strong wind blows through this room purifying it, let the power of faith purify your minds. Stop surrounding my patient with fear virus.

Worry may be described as a spasm of the emotions in which the mind takes hold of a thought or obsession, clutches it spasmodically, and will not let it go. To break its hold one must gently, but forcibly, insinuate a healthier and stronger idea into the mind's convulsive grasp. This stronger idea is that of faith. When faith, rather than fear, becomes your obsession you will kill worry and live longer.

Politicos Shake Off Early Losses

NEW YORK (AP) - Losing an important election doesn't necessarily mean the end of a political career, many politicians have found.

Teddy Roosevelt, for example, lost the tumultuous New York City mayoral election in 1886 to a Tammany Hall politician, yet later rose to more impressive political heights.

An episode highlighting the 28-year-old, Republican's unsuccessful bid for this city's top political job is a feature in "The Best of Families," an eight-week drama series for the Public Broadcasting Service to be shown this fall. Roosevelt was born here in 1858 at 28 East 20th St. making him the only president born in New York City.

THE ROUSTABOUT By RAY WESTBROOK

ENHANCED RECOVERY TECHNOLOGY would be given a significant boost if the government would allow a world market price for all oil produced from fields where that type of operation is applied, according to an Atlantic Richfield Co. researcher.

Marvin L. Katz, manager of research and development for Atlantic Richfield's North American Producing Division, says ultimate recovery and potential production rates for enhanced oil recovery are highly dependent on oil price and other economic factors.

In a recent report to the Petroleum Engineer International magazine, Katz said there are very few areas where substantial profit can be made by enhanced recovery. He explained that is because the process calls for a heavy initial investment and considerable lead and response time.

The government's most recent proposal is to allow the market price for incremental oil-the additional oil actually produced by whatever enhanced recovery method is employed, according to Katz.

"The problem with this," he said, "is the difficulty in determining what proportion of the oil can be credited to enhanced recovery, which normally involves the pumping of water or chemicals down into the reservoir to displace oil and move it to producing wells."

KATZ CONTENDS the government's arbitrary formulas and baselines do little more than distort the already shaky economics of enhanced recovery. "The basic problem with enhanced recovery," he said, "is that the risk is too high and the profit is too low."

The government's Energy Research and Development Administration is trying to reduce the risk by participating with industry in pilot projects designed to reduce uncertainty about specific processes. "but it is not enough to decrease risk without improving economics," according to Katz.

Ultimately, the United States is going to have to produce some of this oil, with the only question being when. Katz indicated.

"Do we make an all-out effort now (to reduce imports), or do we wait until later when it may be difficult to go back to fields that have been abandoned?" he asked.

THE AMERICAN PETROLEUM INSTITUTE'S quarterly drilling review indicates there were 10,910 wells drilled during the July-September period, a 13.1 per cent increase over the third quarter of last year. Footage drilled was up 12.4 per cent.

For the first nine months of this year, API logged 31,900 completions, an increase of 8.4 per cent over the same period in 1976. Footage during the period increased 11.5 per cent, indicating that the search for oil and natural gas is going deeper than in the past.

Frank N. Ikard, president of the institute, said, "Although these figures are heartening, they are still far short of what is needed to provide this country with sufficient energy. The fact is that we are now being forced to buy almost half of our petroleum from other countries, thus creating a dangerous dependence."

The peak year for U.S. drilling operations was recorded in 1956, when 57,111 wells were drilled during the year. Of those, 30,730 were oil wells, 4,543 were natural gas producers, and 21,838 were dry holes.

Of the 31,900 wells drilled during the first three quarters of this year, 13,667 were classified as oil wells; 7,861 as gas wells, and 10,372 as dry holes. The number of dry holes showed a 4.5 per cent increase over the first nine months of last

THE HYDROCARBON processing industry is expected to spend $24.85 billion for capital items in 1978, with increases in the refining and petrochemical sectors accounting for most of the advance.

Hydrocarbon Processing, a Houston-based trade publication, has forecast worldwide capital expenditures for the industry at $9 billion for refining, $11.7 billion for petrochemicals, $3.55 billion for gas processing and $400 million for solid fuels processing.

Maintenance spending is expected to rise to $8.2 billion, with the U.S. segment of the industry accounting for nearly $2.3 billion. The forecast places operating expenditures at $284.8 billion worldwide, with $78.6 billion expected to be spent in the U.S.

Oil News

HOUSTON (AP)-Most of the new discoveries of oil and gas are made by the major oil firms, right?

Wrong. Most of those finds are made by the nation's 10,000 independent producers, also known as wildcatters.

Wildcatters often use other people's money to dritt for oil and gas in unlikely places: as a result, they tend to be brash, colorful people who don't much like federal rules and regulations. Meet Michel T. Halbouty:

"I think there's a conspiracy to nationalize the petroleum industry. And once they've nationalized the petroleum industry, every other industry will become nationalized and we will become a socialist state

"Why don't you write that down?" he

Halbouty. in his 60s, has a tendency to speak that way-with emphasis. He wears tinted glasses, expensive suits and his long, graying hair is combed straight back. When he appears for an interview, he sits down, crosses his legs and fixes his eves directly on those of his questioner. The position remains unchanged for the duration of the session.

He dislikes Democrats, bureaucrats and-most of all-federal regulations.

"Instead of a country of the people, by the people and for the people, we have a country that is being regulated by Washington." he says. ". . Unless it is stopped, this country will come completely under the control of Washington. Every human facet will be regulated.

"I'm a son of immigrants; I'm a Lebanese-American. My parents came over here and, because they had the opportunity to open up a little grocery store, they were able to survive and educate their children

"If I had to start today as the son of an immigrant, my chances of arriving where I am would be less by 75 per cent because of the controls all over the United States. The opportunities don't exist anymore." Halbouty is one of those souls who made his own opportunities. Born in Beaumont, he graduated from Texas A &M University in 1930 with a degree in geology and petroleum engineering, and later received a master's degree in the same subjects.

He worked for various firms, building a fund that he used for oil exploration. An acquaintance says Halbouty made and lost two fortunes wildcatting before he was 30 years old.

After serving in the U.S. Army during World War II, he started the ball rolling again and is now considered one of the most successful wildcatters in history. Reportred to be a multi-millionaire, Halbouty is believed to have struck oil or gas in well over 100 locations

In 1974, the last year for which statistics are available, independent producers drilled 89.2 per cent of the total wildcat wells, defined as test wells in previously unexplored areas. And they discovered 53.8 per cent of the oil and gas found in that year.

Like many oilmen, Halbouty says President Carter's proposed energy plan does not include enough incentives for incresed exploration-exploration which all involved in the controversy admit is needed to reduce the nation's heavy reliance on foreign imports.

"Carter's plan creates a disaster upon disaster because it doesn't have anything to increase exploration or production, Halbouty says. "All he does is conserve, conserve, conserve. All conservation does is prolong the demise of the patient.

'If you don't put back into the crackerbarrel what you take out, you're eventually going to reach down and there won't be any more crackers, and that's just what this program does.'

Halbouty estimates that between 50 billion and 100 billion barrels of U.S. oil could be recovered if prices were decontroled. That compares with the 110 biltion barrels of oil produced in the nation's history.

Halbouty also didn't appreciate the President's remarks recently about possible "war profiteering" by oil producers and the possibility of the "biggest ripoff in history.

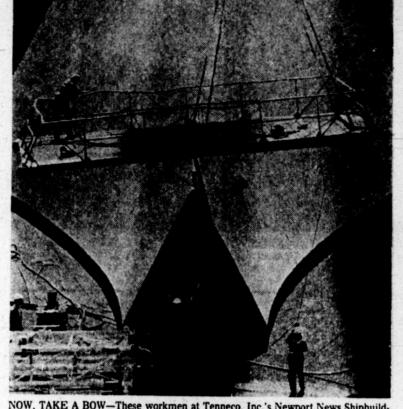

"I thought those were some of the most dastardly, comments I've ever heard in my life coming from a head of state, especially the United States," Halbouty says. "His bill is nothing but a tax bill. He wants to raise more money to create more welfare and in turn that would create more votes, and I think that's wrong.

The administration denies all that, saying that there are ample incentives in its plan and most of the money collected through taxes would be rebated to consumers

Is the industry holding back production, waiting for higher prices?

No!" Halbouty barks. "Nobody's holding back production. That's for the birds-especially in the independent ranks because we put money up and we want that money back!"

what has been done to save energy

Results will show that usually one or two efforts are being made per household, but few have really zealously entered the spirit of conservation envisioned by President Carter.

A sampling of a random cross-section of women with small children showed that the most frequent effort among the Southwestern group was the watching of home temperatures. Many said they dialed higher now in the summer and lower in the winter, but few mentioned the recommended figure of 65-68 degrees in winter and 78-80 in the summer

A few, too, are using drapes as an aid in conserving home fuel in the extreme days of either high or low temperatures.

As residential use accounts for about 21 per cent of the total energy usage in the nation, these efforts are a beginning and may be followed by others as conservation education continues

Some now even see the call for conservation as a "patriotic duty" and a genuine need as the majority of these Southwestern women do believe that the energy crisis is real. Yet, too, they ironically accept a belief that as the prices rise. someone is making huge profits which could be either the oil producer, the marketer, or the utility companies that sell the energy.

Despite the doubts about energy prices, the economics of fuel are getting householders' attention and appear to be the major reason for the conservation efforts that do exist.

Also, several noted that more measures would be undertaken at home if they knew which ones to use. As the lack of reliable information is filled by conservation programs aimed at the general public on the federal, the state, and at local levels, efforts may increase.

One energy saver such as newly insulating an existing home had been done infrequently in our poll while more frequent was the turning down of the hot water heater temperatures or even the turning off of electric heaters when leaving town.

Several women reported shutting off unused portions of their homes with closed vents and doors; others were changing laundry times to avoid peakhour loading or using more cold water.

Turning off lights in unoccupied rooms, opening dishwasher doors as dishes dried, and utilizing warm bath water to add heat to a room as it cooled were oth-

car pooling efforts now

With monthly bills governing many questions in conservation, heat pumps as a replacement item are getting a lot of attention, reported one electric utility representative.

"Also, weighing the (economic) advantages of one type of air cooler over another" is a prime concern for those thinking of replacing old units or considering new homes, she added.

Insulation of attics and walls interest prospective home buyers these days and "is generally the first question asked" said an employe with a construction company

Such concerns interest apartment renters little, several openly acknowledged, as "We still have our old habits." summed up one interviewee

Lastly, almost none of the housewives who participated in the discussion are yet conversant with some buzz words in conservation: equivalent BTU's in fuels; underground living: or EER's (energy efficiency ratios) that will increasingly appear on appliances and other home needs

As far as energy conservation for many homes in the Southwest, "Well, we've still got a long way to go, baby.

COLLEGE STATION (AP) - Rain over the east half of Texas last week should boost small grains and winter pastures. Open weather in the Plains and Far West Texas is allowing harvest operations to move toward completion in record time.

The cotton harvest in western sections and the Plains has been making rapid progress, and the crop has been excel-lent in both yield and quality, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. More than 85 percent of the state's cotton crop is in, with most activity now centered in the Panhandle and northern counties of the South and Rolling Plains.

Some peanuts are still being harvested in central, north central and eastern areas, and a few fields of soybeans remain to be harvested in Northeast, Southeast and Southwest Texas. Peanut yields have generally been down over the state although an excellent crop was harvested in Motley County in the Rolling Plains and in several other western counties. Soybean yields have also been poor in many locations.

Well over half the pecan crop in, noted Pfannstiel. The crop ranges from excellent in some western areas to poor in parts of North and East Texas. The summer drought along with late season di-seases and insects took its toll of the crop in many counties.

Cattle feeding is more active over Texas, especially with cooler weather. Grazing remains short over virtually all the state although some wheat and oats are starting to provide green forage in some eastern and northern counties. Irrigated wheat is providing grazing in the High Plains but dryland wheat is in poor shape due to lack of moisture.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions.

PANHANDLE: Cotton harvesting is in full swing, with a large backlog at gins. A few sugar beets and carrots are still being harvested in Deaf Smith County. Range conditions are average to below average but range cattle look good. Irrigated wheat is providing some grazing, with stockers continuing to move into the area.

SOUTH PLAINS: The cotton harvest is winding up in the southern half of the area but continues active in northern counties. Yield and quality continue to be excellent. A few sugar beets and vegetables continue to be harvested. Irrigated wheat is making good growth but that on dryland is in dire need of moisture. Range conditions are below average due to dry conditions.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting remains active in northern counties but is nearly complete over the southern half of the area. Yields continue to be excellent. Some peanut harvesting continues: an excellent crop has been harvested in Motley County. Some small grains are still being planted, with most fields in need of moisture. Livestock have limited grazing so supplemental feeding is under way in most counties. NORTH CENTRAL: A few, fields of peanuts remain to be harvested along with about 30 percent of the soy with about 30 percent of the soybean acreage. Both crops are producing fair yields. The pecan harvest is about 70 percent complete, with fair yields. Most wheat and oats have been planted, with farmers waiting on rain to boost growth. Grazing conditions are short for live-stock so cumplemental facility along stock so supplemental feeding along with marketing is active. NORTHEAST: Good rain should boost small grains to provide needed grazing for livestock. Most crops are in, with grain yields generally below average while the peanut crop was average. Pecans are still being harvested: the crop is short. Livestock marketing continues on a steady note.

FAR WEST: Open weather has allowed harvest operations to move toward completion over most of the area. An excellent cotton crop has been harvested. Irrigated small grains are making good progress. Ranchers are busy feeding stock and taking care of deer hunters who are generally enjoying an excellent harvest.

WEST CENTRAL: The cotton harvest continues but is nearing completion in most counties. The crop has generally been good. Peanut harvesting is also moving toward completion; yields and grades have ranged from good to poor. A fair to good pecan crop is being harvested. Small grains need rain to provide grazing for livestock. Many ranchers are feeding on a regular basis due to poor forage conditions.

CENTRAL: The peanut harvest is poor due to the extremely dry summer. About 60 percent of the pecan crop is in, with yields and quality also below nor-mal. Most wheat and oats still need rain. poor due to the extr and range conditions are extrem short. Cattle will enter the winter

EAST: Good rains should boost small grain plantings and winter pastures. Most field crops are in, with grain yields fair to good but peanut yields down. Some tomatoes are being harvested in home gardens. A short pecan crop is being harvested. Cattle marketing continues heavy, with feeding active. SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Rains over the area should boost small grains and winter pastures. Grazing conditions range from below av-erage to above average over the area, with most cattle in good shape. Some feeding is under way. A good pecan crop is being homested in some counting is being harvested in some counties.

SOUTH CENTRAL: Scattered rains will help wheat and oats; some fields are starting to provide limited grazing. Cattle feeding is active over the area, and many livestock are still moving to market Percen harverting continues market. Pecan harvesting continues, with the crop ranging from good to poor. Some fall land preparation is in progress.

SOUTHWEST: Some soybeans are still being harvested, and the pecan harvest is winding down. The pecan crop was generally not as good as expected. Fall vegetable activity is increasing.

PROVISIONS ON FEDERAL DISASTER payments on prevented plantings of 1978 crops could leave some farmers without full coverage under the new farm program.

Some High Plains farmers haven't had sufficient planting moisture for 1978crop wheat, which would have been planted this fall for harvest next summer. The deadline for filing for prevented planting payments expired in Lubbock County last week and already had passed in some northern areas.

COVERAGE ON AN INDIVIDUAL CROP is limited to the total acreage a farmer had planted to that crop in 1977.

Say a grower has a total of 300 acres and had 100 acres of wheat, 100 acres of grain sorghum and 100 acres of cotton in 1977.

Now say he has had insufficient planting moisture for wheat this fall. And say he didn't plan to plant wheat anyway and plans to have the whole 300 acres in cotton or to plant the acreage in a cotton-milo mixture.

BUT THEN WHAT IF THE WEATHER stays dry and the farmer is unable to plant row crops next spring? He may file for a prevented-planting disaster payment on cotton with the county Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

But the ASCS can approve such payments on an acreage no greater than that - 100 acres in this hypothetical case - which the farmer had in cotton in 1977. And if planting rains still haven't fallen by the grain sorghum planting dead-line, the maximum acreage which would qualify for prevented-planting pay-ments on milo would be the 100 acres he had in that crop last year.

SO THIS FARMER WOULD HAVE HAD a prevented-planting disaster on 300 acres but could qualify for payments on only 200 acres.

Double-cropping regulations pertaining to the new normal crop acreage (NCA) would come into play, as reported earlier, if there are good spring rains and the farmer plants failed wheat acreage - such as where drought-stressed wheat may have died — in a row crop. There isn't enough wheat in Lubbock County for any of this to be a weighty program factor one way or another, but the effects could be greater elsewhere

COMPOST IS NOTHING MORE THAN decomposed plant material. It is very useful in home gardens as a soil additive to improve soil structure, water hold-

County Agent's Report By KEN COOK Lubbock County Agent

Two extension specialists at the Texas of the Texas County Agricultural Agents 2." He conducted 14 meetings and assist-Association Morrison was recognized for his lead-

Composting is an excellent way for home gardeners to obtain soil building material. It is inexpensive since it usually can be produced from materials in your own yard.' Composting also is an excellent method of disposing of unwanted plant materials without letting them go to waste.

The best time to compost is any time the materials are available. Grass clippings in the summer and leaves in the fall and winter make very good compost material. Locate the compost pile near your garden and close to a source of water

Compost can be made in almost any type of structure or just in a pile. A ring of concrete reinforcement wire 3-4 feet across, a wood or rock frame or one corner of a vard fence are but a few examples. After you decide on a place and a container for your compost pile, follow these steps to prepare good compost:

- Place some sticks, limbs or other coarse materials on the ground to help air move under the pile.

- Add a 5-6 inch layer of leaves, grass clippings, sawdust, or any other plant material. Remember, the coarser the material, the slower it will break down.

- Add a small amount of soil or manure, about one inch deep.
- Add a hand full of garden fertilizer.
- Soak thoroughly with water.

- Repeat the layers as materials are available and stir the pile before adding more lavers.

The pile should be stirred every week or so and kept moist, but not water logged. An active compost pile should be warm and moist on the inside. Compost ready for use will be soft, fall apart easily in your hand and smell like fresh plowed soil. The process as described here should take 3-4 months.

Just pick a spot in your yard and get started. We will talk more about composting and how to use it in later articles.

A QUESTION HAS BEEN RECEIVED concerning how about using gin trash as a mulch and organic matter additive in a home vegetable garden. A tough question to answer, to say the least!

Cotton producers in our area used many arsenicals to defoliate cotton and adding these materials to your garden may result in poor growth of garden plants. Unfortunately, these arsenicals do not break down readily and remain toxic to some plants for years.

Cotton also may be infestd with the verticullium fungus which is often transmitted to vegetables growing in soil treated with gin trash.

Poland Extended $150 Million In Credit

WASHINGTON (AP) - Poland will be able to buy $150 million worth of U.S. grain and other farm commodities under a new credit arrangement, the Agriculture Department has announced.

Kelly M. Harrison, the department's general sales manager, said the line of credit provides for the commodities to be shipped by next Aug. 31.

722 tons of vegetable oils; $5 million for 16,667 bales of cotton now; and $1.3 million for 295 tons of tobacco based on current market prices, Harrison said. The credit is provided through a de-

It also provides for $10 million for 19-

The credit package includes $5.83 mil-lion for an estimated 565 metric tons of feed grains; $31 million for 129,797 tons of soybeans: $28 million for 137,303 tons of soybean meal; and 16.4 million for 135,000 tons of wheat.

feeds solely on the perrenial broomweed. The moth is a native insect to the western United States, and has been around for some time, but no one has ever investigated its possibilities as a natural control of the broomweed, according to Foster.

"We don't have anything yet that definitely points to this insect as a means of controlling perennial broomweed, but our research should show whether this kind of control would be possible," he said

Perennial broomweed has become a problem for ranchers, particularly in the West Texas area, where much of the pasture land has been overgrazed in the past years.

The perennial broomweed takes over the land when the grass is overgrazed, according to Foster. It is toxic to livestock, but they generally won't eat it unless other forage is lacking.

Tech Entomologist Eyes

Insect To Control Weed

The larval stage of the moth has been found to create webs in the perennial broomweed and the feeds on the leaves of the weed at night. Infestation of the plant by this larva, over a period of time, result in killing the weed, he said.

Among the aspects studied by Foster are the exact effect of the moth on the weed, how quickly the weed is affected by the moth, how rapidly the moth breeds and what diseases and predators affect it.

Foster said that in the past the moth has only been found in isolated spots, even though it should be able to cover wide areas where perennial broomweed grows

The Texas Tech professor suspects some sort of disease or predator may restrict the moth's infestation of the broomweed and this needs to be determined before the moth could be effectively used as a means of control.

"We hope to learn enough about the life cycle and reproductive potential and mortality factors of the moth so that we can eventually manage or manipulate populations of this species to help control perennial broomweed." he said.

Singer Dreams Of Becoming Barrel Racer

By PAULA SCHWED NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) - Marcia Ball looks too pale and fragile to mix with rodeo dirt, but she swears she wants to steer a horse through cloverleaf barrel

"If I could dream my dreams, and I couldn't sing, it would be barrel racing," Miss Ball said. "It helps to be brought up on a horse like I was because you have to steer it to run the cloverleaf made out of barrels against the clock. The idea appeals to me

Miss Ball is not as singleminded as many struggling singers. She has abandoned her career periodically and still considers "dropping out and going back to the hills." though her fame is growing. Show business is a drug, a disease I sometimes fight," she said. "I was insecure and I had to prove something. I think that's a big part of my singing. And I got the urge from grandmother and aunt playing the piano and daddy playing the horn.

She was born to a Cajun couple and reared in Vinton, La.

"(Cajuns) are short people and I'm tall and thin, so I got used to standing out in the crowd," Miss Bull said. "South" Louisiana is not the most hospitable country in the world with those snakes. alligators and mosquitoes the size of your big toe. But we know good times."

Miss Ball picked up a guitar in high school and began singing while she strummed. She joined a string of bands whose members seemed to scatter just after they got the routine down. When a band breaks up, it's like a marriage," she said. "You don't want anymore for a while." Marcia made a name for herself as the lead singer in Frieda and the Firedogs, a band which played Austin, Tex., clubs before Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson popularized the "Texas Sound" in country music.

"Frieda and the Firedogs were the first hippies there to play country music and do it straight, the old standards," she said in a voice rich with reverence for the classics. "It was a dream we had, to get rednecks and hippies listening to the same music in the same bar.'

Then came another "heartrending" breakup and she formed an act known as

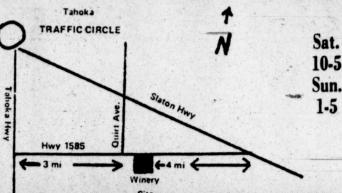

'Marcia Ball and the Misery Brothers." A short time later she and her husband decided to have a child, but her pregnant condition did not sit well with patrons of the smoky clubs the band headlined.

"I would stand up from behind the piano and people would gasp to see my fat stomach," she said. "They would yell, 'Don't dance, don't play rock 'n' roll!"" Band members were not nearly so solicitous. Marcia hauled her own equipment onto the back of a truck she drove to performances.

"Yeah, little baby Luke really rocked and rolled before he got here." she said. Miss Ball has since struck out on her own and now is working on an album full of music she will not put a name to.
